Hang gliders to be available for photos

Contestants in the hang gliding competition set for June 29-July 1 will be available for interviews and photos tomorrow afternoon at the DPS hangar, Building 1101, at the airport, said a spokesman with the Chamber of Commerce.

The interview opportunity will begin at 1:30, and the hang gliders will practice their craft about 2, the spokesman said.

Workers injured in refinery fire

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Two workers were burned today, one critically, in an early-morning explosion and fire at the Southwestern Refinery Co.

Company spokesman Roger Clark said the cause of the 7 a.m. fire is still under investigation.

Officials at Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Christi say one worker, Juan Alaniz, is in critical condition, with third-degree burns.

Another employee, Joe Gonzalez, suffered minor injuries with first and second degree burns, the hospital said.

Clark says all non-essential personnel at Southwestern Refining Company were evacuated after the accident.

AIDS cases up in prison population

There are currently 443 prisoners in the Texas Department of Corrections who are HIV-positive, and this represents about 5.6 percent of the state's inmates who have been tested in the prison system's voluntary testing program, according to a recent report.

Of these, 45 percent contracted the infection through intravenous drug use and 20 percent through sexual contact with an infected person. The figures differ from those in the overall United States population, in which the majority of HIV-infection is transmitted through sexual contact and the greatest number of cases are in white males. These findings were presented by Richard Pollard, M.D., a professor of Internal Medicine and Microbiology at the University of Texas Medical Branch (UTMB) at Galveston at the fifth annual Gulf Coast Correctional Health Care Conference held June 14-15 at UTMB. This is the first time these statistics have been reported in a public forum.

There are currently 84 inmates at the Texas Department of Criminal Justice (TDCJ) Hospital in Galveston. Of these, eight (or almost 10 percent) reportedly suffer from Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) or have been found to be HIV-positive.

The numbers of TDCJ prisoners with AIDS or who are HIV-positive are increasing just as they are in the overall population, according to Dr. Pollard. He now sees 200 outpatients who have the disease per month at UTMB. The steadily increasing number of AIDS patients indicates the great need for more education, early medical intervention, and continued funding for AIDS research, he says.

New restrictions on 'Happy Hour'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission today approved new, restrictive "happy hour" rules for bars and restaurants across the state in an attempt to cut down on drunken driving.

The new rules, which become effective in late July, will eliminate two-for-one drinks and so-called "ladies' night" in which women drink free.

The restriction is not aimed at eliminating happy hour, but instead toward make it safer, said Joe Darnall, general counsel for the commission.

U.S. joins other nations sending aid to Iranians

By NEIL MacFARQUHAR
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran — Planes loaded with food, medicine and tents are converging on earthquake-stricken Iran from around the world, among them the first private American relief mission to the country in more than a decade.

Authorities now are faced with the difficult task of getting supplies into the affected areas. More than 60 aftershocks jolted the quake zone in northwestern Iran on Sunday, triggering landslides along one key relief route.

Tehran radio said Sunday that 68 relief aircraft had landed at Tehran's Mehrabad airport during a 24-hour period. Among them was a plane carrying medicine and other supplies from the United States.

Another plane carrying U.S. government aid was due today.

The shipment that arrived Sunday was the first of its kind to be accepted by Iran since the hostage crisis of 1979-80, when 52 Americans were held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Two countries that also have suffered devastating earthquakes in recent years, the Soviet Union and Mexico, were among those sending assistance to help victims of Thursday's quake.

Damaged books

Damages caused from a broken water pipe at the county courthouse on June 18 are estimated to be at $20,000, County Auditor Jackie Olson said this morning, with most of the damage occurring to law books in the law library on the third floor, she said. A soaked carpet has now been cleaned up. Some files were also damaged but "not a lot," she said.

LULAC rejects old guard, installs rival

By NANCY PLEVIN
For The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — LULAC members rejected their incumbent national president and his slate and installed his longtime rival during a convention punctuated with rowdy debate and allegations of corruption.

"It is obvious the organization wants its door and arms open to the new members," De Lara said in a gracious manner rarely seen during the four-day convention.

After four days of bitter infighting and battles for control of the 110,000-member organization, the old and new presidents pledged unity.

"I will give my full support to (new president) Jose Velez," Jose Garcia De Lara said after conceding the race.

Velez, who had been president for two terms, grasped De Lara's hand and said the two would work together.

"We are walking out of this convention united as one LULAC," Velez said after being chosen by acclamation.

Velez said during a news conference after the election that one of his first orders of business would be to return LULAC's national headquarters to Washington, D.C. The group is now based in San Antonio.

The 61st national convention of the League of United Latin American Citizens, at times on the verge of becoming more like a bar-room brawl, was rife with accusations of vote-buying and election fraud.

Proceedings stopped regularly during Sunday's general assembly while delegates tried to shout each other down in bursts of political enthusiasm over parliamentary procedure.

Disgruntled supporters of De Lara, vowing to return for next year's election scheduled for Chicago, accused Velez, a Las Vegas, Nev., entrepreneur, of using his wealth to buy the presidency.

Cora Esquivel, who had been the group's vice president for women during the past year, said, "The principles of LULAC were bought for."

Members of the Velez camp criticized De Lara, a San Antonio, Texas, architect, for using heavy-handed tactics such as suspension and expulsion of members in order to maintain power.

The real battle of the day centered around a dispute over whether 43 recently formed local LULAC councils, made up primarily of Velez supporters, would be admitted as voting delegates.

The elections bogged down for hours over the validity of the councils, the majority made up of Filipinos from California.

Velez supporters have said De Lara was abusing his power of office in trying to limit the number of delegates for Velez.

The De Lara camp had said LULAC's constitution calls for councils to be at least two-thirds Hispanic and that Velez had bought the new members to stack votes.

After hours of unruly debate, a roll call vote was ordered on the council issue. About 40 votes before

Septic tank violators may soon be ticketed

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Health Department Chief Sanitarian James Luck was advised to consult with the county attorney to allow the sheriff's department to issue citations for septic tank violations.

At a Commissioners Court meeting this morning Luck said he would like deputies to issue non-moving tickets for violation of a county ordinance passed in October.

Penalties would range from $20 to $200 for each day of each offense, County Judge John Coffee said.

"This is something I think you need to take up with the county attorney," Coffee told Luck. "I see no reason not to do this."

As many as 30 percent of county septic systems are unsafe, Luck estimates. There are at least a few county residents known to be in violation of the October order right now, he said.

"I'm not authorized to issue a ticket," Luck said. "Now I can go file out a warrant. But I don't want to put everyone in jail."

He said the Big Spring Police Department issues similar tickets for violations against city environmental ordinances. "They're doing it for other things," he said.

In formal action at today's meeting, commissioners voted to allow Luck to sign for services and supplies for the Health Department.

Luck's request follows the announced retirement of Big Spring-Howard County Health Department Acting Director Dr. Jack Woodall, effective Sept. 1.

The authorization for Luck to sign for such things as grants and supplies, including vaccines, is contingent upon the Big Spring City Council approving a similar resolution.

"The county and the city both support the county health unit. I know the city and county should both have a say-so," explained Coffee.

Council to review airport options

HERALD STAFF REPORT

City Council members will review the situation involving C-Bar Flying Service's announcement that it is closing, and the group will discuss the city's options.

City Manager Hal Boyd said he will tell the council "where we're at and what's happening" with C-Bar Flying Service during the council's regular meeting Tuesday. The meeting is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. at terminal building 1106 of the Big Spring McMahon/Wrinkle Airport.

The company announced Friday that it no longer can afford to stay open and plans to close at the end of the month. Boyd has said he is negotiating with operators from other communities to establish a new fixed-base operation at the airport. C-Bar provides fuel and airplane-related services at the airport.

At the meeting, the council also will consider applying for a $300,000 community development grant that the city will match with $130,000 in local funds. The item will be considered as an emergency resolution.

The city will ask for grant money from the Texas Department of Commerce Community Development fund to pay for street improvements on the west end. If the city is awarded the grant, it would match those funds with $130,000 from the capital fund.

In other agenda items, the council will:

Stormie faces more testing

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Stormie Jones, the longest surviving heart-liver transplant patient, is back for tests to see whether her body is again rejecting her second transplanted liver.

Episodes of rejection in transplant patients are fairly common.

The 13-year-old arrived Saturday night in Pittsburgh from her home in White Settlement, Texas.

She was in fair condition at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, a hospital statement said Sunday.

Stormie had suffered mild episode of liver rejection one month ago. She had flown May 20 to Children's after routine tests showed high liver enzyme levels, a sign of possible organ rejection. Her stay lasted a few days.

After that episode, doctors increased her intake of an experimental anti-rejection medicine, FK-506. The federal government has approved the use of the drug only at Children's and nearby Presbyterian-University Hospital.

In 1984, Stormie received the double transplant because of a congenital condition that gave her cholesterol levels 10 times higher than normal.

She received a second liver transplant early this year after hepatitis damaged her first donor liver.

Little girl's story not substantiated

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas police say they can't substantiate a 6-year-old's story that her mother was assaulted by an unidentified man before she fell 150 feet from a bridge.

Edna Sanchez told police she was walking home with her mother, Marcella Sanchez, 25, late Friday night when the woman fell 150 feet to her death from a bridge over the Trinity River.

The woman, who was eight months pregnant, had been trying to flag down a ride before falling, police said.

The girl told the Dallas Times Herald on Sunday that her mother was assaulted by a tall, mustachioed man in a dirty, white-colored shirt and black pants. She said the man struck her mother, knocking her down on the bridge and then began kissing her.

"My mommy told me to go back, but I didn't want to leave my mommy alone," the girl said. "I ran to the end of the bridge but I didn't run home. I didn't leave my mommy alone."

But the girl said another man came by, picked her up, and helped her call the police.

Detective Phil Harding said a truck driver saw Mrs. Sanchez climb onto the bridge railing and that she was waving her right arm when she apparently fell to her death. Harding said the truck driver saw no one else.

Battery explosion fatally burns man

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Big Lake man injured when a battery exploded Saturday night has died in a Lubbock Hospital.

Ruben Rodriguez had suffered third-degree burns over his entire body when a tank battery exploded in Merton. He died at 7:50 a.m. Sunday.

Funeral services will be held in Raymondville.

Rodriguez, who was an oil delivery company employee, was standing by a tanker truck when the explosion occurred. Witnesses said the impact threw him more than 100 feet from the truck.

Merton is 25 miles southwest of San Angelo.

More oil pumped off crippled ship

GALVESTON (AP) — More oil was pumped off the crippled super-tanker Mega Borg today as Coast Guard officials searched for remnants of an oil sheen that had threatened Texas beaches since a June 8 explosion racked the Norwegian vessel.

Coast Guard Chief Warrant Officer Howard Edmonds said today that the sheen is believed to be about 45 miles offshore from Sabine Pass.

"As far as the airborne radar, there has been no discernible sighting," Edmonds said. But he said it was too soon for the Coast Guard to say the oil was no longer a threat to Texas beaches.

Coast Guard officials said Sunday they were unable to spot the sheen and believed it has been broken up by wind and waves, possibly sparing coastal beaches.

"It has been dissipating by natural forces, wind and water," said Mike Schoul, Coast Guard chief warrant officer. He said the Coast Guard and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration will continue making daily flights in search of the sheen until they can determine the sheen is gone.

Schoul said the Sunday morning radar flight "picked up one small clump of something" out near the Norwegian vessel some 57 miles from Galveston in the Gulf of Mexico. But he said officials expected the clump to be gone today.

Coast Guard beach patrols from the Bolivar Peninsula near Galveston to the Sea Rim State Park, about 45 miles northeast of Galveston, also said tar balls from the vessel had not washed ashore. Nor had any tar balls been spotted in the surf through Sunday, Schoul said.

"There have been no observations on the beach and they spoke with the locals along the beach, and they haven't seen anything in the water," Schoul said.

