Man, child injured in shooting incident

HOWARD COUNTY - Alocal man and his 4-year-old son were hospitalized Sunday night, according to sheriff's reports, after both were shot.

According to a Howard County Sheriff's report, Randall Ray Todd, 29, Tubbs Drive, and his 4-year-old son were taken by ambulance to Scenic Mountain Medical Center at about 9 p.m. Sunday. The report said Todd and his son were injured by a single blast from a shotgun.

The boy was treated for pellets to the upper left arm then released, the report said. Todd was in stable condition after receiving treatment for a wound on the right foot, the report said.

According to the report, Deputy Woodie Howell responded to a 911 call on Tubbs Drive in Sand Springs. The report said Todd's wife told Howell that a man fired a shotgun at her, her husband and two children after the family had argued with the

Health agencys agree on guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) -You've heard it all before: To live long, eat right. Sounds simple, but the experts all seemed to have different ideas about what was right.

After holding what amounted to a "food summit" last year, 10 health agencies — five private and five public — have now come up with a list of jointly recommended dietary

They call it "The Healthy American Diet." with six general diet principles for everyone over the age of 2:

-Eat a nutritionally adequate diet consisting of a variety of foods.

 Reduce consumption of fat, especially saturated fat and cholesterol.

—Achieve and maintain a reasonable body weight. -Increase consumption of complex carbohydrates and —Reduce intake of sodium. -Consume alcohol in moderation, if at all. Children, adolescents and pregnant women should abstain. The groups' joint report said nutritional deficiencies such as not enough vitamins used to be the nation's top dietary problem. Now it is eating too much food of the wrong kind. Variety and moderation, the groups said, is the key to healthy eating.

Flood waters receding

HOUSTON (AP) -Sightseers, fishermen and revelers shared Memorial Day Weekend outings with floodedout refugees at campgrounds as floodwaters from the rainswollen Trinity River continue to recede.

The Trinity crested downstream and authorities early today continued to reduce releases from Lake Livingston Dam. But officials say it could be another month before the flood waters recede from lowlying rural areas.

"I think most of them probably have seen the worst of it," said Don Stovall, assistant manager for the Lake Livingston Project for the Trinity River Authority.

But Liberty Mayor Scott Parker said residents realize the flooding is far from over, saying "water will be staying high in the backwater areas for more than a month.'

Farther north, some residents were able to return to their homes over the weekend, while others waited for waters to recede.

Anti-drug hard-liner wins election with wide margin

By STEVEN GUTKIN Associated Press Writer

BOGOTA, Colombia - The bloodiest election campaign in Colombian history ended with a resounding presidential victory for the governing party's Cesar Gaviria, an advocate of continuing the costly war with drug traffickers.

Gaviria, 43, told supporters in a nationally televised speech that his victory represents a triumph for democracy in this violencewracked country and praised Colombians for defying threats by the powerful cocaine cartels.

"To all those who have sought to threaten our democracy, listen closely. The people have spoken with courage and clarity, and we will triumph," he said before a cheering crowd at a Bogota hotel.

Despite terrorist threats, millions of Colombians turned out to vote Sunday under the watchful eye of army sharpshooters. They chose among 12 presidential candidates who survived a campaign in which three candidates were assassinated.

The country's only leftist candidate, former guerrilla Antonio Navarro, made an unexpectedly strong showing, with 674,829 votes, or 13 percent. The Conservative Party candidate, Rodrigo Lloreda was in fourth place with 636,209 votes, or 12 percent.

Gaviria had taken the hardest line against the drug traffickers of any candidate, opposing negotiations with them and supporting the continued extradition of accused drug lords to stand trial in the United States.

In his victory speech, Gaviria reiterated his campaign pledge to continue the war on the cocaine barons

Park restrooms hard to keep clean

By RUTH COCHRAN

City Editor

BIG SPRING — A visit to one of the restrooms at Comanche Trail Park on a Sunday afternoon could prove unsettling if not down right disgusting

City officials say vandals often strike the restrooms at the park, either wrecking the facilities or leaving messes on the floors and

David McGhghy, parks and recreation superintendent, said his crews make a morning inspection during the weekdays and can find anything from a square of tissue on the floor to an unrecognizable 'Its pretty bad. The main problem we have with vandalism in the restroom is graffiti," McGhghy said. "We don't get a lot of commodes torn up. That and people doing various things in the bathroom making a mess.

"They'll go in there and instead of using the commode they'll use the floor, so it does get pretty messy. A lot of times they'll take rolls of toilet paper and stuff them in the commodes.

Less often, he said, the destruction will be aimed at the old-fashion tank toilets. The lids of the tanks are particularly vulnerable, he

"They like going in there and taking the lid off and busting those," McGhghy said. "That is one thing they do pretty regular. It doesn't take anything to lift that off, throw it down and smash it. But we do try to keep it in decent shape.'

If the parks department does have to replace an entire commode, they spend about $70, McGhghy said. Tank lids are less, he said.

McGhgy said the messes and destruction are in direct proportion to how much use the park receives.

'Some days are better than others," he said. "It just depends on how much use they've gotten. 'Now we're getting a lot of people out here . . . so they have a lot of use. It varies '

Big schools could be biggest losers

public education.

