State hospital raises $10,000

A fund raiser for the Big Spring State Hospital can be considered a great success, said Evelyn Anderson, volunteer coordinator at the hospital.

The third annual fund-raising events Friday evening raised approximately $10,000, the goal for the reception and dance, she said.

About 200 people attended the reception at the home of Rep. Troy Fraser and wife Linda, Anderson said, while the dance at Stampede drew about 350. "I'd say it was a great success. We want to thank everybody who participated, and especially the Frasers and Marilyn and Don Newsom, for making it work," she said.

Anderson said the state hospital will most likely choose a similar format for its fund raisers next year.

Officers investigate hit-and-run death

STANTON — Area law enforcement officials are not ruling out foul play in the early-morning death of a Midland woman in Glasscock County today, and they are seeking public input to resolve the case.

Glasscock County Justice of the Peace Veneda Moore pronounced Virginia Espinosa Montoya, 25, dead at the scene at about 5 a.m. today, according to Department of Public Safety trooper Victor Taylor.

Taylor said Moore has ordered an autopsy in the incident. It is expected to be performed sometime today, a Glasscock County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman said.

According to the DPS report, the deceased, her husband and brother apparently were riding around after attending a dance when an argument began about 24 miles northwest of Garden City on Highway 137.

The argument apparently erupted between the brother and Montoya's husband, the report said. When the men began fighting, Ms. Montoya apparently got out of the vehicle and began walking, the report added.

The report stated that her husband attempted to locate her, but was not successful and both men went home. The victim was struck from behind by an unknown vehicle sometime during this period, Taylor said. Foul play has not been ruled out in the incident, he added.

Permian Building dealt second blow with morning fire

By ERIN BLAIR

BIG SPRING — It may be time to strike the death knell for the Permian Building, according to the building's manager, after an early morning fire in the penthouse caused electricity in the beleaguered building to be turned off indefinitely.

The fire was called in a little before 7 a.m. today, and Big Spring fire units responded immediately, said Fire Chief Frank Anderson.

Fire fighters found the blaze was confined to the sixth floor, where it burned curtains and destroyed windows on the west side of the building, but did little structural damage, he said. The fire was under control by 7:30 a.m.

Anderson said the fire was a slow burn that had probably started earlier this morning. He said a cause had not been determined.

"We're not sure if it's related to the water problem — due to water damage and electrical components getting wet — so we're shutting the electricity off until an electrician can check it out," Anderson said.

Fire Marshall Burr Lea Settles said the electricity probably should have been switched off May 15 when the second of two waterline breaks in two days turned the building's stairwell into Niagara Falls and the lobby into an indoor swimming pool.

"At the time we weren't aware of the leak, just the water running down the stairway, but after looking at it, the water's running into

Disabled veterans fight benefits law

Editor's note: This is the second of two stories about a controversial law affecting the payment of military disability and retirement pensions.

BIG SPRING — Local members of a veterans group may be fighting their toughest battle yet in pagans and publicity have only served to turn frustration into anger.

Don Sabaitis of Big Spring said at issue is a law which prevents disabled military retirees from collecting both retirement benefits accrued during 20 or more years of service and disability pensions.

Federal law now requires that disabled military retirees waive a dollar amount of monthly retirement pay equal to the amount of the disability pension. Civil service retirees who receive a pension for a service-connected disability are not subject to the same loss of benefits.

Stephen Wolonsky, president of Uniformed Services Disabled Retirees, said there are at least two reasons why the group faces a difficult battle: Military retirees who receive disability pensions are a relatively small group, and encouraging them to speak out against the government is difficult.

"The military retiree has been indoctrinated. Don't go against the government," Wolonsky said. "So our nation, through an act of Con-

Giant frogs flop at contest

ANGELS CAMP, Calif. (AP) — Three giant African frogs touted as potential record-breakers were big flops at the Jumping Frog Jubilee, beat out by a puny domestic one-pounder named Help Mr. Wizard.

"I wasn't afraid of the African frogs," said Gregg Jaschek, who took home the $500 first prize Sunday. "I saw them on TV. They weren't so hot."

Some veterans of the annual Calaveras County competition had complained the giants from Cameroon had an unfair advantage, but organizers voted in March to let Seattle animal collector Andy Koffman bring on his burly outsiders.

Three of Koffman's Goliaths made it to the finals, but he couldn't get a decent leap out of the three-pounders. They were too big to fit on the 9-inch starting pad and were disqualified, or slipped and slid their way to lackluster hops.

A dripping Help Mr. Wizard soared 19 feet, 3 inches in three jumps to best 72 other finalists.

"I'll be back," declared Koffman, who had claimed his frogs could leap 30 feet in a single bound.

The 62nd annual jubilee 150 miles east of San Francisco drew a capacity crowd of 8,000, thanks to the controversy over Koffman's frogs. The event was inspired by Mark Twain's short

Council considers trash pick-up fees

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — Garbage collection rates will be a prime consideration for the City Council once again, at its regular meeting Tuesday.

The council will consider the second reading of an ordinance providing for a 15 percent increase in collection rates. The meeting begins at 5:30 p.m. in terminal building 1106 at the Big Spring McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark.

The last time the council approved a garbage rate increase on second reading, Mayor Max Green vetoed the ordinance three days later. Green voted against the first reading of the ordinance and said today that he probably will vote against the second reading.

"I still want to look at other facets of the city operation," Green said, "and I am not convinced that we need the money to go into the regulatory reserve account." Green declined to say whether he would veto the ordinance if it passes.

According to the ordinance, revenues generated by the increase is to fund equipment purchases, loan repayments, a regulatory agency surcharge fund and a state garbage tax, officials have said.

The council also will swear into office Councilman Corky Harris, who defeated District 3 Councilman D.D. Johnston in the May 5 election. Councilwoman Pat DeAnda, who was re-elected to the District 1 seat on May 5 without opposition, also will take the oath of office.

In other agenda items, the council will consider:

Industrial board review to begin

BIG SPRING — Chamber of Commerce officials will offer the City Council a schedule Tuesday for discussing various aspects of the city's industrial development corporation.

Wayne Moore, executive director of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, has proposed a format for the month of June that calls for three meetings to discuss: Concept and review; needs and priorities; and structure to meet goals.

The City Council must decide how an industrial development corporation will function as a result of voters approving formation of the board during the May 5 city election. Residents approved a 1/2 percent sales tax increase to fund such a corporation, which will encourage and help fund industrial development in the city.

The proposed schedule calls for three meetings in June with identical sessions in the morning hours and in the evening hours. The format allows for presentations of facts and for answering questions submitted in writing.

President pays visit to Texas

President Bush headed for the West Coast to do more stumping for GOP candidates after mixing pleasure and politicking during his weekend visit to Texas.

Bush's busy agenda in the state included a commencement address, a fundraiser for Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams in Dallas, a visit to flood-ravaged areas of the state and some golf and tennis.

The president visited Portland to attend a fundraising event today for gubernatorial candidate Dave Frohnmayer, and also for last night's dedication of a memorial to Portland police officers slain in the line of duty. Los Angeles is the last stop on his four-day trip.

Bush's plane departed Ellington Field at 1:55 p.m. after he attended services at St. Martin's Episcopal Church then played tennis.

Delivering his second commencement address to University of Texas students, Bush urged the graduates Saturday to reach out and help others.

Ex-convict gets death sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — An ex-convict who wanted to flee to Iran was sentenced to death by injection for the shooting death of a McDonald's restaurant worker in order to steal $2,100 to facilitate his trip.

No one witnessed the Jan. 3 shooting of Ben Stone, 33, but testimony showed that Rulford Garfield Aldridge, a maintenance worker, killed Stone to finance a trip to what he referred to as the Islamic Republic of Iran and escape what he thought were racist plots against him.

Aldridge, also known as Salim el-Anwar Shabazz, had obtained a passport two weeks before Stone's death. Aided by relatives, Aldridge first fled to Mexico City following Stone's shooting, but ran afoul of authorities there and fled to Canada.

He finally took a bus back to Houston and was arrested. Jurors in State District Judge Brian Rains' court on Saturday sentenced Aldridge, 36, to death.

The conviction faces an automatic appeal.

Doctors testing Stormie for signs of transplant rejection

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doctors have begun a series of tests to determine whether 12-year-old Stormie Jones is rejecting her second transplanted liver.

Stormie, the world's longest surviving heart-liver transplant patient, returned to Pittsburgh Sunday from her home in White Settlement, Texas, after routine tests revealed she had developed high liver enzyme levels — a sign of possible organ rejection.

"They wanted to get it under control before it got to be a big problem," said her mother, Lois "Suzie" Purcell, who traveled to Pittsburgh with Stormie. "Her numbers had been real good up until the last couple of weeks."

Stormie was listed in fair condition early today at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh.

Her evaluation is expected to take several days. In the meantime, doctors plan to give Stormie an experimental anti-rejection drug intravenously for at least three days, hospital spokeswoman Sue Cardillo said. Stormie usually takes the drug, FK-506, orally and at a lower dose.

Stormie, who will turn 13 on May 31, walked into the hospital about 1:15 p.m. Sunday, Children's spokeswoman Lynn McMahon said. Shortly afterward, she began trying to find out whether any friends from previous visits were hospitalized, Ms. Cardillo said.

"The first thing she wanted to do is look at the patient board to see who was here so she could make rounds," she said.

She met briefly with reporters after coaxing by hospital staff members, who wanted to assure the public the girl was not critically ill.

"Remember I'm getting paid for this," she joked. "And this is just for five minutes."

Stormie said she felt fine and was not experiencing any symptoms.

Her stepfather, Alan Purcell, said she was especially discouraged because she had not felt sick.

"She's not doing too good this time. She's a little disappointed," Purcell said. "What do you expect of a 12-year-old child? She's tired. ... She's been through more than most humans will ever go through in two lifetimes. She'd like to be normal for a while."

When she was 6 years old, Stormie received a new heart and liver at Children's on Feb. 14, 1984, to control a congenital condition that left her cholesterol levels 10 times higher than normal.

Transplant pioneer Dr. Thomas Starzl replaced the girl's heart and liver with those of a 4-year-old girl who had died in a New York car accident.

PITTSBURGH — Stormie Jones, the world's longest-living heart-liver transplant recipient, arrives Sunday afternoon at Children's Hospital here.

Program mixes molesters, victims

DALLAS (AP) — "Aren't you despicable?" a former sex-abuse victim called to a convicted child abuser as he struggled to recount his offenses.

Authorities say such emotional outbursts are typical yet therapeutic for both sides in an unusual program in which sex offenders and abusers attend weekly meetings in Austin together.

"There aren't any other programs like this one in Texas," said Sandra Martin, director of victim services for the Travis County district attorney's office.

"What is unusual about the program is that you put the offenders and the adult survivors, and we have both male and female survivors, in the same room," Ms. Martin said.

The offenders are often ordered by local judges to attend the program, which is funded by Travis County, the county's criminal justice division and the governor's office.

The Austin Police Department, the Department of Human Services and the Travis County sheriff's office also make referrals to the program.

The program is based on a model developed in San Jose, Calif. It forces molesters to face their misdeeds, and allows adult victims of childhood abuse to deal with their traumas.

One incest victim, Lisa Fain, said she is attending sessions in the hope that they will help her overcome her fear of men. She was among about 80 people attending a recent meeting.

In the meetings, offenders face victims, although not the same people they have molested. Group members have either been sexually abused or have sexually abused someone, or sometimes both.

Ms. Fain, 33, said that confronting molesters in a supervised session has helped her overcome some of her fears.

"Attending these sessions has taught me that my perspective is warped but it is warped because of my circumstances," said Ms. Fain.