The Mega Borg was loaded with 38 million gallons of the light crude when an explosion rocked the tanker June 8 during lightering operations. The Coast Guard said 3.9 million gallons spilled, but that most of it evaporated or burned. At least 11 skimmers were used in the cleanup and completed operations Thursday.

Oil cargo transfers from the Mega Borg continued today to the smaller tanker Atlantis. Salvage crews had pumped 8,459,346 gallons to the Atlantis by midnight, Edmonds said.

The transfer process, known as lightering, should be completed by Wednesday, he said.

Another cargo tanker, the Janus, left the Mega Borg Saturday loaded with 17.22 million gallons of Angolan crude and some water.

The Janus was headed up the Houston Ship Channel Sunday to Crown Central Petroleum Corp. in Houston, Schoul said.

The Atlantis, once it is loaded, will go to the ACRO Chemical dock in Texas City, Schoul said.

Murderer escapes from school catering job

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Corrections officials are investigating why a murder convict who escaped from custody and allegedly killed a woman while on the run came to be assigned to a minimum-security catering job at an elementary school.

Donald David Dillbeck, 27, was arrested Sunday and charged with first-degree murder in the slaying earlier in the day of Faye Lamb Vann, 44, at a Tallahassee shopping mall.

Dillbeck, who is from El Paso, escaped Friday evening while catering a dinner at Gretna Elementary School about 15 miles northwest of Tallahassee as part of a detail from the minimum-security Quincy Vocational Center.

He was being held late Sunday without bond at the Leon County Jail, Tallahassee Police Lt. Mitch Miller said. Numerous other charges were pending, Miller said.

The prisoner was serving a life sentence for a June 1989 murder in Lee County. Last February, he was transferred to the Quincy center, which offers programs including a cooking school, according to Bob Macmaster, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections.

"We're looking at the exact circumstances on how he was placed in this program," said Macmaster. "It seems a little unusual to have a person who has a long sentence to serve for murder to be placed in a minimum-custody program like this."

Ms. Vann, of Tallahassee was waiting alone in her car while her family shopped at the Tallahassee Mall when Dillbeck allegedly stabbed her repeatedly at about 3 p.m. EDT, Miller said.

Hooked piranha just a fish story

DALLAS (AP) — A Mesquite man thought he had hooked a flesh-eating piranha at Lake Ray Hubbard, but officials left him with only a fish story.

The fish caught Saturday by Mark Mitchell was determined to be a red-bellied pacu. Although it is menacing looking, it is a harmless relative of the piranha.

But officials said the discovery of the pacu still worries them.

"One of the worst things that people can do is release their pet fish into lakes," said David Schleser, an aquatic biologist at the Dallas Aquarium. "We must be concerned with exotic diseases. The kindest thing is for people to destroy the fish painlessly."

After Mitchell caught the fish, he

Inventory reveals missing treasures

WHITEWRIGHT (AP) — A court-ordered inventory of a trove of medieval treasure missing since World War II has uncovered new artwork, said a lawyer involved in the case.

One previously unknown object — a thin, carved ivory box that appeared to be Oriental — was found Wednesday during an 8½ hour examination of artwork stored in the vault of the First National Bank in Whitewright, said Timothy Powers, a Dallas attorney representing the bank.

"It could have been also brought back from Europe, it looked very old, but no one had any idea what it was," Powers told The Dallas Morning News.

Other medieval art objects believed to be French and German were found during an inventory of art stored in a safe deposit box at the First InterState Bank in Dallas, the New York Times reported today.

A trove of German treasures from a Lutheran church in Quedlinburg, East Germany, taken during the waning days of World War II, has become the focus of an escalating battle in federal court in Dallas.

Joe T. Meador, who died in 1980, is believed to have taken the Quedlinburg artwork when he was serving as a first lieutenant in the Army in April 1945.

Within two days after American forces moved into the Quedlinburg area, the treasures vanished from a mineshaft where the items and other art had been hidden by the Nazis, according to a military investigation at the time.

Meador, a former art teacher who had a master's degree in art, was assigned by the army to teach art at a French university within two months after the treasures disappeared, Army records indicate.

His brother and sister, Jack Meador of Whitewright and Jane Meador Cook of Mesquite, inherited the art trove after their brother died of cancer. They and their attorney have refused comment.

Pleadings filed Friday by the church in federal court in Dallas contend that the Meadors may have hidden or moved some of the treasures in the last two weeks.

on Monday within hours after the church filed a federal lawsuit seeking return of the items.

The church motion also contended that the Meadors "have been linked to" more than half of the approximately 18 pieces taken from the mineshaft. The motion states that only six objects were found and identified in the court-ordered secret examinations completed last week.

Church representatives "were very impressed with the manner in which (the objects) were kept for the last 45 years," Powers said. "they were glad that Joe Meador was someone who knew something about art because the objects had really been well-maintained."

Rally opposes slow child care law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several hundred adults and children rallied in a park across the street from the White House on Sunday to protest the slow progress in getting federal child care assistance legislation enacted.

"Working families are weary of campaign promises that vow to help America's families only to see those promises go unfulfilled," Marian Wright Edelman, president of the Children's Defense Fund, told the gathering.

The rally took on a festive atmosphere as red, green and yellow balloons were distributed to youngsters, many of whom munched on ice cream bars donated for the event. Several clowns and a juggler performed for the youngsters, along with a volunteer who told children's stories and sang children's songs.

Ms. Edelman said the rally was intended for families to "have some fun together on a Sunday afternoon," but she also focused on the more serious concerns many parents have about inadequate child care.

More than half the mothers of children under 2 work outside the home and millions of parents have difficulty getting proper day care for their children "yet the men in Congress and in the White House are still dicker about technicalities" on a child care assistance bill, she said.

The House and Senate have agreed on parts of a $1.75 billion child care assistance bill, but differences remain on some elements dealing with tax credits.

The Donald's joining the real world

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Donald Trump has agreed to put himself on a monthly budget certain to cramp his style to get the $65 million bank loan he needs to see his way through a cash crunch, The Philadelphia Inquirer said today.

Under the tentative deal, the syndicate of banks would lend Trump $65 million on the condition they be allowed to name two executives to run the Trump empire, the newspaper said.

The deal would prohibit Trump from moving money among his companies without permission and put him on a personal budget of $450,000 a month, according to documents obtained by the newspaper and dated Friday.

The newspaper said Trump had agreed to those conditions.

A banker who spoke on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press on Sunday that a West German bank and a French bank hold the key to Trump's hopes of raising the $65 million in the next two days.

Trump's main banks — Citibank, Chase Manhattan, Bankers Trust and Manufacturers Hanover — have agreed to the restructuring. But Dresdner Bank AG and Societe Generale are balking at terms of the deal, said the banker.

"If they don't agree, there won't be any deal," said the source. "If there's no deal, then either he comes up with the cash from some other source... or he defaults and perhaps declares bankruptcy on the casino and related properties."

An allowance is certain to put a damper on the lifestyle Trump enjoyed during the 1980s. His playthings include a 284-foot yacht, a 118-room Florida mansion and a helicopter and a jet.

U.S. gays demonstrate pride

By The Associated Press

More than 500,000 people took to the streets from California to New York in gay pride celebrations that mixed solemn protests over AIDS with coveting by lesbian bikers and men in mermaid costumes.

"Some people say, 'My God, it's faggots and queers,'" Debbie Holmes, a parade coordinator in Houston, said Sunday. "What they don't see is we are mothers and brothers and their next-door neighbors. We're not monsters."

Marches, rallies and parades were held in 25 cities nationwide. The largest crowds gathered for parades in New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

"It's the one time of the year that we really show our strength and our unity and our solidarity. We celebrate our pride. We let the world know that we're not going to go back in the closet," said Bill Anderson, a spokesman for the 21st annual parade in New York that drew about 200,000 people.

EAST BERLIN — Demonstrators stand before burning police cars during riots Saturday. After a peaceful demonstration of about 2,000 people against neo-Nazis, clashes started between police and about 400 young people; 20 police officers were hurt and four demonstrators arrested.

Program's goal: Involving parents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carlos Sheriff brought home a red-and-white folder every week telling his mother everything she needed to know about his education.

So did nearly 160,000 other students in two states.

Those folders have become a trademark of a program that seeks to assist schools in getting parents involved in the education of their children. School districts in Mississippi and California are participating in the Quality Education Project, and negotiations are under way to establish programs in Illinois.

Carlos completed sixth grade this spring in a Jackson, Miss., school participating in the project. His mother, Juanita Sheriff, said, "I really like that red folder because then I can see what he's doing (each week) — if he's not doing as well as I think he should, even if he's been a little talkative."

"You can send back comments. I tell them 'you have my permission to take him behind the green board' (for a whipping). Or, I tell them to give him some extra work as punishment."

Nancy Honig, president of the project, says increased parental involvement is a key to improving and sustaining academic achievement.

"There's a lot of talk now about parental involvement but no one really knows what that means," said Ms. Honig, who developed the program in 1982 as a grassroots movement to improve California's public school system.

"It sounds so simple. I mean it's not sexy at all, parental involvement. People want to talk about curriculum reform, drug abuse issues — but here is an issue where we have a window of opportunity to address and nothing is happening. Everyone's researching, not acting."

The project has several objectives:

- Get parents to actively support the school.
  - Encourage school administrators to institute activities that would keep parents informed about their children's progress and about what's going on in the school.
  - Train school administrators to work with parents.
  - Train teachers in the specifics of enlisting parent support at home for the school's efforts.
  - Train parents in what to do at home to further educational process, both at home and at school.
  - Get civic, business and religious groups to support the schools and their program of parental involvement.
  - Promote reading at home as a key way for parents to help their children with school work.
- Seven districts in Mississippi, comprising 28 elementary schools with 16,000 children, and 32 districts in California, with 143,358 students in some 230 schools, have signed on for the program.
- The school districts usually take the first step, asking QEP to assess their needs and come up with solutions. While the goals are the same, the programs are tailored for the individual school district.
- QEP will train someone from the area, and pay the person.

Israel pledges settlement assurance

JERUSALEM (AP) — The new right-wing government launched a diplomatic offensive today to reassure international critics that it will not settle Soviet immigrants in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

On Sunday, Housing Minister Ariel Sharon, who is chiefly responsible for absorbing the Soviet immigration wave, gave the first specific pledge that Israel would not settle Soviet immigrants beyond Israel's 1967 borders.

He stressed, however, that the government would continue efforts to increase Israeli settlement — and thus influence — in the territories.

Today, Yitzhak Shamir's spokesman announced that the prime minister sent Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev a telegram last month saying Israel is not settling Soviet Jews in the occupied territories.

The spokesman, Avi Pazner, said Shamir also sent a letter to European Community leaders last week saying his two-week-old government wants to pursue the Middle East peace process.

Israel has become increasingly isolated over its refusal to accept U.S. proposals for peace talks or to give solid guarantees on the settlement of immigrants.

When it took office, the new government said that although it had no policy of directing Soviet Jews to the territories, it would refuse to discourage such settlement.

Sharon, a hawkish former general and champion of Jewish settlement in the occupied lands, had been as steadfast as any member of the new government in defending the right of Israelis to settle where they choose.

The United States has joined the Soviet Union, Arab and European states in opposing the settlement of Soviet Jews in the West Bank and Gaza.

Solidarity heads break with Walesa

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leaders have issued a death certificate for the movement that one year ago toppled Communist rule, a leading political commentator said today.

Sixty-three leading members of Solidarity broke ranks with movement leader Lech Walesa Sunday over his criticism of the Solidarity-led government of Premier Tadeusz Mazowiecki, a former Walesa adviser.

They said Walesa should disband Solidarity's Citizens Committee, which since 1988 has functioned as the movement's political arm, leading the successful campaign that ended four decades of Communist rule.

