No leads in locating escapee

Snyder prison escapee Travis Gray remains at large, and officials are not reporting any new leads in the case, a Texas Department of Criminal Justice official said.

"He's still at large," said TDCJ Public Information Officer Charles Brown. "They (authorities) aren't releasing any information as to what they're doing."

Authorities from TDCJ and the Texas Rangers are cooperating with local law enforcement officials all over West Texas, Brown said.

Gray escaped Wednesday June 20 from the Snyder facility where he had been incarcerated since early April. He was serving a 40-year sentence for the murder of his wife.

The Highland Addition will sponsor its 22nd annual Fourth of July parade Wednesday starting at 10 a.m.

Organizer Kay Burns said parade entrants should gather before 10 a.m. at the corner of Stonehaven and Highland Streets. The parade will progress from there down Highland Street to Goliad Middle School.

"Kids should be here earlier to get a number," Burns said. Both adults and children are invited to join in any of eight contest categories.

The categories are: strollers and wagons; walkers with costumes and pets; tricycles and Big Wheels; bicycles for kids aged up to eight years; bikes for ages nine and up; scooters and skateboards; and motorized vehicles.

Neighborhood residents will be judged on the best mailbox decoration.

"This is a neighborhood thing, but everybody is welcome," Burns said. "We would like to invite everybody to come be in the parade or just watch."

Well-dressed entrants will compete for ribbons and silver dollars, she said.

At the parade's end there will be cookies, lemonade and patriotic songs before the awards are given out.

The parade is financed through donations from the neighborhood, though those are scarce this year, Burns said.

"It gets tough to get enough money," Burns said. Also running it, we sometimes have several hundred kids descend on us at once. It takes a lot of work."

Burns said she and Jen McCutcheon have organized the parade for several years.

"I guess we do it for patriotism," she said. "That and it's just a lot of fun."

Burns said she expects about 200 hundred entrants.

"Mostly it will be neighborhood people and their families," she said. "Maybe one-tenth will be city people."

Hang glider competition ends in tragedy

By DEBBIE LINCECUM

One participant in Big Spring's hang gliding competition was killed Saturday night and three others hospitalized after a two-vehicle accident on Highway 176 two miles east of Andrews. A highway department official said the driver who hit them may have been drunk.

Paul Basil of Austin, 37, a competitor in the event, was pronounced dead at the scene, as was the driver of the other vehicle, Andrews resident Robert Walls, 31.

Trooper Johnny Josselet of the Andrews County Highway Department said he believes Walls had used alcohol, but a blood test will take seven to 10 days to analyze.

"I strongly believe there was (alcohol use), but we'll just have to wait and see," Josselet said.

Three other hang gliders were taken to Midland Memorial Hospital by ambulance. According to hospital public information reports, Jeffrey Hunt, 27, of Austin, is in fair condition. Steven Stackable, 35, of Austin, and Charles Porter, 37, of Lakeway, remain in the intensive care unit, ac-ording to the report.

According to reports, Hunt sustained head injuries, second degree burns to his legs and a broken arm. Stackable reportedly has a broken femur and fractured hip, and Porter a broken wrist and possible head injuries.

A fifth hang gliding competitor, the hang gliding contest. The competitors had flown on short trips Friday and Saturday from the Big Spring McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark to surrounding towns.

The five hang gliders were returning from the day's flight to Hobbs Saturday, Roger said.

"This (accident) is just a terrible shock," Roger said. "Eight of them had made it to Hobbs Saturday. It had been a real good day for them. It's just terrible that something like this happened."

Eight competitors in two vans were returning to the airpark hangar they had been using as a

Roger said local Department of Public Safety officer Marvin Keenan assisted the highway patrol officers on the scene.

"He (Keenan) really went out of his way," she said. "He should be commended for his help with this." Keenan and the DPS had loaned the group the hangar for the three-day event, she said.

Roger said Sunday's final day of competition was cancelled and most of the participants have already left Big Spring to return home.

The event had been organized by Hunt to offer gliding enthusiasts the chance to compete for trophies.

Also injured in the accident was Jonathan Alacaron, 14, of Andrews. Willie Garcia Jr., 18, driver of the third vehicle, was treated and released from Permian General Hospital, said a hospital spokesman.

"This is just a terrible shock. Eight of them had made it to Hobbs Saturday. It had been a real good day for them. It's just terrible that something like this happened." Linda Roger, Big Spring Chamber of Commerce.

Euphoria tempered by strike warnings

EAST BERLIN — East Germany plunged headfirst into the capitalist world today after its weekend economic merger with West Germany, but new worries and warning strikes blunted the euphoria of holding a new hard currency.

Many East Germans were snatching up long desired goods with their new West German marks, but some were shocked by higher prices.

Workers at two East German factories staged warning strikes today. They were the first of what is expected to be a wave of work stoppages.

In another protest, coal dealers used their trucks to block loading points in four places in East Berlin.

The city's 66 coal dealers were protesting the end of state subsidies that were a hallmark of the nation's Communist-run economy. State subsidies have been halted as the country adopts capitalism.

On the first business day since economic union, long lines formed at most grocery stores and other shops.

The official ADN news agency, reporting from Potsdam just southwest of Berlin, said prices for East German-produced butter and cheese were about the same pose a toast to the currency union. Since midnight Saturday the West German mark is also the East German currency.

as before, but the price of milk had more than doubled.

It said consumers were comparing prices and shopping carefully.

One shopper, 70-year-old Werner Ludwig of East Berlin, said he saw Western electronic goods of lower prices and better quality than those available before. "But on the other hand, things that you need daily, like bread and flour, are much more expensive," he said. "How often do you buy a color TV? You need bread every day."

Today's warning strikes — at the Ludwigsfelde, automobile parts plant just south of Berlin and the Brandenburg steel works west of Berlin — were for better pay and working conditions, ADN said.

East German workers are demanding to be brought up to parity with their rich neighbors in West Germany. Others were expected to strike in a bid to keep their factories from closing.

Both East and West German officials predict the next few months will be difficult, mostly because many of East Germany's 8,000 state-owned companies are expected to close.

Burdened by heavy debt and unable to generate enough sales to pay their employees in West German marks, many East German factories and businesses are expected to fold even before they can convert to private ownership.

The sobering reality contrasted with the outburst of euphoria that greeted the economic merger.

At the stroke of midnight Saturday, the West German mark became the official East German currency and the West German central bank took control of East

Worker shortage threatens recovery

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — A meager, recent recovery in Texas' tattered oil and gas drilling industry is being threatened by a shortage of roughnecks.

Tens of thousands of trained rig operators have left the field, and the current shortage has caused many of the state's independent drilling companies to turn away work or use inexperienced crews.

Although the situation has not yet become a crisis, it has set off alarms in the industry as drilling activity increases.

"We have six rigs, but people for only four," said Ken McPeters, president of Ziadrill, a contractor active throughout West Texas. "If we get any additional work, we just won't be able to man the rigs."

"The personnel problem is going to be one of the critical issues to face our industry," said Bill Lang, manager of marketing research for Baker Hughes Inc. in Houston. "There's a lot of activity increase out there, and it's going to make it only worse."

Baker Hughes estimates that the number of working oil and gas rigs in the United States will grow to 1,225 by 1992, an increase of more than 200 from now. In Texas, the rig count is up about 90 in the past

Home influences local dropout rate

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

The home environment has a great influence on whether or not a high school student decides to stay in school, say local school administrators.

"Some of these kids (who drop out) have lost interest in school," said Forsan School Superintendent J.F. Poyner. "Some never took an interest. A lot of the problem is that they come from a home which places no value on education."

Poyner and Big Spring Superintendent Bill McQueary agreed that the instability of many families only adds to problems such as peer pressure and failure.

"A big factor in the (dropout) problem is the lack of a positive home environment," McQueary said. "Though pregnancy, drugs and alcohol, and failure in school are factors, we find that a home in which education is stressed will encourage our students to stay in school."

Stanton High School principal Bill Young said his school is fortunate — it has kept its dropout rate very low. He said probably one or two students dropped out this year. Being sure of the number, however, is hard to tell, he said.

"Once a student turns 17, he may come in and say they are moving,"

Young said. "Then we will never get a request for the records. Did they drop out? We just can't be sure."

The school system often takes the blame for drop-outs, he said.

"We (schools) have been getting the blame for everything that is wrong with education for the past few years. It pretty much comes down to parental involvement. High achievers come from encouraging homes."

Principal Richard Gibson, of Grady High School, said he had only seen one student drop out during the past school year.

"I know it's a major problem at some schools," he said. "I think it's that kids don't have enough to do at home. Their parents give them too much money, not enough love. That's also the reason kids turn to drugs, in my opinion."

Many area schools have a plan to keep kids in school. Garden City principal Charles Zachary said though the school does not have a real problem — under five percent drop out each year — it does try to deal with the issue.

"We try to see that they have an opportunity to be involved in school," Zachary said. "We've found that kids like to be a part of something."

State GOP says no to abortion

FORT WORTH (AP) — The state Republican Party on Saturday adopted a platform that supports restrictions on abortion — ending two days of intra-party warfare over the issue.

Delegates to the 1990 state GOP Convention approved a position that:

• Calls for a constitutional amendment prohibiting abortions except when the mother's life is endangered.

• Sets goals for legislation to restrict abortions, with some exceptions during the first three months of pregnancy.

The convention ended abruptly when an abortion rights movement fizzled in the final hours.

The legislative goals were endorsed by party leaders, including U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams and state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer.

Williams, however, said he opposes the part of the platform calling for a constitutional ban on abortion except in cases when the mother's life is endangered by pregnancy.

"I don't accept it," he told reporters after speaking at the convention.

Williams opposes abortion except in cases of rape, incest or if the mother's life is endangered. He said he supports the part of the platform that sets legislative goals to restrict abortions, including requiring parental consent for minors to have an abortion.

Rescuers snatch men from lake

DALLAS (AP) — Despite spending more than 13 hours in a lake hanging onto a small tree for dear life, 82-year-old Alfonso Foley says he will gladly get back in his boat and go fishing again.

"When I get another boat," Foley said Sunday night.

"Right now, I don't have any fishing equipment. I lost it all when our boat went down."

Foley and fishing companion Matthew Blalock, who also is 82, clung to a tree after their boat capsized on Lake Fork during a storm Tuesday. A pair of passing fishermen finally pulled them from the lake, which is about 50 miles east of Dallas.

Jim Robinson, one of the rescuers, said he was amazed the elderly men were able to survive.

"They're tough old birds," he said. "But I don't know how much longer they could have held on. They were pretty tired and weak when we found them."

Texans file for flood relief

DALLAS (AP) — More than 6,000 victims of record Texas flooding met the Sunday deadline for requesting federal disaster assistance, becoming eligible for millions of dollars in aid.

More than $5 million in disaster assistance has already been distributed by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which said it expects to pay more than double that amount on all the claims.

Texans applying after 6 p.m. Sunday for claims of damage from late spring flooding must justify the delay, said George Burgess, FEMA public information officer.

Since May 2, when President Bush made a disaster declaration, 6,034 Texas families and businesses have applied for assistance, said Burgess.

He said 2,642 of those were aided with a total of $2,287,046 in direct payments for temporary housing, while family grants totaling $2,852,957 went out from the Texas-Department of Human Services to 915 families.

"This is about what we expected," said Burgess. "We got preliminary figures from the Red Cross, and this is about the ballpark figure of what we knew was out there."

Probe focuses on Klan, skinheads

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal officials are investigating the Ku Klux Klan and a Texas skinhead group for possible civil rights violations stemming from the 1988 desecration of two Waco synagogues.

The two synagogues sustained thousands of dollars in damages, which consisted mostly of broken windows and swastikas spray-painted on the walls, the FBI said.

Authorities said they have information that members of the Dallas-based Confederate Hammerkins and at least one known Klan member were driving through Waco when the synagogues were vandalized on the night of July 4, 1988, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

Earlier this year, 12 skinheads pleaded guilty and five others were convicted in Dallas federal court for violating U.S. civil rights statutes by attacking Jewish religious institutions and assaulting blacks and Hispanics. Two received sentences of more than nine years.

In addition to the federal investigation, Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock has begun checking reports that the Klan possibly violated state laws by selling books, paraphernalia and robes without registering as a sales agent and paying Texas sales or franchise taxes.

Penalty for nonpayment of sales tax is 5 percent of the amount owed on sales for the first 30 days, 10 percent the next 60 days and 10 percent every year thereafter, officials said.

Failure to register and pay the franchise tax is punishable by a fine of up to $500 per day that a business has been in operation.