"And it is really good to walk in there and take a look at a perpetrator and say, 'This is not a big, scary human being.'"

To higher ground
DAYTON, Texas — A Kennefick family takes what they can in their boat as flood waters from the Trinity River rise because of record releases from the Livingston Dam. Most homes in this community have never been flooded until now.

'Second disaster' hitting Texas businesses

LIVINGSTON (AP) — There's no flooding at the Woodsy Hollow campground about five miles east of Lake Livingston Dam, but there might as well be.

The campground is one of many Lake Livingston area tourism and resort businesses that have no flooding problems whatsoever, but are nevertheless suffering because the public thinks everything here is under water.

The only silver lining, some say, is that sightseers in search of floodwaters are offsetting a portion of losses from the regular tourism industry.

Thousands of people living along the rain-swollen Trinity River have been displaced due to flooding caused by severe thunderstorms upstream. The flooding is the worst since the turn of the century in Texas, and has claimed 13 lives. A dozen other states also have flooding from spring rains.

All 60 of Jordan's recreational vehicle sites had been booked for the weekend, until reports of flooding along the Trinity scared his customers away.

"We had a full house and everybody canceled," said owner Virgil Jordan.

Business also canceled for Sunday because of the flooding, Jordan said.

He said he should be booked by now for Memorial Day, but has only 12 reservations, and no new bookings are calling, "because they're in a panic state."

Fertilizer used on Exxon oil spill

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Exxon has begun applying fertilizer to the shoreline to speed the breakdown of oil from the Exxon Valdez spill.

The company got the go-ahead from the state to use the chemicals after a debate over whether they would cause even more harm to the environment.

"Our key objective is to achieve the appropriate level of cleanup with the least amount of stress on the environment," said Bob Mastracchio, Exxon's technical manager for the cleanup.

This year's cleanup got under way May 1 with crews removing tar by hand. Exxon expects to complete its work by mid-August under a cleanup plan approved by the government's cleanup coordinator, said Exxon spokesman Joe Tucker.

The Exxon Valdez ran aground on a reef on March 24, 1989, spilling nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil into the clear waters of Prince William Sound.

Kilauea Volcano threatens homes

KALAPANA, Hawaii (AP) — Lava from Kilauea Volcano destroyed yet another house and posed an immediate threat to several more, and a federal disaster relief team arrived to help the victims of the seven-year eruption.

One house was 100 feet in front of the seven-mile-long river of molten rock, Craig Hindle, a Hawaii County civil defense spokesman, said late Sunday.

The house and six others were expected to be destroyed in 24 hours by the flow that was filling up low spots and then oozing forward, Hindle said.

Earlier Sunday, the eruption that began Jan. 3, 1983, claimed its 143rd house. Just 30 homes remain in Kalapana; 67 have been destroyed since April 4.

Some victims eligible for disaster relief had their homes destroyed seven years ago, while other homeowners have been unable to collect insurance because, although rendered useless by surrounding lava flows, the houses are still standing.

Mills graduates celebrate fight

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Jubilant seniors at Mills College brought yellow balloons to graduation to celebrate their successful fight to keep undergraduate men out of the women's school.

Rain delayed the ceremonies for several hours Sunday but didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the 428 graduating seniors.

The liberal arts school announced May 3 it would admit men as undergraduates to boost enrollment and revenue. Students boycotted class, demonstrated and took over the campus for two weeks, and the trustees dropped the idea Friday.

Mills College has 777 students, including men in graduate programs. Administrators wanted to boost enrollment to 1,000.

The school's alumnae came up with financial pledges that should help Mills preserve a $70 million endowment. They also promised to help recruit more students.

Mills College seniors celebrate a successful fight to keep undergraduate men out, as well as their graduation.

Mills is one of three all-women colleges in California and one of 94 colleges in the nation with all-female undergraduate classes.

GREENBELT, Md. — NASA engineers at the Goddard Space Center captured their first image with the Hubble space telescope Sunday. Officials said they were pleased with the quality of the first image.

Space photos reveal surprise double star

GREENBELT, Md. (AP) — The first photo series from the Hubble Space Telescope was supposed to be just an engineering test, but it surprised scientists by revealing an unsuspected double star.

Hubble's inaugural photo sequence, taken from its orbit 381 miles above the Earth, showed bright, crisp stars against a black background, with much clearer images than seen in a picture taken by a ground-based telescope of the same part of the heavens.

"Fantastic," James Westphal, the principal scientist for the camera used in the first photo exercise, said Sunday. "We are just as pleased as punch at this point. Our image is significantly better than we were concerned that it might be."

Westphal said the Hubble pictures clearly show that an image which appeared in ground-based photos to be only a single star was, in fact, a rare binary star. The space telescope pictures showed two overlapping points of light, instead of a single blob as seen in a picture taken by a Chilean observatory.

"We didn't know it was a double star," said Westphal.

NASA officials had said Hubble's initial images would be only "an engineering test" that was being used to meet the ceremonial requirements for the "first light" pictures that are traditional for a new telescope.

But a delighted Westphal said the pictures were worthy of serious study.

"Boy, we could get lots of science out of this right now," he said.

Lennard Fisk, the associate administrator for science at NASA, said the quality of the pictures proved the design and testing of the costly telescope.

The quality of the photos brought cheers from National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers who have had to solve a series of problems with the telescope since it was launched last month by a space shuttle.

Hubble's troubles have included a fouled antenna, a computer program that caused instruments to shut down, another computer program that contained a math error that affected pointing accuracy, and a satellite jitter that experts still find troublesome.

East German shops slash prices

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East German shops slashed prices on everything from televisions to sportswear today in a move to compete with a flood of Western products.

The government announced the price cuts just six weeks before East Germany is to implement a free market and merge its economy with West Germany, a major step toward uniting the nations.

Meanwhile, hundreds of farmers driving tractors and trucks left Potsdam for a protest later today in nearby East Berlin.

Parliament met in East Berlin to debate a state treaty that would merge the economies and social institutions of the German states by July 2. The farm workers planned to rally during the session.

Farmers want protection from West European food imports, which are better packaged and often cheaper than East German goods because of European Economic Community subsidies.

Palestinian shoots, stabs tourists

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — A Palestinian armed with a pistol and a dagger boarded a tour bus near a downtown tourist site today and attacked its occupants, wounding nine French tourists and a Jordanian, officials said.

Amman police chief Fadel Ali said one of the French victims was seriously wounded and the rest only slightly. However, French Ambassador Dennis Bouchard said two of the French tourists were in critical condition. He cited reports from embassy officials at Amman hospitals.

Police immediately arrested the attacker and identified him as Ahmad Badwan, 28, a Palestinian from the Gaza Strip who carries a temporary Jordanian passport and lives in Amman.

A witness, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he heard police report that Badwan said he acted to avenge the killing of seven Palestinians by an Israeli near Tel Aviv on Sunday. Israeli officials have said the man was disturbed.

The incident occurred near the Roman amphitheater in downtown Amman, a popular tourist site.

The man boarded the bus with 30 tourists aboard.

Israeli gunman sparks violence

JABALIYA CAMP, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Israeli soldiers fatally shot three Palestinians and wounded 94 others today in violent protests over the massacre of seven Palestinians by an Israeli gunman.

The suspect, Ami Popper, appeared in court today with his feet shackled and under heavy guard. Police said the suspect was suicidal after breaking up with his girlfriend.

Seven Palestinians were shot and killed by Israeli soldiers and more than 700 were wounded in rioting after Sunday's massacre in the Tel Aviv suburb of Rishon Letzion.

The Palestinians were killed as a group of Arab laborers from Gaza waited at the Roses junction. Witnesses said Popper ordered 50 workers to sit in a line, then opened fire with an assault rifle, killing seven and wounding Hamad Dhahis is helped after learning that his son Omar was one of eight Arab laborers killed by a gunman.

Sunday's rioting was the worst bloodshed in the 29-month-old uprising since April 15, 1988, when 17 Palestinians died in riots.

Florida considered weapons bazaar

MIAMI (AP) — In South Florida, money can buy the weaponry of your choice, whether it's anti-aircraft missiles, plastic explosives or drone bombers, authorities say.

The region is considered one of the world's best equipped bazaars for black-market weapons of war, a rendezvous where guerrilla groups, narco-terrorists and other underworld elements seek ever more sophisticated firepower.

Colombia's drug cartels, their jungle cocaine labs and clandestine airstrips under assault from fighter bombers and helicopter gunships, appear to be the latest big shoppers for shoulder-borne Stinger anti-aircraft missiles.

In an undercover operation May 5, a narco-terrorism task force based in Miami arrested two Colombians allegedly seeking to buy 120 Stingers and 50 automatic rifles for Pablo Escobar Gaviria, kingpin of the Medellin cocaine cartel.

The defendants remain jailed without bond. No trial date has been set.

It was the first acknowledged coup for the task force, which was formed in September from 14 federal, state and county law enforcement agencies.

The reasons given for the Miami area's role in the arms trade include its proximity to Latin America's drug network, the vast amounts of Latin wealth in Miami banks and available for use, and the region's busy seaports and airports, which make it easier for criminals to move unnoticed.

Firearms customers come from all quarters.

Authorities suspect the Irish Republican Army, not a regular customer in the region, was in the market for a Stinger in West Palm Beach in January.

Authorities here also have investigated purchases of a pilotless drone bomber, anti-tank TOW missiles, rockets and plastic explosives.

"South Florida is on the national scale and internationally seen as a tremendous gateway for munitions, that's just an accepted fact," said Customs spokesman Michael Sheehan.

"Here it's just a matter of money, really. In general, if you have the money, you can buy pretty much what you want... Every type of evil deed that you want to do you can do here."

William Gavin, agent in charge of the FBI in Miami, said it's difficult to gauge how many such transactions are going on.

Keep congress out of it

The House of Representatives, which obviously has nothing better to do, has decided to tell American business how to treat its employees.

(T)he House approved a bill that would guarantee unpaid leave of up to 12 weeks for medical reasons or for the care of a new or ill child, parent or spouse. The bill exempts businesses with fewer than 50 workers.

The bill passed despite a threatened veto by President Bush. Now the bill goes to the Senate, where, hopefully, keener minds will prevail.

It's galling to see an outfit that can't balance a budget try to tell the business community what's right for its employees. Business and industry are swamped with federal red tape already. Now the government is again mandating benefits and making life tougher for people who keep this country working.

Our lawmakers have to realize that they can't mandate America's character as a kinder, gentler nation.

Capital Journal, Pierre, S.D.

Bill needed by families

In the interests of supporting family values and an efficient work force, President Bush should withdraw his threat to veto a family leave bill.

The federal bill, approved . . . by the . . . House, . . . supports several important economic and ethical issues. One is the now obvious fact that our economy cannot function without the skills of women workers and that many families cannot function without a wife's paycheck.

Anything that helps women work helps the economy. These economic facts are beyond argument.

At the same time, as President Bush and others have said many times, we must encourage strong family relationships and help couples who want a family but who might, in some circumstances, choose abortion if having a child meant that the mother could not work.

Most of all, workers should be allowed to spend time at home to care for a new baby or a sick relative. It is not only the humane thing to do; it is the practical thing.

Family leave is hardly likely to be exploited. Even with medical benefits paid by a company, few employees could afford to remain away from work longer than is absolutely necessary.

Reed partly to blame

Former hostage Frank Reed is starting to irritate us. Since his return to the United States after spending 3 1/2 years in captivity in Lebanon, Reed has kept officials off balance with his Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde comments.

One day Reed says he understands and accepts the government's handling of the hostage crisis; the next day he blasts the president because he refuses to negotiate for the hostages still in captivity.

Reed must take some responsibility for his kidnapping. He was abducted in Lebanon after the United States advised its citizens to leave the Middle East because it could not guarantee their safety.

