Weather boosts water demands

A string of 100-degree days boosted water demands for the Colorado River Municipal Water District last week, according to official reports.

From Monday through Friday there were 293,274 gallons delivered to the four largest municipal customers — Big Spring, Midland, Odessa and Snyder. That figure includes several 60-million-gallon days, the report states.

Demands on the district had been lagging behind last year's figures by about 5 percent until the sudden increase. Were the increased usage to continue, it would add up to a 15 percent gain in overall use, officials reported.

May low income people are eligible, they say, and person can receive a pension or Social Security check and own a home and a car and still receive SSI payments. Supplemental security income provides regular monthly payments to people in need who are 65 or older, blind or disabled.

Persons who already receive SSI may also be eligible for food stamps and Medicaid, and many states provide an additional cash supplement.

Anyone needing more infor-mation can call the local Social Security office or call 1-800-234-5772.

Three honored by Salvation Army

Clyde McMahon Sr., Ima Gene Puckett, and Myra Robinson all received certification with membership emeritus awards from the Salvation Army at Friday's monthly advisory board meeting, said to Lt. Bill Owen.

"They received the awards because of the many years they have been on the advisory board and other things they have done in the community." Lt. Owen said.

All three recipients have been on the advisory board for at least 10 years, he said. Seventeen members of the board were at the presentation.

Black facing up to being sex symbol

DALLAS (AP) — Singer Clint Black said he is facing up to the fact that he has become a sex symbol in the country music world.

"If you asked me about the sex symbol thing six months ago, I would have strayed away from the conversation," he said. "I would have said, 'That's not me.' Now, it's getting kind of hard. I know I have to accept it.'

But he did turn down one women's recent request for fingernail clippings.

Black, who is scheduled to make an appearance in Dallas Saturday at a fund-raiser for the American Cancer Society, was gracious when asked, 'Are you the marrying kind?' in a phone interview by The Dallas Morning News.

"I could be," he said. "I'm going to try and see how much can found out about what my life may be about. There's no way to think about a family now. I'm so gone all the time. I've always been very attachable. I never have just dated around. We'll see. Maybe I'll just get a black book." Black, who has scored a hit with his song "Killing' Time," said he expects his next album to be finished in August and shipped in September.

Firms compete for contract to collect late taxes

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

County Commissioners heard

proposals from four firms this morning to collect delinquent taxes. It is the first time since taxing districts in the county consolidated their collection efforts four years ago that there has been competition for the contract.

Since it would probably be easier for all taxing districts in the county to use the same firm, a decision by commissioners to award a contract was tabled until a board composed of two representatives from each district can consider the proposals, said County Judge John Coffee. Only Coahoma Independent School District has not joined the consolidation effort.

The board will meet either June 19 or June 20, said County Judge John Coffee. Representatives from the county include Commissioner Paul Allen and Tax Collector Kathy Sales.

'That board and Kathy ultimately have to make the decision," Coffee said.

Commissioners Court will then convene on June 25 to vote on the contract, he said. The current two-year contract expires at the end of the month.

Firms giving presentations include the current contract holder, Bancroft & Mouton of Big Spring. Newcomers: are Robert D. Miller of Big Spring; Perdue, Brandon & Fielder of Lubbock and Mc-Creary, Veselka, Beck & Allen, of

The firm which is awarded the contract could earn up to $120,000 from the 15 percent fee from collections, according to figures from the tax office. About $58,000 was paid in delinquent tax collection fees from July 1988 to July 1989, Sales said.

Of $18.767 million in taxes due to districts in 1989, $803,508.21 has not been collected so far, figures show. Those taxes, about 2 percent of the total, will become delinquent if not paid by July 1.

Issues brought up by representatives of the firms include the advantages of where they are located and their computer capabilities.

Drew Mouton, of Bancroft & Mouton assured commissioners that they are fully computerized and disagreed with suggestions by other represenatives that there are advantages to having out-of-town customers. He collects taxes for all county taxing districts except Coahoma ISD. None of his customers are out of the county.

'Having collected the taxes for four years. I'm sure the county is very well aware of our services,' he said.

Shelburne J. Veselka, of Mc-Creary, Veselka, Beck & Allen, told commissioners that they have offices in Lubbock, San Angelo and Abilene and that they would have a representative come to Howard County to check property titles. They collect taxes for Borden ISD and were one of • TAXES page 6-A

Poll: Support strong for environmental protection

By GARY LANGER Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Seven in 10 Americans say they would ban disposable diapers to protect the environment, and even more would outlaw the plastic foam flotsam of fast-food restaurants, a survey found.

The Media General-Associated Press survey found that most Americans want to elect statewide supercops to take on polluters. And they favor prohibiting cancercausing pesticides and excessive product packaging.

The poll found strong support for an array of other strict environmental laws. Of those who live in neighborhoods where recycling is not mandatory, nine in 10 supported such a requirement. Nearly 70 percent favored election of a state environmental sheriff, a proposal that comes before California voters in a November referendum dubbed "Big Green." Other steps in that measure also won wide backing in

For example, the California act would ban 19 widely used pesticides that cause cancer in laboratory animals; such a move was favored by 70 percent in the survey, "even if the risk to humans is very slight.'

"Big Green" calls for a fee on oil shipping to pay for spill prevention and cleanup; in the poll, 80 percent supported such an effort, even if it raised oil prices. A separate proposal in California would restrict logging in old forests; 61 percent of those polled backed a ban on such

Overall, the survey found a continuing high level of concern about the environment. Four out of five respondents said pollution threatens the quality of their lives, and 75 percent said current antipollution laws are too weak. Most faulted state, local and federal environmental efforts.

The level of concern was essentially unchanged from a poll that asked some of the same questions a year ago. The new poll, conducted by telephone May 11-20 among a random sample of 1,143 adults, had a three-point error margin.

Just one-third of respondents expected pollution to decrease in the next 10 years, while 44 percent said it would increase. The rest expected little change.

Toxic waste disposal remained the greatest priority, with 65 percent saying it required "urgent government action no matter what the cost." The related matter of drinking water pollution got the next highest priority.

The poll found strong support for trash-reduction measures that proponents say could ease pressure on clogged landfills. Among them: -88 percent favored "restrictions on product packaging to reduce trash. -84 percent favored a ban on foam plastic containers such as those used in fast-food restaurants. -71 percent supported a ban on disposable diapers.

