Local forum on aging scheduled

A local forum for the Texas White House Conference on Aging (TWHCoA) will be held for the public on July 12, at 10 a.m., at Spring City Senior Center, Industrial Park, Big Spring.

The forum, co-sponsored by Spring City Senior Center, Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging, and the Texas Department on Aging, will provide local citizens an opportunity to discuss key issues affecting older persons and their families.

"Similar forums are being held all over the state, and the feedback gathered in local communities will be examined during the Texas White House Conference on Aging next fall," said W.E. Smith, Director, Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging. "We're encouraging adults of all ages to attend. Aging is an issue that will ultimately affect all of us."

"We want to have some grassroots input on issues that will affect our elderly population in the next decade and in the next century," said Smith. "Voices we hear at our local forums can be instrumental in shaping future policy."

Local forums being held around the state will be completed by July 15, and the Texas White House Conference on Aging is scheduled for October 17-19, 1990, in Austin. A date for the national White House Conference in 1991 has yet to be called by President Bush.

Accidents kill 15 in Texas on holiday

The Midland Department of Public Safety reported that 15 people died on Texas roads statewide during the 30-hour July 4 holiday.

According to the DPS, nine of the 15 deaths were alcohol related. Four involved motorcycles, and one victim was not wearing a helmet, the DPS said.

Five of the victims were not wearing a seatbelt, the DPS reported, and it was unknown whether three deaths were related to alcohol or non-seatbelt use. Two of the holiday victims were pedestrians.

The DPS had predicted that 15 people would die on Texas roads over the holiday.

Registration will be on the second floor of the Student Union Building.

Classes for the second summer session begin Tuesday, July 10, and end Wednesday, August 15.

Willie's show, displays mark 4th

Texans celebrated the Fourth of July by swarming to lakes and parks, attending fireworks displays, baseball games and Willie Nelson's July 4th picnic.

Although it was a one-day holiday at midweek, Texans found time to celebrate.

Organizers of the Nelson bash worked hard to create a family atmosphere to erase the negative image of earlier concerts, which were marred by drunkenness, drug abuse, heat exhaustion, traffic jams and violence.

This year, there were children's rides, an inflatable castle, clowns and music.

"This is much more family oriented," said EMS technician Linda Varda.

No final attendance figures were available early today, but promoters expected 35,000 to attend the picnic and festival at Austin's Zilker Park.

Johnny Cash, Waylon Jennings and others joined Nelson on stage to entertain the fans. The concert ended late Wednesday with a fireworks display.

At Arlington, more than 41,000 fans attended the Baltimore Orioles-Texas Rangers baseball game which was followed by a huge fireworks display. Others attended a bash called Freedom Fest at the State Fair of Texas grounds in Dallas.

Some celebrated the holiday by attending traditional political rallies.

At Beaumont about 1,000 turned out for a political rally featuring an appearance by Democratic gubernatorial nominee Ann Richards and several other candidates for statewide office.

Richards took Republican nominee Clayton Williams to task for avoiding her and the issues.

"We think Clayton ought to come on out and fight like a man," Ms. Richards said.

Officials busy with area blazes due to fireworks

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

Numerous grass fires were reported over the Fourth of July holiday, and even Big Spring's public fireworks display caused eight small blazes on South Mountain.

It appears that many people did not heed the warnings issued early in the week, as fire and police departments were kept busy throughout the holiday answering calls about illegal fireworks and the fires caused by them.

Nine grass fires, one false alarm and burning railroad ties made up 11 calls answered by the Big Spring Fire Department between 9:20 p.m. and 3 a.m., said Lt. Carl Conbray.

The grass fires, started in various locations around the city, were most likely caused by fireworks, Conbray said, adding that firefighters were so busy going from call to call they did not have much time to investigate.

"We just have to speculate about the cause, but there's a good chance they were (fireworks-caused)," he said.

Those fires were inside the city limits, even though using fireworks within those boundaries is against the law, Conbray said.

"I don't think we've seen the last of them yet, either," he said. "I don't think everyone's exhausted their supply yet. We need to make sure everybody knows citations will be issued (for using fireworks within the city limits)."

Big Spring Police Officers answered 15 calls of illegal fireworks and assisted at 15 reported fires during the day, said Lt. Jerry Edwards.

"Probably 99 percent (of the fires) were caused by fireworks," he said. "They were spread out all over town."

Edwards said the police always expect to answer a number of calls during the Fourth of July.

"We'll always have quite a few, but this year was worse because it was so dry," Edwards said. "Officers were busy all day, and both dispatchers were answering a constant stream of calls."

HOUSTON — Lucille Parish, of Capitol Flag Co. in Houston, is busy sewing flags for the International Economic Summit July 9-11. The family-owned business has been making flags of all states and nations for 39 years.

Flagmakers sewn up with summit business

By SUSAN FAHLGREN

HOUSTON — Lucille Parish has spent 36 years sewing flags of all states and nations. But she says her family-owned Capitol Flag Co. Inc. has never been busier as it continues preparations for the International Economic Summit.

"We've got our normal, heavy traffic from the Fourth of July and then with the summit piled on top of it. It's turned into so much work," said Joe Parish, 32, president of the company and Lucille Parish's son. "We haven't been this busy since the (Texas) Sesquicentennial."

"I think this year's going to beat that," said Mrs. Parish, 65. "I've been in business 36 years on July 4th and this year's going to top all the rest of the years."

Ever since the White House announced its choice of the Bayou City as host of the annual meeting of the seven wealthiest nations, the Parishes have been cutting, sewing, stocking and repairing flags for the July 9-11 event.

"We started months ago," Parish said. "Or at least we tried. We thought, 'Oh, we're set.' But once it started hitting, we said, 'We should have made 100 of each of these.'"

Thousands of small, printed flags for waving and for desk displays have been stocked and restocked — 18,000 tiny U.S. flags were sold in less than 30 days.

In recent weeks, the Parishes have sold at least 50 sets of eight 3-foot-by-5-foot, mostly hand-sewn flags — one from each of the seven summit countries and the 12-star European Economic Conference flag — as well as

Six Flags parking lot goes patriotic

ARLINGTON (AP) — Patriotic parking attendants at Six Flags Over Texas celebrated July 4 with separate rows of red, white and blue vehicles.

Cars of other colors were motioned to other rows as the park opened Wednesday morning.

"The guests realized what they were doing, and got just as much enjoyment out of it as the parking lot attendants," said Six Flags public relations coordinator Sherry Hatfield.

The teen-age attendants lined up three rows, with about 30 cars per row, in the red, white and blue motif before traffic got heavier. They went back to regular parking.

"Our parking lot attendants just came up with the idea. The foreman of the parking lot thought, 'what a neat thing to do,'" said Ms. Hatfield. "It was a complete surprise to me."