Reed ignored the advice. He said he thought his conversion to the Moslem faith would protect him.

He was wrong.

Now, after making a colossal blunder, Reed is trying to talk the government into making another mistake. He wants the United States to throw caution and its hostage policy to the wind and negotiate for the six Americans still held hostage.

Reed said he and four other hostages once "had some not-so-nice thoughts about people who we thought weren't willing to trade for our lives."

Mr. Reed, those same people you are complaining about warned all Americans to leave the Middle East. Why didn't you listen?

An ostrich-like position

Environmental policy-making in the White House of late has caused us to muse on that strange animal, the ostrich. An ostrich-like posture (if you keep your head in the sand long enough the problem with go away) allows the president to ignore the compelling ecological signs that action must be taken now.

Protection of the ozone layer is a leading case in point. Holes in the ozone layer put us all at risk — developed and developing nations alike. Yet over the objections of Environmental Protection Agency chief William K. Reilly, the Bush administration recently welched on its commitment to put $20 million a year into a new environmental fund for financial and technical assistance to developing nations. This fund would help developing nations phase out chlorofluorocarbons and other chemicals that deplete the protective ozone layer in the upper atmosphere.

Over the past 40 years, the United States has set an example for the world. We've empowered many nations to do good things — to rebuild their shattered economies, to establish stable democracies. The president should be providing global leadership on this and other critical environmental issues, not sticking his head in the sand.

Passing bills that 'feel good'

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
WASHINGTON — Sen. Chuck Grassley of Iowa recently came up with a splendid phrase to describe much of the work of Congress. We spend too much time, he said, passing bills just because "they make us feel good."

The senator was speaking of the pending "Hate Crime Statistics Act," of which more in a moment, but his observation could well be applied to hundreds of other measures that float to the floor on waves of bonhomie. The week seldom passes on Capitol Hill that our lawmakers are not engrossed in congeniality.

Thus in the past 10 days, the House has cheerfully devoted itself to establishing Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month, Trauma Awareness Month, Jewish Heritage Week, Drinking Water Week and National Pet Week. The House voted to name an animal health research laboratory in Clay Center, Neb., in honor of retiring Rep. Virginia D. Smith. Both chambers agreed to honor Laurance Spelman Rockefeller with a gold medal to commemorate his lifelong contributions to the environment.

Such measures just naturally make members feel good. They will make somebody happy. Not much time or money is lost; some modest political advantage may be gained. The rules are suspended and the bill is passed. Another day, another dollar.

The Hate Crimes Statistics Act, which was the object of Grassley's complaint, is at a somewhat higher level of political fun and games. The bill passed the House last summer. It probably will sail through the Senate this month, and to what avail? Its only useful purpose is to provide tangible evidence that members are opposed to crimes motivated by "race, religion, sexual orientation or ethnicity."

James J. Kilpatrick

Well, sure. Members also are opposed to man-eating sharks, but there is not much of a constituency there. Blacks, Jews, homosexuals and Hispanics are a different matter. The bill would direct the attorney general to acquire data about the incidence of murder, rape, manslaughter, assault, intimidation, arson and vandalism manifestly attributable to hate.

It is difficult to oppose such a feel-good bill, and Grassley himself does not seem passionately aroused. The bill passed the House 368-47. The Senate doubtless will make a similar demonstration of virtue. I am not having conniptions.

Even so, let me raise a plaintive voice. No one in either House or Senate seems to have a good idea of how these statistics are to be accumulated. That little detail is airily left to the ingenuity of the attorney general. It is up to him to establish specific criteria for measuring the degree of animosity or prejudice that rises to a motivation of "hate."

Neither does anyone have a clear idea of what this statistical expedition will cost. The Congressional Budget Office made a stab at estimating the expense and swiftly gave up. Under one methodology, the cost could run to less than a million dollars annually; under another, it could come to $10 million. One million, 10 million — on Capitol Hill it is all the same.

In its report of May 1, the Senate Judiciary Committee acknowledged that "identifying crimes motivated by prejudice can sometimes be difficult." Certainly there are obvious cases. When skinheads paint swastikas upon a Jewish temple, the ugly prejudice is evident. When Klansmen burn a cross on the lawn of a black family, it is not because they want to keep warm by a bonfire.

Beyond this we get into areas of great uncertainty. If a white named Paul takes a club to a black named Bill, is the assault predicated upon race? Maybe yes, maybe no. The two belligerents may just dislike each other. Is a Hispanic woman raped because she is Hispanic? Or is the crime a manifestation of a deeper hatred of women in general?

Grassley asks if prejudice must be the sole motivation, 50 percent motivation or 20 percent motivation. Local police, who would have to add this paperwork burden to other burdens, must hazard a determination case by case. It seems a great deal of trouble to assemble data of doubtful reliability, to be used for no particular purpose.

One more mild objection: If the bill is to become law, surely it should be amended to embrace crimes committed in labor disputes. When labor goons fire on Greyhound buses, a hate crime clearly has been committed. If management hires thugs to beat up on peaceful picketers, same thing. Curiously, this is not the kind of hate crime that merits legislative condemnation. It wouldn't make many members feel good at all.

Never go to bed with devil

To the editor:
I read the paper every day. I miss Ray's column. I like reading all the writer's articles, even Steve Reagan's.

(Regarding a line in your editorial of May 14, I cannot believe any human thinks going to bed with the devil can bring about any good.)

We have too much destruction in the world today and not enough true Christianity. The basic fundamental of democracy is Christianity. How long will we as Americans stand as the home of the free, living in the bed of the devil?

Keep up the good work.

Blame people, not the church

To the editor:
Ruth Cochran's opinion column Monday drags out that superficial, shallow, and shopworn whine that the teaching of the Roman Catholic Church regarding contraception is somehow responsible for overpopulation, poverty, greed, and families with six children. This tired and specious complaint also serves, along with the doctrine of papal infallibility, as a most convenient excuse for lapsed Catholics; you know, the old "we don't like these rules, therefore the rules must be wrong" school of modern religion. The Church has never preached, condoned, endorsed or encouraged the irresponsible begetting of babies. Incredible and unpopular as it may seem, the Catholic Church teaches that this activity belongs within the sacrament of marriage. Various methods for regulating family size are available which are sanctioned by the Church.

That human beings ignore Christian teaching and go their own way with disastrous results is the story of mankind since the fall, and it's not unusual or original to blame the nearest institution for one's own failings. However, there are numberless legions of us who thank God for the Roman Catholic Church, her teachings, and the greatest evangelist of our time, Pope John Paul II.

Victim grateful for prompt help

To the editor:

Restaurant sizzles over rights

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

Life in the Lubbock restaurant business has gone udderly bad. Important rights are at "steak" as court cowboys are trying to decide if "Moo" is too close to "Moouo."

Who's kicking up enough dust to choke a cow over barnyard spellings, you say? Well, a state district court is being asked to decide in a suit filed against a Georgia-based restaurant chain by a Lubbock restaurant whether "Moo" is a rip-off of "Moouo."

They may have to argue this one until the cows come home, and they lawyers will probably milk it for all it's worth.

Now follow this closely — it gets complicated for non-agricultural types.

Yet Inc., which operates two "Bob York's Western Sizzlin'" restaurants in Lubbock has filed suit against Western Sizzlin' Inc., of Georgia alleging that the chain has been using "Moo" on a number of advertising properties.

Yet Inc. has been using the "Moouo" slogan as its trademark for six years.

The Associated Press reported that attorneys for Yet Inc. claim in the suit filed Wednesday that the company created the "Moouo" slogan in 1984 and has used it on a variety of company materials, including Mooouo saddles for children to sit in, Mooouo horns to wear, and Mooouos from which to order a Mooouo meal. Children who take a table manners course from Mr. Mooouo (who travels in a Mooouo Mobile that is parked in the "Moouo-K Corral") receive a degree from Mooouo U.

I wonder if that's as valuable as a business degree from Harvard?

The suit alleges that the parent Western Sizzlin' Inc., dropped an "o" from the Lubbock slogan and illegally appropriated the similar "Moo" designation for its own "Moo U" (for the company's restaurant management training center), "Moo-Lah" (for a payroll program for its restaurant services) and Moo News (a company news letter).

The suit also alleges Western Sizzlin' Inc. changed its cow character from "Mr. Skinny" to "Mr. Moo," and it alleges Western Sizzlin' Inc. has refused to stop using the "Moo" slogans after being asked by the Lubbock firm.

That two restaurant chains could be so drastically cloven down the middle is terrible. How could things have gotten so bad that a court was asked to ride herd on the problem?

Yet Inc. is asking the courts to order the Georgia-based chain to stop using the word "Moo" and any other related words or phrases.

The Lubbock firm wants the court to rule that Yet Inc. "has protected service mark and trademark rights to the word and sound 'Moouo' and that it should be awarded" actual and consequential damages including lost profits because of the alleged violation.

Ranchers should beware — they could have real steak in the suit. They may have to gag every bull, every cow, every steer and every heifer on the spread to keep them from uttering that fateful sound — it's protected by trademark.

Now that I've exhausted every crummy pun I can think of, it's time to mooove along to El Paso where Police Chief John Scagno has decided he can't fight crime from a fire-engine red Mercedes-Benz and still look good in the media.

Scagno swapped the $27,000 Mercedes he's been using for official business for a Chevrolet Celebrity. The Mercedes was confiscated from an accused drug smuggler.

"I've had it with all the teasing I've gotten from you media people and the politicians," Scagno said of the swap. "Just as soon as I can, I'll get rid of it."

He swapped it with the first person he saw — Capt. Gregg Drollinger got stuck with it.

Drollinger wasn't thrilled: "Personally, I'd prefer a pickup truck."

Program offers extra help

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

First grade lasted two years. Rene Herrera, 8, was behind his classmates and his mother Mary Ann of Big Spring thought he was a lost cause.

"I told my husband, you know at least he could learn a trade and be a plumber since he wasn't smart." Mrs. Herrera was approached by Marcy School teachers about the possibility of enrolling him in a resource program. The idea was frightening at first. "I thought they were telling me there was something wrong with him," she said.

She agreed to give the program a try and after two six-week periods, saw the results. Rene's scores on the California Achievement Test showed his work at second-grade level, third-grade in some sections.

Mrs. Herrera said she found that all Rene needed was a little extra help. The support from teachers in the program, she said, gave her son confidence and time to sharpen his skills. "If it wasn't for them, he wouldn't have done this."

The change did not stop with Rene's test scores, she said. "He comes home now, he says, did you know... like he enjoys learning."

BIG SPRING — Resource teacher Mariann Heffington listens as Rene Herrera reads to her. Rene, a student at Marcy Elementary School, has progressed academically since entering the school's Resource Program.

He thinks he's a genius."

Mrs. Herrera said when she was in school, she was not able to keep up with her classmates. No extra help was available for her, so she dealt with it alone. "I knew what he was going through. I wish someone had done that for me."

Mariann Heffington, the Marcy School teacher who works with the program, said it allows children to learn at their own ability level. For Rene, she said, that was the extra boost he needed.

"He did wonderfully. I think he's on the honor roll. We've had a good success rate, not 100 percent, but a good rate." Heffington said many students like Rene are not ready when they start first grade.

The program's goal, she said, is to allow them the chance to catch up and get back where they should be. Some parents, she said, react badly to the idea that their child would need the program. "There is still a social stigma, the idea that something is wrong with the child."

She said she would encourage any parent to find out more about the resource program. "The sooner we get them, the sooner they get out of it," she said.

Schwarz named National Merit Scholar

BIG SPRING — A Big Spring High School outstanding senior has been named a National Merit Scholar.