The survey found some participation in the "ethical shopping" movement, which urges support for environmentally concerned companies. While a strong majority said they shop "mainly on the basis of price and quality," 19 percent said they consider the manufacturer's environmental record.

Ethical shopping was particular-ly supported by those with postgraduate educations - 30 percent - and those who called themselves liberals, with 27 percent participating. There was little such division on other issues. Concern about the environment, criticism of government measures and support for strong new steps crossed boundaries of ideology, age, income, sex and political party.

As in the previous poll. respondents supported several air pollution measures that have been suggested in California. They include strict controls on power plants and bans on aerosol pro-

BIG SPRING — In a sudden emergency, a low-income family may find themselves unable to pay for basic energy bills, which often increase during the hot summer months, relief agency director Pat Lawlis said.

Two local agencies have aided hundreds of residents with utility bills so far this year. The programs, one funded by the state and the other dependent on local donations and grants, are set up to assist residents when a crisis makes energy bills hard to afford.

Organizations such as the Salvation Army and churches often provide help at such times. Big Spring residents are aided every day through two agencies, West Texas Opportunities and the Northside

Community Center Lawlis, District Director for West Texas Opportunities said the need is evident in Howard County. "Those bills do start getting higher this time of year. Our programs are designed to help the client learn how to keep their payments • EMERGENCY page 6-A HOUSTON (AP) Educators are worried about adolescents having easy access to a sophisticated pornography ring at the touch of the keyboards on their personal computers.

The Houston Chronicle reported that material found on Internet during a four-month period included hundreds of sexually explicit stories and pictures, intense discussions about freedom of expression and details of underground political strategy.

The tax-supported Internet also offered the scientific exchange it touts as its purpose, the newspaper reported.

Westbury High School student Jeff Noxon, 17, said his homework was rudely interrupted recently when he stumbled across the hi-tech porno setup.

Noxon glimpsed only part of an electronic catalog of erotic art and literature that offers titles such as "Cindy's Torment" and "The Education of Rachel.

DALLAS(AP) - LTVCorp.'s work on the secret B-2 Stealth bomber crept out of the shadows Sunday and into the daylight as the Dallas defense contractor for the first time opened its B-2 factory to inquisitive visitors

LTV's Aircraft Products Group made the B-2 facilities accessible to its 4,000 area employees who work on the program, their families and the news media as part of a "family day" event held at the company's sprawling aircraft parts

The Air Force had to give special approval to LTV to let outsiders into the building, which had been off-limits to everyone except workers and officials with security clearances

ACTON, Texas (AP) — The one thing keeping Hood County authorities from having an open-and-shut case in the slaying of a Fort Worth auto shop owner is the lack of a body, of-

'It will be tougher than nails without it," to get a conviction, said Richard Hattox, Hood County district attorney.

Norman Duane Watson, 39 who used to work at Burns Automotive, was charged May 30 with killing Troy Burns.

Burns' abandoned automobile was found last year with a bloodstain on the rear seat, said Gordon Leavines, a Hood County Sheriff's Depart ment investigator. Authorities speculate his body was buried along the Brazos River.

At least two other suspects are still being sought.

But chances of a conviction, without a body, are "very, very slim," Leavines said. "You've got to find the body. You need clinical evidence of foul play.

And the potential for locating the remains is "slim to none unless we get some information," said Leavines, who wants to use a trained dog to find the body.

Experts: Gulf blast bigger threat than '79 oil well spill

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil from a fire-ravaged supertanker, listing today near Galveston, could soil beaches and marshes in a wide area between Freeport and Corpus Christi in a bigger spill than that from a Mexican well blowout, government officials and environmentalists sav.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Sunday the burning Norwegian tanker Mega Borg, with its cargo of 38 million gallons of African crude oil, is a bigger threat to the Texas coast than the huge Ixtoc oil spill of Seasonal currents and forecast winds could direct spills from the tanker to beaches and marshes between Freeport and Corpus Christi, said Debby Payton, an oceanographer with NOAA's Hazardous Materials Response Branch in Seattle.

If oil invaded the state's bay areas, it could have disastrous effects on shellfish and bird colonies. Toxic materials in the oil threaten birds and other wildlife. 'This couldn't have happened at a worse time of year," said Gary Clark, president of the Houston Audubon Society. "This is breeding season for many wading birds who breed on islands out there in the bay," Clark said. "If it got into the (Galveston) bay it could be disastrous, if it gets and two others were missing and presumed dead.

Spills with an estimated 7,000 gallons of oil and engine fuel today stretched one mile long north of the vessel and about 20 miles long to the south. Prevailing currents and winds should push the oil towards a 150- to 200-mile stretch of Texas coast between Freeport and Corpus Christi, environmentalists say.

They say light crude oil leaking from the Mega Borg could kill marine life in one of the Gulf's most important commercial fishing regions.

of Galveston. Two crewmen died into estuaries that are breeding places for birds as well as fish ... It could devestate some of the breeding colonies.'

Clark said the Audubon Society, which has about 4,500 local members, is monitoring the situation and would muster volunteers to help combat a spill if it hit the beaches

Mesquite could become lifesaver in central India

much-maligned mesquite tree, which has resisted all efforts of extermination in South Texas, may become a lifesaver for people in Central India, says a visiting scientist.

KINGSVILLE (AP) — The research program on genetic improvement of mesquites in both

The Kleberg institute also has the Center for Semi-Arid Forest Resources. The center has held conferences with worldwide scientists concerned with wood

Harsh said he is one of 130 scientists from the institute who are with the Caesar Kleberg Wildlife researching methods to improve life in the arid zone, which includes They discussed a cooperative five provinces stretching from Punjab in the north to the Karnataka province in South India. "It is all dry land with an average temperature of about 90 degrees during the hot season," Harsh told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

The same type of weather brought Harsh to South Texas to meet with Felker about mesquite, which also grows in India.

Felker is internationally known for his work with mesquite. He is the developer of the thornless mes-quite and has served as a consultant to several foreign countries in developing mesquite as a fuel and food source. He also has championed mesquite as lumber suitable for home construction and home furnishings.

Harsh said mesquite was first imported to India in about 1817 and planted in arid and semi-arid areas, mainly for sand dune control along the arid zone's coastal areas along the Arabian Sea.

"The blowing sand was the biggest hazard to our crops," Harsh said. "The mesquite trees provided protection against the wind.'

Over the years, Harsh said, natives have developed other uses for mesquite,

'The wood is our main source of fuel for cooking; the twigs, with their thorns, are used by farmers for fencing around their homes as protection against animals, and the mesquite pods are boiled and dried and become a favorite sweet for our children," Harsh said.