Facing a court order to reform the school finance system, some lawmakers and educators are convinced that no new money would leave few options but "Robin Hood" - a system that would take state aid from rich schools and give it to poor ones

A court-appointed special master already is studying ways to restructure school aid if the Legislature's third special session on education can't produce a plan before its Thursday adjournment.

The Democrat-controlled House and Senate approved the $555 million reform bill and a half-cent sales tax increase to help pay for it. But the Republican governor vetoed the reform measure and pledges to do the same to the tax increase. Although the Senate voted to override Clements' veto of the reform bill, House leaders still are hunting for 100 votes to follow suit. If no bill passes by June 1, special master William Kilgarlin has been ordered to begin writing a plan of his own. Kilgarlin has mentioned consolidating school districts or redistributing money within counties, but "Robin Hood" is the result many fear.

Therefore, the unanimous Texas Supreme Court ruling designed to pump more money into poor districts with high percentages of minority students could wind up taking money from many urban districts, also with high percentages of minority students, some

Texas A&M adopts drug test policy

COLLEGE STATION (AP) Most public universities in Texas have developed drug policies, in keeping with a federal mandate, but Texas A&M apparently has become the first in the state to adopt drug testing.

The board of regents for the Texas A&M System on Friday approved a policy that subjects students, faculty and staff members to drug testing if their performance leads others to suspect they are using or dealing drugs.

Mack Adams, assistant commissioner for student services with the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, said the A&M system becomes the first to adopt drug testing as part of the drug abuse policy.

"Each school must have a drug-prevention policy whereby they define what the steps ... they will go through if the student, faculty or staff person is alleged to have been using illegal drugs on college

Schools wrangle over state lines

TEXHOMA, Texas (AP) -Straddling the border of two states whose loyalists believe each other to live on the fool's side of a fault line, this hybrid town has reached a rare civil compromise.

Regardless of their home state, all its schoolchildren go to kindergarten in Texas, elementary school in Oklahoma, junior high in Texas, and graduate from high school in Oklahoma Separate school districts operate on each side of town, in buildings on opposite dead ends of Fifth Street, which the state line splits.

Loyalties aside, the arrangement has allowed the shrinking town of about 1,000 people to keep its students here instead of busing them to the nearest county seats.

What Texhoma has brought together, lawmakers in Austin, 500 miles southeast, or Oklahoma City, about 220 miles distant, can easily tear asunder.

At a time when both Texas and Oklahoma are strapped and struggling to keep enough money flowing for public education, this town finds itself at the mercy of two state legislatures.

While sharing a name, Texhoma actually was created as two towns. It still has two mayors, city councils and water towers, but only one marshal on patrol.

At first, separate school systems operated on either side, and the Oklahoma Red Devils battled the Texas Bulldogs in cross-town matchups

But in the late 1920s the Oklahomans, being more in number, one-upped their southern neighbors. "My understanding is that in 1927 the Oklahoma side built a high school that had an inside gym," says Rex Hale, now superintendent on the Texas side.

Lacking an indoor gym of their own, the Texans humbly began paying to send their high schoolage children across to Oklahoma. That continued until 1975

Comfortable by now with the nuances of their partnership, Hale and Yates hope neither of the two state legislatures does anything that will take away some of their funds and upset their precarious financial balance. Lately, Texas legislators, who have floundered for months seeking more money for education, have been the more troublesome. On the sword's other edge, Okłahoma lawmakers haggled for 10 months before recently agreeing to raise taxes for schools there.

WASHINGTON (AP) -Thousands of motorcycle enthusiasts protested the handling of America's missing in action from the Vietnam War by staging a "rolling thunder" rally past the White House and the Soviet and Laotian embassies.

National Park Police said an estimated 15,000 people participated in the rally and a "Rock for Freedom' concert and demonstration held near the Lin-

Police rejected a request for a permit for the cyclists to motor en masse past the Soviet and Laotian embassies, claiming it would tie up traffic, said event organizers.

Nonetheless, groups of five to 20 cyclists at a time rumbled in ad hoc "thunder alley runs" throughout the afternoon in front of the embassies.

About 2,300 Americans are now listed by the government as missing in action in the Vietnam War, which also included fighting in Cambodia and Laos. The war ended in 1975 with Communist victories in all three countries.

Compromise in works to revise Hatch Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — House the House Rules Committee. Republican leaders are trying to persuade President Bush to accept rights that were stripped away might be able to put the pieces from civil service and postal workers five decades ago.

The House and the Senate have passed similar bills — both by vetoproof margins — that substantially ease restrictions imposed on about 3 million federal workers by the 1939 Hatch Act.

Before forcing a showdown with the White House, Democrats are giving key House Republicans who support the changes time to convince Bush to reject advice from his top aides to veto the legislation.

"We're waiting until they see what they can do," said Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., chief author of the House bill. "We're willing to negotiate."

Clay said House Democrats are willing to accept the narrower Senate version, which is somewhat less objectionable to the administration because it retains a ban against federal workers running for elected office or soliciting campaign funds from the public.

Shortly after Congress returns June 5 from a Memorial Day recess, top House Republicans, including GOP Leader Bob Michel of Illinois, are expected to request a meeting with Bush in an effort to dissuade him from a veto.

"I hope we can work something out with them down there," said Rep. Frank Horton, R-N.Y., who is heading the effort along with Michel and Rep. James Quillen of Tennessee, the top Republican on "The Senate has opened a lot of doors," said Horton. "If we can legislation restoring political work some of that out, I think we together. Frankly, I'm optimistic we could override a veto, but I'm willing to compromise and I think Mr. Clay is, too.