Meanwhile, a 150-nation international police organization has begun to study possible computer and trade networks between U.S., Canadian and European white supremacist groups, including some based in Texas.

The International Criminal Police Organization, known as Interpol, said it has grown increasingly concerned about the greater ease with which terrorist groups may cross national boundaries as a result of a liberalization in international trade and travel laws.

"Everyone is concerned about the ease with which terrorists may cross borders and their ability to link up," Don Lavey, head of anti-terrorism investigations at the Interpol headquarters in Lyons, France, told the Chronicle. "But, whatever happens, we must adapt."

Lavey said he has been concerned about computer networks between terrorist and other right-wing extremist groups, including neo-Nazi and Klan groups in the United States.

Firefighters contain Guadalupe blaze

GUADALUPE MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK (AP) —

Firefighters who have contained a stubborn, 6,014-acre blaze in this national wilderness park were attempting today to control the flames, using helicopters and tanker planes.

The blaze at Guadalupe Mountains National Park was declared contained at 6 p.m. Sunday, meaning that a fire line had been completed around it. Crews used two air tankers and a lead plane to drop fire-retardant material on the flames while six copters doused hot spots with water.

"It's not what you would call a normal, hard fire line all the way around the blaze," said Earle Rother, a fire information officer at the park. "In this case, it's partly a hand line, partly retardant drops, and sometimes it's also things like rock outcroppings."

"But for all intents and purposes, there is a line around the fire. The only flames burning are within that perimeter," he said.

Rother said an estimate of when flames would be brought under control has not been made.

The seven-day-old blaze was named the Frijole Fire after lightning struck Frijole Peak on Monday afternoon, triggering the largest fire in the park's history. It then burned into pristine McKittrick Canyon.

As the blaze was contained, 10 of the 26 firefighting crews at the park, from as far away as Alabama and North Carolina, were demobilized, said Rother, leaving 320 people at the scene.

The canyon's sheer cliffs, as high as 1,500 feet, have posed challenges for firefighters trying to stop the fast-moving fires.

The advance of flames into the pristine canyon this weekend was slowed by higher humidity, along with the helicopter and tanker drops and crews on the ground, said fire information officer Jim Payne.

The fire is just south of the New Mexico state line near Carlsbad Caverns National Park.

Firefighters wanted to surround and cut off the flames before they reached too far into the canyon, endangering plants and animals at its bottom.

The fire so far has caused less damage than originally thought to an area called the Bowl, which harbors the largest Douglas fir in Texas and several threatened and endangered plants and animals. The tree was saved, Payne said.

Summit forecast: hot, humid

HOUSTON (AP) — A local promotional campaign for next week's International Economic Summit proclaims: "Houston's Hot."

No kidding. If this is July and you're in Houston, it's 90-plus degree hot.

And as Houstonians are fond of saying: "It's not the heat, it's the humidity."

The weather is not expected to be comfortable just to accommodate President Bush and his world leader guests attending the three-day conference, July 9-11, in Bush's adopted hometown.

"The forecast will probably be hot and muggy. There's no way to avoid it," says Scott Kiser of the National Weather Service.

The likely steamy conditions already have altered the summit plans.

Bush conceded that Houston's sultry weather probably would melt his visitors so he asked the summit officials to scale back the arrival ceremony for the heads of state.

The opening rituals outdoors at Rice University are being shortened from 3½ hours to only about 90 minutes to allow more time for one-on-one meetings — in airconditioned comfort — involving the seven leaders of the world's largest industrial powers, summit director Fred Malek says.

Normal temperatures in Houston for July 9-11 are lows of 72 and highs of 93. But this summer, like much of the Southwest, Houston has been experiencing above normal temperatures. For nearly the entire month of June, high temperatures were well above 90 and often flirted with 100.

A 30-day outlook that includes the summit dates calls for above normal temperatures and near normal rainfall, Kiser says. That translates to temperatures of mid to upper 90s.

Adding to the heat misery will be a humidity level forecast for the 90-plus percent range during mornings before dipping into the 50 percent range by afternoon and heading back up again by evening.

Bush's decision last month to trim the official welcome for the leaders of Japan, Great Britain, France, West Germany, Italy and Canada was greeted with a fair amount of enthusiasm from summit organizers, many of whom have been sporting "Houston's Hot" lapel stickers.

"The goal is to turn a negative to positive," says Ken Lay, co-chairman of the summit host committee, when explaining the promotional theme. "Yes, Houston is hot — but for all the right reasons. That's the message we want to convey to a global audience. We feel this approach will be effective in getting that job done for our city, during the summit and beyond."

Penry retrial to begin

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A mentally retarded man accused in the rape-slaying of a woman 10½ years ago returns to court this week where a jury will decide if he should be executed.

Johnny Paul Penry has been on death row since 1980, when he was convicted of capital murder in the death of Pamela Moseley Carpenter. The woman was found dead in her Livingston home.

After weeks of jury selection and pretrial proceedings, opening statements and testimony in Penry's retrial are set to begin today.

Penry, 34, came within hours of lethal injection in 1986. He already had been moved from his death row cell to a small holding cell adjacent to the death chamber when he received a stay.

The case eventually went to the U.S. Supreme Court, with Penry's attorneys insisting jurors should have been allowed to consider his retardation before imposing the death sentence.

Although the high court upheld the constitutionality of executing mentally retarded killers, it vacated Penry's death sentence two years ago, saying jurors should have been told about Penry's retardation.

Jury selection for Penry's latest trial went on for weeks after a change of venue from Livingston to Huntsville. The pretrial proceedings included a competency hearing for Penry at which reporters were barred from part of the testimony.

That action by State District Judge Joe Ned Dean prompted a lawsuit from the Houston Chronicle, which succeeded in getting a transcript of the closed testimony. Dean also has imposed a gag order, barring participants in the case from discussing it with reporters.

Mrs. Carpenter was stabbed repeatedly in the chest with a pair of scissors she was using to make a Halloween costume for her niece.

Before dying in a hospital emergency room, she provided a description of her killer to authorities.

Penry, born in Comanche County, Okla., had been on parole for about three months after serving two years of a five-year term for rape. His arrest record also includes arson.

Census reaches 99 percent of goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau is closing in on the last 1 percent of American households that haven't yet been tallied.

The 1990 count has reached 99 percent of all homes, officials proclaimed Sunday, despite a disappointing start in April.

The door-to-door counting will continue at least through autumn in areas where the work is not complete, officials have said.

In many regions a "were you counted" campaign is starting in an effort to reach people who have been overlooked so far.

"Without the willingness of hundreds of thousands of Americans who volunteered and stuck with a tough job, we would not be where we are now," Commerce Secretary Robert A. Mosbacher said in a statement.

With more than 100 million households across the nation, the 99 percent mark means that 1 million homes remain to be counted.

Officials hope the new campaign will reach many of them through posters in stores and community centers, newspaper advertising and similar efforts. People will be encouraged to call or write the census bureau so they can be counted.

NOW considers third political party

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The National Organization for Women is considering forming a third political party, complaining the Democrats and Republicans are dominated by white men.

"It's high time we questioned the status quo and challenged a system that just isn't working, that is leaving too many citizens out," said NOW President Molly Yard.

The organization, which concluded its annual convention here on Sunday, launched a commission to consider a new party that would represent feminists and others who say they are ignored or used and abused by the two main parties.

Cargo ships collide in Chesapeake

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Two cargo ships collided in the Chesapeake Bay during a severe thunderstorm, spilling at least 35,000 gallons of fuel, authorities said.

Cleanup crews remained on station today after working through the night to contain the spill.

"We consider this a major marine casualty because of the damage done and the amount of oil spilled," said U.S. Coast Guard Cmdr. George Naccara.

Naccara said 35,000 gallons of No. 4 heavy oil and diesel were spilled when the Columbus America, registered in West Germany, and the Neptune Jade, based in Singapore, collided shortly before 7 p.m. Sunday about five miles north of Norfolk.

The 635-foot Columbus America received extensive damage and the Neptune Jade was also damaged, Naccara said, but no injuries were reported on either ship.

The accident happened as severe thunderstorms and high winds battered the Hampton Roads area. The National Weather Service had issued a marine warning and severe weather watches for the area before the crash.

Report: Stealth bombers missed

NEW YORK (AP) — The chief of the Tactical Air Command failed to tell his superiors that stealth fighter-bombers missed their targets in the Panama invasion, a newspaper reported today.

The New York Times said the lack of information led Defense Secretary Dick Cheney to brag about how accurate the bombing had been when bombs actually missed by as much as 160 yards.

The newspaper also said a classified Air Force report concluded there were defects in planning the Panama operation, confusion over the mission of the planes, poor coordination between the Army and the Air Force in picking targets and inadequate pilot training for the weather conditions over the targets.

Gen. Robert D. Russ, whose Tactical Air Command controls the Air Force fighter planes, issued a statement saying he had left it up to Army commanders to tell the Pentagon how the invasion fared.

Jury acquits Marcos of fraud, racketeering

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos was acquitted today of looting her homeland's treasury of hundreds of millions of dollars to buy real estate, jewelry and art.

Adnan Khashoggi, the jet-set Saudi businessman once described as the world's richest man, also was cleared of fraud for helping Mrs. Marcos hide ownership of the property.

The decision — on Mrs. Marcos' 61st birthday — came midway through the jury's fifth day of deliberations. It capped a three-month-long trial. She was acquitted on all counts of racketeering and fraud.

As the jury forewoman read the first innocent verdict, Marcos supporters cried out in happiness, ignoring the judge's warning against outbursts. Mrs. Marcos was in tears. She smiled and hugged her lawyers. Others in the courtroom were hugging and crying.

The judge had called the trial in Manhattan's federal court "an unprecedented prosecution" because it involved world figures, including a former head of state who was a major U.S. ally.

The prosecutors sat facing the judge, eyes downcast.

Mrs. Marcos had been accused of conspiring with her late husband, former president Ferdinand E. Marcos, to buy art, jewelry and four Manhattan commercial buildings with $222 million stolen from their country. Marcos also was indicted in October 1988 but died in Hawaii last September.

It was charged that much of the millions of dollars came in kickbacks Marcos collected from government contractors.

Mrs. Marcos' flashy attorney, Gerry Spence, of Jackson, Wyo., conceded she was a "world class shopper" but said she did not know the source of her husband's wealth. In his closing argument, Spence said she was guilty only of loving and supporting her husband.

Witnesses testified that the money was funneled to the United States through numbered bank accounts in Switzerland, Hong Kong, Manila and Los Angeles and was used to secretly buy the buildings for the Marcoses through nominees and offshore corporations.

The alleged offenses took place in the latter part of Marcos' two decades as president of the Asian nation. Marcos was deposed in February 1986 by a "people's revolution" led by Corazon Aquino, widow of a murdered Marcos opponent. She became Philippine president as the Marcoses fled to exile in Hawaii.

The trial, which began in late March, involved 95 witnesses, all called by the government. It filled 5,300 pages of transcript and included bank records, receipts, letters, diaries and phone logs as evidence.

Rebels battle troops outside capital

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Frightened refugees are pouring into Liberia's besieged capital as fighting between government troops and rebels rages just a few miles outside the city.

Monrovia was in its fifth day without water today, and its fourth without electricity. Both were cut off when rebels captured the West African nation's main water treatment plant and hydroelectric power station, which are within 12 miles of Monrovia.

Rebels battled retreating government troops two miles from the capital on Sunday, according to refugees fleeing the fighting. Health officials feared a cholera epidemic as refugees flooded the overcrowded port city.

The rebels, who launched their insurgency six months ago and now hold most of the country of 2.5 million people, also apparently seized a ship carrying rice to the capital, where residents face a food shortage.

The rebels so far have kept a promise not to damage U.S. government installations. A Voice of America relay station for Africa that fell behind rebel lines last week has not been threatened by the guerrillas.

Official: No goodwill for quake aid

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Any Western government seeking to improve its relations with Tehran by sending earthquake aid will be disappointed, Iran's interior minister says.

"Bilateral issues between nations and governments, whether general or fundamental, are not settled with such things," the official, Abdollah Nouri, told reporters on Sunday.

Iran is believed to have influence with the kidnapers who hold 16 Western hostages, including six Americans, in Lebanon.

Asked whether Iran wanted better relations with the United States, one of the countries that sent aid after the devastating June 21 earthquake, Nouri said: "No."

Nouri spoke after a London newspaper quoted another Iranian official, Sayed Hossein Mosavian of the Foreign Ministry, as saying it was possible a Western hostage would soon be freed.