Sematech bids farewell to founder Robert Noyce

government-industry computer consortium Sematech said their final farewells on Saturday to the late Robert Noyce, whom they dubbed the "Father of Silicon Valley."

Nearly all 600 of Sematech's Austin employees turned out for the ceremony for Noyce, who revolutionized electronics by coinventing the semiconductor.

Noyce, 62, who died June 3 after suffering a heart attack at his Austin home, sought to revive American chip-making as head of the consortium of 14 U.S. semiconductor and computer companies.

Company officials were adamant that the ceremony was to be upbeat and not considered a wake. "I think it's entirely appropriate for us to laugh this morning, for us to applaud, for us to cry," said Charles Sporck, Sematech About 800 people, including other chip industry officials, Noyce family members, U.S. Rep. J.J. 'Jake' Pickle, and Japanese journalists paid their respects to Noyce. Sematech provided the crowd with breakfast rolls, punch and soft drinks. Many executives also wore Noyce T-shirts, which proclaimed the late Sematech executive to be a "teen idol.

The ceremony also featured videos of Noyce, a Silicon Valley pioneer, and testimonials from friends and family.

Sematech employees acknowledged that the ceremony was an unusual tribute to a hightech industry official, but said his contributions to chip manufacturing warranted the effort

'His inventions literally changed life on this planet," said Sematech spokesman Joe Stroop.

Other employees were impressed with Noyce's ability to mingle with them on the job. "He ate in the cafeteria with us," said Harriett Sickels, a manufacturing

Kenji Fukasawa, Houston bureau chief of the Japan Economic Journal, said Noyce enjoyed tremendous popularity in Japan and the Japanese public has followed memorial events after his death very closely.

The Japanese also are speculating on Sematech's future after Noyce's death, he said.

Noyce was slated to step down as Sematech chief executive before his death. In April, a search began to replace Noyce, who had agreed informally to be Sematech's chairman once a new chief executive was chosen, Stroop said.

After becoming chief executive in 1988, Noyce worked to gain support for the research consortium both within the microelectronics industry and in the federal government.

Noyce and Jack S. Kilby, a scientist at Texas Instruments Inc., invented the integrated circuit in separate research efforts in the late 1950s. At the time, Noyce was working for Fairchild Semiconduc-

Noyce co-founded Intel Corp., the nation's third-largest semiconductor producer, in 1968. His cofounder, Gordon E. Moore, remembered how hard it was for the electronics industry to accept the integrated circuit.

"It wasn't immediately acceptable to the customers," he recalled. "But Bob had a solution. He told people to go out and sell them for $1 a piece. It was an argument (the customers) couldn't counter we couldn't begin to make them for $1 a piece at the time.'

Mexico, U.S. prepare for talks on free trade

WASHINGTON (AP) - The tonight. United States and Mexico are preparing to open preliminary talks on a free trade agreement after concluding that each would derive "substantial and long-term benefit" from such an accord.

President Bush and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari endorsed the concept of a free trade pact at a private White House dinner meeting Sunday night.

A formal announcement on the start of discussions was expected today, U.S. officials said. A preliminary draft said an agreement to lift tariffs and other trade barriers between the nations would be 'a "powerful engine for economic development.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said after the dinner that Bush and Salinas "believe the United States and Mexico would each derive substantial and longterm benefits from a comprehensive, bilateral trade agreement.'

Salinas scheduled meetings today with Secretary of State James A. Baker III and members of Congress and planned to make a strong pitch for increased foreign investment when he speaks to a gathering of top U.S. business executives

Salinas initially was cool to the idea of a free trade agreement with the United States but now he says an economic takeoff in Mexico will not be possible without it.

His change of heart apparently occurred after his efforts to seek foreign investment from Europe fell far short of expectations

"Mexico will not be left out of the new world configuration," Salinas said last month. "The speed of the changes requires decisive answers on all fronts, in all markets.

Two-way trade with Mexico is about $52 billion a year but experts say there is potential for a substantial increase, given the barriers to trade in both countries, particular-

The demobilization process began May 7 and was to have been completed by Sunday. But it was interrupted twice by the Contras — once by concern over the stability of the government of President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro and once over a false report of a massacre of unarmed Contras.

A political gamble

A funny thing happened on Helmut Kohl's way to the presidency of a united Germany. Since the Berlin Wall began to figuratively crumble, public opinion polls have shown that the West German chancellor was the preference of East and West Germans to lead a unified Sensing a delay in a vote might prevent him from heading a single Germany, Kohl now wants the unity election in December, six months sooner than he planned.

The politically savvy Kohl is not waiting to get a firm figure on unification costs. He wants the prestige of being the first unified German leader since World War II. Delay, he knows, could be deadly for him.

Besides the threat of defecting West German voters, Kohl has to consider the East German voters. . . (His) backing could erode if expected massive unemployment sends East Germans rushing to the arms of the Social Democrats who traditionally appeal to disadvantaged

The West German chancellor will try everything he can to get elected president of a unified Germany in 1990. He knows that come 1991 he may no longer be the favorite.

The impact of suppression

When the late Chou En-lai, Chinese Communist elder statesman, was asked to assess the impact of the French Revolution of 1789, he is said to have answered: "Too soon to tell." No doubt he would scorn attempts to capture the meaning of Tiananmen Square after just one

Yet it is fair to speculate. We are convinced, for example, that the brutal suppression of peaceful prodemocracy demonstrators by China's communist government a year ago. . .helped prevent a similar use of force in Eastern Europe.

The Tiananmen Square massacre occurred at a key moment in the unfolding ferment of European communism. We don't know exactly why Moscow decided to let Eastern Europe go. Generational change in the leadership is surely fundamental. But we suspect it helped that the images of Tiananmen Square were fresh in Soviet leaders' minds when they had to choose between holding Eastern Europe by force and watching it break free. It should be emphasized that nobody exactly knows what sort of an animal . . . Yeltsin is; his views on many policies are contradictory and confused.

Equally important to remember is that. Yeltsin has actually been elected by the people through landslide victories in legislative races. . . Gorbachev, on the other hand, has never had to undergo an open, contested

Perhaps . . . Gorbachev will take the Yeltsin election as a sign that he's running out of time, and so needs to step up the pace of reform.