So tar the administration has shown no willingness to budge, according to sources familiar with preliminary behind-the-scenes

The Hatch Act prohibits federal workers from holding local, state or national office in either political party, and attending party conventions as delegates. Also barred is any campaign activity — on or off the job - for any candidate, including holding a poster at a rally or working on a get-out-the-vote

Clay said the biggest supporters of a presidential veto of the bill easing the Hatch law are White House Chief of Staff John Sununi and Senate GOP Whip Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming.

Simpson believes the law protects professional civil service workers from being coerced into making campaign donations by pinheaded partisan people who lurk in real-life politics" in both parties.

It was protecting federal employees from political coercion rather than limiting their rights politically — that was the motivating force behind the 51-year-old law named after the late Sen. Carl A. Hatch, D-N.M.

Post office takes a licking on stamps

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you printed that letter from "Mad at the Mail," who complained because the postage stamps didn't stick. I thought maybe I was losing my mind because lately I've had letters returned to me marked "Postage Due" when I knew for a fact I had put stamps on them. I never had that kind of trouble with stamps before.

Now I keep a pot of glue on my desk. It takes a little longer to get a letter off, but at least I know it's going to get there. - GREG H., ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: In 1945, during World War II, I was working for a dentist and I used to stamp all the outgoing mail. The stamps didn't stick, due to inferior glue, so a postal employee suggested that I sit on the envelopes for a while. (He said it had something to do with body heat.) Well, I did as he suggested — I still do — and I haven't had any trouble with stamps falling off since. - PROBLEM SOLVED

DEAR ABBY: You and "Mad at the Mail" are going at things backward; the fault lies not in the stamps, Dear Abby, but in yourself.

You should try moistening the envelope, not the stamp. When you moisten the stamp, by whatever method, you remove some of the glue - sometimes all of it. That's why the stamps don't stick. -AB-

DEAR ABBY: In reference to stamps that don't stick: Recently I had a rather elaborate card to mail that required three 25-cent postage stamps, so I very carefully put a small strip of Scotch tape along the edge of each postage stamp in order to secure it. (It was a sympathy card to a dear friend, and !

wanted to make sure it arrived.) Well, seven days later, the card was returned to me, marked vice about my coupon-clipping Against Regulations to Obscure Stamps." Abby, I am a 77-year-old great-grandmother, and I'm sick and tired of poor quality and government greed. - NO NAME,

DEAR READERS: And now a word from the postmaster general:

DEAR ABBY: The Postal Service is concerned that stamp adhesive sticks and has asked its suppliers to take additional quality assurance measures

To obtain an even better solution, we funded an extensive research effort in 1988 to find a "superior" adhesive that will firmly adhere stamps to any material used in envelopes, while at the same time not prematurely sticking stamps to each other. Such an adhesive must be effective under broad environmental conditions of heat and cold, high humidity and low humidity. This effort has narrowed our search to several adhesives that meet these criteria, and we are testing them now.

When these tests are completed, we will require our suppliers to use these new, improved adhesives; then our stamps, once stuck, will stay stuck. -ANTHONY M. FRANK, POSTMASTER GENERAL, U.S. POSTAL SERVICE

Frankly, it's high time. Meanwhile, we are stuck with a lot of stamps that won't stick.

DEAR POSTMASTER FRANK:

DEAR ABBY: I need some ad-

I don't feel that this is right. She says she has eight or nine other people who are doing this for her. Abby, is this illegal? Can she go to jail if she gets caught? Can I go to jail for helping her? Please advise soon before she asks me again.

- NORTH OF DALLAS DEAR NORTH: Your friend's scam is flat-out mail fraud, according to the U.S. Postal Service. It is a criminal offense, punishable by a hefty fine and a prison term.

My advice to you is to pass this advice along to your couponclipping neighbor before she gets clipped. And you should have no

A day to pause and remember

It has been 17 years since the United States pulled out of Vietnam, our last war, albeit undeclared. Since then, with the exception of limited military actions in Lebanon, Grenada and Panama, our country has been at peace.

As the memories of those horrible years of war recede, we tend to forget the sacrifices of those who fought and died in the service of their country.

Memorial Day is one day that is set aside to recognize and honor those who gave their lives in wars — the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam.

Whatever our personal feelings about the reasons, the goals and the results of those wars, we owe respect to the men and women who responded to their country's call to arms, who fought and died for a country they loved and honored.

On this Memorial Day, let us pause to reflect a moment on their sacrifice and to rededicate ourselves to giving our best to the country these heros gave so much for.

Where did all the money go?

Deposit insurance has been singled out as the villain in the savings and loan debacle, and there is plenty of evidence to support the charge — but that isn't good

The real villains are people.

Deposit insurance encourages high-risk loans, it is true. This poses a moral hazard, it is true.

The moral hazard was discerned 57 years ago by President Franklin D. Roosevelt when he said:

"As to guaranteeing bank deposits, the minute the government starts to do that, the government runs into a probable loss. We do not wish to make the United States government liable for the mistakes and errors of individual banks.

Before long, advanced thinkers persuaded FDR to change his mind. This was the first step of the journey that led to the debacle.