The suggestion came in a letter read during a heated daylong meeting of the 200-member Citizens Committee at which Walesa and his opponents traded barbs.

The tone of Walesa's supporters, many recently appointed to the committee, was "threatening, brutal," Poland's largest newspaper, Gazeta Wyborcza, said today.

In the end, the committee postponed considering the letter for one month. Walesa had asked that emotions be allowed to cool.

"Let's think it over. Maybe there are solutions for our further joint path," the Solidarity chairman said.

The signatories of the letter agreed to remain on the committee in the meantime.

"What has ended is not only the time of heroic Solidarity," Konstantin Gebert, one of the best-known Solidarity journalists, wrote in today's Zycie Warszawy daily. "What has ended, simply put, is the idea of Solidarity as a united community fighting against evil."

"In the auditorium they only issued the death certificate."

Dissidents allowed to leave China

BEIJING (AP) — China's best-known dissidents, physicists Fang Lizhi and his wife Li Shuxian, left the country for Britain today after Communist authorities allowed them to end their year-long refuge in the U.S.

The White House immediately hailed Beijing's move as a "humanitarian action" that will better U.S.-Chinese ties.

The 53-year-old astrophysicist and his wife had sought refuge in the embassy after the June 4, 1989 military crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

The official Xinhua news agency said they were given permission to leave the country for medical reasons after showing "signs of repentance."

It said the move was "in line with China's policy of leniency towards those who participated in the disturbances" of last June.

Fang has been China's most outspoken and eloquent proponent of democratic reform. He and Li were well known for their advocacy of democracy and human rights in China well before the seven-week pro-democracy movement gelled.

Opinion

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Opinions from across the U.S. Unbecoming arrogance

Thomas Jefferson and James Madison, the principal authors of the Bill of Rights, believed that the key to maintaining a free society was to cultivate a respect for liberty, but not necessarily a respect for every manifestation of liberty. The distinction is important. Jefferson and Madison understood that the exercise of freedom would inevitably result in the expression of very unpopular opinions.

President George Bush and Reps. Chuck Douglas and Robert Smith (both R-N.H.) are among contemporary politicians who don't seem to understand that concept. With unbecoming arrogance, they are proposing to improve upon the work of Jefferson and Madison. They want to pass a constitutional amendment to amend the Bill of Rights for the first time in the country's history.

The Keene (N.H.) Sentinel

Consider the consequences

This is scary. As eastern Europeans and Soviet citizens struggle to emerge from an oppressed past to a democratic future, some Americans are ready to turn back the clock more than 200 years on our own Bill of Rights.

In Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a federal judge declared a rap album by the group 2 Live Crew, "As Nasty As They Want to Be," obscene and prohibited its sale.

A grandstanding sheriff in Broward County ordered the arrest of a store owner for selling the record, then busted band members for performing songs from the album, even though the concert was adults-only.

Meanwhile, in our nation's capital, lawmakers have turned an irrelevant non-issue into the nation's top priority. The problem? A few jerks in Podunk might burn the American flag as a statement of protest. So President Bush and Congress, in a cynical appeal to patriotism, want to tamper with the U.S. Constitution.

Short of yelling "fire" in a crowded theater, Americans must not give in to the temptation of shutting up people whose statements we may find objectionable. Those who would have government censor the public can look to point east to see the consequences.

The North Jersey Herald and News, Passaic, N.J.

Right on target

The U.S. Supreme Court was right on target the other day when it ruled that law enforcement checkpoints are a reasonable means to combat drunken driving.

These checkpoints are a small inconvenience considering the more important benefits — helping to keep drunk drivers off our highways.

The real effectiveness of these checkpoints is deterrence. Critics argue these programs cannot be proven to be more effective than other techniques. But local and state law enforcement officials were quick to note... that checkpoints do work. They're convinced of it. So why shouldn't local authorities have the right to decide whether such techniques will be used on their roads.

Pertaining to charges these interruptions are simple harassment by government, the key word as far as Bill of Rights' protection goes is "unreasonable."

But to us it would seem far more reasonable to be concerned about the bloodbath linked to drunken driving all across our nation — 23,000 deaths in 1988, according to U.S. Department of Transportation figures.

It just makes good sense that our lawmen should have among their preventive arsenal the right to conduct sobriety checkpoints.

Commercial Dispatch, Columbus, Miss.

Techniques deserve a try

A sloppy, messy clearcut that tries to imitate nature might be the answer to the Northwest's search for a way to preserve forests and jobs.

The fact that the so-called "new forestry" has critics from both major players in the timber dispute — the industry and the environmentalists — means that it might be what we need.

We think that the new theory — espoused by Jerry Franklin, a University of Washington professor and a respected expert in timber ecology — has a sound foundation and needs to be given an extensive tryout to prove its case and to dispel fears on both sides.

Nature has done a good job of preserving and perpetuating our forests for thousands of years. Franklin's idea is to imitate nature. This means abolishing two other harvesting techniques, clearcutting and selective cutting, and switching to a modified clearcutting.

Statesman Journal, Salem, Ore.

War is real in Colombia

In Medellin, Colombia, headquarters of that country's largest cocaine cartels, 110 policemen have been assassinated so far this year in response to a $4,300-per-policeman bounty offered by the cartels.

But police delivered an apparently severe blow... when they killed Juan Jairo Arias in a shootout, after finding his apartment hideout on a tip. Juan Arias was the reputed mastermind of the Medellin ring's killing campaign, and was blamed for two recent bomb attacks that killed more than 70 people.

With bounties, shootouts and hideouts, Colombia's story reminds of the Old West. But that analogy is too tame.

In Colombia, this is a real war. Complete with real body count.

Arts and the Constitution

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

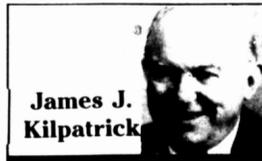

WASHINGTON — It was a part of the education of the historian Henry Adams to learn something of the art of politics. He put it this way: "Politics, as a practice, whatever its professions, has always been the systematic organization of hatreds." Let us consider the National Endowment for the Arts.

Congress soon will face the issue of reauthorizing the NEA, perhaps for only one year, as some members have proposed, or perhaps for the usual five years. The two sides are becoming increasingly polarized. At one extreme are those who would abolish the agency root and branch. At the other extreme are those who would continue the NEA unchanged, with no restrictions upon its discretionary powers.

The two sides actually hate one another, and just as Henry Adams observed, we are witnessing here the organization of hatreds. It is the old war of the philistines against the literati, the common man against the snobs. Members of the House and Senate tell me that no issue since Vietnam has evoked greater outpourings of emotional mail.

As readers know, I am at heart a root-and-branch man. I would abolish the NEA altogether, but not because of the peripheral issue of funding for "obscene" works of supposed art. Put in perspective, that issue is trivial. Forget it, or at least put it to one side.

The larger issue has to do with the nature of our national government. The issue is as old as the Convention of 1787 and as current as today's debate on the NEA. Does Congress have only those powers delegated to it by the Constitution? Or does Congress have unlimited "inherent" powers to do whatever it wishes?

I hold with Madison (in Federalist 45) that "the powers delegated to the federal government are few and defined." Some of the delegated powers are extensive, such as the power to regulate commerce. Some are awesome: the power to declare war. One delegated power is of uncertain magnitude. It is the power to lay and collect taxes to provide for the "general welfare of the United States."

Now if that is a grant of plenary, unlimited power, then the enumeration of particular powers makes no sense. A good part of the Constitution becomes mere surplusage. But the provision may be sensibly interpreted if prudent meaning is given to that word "general."

Back to the National Endowment for the Arts. If the tax funds appropriated to the NEA truly are expended for the general welfare of the United States, a plausible constitutional rationalization may be advanced.

For example, the NEA funded a $100,000 grant to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts to mount an exhibition of 120 paintings by Renoir. More than half a million people attended. Grants to established symphony orchestras, dance companies and theater groups also might qualify under this reasoning. I don't accept the argument, but I am trying to present it fairly.

But if such organizational grants meet the criterion of promoting the GENERAL welfare, what is to be said of the hundreds of grants to individual artists? There plainly is no constitutional authority — not even dubious authority — for these. And these individual awards are the troublemakers.

The NEA annually gives grants of $20,000 each to 50 poets. In 1988, the last year for which data are available, the NEA gave similar grants to three "jazz masters." Under the heading of "jazz study," the NEA gave awards of $1,500 to $5,000 to 45 individual musicians to support their "intensive one-on-one study" with their teachers. Sixty photographers won grants ranging from $5,000 to $15,000. And so on.

Were these individual grants for the general welfare of the United States? The notion is absurd on its face. The grants surely benefited the select poets, musicians and photographers — lucky for them! — but only by the most tortured reasoning can it be argued that such grants meet the constitutional criterion.

Could the warring sides find a compromise here? Suppose agreement were reached to continue large grants to cultural institutions that serve major constituencies. Suppose, further, that individual grants were abolished entirely. This would not satisfy the root-and-branch opponents, and it surely would not quiet the outcries of the literati, but it might be something that both sides could live with. A few aspiring poets must suffer every year, but their suffering, believe me, is a burden society could easily bear.

Planning retaliation

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I've been thinking about the implications of the recent Supreme Court ruling that says you can burn our flag and go unpunished.

The court ruled any law charging flag-burners with a crime is unconstitutional because the First Amendment protects freedom of speech and expression, no matter how distasteful and disgusting such actions might seem to others.

I can understand some of that. Make a law against burning the flag in protest and that could lead to a law against burning down a post office in protest of long lines, surly workers and the fact you just received a nice birthday card from your grandmother, who died in 1962.

Another part of me says, however, that no matter what the Supreme Court ruled, anybody who would burn our flag for any reason is a creep.

But we don't send people to jail just because they're creeps. If we did, our jails would be even more crowded than they already are.

They would be filled with such creepy people as filthy mouthed rap singers, crooked politicians, and anybody who doesn't realize wrestling is fake — and the Rev. Al Sharpton.

I realize I am really waffling here, but it also seems to me like there ought to be something we could do to flag burners.

Why do they have to burn our flag, our precious banner of freedom, sacrifice and history, in the first place?

Couldn't they just burn a photograph of Dan Quayle instead?

I know what we could do to flag burners instead of sending them to jail. We could send them all back to 11th grade American history class, where they would be assigned a term paper on Millard Fillmore.

And it would be due tomorrow. They might at least get a little respect for Old Glory through osmosis.

Regardless, I'd like to see them sweating over Fillmore's stance on the environment.

It also occurred to me — what sort of precedent is this ruling going to set? What other forms of speech and expression come under this ruling?

Can you, in fact, shout, "Fire!" in a crowded theater now?

And an even bigger question came to me: "Where does mooning come in here?"

Mooning is a form of expression, isn't it? You drop your drawers at your high school graduation ceremonies and you are expressing the thought, "You can all stick it."

Let's say you're in the audience. Do you want the First Amendment tampered with regardless of how distasteful and disgusting it might be to have to look at some zit-faced kid's bare buttocks during "Pomp and Circumstance"?

If we are going to allow people to burn the flag and get away with it, we've got to let them shoot moons, too.

In fact, I'd rather be mooned than to see somebody burning the flag. Furthermore, if I ever see somebody burning the flag, I'm going to moon them.

So, be forewarned. It will not be a pretty sight.

Court addresses abortion, right-to-die

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that states may require notification of one parent when unmarried girls seek an abortion. But it said mandating notification of both parents interferes with the constitutional right to abortion.

The justices voted 6-3 to uphold an Ohio law requiring that one parent be notified. "We discern no constitutional defect in the statute," Justice Anthony M. Kennedy wrote.

The court, by a 5-4 vote, struck down one version of a Minnesota law requiring notification of both parents. By another 5-4 vote, with Justice Sandra Day O'Connor changing sides, the court ruled constitutional a version that allows a minor to get either the approval of both her parents or a judge.