Loophole should be closed

To the average person, it is unfortunate when a whitecollar criminal avoids prison, but it is at least understandable when the price for that avoidance is to pay restitution to the persons victimized. Thus a swindler could pay back the millions of dollars he stole and get a light sentence or no prison time at all.

Well, the U.S. Supreme Court has just thrown a little monkey wrench into the equation. The court, by a 7-2 vote, decided that criminals may avoid paying restitution if they file bankruptcy, since the bankruptcy law makes no mention of an exception for court-ordered restitution.

The court probably reads the law correctly, but the law is wrong. Congress should fix this loophole before the courts are faced with dozens of white-collar criminals from the S&L collapse, all accepting restitution with their fingers crossed behind them.

Survival of the spotted owl

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

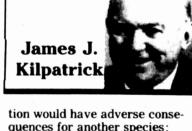

WASHINGTON — In the summer of 1987, two environmentalist organizations petitioned the Fish and Wildlife Service to list the northern spotted owl as an endangered species. After three years of litigation and negotiation, the matter comes to a head this month. The issue immediately affects only the Pacific Northwest, but it poses questions of national

For the record: The spotted owl is a medium-sized owl, maybe a foot high, that dwells primarily in the old-growth forests of Washington, Oregon and northern California. These forests are characterized by trees at least 200 years old. Over the past 150 years, owing to logging and to forest fires, the owl's natural habitat has been reduced by 60 percent.

There is no statistically reliable estimate of the remaining population. Wildlife biologists place the number of surviving pairs between 1,500 and 2,000. If the owl's habitat continues to disappear at the present rate, the species is headed for extinction in the foreseeable future. For that reason, the Fish and Wildlife Service last year recommended that the spotted owl be classified as a "threatened" species. By June 23 the service must decide if that recommendation should be formally approved.

In that event, the protective provisions of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 would be triggered. The Department of Interior would have to suspend all logging on federal lands known to be the home of spotted owls. Indeed, no agency of government, federal or state, could take any action that would have adverse consequences for the species.

For a number of logging communities, especially in western Oregon, a "threatened" classifica-quences for another species: Homo sapiens, man. It is a vast oversimplification to define the conflict in terms of the survival of 2,000 owls on the one hand or 25,000 jobs on the other, but politically the issue has become so polarized.

On May 20, President Bush was in Portland. There he spoke to a partisan fund-raising breakfast. He remarked that it will take a lot of work to protect the planet's wildlife "without throwing hardworking citizens out of a job." He continued:

"I reject those who would ig nore — totally ignore the economic consequences of the spotted owl decision. (Applause). The lobs of many thousands of Oregonians and whole communities are at stake. But I also think that we ought to reject those who don't recognize their obligation to protect our delicate ecosystem. Common sense tells us to find a needed balance. And together, I am convinced that we can work to find that balance.'

The subject came up again at a photo opportunity with Bob Williams, a Republican candidate for a House seat in Washington. The president reiterated his desire to find a balanced solution He was interested in the spotted owl, "very much so," but he was also interested in "the human equation," in jobs and the American family. "We've just simply got to find a way not to throw any of these people out of

Now, if the president seriously meant that word "any," the spot-ted owl is in trouble. Of greater importance, the Endangered Species Act itself is in trouble, for there is no way that a threatened or endangered species may be protected without some adverse consequences for "the human

Is it possible to find a compromise that both loggers and environmentalists could live with? Prospects are not bright. On May 23 a Senate subcommittee reviewed a massive report that had been compiled by a blue-ribbon committee chaired by Jack Ward Thomas, chief research wildlife biologist of the Forest Service. The Thomas Report calls for creation of large habitat conservation areas in which logging would be prohibited.

Sens. Mark Hatfield of Oregon and Brock Adams of Washington straddled the issue: They came down unequivocally in favor of both the owl and the people. Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming was not so tactiul. He ridiculed the Thomas Report as "one of the most outrageous examples of the abuse of science and public policy I have ever seen." He found the recommendations "utterly unacceptable to the American people, except for the hot-tub crowd with their special agenda.

For the moment, there it stands. My own principal interest," as a conservative member of the hot-tub crowd, lies in preservation of the Endangered Species Act. It must not be sacrificed to the "human equation." If the spotted owl goes, so goes the act. And over the long haul, to state the matter bluntly, the survival of the act is more important than the survival of the jobs. Copyright 1990 Universal Press

A new world threat

By MARC SCHWARZ

Forget banning automatic rifles, all you gun control activists. Now there's a new threat on the streets of America, something so deadly, so diabolically malicious that words can't even begin to describe it. But I'll try anyway.

It's turtles "Turtles?" the inquisitive reader might ask. "You mean like Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, those subversive, anarchist, Communist, satanic, reptilian comic creatures that have corrupted my precious child and turned him to the Dark Side?' Nope.

"Then you must mean some kind of infestation, like one of the plagues that hit those people who dressed funny and rode around in chariots in that old movie with Yul Brynner and Charleton Heston? Wrong

I'm talking about armed robbery, repto-style

When Domino's Pizza delivery man Troy Brewer approached a seemingly innocuous-looking phone booth in the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs, he was confronted by two men - and a turtle.

The pair held the turtle -asnapping one, Brewer said - near his face and demanded money. One of the thugs told Brewer, "Don't move or you're going to

"That sucker was going to bite me," a shell-shocked (sorry, couldn't resist) Brewer told police later. "They put him right up to my face. While Brewer was held helpless before the jaws of death (again my apologies, but I couldn't resist one either) one of the croo purloined the delivery man's pouch, which contained some $50. Then the robbers and Brewer's cold-blooded assailant made their getaway.

Fortunately, Brewer was able to give authorities a description of his captor.

"I guess the diameter on that sucker was 10 or 12 inches," he said. "It was a big, huge, ugly turtle.

Unfortunately, it wasn't a very good description.

Police have not reported any success in tracking down the thieves, but the faithful reader can rest assured I will pass along any developments in the Great Turtle Robbery as soon as they become available.

It is also presently unclear whether the turtle was the brains of the operation, or only an accomplice.

It is my personal belief that this smarmy reptile is in fact the leader of a large, well-organized network that will soon spring its vile schemes on an unsuspecting populace. It could conceivably be that he is actually responsible for economic disaster, governmental corruption and civil discord across the globe. It could be that he's plotting world domination, that he intends to set himself up as an absolute dictator and call himself the Great and Powerful

It also could be that I have an overactive imagination.