Six Flags Over Texas has about 2,500 people, mostly teenagers and college students, on staff.

CAF signs lease in Midland

MIDLAND (AP) — A flyover by vintage World War II planes marked the signing Wednesday of a lease to relocate the Confederate Air Force museum from Harlingen to Midland.

The agreement was signed by CAF executive director Ralph Royce and Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas before about 250 people.

Six World War II vintage planes, in formation, later flew over the crowd at Midland International Airport.

"And to the CAF let me say once again, you are cleared to land at Midland International Airport. Welcome," said Thomas.

The CAF will soon begin seeking contracts for remodeling work on a hangar. Ground-breaking is set for August, officials said.

Construction should cost about $4 million on the 42-acre site. An additional 28 acres are available for future expansion, officials said.

The lease agreement calls for the CAF to pay Midland rent of $1 per year, for the next 50 years. The CAF must complete $2 million worth of improvements within two years and conduct two air shows annually.

The first phase might be ready for the public by Dec. 7, 1991, the 50th anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack.

The aircraft enthusiasts' group started looking for a new home after learning it did not fit into expansion plans at Harlingen's airport.

Moonshine causes liver damage

DALLAS (AP) — A 24-year-old man's liver was permanently damaged after he drank moonshine, and Kaufman County authorities have charged three people with the illegal manufacture of alcohol.

The victim, whose name was withheld, was taken to Kaufman Presbyterian Hospital after drinking the corn liquor at a party last Friday.

He was discharged on Tuesday, but Kaufman County Sheriff Robert Harris said he will not be able to return to his job as a roofer because of his damaged liver.

A still was confiscated from the home of Billy James Waits, 55, and his wife, Lafawn Waits, 49. The couple was arrested along with a neighbor, Alonzo Morgan, 46.

The three were freed from the Kaufman County jail on Tuesday after each posted $2,000 bond.

Harris does not know whether the corn liquor was toxic.

"We don't know if he just drank too much or if there was something in it," Harris said.

Authorities said at least three people have died in the last four years from alcohol poisoning after drinking illegally produced spirits.

'Dallas justice' image under fire

DALLAS (AP) — In a little over a year, Dallas County has released five prisoners it wrongfully convicted. Collectively, they spent 44 years in prison before courts decided they should never have been sent there.

Together their cases left a perception that Dallas offers its citizens a brand of roughshod justice, that police and prosecutors and courts convict first and ask questions later.

Is the image false? Prosecutors say it's undeserved, and many defense lawyers say Dallas differs from other justice systems only in the celebrity of its wrongfully convicted prisoners.

Foremost among that celebrity clan was Randall Dale Adams, released last year after more than 12 years in prison. Adams' conviction in the shooting of a Dallas police officer was overturned after a key witness recanted his testimony and the courts found a prosecutor had withheld evidence.

His story was recounted in the hit movie "The Thin Blue Line," and Adams, who once was just days away from execution, now tours the lecture circuit.

His attorney says an Adams case could happen anywhere.

"I suspect it is something that extends across the country," said attorney Randy Schaffer of Houston. "I don't think it's limited to Dallas County."

That view is shared by Tom Krampitz, executive director of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association in Austin.

"If you go into any other state... you'll find the same thing is going on there," Krampitz said.

Others say Dallas County seems to convict an unusual number of innocent people. Among them are John Boston, executive director of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association in Austin, and Ronald Huff, director of the Criminal Justice Research Center at Ohio State University.

Willie on stage

AUSTIN — Willie Nelson opened his traditional July 4th Picnic in Zilker Park by declaring "Happy Birthday, U.S.A.!" and singing some of his favorite tunes. Crowds withstood 100-degree temperature and little shade to hear Nelson and friends.

Rape victim decides to strike back

HOUSTON (AP) — Kim McSherry says that after she was raped at knife-point in her apartment last month, she reacted like many victims and shook with fear at the prospect of leaving her home.

But when the "snaggletoothed" attacker returned, Ms. McSherry struck back with a public appeal for help.

And it paid off. Eight hours after she and neighbors posted 3,500 fliers, including a drawing and a description of her assailant, a suspect was in custody.

"I had to do something," said Ms. McSherry. "My mental health absolutely depended upon it. I just don't wear 'victim' well. It ain't a fun place to be."

Ms. McSherry, 39, was attacked at her apartment early June 7. The assailant came through an unlocked door about 2 a.m. and assaulted her for more than two hours, she said.

Although she reported the attack to the police Ms. McSherry said she was afraid to leave her home and worried the assailant would come back.

On June 28, he did, leaving notes saying, "You snitched but I still love you."

"I had done nothing and my greatest fear happened — he came back," Ms. McSherry said. "So, what the hell did I have to lose?"

On Sunday, she and about 40 friends and neighbors posted fluorescent green and yellow fliers on apartments, cars, stores and utility poles throughout her neighborhood in Spring Branch, a suburb of Houston.

Damon Lee Wood, 22, was ar-

HOUSTON — Rape victim Kim McSherry posted 3,500 fliers, including a drawing and description of her assailant, and eight hours later a suspect was arrested.

Wood, paroled from the Texas prison system in November after serving two years of a 10-year term for burglary, has been charged with aggravated robbery and aggravated sexual assault. His bond was raised Tuesday from $40,000 to $100,000.

"We had a feeling he lived in the area, and sure enough someone recognized him and called us Sunday night and told us where he was," said Rusty Gallier, a detective in the Houston Police Department's sex crimes division.

Ms. McSherry said she was motivated to act not only for herself, but also to give other sexual assault victims the courage to come forward and "not be huddled in a corner forever."

"I certainly didn't need my name plastered all over the place," she said. "This is about helping to shift the consciousness around this whole issue (rape)."

Author says Billy the Kid pardon only a joke

LAS CRUCES (AP) — All this stuff about a pardon for Billy the Kid has left two women chuckling over the fact that their request was taken seriously — and rejected.

Opal Lee Priestley, who wrote the book, "Billy the Kid: The Good Side of a Bad Man," and its illustrator, Marquita Peterson, sent a letter to Gov. Garrey Carruthers in March 1989 asking that Billy the Kid be pardoned for his role in the 1878 shooting death of Lincoln County Sheriff William Brady.

The letter emphasized that the sheriff was killed on April 1, April Fool's Day, but Priestley figures the governor's office missed the point.

"It was really a facetious thing," she said. "I didn't mean for them to take it seriously."

But they did. The letter was forwarded to the state Pardon and Extradition Office, which opted against pursuing the matter.

B.J. Wagner-Adams, the governor's administrator of pardons and extraditions, said last week a full investigation was impossible because the shooting occurred more than 100 years ago.