Nouri, the interior minister, said that despite generous foreign aid for Iran's earthquake victims, it would be overwhelmingly difficult to rebuild the devastated region 125 miles northwest of Tehran.

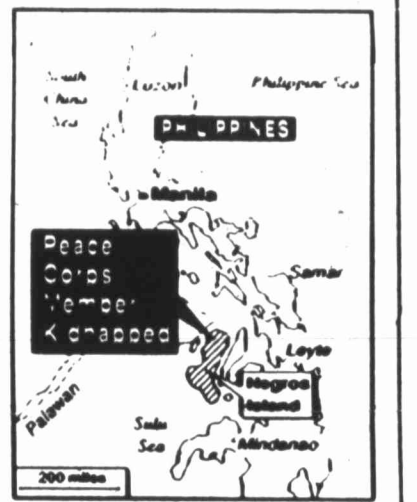

Military rescue ruled out

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A provincial governor today ruled out military operations to rescue a U.S. Peace Corps worker kidnapped by Communist rebels, and said he would form a committee to negotiate for the volunteer's release.

Timothy Swanson, 26, of Cheyenne, Wyo., was kidnapped June 13 from his home in the mountain village of Patag by four to eight New People's Army guerrillas.

The U.S. Embassy said it learned of the abduction only Saturday because the rebels had warned Swanson's Filipino wife, a teacher at a rural school, not to report the incident.

She did so only after U.S. officials last week ordered the 261 Peace Corps volunteers in the Philippines to leave, saying intelligence reports indicated rebels might try to kill or kidnap them.

Daniel Lacson, governor of Negros Occidental province, told reporters he conferred today with U.S. officials who gave him blanket authority to win Swanson's release.

Financial statement found between the lines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The annual assessment of America's global financial standing won't be made this year — at least not by the government.

The Commerce Department's Bureau of Economic Analysis had been scheduled today to release its annual accounting of the "U.S. Net International Investment Position" for 1989.

Despite the arcane title, the report made headlines in past years because it tracked America's stunning fall from a position as the world's largest creditor country to the world's largest debtor nation.

But last week, the BEA said this year's report would be a scaled-down version of past reports and it will be missing one critical figure — the actual investment position.

The government will provide enough information so that by doing some math, the bottom-line deficit can be obtained. But it won't be printed anywhere in the report.

The BEA's reason for the change is that there are so many flaws in the way the net debtor number is calculated that it is no longer reliable.

But critics have a more sinister explanation. They suspect the bureau buckled to political pressure to stop a report that has become a political embarrassment.

"The reason they are not publishing the number is that it shows the United States in an unfavorable light," said Jeff Faux, head of the Economic Policy Institute, a labor-backed think tank.

At the end of 1988, the debt burden stood at $532.5 billion, up 41 percent from the previous year, the BEA reported last year.

That figure reflected the imbalance between what Americans owned overseas and what foreigners owned in this country.

Based on information contained in other reports, private economists believe that America's net debtor position probably rose by around $110 billion in 1989, pushing America's net debt close to $650 billion.

The United States was the world's largest creditor country as recently as 1983, when it had an investment surplus of $89 billion. That surplus fell to $3.3 billion in 1984 and disappeared altogether in 1985, the year the country became a net debtor for the first time in 71 years.

The surplus was erased by the huge merchandise trade deficits the United States piled up during the 1980s as Americans transferred billions of dollars into the hands of foreigners to pay for imported cars and television sets.

Those dollars, now in foreign hands, have been reinvested in the United States in everything from U.S. Treasury bills to Los Angeles office buildings, setting off cries that America was transferring control of its economic destiny to foreigners.

Allan Young, head of the BEA, said there was no pressure from the Bush administration to halt publication of the net debtor figure. He said he took the action because of concern that the report understated the value of U.S. assets overseas because the report measured those assets at their historical purchase price.

That undervalued the worth of U.S. assets in foreign countries, many of which were purchased decades ago, in comparison to foreign holdings in the United States, many purchased in the 1980s.

Young said the BEA is working to produce a report that will give an up-to-date current value on all assets, both foreign and U.S. holdings, and hopes to have that report ready in a year.

Opinion

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Opinions from across the U.S.

Drawing the line

How drearily familiar is the criticism being made of President Bush's decision to suspend friendly talks with the terrorist Palestine Liberation Organization. Eighteen months ago U.S. officials announced they would engage in a "dialogue" with the PLO to help bring peace to the Middle East. The agreement was conditioned on PLO renunciation of violence. Since then PLO operatives — under orders of high-ranking PLO officials — have conducted several terrorist raids. One a few weeks ago was aimed at a U.S. embassy in Israel. It was prevented only by quick-acting Israeli police and troops. Bush, finally tired of PLO duplicity, last week called a halt to the farce. He said he's suspending talks with the PLO until he has some evidence it'll keep its end of the bargain. Almost immediately there was criticism. Opponents of Bush's stance said he may have opened the door to more violence in the Middle East. It's time to stop worrying about upsetting the PLO. It's time to demand, as Bush is doing, that PLO leaders keep their word about renouncing violence — or face increasing enmity from the United States and a step-up in aid to Israel.

Certainly, the rabid dog has been angered. He'll probably bite to try to force us to give in to him. But his growls should be met by a kick in the teeth — not a pat on the head.

The Martinsburg (W.Va.) Evening

A matter of conscience

Wouldn't it be going against our Judeo-Christian cultural values in the West to be any less saddened or helpful because of yesterday's devastating earthquake in Iran than we were after the devastating earthquake in Armenia? Yes — there's no question but that it would. One doesn't have to flip through one's Bible long before running into this admonition from Matthew: "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." They curse us, they hate us, they use us, they persecute us. They take our embassy and its people captive and ruin hundreds of lives. They control the fates of dozens of innocent hostages in Lebanon. They put out a death sentence on an obscure Anglo-Indian writer in a model case study of radical intolerance. They persecute their own people through a supposedly theocratic people's dictatorship that ironically reminds us in its cruelty of nothing so much as the arrogant fake monarchy it toppled. Why shed crocodile tears for them? Because, both soul-searching and logic will tell us, there's no "them" there. That is, in the great scheme of things, there are not enough bad guys in Tehran to shake a stick at. Whereas the bereaved peasants in northern Iran today no more invented the image of our country as the Great Satan than they invented high-definition TV. It may not "work," in the sneaky, self-serving sense that's admittedly part of this notion. If we send humanitarian aid, it may not be admitted by the remnants of the Ayatollah Khomeini's kooky regime. It may be considered a trick, or merely propagandistic. But then again, subtly and diplomatically done, such aid has a chance of working to both of our ends: helping out people in distress and showing them that Americans have love in their hearts for the Iranian people, if not for their leaders. Self-serving? Partially. But remember that our government did install the Shah, no swell fellow himself. This could be honest, Judeo-Christian penance. And, cynicism aside, blessing them that curse us isn't such a bad path to follow simply for its own sake.

Pasadena (Calif.) Star-News

Women's health an issue

It's appalling that the researchers who conduct federally funded health studies routinely exclude women from the focus groups. But that's exactly what's happening, congressional investigators say. Incredibly, knowing full well that the disease to be studied affects men and women, researchers sometimes have been given funding by the National Institutes of Health for studies that use only men. What makes the situation even more reprehensible is that the NIH has had a policy in effect since 1986 that requires women to be included in studies unless their presence clearly is scientifically inappropriate. An NIH advisory committee reported in 1987 that less than 14 percent of the institute's budget was devoted to female health issues, according to Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., a leader of the Congressional Caucus for Women. We agree with Mrs. Schroeder, who said what these dismal findings reveal simply is that "it's OK to put women's health at risk." The good news is that the NIH essentially agrees with Mrs. Schroeder. William Raub, the acting NIH director, said he and his colleagues know that they must correct the situation immediately. The caucus and the General Accounting Office — the investigative branch of Congress — must make certain Raub is held accountable.

SKELLY

To exclude or not to exclude

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
WASHINGTON — Like some indecisive Hamlet, the U.S. Supreme Court has spent a good part of its now-ending term brooding over a rule of evidence: To exclude or not to exclude, that is the question.

No fewer than seven cases this term have dealt with what criminal defense lawyers love to invoke as the "exclusionary rule." It is a judge-made rule, dating from 1914, which holds that probative evidence may not be admissible at trial if the evidence has been unlawfully obtained.

The rule is basically a good rule. It embodies the spirit of the Fourth Amendment, the most widely cherished portion of the Bill of Rights. Newsmen and churchmen love the First Amendment. Gun owners love the Second. Those charged with crime are grateful for the Fifth, Sixth and Eighth Amendments, but everybody benefits from the Fourth. It protects us against unreasonable searches and seizures of our persons and property.

Trouble is, the amendment is packed with ambiguous terms. What is an "unreasonable" search? The adjective figured recently in a Michigan case involving sobriety checkpoints. Is it an unreasonable exercise of the state's power for police to stop all cars briefly at a checkpoint so that drivers may be eyeballed for evidence of drunk driving? Six members of the court said, no, this is not unreasonable. Evidence so obtained may be admitted in court.

Another drunk-driving case arose in Florida. Martin Leslie Wells was arrested for driving under the influence. A state trooper impounded his car and had it towed in. A search of the car for inventory purposes turned up a locked suitcase in the trunk.

James J. Kilpatrick

Police forced open the suitcase and found a considerable amount of marijuana. Should the suitcase evidence have been admitted?

No, said a unanimous court. The Florida troopers had no uniform policy for inventory searches. In the absence of such a policy, too much discretion is left to the police to search or not to search.

Under the Fourth Amendment, search warrants must be issued only upon "probable cause." Warrants must "particularly describe" the things to be seized. In an Alabama case decided on June 11, the court grappled with the question of probable cause. Acting on a wholly anonymous telephone tip, Montgomery police tailed Vanessa Rose White, stopped her car, and found both marijuana and cocaine. The court voted 6-3 that evidence so obtained is admissible, but Justice Byron White called it a "close case" and Justice John Paul Stevens, in a blistering dissent, said White's opinion made a "mockery" of the Fourth Amendment.

How particular is "particularly described"? In a California case decided June 4, the court dealt with the robbery of a coin dealer. The victim, Erwin Wallaker, described three stolen rings. He also described his two assailants. They were masked; one carried an Uzi machine gun, the other a stun gun. They handcuffed him and stole several articles of clothing. Police quickly obtained a warrant for the arrest of Terry Brice Horton.

For some reason not immediately apparent, the warrant "particularly described" only the rings, but when an officer executed the warrant at Horton's residence, behold! There in plain view were an Uzi, two stun guns, a handcuff key and Wallaker's clothing. Should the items that were not described in the warrant have been admitted in evidence?

Yes, said seven members of the court, let the evidence in. Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall dissented. Even though the weapons and incriminating clothing were in plain view, the items had not been "particularly described." The two justices would go strictly by the book.

The Fourth protects the right of the people to be secure in "their" houses. A Minneapolis case decided on April 18 had to do with Robert Darren Olson, who was suspected of complicity in the murder of a gasoline station manager. Police tracked him to a duplex on Fillmore Northeast and found him hiding in a closet. He made incriminating statements. It wasn't Olson's home. He was an overnight guest. Should the statements Olson made at the duplex be admitted?

No, said the court 7-2, the statements should have been excluded. As a guest, Olson had a "reasonable expectation of privacy." Police should have obtained a warrant.

I thought two of these decisions were wrong — the case of the anonymous tipster and the case of the overnight guest. The dissenting opinions made more sense to me, but these are close questions. Most of the time, most observers will agree with most of the calls.

'Big Mac' runs into stop sign

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

A woman at the Illinois corporate headquarters of McDonald's said the company has now served 75 billion hamburgers. Some quick arithmetic tells me that is about 300 hamburgers for every man, woman and child in America and 2 million for Oprah Winfrey. But McDonald's is not going to add to that number in Helen, Ga.

Helen is a little town in the north Georgia mountains with the Alpine theme.

Tourists flock to Helen and spend a lot of money there sightseeing and buying trinkets. I've heard Helen described as "quite quaint."

The town gambled on the Alpine theme in 1968. "Before that," said Cliff Hood of the Helen planning board, "Helen was a ghost town."

A ghost town with dusty streets, vacant saloons, and tumbling tumble weeds might have brought in tourists too, if it had a name like Dry Gulch, but whoever heard of a ghost town named after a girl?

McDonald's wanted a crack at some of Helen's tourists, and you know how McDonald's is. You can have mayonnaise only if they say you can have mayonnaise. Make way for The Golden Arches.