It is wise for law and regulations to eliminate moral hazards from banking and the savings and loan industry. But life is full of moral hazards. The existence of temptations does not excuse succumbing to them. So who succumbed? The tax-paying public is being told it is expected to cough up money for a $400 billion or $500 billion bailout.

Long before that happens, Congress and the bureaucrats, past and present, who presided over the disaster are going to have to give a better account of the meltdown than they have given so far — an account that includes individuals' names and amounts and tells us where the money went and who has it now There can be no doubt that many of the S&Ls were run by modern pirates, that billions of dollars were siphoned out of the razzle-dazzle operations they controlled, and that those billions are salted away somewhere — the biggest take in the biggest confidence game of all time.

Where's the money now? Who has it? Uncle Sam had better gird up his loins, go after the looters and the loot, and prosecute the looters and impound the loot before he asks the taxpayers for one red

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK WASHINGTON — A little more than 14 years ago, in March of 1976, the Navy and the Air Force set in motion a jim-dandy project They would acquire a new Airborne Self-Protection Jammer that would befuddle enemy radar on the ground. Everyone said, my, what a bully idea! And thereby hangs this tale.

Thus the Pentagon contracted with ITT and Westinghouse to develop the electronic gizmo. Years passed. More years passed Nearly $600 million of the taxpayers' money went out. Nothing much came in. At last, in the summer of 1988, 12 years having elapsed, the contractors declared themselves ready for developmental and operational tests.

The Navy and Air Force installed the contraptions and launched their planes. From the ground, simulated radar beacons went up. From the air the jammers sent their signals down. And behold, the jammers did not work.

Truly, the ASPJ, as it is known, did not work. The Pentagon's specifications required that the system function for 33 hours (a very long time in combat) without failure. Test models failed after 19 hours. The contract required that the ASPJ detect its own faults 90 percent of the time. On this test, the mechanism scored a miserable 29 percent. Moreover, when the jammer was not jamming properly, it was emitting signals that positively invited enemy missiles to zero on target The effectiveness of the system was judged "marginally operationally suitable." That is Pentagonese for lousy.

In July of last year, top officials in the field of weapons acquisition reviewed the findings. Deputy Defense Secretary Donald J. Atwood saw "a clear case of not

But, hold! Like the fabled phoenix from its ashes, the ASPJ rose again. Atwood reversed himself. Cheney reversed himself. The whole project is back on track. The Navy wishes to commit $3.7 billion over the next 10 years to buy 700 units. Regardless of the sorry test results, it wants to get on with production, Naval spokesmen say the model ASPJ, poor thing that it is, is still better than the jammer now in use. It is bound to improve over time. Let us buy now and fly later.

Sen. David Pryor of Arkansas, chairman of a subcommittee on federal services, got wind of this chronicle last year. He has been fighting a feather pillow battle ever since. He chaired a hearing on May 11 that was typical of most committee hearings. His staff had lugged in the seven gunmetal boxes, weighing 345 pounds, that contain the jamming system. There were charts and TV crews and platoons of senatorial aides. In an opening statement Pryor asked a rhetorical question: "Why are we spending billions to produce a radar jammer that does not work, is over budget and behind schedule?" Answer came there silly rule.

Well, not exactly none. Atwood said he had changed his mind because of the Navy's appeal. He feared that if the termination order were carried out, 15 subcontractors would go on to other projects. The vendor supply line would dry up, and 14 years of investment would be lost. Atwood was long associated with General Motors before he came to the Pentagon. Pryor asked him if he would have put a GM car on the road with such defective equipment. 'No, sir," said Atwood. "Would pilots like to be in such a plane?

Derek J. Vander Schaaf, deputy inspector general for the Department of Defense, contributed his bit to the story. He had discovered that the Navy's people in charge of testing had puffed up their reports by emphasizing favorable results and minimizing the unfavorable findings. He had looked into the prospect of vanishing vendors and found it unlikely. The hearing should have been dramatic, exciting, revealing. Through no fault of Pryor's it turned out to be a yawn. Once Pentagon people get to talking Pentagonese, eyes glaze over. In this bottomless bureaucracy, in which initials speak only to initials, the OSD non-concurs with findings of the CAIG, and the NAB appeals to the DAB. Responsibility sinks in a sea of memoranda. We taxpayers are about to buy a $3.7 billion system that demonstrably is no damn good. It's the Washington way.

Study: Juniors and seniors are taking college more seriously

By DEBBIE LINCECUM

Students are taking college seriously, according to the results of a new study completed by Stanley H. Kaplan Educational Center, Limited. The survey of college-bound high school juniors and seniors revealed that 50 percent were planning on college to further their career goals, while 42 percent said they wanted to gain a general education

Only 12 percent of the students said they thought college would help them make more money, but 21 percent said college would help them get ahead. Graduate school was in the plan for about half of the students.

How's that?

Q. How did turnpikes get their name?

A. The word "turnpike" originated in the days when toll collectors were armed with pikes, long-handled weapons with sharp iron heads. They used these weapons to prevent travelers who refused to pay the toll from using the roads.

McGhghy said his staff is too small to check the restrooms more than once a day, and weekend crews would require overtime pay. We do sometimes try to check them twice a day," he said. "(But) we're usually involved with something else by then.'