Moreover, hundreds of living people have clemency cases pending with only a few months left in Carruthers' administration, she said.

Priestley said the Kid was not allowed a fair trial in Mesilla, that he received only token representation and that it was a foregone conclusion that he would be found guilty and sentenced to hang.

The Kid was taken to Lincoln to await execution, but he escaped by killing his jailer and a deputy. Sheriff Pat Garrett hunted him down and killed him at Fort Sumner in 1881.

Priestley said she hasn't considered asking the next governor for a pardon for Billy the Kid.

"We've had a good many quiet chuckles about this incident and we don't know how to handle all this attention," she said.

Unwanted body is returned

HOUSTON (AP) — Karen Seamans' last wish was that her body be used to teach others. So when the 19-year-old heart patient died last month, her family donated her body to science.

Last week, it was returned. "It was as if she had died a second time," said her mother, Barbara Seamans. "Except this time, we weren't prepared... We were sick."

Miss Seamans died June 7 of pneumonia at Ben Taub Hospital. At her request and with the encouragement of her doctors, her family consigned the body to Baylor College of Medicine.

But on June 29, when the family called the hospital for a copy of the death certificate, they were told to send someone for the body because no one wanted it.

Baylor officials declined the offer because of a surplus of cadavers. Baylor officials said they were not told of the gift of Miss Seamans' body until last Friday, more than three weeks after her death.

The Sam Rayburn High School senior's body had decomposed too much to donate elsewhere, even though it had been refrigerated at the hospital.

Friends, neighbors and relatives who had gathered for a memorial service June 9, assembled again Monday for Miss Seamans' funeral and burial in Pearland.

"You know, we would've buried her traditionally in the first place, but she wanted so badly to give her body," Mrs. Seamans said. "She couldn't do too much with all her medical problems, so she felt that giving of herself was her purpose in life."

"But now, it's as if she didn't fulfill her purpose," Mrs. Seamans said.

BOSTON (AP) — A man convicted of manslaughter in the slaying of his 2 1/2-year-old son was sentenced to life in prison against parole. Some jurors were angry at the 34-year-old man's guilty verdict. Couple convicted in son's death

BOSTON (AP) — A jury convicted a Christian Science couple of manslaughter in the death of their 2½-year-old son in a case that weighed religious faith against parental responsibilities to provide medical care.

Some jurors cried after finding Ginger and David Twitchell, both 34, guilty Wednesday of involuntary manslaughter in the 1986 death of their son, Robyn, who suffered a bowel obstruction.

"It has been hard on everyone and it was certainly hard on" the jury, David Twitchell said minutes after the verdict was read. "This has been a prosecution against our faith."

But prosecutor John Kiernan said the case was about crime, not religion.

"What the case proved is the right to believe is absolute — the right to practice is not," Kiernan said.

A sentencing date is to be set Friday.

Bart Simpson is no underachiever

ATLANTA (AP) — Wisecracking TV brat Bart Simpson may be an underachiever and proud of it, but he's no slouch when it comes to big bucks merchandising, dude.

He's even bigger than E.T. Products bearing the cartoon character's bulging eyes, spiked hairdo and rebellious wit are the hottest items at the Atlanta National Gift & Accessories Market, which opened this week, exhibitors said Wednesday.

Vendors stocking up for back-to-school and winter holiday items are drooling over Bart T-shirts, college insignia sweat shirts, refrigerator magnets, key rings, buttons and posters.

Fast-selling T-shirts include his notorious "Underachiever: And Proud of It" and "Don't Have a Cow, Man!"

Bart, Homer and the rest of the clan from TV's "The Simpsons" have arrived with a bang, exhibitors said. And unlike last year's big merchandising hit "Batman," the offbeat family looks to be a long-running hit for novelty dealers.

LONDON — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gestures as she speaks with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and President George Bush inside Lancaster House in London prior to the start of the two-day NATO summit.

Allies weigh NATO future with Moscow

LONDON (AP) — NATO leaders came together today to retool an alliance facing a rapidly diminishing military threat and to debate whether Western cash should be spent to a Soviet Union mired in economic turmoil.

President Bush seemed to ease his conditions for a financial bailout in statements made to reporters Wednesday just before he wound up a six-day vacation and headed here on an overnight flight.

Bush linked Western assistance with reduced military spending by the Kremlin. But he did not mention previous demands for Western-style reforms in the government-controlled Soviet economy.

"I hope that given the changes in the world they'll be able to curtail that defense spending some," Bush told reporters in his vacation town of Kennebunkport, Maine. "If they do, I think it will be much easier for the West to give them certain kinds of economic assistance. It will be a very good thing."

Neither Bush, nor the aides traveling with him, spoke with reporters on the flight to London. The president arrived precisely on schedule and flew by helicopter to the home of the U.S. ambassador in London for about 90 minutes of private time before beginning the first round of meetings.

As leaders of 16 Western countries converged on London for the two-day NATO meeting, machine gun-toting police patrolled Heathrow Airport's VIP lounge and sharpshooters watched from rooftops.

Along with Bush, the last officials to arrive were French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. A string of prime ministers, foreign and defense ministers came a day early.

The primary purpose of the meeting is to transform NATO from a now-outdated military machine into what essentially would be a political alliance.

Third Paris museum hit by art theft

PARIS (AP) — Five Paris art museums closed their doors today to individual visitors after paintings were stolen from three museums, including a Renoir cut out of its frame at the Louvre, over a span of several hours.

Jacques Sallois, director of national museums, said security would be tightened at the city's major museums, which remained open. He refused to say what measures would be taken.

The museums closed to individuals are relatively small and focus on the works or the collections of a particular individual — the Eugene Delacroix, Gustave Moreau, Jean-Jacques Henner, Hebert and Ennery museums.

Sallois' unprecedented announcement came shortly after police revealed that a third museum had suffered a theft during the short time span Wednesday.

Police said it was possible all three thefts were committed by the same person or group, moving across the city center from one museum to another.

Rightists warn of new attacks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An extreme right-wing group linked to recent bombings has promised more attacks unless President F.W. de Klerk holds whites-only elections to retain apartheid, a newspaper reported today.

The Citizen newspaper said a group calling itself the White Wolves claimed responsibility for a series of bombings in Johannesburg in recent days and warned it would step up its "freedom struggle."

A man identifying himself as a member of the White Wolves said by telephone that the "campaign of violence would be intensified" if elections are not held, the newspaper reported.

Right-wingers claim de Klerk, who has promised to end white-minority rule, could not win a whites-only election and would have to hand over power to a pro-apartheid right-wing government.

Vaclav Havel re-elected president

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The country's new Parliament today re-elected former dissident playwright Vaclav Havel president, completing the political transition from Communist to democratic rule.

He is to serve a two-year term.