But the Helen planning board said McDonald's would have to live by its building and sign restrictions, which include no internally lit signs and only certain colors.

McDonald's at night looks like an airport. They could have put a few McDonald's in the neighborhood and saved the money they spent on lighting Wrigley Field in Chicago and simply used the glow Big Mac puts out.

According to Cliff Hood, McDonald's did agree to forget the golden arches and a lighted road sign. (There apparently was no discussion concerning whether Ronald McDonald would be out front waving cars in.)

And McDonald's agreed to add some additional wood trim. But McDonald's wouldn't budge on its big fluorescent lighted roof beams, which are also a violation of Helen building codes.

"A lot of people staked their life savings on the Alpine theme," said Cliff Hood, "and they didn't want to compromise it."

The end result was Helen refused McDonald's a building permit and told Ronald to go eat those silly shoes he wears.

Helen has a Wendy's because Wendy's agreed to conform to the Alpine motif.

But McDonald's wouldn't and Helen stuck to its guns. "There ought to be more of that sort of thing. Cities and towns should say more often, 'You want to put a building here? Fine, but it better not look like a space station.'"

There's nothing wrong with quaint. We like quaint. It's why we flock to Europe to take pictures of one another standing in front of a quaint little shop in a quaint little village.

You can't find a lot of quaint in this country anymore. We look like we've been designed by The Mad Architect.

There are hotels with revolving roofs, office buildings that look like they're about to take off for Mars and 8 zillion sets of golden arches lighting up the midnight sky where quaint used to be.

I visited Helen once, and the word I used to describe it at the time, wasn't quaint.

It was "tacky." But I've changed my mind. "Tacky" is compromising yourself to accommodate an intruder.

"Quaint" is a little guy telling a big guy if he won't play by the rules, he can go jump in the deep fryer.

Hooray for Helen.

Golden Agers celebrate first anniversary

Golden Agers of the First Church of God, Big Spring, celebrated their first-year anniversary and Chairperson Juanita Harrington's 74th birthday June 23 in fellowship hall.

Unfurled flowered umbrellas decorated the hall with miniature umbrellas as favors at each plate. Harrington presented each of those present with a folding fan. The decor was a fitting setting for the theme, "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella."

Truett Thomas opened the meeting by leading the group in "Sunshine in My Soul" and "He Keeps Me Singing," accompanied by Betty Reagan at the piano.

Harrington read a poem, titled "Smile."

The Rev. Charles Harrington and Truett Thomas led the singing of "Happy Birthday." A ribbon sent by the Chamber of Commerce designating her as a "Very Special Person" was presented to the honoree.

Charles Harrington, Truett and Pastor Darrell Hendrickson sang, "The Longer I Serve Him."

Truett then revealed that the group is blessed with a number of preachers — five being present.

weekend. Activities beginning at noon Saturday included games for the younger children, visiting and viewing photographs and videos, followed by a grilled hamburger cook-out in the evening.

Finishing touches were put on the noon meal Sunday morning and "Christmas in May" was celebrated after clean-up. The patio was decorated with a Christmas tree and the tables were covered with holiday cloths. Christmas scrabble was played while waiting for the gift exchange and other festivities.

During both days the men and boys played "washers" — lights have been permanently installed for nighttime play.

Mr. and Mrs. G.J. "General Jackson" Couch were married in 1900 in Tom Green County, moving to Nolan County by 1904 where most of their nine children were born. Moving to Howard County in the early 1920's G.J. was instrumental in beginning the Luther Bethel Baptist Church and was one of the first deacons. The couple spent the rest of their lives here and were buried at Trinity Memorial Cemetery. Couch was named for Andrew Jackson and always called himself and was known as "General Jackson".

The Couch's have 126 known direct line descendants living all across the United States. Fifty-nine family members and guests attended the reunion, 33 of whom were direct descendants.

The four remaining descendants are: Mrs. Mary Ila Scott, Sweetwater; Lora Lee Brasher, San Angelo; Asa Couch, Birmingham, Ala.; and John Couch.

The oldest family member attending was Mrs. Mary Ila Scott, 85. The youngest member was Ginger Winters, 1. Lois Stocstill traveled from Petersburg, Tenn., to attend the festivities.

McCormicks return home

Weldon and Marge McCormick returned June 20 from a trip to Memphis and Livingston, Tenn., where they met some kinfolks for the first time.

In Memphis they visited their granddaughter, Melaney Lewis, and her husband Ryan, and their great-grandson, Ryan, 3.

"The grandson really gave us a tour of Memphis, which was just beautiful. We went to the wharf where they were loading one of the big paddle-wheel boats for a party and saw a number of big ships."

"We then drove to Livingston, Tennessee and saw some kinfolks of Weldon's he'd never seen. We visited Joyce McCormick, his late cousin's widow and her daughter, Beth McCormick. The McCormick ancestors helped start the town of Livingston at the foot of the Cumberland Mountains. She gave us a history of the town and Bethlehem Church and cemetery. It was just beautiful to see. If I were a lot younger I'd like to live in the mountains," Marge explained.

"We drove up into the mountains and saw a cousin, Connie Beaty, and we never had such a welcome, in our lives. She was waiting on the porch for us. It was so pretty — we stayed with her about three hours, and then visited the Bethlehem Cemetery outside Livingston where the McCormicks were buried," she continued.

"These people take care of their own," stated Marge. "They own their own homes and land and still depend on their chickens and cows and grow beautiful gardens. We didn't see some because they were working on jobs. There is logging and mining and other industries and they all keep busy."

"We visited Vicksburg, Miss., staying most of the day to see the battle sites," said Marge. "We then went on one of the big paddle-wheel boats up the Mississippi River."

Grocery carts aren't free

DEAR ABBY: Please address the problem of people who steal shopping carts. This is a national disgrace we can't blame on Russia, the drug pushers or Congress.

The elderly use them instead of walkers, kids use them for carrying their books to and from schools, residents in affluent neighborhoods keep them in their private garages or in the parking lots of their expensive condominiums or in their laundry rooms. Some are just abandoned at the curb or in an alley.

No one seems to take this stealing seriously, yet is this any different from picking up someone's unchained bicycle and taking it home for one's own use?

Abby, you reach millions of people, so please print a column about this alarming thievery going on daily, right under our noses.

Two-wheeled carts are available at nominal prices. They are sturdy, fold flat, easy to store and hold a lot. They also go up and down stairs, which supermarket carts may have trouble doing. I bought one for about $10 four years ago, and it's still going strong.

For once, let's point the finger at

Dear Abby

"us" and clean up our own garbage. — RUTH FREUND, ENCINO, CALIF.

DEAR RUTH: Thanks for an important letter. According to the Food Marketing Institute in Washington, D.C., cart theft in California alone costs the grocery industry about $14 million a year — and that cost is passed on to the consumer. The worst offenders are often the elderly or the poor, or college students who don't drive and live in apartments within walking distance of the stores.

There is a solution. If people did as you did — and bought their own carts — the problem would be solved, the grocers would pass the savings on to their customers, and we would be a kinder, gentler and more honest nation.

How's that?

Q. What does the word "slack" mean at a rodeo?
A. Competitors who cannot be fit into the hours of the regular performance schedule compete before or after the rodeo — during slack time. Their times and scores are equally competitive as the others.

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incidents:

- Rene Angel Valdez, Jr., 28, 404 Aylford, was arrested and charged with driving while license suspended. He was released on $500 bond.
- Buck Lloyd Burns, 27, Rt. 3 Box 565, was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated (felony), driving while license suspended, no insurance, disregarding a stop sign, and driving unsecured by a safety belt. He was released on bonds totalling $3,000.
- Robert David Garcia, 23, 1107 N. Goliad, was arrested and charged with Class A assault. He was released on $2,000 bond.
- Jackie Loyd Murphree, 23, Lenderman Road in Sand Springs, was arrested Sunday and charged with aggravated assault in connection with his wife being beaten with a club. No bond was set.
- Terry Deon Noble, 21, 406 Culp, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct in connection with a woman being hit. He was also charged with public intoxication. He is being held until bond can be made.
- It was reported that a 1-ton chain hoist, weighing about 150 pounds, was stolen last week from an A-frame from the back yard of a residence at Hilltop Road and Gatesville. The estimated value of the chain is $350.
- Michael Don Gressett, 32, of the Vealmoor area, was stopped by a Department of Public Safety trooper Saturday night and charged with driving while intoxicated. He was released after posting a $1,500 bond.

Roughnecks

 year alone.
 The problem is limited to on-shore rigs and is expected to be particularly troublesome in South Texas, where the use of horizontal drilling technology has sparked a flurry of activity, observers said. The Gulf Coast and far West Texas are other areas of concern.
 "There's so many rigs out here right now that they're just screaming for hands. They're hurting," said Tim Miller, 28, who works on a rig near Edna, about 120 miles southwest of Houston.
 In an effort to offset the roughneck shortage, drilling companies are implementing recruiting and training programs not seen since the long-gone boom days.
 Texas A&M University plans to reinstate an Abilene "roughneck school" closed three years ago for lack of interest. The first class begins next month.
 "There's a great need for people who can operate this equipment safely," said Will McNair, director of A&M's energy training division. "The companies are saying these people just aren't out there."
 The Texas Employment Commission estimates 125,000 people working in the oil and gas extraction business in 1982 had quit or lost their jobs by the beginning of 1990. The sector currently employs about 167,000 people in Texas.

 Many of the experienced workers who lost their oil rig jobs during the bust have found more secure — and much easier — work in other industries.
 "A lot of people were scared away," said Chris Hanson, president of Southland Drilling Co. in Victoria. "They're making less money, but they're getting a steady check and they don't have to worry about it. These people are gone, and I don't think they're coming back."
 Some companies trying to recruit experienced rig workers say low roughneck wages, not the grueling work, prove to be a deterrent.
 Roughnecks earn about $7.80 an hour, compared with about $10 six years ago. Drillers earn $10.50 an hour, compared with $15 previously.
 Despite the rising demand for workers, drilling companies say they see little hope for a wage hike. Most executives say their profit margins remain razor-thin.
 Most companies are left with two alternatives: close down the rigs while waiting for experienced roughnecks or staff the rigs with untrained, inexperienced workers.

Carnival clean up
 Members of the Big Spring High School band and Band Boosters clean up after the carnival at College Park Shopping Center. Beverly Knouse, Band Boosters treasurer, said the carnival raised more than $5,000 for Big Spring school bands.

Dropouts

 schools should be higher.
 If one were to follow a class from kindergarten through high school, Poyner said, the percentage of students who do not finish may be as high as 40 percent.
 He said as school standards go up, keeping kids in school may be more difficult. The recently passed law would base part of a school's funding on its average daily attendance.
 "There is at once an effort to raise our standards and keep kids in school," said Poyner. "Those goals are going to be at cross-purposes to some extent."
 "I can't say I think we're better off just keeping them (troubled kids) in school," he said. "They may be better off trying the work force to see how hard it is to make it without an education."
 The new school finance law requires that schools take average daily attendance every month, as opposed to once a year in previous years, McQueary said the added inconvenience will be worth the gains.
 "The way attendance is structured, we will have to work hard all year to keep kids in school. We might lose at first but I believe it will be good for the kids."
 Poyner said parents and administrators alike sometimes recognize an aspect of futility in the dropout situation.
 "Sometimes you just don't know of anything you can do. There's nothing that will make some kids stay in school."
 Poyner said he has seen research which shows that a dropout can be identified as early as the third grade.
 "Children come in highly unkempt, unfed, no self esteem, no energy, just not acting like a secure little kid would act," he said. "Chances are that kid won't make it all the way through. School can't cure all that."
 Borden County High School only had one student quit school this year, said principal Mickey McMeans. Borden tries to encourage its students by offering flexibility.
 "We try to fix their schedules so they have something they can succeed in," McMeans said. "That's an encouragement. But anytime something like this (the dropout rate) goes your way, you have to say you're very lucky."
 Coahoma High School principal Dennis Ward said the school tries to aid at-risk students before they drop out. Steps often taken there include referral to counseling programs and alternatives such as Big Spring's homebound teaching program, often used by pregnant girls.
 Big Spring plans to begin next year using a computer to telephone parents when their children have an unexcused absence from school. McQueary said the device may aid in combatting the dropout problem.
 "Parents will know when their child has missed school," McQueary said. "That may be one step toward cutting the dropout rate."
 The Big Spring dropout rate reportedly decreased by 2 percent between 1987-88 and 1988-89, after the inception of the Personalized Achievement Center, an alternative school program.
 All Crossroads Country schools report the dropout rate to be very near or below the state standard of five percent. Poyner said he has reason to believe that reports are low locally and across the state.
 "The way these things are reported, you can't count a student who may in fact have dropped out, because it would make you look bad," Poyner said. "No superintendent wants to report a higher dropout rate, but I do believe ours and many other Western standards. They fear tax increases, further housing shortages and reduced old-age pensions.