Justice John Paul Stevens wrote the opinion for the court striking down the two-parent notification law.

"This requirement, ostensibly designed for the benefit of the minor, resulted in major trauma to the child, and often to a parent as well," Stevens said. "In some cases, the parents were divorced and the second parent did not have custody or otherwise participate in the child's upbringing."

Dissenting, Kennedy, wrote that "to deny parents this knowledge is to risk, or perpetuate, estrangement or alienation from the child when she is in the greatest need of parental guidance and support."

But in upholding the two-parent notification rule only if a judicial bypass option is included, O'Connor said "the interference with the internal operation of the family" no longer exists.

Kennedy, writing for the court in the Ohio case, noted that the state law allows a minor to notify a judge rather than her parents if she wants an abortion. This, he said, shows "an abundance of caution and concern for the minor's interests."

He noted that today's decisions leave unanswered a key question: whether a state law that requires notification of one parent can be constitutional if it does not include a judicial bypass option.

Today's action did not appear to carry major impact for the court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion.

O'Connor is viewed as a pivotal vote on the future of that decision. Today marked the first time since joining the court in 1981 that she voted to strike down a state-imposed restriction on abortion.

Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, said the court "has thrown down the gauntlet before the young women and girls of America. State legislators have been given the green light to restrict the choices of pregnant teens whose desperation the politicians can never comprehend."

The court's decisions in the Ohio and Minnesota cases yielded nine separate opinions. They offered a patchwork of rationale for upholding the Ohio law in its entirety but striking down the Minnesota law unless a judicial bypass is included.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in its first ruling in a "right-to-die" case, said today states may bar the removal of life-sustaining treatment from patients in irreversible coma-like conditions.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices blocked the parents of a permanently unconscious Missouri woman, Nancy Cruzan, from ordering the removal of tubes that provide her with food and water.

The court said Ms. Cruzan's rights were not violated by allowing the state's interest in preserving life to outweigh her parents' wishes.

But the court, indirectly supporting so-called "living will" laws, said the Constitution guarantees a competent person a right to refuse medical treatment. That issue was not presented squarely in the Cruzan case since she is incompetent to decide her future, the court said.

The parents, Joe and Joyce Cruzan, left a message on the answering machine at their Cartersville, Mo., home that the family will have no reaction until they have had time to analyze the ruling.

But Dick Kurtenbach, who has worked with the Cruzans as head of the Kansas City, Mo., office of the American Civil Liberties Union, commented:

"When we looked at it realistically, and with the recent history of the court, this is not that surprising."

"I'm sure the family is going to be extremely disappointed."

Speaking for the American Medical Association, Dr. Nancy Dickey, a Richmond, Texas, family physician and a trustee of the AMA, said of the decision:

"We feel it is an intrusion into the doctor-patient relationship and a step toward taking that decision away from the bedside. . . . We should not deliver unnecessary care and pay for unnecessary care."

Dickey spoke with reporters at an AMA policymaking conference in Chicago.

Doctors have said Ms. Cruzan, 32, could live for 30 more years in her current "persistent vegetative" condition.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court, said Missouri may require "clear and convincing" proof that Ms. Cruzan wants to die before allowing the withdrawal of life-sustaining treatment. Such evidence is lacking in Ms. Cruzan's case, he said.

The chief justice also said that "not all incompetent patients will have loved ones available to serve as surrogate decisionmakers. A state is entitled to guard against potential abuses in such situations."

"In sum, we conclude that a state may apply a clear and convincing evidence standard in proceedings where a guardian seeks to discontinue nutrition and hydration of a person diagnosed to be in a persistent vegetative state," Rehnquist said.

He was joined by Justices Byron R. White, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin J. Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy.

Barrs celebrate new home

By MICKIE HARRINGTON
Maxwell and Kaye Barr, Johnathon, 10, Aaron, 11 and Meredith, 7, enjoyed a housewarming June 16 at their gabled, red brick country French-style home in Luther.

The Barrs farm 3,200 acres of cotton, wheat and maize.

Neighboring farmers and landowners attending the festivities were Maurine Vaughn, sister of former owner and builder of the house, Lamesa; Mr. and Mrs. Merle Hane, owners of the farm on the west, and Lane and Diane Griffin, ranchers to the north. A former neighbor, Richard Read, said, "I was born within 200 yards of the Barr place — about five miles to the east of here."

Approximately 200 guests, including neighbors, former neighbors, friends, relatives and their families attended.

Mrs. Frances and Betty Barr, Maxwell's aunt and mother, Vincent, prepared the refreshments of apricot punch, dainty white petit fours shaped into stars, hearts and squares, and little chocolate cake squares with candy orange roses and chocolate leaves. Rhonda Harding, Vincent, helped serve.

Andrea Barr, 14, daughter of Mark and Brenda Barr, Hobbs, N.M., greeted the guests and kept the guest book. Mark is Maxwell's brother.

Besides farming, Maxwell serves as deacon at the First Baptist Church, Big Spring. The Rev. Kenneth Patrick, pastor, was among the honored guests.

Kaye is a former teacher, having taught remedial reading in Coahoma to kindergarten through sixth grade students prior to beginning their family. Peggy Hodnett, Johnathon's second grade teacher and former co-teacher with Kaye, attended. Other of the children's teachers attending were Mrs.

Cindy Feagins, Aaron's Sunday school teacher, and Virginia Sweeney, Johnathon's Sunday school teacher, also attended the affair.

Out-of-town relatives attending were Kaye's parents, Kirk and Yvonne Drew, Dallas; and her brother, Kevin and Becky Drew, Coppell with Matthew, 1, and Patrick, 3; James "Buddy" Barr and Betty, Vincent, Patricia, and Lindy Barr, Vincent; and Vernie Barr, Vincent; Erminee Cook, Hobbs, N.M.; George and Gaye Glynn, Kerrville; Norma Bearden, Big Spring; and Pearl Barr, Brownfield.

Many friends attended from Big Spring, Luther, Vincent, Vealmoor and Colorado City.

Country store gets new look

Cleonia Burger, co-owner of Luther Country Store, had a pleasant surprise June 17 when her son, Staff Sgt. Eric Fisher and his wife, Sharon, arrived from Sue Falls, S.D., with Mona Burger, her daughter and roommate, Laura Hall. The two parties met in Ottawa, Kan., and completed the trip together.

The visitors immediately began preparing the walls of the store for a fresh coat of paint.

Surprises continued at Luther Country Store when Cleonia's youngest daughter, Robin Burger with roommate Natalie and her daughter Ashley, from Des Moines, arrived Tuesday morning to join the workforce.

James and Lois Ellison, co-owners and customers were greeted Thursday morning with gleaming, newly painted off-white walls and shelves.

Family reunion

The six remaining siblings of Bob and Mattie Neagle's family participated in the Neagle family reunion June 16-17 at the Best Western Motel Convention Room and James and Lois Ellison's home in Luther. Ethel Neagle Wilson Steakly was the oldest member of 48 relatives present. John Henry Neagle, Woodbridge, Calif.; Mattie Ford, Cloria Yates and Josephine Holloway, Manteca, Calif., traveled the farthest to attend. Robert and Laura Neagle attended from Lovington, N.M., bringing a fifth wheel camper with them.

Relatives also attended from El Paso, Lancaster, Midland, Lubbock, Big Spring, Lake Thomas and Artesia, N.M. "They haven't invented anything we didn't have to eat," remarked Josephine Holloway.

Lonely hearts can find a new love

DEAR ABBY: How does a nice person meet other nice people? I'm not the type to hang out in bars, and these days it's dangerous to get too friendly with people you meet casually on the street, even though they may look nice. I'm over 21, am told I am very attractive, and I have no bad habits. Sign me — LONELY AND SINGLE

DEAR LONELY: You have asked me the question that turns up the most frequently in my mail. The following is from my booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." The message is as applicable today as when it was first written:

If you're single for any reason — and want to know how to meet someone decent, this is for you:

"Decent people" are found where decent people gather. If you want to hook a mountain trout, don't go fishing in a herring barrel. At the risk of sounding like a broken record, may I repeat the advice I have given in my column time and again:

Get out of the house and get involved! Get a job, go back to school, enroll in some adult education classes, learn to paint or sew, or offer your volunteer services in your community. Work with your church, the Red Cross, mental health society, the underprivileged, the disabled, the elderly, your political party — the list is endless. They need volunteers! I can't say enough for volunteer work. That's where worthwhile people meet other worthwhile people.

If you're recently divorced or widowed, let your friends know that you're interested in getting back into circulation. The safest way to meet a decent person is through folks who include singles when they entertain. And I'm sure there's a special place in heaven for the matchmaking angel who is constantly "fixing up" dates for singles.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Stamps don't stick? Wet the stamp but don't dog-luck all the glue off. Touch the stamp to a wet sponge. If possible, buy stamps in coils of 100 or more; they're made for machine applications and have more (and better) glue. Also, they haven't been touched by the hands of the many inventory employees at the post office. There is nothing in the many postal books about clean hands, and most post offices have no convenient place to wash hands anyway.

Print more letters about the poor quality of glue. It didn't used to be this bad. Maybe the postmaster general will wise up, but don't count on it. I am a retired postmaster, and you may use my name. — ELMER PINKERTON, ELMWOOD, NEB.

Forty-two indictments handed down by grand jury

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Randy Ray Young, 203 St. Francis, Stanton, was indicted by a 118th District Court grand jury Thursday on a charge of aggravated sexual assault in connection with a Jan. 26 incident.

A total of 42 indictments were handed down by the grand jury, which met Wednesday and Thursday. The indictment papers were expected to be signed today, said a spokesperson with the district attorney's office. Two other cases were not-billed and five were passed over.

District Attorney Rick Hamby did not give a date but said he expects a speedy trial for Young, 28, whose parole on a burglary conviction was revoked May 31 after he was accused of two rapes.

"Certainly as expeditiously as we can," Hamby said. "One reason is because he's in jail."

Young was detained at the Howard County Jail since March 1. According to previous reports, he was on probation for another sexual assault prior to his conviction on burglary.

Hamby anticipates that arraignments will be held in July and trial dates set. "That's for everybody on this list," he said of last week's indictments.

Also indicted was Woodrow Isaac

Burton, 429 Westover, on aggravated assault. He was charged Oct. 9.

Indictments for arson and burglary of a habitation were handed down against Jay Valdez, 3208 W. 9th, also known as Juquin Garcia. He was charged with burglary on Dec. 12.

Other indictments include:
 • Rombert M. Aguilar, 1615, Canary, on a charge of driving while intoxicated.
 • Robbie Atkinson, 2706 S. Monticello, aggravated assault.
 • Richie Bain, no address available, burglary of a building.
 • Debra Carol Bradberry, 622 Caylor, driving while intoxicated.
 • Kelly Dawn Bradberry, 622 Caylor, driving while intoxicated.
 • Jessie Chapman Coker, Route 3, burglary of a building.
 • Christopher Eric Curtis, County Road 61, driving while intoxicated.
 • Grace Delgado, 502 S. Bell, possession of a controlled substance.
 • Robert Delgado Jr., no address available, possession of a controlled substance.
 • Elizabeth Hernandez Diaz, no address available, possession of a controlled substance.
 • Theodore Diaz, 711 N.W. Eighth, burglary of a vehicle — two counts.