The immensely popular Havel, running unopposed, was elected with the necessary three-fifths majority in a nationally televised secret ballot. A total of 234 deputies voted for him, and 50 against.

There were no abstentions. Sixteen deputies were absent.

Havel, who on Dec. 29 became the country's first non-Communist president in 42 years, was nominated by Civic Forum and its Slovak counterpart Public Against Violence.

The two groups led the peaceful revolution that toppled the hard-line Communist regime in November.

Homeless can't sleep in public places

HOMELESS MAN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nearly 100 homeless people early today spent what may be their last night sleeping in a plaza outside City Hall.

Starting tonight, police are under Mayor Art Agnos' orders to arrest homeless who sleep in public places.

"It ain't going to work," said Butch, 2½-year resident of Civic Center Plaza, where the homeless were spread out in sleeping bags, tents or just a few blankets. "They're just going to go somewhere else."

Butch, who would not give his last name, moved out of the plaza four months ago. But he said he's thinking about moving right back.

"I pay rent now — I pay $225 a month. For what? A roach-infested, rat-infested room," he said. Many homeless complain about the poor conditions of the shelters and other housing alternatives offered to them.

The Korean War

Finally, the nation is getting around to remembering the Korean War after trying to forget it for 40 years. At least we're not calling it a "police action," the label initially given to the U.S.-led United Nations challenge of North Korea's invasion of South Korea. That was the dreadful euphemism for the 37-monthlong conflict in which 2.4 million soldiers and 4.4 million civilians were killed or wounded, including 163,000 Americans.

The war ended in a truce agreement July 27, 1953, at the barren village of Panmunjom some distance above the 38th parallel across which North Korean armor and troops plunged on that day 40 years ago. Because the war did not end in victory for the United States, it has too often been forgotten as an inglorious adventure that was hardly worth the terrible toll inflicted on such killing grounds as Chosin Reservoir and Heartbreak Ridge. Such national amnesia is unforgivable.

Certainly the war provided an object lesson on the price of unpreparedness. After wresting Korea from Japanese occupiers after World War II, the Soviet Union installed a communist regime in the north while the United States removed its last troops from the southern half of the peninsula in 1949. Then early in 1950 Washington indicated that Korea now lay outside this country's Asia defense line. It was in effect an engraved invitation to North Korean leader Kim Il Sung to march, and so he did a few months later.

Thanks to a Soviet walkout from the U.N. Security Council at the time, the Truman administration rallied the world organization to oppose the blatant breach of the peace. The Cold War between the World War II allies that had heretofore been fought on ideological grounds suddenly exploded into a military conflict. Chinese troops in October crossed the Yalu River to shore up the battered North Koreans, and throughout the war the Soviet Union poured arms into the conflict in support of its puppet, Kim Il Sung.

For Americans thrown into the defense of South Korea, it was a grim, gritty war fought in foxholes and trenches, in freezing temperatures in winter and sweltering heat in summer. Infantrymen fought hand-to-hand with enemy troops, struggling to win, lose and win again pieces of high ground represented by Pork Chop Hill and Bunker Hill.

If there were no ticker-tape parades for returning U.S. troops, we're finally seeing a delayed-reaction recognition for the role they played in defending this nation's security. President Bush recently remarked, "It was a war in which we turned the tide against communism for the first time, in a victory regrettably sometimes ignored by history."

A fund-raising drive is under way to raise $10.5 million for a Korean War Memorial in Washington, although it should be noted that the drive was instigated by Korean War veterans.

Perhaps the memory of the Korean War has been dimmed by the 10-year ordeal of Vietnam. But in evaluating the consequences of momentous events such as wars, it is wise to take the long view. It is no exaggeration to recognize the Korean War as the catalyst that prompted the United States to bolster its containment policy against the Soviet Union and its satellites. This was achieved by beefing up our own military forces while increasing militarization of foreign aid. Eastern Europeans who are today enjoying a fresh taste of freedom surely owe a debt of thanks to those GIs who stopped communist aggression in Korea. That's a memorial, even if delayed, right there.

Conservatives look for new stands

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The old battle cries stir no souls. Being anti-communist is anti-climatic and being anti-deficit is out of fashion and not much fun.

So what's a good old conservative to stand for, now that the rock-solid convictions have lost their sizzle?

It's a question conservatives have been asking each other, and a question Policy Review, magazine of the conservative Heritage Foundation, asked 39 "conservative leaders."

More specifically, the 39 were asked to provide lists of the 10 most important priorities for the conservative movement in the 1990s, now that the old priorities lack clout.

The question produced not much consensus, but some surprises just the same.

Some participants chose to rally around the Strategic Defense Initiative, even though nuclear exchanges between the superpowers aren't much envisioned any longer.

They also found some common ground on the concept of giving people freedom to choose the school their kids can attend and on limiting how long politicians can stay in Congress: two emerging conservative touchstones.

SDI? Yes, press on with Star Wars, some of these thinkers said.

"The implosion of the Evil Empire does make the world less dangerous for America, but not yet risk-free," argued Pete duPont, former governor of Delaware and former candidate for the job George Bush holds. "Tomorrow, a dozen nations may have ICBMs."

"Deploy SDI," counseled Grover Norquist, president of Americans for Tax Reform. "Libya, Iraq, Iran and a future Soviet empire split in 20 parts all argue for a defense against nuclear or chemical weapon-tipped missiles."

"The reduction of troops in Western Europe will provide ample funding to build a total defense against any accidental, deliberate or terrorist assault with nuclear missiles," said Phyllis Schlafly, a conservative crusader from Alton, Ill., another SDI champion.

As for schools, privatize 'em, advised Jeffrey A. Eisenach, president of the Washington Policy Group.

"Would educational vouchers spell the end of the public schools?" he asked. "Only if public schools fail the market test."

Norquist also made a case for ending the system under which public schools have a monopoly on educating all kids in the neighborhood, even if a school elsewhere does a better job.

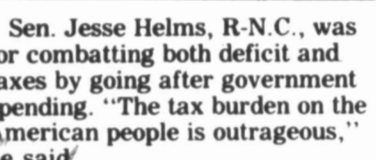

"We cannot enter the 21st century with an educational system based on the model of Soviet agriculture," he said.

"Limit congressional terms," pleaded Pat Robertson, another fallen competitor for the GOP presidential nomination in 1988. "America's Founding Fathers never envisioned the House of Representatives as a retirement home."

"Liberate Congress," chimed in Ken Tomlinson, former director of the Voice of America. "There is hope for congressmen who say they cannot maintain two residences on their income: limit congressional terms."

There were plenty of votes for continuing the Reagan revolution by cutting taxes, but not many of these conservatives spent much energy cursing the deficit, once a conservative whipping boy.