 Officials of both Germanys are working on a political unification treaty to prepare for full union and all-German elections in December.
 This is contingent upon the two Germanys reaching agreement with the four victorious World War II allies on the international ramifications of unification, including the military alignment of a united Germany.
 The changes were launched with last year's democratic revolution in East Germany and other East European countries, where Communist regimes that had ruled during the postwar era were ousted during popular protests.

Germany

 Germany's money supply. Border controls were eliminated. East Germans cheered, honked horns and set off fireworks to welcome the currency they had long coveted. West German businessmen — everyone from furniture salesmen to travel agents offering tours to Rio de Janeiro — rushed in to tempt them.
 At border crossings that were impenetrable before the Communists fell from power in last fall's democratic upheaval, smiling families walked, drove and bicycled back and forth without a policeman in sight.
 Although full political union with West Germany remains months away, for most East Germans Sunday was the long awaited day of unification, ending a failed 40-year experiment with socialism.

 Under the economic merger, most East Germans were able to exchange up to 4,000 East German marks in private savings at a 1-1 rate, receiving the equivalent of about $2,400. Additional "Ost" marks could be converted at 2-1.
 There is fear of mass unemployment as East Germany, a country of 16 million people, tries to quickly shift to a free market.
 There have been predictions that up to 4 million could be thrown out of work as the country struggles to rebuild an economy ravaged by decades of Communist mismanagement and inefficiency.
 Many West Germans have been grumbling about the high cost of bringing East Germany up to full Police arrested one man and charged him with driving while intoxicated following a two-car accident Sunday night at Benton and Fifth streets.

 According to police reports, Daniel Boyce Fuller, 34, P.O. Box 171, was arrested and charged with DWI and cited for failure to yield right of way after his 1983 Blazer struck a car. A 2-year-old girl riding in the other vehicle was injured, but refused treatment at the scene, the report said.
 The driver of the second vehicle, Michael Datehouse, 25, 1109 N. Gregg, and a second passenger were not injured in the crash, the report said.
 According to the report, Datehouse was southbound in the 400 block of South Benton, and Fuller was eastbound in the 600 block of East Fifth. Fuller did not yield at a yield sign, the report said, and struck Datehouse's car in the right side.

Police beat

The Big Spring Police Department reported the following incidents:

- Weldon Bryant Daniels, 26, 2915 Old West 80, was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated and no insurance, subsequent offense. Bonds were set at, respectively, $1,500 and $500.
- Murray Clark Jones, 64, no address given, was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated.
- A person reported criminal mischief to a vehicle that occurred in the parking lot of the Big Spring Mall. Damage to two windows was estimated at $200.
- A person in the 1800 block of Settles reported receiving threatening phone calls from a person.
- A business in the 1700 block of Marcy reported criminal mischief to a telephone receiver. Damage was estimated at over $20/under $200.

- A business in the 1800 block of South Gregg reported the theft of six cartons of cigarettes valued at $85.
- A business in the 1200 block of East 11th Place reported the theft of two cases of beer valued at $24.
- A business in the 2600 block of South Gregg reported the theft of clothing and miscellaneous items valued at $20.73.
- A person reported burglaries of two habitations, both in the 1300 block of Kindle Road. Thieves took miscellaneous items valued at $900.
- A business in the 1800 block of Gregg reported the theft of eight cartons of cigarettes valued at $114.
- A person reported criminal mischief to three vehicles that occurred in the 700 block of East 16th. Damage to a 1976 Ford, a 1972 Ford and a 1981 Buick was estimated at over $20/under $200.

Ripken sets AL record for no errors

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken set an American League record with his 73rd consecutive errorless game in the Orioles' 4-3 loss to the Minnesota Twins at the Metrodome on Sunday night.

Ripken, who handled two chances, surpassed Ed Brinkman's mark of 72 errorless games, set from May 21-Aug. 4, 1972. The major league record is held by the Mets' Kevin Elster with 88 straight error-free games in 1988-89.

Anchor leg

STANTON — Kyle Herm leaves the competition behind as he anchors the last leg of the 400 meter relay at Buffalo Stadium on Friday. The relay team consists of Gideon Traweek, Austin Kelly and Jonathan Johnson and Herm. The four ran a 42.0 to capture first place in the meet.

Irishman's putt wins golf tourney

CHANTILLY, France (AP) — Irishman Philip Walton sank a 2 1/2-foot putt on the second playoff hole to beat West Germany's Bernhard Langer in the $595,000 French Open golf tournament, his first-ever triumph on the European tour.

The victory earned Walton a $99,160 prize, the biggest of his career.

LeMond 10 minutes behind in Tour

POITIERS, France (AP) — Canada's Steve Bauer raced in to the lead of the Tour de France on Sunday, gaining the leader's yellow jersey in the 86-mile morning loop and leading it through the afternoon team time trial. He has a 10-second lead over Frans Maassen of the Netherlands.

Maassen won the morning stage, but his Buckler team couldn't help him overtake Bauer and the 7-Eleven team in the afternoon. Buckler ended with a time of 54:20, eight seconds slower than the Andy Hampsten-paced 7-Eleven squad.

Ronan Pensec, a member of defending champion Greg LeMond's Z team, is third overall, 26 seconds back of Bauer. LeMond is more than 10 minutes behind Bauer in 34th and Laurent Fignon of France is 28th, five seconds ahead of LeMond.

Robinson wins sports car race

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Chip Robinson slipped past Davy Jones' Jaguar with five laps to go to win Sunday's Camel Continental VII IMSA Camel GT prototype sports car race at Watkins Glen International Raceway.

Robinson, whose car was co-driven by Bob Earl, wound up winning by 57.695 seconds over the Porsche 962C co-driven by James Weaver of England and Hnrley Haywood of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla. Robinson and Earl won $100,000.

WIMBLEDON, England — Defending champion Boris Becker hits the grass during his fourth-round match with former champion Pat Cash. Becker eventually beat the Australian.

Ken Johnson, who charted unknown territory in 1964, had to admit that Andy Hawkins went him one better.

"Four-nothing. Boy, that's rough. I only lost 1-0," said Johnson, who until Sunday was the only pitcher in major-league history to throw a no-hitter and lose.

Johnson, a right-hander with the Houston Colt .45s, was beaten in 1964 by the Cincinnati Reds, who converted two errors into the only run of the game.

Hawkins' New York Yankees lost 4-0 to the Chicago White Sox, who made the most of two walks, an infield error and two dropped fly balls.

"I'm sure the first thought he's got is what I thought — they don't pay you to lose, you're paid to win," Johnson said. "You hate to lose any time. But I think he's going to look back at this as being the year of the no-hitter."

It was certainly the weekend of the no-hitter. The Oakland Athletics' Dave Stewart and the Los Angeles Dodgers' Fernando Valenzuela each threw one Friday night, the first time that no-hitters were thrown on the same day in both the American and National leagues.

Then came Hawkins' tarnished gem, the sixth no-hitter of the year. Earlier, Mark Langston and Mike Witt of the California Angels combined on a no-hitter against the Seattle Mariners April 11; Randy Johnson of Seattle no-hit the Detroit Tigers June 2, and Nolan Ryan of the Texas Rangers no-hit Oakland June 11.

Only in 1908 and 1917, when there were seven each, have there been more no-hitters in one season.

That probably doesn't interest Hawkins at the moment, because his record is 1-5 and the Yankees are 28-45, the worst in baseball.

"I'm stunned. I never envisioned

ARLINGTON (AP) — The old black-and-white photograph that hangs in the office of Texas Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine serves as a daily reminder that he is living a dream.

The manager looks at the photo to remember how fresh, innocent and exhilarating life can be.

The snapshot shows a 36-year-old

Mickey Mantle in New York Yankees pinstripes whispering into the 18-year-old Valentine's ear. The decades since have taken Valentine from Little League to coach in the majors and even to restaurateur.

"The closest I had ever gotten to Mickey was the third deck of Yankee Stadium the five times my dad was able to afford to take me to the game," Valentine said.

"To go out on the field, take a picture with him and have him whisper in my ear what he did was incredible — the most memorable moment," he said. The old photo now hangs in Valentine's office.

Spending some 10 seasons in the majors, Valentine said he got to live the dream that touches any boy who's ever swung a bat or thrown a ball.

Valentine is a compulsive saver with enough keepsakes to decorate the six restaurants he owns. There, sports memorabilia includes trading cards, posters, magazines, newspapers, photos, game programs, autographs, bats, balls, uniforms, videotapes, tickets and stubs.

But the Mantle photo tops them all, Valentine said.

A standout at Stamford's Ripowan High, Valentine was valedictorian, three times all-state in football and star of the baseball team. He was also state champion in the 60-yard dash.

Valentine was so promising in baseball that the Los Angeles Dodgers would make him the fifth selection overall in the June draft. "Those," said Valentine, "are some of the fun days of my life."

Then, anything was possible, including an invitation to come to Yankee Stadium and meet the players in 1968, he said.

"It was during a time I was being kind of wine and dined by every

Capriati given grass lesson by powerful Graf

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Steffi Graf today showed Jennifer Capriati how much the 14-year-old has to learn about grass-court tennis.

Using powerful forehands, slicing serves and a rock-solid net game, the top-ranked Graf beat her youngest challenger in straight sets to reach the quarterfinals at Wimbledon.

Graf won 6-2, 6-4 in a Centre Court match eagerly awaited. Refreshed by a quick weekend trip back to West Germany, Graf won the big points and kept Capriati from setting the rhythm.

Capriati, the whiz-kid from Florida who at No. 12 was the youngest seed in Grand Slam history, showed the type of play that has raised her so high in the four months since she turned professional.

She served well, ran down shot after shot and matched Graf's firepower from the baseline. But she rarely came to the net and Graf wrapped it up with her trademark, a forehand flashed down the line and buried in the corner on her third match point.

It was a smile of relief that covered Graf's face as she shook Capriati's hand at the net. Her reign at the top has been under fire, with 16-year-old Monica Seles beating her twice in a row and Capriati climbing fast. And then

Cathey, Fryar win Big Spring events; at rodeo, reunion

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

The 57th Edition of the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo ended Saturday night as one of the most successful ever.

The rodeo was a success for Big Spring in more ways than one: cowboys Wacey Cathey and Steve Fryar won two events for their hometown. For the second straight year, Cathey won the bull-riding title, and Fryar whipped a big field for the steer-wrestling title.

Cathey scored an 84 on Bad Company Rodeo's Ambush during Thursday night's performance to take a commanding lead. By the end of the rodeo Saturday night, Cathey's closest competitor was Mike Collier, who scored an 82. Clint Branger took third-place money with an 81, and David Fournier was fourth with an 80.

Fryar posted a time of 4.1 seconds in the steer wrestling and the mark held up through the entire four days of the rodeo. Fryar had competed during Tuesday night's slack, which was an unnounced performance scheduled to handle the cowboys who could not be fit into the time constraints of a regular performance.

Cody Battles finished second with a 4.3, Marty Melvin and Dodd Greer shared third with times of 4.6 each, and Joel Edmondson and Brian Hudson shared fifth with times of 4.7 each.

Rodeo board member Richard Atkins called the 57th edition of the reunion and rodeo a success in every way. Atkins said audience attendance was up and more cowboys than ever entered the rodeo.

"We averaged a 25 percent increase," over last year's attendance, he said. "The dances were well received and I thought it was one of the least dead times I'd ever seen."

Atkins said Mack Altizer of Bad Company Rodeo, which produced the rodeo, kept the show going on and on time. Shows began at almost 8:30 p.m. on the dot, and the action was constant until they ended at about 11 p.m., Atkins

NL day kind of boring

It was a fairly dull day in the National League, nothing even close to a no-hitter.

In Los Angeles, where Fernando Valenzuela pitched a no-hitter Friday night, St. Louis had 12 hits to beat the Dodgers 6-5 on Sunday.

The Pittsburgh Pirates hit four home runs in an 8-5 victory over San Francisco and Chicago rapped out 14 hits to beat San Diego 11-10.

In games with a little less hitting, it was Cincinnati 3, New York 2; Montreal 5, Atlanta 1; and Philadelphia 8, Houston 4.