Marc Schwarz, valedictorian of his graduating class, has been awarded a scholarship from the University of Texas at Austin through the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. Schwarz said he plans to study political science and history at the university this fall.

Schwarz received the scholarship based on his academic performance, scores on an aptitude test and recommendations from school officials.

He had been named a semi-finalist for achieving a high score on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test. He then became one of 6,000 nationwide to achieve finalist status after additional screening procedures. Finalists are eligible for several types of scholarships.

Schwarz was awarded a college-sponsored scholarship, financed by a private or public institution of higher learning. Such an award may provide between $250 and $2,000 for study at the sponsoring college.

Schwarz has been editor of the high school newspaper, The Corral for two years, president of the National Honor Society and involved in UIL speech competitions. He won three awards at state UIL journalism contest this year, including a Tops in Texas for his editorial writing skills.

Rash places first at conference

Stacy Rash, a senior business student at Coahoma High School, won first place in legal applications at the 1990 National Leadership Conference in Minneapolis, Minn.

The theme of the business students conference was "On the Move to Professionalism." She was tested on basic office procedures, legal terminology, analyzing legal documents, proofreading rough draft legal documents, records management for legal documents, work ethics and human relations situations.

Other students participating at the national conference were: Shawnte Bryant, junior, competed in prepared verbal communications where she made the finals and placed in the top 10. Her five-minute speech was on entrepreneurship.

Tessa Henry, senior, competed in information processing. Tracy Dorton, senior, competed in financial specialist. Tara Robertson, senior, participated in banking applications contest.

Host families still needed

Could your family host an exchange student next school year? Students from Norway, Denmark, France, Italy, Australia, Japan, Thailand and many other countries need families to live with in the U.S. They are all ages 15-17, will arrive in August and go to public high school, returning home in June. They will have spending money and medical insurance. Host families can deduct $50 on their taxes.

Would you like to go to one of those countries for one year? You can spend the whole school year or only five weeks. For either program, call American Intercultural

Homemakers meet

Salena Sewell hosted the recent meeting of the City Extension Homemakers Club.

A program on "Motivation Yourself and Others" was presented by Frances Mason. Motivation is the act of inducing, instigating, moving or providing incentive for others to act. People are generally motivated to act in a particular way for three reasons: The expectations of other people interacting with them; the total of their past experiences or history; and by the direct learning process itself.

The motivated behavior associated with fulfilling many needs is learned. Our social, psychological and physical experiences determine much of our behavior.

No leader can accomplish group goals without the help of the whole group. Sometimes the group goals and that of an individual may conflict. This is only normal and we have to learn to cooperate for the good of the group.

Basic human needs are well established in motivational psychology. These have been classified by Abraham Maslow as physiological needs, safety needs, social needs, ego needs and the need for self-actualization. The behavior to fulfill these needs vary from person to person. Every person needs to be motivated to fulfill his potential.

There are three kinds of motivating behavior. Negative motivating behavior threatens, punishes, regiments, judges, withdraws, ignores and withholds information.

Permissive motivating behavior is non-judging, is non-supportive, gives complete freedom, withdraws and avoids responsibility.

Positive motivating behavior promotes fulfillment of long term goals, creates a sense of commitment and creates a positive, healthy image.

Dispute over Shakespeare's words becoming a habit

DEAR ABBY: Fools rush in! In second-guessing Shakespeare, you should not be so quick to give credence to a high school student's English teacher. Most serious Shakespeare scholars now agree that, in Hamlet, "nunnery" means a convent or cloister.

It was not until 1936 that Dover Wilson, in his "What Happens in Hamlet," first suggested that it meant a brothel, along with other silly notions, most of them Freudian. Such interpretation became fashionable for a while (Laurence Olivier gave it acceptability) but it has largely faded.

Although there was some use of the word "nunnery" in Elizabethan England as a brothel, such use was not extant. Moreover, no one can rationally read this scene without concluding that Hamlet, in urging Ophelia thither, is crudely suggesting that only in such a place can she hope to escape the evil machinations of man and the vile institution of marriage, which has so despoiled his mother. He can hardly have meant brothel to this end.

Isaac Asimov, in adopting the conventional meaning, offers another suggestion: "But is it Ophelia he plans to send to a nunnery, or is it his mother, Queen Gertrude?" (Remember that Edward the Confessor sent his mother, Emma, to a nunnery once he had gained the throne.)

Be assured that, for every opinion of Shakespeare, there is another to the opposite, and hundreds in between. And just because this genius was much given to the bawdy does not mean we should go out of our way to give his every word that twist. — WILL BAKER, YAKIMA, WASH.

DEAR MR. BAKER: Whatever did we do before the facts were faxed in a matter of minutes?

According to Warren Seid of the Frances Howard Goldwyn Hollywood Regional Library in Los Angeles: "There were two 'meanings of the word 'nunnery' in Shakespeare's time. Noting his use of puns, and the nature of the character who is being addressed, it becomes clear that Hamlet is telling Ophelia to go to a nunnery where personalities of note can get 'favors' from the inhabitants. It is there that he can go to breed sinners."

A page from the Oxford English Dictionary (2nd Edition, Volume X) shows under the word "nunnery": 1) A place of residence for a body or community of nuns, a building in which nuns live under religious rule and discipline; a convent. 2) A house of ill fame.

Aha! So, there is, indeed, a question about what Hamlet meant in his speech to Ophelia. I rest my case.

DEAR ABBY: Your suggestion that telephone operators eliminate the "ma'ams" and "sirs" to avoid mistakes is a good one.

If the woman sounds like a man, she should give up her four-pack-a-day habit. And if the man sounds like a woman, lifting barbells might help. — VIVIAN GROW IN PALM SPRINGS

DEAR ABBY: A while back you published some letters about people who spoke with Scandinavian accents. It set me to thinking about some other people who talk "funny."

New Englanders end any word that finishes with an "ah" sound as though it ends in "er." (Example:

Frogs

Continued from page 1-A and if I knew the secret of winning I would have won long before this," he said, kissing his frog as friends poured champagne on him.

Second place went to an 18-foot, 4-inch leap in three jumps by a frog named Cho Cho. Third place was won by Jumpin' Jack.

Koffman brought 27 Goliaths to the frog jump. The big frogs can weigh up to 15 pounds and range up to three feet in length. His three finalists: Johnny Carson, Jay Leno and Sue — weighed in at about three pounds each.

The average domestic frog weighs about a pound and is about eight inches long.

Koffman was done in by a rule that frogs must have all four feet on the pad. The big frogs also leaped at an angle and made little stutter hops after landing. Under the rules, the distance jumped is the total of three successive hops.

"They just kind of slip out of my hands and it slows them down," Koffman said. "I'm really disappointed."

Before the meet, Koffman, who keeps the frogs in a 1,500-gallon tank in his basement, predicted they would easily shatter the record, held by one-pound Rosie the Ribiter, who jumped 21 feet, 5½ inches in three leaps in 1985.

In one qualifying event, Johnny Carson jumped 12 feet, 4¼ inches, enough to win the round. Sue won its round with a leap of 13 feet, 5 inches. Jay Leno finished fifth on its way to the finals.

Romanians choose interim president

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Interim President Ion Iliescu's National Salvation Front, a group dominated by former Communists, appeared headed for a landslide victory in Romania's first free elections in more than half a century.

The first official returns showed Iliescu with a commanding lead in the presidential race, capturing 78 percent of 6,000 ballots counted in the western city of Timisoara.

The National Liberal Party's candidate, Radu Campeanu, was second with 15 percent. The National Peasant Party's Ion Ratiu was third with seven percent.

The counting began today, and final results were expected on Friday.

A West German exit poll of 16,000 voters — announced on nationwide TV while voters were still casting ballots early today — showed Iliescu winning 83 percent of the votes nationwide. Campeanu was second with 11 percent, and Ratiu trailed with six percent.

The two opposition candidates alleged numerous instances of fraud in Sunday's balloting. Some foreign observers, however, said that although there were some irregularities, they were not significant enough to alter the outcome.

The Central Electoral Bureau estimated that at least 85 percent of Romania's 16.8 million eligible voters turned out to choose a president and 506 representatives to the two-chamber parliament.

The National Salvation Front, which has run Romania since the bloody December revolution that ousted dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, won a projected 66 percent of the vote for seats in parliament, said the West German poll. The poll was conducted by the West German polling group INFAS at the invitation of the Romanian government.

In second place was the National Liberal Party with about 10 percent of the votes, the poll said. The party representing the country's 2-million Hungarian minority had 6 percent.

gress, continues to embezzle millions of dollars a year."

Wolonsky said the group members total around 2,000 — a small number that faces a great challenge.

Challenges to the law are financed solely through the donations of members, Wolonsky said, making legal action difficult.

Local members pointed out one victory — committees of both the House of Representatives and the Senate are considering bills on the issue.

A Senate sub-committee is negotiating S-563, a bill which would let disabled retirees waive a percentage of retirement pay, determined by official disability percentage, instead of using a dollar-for-dollar exchange, said an aide to Sen. Phil Gramm.

HR-303 is under consideration by the Veterans Affairs Committee in the House of Representatives, said a legislative aide to Rep. Charles Stenholm. It would repeal existing codes and allow both disability and retirement benefits to be paid in full, the aide said.

"They're using the dollar excuse to avoid this issue," Wolonsky said. "How can they, when we give so much to Third-World countries? This country won't support its own people."

Eschol Graham of Big Spring, a commander in the American Legion and a member of the group, said repeated attempts by members to seek a change has drawn little response.

"They won't recognize us," he said. Letters he has received from BUCHAREST — Farmers are pictured in a countryside polling place at Valea Popilor, some 40 kilometers outside Bucharest, as they go voting for the first time in free election in Romania since the second world war.

Stenholm express the representative's sympathy for their plight but repeat his position that there is no funding available. Stenholm's legislative aide, Marc Lubin, said reported cost for HR-303 would be between $1 billion and $2 billion.

A repeal of the law would allow Graham, a 22-year veteran of the Air Force who has been declared 40 percent disabled, to collect an additional $500 to $600 each month.

Sabatits, declared 100 percent disabled after his 22 years of service, said the money he waived would have helped when he returned to raise two children on his own.

Arnold Urbe, a disabled retiree who is employed by the VA Medical Center in Big Spring, said the unfairness is in the comparison.

"If I was retired from the phone company or something, they'd pay me in full," he said. "It really seems unfair when you look at it that way."

Letters to Congressmen and membership in lobbying groups, Urbe said, are the best ways to assure that the needs of veterans are addressed. He said he would encourage any veteran to join a group he believes will serve his individual concerns.

Valentin Torres, an employee of the VA Medical Center in Big Spring who served 21 years in the Army, was declared 40 percent disabled, later upgraded to 30 percent due to improvement in his health. He said he feels lucky that he can still work.

What frustrates him, Torres said, is seeing vets at the hospital who may have served as little as two or three years but receive more benefit money than he does. "I see it every day," he said. "I think that's very unfair."

Some members said the problem is with the legislative system and the priorities of the government. "The new generation doesn't understand the military," said disabled retiree Charles Gonzales of Big Spring. "Do congressmen know what veterans face? I don't think many of them do."

Gonzales said his disability, established as 80 percent, has gradually reduced his ability to work. He is employed part-time at present, he said.

The issue is not that money would reward his efforts, Gonzales said.

"I don't know if it would make me feel better about my sacrifices," he said.

and around the light switches," Settles said.

TU Electric servicemen turned off power to the building at about 9:15 a.m., leaving tenants wading through the soggy stairwell and hallways in the dark.

In her second floor office, Johnnie Lou Avery, manager of the Permian Building, was overseeing the evacuation of her 12 tenants.