Capitol report

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was for combatting both deficit and taxes by going after government spending. "The tax burden on the American people is outrageous," he said.

And Edwin J. Feulner Jr., president of Heritage, rued this: "The federal government is bigger today than when Ronald Reagan took office in 1981."

"Cut federal taxes for the sake of children," urged Allan Carlson, president of the Rockford Institute. He proposed a $1,000 tax credit per child.

All good old conservative ideas. But did these conservatives have any fresh ideas for the 90s? George Weigel, president of the Ethics and Public Policy Center, argued for massive reconstruction now that the days of massive retaliation are gone.

"Am I the only one who thinks it a disgrace that the interstate highway system in beginning to look (and feel!) like something in the Third World?" he asked.

Norquist had a new idea: "Greatly increase immigration to America," he proposed.

"In nations with free-market economies, people are a resource, not a burden," he said. "Immigrants bring life, skills, youth and a love of freedom to Freedom's home: America."

"Free Hong Kong," proposed Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., mindful that Britain's island colony is to come under Chinese control in 1997.

And Lee Edwards, lecturer in politics at Catholic University of America, said conservatives should not let their generations-long fight with communism slip out of memory.

"Erect a 'Victims of Communism Memorial' on the Mall," he urged. "Whether communism is headed for the ash heap of history or not, conservatives must never let the world forget the human cost of communism — the tens of millions of innocents who died as a result of communist tyranny."

Quotes

"I think that in two years, if there are no changes, this leadership must go." — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, giving himself a deadline for reversing the country's economic and political decline during the third day of the Communist Party's 28th Congress.

"To say it's the hottest item we've had is an understatement. He's the hottest thing I've seen in 10 years." — Chris Nilan, sales manager for Nilan's Alley Inc., which sells novelty items to stores throughout the Southeast.

"This has been a prosecution against our faith." — Christian Scientist David Twitchell, after he and his wife were found guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the 1986 death of their 2½-year-old son, who suffered a bowel obstruction.

Western intelligence agencies overwhelmed by defecting spies

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

MUNICH — So many East German spies are coming in from the cold that Western intelligence agencies are overwhelmed as they try to sort out the information from these defectors and the files they bring.

Not that the West is complaining about the windfall — it's the espionage equivalent of stumbling onto King Solomon's mines. For the Soviet Union, whose KGB worked closely with East German spies, it's probably the greatest intelligence loss since World War II.

The Western mood is "exultant," according to one West German intelligence official. He and others are preparing for a highly secret meeting to be held here soon between top U.S. and West German intelligence officials. They'll sift through reams of information received so far from a deluge of hundreds of East German defectors.

vice, the BND, and the Central Intelligence Agency here and in Washington since the Berlin Wall fell last November. Both CIA and BND sources describe their current cooperation on the "take" as first rate. One German source noted there's no point in hoarding data, because there's so much.

He predicted the "marvelous" cooperation would get even better in the future. One reason he gave is what he called "the internationality of issues" that will unite the CIA and the BND in their efforts.

Another, more compelling reason, he said, is both the CIA and the BND expect cuts in manpower and budget as the Soviet threat wanes and the Warsaw Pact withers. "We'll all have less money," he said.

The East German secret services came under the State Security Ministry. Defectors with the most value to the CIA and the BND come from the ministry's foreign intelligence service, or HVA, by its German initials.

They are also the hardest to get. Except for a few top-notch HVA defectors who've revealed excellent information, intelligence sources concede, no key people at the top of the service have come over. To hear a top West German counter-espionage official, they are "fanatic and ideological about communism" and unlikely to defect. Worse, he added, they transferred more than a tenth of their most sensitive files to Moscow last year as reformist East German officials moved in.

Even without their defection, the HVA has changed its tack. "Since last February," the official said, "we have no sign or information that the GDR (East Germany) is spying on us. That's when the East Germans stopped spying on us."

The most important defector so far, according to these intelligence sources, is a top ministry official named Alexander Schalck-Goldkowsky. He was East Germany's chief foreign trader until he "jumped" the wall last November. He was jailed briefly in West Berlin but was released for extensive debriefings on East German intelligence activities. In his guise as a trader, he worked full-time with cover firms, one intelligence source told us: "So he has shown us all the firms the East Germans and KGB intelligence agents use for cover around the world."

The lion's share of defectors, so far, have come from the Stasi, the dreaded secret police that East Germany used to spy on its own people. Stasi employed 85,000 people full-time and paid a network of 109,000 citizen-informants. Some 2,100 agents' sole task was to steam open mail while another 1,052 tapped phones. Stasi had a fleet of 20,000 vehicles and an arsenal of 200,000 weapons.

Stasi's files on fellow East Germans have been measured in kilometers. Our sources estimated that the files, now in the safe hands of a 100-member citizen's committee, were kept on 5 million people. That's nearly one-third of East Germany's population of 17 million, or most of the adults.

East German officials want to destroy the files; West Germany, while mindful of privacy issues, would first like a peek at them. They could show the West whom to trust: the thicker the file, the more likely it's on an anti-communist. Negotiations on the files' fate are underway.

SENATORIAL CENSOR — Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, North Carolina's relentless conservative, might do well to curb his campaign against government funding of sexually explicit art. Sources tell us he could come to regret it as he faces a tough reelection battle this year.

While the public may find some artwork offensive, they are even warier of seeming attempts at censorship. Helms' crusade might be seen as an attempt to violate the public's right to view what they choose. That sort of thing, some nervous fellow Republicans feel, backfired on the 1988 presidential prospects of Sen. Al Gore. His wife, Tipper Gore, kept a high profile in her push to label explicit rock music lyrics.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Japan's super economy has been touted, venerated and envied for so long now that it's easy to overlook the same social and economic upheaval there that seems to follow rapid development everywhere. Japanese women are rebelling against the male-dominated culture. Women are going back to school and entering politics. Some Japanese factories are suffering under a labor shortage. The suicide rate is soaring among an overworked citizenry. Children, to the dismay of their elders, are turning to American culture for their music and idols. Some of it should be familiar to Americans, who went through all of it one time or another.

Woman can't seem to find Mr. Right

DEAR ABBY: I'm slim, blond, well-groomed, take two baths a day, and everyone says I'm pretty. I come from a good, middle-class Protestant family. My mother is a retired tax consultant and my father is an engineer. I play three musical instruments and speak three languages.

Last year, I won a bronze medal in the county triathlon (a long-distance race consisting of swimming, bicycling and running). I don't drink liquor or use recreational drugs, nor do I frequent bars.

I am 40 years old, have no children, no health problems, and I own a nice car. I have been formally engaged twice and broke the engagements. Both men were compulsive liars. One had been married seven (yes, seven!) times. His last wife told me he was still married to her when he started dating me! I am not currently dating, deliberately, to avoid another disaster.