There was rain in New York and wind in San Francisco. But everywhere in the NL on Sunday there were hits, runs and errors. Lots of runners left on base, too.

Heading into the first week of July, there have been six no-hitters this season. It's the most since 1969 and one short of the all-time record set in 1908 and repeated in 1917.

The conditions at Candlestick Park on Sunday made it pretty difficult to throw a no-hitter — or even a baseball.

"In my five years here, I've never seen the ball carry like it did today," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "Our pitchers just got a few balls up, and they were gone."

The Giants, who lost for the eighth time in 11 games, had no homers among their 12 hits.

"There's no question the wind helped on those homers," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said, "but the beauty of it is that both teams hit in the same park. There was no advantage for us."

In San Diego, it was plain old bad pitching by the Padres that helped the Cubs complete a three-game sweep. San Diego starter Dennis Rasmussen allowed eight hits and three runs in three innings and reliever Craig Lefferts five hits and four runs in two innings.

"All we need is some good pitching to get back on track," Padres manager Jack McKeon said.

A no-hitter would certainly help the Padres. Well, maybe. "I couldn't have asked anything more of our offense today," said McKeon, whose club fell to 35-38. "This isn't the end of the world. We just have to keep battling."

Pirates 8, Giants 5
Barry Bonds, Sid Bream, Jay Bell and Jeff King each homered to power Pittsburgh past San Francisco. The Pirates won two of three games from the Giants and retained a one-game lead over New York in the NL East.

King snapped a 4-4 tie in the fifth inning with his third homer of the season on a pitch from Francisco Olivares (0-2). Bell added a two-run homer in the fifth.

Mets 3, Reds 2
Mackey Sasser led off the ninth inning with a bloop double and scored when first baseman Ken Griffey Sr. threw away a bunt as New York beat Cincinnati, the Mets' third victory in four games against the visiting Reds.

Cubs 11, Padres 10
Luis Salazar's three-run homer capped a four-run rally in the eighth inning as Chicago beat San Diego for its fifth straight victory. The Padres have lost five straight.

The Cubs started their comeback from a 10-7 deficit on Andre Dawson's run-scoring single with two outs. Salazar followed with his fifth homer off reliever Craig Lefferts (5-3) to put the Cubs ahead.

Expos 5, Braves 1
Oit Can Boyd won his first game in seven starts as Montreal beat Atlanta at Olympic Stadium, snapping the Braves' four-game winning streak.

Mike Fitzgerald drove in three runs and Junior Noboa added two RBIs to help the Expos end a four-game losing streak.

Phillies 8, Astros 4
Randy Ready's two-out, run-scoring single sparked a five-run eighth inning as Philadelphia beat visiting Houston. The Astros have lost 14 of their last 15 road games.

With the score tied 3-3, Lenny Dykstra led off the eighth with a walk off loser Larry Andersen (4-2) and moved to second on a sacrifice. Dykstra went to third on a passed ball through the legs of catcher Rich Gedman during an intentional walk to John Kruk and Ready followed with a single past a diving shortstop Rafael Ramirez. Darren Daulton then hit a two-run double and Rod Booker added a two-run triple.

Cardinals 6, Dodgers 5
Rex Hudler and Willie McGee scored on third baseman Mike Sharperson's fielding error to cap a four-run sixth inning as St. Louis rallied from a five-run deficit at Los Angeles.

Winner Frank Dipino (4-1) allowed no runs in two innings.

CHICAGO — Chicago White Sox Dave Gallagher, left, tries unsuccessfully to elude the tag of New York Yankee third baseman Jim Leyritz in the third inning Saturday. Gallagher was too far off the base and was caught in a rundown after the catcher threw to third.

Mariners eye best season

The Seattle Mariners are on their way to the best season in their 13-year history. But a first-ever winning record won't be enough for Manager Jim Lefebvre.

The Mariners completed a three-game sweep Sunday when Milwaukee reliever Tom Edens walked Matt Sinatro with the bases loaded and two outs in the 12th to force in the winning run in a 6-5 victory.

The win moved the Mariners two games over .500 for the first time since May 21. But Lefebvre wants his players thinking that 500 is a stepping stone, not a goal.

"Five hundred will put you in about third place. Third place, so what? Our goal is to go 10 over, then 20 over," Lefebvre said. "We want to keep winning. Ask any guy in the clubhouse and he'll tell you our goal is not to play over .500, but well over .500."

Seattle (40-38) has won eight of its last 10 games and is third in the American League West, nine games behind Chicago.

"I don't think anyone is going to be satisfied with 500," said Harold Reynolds, who had two of Seattle's 12 hits. "It's nice to be here, but it's nothing to get overly excited about. We know Oakland is capable of a lot more than that."

The White Sox beat New York 4-0, despite a complete-game no-hitter by the Yankees' Andy Hawkins. In other games, it was Boston 15, Texas 4; Cleveland 5, California 3; Toronto 4, Oakland 3; Detroit 9, Kansas City 4; and Minnesota 4, Baltimore 3.

Scott Bradley's pinch-hit RBI single in the eighth had given the Mariners a 5-4 lead. But Mariners relief ace Mike Schooler gave up the tying run in the ninth on Bill Spiers' sacrifice fly.

Keith Comstock (4-2), the sixth Seattle pitcher, got the win. Paul Mirabella (2-2) was the loser for Milwaukee, which has dropped four straight.

White Sox 4, Yankees 0
Hawkins had no trouble with the White Sox, but didn't get any help from his own team as he became only the second pitcher ever to pitch a complete-game no-hitter and lose.

The Yankees managed only four hits off three Chicago pitchers, and two-out errors by third baseman Mike Blowers, left fielder Jim Leyritz and right fielder Jesse Barfield in the eighth gave Chicago four unearned runs.

The victory, combined with Oakland's loss in Toronto, put the White Sox back into first place in the AL West, .004 ahead of the Athletics.

Red Sox 15, Rangers 4
Boston avoided a weekend sweep at Fenway Park the hard way, spotting Texas a 4-0 lead before roaring back with a 17-hit attack in its biggest scoring spree of the season.

Tom Brunansky drove in five runs and Carlos Quintana had his first four-hit game and added four RBIs, including two on run-scoring singles in a season-high eight-run second inning as the Red Sox routed Kevin Brown (9-6).

Indians 5, Angels 3
Greg Swindell pitched 8 1/3 strong innings for his first victory since April 29 as the Indians beat California at Municipal Stadium to move back to the .500 mark for the first time since May 24.

Blue Jays 4, Athletics 3
Toronto snapped a six-game losing streak, thanks to some excellent relief pitching from Willie Blair and a crashing slide by Tony Fernandez.

Tigers 9, Royals 4
Jack Morris defeated Kansas City for the fourth straight time as Detroit took advantage of some shaky defense to win their first series at Royals Stadium since August 1987.

Twins 4, Orioles 3
Brian Harper singled in the winning run with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Twins their victory over the Orioles.

said. The audience got an especially good show from the bucking stock, he said.

"We were really fortunate because Mack (Altizer) had rested that stock for 10 days," he said. "I was tickled pink that Wacey Cathey did good and Steve Fryar lead from start to finish."

Atkins said he was pleased with the quality of the rodeo — entertainment acts such as the clowns and the trick riders gave each performance an added dimension, he said. The cowboys' willingness to sign autographs after each performance was important too, he said.

"I thought it made the kids feel like they were a part of it," he said. "I thought it was a big event. I was really proud to be a part of it. The community really supported us."

a no-hitter like this," said Hawkins. "You expect to walk off the field shaking hands with a lot of jubilation."

Hawkins had walked three and retired the first two batters in the eighth inning before disaster struck.

Sammy Sosa grounded to third but Mike Blowers fumbled the ball and his throw to first failed to get Sosa.

"It seemed harmless enough at the time," said Blowers.

was the threat of 33-year-old Martina Navratilova, seeking a record ninth Wimbledon title.

Seles won easily, and — if she can beat Zina Garrison and Graf tops Jana Novotna — those two will meet in the semifinals. Navratilova won in straight sets as well, and she would get Graf in the championship match next Saturday.

But for now, one hurdle was gone. Capriati was eliminated, with a timid grin, a curtsy to the Duchess of York in the royal box and a wave to her family in the crowd.

"It was a great experience and she held up very well," Capriati's mother, Denise, said.

An autumn-like start of the second week of the Grand Slam tournament had 14 fourth-round singles matches, and most of the seeded survivors, of this upset-riddled event moved on.

Boris Becker turned a Centre Court meeting of champions into a rout and Seles scored a quick and clean victory over an outmatched American.

Navratilova also won comfortably, making the quarters for the 16th consecutive year. Ivan Lendl had a tougher time before beating another U.S. opponent to reach the fourth round.

The rodeo awarded prize money totaling $33,220 to several dozen cowboys and cowgirls, including Cathey and Fryer.

Former Odessa College standout and 1989 world champion all-around cowboy Ty Murray took home his share when he won the saddle bronc riding with an 82. Murray had to surpass veteran and former world champion Monty "Hawkeye" Henson, who tied Robert Etbauar for second as each has scores of 78. Mike Coon placed fourth with a 76.

In the bareback riding, Big Spring didn't crown a winner until the final night of competition. Jeff Hart scored a 78 on Saturday night to win the event. Lyndel Crump was second with a 77, and Jim Jones was third with a 75.

Rusty Sewall lead the calf roping for most of the rodeo with a time of 8.5 seconds, and he eventually won the event. Shawn Franklin was second with a 9.2, and James Zant was third with a 9.7. There was logjam for fourth as Shay Good, Jerry Jetton and Tommy Smith tied at 9.9 each.

In the barrel racing, Sherrie Johnson won with a 17.63, less than one-tenth of a second ahead of Janet Meyers and Meca McMullan, who had runs of 17.71. Beth Braudrick finished fourth with a time of 17.72.

David Motes and Dennis Watkins finally won the team roping with a two-steer total of 11.6. The California team lead the event for most of the rodeo and they edged the duo of T.A. Wynne and Vance Walters, who had a total time of 15.3. Tracy Clump and Ed Fernandes were third with a 16.8, and Twister Cain and Billy Stevens were fourth with a 20.3.

latter-day flyers Willie Wilson and Vince Coleman.

And 22 years ago, Valentine was there. But he was too excited to ask Mantle for anything.

"I didn't ask him for an autograph that day," he said. "I didn't get a single Yankee autograph that day. I think maybe it was a little too much for me."

gave them six outs in the eighth inning. As far as I'm concerned, he pitched a nine-inning no-hitter."

"On the one hand, I feel really great," said Hawkins, 30. "And on the other, I'm 1-5 and not feeling that good."

There will come a time, the 57-year-old Johnson predicted from his home in Louisiana, when Hawkins can recall this day with pride.

"Now when I look back at it, I don't look at it as a loss. I look at it as quite a feat," Johnson said. "Sandy Koufax, Jim Bunning and Ken Johnson were the only ones to pitch no-hitters that year."

smoothness: You can go to Penn, play ball and I have the professional connections when you get out to be a pro."

At 5-foot-11 1/2 and 195 pounds, Mantle had it all, combining the power to hit 536 home runs — more than any switch-hitter in history — with the speed to get down the first base line in 2.9 seconds, faster than third baseman. The ball glanced off his glove, allowing three runs to score.

"The ball was hit right at me and I made the wrong move," Leyritz said. "I tried to catch up to it and I did, but I couldn't hold it in my glove."

Ivan Calderon then hit a fly to right that Jesse Barfield lost in the sun. The ball bounced off his glove and Ventura scored to give the White Sox a 4-0 lead.

"It was incredible. In all my years I've never seen anything so incredible," said Yankee manager Stump Merrill. "You're not going to see a better performance. We Becker, the defending champion and aiming for his fourth Wimbledon title overall, beat 1987 champ Pat Cash 7-6, 6-1, 6-4. Cash was a wild-card entry but had looked strong in the previous three rounds.

Seles, the 16-year-old from Yugoslavia, won her 36th match in a row, taking just 45 minutes to beat Ann Henricksson of Mill Valley, Calif., 6-1, 6-0.

Next for Seles is a stiff test — No. 5 Garrison, who eliminated 10th-seeded Helena Sukova 6-3, 6-3 and has not dropped a set so far.

Navratilova, the women's second seed, registered a 6-3, 6-3 victory over 14th-seeded Judith Wiesner of Austria.

Lendl, the men's top seed, stayed on course to finally end his quest for a Wimbledon title, but he had a tougher-than-expected time.