Anyway, better to play it safe. So be warned, my fellow citizens. Do not look lightly on the lizard that seems to have been eyeing your home lately; he may be scoping it out for some of his buddies. Take precautions: change your locks, close your windows, and lay in a good stock of cats.

Remember, there are a lot more of them than there are of us And what about bugs? What if all these villainous reptiles have forged an alliance with the bugs? Have you any idea how many of them there are? Multiple billions, at the very least; probably trillions! So you had better stock up on some industrial-strength Raid while you're out getting the dance craze. The really sexy thing about the Lambada, according to an article in the current issue of Connoisseur, is not so much the position of the dancers as it is the costumes worn by professional Lambada dancers.

All things considered, though, I guess I would rather be held up by a snapping turtle than some loon with an Uzi. At least you can count on the turtle to have some sense, after all.

The beautiful Brazilian girls who dance the Lambada on television wear tight bandeaux and tiny miniskirts, while the boys wear cotton trousers with either bare chests or loose tank tops that show off bare chests.

In Brazil, "lambada" is loosely applied to a wide variety of dances and songs that have been around a long time.

French record promoter Jean Karakos and filmmaker Olivier Lorsac "discovered" it and created a European version. They snapped up rights to 400 songs. registered the name Lambada, simplified the moves and formed an Afro-Caribe pop band, Kaoma, to record a single.

Thanks to Lorsac's dance video, "Lambada" rose to the top of the charts in 15 European countries and sold more than 4 million American hucksters moved in with Lambada movies, T-shirts. videos, fashion lines and a bunch of happy dance studios.

The nuttiest event was a Lambada wedding on Feb. 14, St. Valentine's Day, when 14 couples were to be married on Manhattan's 14th Street. One couple proved to be a no-show, so there were only 13.

The brides and grooms Lambadaed across 14th Street and up the aisle at a dance club to exchange vows. Afterwards, they cut a Lambada cake, with tiny brideand-groom dolls on spiraling

Anyone can learn the Lambada. The basics are easy: three twisting steps and a "hold" to a bright two-fourth count (one-andtwo-and).

What can make it difficult are the stylish embellishments: figureeight hip rotations in double-time, gentle body bounces in half-time, snaps and shimmies off the beat.

Will America be Lambadamized? Probably not.

The 16-to-25-year-olds who jam the clubs move in large tribal groups, where the closed couple position is impossible. The dancing they do is as tough as the backbeat of the punk-clubhouse music that

Karen Thompson, a New York fashion designer, is working on a fall collection of wool dog sweaters mirroring the latest human fashions gracing magazine covers.

'People are into eating right, looking good and staying healthy. So naturally, it's not such a big thing anymore to want the same things for their pets," she said.

A dog wardrobe at Thompson's two New York shops begins at $150: $60 for a hand-knit wool sweater and $90 for a "Chanel-style" lead and collar made of hand-braided leather and gold.

But Thompson said the price is worth the stunning fashion statement of a well-dressed owner and matching pet.

"I really care about the pets that come in to my store," said Thompson. "I can dress them up and make them very pretty. It's fun to take care of them and make them look good.'

stamps. Lawlis said none of the programs at WTO are funded through the community, all through the state. On the local level, volunteers give time, the city donates space and other local agencies work with the organization on projects and referrals, she said. A client profile with income verification begins the process, which will be followed up thoroughly, Lawlis said. Last year WTO spent $8,000 in Howard County on the energy programs, she Marianne Brown, Director of Northside Community Center said they can offer help for utility payments as funds are available. Not a state-supported agency, the center depends on donations, local support and grants, Brown said.

Ten area churches and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) are among the regular sources which help fund the agency's programs. Qualifying residents who have trouble meeting utility payments can find help in a crisis, Brown said.

When they get a cut-off notice, we'll help. We have an application process which includes income verification, and we check their pay record with the (utility) company.

Payments are usually limited to once a year in exchange for a minimum of two hours of work at the center, Brown said. The work rule is strictly followed

'Everyone must do the work," Brown said. "We have a lady in the card file who got help in 1987 and she hasn't been allowed to use the center since. She hasn't done the work." She said the purpose of the work requirement is to give recipients a way to repay the community which helped them in time

Other guidelines are set, but can be bent in special circumstances, she said. "With all of our programs we try to fit the needs of the community. We get our rules from our board of directors, all people in the community. That means I can make some decisions about where to give the aid.'

Clients who need help a second under the jurisdiction of WTO.

time are not automatically turned away, Brown said. "I try to judge the circumstances. They need to tell me what is going on.

The center cannot assist with deposits needed for some utility companies, Brown said. Because the deposit is often returned in cash when the power is turned off, there is too much room for abuse of such aid, she said.

Other programs at Northside Community Center are: rent assistance, furniture and clothing supplies for families, free diapers, a daily lunch for people living on the street, and legal assistance. Brown said the programs served more than 3,000 people last year. The center is located at 110 N.E. Eighth Street, 263-2673.

WTO also offers a homeless program, child welfare aid, weatherization for homes, transportation for the elderly and handicapped, day care and job training among its programs. It is located at 1000 Eleventh Place. 267-9536. The Martin-Glasscock Neighborhood Center in Stanton offers the same assistance programs

Forsan ISD to lose funding gradually

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

FORSAN - The Forsan Independent School District will not face dire straits next year under the recently passed school reform law, Superintendent J.F. Poynor said.

'As I understand it, no school will lose next year. We will actually gain just slightly over what was budgeted." The district will lose, however, at a gradually increasing rate in the years following, he said.

Next year Forsan will receive about $250,000 in state funds, Poynor said. The following year, the cutbacks begin, starting with a 25 percent reduction, upped to 50 percent the next year and finally 75 percent cut in state funds. That will leave Forsan with only $62,500 in state funds by 1993.

"It won't hurt us as much that way, with gradual losses," Poynor said. "It will be somewhat easier to budget. We were afraid they were going to take what we'd already budgeted for next year. I'm relieved about that."

Poynor had expressed his fear at a recent board meeting that the district might lose as much as $100,000 in funding next year. "That would have been real trouble," he said.

The total loss of 75 percent of fungoing to happen.'

ding over the next four years will result in a 6-cent to 7-cent increase in the tax rate, Poynor said. 'However, all things considered, this was as good as we could have expected to do. Other reforms included in the new law are not likely to hurt the district, either, he said. "As I understand it, we will stack up well in most areas, except for drop-outs. That has been a bad situation in Forsan."

The new plan bases the amount of a school's funds partly on the number of students in attendance.