Why can't I have a nice, normal relationship with an honest, decent, middle-class guy where I won't be lied to, stolen from or beaten up? I have no preconceived demands such as height, looks, bank account, religion. So, how can I connect with Mr. Nice and Normal? — THOROUGHLY CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: There are con artists everywhere, so one's only protection is to check out their backgrounds with someone who has known them for a very long time.

One of the best ways to meet nice people is through other nice people — put out the word to friends and relatives that you are interested in meeting someone nice. At least that way, you will have the benefit of a little "history" regarding the person.

Also, be very wary of people who seem to have no relatives or friends who have known them from way back.

DEAR ABBY: Here's one for you. My wife and I were married over a year ago. We sent wedding invitations to a number of family members and friends. One of my cousins who lives many miles away called to say that she couldn't attend, and asked whether we would like "a this" or "a that" from a prominent store in her town.

I chose between the two items and thanked her, but now I really can't recall what the items were. It was a very cordial conversation.

Well, here it is, a year later, and neither the "this" nor the "that" has arrived. My concern: Did my cousin forget or decide not to send anything (which is fine), or did the store not send it (which isn't). And, hence, since my cousin may have thought a gift was sent and she hasn't received a "thank-you," she may be miffed.

What is the right thing to do? —

PERPLEXED IN PRINCETON DEAR PERPLEXED: Since your cousin did not attend the wedding, and you received no gift from her, I think it's safe to assume that she sent none. In any case, I would not ask her if she had sent anything. She may get the impression that you are "fishing."

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

4-H fashion show

Glasscock County 4-H'ers recently competed in the 4-H fashion show June 20 in St. Lawrence. Natural fibers promoting county crops and "Made in the USA" set the theme for the event. Winner of the Cloverbud group was Lora Braden, St. Lawrence. Dana Wilde, Kayla Kohls, Michelle Fuchs, and M'Lynn Niehues were all blue ribbon winners in the same division. Competing in the Junior Division were: Jennifer Fuchs, Amy Weishuhn, Gail Hoelscher, Tiffany Wheat, Paula Braden, Michael Schraeder, Adam Fryszak, Bonnie Braden, Bonnie Wilde and J'Layne Niehues.

Receiving a trophy and advancing to district competition were: Jennifer Fuchs, Amy Weishuhn, Gail Hoelscher, Tiffany Wheat, Paula Braden and Michael Schraeder. Seniors who won at county and will compete Friday at the district contest are: Angie Strube, Audrey Strube, Kallie Kohls and Chris Schraeder. The St. Lawrence Cotton Growers Association donated a special award for constructed garments made of fabric that was at least 65 percent cotton. Winning the Junior Cotton Award was Adam Fryszak. Angie Strube won the Senior Cotton Award.

Ten members and one guest attended the June 27 meeting of the Sew and Chatter Club at the home of Libbie Dirks, with Ruby Haynes, hostess. Guest was Jewel Hyer.

Libbie displayed quilts she had made as a young girl, and quilts made by her mother.

Jewel Hyer demonstrated how to make knitted washcloths and nylon net scrubbers.

Libbie read several cowboy poems by Adam G. Davis, who is affiliated with the Western Museum in Lubbock.

The next meeting will be July 11 with Adele Tibbs.

'George Bush' the monkey found

MIDDLE TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — George Bush was back on his leash and wolfing down bananas Tuesday after taking an unscheduled two-day vacation.

This George Bush, however, is a 3-year-old white-faced Capuchin monkey used by Joe Bush, a 49-year-old Willingboro organ grinder who is not related to the president. The monkey broke his leash while his owner showed him off during a visit Saturday with friends.

The escape set off a two-day search by at least 100 residents in the southern New Jersey township for the 16-inch-high, 6-pound namesake of the president. "One guy told me he was trying to catch him and George was flying from treetop to treetop like he had been doing it all his life," Bush said Tuesday.

George's stomach finally overcame his urge for freedom when he emerged from the woods Monday morning to eat some tomatoes in a yard. About 30 or 40 residents surrounded the monkey and Bush caught him.

"It was a traumatic experience," Bush said, noting that George in September replaced another monkey that he had used for 16 years. "But he's acting like nothing happened. He was like a young teen-ager getting freedom." As for the monkey's ties to the man at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Bush said, "I just say it's a distant cousin."

Mayor calls it quits after death threat

SIMMESPORT, La. (AP) — Mayor Leo Ehrhardt admits a death threat led to his decision to call it quits after serving for most of the last 50 years.

The threat came from his wife. Ehrhardt, 82, said his wife, Eleanor, asked him in previous years not to run for another term. But when people accused him of being afraid he would lose the election, he got angry and ran again, Ehrhardt said.

This time it's different. "I'm not going to pay any attention to it," Ehrhardt said Friday after announcing he will not seek re-election in 1992. "I actually believe my wife would shoot me if I would tell her I was going to run again."

Ehrhardt first was elected in 1940, and has been mayor for all but three of the four-year terms since. But enough is enough, Ehrhardt says. "If you're the mayor, and if you're dedicated to your job, it takes all your time. There are so many things that my wife and I have wanted to do. But something would come along connected to the town, and we would have to give it up," he said.

George Washington to go on trial

CHICAGO (AP) — Two centuries after he took the helm of a new nation, George Washington is being charged with treason, sedition, high crimes and misdemeanors. Not to worry — the reputation of the Father of His Country is probably intact. The charges are merely a bit of light-hearted litigation prompted by a British nobleman's tongue-in-cheek challenge to U.S. jurists.

Still, several Chicago lawyers who plan to defend Washington when the case comes to trial in October aren't letting the British get the upper hand in this battle. "There is absolutely no question that George Washington, the father of our country, is not guilty of any crime," said Michael W. Coffield, one of the defense attorneys.

It all began at a luncheon this month in Washington, D.C., during the national meeting of the American Inns of the Court. The association comprises legal groups inspired by four inns that operate as law schools, eateries and fraternal organizations for British jurists.

Lord Goff of Chieveley, a British lawyer and nobleman, launched the battle at the luncheon when he called Washington a traitor. He challenged his American colleagues to prove otherwise.

"We dumped over a few tables and were the first to accept that challenge," said Jim Figliulo, secretary-treasurer of the Chicago Inn of the Court and a defense team member.

Fewer citizens are bothering to get out and vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — In tiny Bancroft, Maine, they gave an election and nobody came. In Texas, a hot primary campaign for governor drew 15 percent of the voters.

In California, about 40 percent went to the polls on primary day, but that still was close to the record low established in 1986 for the state.

Midway through the election year, experts are predicting 1990 will bring a continuation of a 30-year downward trend in voter participation.