He beat Bryan Shelton, a American ranked 125th in the world, 7-6, 6-7, 6-4, 6-4, in match suspended by darkness at one set apiece Saturday night.

In the men's draw, 1985 runner-up Kevin Curren, unseeded this year, beat Alexandr Volkov 6-4, 7-6.

England defeats Cameroon team; advances in Cup

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

ROME (AP) — Indomitable. Incredible. Eliminated.

The Lions of Cameroon are gone from the World Cup. They will not soon be forgotten.

Attention now turns to England, which eliminated the African champions 3-2 Sunday. And West Germany, which beat Czechoslovakia 1-0.

And Italy and Argentina, the host nation and the defending champion, who also are in the tina in Naples, where Argentine captain Diego Maradona is a hero. He won't be for that game.

The next day, England takes on West Germany in Turin. Turin Mayor Maria Magnani Noya said she no longer objects to England playing there.

The mayor triggered an uproar on Friday by saying she would ask FIFA to switch the contestants in the semifinals if England qualified so that the English would not play in Turin. She cited anti-English sentiment lingering from the Heysel Stadium tragedy five years ago, when 39 fans, mostly Italians, died in riots at the Brussels, Belgium, stadium before a European Cup of Champions game between Liverpool and Juventus of Turin.

The English fans were on good behavior in Italy on Sunday. Back home, celebrations led to 47 arrests as scattered vandalism and looting marred celebrations.

England went ahead 1-0 on a first-half goal by David Platt. But Cameroon, the first African nation to get past the second round, took the lead on goals five minutes apart early in the second half. Emmanuel Kunde tied it with a 60th-minute penalty kick after Paul Gascoigne fouled Milla. Substitute Eugene Ekeke then scored in the 65th minute off a pass from Milla.

Back came England. Lineker was fouled in front of the net with eight minutes left in regulation and scored. He repeated the feat in the 15th minute of overtime.

"We showed character, resilience, spirit, effort and determination," Coach Bobby Robson said. "We had to hang in there in desperation for many periods of the match."

West Germany had no such problems. The 1-0 score is misleading — the Germans dominated the whole game and completely shut down Tomas Skuhravy, the tournament's leading scorer.

"We performed strongly as a defense, both offensively and on defense," Coach Franz Beckenbauer said. "Our main goal was to get to the semifinals, and we are there."

So is Italy, which has a string of five shutouts after a 1-0 win over Ireland on Saturday night. And Argentina survived a penalty kick shootout against Yugoslavia after a scoreless tie, winning 3-2 in the shootout.

"Cameroon was very tough. They deserve all the credit in the world. They came in underestimated and have shown African football is very strong." — Gary Lineker of England semifinals.

But it is Cameroon that won the hearts of everyone — including its opponents.

"It has been a great experience for all of us," team captain Stephen Tataw said.

"Cameroon was very tough," added Gary Lineker, who scored on two penalty kicks in England's comeback victory. "They deserve all the credit in the world. They came in underestimated and have shown African football is very strong."

Not quite strong enough, though. The Africans, who began the World Cup by shocking Argentina, ended it with a lap around the stadium in Naples to ringing cheers. They had been undone by the loss of four starters to suspension, and by something else.

"It was not that one team played better or one team played worse," said Roger Milla, Cameroon's 38-year-old supersub, who had a role in both goals. "It was experience that decided it."

Experience is something the four survivors certainly can boast. All have won World Cups. Italy is after a record fourth, while the Germans and Argentines have won two. England won in 1966, at home, the only other time the English have advanced to the semifinals.

Levi hitches up pants; wins Hartford Open by two strokes

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Wayne Levi wasn't concerned as he and several not-so-well-known players jockeyed for the Greater Hartford Open lead.

"I knew no one out of that group was going to run away from the field," he said.

He got a little nervous, however, when British Open champion Mark Calcavecchia reeled off six birdies over eight holes to grab a two-stroke lead.

Then came the 17th, where Calcavecchia found the water and took a double bogey.

"I said, 'That's just what I need,'" Levi said. "I said to myself, 'I make this putt, I've got it.'"

He rolled the putt in for his second straight birdie and went on to shoot a 67 Sunday for his third victory of the season. Twice a runner-up at Hartford, Levi completed the 72 holes at 13-under 267 to beat Calcavecchia and three others by two strokes.

"That turned the whole thing right there," Levi said. "Two shots is big on this course."

Levi, who had not won in five years, became the tour's first three-time winner this year. He captured the Atlanta Golf Classic and the Western Open over a three-week period.

"It's been a great six weeks — three wins, $540,000, that's unbelievable," said Levi, who shot 67-66-67-67.

Levi wore the same shirt and hat he wore for his two other victories, but said he's not superstitious. His mother, however, is.

"She's always on me about that. 'Put the same stuff on that you won the last tournament with. Put it on.'"

Levi listened to his mother, but he credits slight technical changes in his game for his recent success.

"I've changed a few things in my swing and I feel like I'm hitting the ball a lot better. And I've changed to a new putter and I'm rolling the ball real nice," he said.

Calcavecchia, who also three-putted 18 for bogey, was runnerup for the fifth time this year. He hasn't won since the British Open last year.

Visibly upset, Calcavecchia stormed off the course and refused to talk to the media.

He shot a 67 to finish at 269 along with Rocco Mediate, Brad Fabel and Chris Perry. Mediate shot a 65, Fabel had a 70 and Perry, son of former major league pitcher Jim Perry, a 69.

Fabel was the last player with a chance at catching Levi, but his hopes of his first victory ended when he hit a 6-iron over the green into the water on 16 for a double bogey.

"I said to myself, 'Let's try to win,'" he said. "I just nailed it. But it was the wrong decision with the club."

The other third-round co-leader, Nolan Henke, shot 73 to finish in a four-way tie for sixth at 10-under.

PARAMUS, N.J. — Jack Nicklaus, left, congratulates Lee Trevino after Trevino won the 1990 U.S. Senior Open by one stroke over Nicklaus at the Ridgewood Country Club on Sunday. Nicklaus challenged Trevino until the Bear bogeyed the 17th hole and fell two strokes behind Trevino.

Trevino grabs Senior Open

PARAMUS, N.J. (AP) — Lee Trevino came into the U.S. Senior Open needing to prove something, and he did.

Trevino beat Jack Nicklaus and quieted those who said the only reason he was winning so much on the Senior Tour was because the Bear wasn't playing that much.

Not only did Trevino win, he did it the hard way. He came from behind, took the lead and held off a late charge after Nicklaus drew within a stroke on the back nine.

All Nicklaus was left with was excuses about his contacts and his poor start.

"This is great," Trevino said after shooting a final-round 5-under-par 67 Sunday to capture his first Senior Open by two shots over Nicklaus. "I just wish I would have played with him. It would have been the icing on the cake to play with him and win. It's always a feather in your hat to beat Jack Nicklaus in a golf tournament."

The problem for Trevino was that he had not beaten Nicklaus in three Senior Tour events and that tended to take away from his five wins this year.

Although Trevino led the Seniors in wins, money earned, scoring average and several other categories, the rap was Lee couldn't beat Jack.

Heading into the final round, it seemed Nicklaus was in position to do it to Trevino again. He had rallied from five shots off the pace after the second round and grabbed the lead heading into the final round with a 67 when Trevino faltered with a third-round 73 at the Ridgewood Country Club.

That left two dream matchups for Sunday's final round: Nicklaus and Gary Player paired in the final group and Trevino and an injured Jim Dent in the next-to-last group.

"I was out on a mission today," Trevino said after he finished with a 13-under 275 total. "I had a tough night sleeping last night. I played very foolish yesterday (Saturday) and I had trouble sleeping. I must have gone over my round 50 times during the night."

What Trevino discovered was that he had not taken enough time to plan his shots on Saturday. He did Sunday.

Trevino was on his game from the practice range to the 18th green, making only one mistake all day, a three-putt green that gave him his only bogey. By then, the lead was his for good.

CROMWELL, Conn. — Wayne Levi of Utica, N.Y., grimaces as his putt slid by the hole on the 17th green at the Tournament of Players Club golf course during the final round of the Greater Hartford Open golf tournament. Levi made a par four on the hole, but he went on to win the tournament.

Copycat tactics means winning

KITCHENER, Ontario (AP) — Cathy Johnston admits she's a copycat. And because of it, she's also a winner.

Earlier this year, when a close friend won her first pro golf tournament, Johnston told herself: "You can do it." The 26-year-old from Wilmington, N.C., finally did it Sunday.

When a 30-foot-putt from the fringe of the 18th green plopped into the cup, Johnston had her first career triumph — the $600,000 du Maurier Classic, the second of four major tournaments on the LPGA Tour.

"That was a lot of work," she said after finishing off her wire-to-wire triumph with a 16-under-par 276 total, two shots better than veteran Patti Sheehan. "With all the pressure, I don't see how those people win 20 tournaments."

Sheehan, who shot a 69 Sunday to Johnston's 71, called the tournament-clinching putt "awesome."

"I ran into a buzzsaw," said Sheehan, winner of 23 titles, including two straight coming into the du Maurier. "She played extremely well today."

Besides the winner's $90,000 prize, a surprise was waiting for Johnston at the conclusion. After her putt, Johnston's mother, Sylvia, and sister, Karen, slipped out from behind the trees to surprise the new champion.

The three hugged each other, crying.

Johnston, the 1991 PGA National Junior champion, plans to spend the week in Detroit trying to qualify for the U.S. Women's Open later this month. The five-year tour exemption she earned with the du Maurier title, only takes effect at the start of next season.

Sheehan, who won $55,000 to run her LPGA-leading earnings to more than $412,000, started the day four shots behind Johnston. When she birdied the 10th hole to reach 14-under, Sheehan shared the lead. "I finally caught her at 10, but then I didn't play very well in a stretch of four or five holes," Sheehan said.

Sheehan got one stroke back with a birdie on the 16th, but missed a birdie putt from 15 feet on the 17th and Johnston sank a three-footer to save par and take a two-shot advantage into the final hole.

Johnston said she came within an inch of blowing her lead on the 18th. She pulled an iron shot into the rough just left of the green, and while walking to the green, she almost stepped on the ball.

"What a way it would have been to lose a tournament," she said, holding up a thumb and a forefinger with an inch gap to show how close she had come.

She then flubbed her chip shot short, onto the fringe, but sank the putt.

"All I wanted to do was get it (the ball) close within a foot," said Johnston.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

TUESDAY, JULY 3, 1990

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: superstar Tom Cruise, musician Pete Fountain, playwright Tom Stoppard, actress Betty Buckley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Complete overdue paperwork. Joint resources could be a source of disension between you and romantic partner. You find answers where you least expect them. Try hard to set the record straight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Follow the lead of someone who has recently gained objectives you seek. Ask questions; listen. A cooperative effort pays off even better than you had hoped. Mutual support is essential for progress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Hasty action will bring regrets before the day is out. Make your peace with someone who can help you. Take a methodical approach to problem-solving. Your zigzag method creates confusion. CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your strength of character pays off today. Integrity is the essential ingredient for success. Use compassion when discussing a teen-ager's problems. Avoid lecturing. A platonic relationship heats up.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A letter or phone call brings important financial news. Someone who works behind the scenes could play a major role in your career. Alert an influential person to your special talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A long-awaited project finally gets off the ground. Be conservative in money matters; others are only too eager to spend your resources. Turn your analytical mind to running an unusual business.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A business or family matter will demand your full attention early today. Old colleagues help you lay a new foundation. Family members will make temporary sacrifices if you set a good example.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be prepared to discuss a financial matter with family. Offer several attractive options. Your hard work will impress well-placed higher-ups. New alliances enjoy favorable influences.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Another outstanding day for handling personal affairs! Friends and family are enthusiastic about your career options. Monetary assistance banishes tension. You decide to pursue romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are on a better wavelength with higher-ups. A colleague begins to play a larger role in your daily routine. Parents should avoid being overly solicitous of young people. Romance is in high gear.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You enjoy new rapport with your co-workers. Make the most of it. Learn how to accept affection as well as give it. Financial worries are due to fade. Romance sizzles!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You know exactly what is the right thing to do now. Refuse to let a competitor's confidence put you at a disadvantage. Show your determination to get what you want and deserve.

Redder completes HC workshop

BIG SPRING — Stanton High School Agricultural Instructor Randal Redder completed a workshop entitled "Electrical Motors and Safety" held on the campus of Howard College June 21.