Poynor said he is glad that each district will be required to keep attendance records monthly instead of once a year. "I don't forsee any problem there. We've been doing it all along and I believe this is a fair way to do it."

Poynor said his greatest concern is that the reform law will be struck down in court before it ever goes into action by those who feel it does not go far enough to equalize funding among districts.

"For one thing, the legislature missed the (June 1) deadline, and they did not do what they were ordered to do. I'm concerned that we are still looking at a master plan. We're just not sure what is

Brown, a Fort Worth security guard, formerly of Big Spring, was severely injured in a one-car accident in Fort Worth on April 3. The driver of the vehicle was under the influence of alcohol and failed to control his speed, according to a police report.

The report states that Brown was standing in front of his car on Jacksboro Highway near his home in the early morning hours when James R. Moore of Fort Worth lost control of his car. The car reportedly struck a curb and became airborne.

Lt. Alvin Allcon of the Fort Worth Police Department said Moore, charged with DWI, will most likely not face additional charges due to Brown's death. A call from the Herald was the first notification of the death they received this morning, he said.

Allcon said if Moore pleaded guilty to the DWI charge there will be no additional charges possible, as the case appeared to have been resolved last month. An investigator found at that time that Brown was listed in fair condition at a Fort Worth hospital, he said.

It was a big game.

But it was just a game. Thomas bore a sad secret, one that none of his teammates - not even Dumars - knew. Dumars' father, after a long illness, had died 11/2 hours before Sunday's game

"You're looking at a guy who is real happy," Thomas said. "Then, all of a sudden, his world's going to be shattered.' Dumars and his wife Debbie agreed that if his father died shortly before a game, he should not be told until afterward. Two minutes after the final buzzer signaled victory, she told him in a phone call. Dumars left immediately to nent," Malone said, "but there's no good time for dying. Joe's going to miss him. He was Joe's hero.'

Dumars had just played his best game of the series. He had 36 points in the first two games, but wasn't a factor when the games were decided down the stretch.

Perhaps slowed by a groin injury suffered in the Eastern Conference finals, he hadn't matched his performance in last years Finals, when he was the most valuable player in Detroit's four-game sweep of the Los Angeles Lakers.

But on Sunday, he led a backcourt trio that scored 75 points in Detroit's biggest offensive output of the playoffs. Thomas had 21 and Vinnie Johnson, who had made 3-of-25 shots in his previous four games, sank 9-of-13 for another 21. 'The press said I was in a slump.

Drexler had 24 points and Porter 20 in a backcourt that finished with just 49. The Blazers were led by Jerome Kersey with 27.

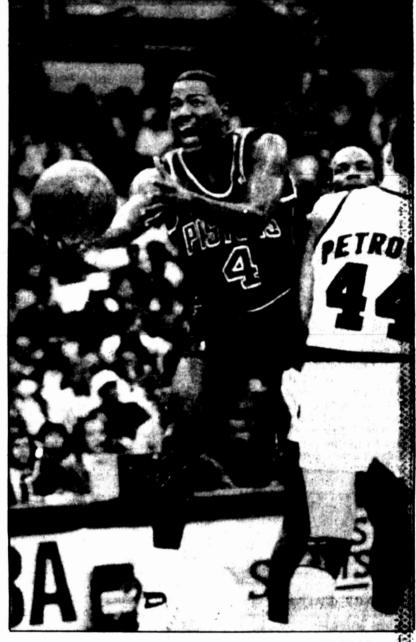

It was the first time this playoff season the Pistons have given up 100 points and still won. Detroit has 12-0 record in playoff games when it has allowed fewer than 100 points.

The Pistons played without Dennis Rodman, the NBA's defensive player of the year, who has a sprained ankle.

'The whole team played better and was focused to pick up the slack for the loss of Dennis,' Pistons forward John Salley said. 'We've concentrated on not getting ourselves too deep in a hole.

The Blazers stole the homecourt advantage with a 106-105 overtime win Thursday night in Auburn Hills, Mich. Detroit hadn't won in Portland since Oct. 19, 1974, and the Blazers were 9-0 at home in the playoffs. They hoped to win their first title since 1977 without heading back East.

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — After 40 years of waiting, the United States returned to the World Cup. And it looked like the Americans were 40 years behind the rest of the soccer world.

Czechoslovakia routed the U.S. team 5-1 Sunday. The Czechoslovaks dedicated the victory to President Vaclav Havel and Civic Forum, which led the nation from Communism to democracy.

But the United States could only declicate itself to improving against Italy on Thursday night in

"Everyone said we would lose, and we did lose," U.S. captain Michael Windischmann said. "We've got to come out in these next two games and show that we could play.

Bob Gansler, the American coach, said the debacle wasn't all

"I saw positive notes we can work on for the next match," he

But the tune was mostly negative. The United States gave up two penalty kicks and midfielder Eric Wynalda was ejected seven minutes into the second half for pushing a Czechoslovak while play was stopped. Czechoslovakia outshot the Americans 24-7 and physically dominated with 22 firsthalf fouls.

Tomas Skuhravy scored twice and Michal Bilek, Ivan Hasek and Milan Luhovy once each as the Czechoslovaks ended a sevengame World Cup winless streak dating to 1962. It was the worst defeat for the United States team in 56 international games, since a 5-0 loss to England in 1985.

Even Czechoslovakia coach Jozef Venglos was surprised at how easy it was.

FLORENCE, Italy — Steve Trittschuh (right) of the United States, and Lobomir Moravcik of Czechoslovakia collide during World Cup play at Comunale Stadium.

"We expected a little bit more from the U.S. team," he said. "At the beginning, the U.S. team played us even, but then we started to play to our potential.

Defensive mistakes often left goalkeeper Tony Meola helpless. He made aggressive, acrobatic saves every few minutes, but often was caught out of position. He stop-

There were many Americans among the crowd of 33,266 in Stadio Comunale, and some of them sat in the stands wrapped in the Stars and Stripes with red, white and blue painted on their faces.

Howard cowgirls gunning for national title

REPORTS

BOZEMAN, Mont. - The Howard College women's rodeo team will be one of teams that will be vying for a national title as the 41st Annual College National Finals Rodeo kicks off its week-long competition here today. The Howard College women's team, composed of Robin Wardlaw, Jana Pierce, Jody Heath and Rachel Merck, will be trying to become the first HC rodeo team ever to win a national title. Wardlaw, Pierce and Heath will all compete in the goat tying, breakaway roping and barrel racing. Merck is the alternate. Heath, a freshman from Lorena, is ranked fourth nationally in barrel racing, and 12th

More than 300 competitors from across the country will compete in the premier college rodeo event of the year at Montana State University's Brick Breeden Fieldhouse through Saturday

There's no solid favorite for the men's team title, where Odessa College of Texas won't be back to defend its title.