• Jesse Clyde Elliott, County Road 76, driving while intoxicated.
 • Raymundo Cerda Galvan, 1314 Mesa, driving while intoxicated and possession of a controlled substance.
 • Vincent Gutierrez Garcia Jr., no address available, driving while intoxicated.
 • Jose Enrique Guadalupe, 1513 Sunset and/or 508 State, possession of a controlled substance.
 • Ruben Guterrez, no address available, burglary of a building.
 • David Michael Hawthorne, 9319 Laneyvale, Dallas, possession of a controlled substance.
 • Virginia Rodriguez Herrera, 1002 N. Main, possession of a controlled substance.
 • Sara Ann Hernandez, no address available, false statement.
 • Jose Manuel Huerta, no address available, driving while intoxicated.
 • Gary Jetton, no address available, burglary of a building.
 • Robert Earl Jones, 2605 Hunter, burglary of a habitation.
 • Lee Andrew Knox, 705 Ave. B, Sweetwater, theft from a person — two counts.
 • Eric Howard Lanspery, 3804 Connally, driving while intoxicated.
 • Alfred Ledesma, 1311 Mobile, possession of a controlled substance.

 • Joe Molina Ledesma, 813 Creighton, possession of a controlled substance.
 • Sheryl Lynn Walker, no address available, forgery — four counts.
 • Dana Wiley, 1021 Missouri, El Paso, theft by check.
 • Homer Lee Williford, no address available, driving while intoxicated.
 • Johnny Ray Jones, 2507 Peach, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.
 • Richard Lopez, no address available, possession of a controlled substance.

The grand jury chose not to indict Clay Atkinson on a charge of aggravated assault and John Michael Osborne on a charge of theft by appropriation.

The grand jury passed on the following: Kenneth Wayne James, charged with theft from the person; Charles Lee King, charged with theft from the person; and Wesley Ryan Tibbets, charged with theft from the person.

The grand jury also passed on two investigations, one involving sexual assault of a child, and the other aggravated assault on a peace officer.

Cases passed by the grand jury can be considered in the future by other grand juries.

Brown indicted in death of Virginia Ryan

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Johnny Mack Brown, 1001 Hearn, was indicted by an 118th District Court grand jury Thursday on a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the Dec. 2 death of a Big Spring woman.

Brown, 46, who is accused of running over Virginia Ann Ryan, 43, in the early-morning incident, could be scheduled for a trial docket in October, speculated Assistant District Attorney William Dupree.

"I'd be surprised to see it come up on an August (Docket)," he said. "I'm just guessing, it's up to the judge."

District Attorney Rick Hamby anticipates that arraignments will be scheduled in July and trial dates set at that time.

The indictment papers are expected to be signed today, said another spokesperson in the district attorney's office.

Brown, who was arrested at the scene of an accident in the 3600 block of Parkway where officers found Ryan lying in the road, was charged with resisting arrest and public intoxication at the time.

Ryan was an independent insurance agent in Big Spring. According to police reports, officers were called to the scene of the accident after Ryan was struck by a pickup truck. Justice of the Peace Willie Grant pronounced Ryan dead at the scene.

An autopsy was performed and police completed their investigation in April. The vehicle that struck Ryan was impounded at the scene. Police listed the owner of the vehicle as Brown, but declined to say who was driving the truck when the accident happened.

Bernard Kouchner, the French secretary of state for humanitarian action, arrived in Iran on Sunday to coordinate French assistance and evaluate future needs. Radio France Inter said the French government has sent a civil defense team of 195 people and 18 search dogs along with at least 24 tons of equipment. A spokeswoman for the U.S. Agency for International Development said a Red Cross charter flight carrying $225,000 worth of supplies donated by the U.S. government would arrive in Tehran this morning.

Iran is believed to have influence with the Shiite Moslem extremists holding 16 Western hostages, including six Americans, in Lebanon. The longest-held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

In Lebanon, the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, said its members were donating 10 percent of their salaries to help the victims. That would amount to about $500,000, according to Hezbollah sources.

Beauty spot

Officials from the Clean Big Spring Committee of the Chamber of Commerce awarded the commercial Beauty Spot of the Month to the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp for its efforts to spruce up grassy portions along the sides of a stretch of roadway south of the camp. The area, about a mile long, was mowed, weeded and watered by prison officials, who hope to eventually install an underground sprinkler system to facilitate the growth of trees and flowers. Pictured in the photo are (l.-r.) the Reverend Art Dodd, a volunteer for the Clean Big Spring Committee; Jeff Ganselman, the prison camp's landscape foreman; Mamie Lee Dodd, also a member of the Clean Big Spring Committee; Melvin Allen, facility manager for the camp; Ann Beasley, assistant warden; and Michael Fitzpatrick, warden.

the tally would have been final — midway through the Texas vote — De Lara appeared on stage and withdrew his candidacy, saying "the people have spoken."

"It is obvious the organization wants its door and arms open to the new members," De Lara said in a gracious manner rarely seen during the four-day convention.

"At this time it is obvious that the organization is ready for new leadership. I wish to withdraw my nomination, my fellow LULACers, to elect brother Joe Velez by acclamation," De Lara said.

De Lara pledged his full support to Velez, as the two men stood arm-in-arm on the stage. This was the third time Velez had faced De Lara for presidency of the nation's oldest and largest Hispanic advocacy organization.

One by one, all other incumbents then withdrew their nominations.

As he left the auditorium, De Lara, beset by well wishers, said the struggle the organization had gone through would not splinter it, but strengthen it.

"The foundation we have constructed is fruitful and strong," De Lara said of his two-term presidency.

With a handful of the approximately 815 delegates left in the hall, 45 resolutions on issues ranging from pending lawsuits against LULAC to immigration laws and Puerto Rican statehood were passed en masse by a voice vote.

Gorilla v-ball play set June 30

The Second Annual Gorilla Volleyball Tournament will be June 30, played on the sandy beach at Highland Mall starting at 9 a.m.

There will be two events: gorilla volleyball with two or three person teams; and standard volleyball, with six-person teams.

Entry fee is $10 per person, and $15 for both events.

Proceeds from the tournament go to Rape Crisis/Victims Services. For more information call Vicky Jernigan at 263-3312.

Tennis tourney set in Carlsbad

CARLSBAD, N.M. — Carlsbad, N.M. will be the site of the Cavern City Tennis Tournament June 30-July 2 at the Rio Pecos Tennis Shop.

Divisions will include men, women and mixed doubles from ages 35-65 years old. Entry fee is $12 for singles and $20 for doubles. Entry deadline is June 26. Participants must be members of the United States Tennis Association. USTA cards will be available at the tournament desk.

For more information call (505) 887-1980.

Hunter education will be offered

A course in hunter education has been scheduled for July 25-28 from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. at Dribell's Sporting Store, located at 1307 South Gregg.

Instructor will be Boyce Hale. According to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's mandatory requirements, those born during the period of Sept. 2, 1971 through August 31, 1973 must successfully complete the course to hunt in Texas.

For more information call Boyce Hale at 267-6957.

The 57th Annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo will be June 27-30 at the Big Spring Rodeo Bowl.

Mack Altizer and Bad Company Rodeo will provide the livestock and Randy Corley of North Platte, Neb. will be the announcer.

The clowns will be Coahoma's Quail Dobbs, Mike (Smurf) Horton and Chuck Kinney. John Farris will serve as arena director and Mildred Farris will be the rodeo secretary.

Advance tickets are $4, and $6 if you buy them at the gate.

Defending champs lose to Argentina

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Claudio Caniggia scored on a perfect pass by Diego Maradona in the 81st minute as Argentina eliminated Brazil from the World Cup with a 1-0 victory Sunday.

It was Argentina's first victory over Brazil in seven years and the first ever against the Brazilians in World Cup play. Argentina will play either Spain or Yugoslavia in the quarterfinals.

At Milan, Juergen Klinsmann and Andreas Brehme scored goals as West Germany defeated the Netherlands 2-1 to advance to the quarterfinals.

Earnhardt ends racing slump

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt took advantage of Bill Elliott's blown engine to end his own slump with a victory in NASCAR's Miller 400 at Michigan International Speedway on Sunday.

Elliott led 102 of the 200 laps on the two-mile, high-banked oval before his engine failed on the 186th lap.

Earnhardt took the lead on the 195 lap and held off Ernie Ivan the rest of the way for a 0.14-second victory. Earnhardt averaged 150.219 mph in a race slowed by just four caution flags for 16 laps. Geoff Bodine finished third.

Wimbledon has different look

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Tradition just isn't what it used to be, even on the hallowed lawns of the All England Club.

A sporting event that prides itself on continuity, Wimbledon has undergone major changes this year and is being asked to consider even greater upheavals.

The standing sections on Centre Court are gone, part of a huge facelift to ensure safety. John McEnroe wants a dome placed over the courts. Some critics are calling for artificial turf.

But perhaps the most shocking changes can be found within the women's draw for the two-week tournament set to begin Monday.

Chris Evert is missing from the courts after nearly two decades. A pair of Florida-based teens, Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati, are grunting and groaning their way to the top.

And the once unsinkable Steffi Graf needs a title to re-establish her supremacy in women's tennis. Though still No. 1, Graf has lost twice in a row to Seles.

While the men's competition features its usual subplots — the athleticism of Boris Becker vs. the determination of Ivan Lendl, another bid by McEnroe to turn back the clock — the women's contest has more storylines than "Twin Peaks."

Graf has won the last two Wimbledon titles over Martina Navratilova, and they are once again the top two seeds this year. They also are the best grass-court players in women's tennis.

"I know my time is running out, and I want to make sure I give it my best effort this year," said Navratilova, 33, who is seeking her record ninth Wimbledon singles title.

Navratilova skipped most of the clay-court season to prepare for Wimbledon. She showed her strength on grass this past weekend by clobbering Gretchen Magers in the final of a tournament in Eastbourne, England.

"I feel I am one of only a few players who can win it," she said. "I've done everything I can to prepare, and the grass, it's my stuff."

Graf, 21, still terrorizes most opponents and crushed Seles 6-0, 6-1 in the fourth round of Wimbledon last year. Her recent losses to Seles in the finals of the German and French opens were on clay.

But youngsters such as Seles and Capriati are not bothered by history or their inexperience on the grass surface.

Capriati, 14, a quarterfinalist in the junior girls tournament at Wimbledon last year, is the youngest seed in Grand Slam history at No. 12. After winning her first grass-court match as a pro last week, she proclaimed, "I think it's a neat surface."

HARRISON, N.Y. — Hale Irwin holds his ball to the crowd after he birdied the 18th hole, on his way to winning the Buick Classic at Westchester Country Club.

Irwin captures 2nd consecutive victory

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Hale Irwin was a day late getting to the suburbs north of New York City.

He was emotionally drained and mentally weary from a 19-hole playoff victory in the U.S. Open at Medinah, near Chicago.

PGA

He said he had no great expectations for the Buick Classic. But he insisted his appearance at the Westchester Country Club was more than the fulfilling of a commitment.

"I'm not here just to put in my obligatory two days and go home," he said.

The 45-year-old veteran more than proved his point with a bogey-free closing round of 66 on Sunday that brought him a second title in a six-day period.

"I'm excited about the double," said Irwin, who became the first Open title-holder since Billy Casper in 1966 to win the tournament immediately following the American national championship.

The winning streak will end at two, however.

"I'm sorry there can't even be an effort to try for a triple," Irwin said. Pleading exhaustion, he's heading home and isn't even sure when or where his next tournament appearance will be.

"A lot of things are up in the air," he said. "It's been a very, very hectic time, a very, very tense time."

It's also been a very, very rewarding time. In a monetary sense, he won $400,000 in the two tournaments, more than he collected in any of his previous 22 full seasons.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Amy Alcott of Pacific Palisades, Calif., reacts to her birdie putt on the sixth hole during action at the Rochester Open. Alcott finished second behind Patty Sheehan.

Sheehan a repeat victor in Rochester

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Patty Sheehan credited her repeat victory in the LPGA Rochester International to a camera that whizzed in her ear on the ninth hole and the earthquake that destroyed her home last October.

LPGA

Sheehan shot a final round 67 Sunday for a record 17-under-par 271 total in a four-stroke, come-from-behind victory over Amy Alcott. Nancy Lopez was one stroke back in third place.