"I was at a breakfast meeting and someone said, 'Hey, Johnnie Lou, your building's on fire,' and I thought that was the worst joke I'd ever heard," she said.

The managers of the Job Training Partnership Act and the Personalized Achievement Center decided to move their offices in the wake of last week's flood, and Avery has encouraged her other tenants to stop paying rent and seek new office space.

"The bottom line is we're closing down the building," Avery said. "By not getting repairs made in the past 10 years and not being able to get through to the owners, we've broken our contract with the tenants."

The Permian Building is owned by Flato Realty in San Antonio, which has refused countless requests to maintain the building, Avery said.

BIG SPRING — Fire fighters were called to the Permian Building early this morning after a fire was reported in the penthouse. The blaze apparently was caused by electricity. The fire is the latest in a series of mishaps, including a broken water pipe that has caused several tenants to move from the building.

Man angry with permit ordinance

BIG SPRING — A Howard County man believes a city ordinance is violating his right to run a business.

Ronnie Carter said he will ask the City Council on Tuesday to change an ordinance that requires persons to have a permit to lawfully haul garbage as a business and dump at the city landfill.

Carter maintains that he is not a city resident and should not be subject to the ordinance. Further, he says, he is hauling garbage that county residents would dump at the landfill anyway.

"If I have to pay for a permit and I have to pay to dump, the city's going to make more than I am and I have to do the work," Carter says. "As soon as the city finds out I get paid to take the trash, they want money. I don't think that's right."

"If you have to have a permit to have a business in this city, it's against the (U.S.) Constitution," Carter says he can't afford to purchase a permit because most of his customers can't pay him much money.

Earnhardt wins Winston 200 race

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — In stock-car racing circles, it's a well accepted fact that no Winston Cup driver will ever dominate the sport like Richard Petty did en route to winning 200 races. Dale Earnhardt, a flag-to-flag winner of The Winston, Sunday's all-star event at the Charlotte Motor Speedway, comes about as close as anyone these days. "People say you can't dominate," he said after a $325,000 payday. "But if you work hard, you can dominate your part of it."

Earnhardt, a three-time Winston Cup champion, is on a tear. He entered The Winston with three victories this season, the last on May 6 in the Winston 500 at Talladega, Ala. His luck hasn't been all that good at Charlotte Motor Speedway. That changed Sunday, as he led throughout against 19 other recent Winston Cup race winners in the 70-lap, 105-mile race. "This is the kind of race I wanted to win," he said. "There was no question who was best out there today." "We won it without any controversy. There's no mad race fans out there because their guy got knocked out."

Pistons out-defense Bulls, 86-77

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Joe Dumars is driven by one of the great motivators — fear — when he plays against Michael Jordan. He was driven both offensively and defensively Sunday. As a result, the Detroit Pistons are up 1-0 on the Chicago Bulls in the Eastern Conference finals. Dumars scored 18 of his 27 points as Detroit took charge in the third quarter in Detroit's 86-77 win. At the other end, Dumars held Jordan, who was playing with a painful hip injury, to eight second-half points. "The feel of embarrassment keeps you going," Dumars said. "You know Micheal can get 60 at any time. That's what keeps you sharp defensively."

Dumars had a right to feel nervous. The Pistons have lost only three playoff games in the last two years — two of them to Chicago. In the conference finals last year, Jordan scored 32 points in the first game and 46 in the third, Chicago went up 2-1 in that series. Detroit finally got untracked, won the next three and went on to sweep Los Angeles for the NBA championship. "Dumars had a good second half and Micheal had a good first half," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said. "You have to guard against Detroit's ability to play a big quarter. His 18-point quarter contributed to our failing." Jordan, who came into this series averaging 40.3 points in nine previous playoff games, took a hard fall while driving across the key with 1:36 remaining in the first quarter. But he scored 12 points in the second quarter and had 26 at halftime to help the Bulls take a 43-39 lead. "I think I had my legs cut out from under me, and if so I don't know who did it," Jordan said. "I couldn't have been a foul because they didn't call it."

Jordan said the hip was fine as long as he kept playing, but it tightened up during the halftime break. That's when Dumars came to life, scoring 14 of the Pistons' first 15 points in the third quarter. "Joe used his quickness to get by me and the rest of the defense," Jordan said. "He got hot and we should have been able to collapse on him. He's a very talented player and it comes as no surprise that he was their key man today."

Dumars was voted the most valuable player when the Pistons swept the Los Angeles Lakers for their first NBA championship last year, but he still surprises his teammates.

The last team to win consecutive NBA titles was Los Angeles in 1987 and 1988.

Seles ends Graf's win streak

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Monica Seles' two-fisted attack took care of one of Steffi Graf's streak and threatened another. The 16-year-old Yugoslav overpowered Graf 6-4, 6-3 Sunday to capture the German Open tennis tournament in West Berlin, snapping the West German's 66-match winning streak, the second longest in the history of open tennis. The victory also makes Seles a strong threat to halt Graf's Grand Slam title-winning streak at the upcoming French Open. Graf has won the last three Grand Slam tournaments — her last loss coming in Paris a year ago. Since then, when she was stunned by Spain's Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, Graf had dominated women's tennis. Until Sunday, that is, and Seles, who gave Graf a taste of her own medicine, winning the title match in a surprising 63 minutes. Graf had been in the finals in Berlin six times and had won the German Open four consecutive years.

WEST BERLIN — Sixteen-years-old Moncia Seles lifts the cup after she won the final match of the International German Tennis Championship in Berlin Sunday against Steffi Graf from West Germany.

After being down 0-2 in the first set, Seles swept through four straight games, breaking Graf's serve twice to lead 4-2. Following another long forehand on the first point of the seventh game, a frustrated Graf slammed a ball into the bottom of the net. But four points later she appeared to settle down, having broken Seles' streak and her serve. But the tough Seles fought back. After both players held serve, Seles moved to 0-40 on Graf's serve to set playing well," she said.

And playing well she is. Seles has now wiped out two of the giants in women's tennis in succession. She just came off an overpowering 6-1, 6-1 win over Martina Navratilova in Rome before arriving in Berlin, and now has a 24 match streak going. On Sunday, Graf began by winning the first two games but started making mistakes after that and Seles got her first victory over the West German in their three meetings. Graf last beat her at Brighton, England, seven months ago. "Asked what the difference was in her game Sunday and in Brighton, Seles said, "I'm much more experienced now and I wasn't afraid of her (Graf) as much as before." Although Graf started well, she couldn't match the pressure put on by the lanky, blonde Yugoslav. Graf's usually dangerous forehand deserted her and Seles used slashing two-handed shots to move the West German around the court. After being down 0-2 in the first set, Seles swept through four straight games, breaking Graf's serve twice to lead 4-2. Muster wins Italian Open ROME (AP) — As the new Italian Open men's champion will attest, no one has emerged as the dominant player heading into the French Open next week. "There are many favorites," said Austria's Thomas Muster after beating Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union 6-1, 6-3, 6-1 Sunday. "Any one of the clay court specialists could win it. It's more wide open than it has been in a long time." The Italian Open semifinalists — Muster, Chesnokov, Emilio Sanchez of Spain and Andres Gomez of Ecuador — have the four best records on clay this year. But none has been consistently better than the others. The contenders would have to include Muster, a relentless, powerful left-hander who outplayed Chesnokov in all departments on the slow red clay of the Foro Italico. But a look at Muster's record illustrates the parity that has marked the men's clay court season this spring. Just three weeks ago, he lost to Chesnokov in straight sets in the final of the Monte Carlo Open. The next week, he lost in the finals at Munich, West Germany, to Karel Novacek. There are other examples. Juan Aguilera, who stunned Boris Becker in the final at Hamburg, West Germany, came to Rome and lost in the first round to Alexander Volkov. The rest of the world's top four players will be in Paris.

Nets win ping-pong lottery

NEW YORK (AP) — It's the New Jersey Nets' serve now that they're the winners of the NBA's first ping-pong lottery. The Nets, who lost 65 of 82 games this season, can keep the first pick in the draft on June 27 or trade him for a package of veterans — or maybe for a veteran and a lower first-round selection. Regardless of what happens, Nets vice president Willis Reed said, there's a lot of work and decision-making ahead. "The work really starts now, from now until the 27th of June," Reed said. "We have to do a lot of evaluation of our team. We will interview 10 or 11 guys, not that we would consider taking all of them No. 1, but to see if we can trade for a lower pick."

Derrick Coleman, a 6-foot-10 power forward from Syracuse, is considered the top player available in the 1990 draft, but Reed believes power forward Roy Hinson is his best veteran player. On Sunday, however, Reed indicated he wouldn't rush to trade the No. 1. "It would take a lot of talking and some unusual things to happen for us to trade this pick," Reed said. "Right now, we're looking to use this pick to help us." In previous NBA lotteries, each of the teams involved had an equal chance to draw a high pick. But that was changed this year to give the weakest teams the best chance to improve themselves in the draft. The Nets, because they had the worst record, had the most ping-pong balls in the drawing — 11 of the 66 that determined the top 11 picks in the draft. Conversely, Atlanta and Seattle, who both finished 41-41, had a pre-lottery drawing to determine which team would get only one ball and which would get two. The SuperSonics won that drawing for the extra ball, and that was enough to win the second pick, although they had only two of the 65 remaining balls after New Jersey got the first spot. "We felt we had a chance for a top three pick," General Manager Bernie Bickerstaff said. "That's why people play the lottery, to beat the odds. With the season we had, our luck had to change." "We were fortunate twice, first by getting the two balls against Atlanta and then getting the No. 2 pick." Bickerstaff also was non-committal about who the Sonics

Three-point shot creator dies at 69

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Basketball rules authority Ed Steitz, who brought the 3-point shot to the international and college game, died today. He was 69.

Steitz, director of athletics emeritus at Springfield College, died at his home in East Longmeadow, college spokesman Ken Cerino said. Sunday, he was grand marshal at the college's commencement exercises.

The cause of death was not immediately known. Steitz was hospitalized earlier in the year for two weeks after suffering a severe angina attack.

He had taught at Springfield since 1948 and was director of athletics for 33 years, retiring last July.

Since 1968, he was national editor of the NCAA Basketball Rules Committee. He also was the U.S. representative to the international rules committee.

In 1983, he was elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame as a contributor.

Recognized as one of the world's foremost basketball administrators, Steitz was a co-founder of the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States of America, now called USA Basketball, the governing body for international amateur basketball in this country. He was its president for 10 years.

The United States men's and women's basketball teams won Olympic gold medals in 1984 during his tenure as president. He attended the last eight Olympic Games in an official capacity.

A past member of the U.S. Olympic Committee's executive committee, Steitz also was a longtime member of the NCAA executive committee and a past president of the Eastern College Athletic Conference.

"Springfield College has had a great loss," Assistant Director of Athletics Frank Wolcott said. "I know I speak for the college when I say that it's losing a father."

NBA's oldest player retires

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Caldwell Jones, the oldest player in the NBA this season, announced his retirement Sunday.

The 39-year-old San Antonio center played 12 minutes, scored four points and had one rebound in the Spurs' final game on Saturday.

During his 17-year professional career, Jones played for six teams in more than 1,000 regular season games and 120 playoff games. From 1985 until last season he played for the Trail Blazers.

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Tony Lopez, spurred on by a partisan crowd, regained the International Boxing Federation junior light-eight title Sunday with the closest of split decisions over Juan "John John" Molina.

Lopez, trailing on two of the three judges' cards after 10 rounds, dropped Molina midway of the 11th round and went on to win the 12th round to eke out the victory.

Last year, Mike Scott starred and Andre Dawson slumped. This year, they're going in different directions.

It's still too early to tell which way Shawn Boskie will go. But so far, so great.