Analysts, politicians and voters interviewed around the country said voter frustration and disillusionment and the increasing complexity and stress of life seem to be at least partly to blame.

"I don't know anybody who was in a 10-minute traffic jam going to work 10 years ago who is not in a 45-minute traffic jam going to work now, and it doesn't matter who gets elected," said Curtis Gans, director of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate. The private group tracks voter participation.

In 1960, the year John F. Kennedy was elected president, 62.8 percent of registered voters cast ballots.

By 1988, when George Bush was elected, turnout had dropped to 50.16 percent.

In 1986, the most recent non-presidential general election year, only 37 percent made it to the polls. Edward J. Rollins, director of the Republican Congressional vote in off-year elections. In presidential years, she said, turnout gets up to 14.

In the June 12 Maine primary, nobody voted in Bancroft. Voting

May 22 primary, about the same as in 1986 and much higher than turnout statewide in this year's primary.

"I think people vote here because painging is a big part of the problem.

"What they want to do with those ads is create doubts about the character of the opponent and weaken the impulse to vote among weak partisans and undecideds," Gans said. "When this is reciprocally done, it has got to weaken the impulse on both sides."

Nevertheless, despite a campaign widely criticized as negative, Virginia voters turned out in record numbers last year to make Douglas Wilder the nation's first elected black governor.

"In certain situations you can transcend the negative campaigns because the issues are more important," Gans said.

Something else has changed beside campaigns, said Heslop, and that is the widespread perception among voters that incumbents have become unbeatable.

"It is something new for them to know that there is no way of throwing the rascals out," he said.

Frank Sullivan, who runs a landscaping business in Cincinnati, said he votes anyway.

"I feel like it's our only revenge," Sullivan said. "I don't think they pay any attention to us, but we are only making it worse for ourselves if we don't let them know we are out here."

"I don't know anybody who was in a 10-minute traffic jam going to work 10 years ago who is not in a 45-minute traffic jam going to work now, and it doesn't matter who gets elected."

Campaign Committee, recently predicted turnout this year could go below 30 percent.

"I think part of it just has to do with folks just generally giving up on all of us," said Al La Pierre, executive director of the Democratic party in Alabama. In his state, the turnout of 750,000 voters in the June 5 primary was down by about 200,000 from 1986.

"They just don't see any need to go to it any more, which is sad," La Pierre said.

Toni Grygo, who runs a hair styling parlor in Pittsburgh, said, "The feedback that I get is that they are disillusioned. This is the main thing I hear from the women and some of the men that I do."

In Bancroft, a rural community in northern Maine with 61 residents and 35 registered voters, Deputy Town Clerk Mary Irish said two or three people usually come out to statewide appeared low, but final turnout figures had not been tabulated.

"It was a beautiful day and there should have been greater interest," said Keron Kerr, the state Democratic chairman.

Alan Heslop, professor of government at Claremont McKenna College in Claremont, Calif., said part of the problem is population growth. After the 1991 redistricting, California is expected to have legislative districts of 750,000 people, three times what they were in 1950.

"People feel powerless," said Heslop. "It is hard to convince oneself that one vote is going to make a difference in these enormous, giant districts."

Maybe the vote in Boise County, Idaho, helps make his point. The sparsely populated county had a turnout of 42.51 percent in Idaho's we are so small that we feel like it really matters," said Jan Longpre, city editor of the weekly Idaho World newspaper in Idaho City. "Even if it doesn't, we think it does."

Heslop thinks people are turned off by the slick packaging that is wrapped around today's candidates.

"I think a lot of people are tired of the sound-bite approach to politics, the graphics mailer, the snappy computerized letter," he said. "People are seeing that all of these things are in fact means of pulling the wool over the voters' eyes."

"That may to a degree be true," agrees Alabama Democrat La Pierre. "But how else can you reach the masses but through TV?" Gans believes negative cam-

Scientists to study Southwest monsoons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists from Mexico and the United States are launching an intense study of the monsoon-like weather that brings summer rainfall to the Southwest, the government announced Tuesday.

The month-long analysis begins July 8, seeking to learn more about the wet and dry seasons in portions of the United States and Mexico.

The Southwestern climate can contribute to severe weather as far away as the Great Lakes, said Robert Maddox, director of the National Severe Storms Laboratory in Norman, Okla.

Scientists said it may take about a year to analyze the information they collect, and they hope to use it to more accurately predict severe storms.

Although monsoons are usually associated with the climate of southeast Asia, they can also occur in climates with sea-to-land breezes in summer and land-to-sea winds in winter.

That type of circulation occurs over the southwestern United States and northeastern Mexico. Summer heat in the region causes the air to rise, drawing moist air from the Pacific Ocean and Gulf of California and contributing to thunderstorms.

Mexican and American scientists will launch balloons to check upper-air conditions at several sites in the region, and studies will be conducted from aircraft based in Phoenix, Ariz.

In addition, scientists will also seek to determine if added heat generated by the city of Phoenix affects weather nearby, particularly the summer storms in nearby mountains.

Taking part in the study are scientists from the NOAA's National Weather Service and National Environmental Satellite, Data and Information Service; Arizona State University, the University of Arizona, the Salt River Project, the Mexican Weather Service, and the Mexican Centro de Investigacion Cientifica y de Educacion Superior de Ensenada.

Policemen in Medellin: Profitable targets

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP) — A policeman in the Medellin cartel's hometown goes to work each day, with an assault rifle, a bulletproof vest and a prayer. The drug lords will pay $4,300 to anyone who kills him.

So far this year, more than 130 have been slain.

Policemen say they live on nerve and in fear of being the next victim. Some routinely arrive home with pistol drawn in case an assassin lurks in the shadows. Dozens of the victims were murdered while off duty.

Police in Medellin are part of a national force of 80,000 men, which is part of the military and under Defense Ministry jurisdiction.

The government, which declared war on drug traffickers last year, has sent 1,800 reinforcements in recent weeks to augment the normal force of 2,600. The killings continue at an average of one a day in this city of 3 million, Colombia's second-largest.

If the same percentage of police officers was killed in New York City, which has a force of 26,000, the total would surpass 1,000.

An Associated Press reporter talked with 30 Medellin policemen and accompanied seven on a patrol of a dangerous part of Medellin. An officer pointed out the spots where six comrades had been killed in the past two months.

"I get scared out here," one said. "I see a movement in the shadows or hear a motorcycle moving toward me and the hair stands up on the back of my neck. I wonder if this is it. I wonder if I'm the next victim."

None wanted his name used, figuring it would be a death warrant.

High-ranking Medellin police officials refused to be interviewed about the dangers their men face. The patrolmen said the drug cartel's tactics had caused 300 police resignations in three months and recruiting was difficult.