The previous record on the 6,162-yard, par-72 Locust Hill Country Club course was 276 by Hall of Famer Sandra Haynie in 1982.

Sheehan said her game improved after a bogey on the par-3 ninth, where she was interrupted in midswing by the noise of a spectator's camera. Her tee shot landed in the right bunker and she missed about an 8-foot par putt to fall three shots behind Alcott at the turn.

"I was so angry at myself for letting somebody interrupt my concentration," Sheehan said. "I think I bore down a little more — tried to get it back to where we had a little more of a tournament."

"Mostly when I get angry I play a little better."

Sheehan's birdie and Alcott's bogey on No. 10 moved her within one shot of the leader. Sheehan moved even when she made an 18-foot birdie putt on No. 11 while Alcott parred.

Sheehan took the lead when she birdied 13 and Alcott two-putted for par. The gap widened to three on the par-3 15th, where Sheehan birdied.

Dog racing comes to Cameron County

LA BLANCA (AP) — Greyhound breeder Jim Hill has been laying the groundwork for Valley Greyhound Park's opening season long before Texas legalized parimutuel wagering.

The Cameron County track, is to open in November and Hill is hoping his Turbo Racing Kennels will be among the 18 kennels that receive contracts for the inaugural season.

Hill got interested in racing as a teen-ager in Arizona. He moved to Texas in 1987, hoping the parimutuel law would be approved so he could establish a greyhound breeding farm.

Texas voted that November to allow legal betting on horse races for the first time since the 1930s and on dog races for the first time ever.

The law allows greyhound racing in three places: Cameron, Galveston and Nueces counties.

Hill began his career working as a lead-out, taking racers to the starting box before each race. Later, he cared for the greyhounds after their races, then worked his way up from assistant trainer to trainer.

After getting married and starting a family, Hill decided to make his career as a breeder and trainer.

It's a family business that allows his wife, Trelanie, to work at home, caring for the brood females and the puppies until they're about 10 months old and ready to begin training.

Then Hill and his brother, Charles, take over.

Today, Turbo Racing Kennels is home to 24 brood females and about 32 puppies. By this spring, Turbo was ready to send 90 dogs to SODRAC Greyhound Park in South Sioux City, S.D.

Eventually, Hill hopes to put in a training track. But for now, yearlings are being schooled at Fulton-Miller Kennels in Port Aransas. There, the young greyhounds are schooled to chase a mechanical lure around the track just like they will in real races.

Hill said his may be the first kennel to locate in the Valley, but with racing in Cameron County and in Corpus Christi, others are likely to follow.

"Every new track that opens, they haven't been able to handle the opening night crowds," Hill told the Valley Morning Star.

Use that left hand young man

MIDLAND (AP) — Dad saw that Kyle Abbott didn't get started "right" in baseball.

Every time the young Abbott reached down to pick up a baseball, Larry Abbott, a former pitcher in the Kansas City Royals organization, slapped the boy's hand.

The strategy produced a left-handed pitcher, but the younger Abbott now finds himself having to make another adjustment: learning to throw against opponents in the free-swinging Texas League.

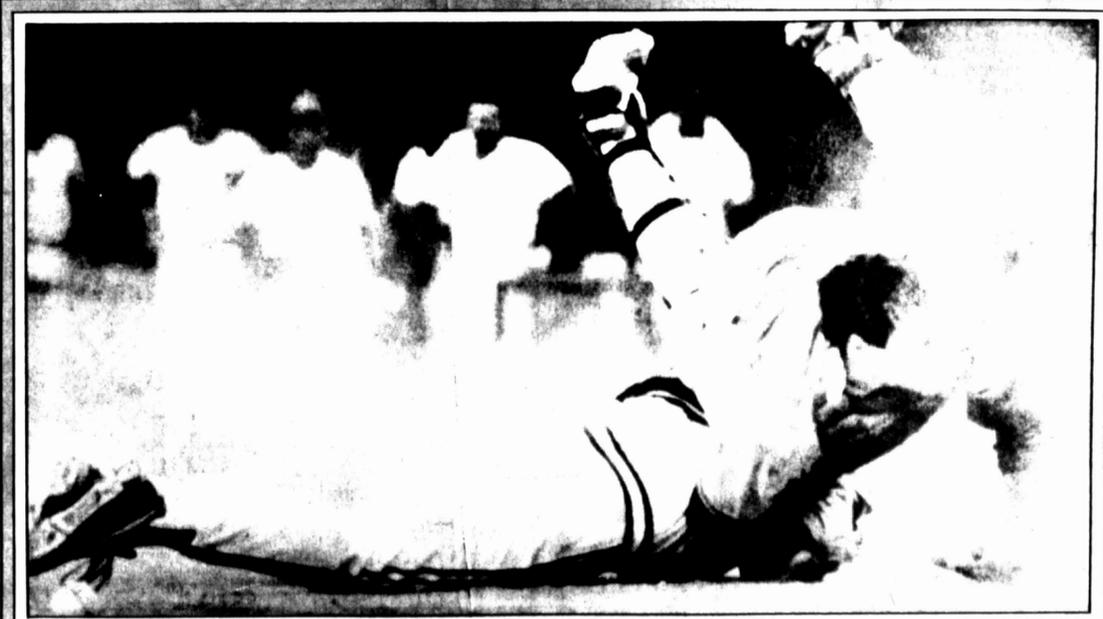

Abbott, 22, went 1-5 in the first half of the Texas League season. His earned-run average was 5.40.

"It's been a big adjustment," he said.

But Abbott had looked good in taking a loss against the El Paso Diablos last week, and on Saturday he threw seven shutout innings against El Paso to start the season's second half. Midland won the game 7-1.

Abbott walked only four batters and struck out five in making his longest appearance of the season. He allowed only two hits and retired 10 consecutive batters.

The young Midland pitcher, who was a standout at Long Beach State and in high school, said he made some mechanical adjustments before a recent start against San Antonio that have seemed to help.

Rough landing

CINCINNATI — Los Angeles Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia looks for the ball after being bowled over by Cincinnati Reds relief pitcher Norm Charlton, who scored from first base on a double by Joe Oliver in the seventh inning at Riverfront Stadium Sunday. The Reds won the game 10-6.

Bucs hold off Expos

By The Associated Press
One team rallies in the bottom of the ninth inning, another one stalls, and the National League East leaderboard changes again.

In Montreal, Stan Belinda escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the ninth as Pittsburgh held on to win 5-3. The Pirates ended a five-game losing streak and moved back into first place, one-half game ahead of the Expos.

At Shea Stadium, pinch-hitter Tim Teufel's two-out, two-run single capped a three-run comeback that lifted New York over Philadelphia 6-5. The Mets have won six in a row and 13 of 15, and now are just two games behind, the closest they've been since April 27.

"This was like kids playing a World Series game," said Gregg Jefferies, who drove in four runs and hit an RBI single during the Mets' rally.

In other games, Cincinnati whipped Los Angeles 10-6, Atlanta got past San Diego 11-10 in 12 innings, Chicago beat St. Louis 3-2 in 10 innings and Houston defeated San Francisco 8-2.

Pittsburgh took a 5-1 lead into the ninth, but Tim Wallach's two-run double with no outs finished Bill Landrum. Reliever Bob Kipper then walked Larry Walker to load the bases.

Enter Belinda, who had no major league saves at that point. But he earned No. 1, striking out Nelson Santovenia and retiring Junior Noboa and Tim Raines on fly balls.

Neal Heaton (10-2) tied Frank Viola for the league lead in victories. Dennis Martinez (5-5) took the loss.

Barry Bonds got three hits, including his 13th home run, and stole two bases. He went 8-for-10 with four RBIs in the three-game series and extended his hitting streak to 11.

Mets 6, Phillies 5
Teufel's single off former Mets reliever Roger McDowell (2-3) kept New York's winning streak alive.

Trailing 5-3, Howard Johnson and Dave Magadan opened the ninth with singles off Don Carman and Jefferies' single pulled the Mets within a run. McDowell (2-3) retired Darryl Strawberry on a fly ball, but walked Kevin McReynolds to load the bases.

Astros 8, Giants 2

Bill Gullickson beat San Francisco for the first time in 10 starts since 1985 and helped himself with a two-run single at Houston.

Gullickson (5-5) gave up eight hits in 8 2-3 innings. Don Robinson (2-1) was the loser.

Franklin Stubbs hit a two-run homer, his ninth, for a 5-0 lead in the fifth. He replaced Glenn Davis, who left in the second inning with a strained rib cage muscle.

Reds 10, Dodgers 6

Chris Sabo's three-run homer capped a six-run sixth inning against Fernando Valenzuela and led rough-and-tumble Cincinnati to its ninth victory in 12 games and a nine-game lead in the NL West.

Braves 11, Padres 10

Andres Thomas led off the 12th inning with his second home run of the season and the Braves won a wild one in Atlanta. Manager Bobby Cox got his first victory in two games since replacing Russ Nixon.

Cubs 3, Cardinals 2

Pinch-hitter Hector Villanueva's single with two outs and the bases loaded in the 10th inning drove in the winning run as Chicago won at Wrigley Field and ended a three-game losing streak.

HOUSTON — Houston Astros second baseman Eric Yelding (15) goes airborne to complete the double play as San Francisco Giants Matt Williams slides into second base in second inning action in Houston.

White Sox break out the broom against A's

By The Associate Press
The Chicago White Sox took Oakland's best shot, then countered with a knockout punch of their own.

AL

Stung by Dave Henderson's game-tying, two-out, two-run homer in the ninth, the White Sox responded with Dan Pasqua's leadoff home run in the 10th to beat the Athletics 3-2 Sunday and complete a three-game sweep. The victory pulled the White Sox within one game of the division-leading Athletics in the American League West.

Pasqua hit Dave Stewart's second pitch of the 10th for an opposite-field homer. Anticipating an Oakland loss, Stewart (9-6) was already in the clubhouse icing down his arm when Henderson's blast tied the game. But he put his jersey back on and came out for the final inning.

Pasqua's homer handed Oakland its first extra-inning loss of the season. It also was the first time since June 1988 that the Athletics were swept in a three-game series at home.

Royals 11, Twins 2

Minnesota allowed a club-record 23 hits, including a career-high five by Jim Eisenreich.

The 23 hits by Kansas City also were an American League high for the year, topping Oakland's 21 against Seattle on April 13.

Mariners 11, Rangers 5

Dave Valle had a three-run homer among three hits and added four RBIs to tie a career high, and Harold Reynolds had four of Seattle's season-high 18 hits.

Valle hit a three-run homer in the second inning, his fourth, singled during a five-run third and added a run-scoring single in the seventh. Erik Hanson (7-6) allowed eight hits and five runs in 7 2-3 innings, struck out eight and walked four.

Blue Jays 8, Yankees 3

George Bell hit two home runs, giving him five in his last four games, as Toronto kept its slim lead in the AL East.

Bell started a four-run rally in the second inning with a leadoff homer off Chuck Cary (4-3). He added a two-run homer in the third, his 17th of the season, and a run-scoring single in the fourth.

Red Sox 2, Orioles 0

Dwight Evans, who homered twice the previous day, hit another home run and a sacrifice fly as the Red Sox swept the three-game series.

Greg Harris (7-3) gave up five hits in eight innings and Jeff Gray got his first save as Baltimore lost its fourth straight.

Indians 9, Brewers 5

Chris James had four hits and four RBIs and John Farrell got his first victory in six weeks.

The Indians chased Milwaukee starter Mark Knudson (5-4) during a four-run second. James capped the rally with a two-run single off reliever Randy Veres.

Angels 10, Tigers 2

Chili Davis, Kent Anderson and Lance Parrish homered for the Angels.

Gibson going back to Tigers?

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A trade that could send Kirk Gibson from Los Angeles to the Detroit Tigers may be precipitated by the outfielder's reluctance to re-sign with the Dodgers.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting two unidentified sources close to the Dodgers, reported Sunday that the 1988 National League MVP probably will not re-sign with the club. The sources said the Dodgers have begun trade talks with the Tigers at Gibson's request.