Boskie pitched a five-hitter in his major-league debut Sunday and contributed a double and a single as the Chicago Cubs beat the Houston Astros 5-1.

Dawson, leading the majors with 41 RBIs and the National League with 13 home runs, homered, got three hits and drove in three runs as the Cubs roughed up Scott.

Cardinals 6, Reds 2

Joe Magrane pitched seven strong innings as St. Louis salvaged a split in the four-game series at Cincinnati.

Magrane (2-6) gave up five hits and one earned run in winning his second consecutive decision. Danny Jackson (0-1) lost in his first start since being hit in the arm by a line drive April 29.

The Cardinals ended a streak of 20 scoreless innings on Terry Pendleton's RBI single in the second. Tom Pagnozzi's RBI single put St. Louis ahead 3-2 in the seventh.

St. Louis had lost six of its first seven games against the Reds, scoring a total of just nine runs.

Expos 6, Giants 5

In San Francisco, pinch-hitter Wallace Johnson's two-run homer in the 11th inning helped Montreal beat the Giants.

Johnson's third career pinch-homer put the Expos ahead 5-3 against Atlee Hammaker (3-3). They added another run on singles by Marquis Grissom and Tim Raines and an error by left fielder Greg Litton.

Robby Thompson hit a two-run homer in the Giants' 11th off Steve Frey. Tim Burke got his 10th save, preserving the victory for Bill Sampen (2-0).

Dodgers 6, Phillies 3

In Los Angeles, Alfredo Griffin hit a two-run single with the bases loaded as the Dodgers defeated Philadelphia.

Griffin's hit put Los Angeles ahead 3-1 in the fourth inning. He is 9-for-18 in the bases loaded since joining the Dodgers and 16-for-33 lifetime.

Ramon Martinez (4-2) allowed three runs on six hits in seven innings and struck out eight. Mike Hartley got his first major league save. Pat Combs (2-4) took the loss.

Padres 3, Mets 1

In San Diego, Roberto Alomar's two-out, two-run single broke a 1-all tie in the seventh inning and sent New York to its fifth loss in six games.

The Padres loaded the bases against reliever Ron Darling (1-4) on three walks, the last one an intentional pass to Tony Gwynn with runners on second and third. Alomar followed with a hard grounder that first baseman Mike Marshall could not stop.

Greg Harris (3-0) went one inning for the victory. Craig Lefferts relieved in the eighth with the bases loaded and struck out pinch-hitter Mark Carreon and Mackey Sasser to end the inning and get his fifth save.

Braves 13, Pirates 11

Ron Gant and Dale Murphy each hit two homers and Atlanta set season highs in runs and hits to outlast Pittsburgh.

Both teams scored four times in the first inning, with Atlanta tying the game on Gant's leadoff homer and Murphy's three-run shot off Bob Kipper (0-1), who started because John Smiley closed a card door on his pitching hand on Saturday. Smiley will miss at least a month.

Jim Presley's two-run single keyed a six-run second inning and Gant and Murphy later had solo homers as Atlanta finished with 16 hits.

Pete Smith (3-3) survived a shaky start and went six innings for the win. Joe Boever struck out John Cangelosi for his fifth save after Pittsburgh scored four runs in the ninth off Charley Kerfeld.

SAN DIEGO — New York Mets Howard Johnson is tagged out by San Diego Padres catcher Benito Santiago in first inning action here Sunday afternoon.

Parker makes life miserable for former team

By The Associated Press

With "friends" like Dave Parker, the Oakland Athletics don't need any enemies.

inning in Sunday's 5-2 triumph with a two-run single and some aggressive baserunning.

"We're not here to make friends, we're not going out to play for fun — we're playing to win," Parker said. "We're here to win the Eastern Division and possibly go to the World Series."

"I've always had the theory as a player that I respect everyone but fear no one. That's the attitude of this club."

Orioles 4, Rangers 0

Pete Harnisch and Gregg Olson combined on a three-hitter and Baltimore handed Texas its eighth loss in 10 games. Harnisch (4-1) yielded two hits through seven innings before Olson came on for his ninth save.

Loser Kevin Brown (5-3) blanked the Orioles until the seventh when they scored on Craig Worthington's hustling double, an infield out and Brown's wild pitch. Mike Jeffcoat gave up a three-run homer to Mickey Tettleton in the eighth.

Tigers 3, White Sox 2

Lloyd Moseby's tie-breaking single with two out in the 10th inning gave Detroit its sixth straight victory. Tony Phillips was hit by a pitch from loser Wayne Edwards (0-2) to open the 10th. After Alan Trammell and Dave Bergman grounded into force plays, Cecil Fielder, who earlier hit his major league-leading 16th homer, singled Bergman to second and Moseby followed with his single.

Twins 5, Red Sox 4

Kent Hrbek drove in three runs with a homer and single as Minnesota notched its 13th victory in 17 games this month. Roy Smith (2-4) settled down after a rocky start and got the victory with help from Terry Leach and Rick Aguilera, who went the final 1-1-3 innings for his 11th save.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 1

Toronto didn't have a baserunner until the sixth inning, but snapped a five-game losing streak when George Bell's tie-breaking single keyed a three-run seventh against Mark Langston (3-4).

Mariners 8, Indians 7

Edgar Martinez, who homered, tripled and singled earlier, hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the top of the 10th inning and Ken Griffey Jr. also hit two home runs for Seattle. Griffey singled with two out off Jesse Orosco (2-2), the fifth Cleveland pitcher. Martinez then hit his fifth home run.

Royals 4, Yankees 3

Kansas City outh New York 17-2 but needed Kevin Seitzer's run-scoring single with two out in the 10th inning. The Yankees, held to one single and an unearned run for eight innings, tied the score on Don Mattingly's two-run homer with one out in the ninth.

AL

The defending world champion A's were struggling before they hit Milwaukee for a three-game weekend series, and Parker, who served as designated hitter and helped Oakland reach the World Series in 1988 and 1989, helped extend their slump.

He had a pair of RBI doubles in the Brewers' 5-0 victory Friday night and keyed a five-run fourth prove the team. There's a lot of research ahead for us. We have to wonder how valuable this pick is for someone else."

Sonics president Bob Whitsitt said it was exciting when Commissioner David Stern opened an envelope for the 10th draft spot and it had Golden State's logo inside. That was where Seattle would have picked if it hadn't made the top three.

"As soon as No. 10 wasn't us, we were cruising," Whitsitt said. "I knew we were in the top three."

The remaining lottery picks have Miami third and Orlando fourth, followed by Charlotte, Minnesota, Sacramento, the Los Angeles Clippers, Dallas, Golden State and Atlanta.

The lottery drawing determined the top three picks and the remaining draft spots were in reverse order of record.

Dallas was the only playoff team in the lottery, having taken Washington's first-round spot by virtue of a trade with the Bullets for Jay Vincent in 1986.

The Nets, who have never had the No. 1 pick, were plagued by injuries to Hinson, rookie point guard Mookie Blaylock and center Sam Bowie, and mediocre play from recent high draft picks Dennis Hopson and Chris Morris.

The Sonics, who weren't eliminated from playoff contention until the final day of the season, spent much of the season without their top two players, Dale Ellis and Xavier McDaniel, because of injuries.

Miami, with 10 balls in the lottery because of its 18-64 record, had one of them drawn for the No. 3 spot. Once New Jersey got the first pick, the Heat were assured of no worse than fourth.

While the lottery was serious business for the participating teams, it also produced a funny moment. The audience laughed when Stern mistakenly said "Minnesota North Stars" while opening an envelope containing the Minnesota Timberwolves' logo.

"I was trying to keep straight in my head who was still available to finish in the top three," Stern explained. "I also had just sent a congratulatory note to the new North Stars owner, Howard Baldwin, and I guess I got confused."

Bob Stein, president of the Timberwolves, wasn't offended by the gaffe.

"We have no plans at this time to change our name," he joked.

Streak

She wrapped up the opening set in just 30 minutes.

Seles held to begin the second set, then broke Graf to grab a 2-0 lead. Graf broke back in the third game, but it wasn't enough. She lost her serve two more times and finished with yet another long forehand error.

"I was so far away from playing my best tennis. It was difficult to get into it," Graf said. "If I play like that, I can't expect to win. Monica didn't make many mistakes."

Asked if she had forgotten what it was like to lose after so many wins, Graf said:

"You never forget what it's like to lose."

"At the moment it feels like a setback, but I have to think I didn't lose for almost a year. That can't be too bad."

Seles earned $100,000 with the victory.

Asked what she was going to do with the money, Seles said:

"Maybe after the French Open I'll buy a car. I'm the only one of the top players who doesn't have a car"

"My taste is a little exotic. I'd like a Lamborghini, but I'll settle for a red BMW. I still have to get my driver's license."

Ex-Aggie crumbles world shot record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Randy Barnes' new house in West Virginia will feature a backyard with a shot put ring.

The practice ring better be large, with at least 80 feet of wide-open space.

Barnes, reestablishing U.S. superiority in an event Americans had dominated until the 1970s, got off a world record shot put of 75 feet, 10 1/4 inches Sunday in the Jack

In The Box Invitational at UCLA.

The former Texas A&M athlete also picked up some building money for his house and personal shot put ring back in his hometown of Charleston.

His international mark, bettering the 75-8 set by East Germany's Ulf Timmermann in 1989, earned him a $50,000 bonus put up by the meet promoter for a world record in the shot.

And the effort by the 23-year-old Barnes, a 6-foot-5, 290-pounder who won the silver medal (73-0 1/2) behind Timmermann (73-8 1/4) at the Seoul Olympics, seemed to portend even longer throws.

"I did 79-2 1/2 in practice a week ago," Barnes said. "Now that I have this record, 80 feet seems a whole lot more believable to me."

"I know I've got more left in me."

His series, the best ever by a shot putter, showed that his world record was no fluke. After throwing 71-10, he set the world mark with his second attempt. He then threw 73-11 3/4, 73-7 1/2, 73-3 1/2 and 74-8 1/4.

Barnes became the first American officially to set a world record in the event since 1976. U.S. shot putters virtually owned the event prior to the '70s, but Europeans have dominated in recent years.

Barnes, who had a previous best of 74-4 1/4 in competition, said he thought going into Sunday's meet that he was ready for a world-record performance, but that he also was a little worried.

The weather was ideal, with temperatures in the high 70s on a bright, sunny afternoon at Drake Stadium for Barnes' world effort.

And, of course, there was the matter of the $50,000.

"I thought everything was too perfect here," Barnes said, grinning. "I figured it (the world record) just won't happen."

Barnes said earlier that, now that the political climate has changed in Germany, he hopes to compete more head-to-head against Timmermann.

Burrell steals show at SWC track meet

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Houston sprinter Leroy Burrell was so fast at the Southwest Conference track meet his own relay mate couldn't catch him.

Burrell ran the fastest time ever under any conditions with a wind-aided 19.61 time in the 200 meters and he also won a wind-aided 100 meters in 9.94, highlighting the two-day event that ended Saturday.

"I couldn't have asked for a better performance. Well, yes, I could have won the long jump too," said Burrell, who had hoped to win four events at the meet.

Burrell finished fourth in the long jump and the Cougars didn't finish the 400-meter relay because Rayford Ross, who ran the third leg, couldn't catch up to Burrell, who was running anchor.

"I'm running a lot faster than I did last year and Rayford just couldn't catch up to me," Burrell said. "It's something we'll have to work on."

While Burrell was attracting most of the attention, the Arkansas men scored heavily in the field events and won their third straight title by a 162-133 margin over runner-up Texas.

The Houston women's team rallied in the final event of the evening to edge Rice for the women's title, ending the Texas Lady Longhorns' string of five straight victories.