Public Works Director Tom Decell said he would love to make the restrooms vandal proof, but those measures would require a lot of money. The city would have to install tankless toilets, steel toilet paper dispensers, stainless steel fixtures and graffiti-proof wall paint, he said. "I'm sure this is probably a very small minority that's doing this,' Decell said. "I think it has been a perennial problem. It was a problem when I got here and I'm sure it was before I got here.

McGhghy said the problem is something every city and public facility faces.

"I guess every park has the same problem," he said. "It's just something we have to deed with."

Polygraphs scheduled in double homicide

BIG SPRING — About five more people will be scheduled for polygraph examinations this week in connection with the April 19 double homicide of Jeane and Lloyd Davidson at the I-20 Mobile Home Park.

"We're going to try and get some scheduled in the next day or two," said Howard County Sheriff Deputy George Quintero on Monday. "We'll probably may have some more later on.

There are several suspects in the case but no motive has been established for the slayings in which both couples were stabbed 14-16 times each, Quintero said. He estimated that so far 50-60 people have been interviewed by law enforcement officials and six have had polygraph examinations.

"We're working on several leads that we got," he said. "We have a whole bunch of suspects."

Quintero said he will call Tuesday to find out when they can expect a personality profile of the murderer created from details of the crime. Late last week, the Sheriff's Department was still sending crime details to the Department of Public Safety's Division of Crime Analysis in Austin, the office doing the profile. The profile will help establish a motive.

Meanwhile, law enforcement officials are still looking for two white bearded men with shoulderlength hair who were asking for directions at the trailer park around the time of the murders. They were driving an orange Dodge pickup with a white camper top and camping equipment.

Officials are also still trying to determine the movements of a 1982 white Cadillac that disappeared from the Davidson's home between April 17 and 19. The vehicle was found in the parking lot of Scenic Mountain Medical Center.

A $5,000 reward is available for information leading to the arrest and grand jury indictment of the perpetrator. All tips will be treated confidentially

"Urban education is at risk. A school finance bill without sufficient revenues will hit especially hard on urban school districts,' said Bernice Hart, president of the Austin Independent School District

Lawmakers representing poor districts said they don't necessarily want to take money from others. But they do want to provide more for their regions and see the 9-0 Texas Supreme Court ruling as the 'club'' to accomplish that.

"We have had children that have been punished far too long for just a couple of exceptions all poor school districts and we have a unanimous Supreme Court decision. My priority in this whole fight is with the low-wealth school districts. I want to make sure we close the gap," Truan said. Few dispute that there are ineguities between the richest and poorest of the state's 1,050 independent school districts.

'Certainly, the poorer school districts are in drastic need of additional funding, but that funding should not be provided by taking money away from wealthier districts. One school system cannot be destroyed in order to save another," Houston's Ms. Raymond But Sen. Carl Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee and an author of the Legislature's $555 million reform plan, says that's what he has heard from some quarters. "I seriously sense an attitude of Dallas ISD Superintendent Marvin Edwards said the projected $61 million funding loss would be devastating.

Failure to provide more money for public education would leave few options but "Robin Hood," a finance plan that would take state aid from rich school districts and gives it to the poor.

In Sunday's balloting, Colombians also voted by a nearly 10-to-1 margin in favor of convening a national constituent assembly to reform the country's 104-year-old constitution.

Proponents of constitutional reform say changes are needed to break the upper class's grip on the country and root out corruption. Proposed changes would strengthen the judicial system, emphasize land reform and increase checks and balances on the president's power. Sunday night, Barco said the elec-

Swimmer back on the right track

University of Texas swimmer Chris Jacobs now entertains thoughts of shooting for Olympic gold in 1992 rather than shooting himself.

His intense desire to be the best drove him to alcoholism, drug addiction and the idea of suicide in 1986, he said. Jacobs spent eight months in an outpatient program for drug dependency, and he feels he's back on track

It's been 11 months since he last touched drugs or alcohol, he said, and now he's back in the pool.

Although he won three medals in the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, he still left that competition disappointed. He swam the 100-meter freestyle in 49.08 seconds. But in the race for the gold, Jacobs' American teammate, Matt Biondi, touched the wall 45 one-hundredths of a second faster — a blink of the eye.

Ultimately, he won a silver medal and two gold medals from DALLAS (AP) - Former relays. But the silver medal causes alcohol, anything that would make him nearly as much pain as do his shoulders, which are so worn to the bone that doctors have said he might some day wake up crippled for life unless he stops swimming.

"To swimmers, first is first, second and everything beyond that is last," Jacobs said. "I am a swimmer. All that mattered to Jacobs was that he had failed in his 15-year obsession to be the best in the 'It was so depressing," Jacobs said. "It was a very poor swim. I

At 21, he sat in the darkness of a bedroom closet in Austin and contemplated shooting himself. But thoughts of the pain suicide would cause his family led him to remove the gun barrel from his mouth.

Braves pitcher just misses no-hitter

By The Associated Press Maybe John Smoltz shouldn't

think so much

Smoltz was two outs away from Atlanta's first no-hitter in 17 years when Len Dykstra doubled to right field. Smoltz then settled for a twohitter and a 6-1 victory over Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium on Sunday.

After Ricky Jordan struck out on three pitches leading off the ninth, Dykstra ripped a 1-0 pitch down the line. One out later, Von Hayes singled to spoil the shutout bid. I got behind Dykstra and then I started thinking," Smoltz said. "He hit a fastball, and he was ready for it.' It took the major league's hottest hitter to ruin Smoltz's shot at history.