Gibson helped lead the Tigers to victory over the San Diego in the 1984 World Series. In the first game of the 1988 Series, Gibson hit a dramatic, two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning to give the Dodgers a 5-4 victory over the Oakland Athletics.

The homer, in Gibson's only appearance in the Series, supplied the momentum the Dodgers needed to win in five games.

The newspaper said the Tigers have offered left-handed pitcher Frank Tanana, but that the Dodgers are holding out for an additional pitching prospect, perhaps minor leaguer Steve Searcy.

In Cincinnati, where the Dodgers were playing the Reds without an injured Gibson in the lineup, the 1984 and 1988 World Series hero would neither confirm nor deny the report.

"I'm not going to be forced to make a statement because somebody writes an article," he said. "What I say to people behind closed doors is my business."

"When I choose to share it, I'll share it, because what happens is it gets taken out of context," the 33-year-old Gibson said. "End of story."

The 36-year-old Tanana, shellied Sunday in a 10-2 loss to California, called the report "totally stupid."

"I don't know who wrote the thing, but he obviously didn't think it well out at all," Tanana said. "I have very little respect for sources. When a writer uses sources instead of mentioning names, to me it needs to be totally disregarded."

Detroit manager Sparky Anderson, who denied that a deal was in the works as recently as Friday night, acknowledged Sunday that he was aware of Gibson's request to return to Detroit. But he was concerned about possible tampering charges should he comment on whether he would like to see Gibson return.

"I don't think it's a question of that," Anderson said. "I've always liked him as a person, but I can't speak about whether I'd like him back. I cannot talk about him at all."

Fred Claire, the Dodgers' executive vice president for player personnel, also sidestepped trade questions but would not deny there are ongoing talks concerning Gibson.

"I have talked to Kirk and I have talked to his agent. Beyond that, I'm not going to get into those conversations," Claire said.

Without discussing specific teams, Claire said the Dodgers are looking to improve their pitching.

"I have said we're looking for pitching, for starting pitching, so we do have that pursuit, and I'm not ready to say where it's going to lead," Claire said.

Anderson says his outfield is set and that Gibson would only be used as a designated hitter if the Tigers did re-acquire him.

"Because of the problems with his leg, he would probably be a DH, outfielder and ex- teammate Chet Lemon said. "The continuity on the ballclub is pretty good right now, but a healthy Gibson would be an asset to any ballclub."

BIG LEAGUE

Big Spring #1 6, Big Spring #2 3
Dimas Morales pitched a two-hitter, leading the Big Spring #1 team over their #2 team. Morales went the distance, striking out seven. He allowed singles to Michael Lozano and Sammy Gonzales.

The winners got a three-run triple by Gerald Cobos in the third inning. Michael Lucero and Shane Myrick combined for five strikeouts.

Big Spring #1 6, Big Spring #2 0

Freddy Rodriguez fired a one-hitter, striking out 10, and picking off three runners off first base.

Myrick and Eric Hernandez pitched for the #2 team.

Stephen Robles and Joe Conaway hit doubles for the winners. Rodriguez, Marvin Rubio and Mike Hilario added singles.

The lone hit off Rodriguez was a base hit by Louis Soldan.

died again and Alcott bogeyed after shanking her tee shot far off to the right.

Sheehan added birdies on Nos. 16 and 17 — for six on the back nine — and a bogey on the final hole, while Alcott parred all three holes.

Alcott, who had seven birdies in both Friday and Saturday's rounds, had only one birdie and two bogeys Sunday.

Kathy Postlewait, who began the day tied with Sheehan in second at 12 under, had six bogeys and a birdie to finish with a fifth-place 281, behind Tammie Green's 280.

Sheehan's $60,000 prize money makes her the LPGA's top money-winner for the season with $357,474. She has won three tournaments this year — including the McDonald's Championship two weeks ago, and finished second at the Corning Classic in May.

"I've been playing so well lately," she said after spraying the tournament sponsors with champagne at the award ceremony.

"My confidence is up... you just feel happy coming to the golf course in the morning."

on the PGA Tour. But much more than the money is involved, he said.

"I showed there's still some life left, some fun left. These are the days you look forward to," he said.

"There aren't many of them. And, at this stage of my career, I probably appreciate these two more than any others," said Irwin, who had gone through a five-year non-winning string before breaking through in the U.S. Open.

"I'm proud of myself in the way I reacted after such an emotional week at the Open," he said.

And he earned renewed respect from his fellow pros.

"It's hard to follow up any win," said Paul Azinger, who chased Irwin to the Buick Classic title and fell short by two strokes. "I can't imagine what it takes to follow up an Open victory."

Irwin gained his 19th career triumph on a 269 total, 15 under par on the Westchester Country Club course.

Starting the final round in a tie for the lead, he played the front side in four under par, took a four-shot lead at the turn and held off any would-be challengers with a decisive string of eight consecutive pars, capped by an 18-hole birdie that again sent him to the gallery ropes to slap high-fives with spectators.

"Being behind, I figured I'd have to shoot a good score to have a chance, and I certainly thought 65 would be good enough," said Azinger, who once closed within a stroke of the lead.

"But I'd have had to shoot 63 just to catch him," Azinger said and shook his head.

Rookie Kirk Triplett came on with a 66 and was third at 272. He was followed by Ken Green at 67-273.

Blaine McCallister, who shared the third-round lead with Irwin, drifted back with a 71.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Isiah Thomas couldn't resist a little Dan Quayle bashing during a trip to the White House with his fellow Detroit Pistons.

Thomas, most valuable player in the NBA finals, poked fun at the vice president during a ceremony Thursday for showing up at two of the team's worst games all year.

"Thanks for all your support," Thomas said. Quayle grinned and waved his arms in protest.

President Bush paid tribute to the Pistons for their second consecutive championship victory. The team got to go to the White House the first time, too.

"I think they're going to have to

BILL LAIMBEER

Bush called Piston bad boy Bill Laimbeer "my old friend Mr. Congeniality."

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — Home writer Martha Stewart has angered some in her hometown for refusing to disclose how much she raised for charity through a benefit decorator show house.

The show house was open for 20 days last month to benefit the Hole in the Wall Gang Camp Fund, a charity for seriously ill children and their families founded by Stewart's Westport neighbor, Paul Newman.

"I don't think we should give the dollar amount," Stewart said.

give us a wing," Thomas said. "They have an East Wing and a West Wing. Now they'll have a Piston Wing."

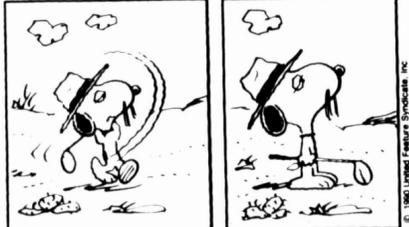

Bush got a few good-hearted licks in during a Rose Garden ceremony.

TUESDAY, JUNE 26, 1990

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE:

author Pearl Buck, Olympic great Babe Didrikson, movie villain Peter Lorre, baseball inventor Abner Doubleday.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your associates begin to show more respect for your analytical abilities. New financial options become available. Romance takes on deeper significance. You see an older person in a different light.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An artistic or creative project presents you with a unique challenge. A bold approach will produce fantastic results. Listen to a friend's ideas on solving a financial problem. Enjoy happy romance!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get an early start today to surge ahead of the pack. Follow your lawyer's or accountant's advice to get a better return on an investment. Continue to keep detailed tax records.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your intuition helps you solve a business problem. Consult partner or mate before making a final decision. Sibling rivalry must be corralled. Mend a quarrel. A candid discussion will alleviate stress.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A financial windfall comes your way when you need it most. Someone who is generous could have ulterior motives. Be on guard! A romantic relationship will respond favorably to gentle nurturing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance has its usual ups and downs. Your honesty commands respect. Forge ahead with your career or financial plans. You have the jump on your competitors. Today's events will bring new monetary rewards.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your loved ones are in your corner when it comes to taking on extra responsibilities. Moonlighting could be the best answer to a temporary cash shortage. Revising the family budget will help, too.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A close friend's announcement could affect your life in a major way. Avoid voicing your doubts regarding a financial matter. Mate or partner could be underestimating your determination.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A terrific day to make a fresh start. An older person runs interference for you, helping you launch a pet project. Others are looking to you for leadership. Do not let them down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Learning computer skills will boost your earning potential. An out-of-town visitor wants to stay with you but your busy schedule may not permit it. Invite this friend out for a fun evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A great day for those in sales, entertainment or the arts. Do not neglect routine work tasks. There could be strings attached to an associate's offer of financial backing. Romance is iffy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Rely on experts' advice if planning to invest in real estate. Unexpected business developments could postpone travel. Suggest a viable alternative. The romantic outlook is promising. Follow your heart.

Russian roulette rules broken

UNIVERSAL CITY (AP) — A 15-year-old teen-ager was fatally shot on his birthday by a 19-year-old man who broke the rules of a deadly game they were playing, police said.

Christopher Osborne, who would have been a freshman next fall at Judson High School, died about 4:30 a.m. Sunday.

Douglas McCanna has been charged with murder and was being held at the Bexar County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bail Sunday night.

Police were told that both Osborne and McCanna had been drinking and were playing Russian Roulette. In the deadly game of chance, a competitor spins the cylinder of a revolver holding only one bullet, then holds the gun to his head and pulls the trigger.

Universal City Police Department Lt. Charles B. Dewey said the pistol had clicked harmlessly three or four times when McCanna was given the weapon again.

"After pointing the gun at his own head, the suspect aimed the gun at point-blank range at the victim, fired, and the bullet struck the victim below the left eye, just to the left side of the nose by the nostril," Dewey said.

Cannon shoots for Dutch exchange

Summer may be half over, but for John Cannon his vacation is just about to begin.

Cannon, the son of Frank and Pam Cannon, will be in Kesteren, the Netherlands, as a Youth For Understanding International Exchange student until around mid-August. John, along with literally thousands of other hopefuls, applied for the program for an opportunity to visit Europe.

"About 15,000 apply for the chance to go overseas, and from there they cut down the size to 5,000 for the semifinals list," Cannon said. "An interview is set up which may last from one or two hours. Around 3,000 are chosen."

"The way we are chosen is from essay questions that we have to fill out — about eight in all. There's a lot of paper work to complete, and there is also a personal evaluation, from questioning your best friend to your teachers."

After the rigorous testing, Cannon was chosen and now he is preparing for the unknown.

"I am really excited to go because it will give me a chance to experience life in another country," he said. "I can learn a new culture."

Besides living in the Netherlands, Cannon will be sailing the North Sea. A six-day cruise is set for him to zigzag in old Dutch ships visiting villages and cities. He will get an insight on how the fish market works in

U.S. joins other nations sending aid to Iranians

By NEIL MacFARQUHAR
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran — Planes loaded with food, medicine and tents are converging on earthquake-stricken Iran from around the world, among them the first private American relief mission to the country in more than a decade.

Authorities now are faced with the difficult task of getting supplies into the affected areas. More than 60 aftershocks jolted the quake zone in northwestern Iran on Sunday, triggering landslides along one key relief route.

Tehran radio said Sunday that 68 relief aircraft had landed at Tehran's Mehrabad airport during a 24-hour period. Among them was a plane carrying medicine and other supplies from the United States.

Another plane carrying U.S. government aid was due today.

The shipment that arrived Sunday was the first of its kind to be accepted by Iran since the hostage crisis of 1979-80, when 52 Americans were held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Two countries that also have suffered devastating earthquakes in recent years, the Soviet Union and Mexico, were among those sending assistance to help victims of Thursday's quake.

Leaders of Iran's Arab neighbors, including Iraq, which waged an eight-year war with Iran, issued statements of sympathy and support.