"We didn't come in thinking we could win the meet, we were too shallow," Texas women's coach

Terry Crawford said. "We wanted the conference meet to help us in preparation for the NCAAs."

Burrell beat the world record of 19.72 by Italy's Pietro Mennea in 1979 but the four meters per second wind was well over the 2.0 mps allowable for world records.

Burrell caught Texas A&M's Andre Cason with about 40 meters left in the 100 meters and hit the tape at 9.94 with a 2.8 meters per second wind.

Cason was second at 10.08 and Texas Christian's Jon Drummond was third at 10.17.

"I just felt so much power blowing me down the straight-away," Burrell said. "I put so much into the sprints that I ran out of energy in the long jump."

The women's title race came down to the final event, the long jump, with Houston and Rice tied for the title.

Cynthia Jackson gave the title to the Cougars when, on her final jump, she moved up from seventh to sixth in the long jump, give Houston enough points to win the title.

Houston won with 138 points and Rice had 135, followed by Arkansas, 121. Texas 114, Baylor 85, Texas A&M 65, Southern Methodist, 38, Texas Christian, 29 and Texas Tech 15.

Arkansas' men moved into the team lead when they earned 24 points in the 1,500 meters.

Razorbacks Johan Bockes and Gilbert Contraras finished 1-2 in the event.

Fastest time ever

COLLEGE STATION — University of Houston sprinter Leroy Burrell rejoices at the finish line after running the 200 meters in wind-aided 19.61, the fastest time ever recorded. Burrell also won the 100 meters in wind-aided 9.94.

Husband's advice pays off

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — With Beth Daniel and Hollis Stacy charging in the final round of the Pat Bradley International, Cindy Rarick got one bit of advice from her caddy-husband — don't worry, make birdies.

"I said 'Just be patient,'" Rick Rarick said after his wife finished with 25 points and held on to win the $400,000 tournament by keeping Daniel and Stacy at bay. "The main thing I tried to do was to tell her to just play her own game and just keep hanging in there trying to hit it close and see what happens."

Daniel finished second with 24 points and Stacy was third at 23 in the tournament played under a modified Stableford scoring system.

Rarick was anxious when she reached the 13th hole. She had reached 23 points, but Stacy was at 22 and Daniel 21 after having gone on birdie sprees on the front nine. Her third birdie came at that point when she got within 12 feet of the pin and holed the putt.

At 14, she hit a 3-wood to five feet after her tee shot landed in a hazard. That birdie would turn out to be the difference because Rarick struggled home with bogeys on two of the last four holes.

"I was just happy to have it over with," she said.

"It's weird, but I knew after Friday's round, with seven points, I knew that I could still win the tournament because I've been known to make a lot of birdies."

Stacy and Daniel made a lot of them, too.

Trailing by six points to open the final round at Willow Creek Golf Course, Stacy birdied her last five holes to get in contention. She bogeyed the 10th, but birdied 13.

Gentle Ben wins Colonial

FORT WORTH (AP) — Ben Crenshaw says he felt like an "old dog with an old bone" on the home stretch of the Colonial National Invitation golf tournament.

He had the trophy in his teeth and he wasn't about to let it go.

PGA

He didn't.

With Curtis Strange, Nick Price and Corey Pavin nipping at his heels on Sunday, "Gentle Ben" shot a near flawless 4-under-par 66 on the rain-soaked, windswept Colonial Country Club course and won his first title in two years.

His 72-hole total of 272 was eight under par and three strokes better than Pavin and Price, who closed with 68s, and John Mahaffey, who fired a 66.

Strange, playing well but putting atrociously, matched par 70 and tied with Mike Hulbert at four under. Hulbert shot a splendid 63, which was overshadowed a bit by Gene Sauers' record-tying 62.

But the day belonged to Crenshaw, a native Texan, a University of Texas ex, an honorary Colonial member and no less popular in Texas than Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and maybe even Tom Landry and Roger Staubach.

"It's been so long, I don't know how to act," he grinned. "I'm just elated. To win on this course for a second time makes me very, very happy. I can't tell you how happy I am."

The victory was his 15th since joining the tour in 1973 and earned him $180,000 and a trophy to match the one he got in 1977 when he scrambled to a wild one-shot triumph.

"The first time I won here I stole it from poor old John Schroeder," he confessed with a smile. "But this time I played very well."

Very well, indeed.

Price, Pavin and Strange held or shared the lead in the final round but Crenshaw torpedoed the field with birdies at the seventh, eighth and ninth holes for a dazzling 5-under-par 30.

With nine holes to play, he led Price and Pavin by four shots and Strange by six.

The 44th Colonial was history. Price did pull within three strokes with a birdie at the 11th but got no closer.

No sweep for Oilers

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The Edmonton Oilers claim they never thought they would sweep the Boston Bruins in the Stanley Cup finals.

They were right.

The Bruins, who lost the first two games at home, won 2-1 in Edmonton Sunday night in the third game of the best-of-7 series.

Two years ago, the Oilers won the title with a four-game sweep of the Bruins. But Sunday's win means that after the fourth game in Edmonton Tuesday night, the teams will return for a fifth game in Boston Thursday night.

"The only people talking about a sweep are the fans," Oilers goalie Bill Ranford said. "We're underdogs and we know it."

"We're still in a great position," defenseman Charlie Huddy said. "If we put pressure on ourselves, then maybe we're in trouble."

Boston had the NHL's best overall and road records. But Edmonton has won four of the last six titles and was peaking for the finals. Another championship was just two games away.

Then John Byce gave Boston its first lead of the series 10 seconds into Sunday night's game.

"We were too excited coming into this game," said Esa Tikkanen, who had Edmonton's goal. "We have to be more careful next game. We were ready but we were too pumped."

"We got, maybe, over-anxious," Huddy said. "We had a lot of good chances. We were gone for quite a while and we do have a bit of trouble starting back from a road trip."

The Oilers, who won the Campbell Conference title with an 8-4 win in Chicago, had played three consecutive road games since their last home game May 10.

"I don't think complacency is the word," Edmonton coach John Muckler said. "We had to finish off the Campbell Conference championship in Chicago and then go into Boston for two. We had two tough games in Boston, came back here and really lacked concentration."

The Oilers did bear down in the third period when they attacked, and Boston played cautiously to protect the lead.

"We had probably our worst period of hockey in the first period and we know that," Ranford said.

Rutherford, youngest Andreotti bumped from Indy lineup

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — If the fastest field in Indianapolis 500 history weren't quite so fast, three-time winner Johnny Rutherford might be in his 25th race next Sunday.

And, if qualifications for the 74th Indy 500 had lasted two minutes longer on Sunday, the Andreotti family might have put a record four members in the starting lineup.

Instead, Rutherford, bumped from the lineup for the second year in a row, was 2 mph too slow in his final chance to regain a starting position. And Jeff Andreotti, an Indy rookie who was also bumped, will again watch father Mario, brother Michael and cousin John race, rather than compete with them on the 2 1/2-mile oval.

"There were a lot of things to be done, and we just didn't have enough time to get 'em all finished," said Rutherford, who completed a deal to get another car on only hours before qualifying closed on Sunday.

The 33-car field, headed by record-setting pole winner Emerson Fittipaldi at 225.301 mph, averaged 217.437, breaking the record of 216.588 set last year. When Rutherford made his final attempt, he needed only to average

But Rutherford called off his final attempt after turning laps of 208.889 and 209.074. After Rutherford pulled off the track, Rocky Moran had just enough time to qualify and bumped Walther with a four-lap average of 211.076.

"Last year was the first time (being bumped), so that one was a little more devastating than this one," Rutherford said. "This one we kind of could see coming with all the problems we've had all month. It's never easy to take. But of the two, I guess last year might have been more (disappointing)."

Moran was the third driver to get in on Sunday by bumping an earlier qualifier. John Paul Jr., who since his only Indy start in 1985 served almost 2 1/2 years in prison in connection with a drug smuggling operation headed by his father, bumped rookie Buddy Lazier 75 minutes before qualifications ended.

Then Walther, trying for his first start at Indianapolis since 1979, bumped Andreotti, youngest son of 1969 winner Mario Andreotti.

Rutherford said if he had any advice for 26-year-old Jeff Andreotti, it would be, "Hang in there. It's not an easy game.

"He's young, he's got a lot of time to think this over, and he probably will benefit from it. It's never easy to come out here and put your best shot out and it's not good enough," Rutherford said.

Andreotti, virtually certain his Saturday qualifying speed of 210.268 wouldn't stand up, went out in a new car and spun. Luckily, he did not hit any walls and was able to drive onto pit road.

Later, the youngster got the car up over 210 in practice and was next in line, with the engine revving, when Moran went by on his third qualifying lap and the gun sounded, ending qualifications.

"It's the worst feeling in the world," Andreotti said. "It's one thing if I wasn't up to speed and didn't make the show. But, it's a fact we were up to speed. That's what hurts the most."

Almost as disappointed, but for other reasons, was Al Unser Jr., who safely qualified on Saturday but was far short of his expectation of challenging Fittipaldi for the pole.

His Chevy-powered Lola lost 6 mph between practice Saturday morning and his qualification run that afternoon.

Bloomington burro most beautiful

VICTORIA (AP) — For the third time in the 7-year history of the contest, Petunia the burro from Bloomington has been named most beautiful burro.

Each year, a contest is held in this South Texas city to select the most beautiful donkey or burro in the state. Petunia had won in 1986, last year, then again on Sunday.

Burros have long been an important commodity in South Texas, having been brought to the area by Spanish settlers in the early 1700s. Even today, many large ranches uses burros to help domesticate horses by tying the two animals together.

Officials seek help in runover death

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
Staff Writer

STANTON — Area law enforcement officials are not ruling out foul play in the early-morning death of a Midland woman in Glasscock County today, and are seeking public input to resolve the case.

Glasscock County justice of the peace Veneda Moore pronounced Virginia Espinosa Montoya, 25, dead at the scene at about 5 a.m. today, according to Department of Public Safety trooper Victor Taylor.

Her body was taken to Gilbreath

"Right now we have a felony offense for not stopping to render aid. She was struck by an unknown vehicle. We have no make or model," — DPS Trooper Victor Taylor.

Funeral Home in Stanton, and the next-of-kin has been notified, Taylor said, adding that Moore has ordered an autopsy in the incident. It is expected to be performed sometime today, a Glasscock County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman said.

According to the DPS report, the deceased, her husband and brother apparently were riding around after attending a dance when an argument began about 24 miles northwest of Garden City on Highway 137.

The argument apparently erupted between the brother and Montoya's husband. When the men began fighting, Ms. Montoya apparently got out of the vehicle and began walking, the report added.

The report stated that her husband attempted to locate her, but was not successful and both men went home. The victim was struck from behind by an unknown vehicle sometime during this period, Taylor said. Foul play has not been ruled out in the accident, he added.

"Right now we have a felony offense for not stopping to render aid. She was struck by an unknown vehicle. We have no make or model," said Taylor.

"If anyone knows any information related to the death on Highway 137, especially between the hours of 4 and 6:45 a.m., please contact the Texas Department of Public Safety or the Martin County Sheriff's office at 915-756-3448 or 915-756-3336," a DPS spokesman said.

Reform bill has cloudy future

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Less than two weeks before they must enact a school finance reform plan or face court intervention, lawmakers return to the Capitol Monday to see whether a compromise is possible with Gov. Bill Clements on the issue.

Legislative leaders on Friday handed Clements a "take-it-or-leave-it" proposal that would spend an additional $555 million on education next school year — more than he has said he wants.

In return, the measure would give Clements such concessions as power to appoint the state education commissioner, from names submitted by the State Board of Education and with Senate confirmation; and voter approval of certain local property tax increases.