Dykstra leads the majors with a .404 average and almost got a hit leading off the Phillies' first.

Smoltz, in his second season, is 5-0 lifetime against the Phillies including four complete games. In 44 innings, he's allowed Philadelphia only 25 hits and has a 1.43 earnedrun average.

Cubs 11, Astros 6 Ryne Sandberg hit two homers to drive in four runs as Chicago defeated Houston at Wrigley Field to snap a four-game losing streak.

Sandberg, who had four hits, hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning and hit his ninth in the sixth inning to help make a winner of Mike Bielecki (3-3). It was the 14th time in his career that Sandberg had two homers in one game, the last coming Sept. 8, 1989 against St. Louis.

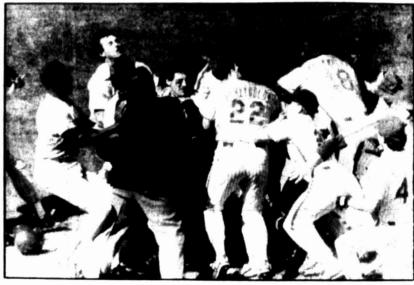

The loss snapped Houston's three-game winning streak as the Astros stranded 10 runners in the first five innings.

Pirates 5, Giants 2 Don Slaught and Barry Bonds homered in Pittsburgh's three-run fifth inning, and Neal Heaton improved to 8-1 as the Pirates beat San Francisco at Three Rivers

Andy Van Slyke went 3-for-4 and hit a solo homer in the seventh inning for Pittsburgh's fourth run as former Pirate Rick Reuschel (2-6) remained winless against Pittsburgh since August 1980.

The Pirates, who won twice in the three-game series after losing eight of their previous 10, are 5-1 against the Giants this season.

Expos 5, Reds 3 Cincinnati lost for only the fifth time in 22 road games as Andres Galarraga and Tim Raines homered to rally the Expos. The Reds, who blew a 3-0 lead, were attempting to sweep a four-game series in Montreal for the first time since the Expos entered the league in 1969. The game was only the second in 25 this season that the Reds have lost after scoring first.

In his Newsday column Wednes-day, Breslin wrote about a plumber who follows construction crews around the city, waiting for them to accidentally break an underground water pipe so he can fix it.

As a column subject, damage control was not inappropriate. The editors of Newsday had suspended the Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist May 9 for two weeks without pay for uttering racial and sexual slurs against New York News-

KENNEBUNK, Maine — President Bush pauses on the golf course Monday morning to make a few comments about the upcoming summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. Bush has spent the holiday weekend at his oceanside home on the Maine coast with family members and was scheduled to return to Washington later in the day.

Weekend tallies 25 dead on state roads

At least 25 people died in accidents on Texas roádways during the Memorial Day holiday weekend.

The Associated Press began its count of holiday traffic fatalities at 6 p.m. Friday. The count will continue through midnight Monday. Nationwide, at least 256 people had died as of 3 a.m. Monday.

Pantaleon Corpus and Santiaga Corpus, both 70, of Edinburg were killed about 10:30 a.m. Sunday a few miles southeast of Edinburg when the vehicle in front of them made a left turn as they were attempting to pass on Farm Road 1426. The vehicle sideswiped the first vehicle, then veered off the roadway, hitting a tree.

Benito Montemayor Jr., 19, of Donna died in a one-car rollover north of Weslaco about 6:30 a.m. Sunday.

Two men were killed at 8:05 a.m. Sunday in a two-vehicle head-on collision on Interstate 10 in Chambers County.

Lubbock boy dies in boating accident

SWEETWATER (AP) — An 11-year-old Lubbock boy apparently bled to death Sunday after becoming entangled in the motor of a boat his father was driving.

Christopher Lee Grizzell was on a Memorial Day weekend outing with his father, Larry Grizzell, on Oak Creek Lake, about 200 miles southwest of Dallas, authorities said.

Coke County Sheriff's Deputy Jeff Barnes said the 12:30 p.m. accident occurred after the boy fell off an innertube being pulled behind the boat.

As the elder Grizzell backed up so the boy could reach the innertube, the boat apparently ran over him.

"The father was unfamiliar with the operation of the boat," Barnes said.

The boy suffered extensive injuries to the left leg and lower body.

"He had lost a lot of blood due to a severe laceration on his left leg, which had become entangled in the boat motor," Barnes said.

The boy was taken to Rolling Plains Memorial Hospital in Sweetwater then transferred to Humana Hospital in Abilene, where he died Sunday afternoon.

Bloody election ends

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The bloodiest election campaign in Colombian history ended with a resounding presidential victory for the governing party's Cesar Gaviria, an advocate of continuing the costly war with drug traffickers.

Gaviria, 43, told supporters in a nationally televised speech that his victory represents a triumph for democracy in this violencewracked country and praised Colombians for defying threats by the powerful cocaine cartels.

"To all those who have sought to threaten our democracy, listen closely. The people have spoken with courage and clarity, and we will triumph," he said before a cheering crowd at a Bogota hotel.

Despite terrorist threats, millions of Colombians turned out to vote Sunday under the watchful eye of army sharpshooters. They chose among 12 presidential candidates who survived a campaign in which three candidates were assassinated.