Pope John Paul II called on the international community to help earthquake victims, asking for "a real and generous demonstration of solidarity with our brothers. Let us pray that their suffering is alleviated."

The Vatican was among the many international donors.

LULAC members choose new leader

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — LULAC members rejected their incumbent national president and his slate and installed his longtime rival during a convention punctuated with rowdy debate and allegations of corruption.

After four days of bitter infighting and battles for control of the 110,000-member organization, the old and new presidents pledged unity.

"I will give my full support to (new president) Jose Velez," Jose Garcia De Lara said after conceding the race.

Velez, who had been president for two terms, grasped De Lara's hand and said the two would work together.

"We are walking out of this convention united as one LULAC," Velez said after being chosen by acclamation.

Velez said during a news conference after the election that one of his first orders of business would be to return LULAC's national headquarters to Washington, D.C. The group is now based in San Antonio.

The 61st national convention of the League of United Latin American Citizens, at times on the verge of becoming more like a bar-room brawl, was rife with accusations of vote-buying and election fraud.

Proceedings stopped regularly during Sunday's general assembly while delegates tried to shout each other down in bursts of political enthusiasm over parliamentary procedure.

Disgruntled supporters of De Lara, vowing to return for next year's election scheduled for Chicago, accused Velez, a Las Vegas, Nev., entrepreneur, of using his wealth to buy the presidency.

Cora Esquivel, who had been the group's vice president for women during the past year, said, "The principles of LULAC were bought

Cycling friends draw stares

TEMPLE (AP) — Johnnie Loraine Matl always takes her friends along on her afternoon bike trips. But a bicycle built for two, or three, is really unnecessary.

Residents in Rockdale have grown accustomed to seeing the 60-year-old woman biking with a parrot riding on a custom-made handlebar perch and a dog curled up in a padded basket in the back.

Neitia, a 6-year-old female Amazon parrot, is accustomed to speaking her mind. She's not the least bit bashful about begging for a chance to "Go bye, bye" with "mother."

Hana, a 15-year-old female mini-dachshund, won't be left at home either.

Although Mrs. Matl has a whole flock of outspoken birds, Neitia is the only one that insists on the daily outing.

"Every day about 5 o'clock, she says, 'Mother, mother, bye, bye,'" Mrs. Matl said.

"Neitia loves to go; she is so much company," Mrs. Matl said. "She talks to me. She sees something; she'll just die laughing. She gets tickled listening to me. We go down the highway laughing and everybody thinks we are crazy. We have a lot of fun."

Usually, at Neitia's insistence, the trio drops off at a Rockdale fast food restaurant for the parrot's favorite treat, a corn dog and a cup of black coffee.

WACO — Producer Luther Mitchell, left, and Rappin' Reggie Reed plan to use rap in a positive way on a projected album. The two plan to present an anti-drug message to teenagers.

Rappers don't knock anti-drug popularity

By CARL HOOVER
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas (AP) — When Reggie Reed released a tape of his first "positive rap," a short anti-drug message titled "Get Busy, Not Dizzy," little did he realize the vein of young popularity he had mined.

His rap rang a bell for hundreds of Waco-area kids looking for a local celebrity to follow and Reed — Rappin' Reggie — obliged.

Not only did many parents find their children reciting the lyrics of a Reggie rap with the accuracy of a tape recorder, but strange lexical usages sometimes surfaced in their speech, like ending phrases with "word" — make that "werrrd" — which is the rapper's traditional sign-off.

In the two years since "Get Busy, Not Dizzy," the Waco High graduate has raised his profile in area media.

Reed, 24, hosts "Kids Klub," a children's program on KWKT-TV on weekday afternoons, as well as twice-weekly spots on "The Morning Show" on KWTX-FM.

Between his broadcast duties, Reed's schedule is packed with promotional visits to malls, schools, businesses and wherever a remote broadcast is needed.

During the school year, Reed makes frequent stops at area schools where he visits with young fans, encouraging them to stay off drugs and keep their minds on studies. He's also been a disc jockey at chemical-free graduation dances for local high schools.

And if he and partner Luther Mitchell have their way and find the money, Reed plans to use his local fame to help kids in school with ABC's and multiplication tables set to — what else — rap.

"While we're in the public's eye, we're going to try and do something," he said.

His project, an album tentatively titled "Positive Rap," would feature a side devoted to anti-drug messages. The flip side would be the "education" side, with raps containing ABCs, spelling examples and multiplication tables.

Reed points out that the album is a personal endeavor, one unaffiliated with his work at KWKT-TV and KWTX-FM. As a result, the main obstacle is raising the $1,200 Reed and Mitchell need to press and distribute the album.

Mitchell, who's worked with Reed in various music and rap ventures since their junior high days, runs Matrix 7, a combination studio and typesetting/copy shop.

The studio operator, a 1988 graduate of McLennan Community College's commercial music program, produced Reed's "Get Busy, Not Dizzy" cassette tape and works with Central Texas gospel groups like the Silver Angels and The Stars of Harmony.

Mitchell is the musician of the duo, a keyboardist adept in funk, blues, rhythm-and-blues and even a smattering of Beethoven. While Reed provides the lyric content, he's the one who underlays the music and rhythm.

So what happens if the funds don't come through? Reed is scaling back on plans.

Military vessels called cadavers

BEAUMONT (AP) — Ships that once formed the nation's military hardware have been transformed into a controversial flotilla of what one congressman calls maritime cadavers.

The National Defense Reserve Fleet, which includes 99 vessels docked in Beaumont, has become a flotilla of rusting, peeling ships in the 44 years since most were in active duty.

"Much of this fleet, once a valuable maritime asset, is literally rusting away at anchor," U.S. Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., said during a recent hearing on the fleet.

"Many of these ships have not had their propulsion, cargo-handling gear, hydraulics and other major systems tested for decades," said Wyden, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Regulation, Business Opportunities and Energy.

But U.S. Maritime Administration officials say looks could be deceiving for the oldest ships in the fleet.

"Peeling paint and rusting railings have nothing to do with the seaworthiness of a vessel," said Fred Splinter, superintendent of Beaumont's reserve fleet installation.

The administration doesn't waste money on pretty paint jobs for its older ships, Splinter said. Engine rooms and running gear are kept dehumidified and sealed. Electricity is passed through hulls or through cathodes strung around the outside of hulls to minimize rust.

"Most of these older ships have steam turbine power plants," Splinter said. "They operate on heat and water. Take away the heat and the water and they can last indefinitely."

But Wyden and his staff disagree, advocating that the fleet be scrapped.

The reserve fleet got its start at the end of World War II as a place to dock Victory and Liberty ships. By 1950, the federal government had 2,227 ships in mothballs. Now there are 317 — most in Beaumont — and the others at James River in Virginia and Suisun Bay in California.

Splinter argued the old ships can more easily operate in crowded, primitive, combat-damaged ports and handle more odd-sized military cargo than modern ships because they are smaller than today's vessels.

But finding crews who know how to operate the old ships' engines and cargo-handling gear might be difficult, said Steve Jennings, subcommittee staff director. It might take as long to train crewmen as it would to refit the vessels, his staff found.

The oldest 72 ships of the fleet are World War II Victory Ships. A larger version of Liberty Ships, they were built by the hundreds to meet wartime shipping needs.

In the past 44 years, reserve fleet ships have been put into emergency service six times: during the Korean Conflict in the early 1950s; to haul coal to northern Europe and grain to India in the early 1950s; during the worldwide shipping shortage when the Suez Canal closed in 1956; the Berlin crisis of 1961; to hold surplus grain for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the mid-1950s to mid-1960s.

"We were really fortunate ourselves because John's dad works for Chevron. When a Chevron employee's child is chosen by the YFU program, they pay for all the expenses."

Cannon will be a sophomore when school resumes in the fall. His future plans are already in order.

Members of the Velez camp criticized De Lara, a San Antonio, Texas, architect, for using heavy-handed tactics such as suspension and expulsion of members in order to maintain power.

"During the past year there has been an address made to the corruption that has been going on in certain parts of the organization," said Paula Plasencia, a De Lara supporter from Des Moines, Iowa.

"We had a board that was not going to stand by with eyes closed, ears covered and mouth shut and let corruption continue," said Ms. Plasencia, who had been vice president for youth.

The real battle of the day centered around a dispute over whether 43 recently formed local LULAC councils, made up primarily of Velez supporters, would be admitted as voting delegates.

The elections bogged down for hours over the validity of the councils, the majority made up of Filipinos from California.

Velez supporters have said De Lara was abusing his power of office in trying to limit the number of delegates for Velez.

The De Lara camp had said LULAC's constitution calls for councils to be at least two-thirds Hispanic and that Velez had bought the new members to stack votes.

After hours of unruly debate, a roll call vote was ordered on the council issue. About 40 votes before the tally would have been final — midway through the Texas vote — De Lara appeared on stage and withdrew his candidacy, saying "the people have spoken."

"It is obvious the organization wants its door and arms open to the new members," De Lara said in a gracious manner rarely seen during the four-day convention.

"At this time it is obvious that the organization is ready for new leadership. I wish to withdraw my nomination, my fellow LULACers, to elect brother Joe Velez by acclamation," De Lara said.

De Lara pledged his full support to Velez, as the two men stood arm-in-arm on the stage. This was the third time Velez had faced De Lara for presidency of the nation's oldest and largest Hispanic advocacy organization.

One by one, all other incumbents then withdrew their nominations.

As he left the auditorium, De Lara, beset by well wishers, said the struggle the organization had gone through would not splinter it, but strengthen it.

"The foundation we have constructed is fruitful and strong," De Lara said of his two-term presidency.

With a handful of the approximately 815 delegates left in the hall, 45 resolutions on issues ranging from pending lawsuits against LULAC to immigration laws and Puerto Rican statehood were passed en masse by a voice vote.

While both candidates criticized the media for ignoring the issues and focusing on the bitter political infighting, there is little difference between the two on political and social issues. The debate has centered on loyalty, leadership

Forensics scientists use video technology

HOUSTON (AP) — Forensic scientists are using TV technology as another tool to identify decomposed bodies.

Video superimposition, new to Texas but used in several other states, uses two television cameras to film facial images to match features. One camera focuses on a still photograph of the person while another films the skull.

In a control booth, an electronic mixing device superimposes the skeletal image above the photo image to see if they match.

"It's useful as not only positive identification, but also to eliminate identification," said Karen Taylor, Department of Public Safety forensic artist in Austin. "We can put an officer on the right track toward establishing an ID, or keep him from continuing down a wrong track."

Forensic experts say they hope superimposition will join more traditional methods of identifying bodies and fingerprints, such as comparing dental records and fingerprints.

Authorities have compared bone fragments to still photos to identify bodies for many years, but the television cameras were not introduced in Texas until 1985, said Ms. Taylor.

The DPS, the only Texas agency currently offering this service to investigators, has conducted fewer than 20 superimpositions in the past year, she said. "It's used in instances when investigators don't have the foggiest idea of who the person is," Ms. Taylor said.

Esmeralda Rivas, a Robert E. Lee High School student, was the first Harris County resident to be identified with video superimposition.

Ms. Rivas, 16, had been missing since March 1989. When authorities found skeletal remains of a gunshot victim in a wooded area last fall, her family was unable to identify the girl because the body was so badly decomposed. But the superimposition made a positive identification a few weeks ago.

Chief investigator Cecil Wingo of the Harris County medical examiner's office he sees potential in the new technology, particularly in tough cases.

"Sometimes, there aren't dental X-rays available," Wingo said. "And we can't match fingerprints if there isn't already a set with police. It gets tricky after that."

County investigators have identified more than 75 percent of the 1,722 unnamed bodies that have arrived at the morgue since 1975. But 219 bodies remain unidentified.

For hygienic reasons, most bodies are released for burial in the Harris County Cemetery after six weeks.