After winning the 1989 title behind Ty Murray's 909-point performance, Odessa found itself shut out of this year's rodeo after finishing third in the Southwest Region race, 15 points short of a return

Montana State finished second last year, but half of its points were scored by Ken Lesegrav, who completed his eligibility last season.

In the women's division, several top competitors from last year will be back to contend for the all-around cowgirl honors, including Julie Adair and Holly Foster of defending team champion Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo

Although every school entered in the rodeo will start at zero in the team race, the men from West Hills College of Coalinga, Calif., did amass the most points in any of the regional standings -3,645.81

West Hills has three competitors - Jeff Shearer, Brandon Moreno and Roy Boothe - ranked in the top 10 of the national all-around cowboy standings.

Another tough team in the men's division will be the College of Southern Idaho, with all-around teader Zane guest speaker at the Seaside High School graduation and emphasized the importance of education and physical fitness.

SEASIDE, Ore. (AP) - Arnold Schwarzenegger was the surprise

When the actor and former Mr. Universe appeared at the podium, "I think everybody just about swallowed their teeth," senior Brandy Bierly said. Bierly then gave the senior speech to the class of 90 teen-agers.
"Mr. Schwarzenegger was a very tough act to follow," he said.

Afterwards Schwarzenegger shook hands with students and kissed some of the girls.

Schwarzenegger is filming his new movie, "Kindergarten Cop," in Clatsop County. His appearance was the handiwork of Jamie Burns, a junior whose mother is an extra in "Kindergarten Cop.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President George Bush, jazz musician Chick Corea, singer Vic Damone, actor Jim Nabors.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A conflict could arise between your work and social obligations. Any financial problems require careful handling. Consult experts. Develop new strategies for staying within your budget. Entertain simply.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): "A penny saved is a penny earned" should be your credo today. Complete old projects before starting new ones. Resist an urge to go on a buying binge. Recycle favorite wardrobe items.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tact and patience will help you deal with moody higher-ups. Do not be intimidated by someone who is aggressive. Their bark is worse than their bite. Be helpful to your siblings and parents. CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make a special effort to be a better listener. A friend will let fall several clues to an old mystery. Protect loved one's secret as if it were your own.

Try new things. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Slow down and relax! Familiar faces are the best company. Putter around your home or garden. A social engagement is postponed at the last minute. Get in touch with faraway loved ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Catch up on household chores. Check for fire hazards — and put fresh batteries in smoke alarms. A conversation with an old friend could provide you with a new sense of direction. Forge ahead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put your best foot forward. Someone who has not commanded much attention in the past is now a source of interest. Help the person who shoulders most of the household chores.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Set aside some quiet time for studying or reading. A friendship may develop when you least expect it. Pursue a romantic interest to a happy conclusion. Some couples decide to set the

Teen-agers outgrow troubles

NEW YORK (AP) — Adolescents with personality disturbances serious enough to be considered disorders usually are just going through "a phase" and outgrow them in a couple of years, a study presented to psychiatrists suggests.

The study was presented to the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association by David Bernstein, a psychologist at the Bronx Veterans Administration Medical Center and the Mount Sinai School of Medicine

He cautioned that for other youths with personality disturbances, the troubles can be an early warning of long-standing difficulties Personality disorders included:

• Paranoid, a tendency to view the actions of others as deliberately demeaning or threatening. Schizoid, in which a person neither wants nor enjoys close relationships, and often appears cold and aloof Schizotypal, a pervasive pattern of peculiarities in thoughts and behavior such as superstitiousness, bizarre fantasies and preoccupations

 Histrionic, which involves excessive emotionality and attentionseeking. Narcissistic, which includes a grandiose sense of self-importance, extreme sensitivity to criticism and inability to recognize how other people feel. • Borderline, an instability in self-image, mood and relationships with others. Avoidant, a pervasive pattern of discomfort in social settings, timidity and extreme fear of disapproval • Dependent, which involves submissive behavior in a variety of contexts. • Obsessive-compulsive, a pattern of perfectionism and inflexibility in a variety of contexts.

• Passive-aggressive, a pervasive tendency to resist meeting social and business obligations by such indirect means as procrastination or claiming to forget do to things.

Prevention magazine. 'While many adults understand the benefits of particular vitamins and minerals, substantial numbers have little knowledge of the health effects of such nutrients as Vitamins A, B and E," the report concluded.

Burning tanker in danger of sinking

By MICHAEL GRACZYK Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON (AP) Firefighters today tried to keep a burning supertanker with 38 million gallons of oil from sinking in the Gulf of Mexico. The ship's aft deck was just 5 feet above the surface, and blazing crude was spilling into the water Coast Guard officials said firefighters today would use foam to try to smother the blaze aboard the 853-foot Mega Borg, crippled 57 miles southeast of Galveston. Some 30,000 gallons of foam was brought in during the night.

The Norwegian ship was hit by an explosion and fire Saturday while some of its cargo was being transferred to a smaller tanker. Two of the 41 crewmen died, two were missing and presumed dead and 17 were injured, none seriously.

Little if any of the African light crude spilled initially or during small explosions later Saturday and early Sunday. But on Sunday afternoon, five powerful blasts within 20 minutes ripped through the ship, sending flaming crude into the air and water.

The blaze collapsed the ship's superstructure, which remained engulfed in flames. Columns of thick smoke could be scene nearly 40 miles away.

The stern dropped 58 feet since dicating either the cargo had shifted or the ship was taking on

Governors' races pivotal for women

By JILL LAWRENCE Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The 1990 elections may not greatly increase the number of women in governor's mansions and Congress, but female candidates hope to smash a symbolic barrier by winning the top jobs in Texas and California.

Democratic governor nominees Ann Richards in Texas and Dianne Feinstein in California are the bright spots in a year that, at best, may bring incremental progress in electing more women to top-level

Three women already are governors of smaller states, but claiming control in major states like Texas and California would "break a big thick glass ceiling," said Sharon Rodine, president of the bipartisan National Women's Political Caucus.