The Caracol radio network estimated that just 45.5 percent of the 13 million eligible voters went to the polls. About 6 million votes were cast, compared with nearly 8 million in the 1986 presidential election.

Many people were apparently afraid to leave their homes because of the pre-election violence.

Gaviria, candidate for the Liberal Party, overwhelmingly defeated his three main rivals.

With 85 percent of the 7,100 precincts reporting, Gaviria had captured 2,488,687 votes, or 47 percent of the total, according to the national election office. His closest challenger, Alvaro Gomez of the independent National Salvation Movement, had 1,285,260 votes, or 24 percent.

24 percent.

The country's only leftist candidate, former guerrilla Antonio Navarro, made an unexpectedly strong showing, with 674,829 votes, or 13 percent. The Conservative Party candidate, Rodrigo Lloreda was in fourth place with 636,209 votes, or 12 percent.

Gaviria had taken the hardest line against the drug traffickers of any candidate, opposing negotiations with them and supporting the continued extradition of accused drug lords to stand trial in the United States.

In his victory speech, Gaviria

Large districts become big losers

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's big school districts could become big losers in the scramble for leftover dollars if Gov. Bill Clements and lawmakers fail to provide more money for public education.

Facing a court order to reform the school finance system; some lawmakers and educators are convinced that no new money would leave few options but "Robin Hood" — a system that would take state aid from rich schools and give it to poor ones.

A court-appointed special master already is studying ways to restructure school aid if the Legislature's third special session on education can't produce a plan before its Thursday adjournment.

The Democrat-controlled House and Senate approved the $555 million reform bill and a half-cent sales tax increase to help pay for it.

No new clues in Clovis boy's death

CLOVIS (AP) — An investigation into the death of a 6-year-old Clovis boy whose body was found in the compartment of a station wagon has yielded no new information, city Police Chief Caleb Chandler said at a press conference

Officers this weekend were interviewing people known to have committed crimes against children even though preliminary evidence suggests Matthew Roberts' death was accidental, Chandler said.

"We're just trying to cover every possibility, even though it's possible Matthew got into the compartment by himself. We have nothing now that indicates foul play, but we want to follow up on all the information we have," Chandler said during the weekend.

Matthew's partially decomposed body was found Wednesday inside a small compartment in the back of a station wagon parked outside the Roberts home in Clovis.

The boy disappeared May 8 and had been the object of a massive search involving thousands of volunteers in the eastern New Mexico city.

Clovis radio stations, police officers and firefighters planned to observe a moment of silence at noon today for Matthew, followed by a minute of church bells being rung in his honor, said Sgt. David Still of the Clovis Police Department.

A rosary will be said 7 p.m. Tuesday for Matthew at Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Clovis. Services will be held 1 p.m. Wednesday at the church and burial will follow at Lawn Haven Memorial Gardens.

An autopsy on the child's body found no signs of trauma or foul play, but there was no immediate ruling on a cause of death. Chandler said the autopsy found that Matthew had been dead for at least eight days and that the body had been in the station wagon at least that long.

Town unhappy with park name

KERRVILLE (AP) — The Schreiner family name has been plastered all over this Hill Country town for several years. But it didn't really matter much until the 500-acre Kerrville State Recreational Area became the Kerrville-Schreiner State Park this year.

"It is past time to remember other pioneer families," fumed Helen Riley of nearby Hunt. Kerrville residents voted their disapproval of the new name by a 7-to-1 margin in a non-binding referendum early this month. But the park will be called the Kerrville-Schreiner State Park — at least for now, the Kerrville Daily Times reported.

The town's biggest bank, its only downtown department store, the only college, a street and the municipal golf course all carry the name of Kerr County's most pre-eminent family. Schreiner also is the local chapter name of the United Daughters of the Confederacy

The town's long association with the Schreiner family began in 1869 when a Frenchborn Confederate private opened a general store with $5,000 put up by a trusting partner.

Some say the April insolvency of the Charles Schreiner Bank and the sale of the family's YO Ranch Hilton Hotel demonstrates the Schreiners' modest new standing.

At the park's Jan. 20 rededication ceremony, a halfdozen demonstrators berated the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission for not holding a public hearing in Kerrville on the name switch

Then the Kerr County al Commission and the Kerrythe Centennial Commission disassociated themselves from the name-change effort. After a petition drive, the county commissioners passed a resolution asking the Parks and Wildlife Commission to hold hearings

No one has complained directly to the Parks and Wildlife Commission in Austin, chairman Chuck Nash said. And no one showed up at the commission's annual open meeting last August to express an opinion, he said.

West Texas county saves desert spring

FORT STOCKTON (AP) -There's only one like it in Texas and, although he didn't really want to give up the land, a Pecos County commissioner has decided to save for posterity the only natural desert spring in the state.

Commissioner M.R. Gonzales Jr. on Earth Day signed a purchase agreement with a privately funded nature conservation group to preserve the Diamond Y Spring.

Jeff Weigel of San Antonio, director of stewardship for the Texas Nature Conservancy, says the 1,502 acres bought from Gonzales will become a nature preserve in which the system, called a "cienega," will be protected from potential threats, including ground water depletion and contamination from nearby oil and gas wells.