The workshop, which included instructions concerning electrical motors, motor protection, care, maintenance and electrical safety, was sponsored by Howard College, TU Electric and Texas Tech University. "This is the second year that we have sponsored the workshop at Howard College. It enables the ag teacher to go back and use the knowledge for the purpose of helping his students in the classroom," said Texas Electric Agricultural Representative for the Western Division Wade McMurray.

Four shot in weekend incident

LUFKIN (AP) — A second disturbance in a month at local parks has sent four young men to hospitals with gunshot wounds and required about 100 police officers to break up.

The state and local officers were called to this East Texas town Sunday night to control a crowd that apparently became hostile after the shooting of one man at 9:45 p.m. Sunday, officials said.

Authorities said the crowd of about 150 became rowdy after that shooting and began throwing rocks and bottles at police when the crowd was ordered to disperse.

Several hundred residents gather at the park regularly on weekends, said police spokesman Lt. Amos Lewis.

Scott Hamilton, 28, of Lufkin, was shot in the head when he apparently began fighting with a 16-year-old man from Nacogdoches, Lewis said. Hamilton was listed in serious condition today at a Tyler hospital.

The 16-year-old, also shot in the head, was in critical condition at Memorial Medical Center of East Texas this morning.

Attorneys hoping for agreement

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys were hoping today that an agreement could be worked out soon to store disputed German art treasures at the Dallas Museum of Art.

The medieval works of art were taken from a mine shaft in Quedlinburg, East Germany, at the end of World War II. Attorneys for the church that claims ownership say the works were taken by Whitewright, Texas, Army Lt. Joe T. Meador, who died in 1980.

The works are stored in bank vaults in North Texas.

Oil patch faces roughneck shortage

HOUSTON (AP) — A meager, recent recovery in Texas' tattered oil and gas drilling industry is being threatened by a shortage of roughnecks.

Tens of thousands of trained rig operators have left the field, and the current shortage has caused many of the state's independent drilling companies to turn away work or use inexperienced crews. Although the situation has not yet become a crisis, it has set off alarms in the industry as drilling activity increases.

"The personnel problem is going to be one of the critical issues to face our industry. There's a lot of activity increase out there, and it's going to make it only worse." — Bill Lang of Baker Hughes.

"We have six rigs, but people for only four," said Ken McPeters, president of Ziadrill, a contractor active throughout West Texas. "If we get any additional work, we just won't be able to man the rigs."

"The personnel problem is going to be one of the critical issues to face our industry," said Bill Lang, manager of marketing research for Baker Hughes Inc. in Houston. "There's a lot of activity increase out there, and it's going to make it only worse."

Baker Hughes estimates that the number of working oil and gas rigs in the United States will grow to 1,225 by 1992, an increase of more than 200 from now. In Texas, the rig count is up about 90 in the past year alone.

The problem is limited to on-shore rigs and is expected to be particularly troublesome in South Texas, where the use of horizontal drilling technology has sparked a flurry of activity, observers said.

The Gulf Coast and far West Texas are other areas of concern.

"There's so many rigs out here right now that they're just screaming for hands. They're hurting," said Tim Miller, 28, who works on a rig near Edna, about 120 miles southwest of Houston.

In an effort to offset the roughneck shortage, drilling companies are implementing recruiting and training programs not seen since the long-gone boom days.

Charities catching duck-race fever

MIDLAND — Duck-race fever is striking non-profit agencies hunting for a new blind for an old game.

"It was so crazy; it would work," says Rick Burgess, director of promotions for Loyolla University, Shreveport, La. The duck race staged by the university was considered "one of the most successful special events that the city has ever had. We kind of became the envy of all non-profits because of all the promotions we got."

Economics being what they are in West Texas these days, area non-profits are searching for new ways to raise money.

Members of the Junior League of Midland were intrigued by the duck racing idea, but Midland had no river in which to stage the race.

The organization came up with an alternative — a swimming pool. Thus, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. July 4, the Mabee Memorial Swim Center, complete with electric fans, becomes the site of Midland's first duck race. The event, "Fab-DUCKulous Family Fun Fair," includes activities common to area residents as well as the not-so-common.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals need not be alert. Duck races are run with lightweight decoys. Not real

Strikes temper euphoria

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

EAST BERLIN — East Germany plunged headfirst into the capitalist world today after its weekend economic merger with West Germany, but new worries and warning strikes blunted the euphoria of holding a new hard currency.

Many East Germans were snatching up long desired goods with their new West German marks, but some were shocked by higher prices.

Workers at two East German factories staged warning strikes today. They were the first of what is expected to be a wave of work stoppages.

In another protest, coal dealers used their trucks to block loading points in four places in East Berlin.

The city's 66 coal dealers were protesting the end of state subsidies that were a hallmark of the nation's Communist-run economy. State subsidies have been halted as the country adopts capitalism.

On the first business day since economic union, long lines formed at most grocery stores and other shops.

The official ADN news agency, reporting from Potsdam just southwest of Berlin, said prices for East German-produced butter and cheese were about the same as before, but the price of milk had more than doubled.

It said consumers were comparing prices and shopping carefully.

One shopper, 70-year-old Werner Ludwig of East Berlin, said he saw Western electronic goods of lower prices and better quality than those available before. "But on the other hand, things that you need daily, like bread and flour, are much more expensive," he said. "How often do you buy a color TV? You need bread every day."

Today's warning strikes — at the Ludwigsfelde automobile parts plant just south of Berlin and the Brandenburg steel works west of Berlin — were for better pay and working conditions, ADN said.

Texas A&M University plans to reinstate an Abilene "roughneck school" closed three years ago for lack of interest. The first class begins next month.

"There's a great need for people who can operate this equipment safely," said Will McNair, director of A&M's energy training division. "The companies are saying these people just aren't out there."

The Texas Employment Commission estimates 125,000 people working in the oil and gas extraction business in 1982 had quit or lost their jobs by the beginning of 1990. The sector currently employs about 167,000 people in Texas.

Many of the experienced workers who lost their oil rig jobs during the bust have found more secure — and much easier — work in other industries.

"A lot of people were scared away," said Chris Hanson, president of Southland Drilling Co. in Victoria. "They're making less money, but they're getting a steady check and they don't have to worry about it."

Farm scene

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Farmland prices may be settling down after more than a decade of climbing to record levels and falling even faster, an Agriculture Department analyst says.

The department's Economic Research Service announced in April that farmland prices rose nationally in 1989 for the third straight year. As of Jan. 1, the average was $693 per acre, up about 4 percent from $667 a year earlier.

Another increase of 3 percent to 4 percent is expected in 1990, the agency forecast in June.

Economist Roger Hexem noted that the high point for U.S. farmland prices — which includes buildings as well as land — was $823 per acre in 1982. That was followed by a 27 percent decline over the next five years to $599 per acre in 1987.

The plummet in land values was a key part of the overall farm recession of the mid-1980s, which turned out to be the worst in 50 years.

Many analysts believe farmers and investors learned a lot in the 1980s about the land market and how it can be affected by so many factors not tied directly to agriculture.

But the general economic health of farming is still hugely important to the land market. And USDA estimates of annual farm income, interest rates and credit availability are part of the overall investment picture.

"In 1989, farmland values did not increase as much as some factors seem to indicate they might have," Hexem said in the July issue of Farmland magazine.

"The modest increase (of 4 percent) in a time of positive income and debt indicators, suggests that investors may have anticipated the 1989 conditions" in 1988 and 1987 as land prices began climbing again, he said.

As it turned out, last year's net farm income was at a record level, and farm real estate debt edged lower, continuing a six-year decline from its 1983 peak.

"Other factors that may have held farmland values down (in 1989) include uncertainties about changes in the capital gains tax, possible changes in income and price support programs in the new farm bill, movements in interest rates, and the outcome of the trade liberalization negotiations," Hexem said.

Estimates of farmland values come from an annual survey of farmers and ranchers by the department's National Agricultural Statistics Service.

WASHINGTON — Cooperatives providing fuel to the nation's farmers have reduced production of leaded gasoline but not as rapidly as U.S. refiners in general, according to an Agriculture Department report.

In 1988, according to the department's Agricultural Cooperative Service, co-ops produced 16.5 million barrels of leaded gasoline, down 30 percent from 1982, when the previous study by the agency was made.

"That decline was much smaller than the estimated 60 percent figure representing all U.S. refiners and reflects cooperatives' response to the continuing demand by farmer members for leaded gasoline to power older equipment," the report said.

The use of leaded gasoline has been banned in new automobiles for some years as part of the nation's anti-pollution campaign. But farmers with older tractors say the unleaded fuel means more wear and tear on their machines.

Overall, co-ops provided nearly 40 percent of the gasoline, diesel fuel and liquefied petroleum used by farmers in 1988, the report said. The fuel, came from 2,300 regional and local farmer-owned cooperatives and had a total value of $4.4 billion.

Extension notes

By KATHRYN BURCH

The 81st American Home Economics Association Annual Meeting and Exposition was held in San Antonio, expressing the theme, "Targeting New Horizons."

AHEA members, 24,000 strong, specialize in such diverse home economics areas as child development, institutional administration, family economics, human nutrition, gerontology, resource management, consumer education, housing and adult education.

Important issues were raised. Topics such as child care legislation, aging parents, teen pregnancy, latch-key children and much more were discussed by some of the nation's leading experts. Consumer education materials, products and services were presented in the expository from over 150 firms.

Sewing machine exhibits were held along with consumer decision making shopping. Martin County Commissioners approved the purchase of a serger for the local Home Economics program. The purchase of the serger will enhance the local program. The serger should arrive in eight to ten days.

Programs were set up for the reduction of garbage volume. One of the program used was the school lunch program. The program consist of converting small milk cartons into collapsible plastic milk containers, reducing the volume of garbage in half.

Robotics are still in the future for the home use, however they are being tested in hospital settings for the use of domestic chores.

Concern about children and families was one of the main topics as the largest growing labor force are women with children less than one year old.

This brings up concerns for child care, after school care legislation, family stability and effects on our volunteer force. As industry begins to provide child care as a benefit for securing productive employees, the gap between having and not having child care programs will determine the quality employee.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Strikes

parity with their rich neighbors in West Germany. Others were expected to strike in a bid to keep their factories from closing.

Both East and West German officials predict the next few months will be difficult, mostly because many of East Germany's 8,000 state-owned companies are expected to close.

Burdened by heavy debt and unable to generate enough sales to pay their employees in West German marks, many East German factories and businesses are expected to fold even before they can convert to private ownership.

The sobering reality contrasted with the outburst of euphoria that greeted the economic merger.

At the stroke of midnight Saturday, the West German mark became the official East German currency and the West German central bank took control of East Germany's money supply. Border controls were eliminated.

East Germans cheered, honked horns and set off fireworks to welcome the currency they had long coveted. West German businessmen — everyone from furniture salesmen to travel agents offering tours to Rio de Janeiro — rushed in to tempt them.

At border crossings that were impenetrable before the Communists fell from power in last fall's democratic upheaval, smiling families walked, drove and bicycled back and forth without a policeman in sight.

Although full political union with West Germany remains months away, for most East Germans Sunday was the long awaited day of unification, ending a failed 40-year experiment with socialism.

League headquarters warehouse over to the City of Midland Swim Center. Fortunately, the majority of junior league members do drive the state car of Texas — a Suburban."

An advantage of racing inside is the opportunity to run heats within each division.

"When they purchase a ticket, they have the opportunity to have the duck participate in an adult race, a youth race or a child's race," Mrs. Blake says. "The event will feature separate heats for corporations who will help sponsor the day."

Prizes will be awarded in each category.

The proceeds from the event go to the "Building for a Better Midland" Capital Campaign for Headquarters Expansion of the Junior League of Midland Inc. The Junior League is working toward meeting a matching grant from the J.E. & L.E. Mabee Foundation Inc.

Duck racing didn't originate in the United States.

Michele Brown, event coordinator for The Great American

Duck Races, explains that the organization's president took an old idea and made it new.

"The concept of the duck race originated in Ireland in the early 1900s. Eric Schechter made it into a fund-raising formula."

The first rubber duck races staged by the GADR in the United States was held in May 1988. In two years, the organization has raised more than $100,000 in Phoenix, Ms. Brown says. She adds that now GADR has made inroads into more than 100 U.S. markets.

"We've had a few that didn't make the money, but overall they really do come out above," Ms. Brown says. "Our lease fee on a duck is 45 cents. The average of adopting a duck is about $5 so they really make some money on that. The only fee they are paying us is the leasing fee so it's really a good deal."

"We give them a 400-page manual which gives them guidelines on what has worked in the past. They can go ahead and follow those guidelines, or they can be more creative and come up with something else."