"It's important to know that funding to pay for education reform next year is not the problem," Clements said.

However, he said, there is a sticking point: lawmakers' proposal for a quarter-cent sales tax increase to help pay for their plan.

Clements said he would reject the proposed compromise unless the sales tax provision was removed. Negotiations on that issue were continuing, according to those involved in the talks.

The Democratic-controlled Legislature and Clements are in their third special session to try to overhaul the school finance system. The last session ended without a plan after Clements vetoed a half-cent sales tax increase needed to pay for lawmakers' $555 million reform bill.

Iliescu's group winning election

By DAN PETREANU

BUCHAREST, Romania — Interim President Ion Iliescu's National Salvation Front, a group dominated by former Communists, appeared headed for a landslide victory in Romania's first free elections in more than half a century.

The first official returns showed Iliescu with a commanding lead in the presidential race, capturing 78 percent of 6,000 ballots counted in the western city of Timisoara.

The National Liberal Party's candidate, Radu Campeanu, was second with 15 percent. The National Peasant Party's Ion Ratiu was third with seven percent.

The counting began today, and final results were expected on Friday.

A West German exit poll of 16,000 voters — announced on nationwide TV while voters were still casting ballots early today — showed Iliescu winning 83 percent of the votes nationwide. Campeanu was second with 11 percent, and Ratiu trailed with six percent.

The two opposition candidates alleged numerous instances of fraud in Sunday's balloting. Some foreign observers, however, said

Smaller U.S. frog out-jumps African rivals at Jubilee

By JOHN HOWARD
Associated Press Writer

ANGELS CAMP, Calif. — Three giant African frogs touted as potential record-breakers were big flops at the Jumping Frog Jubilee, beat out by a puny domestic one-pounder named Help Mr. Wizard.

"I wasn't afraid of the African frogs," said Gregg Jaschek, who took home the $500 first prize Sunday. "I saw them on TV. They weren't so hot."

Some veterans of the annual Calaveras County competition had complained the giants from Cameroon had an unfair advantage, but organizers voted in March to let Seattle animal collector Andy Koffman bring on his burly outsiders.

Three of Koffman's Goliaths made it to the finals, but he couldn't get a decent leap out of the three-pounders. They were too big to fit on the 9-inch starting pad and were disqualified, or slipped and slid their way to lackluster hops.

A dripping Help Mr. Wizard soared 19 feet, 3 inches in three jumps to best 72 other finalists.

"I'll be back," declared Koffman, who had claimed his frogs could leap 30 feet in a single bound.

The 62nd annual jubilee 150 miles east of San Francisco drew a capacity crowd of 8,000, thanks to the controversy over Koffman's frogs. The event was inspired by Mark Twain's short story "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," about a frog that couldn't jump because its belly had been filled with lead shot.

Jaschek, an auto parts clerk from Concord, said he captured Help Mr. Wizard in the San Joaquin Valley. Its win was just luck, he said.

"I've been trying for 19 years and if I knew the secret of winning I would have won long before this," he said, kissing his frog as friends poured champagne on him.

Second place went to an 18-foot, 4-inch leap in three jumps by a frog named Cho Cho. Third place was won by Jumpin' Jack.

Koffman brought 27 Goliaths to the frog jump. The big frogs can weigh up to 15 pounds and range up to three feet in length. His three finalists — Johnny Carson, Jay Leno and Sue — weighed in at about three pounds each.

The average domestic frog weighs about a pound and is about eight inches long.

Koffman was done in by a rule that frogs must have all four feet on the pad. The big frogs also leaped at an angle and made little stutter hops after landing. Under the rules, the distance jumped is the total of three successive hops.

"They just kind of slip out of my hands and it slows them down," Koffman said. "I'm really disappointed."

reform bill to Clements this session. He earlier promised to veto the bill, but has delayed such action while his staff negotiates with legislative leaders.

If a compromise finally is reached, lawmakers could recall the measure.

If Clements vetoes the bill, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said they don't know whether they could muster the two-thirds vote needed in the Legislature to override him.

Legislative leaders' compromise proposal would be financed through a package including budget cuts, a quarter-cent increase in the state sales tax, currently 6 cents on the dollar, a 10-cent increase in the 26-cent-a-pack cigarette tax, a $110 annual fee on professionals including lawyers, and other fee increases.

Besides upping education spending by $555 million next school year, the funding package would raise about $85 million to make up shortfalls in human service programs.

Lewis said he didn't know whether the compromise proposal would be supported by a majority of the Legislature.

Many minority lawmakers have said they fear legislative leaders were giving too much in the compromise effort. For example, lawmakers already trimmed the five-year cost of the bill from a maximum $8 billion to $6 billion.

If lawmakers and Clements don't enact a bill by June 1 to meet a state Supreme Court order for reform, court master William Kilgarlin will propose a plan that could be imposed on Texas schools.

In addition, State District Judge Scott McCown would approve distribution of state education money after that date.

Kilgarlin has said he doesn't have the authority to raise state revenue for education, so his plan could shift state aid from property-rich to property-poor school districts. The $13.5 billion-a-year system relies on local property taxes, state aid and some federal money.

that although there were some irregularities, they were not significant enough to alter the outcome.

The Central Electoral Bureau estimated that at least 85 percent of Romania's 16.8 million eligible voters turned out to choose a president and 506 representatives to the two-chamber parliament.

The National Salvation Front, which has run Romania since the bloody December revolution that ousted dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, won a projected 66 percent of the vote for seats in parliament, said the West German poll. The poll was conducted by the West German polling group INFAS at the invitation of the Romanian government.

In second place was the National Liberal Party with about 10 percent of the votes, the poll said. The party representing the country's 2-million Hungarian minority had 6

ed solely through the donations of members, Wolonsky said, making legal action difficult.

Local members pointed out one victory — committees of both the House of Representatives and the Senate are considering bills on the issue.

A Senate sub-committee is negotiating S-563, a bill which would let disabled retirees waive a percentage of retirement pay, determined by official disability percentage, instead of using a dollar-for-dollar exchange, said an aide to Sen. Phil Gramm.

HR-303 is under consideration by the Veteran's Affairs Committee in the House of Representatives, said a legislative aide to Rep. Charles Stenholm. It would repeal existing codes and allow both disability and retirement benefits to be paid in full, the aide said.

"They're using the dollar excuse to avoid this issue," Wolonsky said. "How can they, when we give so much to Third-World countries? This country won't support its own people."

Eschol Graham of Big Spring, a commander in the American Legion and a member of the group, said repeated attempts by members to seek a change has drawn little response.

"They won't recognize us," he said. Letters he has received from Stenholm express the representative's sympathy for their plight but repeat his position that there is no funding available. Stenholm's legislative aide, Marc Lubin, said reported cost for HR-303 would be between $1 billion and $2 billion.

A repeal of the law would allow Graham, a 22-year veteran of the Air Force who has been declared 40 percent disabled, to collect an additional $500 to $600 each month.

Sabatias, declared 100 percent disabled after his 22 years of service, said the money he waived would have helped when he returned to raise two children on his own.

Arnold Uribe, a disabled retiree who is employed by the VA Medical Center in Big Spring, said the unfairness is in the comparison.

"If I was retired from the phone company or something, they'd pay me in full," he said. "It really seems unfair when you look at it that way."

Letters to Congressmen and membership in lobbying groups, Uribe said, are the best ways to assure that the needs of veterans are addressed. He said he would encourage any veteran to join a group he believes will serve his individual concerns.

Zoo program aims to preserve endangered species

By DANNY MOGLE
Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph
TYLER, Texas — The three massive black rhinos at Caldwell Zoo distractedly look up from munching hay as a group of school kids enter the rhino hut.

The children look around, apparently unimpressed.

"Oooh, it smells in here," comments one young girl. The others agree.

"Let's go see the giraffes," says another and they scramble out the door.

Among the animal kingdom at the zoo, rhinos are hardly star attractions.

Children tug at their parents' hands to see playful black and white colobus monkeys swing in their cages or lumbering elephants toss dirt onto their backs.

Even a slumbering cheetah brings forth more excitement than the fat, ugly rhinos.

But to zoo general curator Michael Tucker, the rhinos are prized possessions representing Caldwell's commitment to helping preserve the planet's endangered species.

"Most rhinos are coming about a year old, and we have one in the 40-acre zoo off Martin Luther King Boulevard.

"They are really in trouble," Tucker said of the animal's status in the wilds of Africa.

Experts estimate only 3,500 of the huge animals remain in their natural habitat, he said. To help en-percent, the Ecological Movement had 5 percent, and the Peasant Party had 3.5 to 4 percent, according to the poll. No margin of error was given.

If the exit poll proves correct, the Front would be able to govern alone with a parliamentary majority, dashing the opposition parties' hopes of forcing Ilescu to form a coalition government.

The projected outcome would also break a string of victories by leftist and conservative political parties in free elections held elsewhere in Eastern Europe following the ouster of the old Communist regimes.

Communist reformers were overwhelmingly defeated in elections earlier this year in East Germany and Hungary.

Ilescu, a 60-year-old former Communist Party secretary who fell out of favor with Ceausescu, had no comment on the West German poll, the state news agency Rompress reported. But he praised citizens for their high turnout and calm behavior.

Campeanu and Ratiu — both of whom returned to Romania early this year after many years in exile — condemned the poll.

"I find the (projected) results exaggerated, monstrously so. They remind of the returns in Ceausescu's time," Campeanu told Rompress, referring to the big margins the former dictator claimed in previous rigged elections.

He added that he had received "information of very serious irregularities."

Some 500 foreign observers spread out through the country to monitor the elections.

"I'm very pleased so far with what I've seen," said New Mexico Gov. Garrey E. Carruthers, leader of the U.S. Presidential Observer Delegation.

"We have no doubt that in some particulars the election was flawed," said Roy Hattersley, deputy leader of Britain's Labor Party.

Voters had 88 parties to choose from, and slow-moving lines of 200 or more people snaked outside polling places. The original closing time of 11 p.m. was extended when it became clear that the voting was proceeding much slower than expected, particularly in the capital, Bucharest.

Still, voters relished the chance to cast ballots in their first free election since 1937.

In Timisoara, the cradle of the violent December revolution that toppled Ceausescu, Vancea Aurel, 78, a retired civil engineer, was elated as he waited to cast his ballot for the National Liberal Party.

"Until December, I was convinced that neither I nor my children would ever take part in free elections," said Aurel, who voted in the 1937 elections.

Up to 3,000 anti-Communist demonstrators gathered in Bucharest's University Square, where a round-the-clock protest has gone on for weeks to demand the ouster of Ilescu and other former Communists from the government.

"We hoped (Ilescu) would have a greater opposition," said Dan Trandafirescu, a 33-year-old engineer.

Opposition parties have claimed Ilescu is a "neo-Communist" who would merely continue the old system under a new name.

Ilescu, who took over as interim president after Ceausescu's execution, has denied the allegations.

Kelly Harrell was the highest competitor in the 4-H Consumer Decision Making Contest and for her efforts she was awarded a $50 savings account from Stanton National Bank.

Harrell plans to use the money to begin saving for a college education.

This was not her first experience of setting up a bank account. A checking account was set up when she started her 4-H Beef project.

Money management is a difficult skill to learn at any age. However, we believe that exposure through 4-H at a young age will allow for a strong financial background.

Kelly has been active in several 4-H projects — method demonstrations, clothing, beef and consumer decision making. She is in the band and played pee wee basketball this spring.

Kelly is the daughter of Deborah Adkins of Lomax and G. P. Harrell, Jr. of Lenora. We are glad to have Kelly and her family as members of the Martin County 4-H program.

We also extend our thanks to Stanton National Bank for supporting the Consumer Decision Making Contest.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.