While numerical gains at the top are likely to be slim, more women than ever are running for state legislatures, statewide offices and Congress, according to the caucus. These candidates are receiving tens of thousands of dollars from a growing number of groups promoting women's candidacies.

A slick about one mile long north of the Mega Borg and one about 20 miles long to the south were visible. The spills were estimated to contain 10,000 to 100,000 gallons, said Petty Officer Mark Sedwick. He said a plane dropped oil disperant late Sunday

He said the Coast Guard was satisfied with efforts so far to contain the spill and fire, and "confident that we can put this fire out today · Currents and winds were expected to push the oil toward a 150-to 200-mile stretch of coast between Freeport and Corpus Christi. But Coast Guard Capt. Thomas C. Greene said the currents were expected to keep the spill from coming ashore.

On Sunday, members of a salvage team hired by the ship's owners went aboard and shut off some valves to the ship's tanks before renewed explosions rocked the vessel. They also recovered the bodies of the two known fatalities. The team members got off the ship before the explosions. The cause of the explosions was

ELF, a Houston-based oil distributor which was going to market the tanker's cargo, is paying for the cleanup, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Howard J. Holmes

"Price variability is a major source of risk facing cotton producers," says an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Typically, farmers are in a better position to manipulate the factors that determine yields than the factors that determine prices.

The producer cannot control the price, but he can control how and when he prices. For farmers to understand how they can reduce their price risk, they must understand the alternative makerting strategies available to them.

To help farmers do this, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will conduct a two day workshop June 26-27 at the Dawson County Community Building at Lamesa. This in-depth session will include 12 hours of training and will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m each day. Knowing when to price his crop is one of the most difficult decisions farmers make all year. South Plains cotton farmers are currently having to make such decisions. They can price their cotton now, at some time before harvest, or wait and sell after harvest.

The most often-used method of pricing on the South Plains is the cash sale at harvest. This method is likely to require only limited storage and other selling costs, but the price received is dictated by the market at the time of the exchange and selling is not likley to result in the season's high price.

Recent strength in the cotton market, however, has provided area cotton farmers the opportunity to price new crop cotton 12 to 13 cents above loan. To use this opportunity, it is suggested farmers take advantage of available cash contracts.

The workshop here will provide market updates as well as basic training in various pricing alternative available to area cotton farmers. The cost of the workshop is $20. A notebook and materials on futures and options will be provided. Spouses are encouraged to attend (the $20 fee covers both). To register, pick up a form at your local county agent's office or call Richard Patterson, Extension Service Economist and Management Specialist at Fort Stockton, (915)

Dr. Carl Anderson. Extension Service Economist specializing in cotton marketing, from College Station, will be the featured speaker. Anderson has been a visible figure on the South Plains, conducting workshops and working with marketing clubs in the area. He has many years of experience in cotton marketing and maintains close ties with others in his specialty. Assisting Anderson will be Dr. Jackie Smith, Extension Service Economist in management at Lubbock.

The training session will include an introduction to how futures markets operate, an introduction to a commodity options and how to determine local market price from the futures price. Hedging a future price for cotton by using options as price insurance and how to hedge deficiency payments will also be covered as introduction to the more advanced topics. Estimating break-even price and using this in setting marketing objectives, pricing stategies — their advantages and disadvantages and a review for the current supply/demand estimates and market propects for cotton will be highlights of the workshop. Examples using futures and options markets will be practiced by the group to gain a working understanding of the mechanics of forward pricing.

For more information, contact your local County Extension Agent. Pre-registration of at least 15 people is required by June 15 or the workshop will be canceled.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national

"California and Texas are key in terms of presidential politics and reapportionment," said Jane Danowitz, executive director of the bipartisan Women's Campaign Fund. "These are not local posts. We are talking about chief executive officers for two of the largest entities in the country.'

The practical, powerbroker aspects of Feinstein and Richardy victories would be matched by their symbolic import, many women say.

> The one Democratic woman making a Senate bid this year, Josie Heath of Colorado, is expected to win her party nomination but faces a formidable opponent in GOP Rep. Hank Brown.

Three GOP women are quitting the House to run for Senate: Reps.

Claudine Schneider of Rhode Island, Lynn Martin of Illinois and Pat Saiki of Hawaii. Saiki is given the best shot at winning; her Democratic competitor is Daniel Akaka, who recently was elevated from the House to the Senate upon the death of Democratic Sen. Spark Matsunaga.

Schneider and Martin are putting a scare into two entrenched Democrats, Claiborne Pell and Paul Simon.

Longshot Senate candidates are M. Jane Brady, a Republican challenging Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., and Republican Christine Todd

Whitman, taking on Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.

There are 28 women in the 435-member House, including three certain departures by those running for the Senate. There also is speculation that Rep. Lindy Boggs, D-La., whose daughter is very ill, may retire this year.

In addition, a few incumbent women in the House could be vulnerable, among them Democrats Jill Long of Indiana and Jolene Unsoeld of Washington. On the plus side of the ledger, California Dem<sup>1</sup>2c<sup>3</sup>4at Maxine Waters is a shoo-in to win the seat being vacated by retiring Democratic Rep. Augustus Hawkins. There are a number of strong candidates among the more than 50 women running for Congress, and analysts are predicting a net gain of up to four seats.

The most encouraging sign to Rodine is the crowd of women running for statewide and state legislative offices that traditionally are jumping-off points for governor ample, four women besides Feinsstatewide office in California. Many women are looking to 1992 as a watershed year that could break the pattern of incremental gains at the federal level. Redistricting will open up new opportunities for women in states gaining House seats, and a large crop of incumbents is expected to retire because it will be the last year legislators can take their campaign war chests with them.

WASHINGTON — The Senate Agriculture Committee is going public this week with its disputes over price supports in the 1990 farm bill.

Meanwhile, the counterpart panel in the House is wrapping up its version of the legislation that sets agriculture policy for the next five years with completion of the conservation section of the bill

Both debates are scheduled for Tuesday. The House plan is to have a bill on the floor by June 25. The Senate is not as optimistic.

The big stumbling block in the Senate is over commodities. Most problems with other sections were resolved in closed meetings between the Democratic and Republican staffs and quickly approved in open sessions of the committee.

When the staffs couldn't resolve the commodity price support problems, committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., appointed a working group of himself and Sens. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb.; David Pryor, D-Ark.: Richard Lugar, R-Ind.; Bob Dole, R-Kan.; and Thad Cochran, R-Miss.

When that group couldn't solve the problems, Leahy decided to settle the matter through voting in