"Not only is the spring the only intact example of a cienega, but the Leon Springs pupfish, once thought to be extinct, lives there" along with two snail species and the puzzle sunflower. These exist nowhere else in the world, Weigel

Another rare species of fish that exists in only eight known sites and a third snail species that exists in only two other places worldwide also thrive there, he said. The fate of the species depends directly on the health of the cienega. Rebecca Bernard of San Antonio, development coordinator for the TNC, said the extinct Comanche

Spring lies only 10 miles south of the Diamond Y

"Diamond Y could have become lost, too, except for the conservancy's efforts and a county commissioner who wanted to preserve a valuable ecosystem," she said.

Comanche Spring once flowed at a rate of 35 million gallons a day. "It was a water supply that seemed limitless," she said. But by 1956, after intense crop irrigation downstream from the spring and large numbers of irrigation wells drilled to the southwest, Comanche Spring stopped flowing.

Gonzales, 59, who owns about 5.000 acres around the spring, said he bought the land where Diamond Y Spring is located in 1969.

"We knew the spring was there, but didn't recognize its importance as a cienega," Gonzales said. "But in 1972, there was a professor from the University of Texas out here and he discovered the fish that was thought to be extinct.

All of a sudden, Gonzales said, scientists from Baylor University and others from as far as Kansas and Oklahoma become involved in studies of the Diamond Y. 'The biggest concern was that

Kilgarlin has mentioned consolidating school districts or redistributing money within counties, but "Robin Hood" is the result many fear.

Therefore, the unanimous Texas Supreme Court ruling designed to pump more money into poor districts with high percentages of minority students could wind up taking money from many urban districts, also with high percentages of minority students, some educators say.

"Obviously, many of the very children for whom Edgewood vs. Kirby (the school finance lawsuit) was most concerned will be seriously hurt if we have to curtail programs and cut back enrichment services," Houston school superintendent Joan M. Raymond testified to lawmakers last week.

In Houston, the 191,000-student enrollment is 42.6 percent Hispanic, 39.6 percent black and 15.2 percent white, she said. Dallas ISD officials said their 132,700-student system is 46.9 percent black, 33 percent Hispanic and 18 percent white.

According to the Senate Education Committee, a no-new-money finance plan would make those two districts the big losers of state aid. The committee estimated funding cuts in the 1990-91 school year budget that would include:

Dallas, $61.4 million; Houston, $56.3 million; Austin, $15.5 million; Arlington, $13.1 million; Spring Branch, $11.6 million; Fort Worth, $9 million; Irving, $9 million; Richardson, $7.2 million; Plano, $6.3 million; Beaumont, $3.8 million; Tyler; $2.8 million, and McAllen, $1.4 million.

"Winning" districts in such a nonew-money plan would include: Ysleta, $15.4 million; San Antonio, $14.6 million; El Paso, $11 million; Harlandale, $6.6 million; Edgewood, $5.6 million; Brownsville, $4.4 million; Rio Grande City, $3 million; Pharr-San Juan-Alamo, $3 million; and Alice, $2.2 million.

"Urban education is at risk. A school finance bill without sufficient revenues will hit especially hard on urban school districts,' said Bernice Hart, president of the Austin Independent School District

Lawmakers representing poor districts said they don't necessari- $555 million reform plan, says ly want to take money from others. that's what he has heard from for their regions and see the 9-0 Texas Supreme Court ruling as the 'club' to accomplish that.

"We have had children that have been punished far too long for anyone to try to tell me to be concerned about the pain that this bill or this court action by the master would have on affluent school districts," said Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi. "In South Texas, we have with just a couple of exceptions all poor school districts and we have a unanimous Supreme Court decision. My priority in this whole fight is with the low-wealth school districts. I want to make sure we close the gap," Truan said.

"Certainly, the poorer school districts are in drastic need of additional funding, but that funding should not be provided by taking money away from wealthier districts. One school system cannot be destroyed in order to save another," Houston's Ms. Raymond

But Sen. Carl Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee and an author of the Legislature's some quarters.

"I seriously sense an attitude of wanting to punish children in the wealthy districts rather than helping the poor," said Parker, D-Port Arthur. "Some people don't just want to help the poor, they want to punish the wealthy — and that's wrong.

But he said Colombia cannot fight the drug war alone, calling on the United States and other developed countries to take steps to reduce demand for cocaine. He also called on the United States to drop trade barriers against legitimate Colombian exports.

Gaviria, an economist, will be the youngest president in Colombia's history. He became the Liberal Party nominee after the party's standardbearer, Luis Carlos Galan, was assassinated on Aug. 18 by drug traffickers. Galan's slaying prompted President Virgilio Barco to declare war on the drug cartels and extradite some accused traffickers to the United States In a nationally televised speech

Sunday night, Barco said the election had struck a blow against the drug terrorists. 'The vote is a triumph of democracy over violence," said Barco, who was constitutionally prohibited from seeking a second consecutive four-year term.

Navarro, a leader of the April 19 Movement guerrilla group which disbanded earlier this year to form a leftist political party, also took a tough stand against the drug traffickers. He entered the race after his party's candidate, Carlos Pizarro. was assassinated April 26 in a killing blamed on drug traffickers. Gomez and Lloreda backed trying to reach some sort of accomodation with the traffickers and indicated they would halt extraditions to the United States. In Sunday's balloting, Colombians also voted by a nearly 10-to-1 margin in favor of convening a national constituent assembly to reform the country's 104-year-old constitution.

Proponents of constitutional reform say changes are needed to break the upper class's grip on the country and root out corruption.