"I'm ready to quit if I don't get a transfer out of here soon," a 20-year-old policeman said. "We're just statistics."

He and the others said they were frightened, and exhausted by working up to 18 hours six days

MEDELLIN, Colombia — A policeman crosses a street holding the hands of his little girls in Medellin earlier this year. Policemen are profitable targets since the drug lords will pay $4,300 to anyone who kills one. So far this year, more than 100 policemen have been killed in Medellin.

a week, but most said they would not quit.

"You can die of hunger, too," a 12-year veteran commented.

Their families are destroyed along with the policemen. An officer's widow gets only half his $95 monthly salary as a pension, said a spokesman for the national police in Bogota.

Three widows said they could not support their children on that. "My children don't get milk, they don't get meat, they don't know what eggs taste like," Ruth Duque said. "When they get sick, we just pray. There isn't any money for medicine."

Mrs. Duque's situation is even worse because she gets no pension at all. Her husband was killed March 23, 1988, before the pension law was passed.

She said she makes the equivalent of about $102 a month working in a drugstore. She feeds her son and daughter, aged 4 and 3, one meal a day of rice and beans. Colombia's minimum wage equals about $100 a month. A quart of milk costs 75 cents and a one-pound loaf of bread $1.

Unemployment is over 30 percent in Medellin, according to sociologists at the local university. The government says the rate is 10 percent, but doesn't count thousands of people who mow lawns, work as sidewalk peddlers or have other part-time jobs.

"I've been looking for a job ever since my husband was killed," said Socorro Rua. Her husband was killed May 19 by a man who stuck a gun in his ribs on a crowded bus.

Her 15-year-old daughter, Liliana, turned her head away and tears coursed down her cheeks. Mrs. Rua also has a 6-year-old son, Carlos.

They live in an apartment complex built by the government for policemen. The shabby three-room apartment costs only $20 a month, but even that may be out of reach because officials have told her the pension paperwork will take a year.

Another widow, Carmen Montoya, said she had high hopes for their children when her husband was alive, but "now we just try to get by day to day. My little boy wanted a toy car for his birthday. I cried when he asked me, because I knew I couldn't afford it. They don't get anything at Christmas."

"My little girl used to chatter and sing all the time before her daddy was killed," she said. "Now she just stares and hardly says a word."

"I asked the police department to pay for a psychologist to see her, but they told me there is no money for that."

Mrs. Montoya has two children — Lina, 5, and Alexander, 3. She receives about $80 a month because her husband had 20 years on the force.

Giant panda cub born in Chapultepec Zoo

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Chia Chia, a giant panda on loan from the London Zoo, has fathered a tiny cub born to his Mexican mate Tohui, starting a second generation of Mexican pandas.

Veterinarians and panda keepers were maintaining a round-the-clock watch on the cub, Chapultepec Zoo director Maria Elena Hoyo said Tuesday.

The cub, whose sex is not yet known, weighed 4.2 ounces and was four inches long at birth on Sunday, she said.

Chia Chia, who is about 18 years old, came to Mexico for an indefinite stay in late 1988, about three years after his mate died, as part of an effort to try to increase the number of pandas born in captivity.

Mexico has had the most successful panda breeding program outside China and needed a mate for Tohui, one of four surviving offspring from a pair China gave the country in 1975. Three other cubs born to that pair died. The new cub is the first offspring for Tohui, who was the first panda born outside China to survive. She was born July 21, 1981.

Chia Chia and his previous mate produced no offspring, but he fathered the Madrid Zoo's Chu-Lin, born in 1982, by artificial insemination.

The pandas born in Mexico have been conceived naturally. Three doctors and three panda-keepers, working in pairs, have been rotating 12-hour shifts watching the new cub, Hoyo said.

She said the watches would continue for six months, until the cub is out of danger of being crushed or neglected.

The cub is nursing and its mother is eating a diet of blended rice, milk, vegetables and bamboo.

En route to Mexico, Chia Chia spent three months at the Cincinnati Zoo, which raised money to help pay for expanding Mexico's panda quarters to make room.

Young MC Rapper says he does not offend

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — When Marvin Young was dutifully doing his economics homework two years ago at the University of Southern California, he thought that after graduation he would settle down to the 9-to-5 desk job grind.

But somewhere along the line he became Young M.C.

Today the rapper not only has an economics degree, he also has a top-selling album and single, a pair of music awards and a promotion deal with Pepsi.

"I didn't intend to get into the music business the way that I did. It was just luck — it was kind of fate — that it happened," he said. "I intended to go to college and get my degree, then get a regular job and use that money to put out my records and then see what happened from there."

In the past year, Young M.C. has won an American Music Award for best new rap artist, and a Grammy Award for best rap performance with the song "Bust a Move."

His album, "Stone Cold Rhymin'" has gone double platinum — selling over 2 million copies. He also wrote the hit songs "Wild Thing" and "Funky Cold Medina" for fellow rapper Tone Loc.

And he recently made a deal with Pepsi to promote "cool cans," stylized versions of the soft drink's traditional can, over the summer.

Not bad for someone who is just

"You don't beat people over the head with the things you want to say. And you also don't say it in a way to challenge or offend anybody." — Rapper Young MC

22. However, Young M.C. hasn't settled down in the music business just yet. He wants to use his bachelor's degree in economics to go even further.

"Going out now and being Young M.C., and all the records and the awards and whatever the case may be, it's good now for the way I'm thinking, but in the future it also is a building block for me to be a competent executive in the business," he said.

Other rappers, most notably groups such as N.W.A., Public Enemy and 2 Live Crew, have come under fire for music that is fueled by racial, social and sexual issues.

Young M.C. said he keeps controversy out of his lyrics because of his fans, and he wants to establish an audience before he starts voicing his opinions. "The thing about it, to me, is that you go at your own pace," he said. "You don't beat people over the head with the things you want to say. And you also don't say it in a way to challenge or offend anybody."

"But when you swear, or when you degrade other races, or degrade women, or get violent and talk about killing people, that's what is found offensive."

Young M.C. was born in London but grew up in Queens, N.Y. By the time he reached high school, he was already writing the songs that would eventually make up about half of "Stone Cold Rhymin'."

Now the pressure is on to make more hit records.

"I was an economics major and now I'm rapping for a living" he said with a laugh. "It doesn't seem to follow."

CBS tries to raise ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There is something slightly strange about sitting in a darkened ballroom for three days watching television with about 1,000 CBS representatives.

For one thing, the hype is overwhelming. The sound level is loud. The speeches are a curious mixture of cheerleading and defensiveness.

Welcome to the annual convention for the eye network's affiliated stations, held last week at the Century Plaza, the favorite hotel of former President Ronald Reagan.

Like many conventions, the CBS gathering was long on glad-handing and short on substance. ABC had its convention in the same spot two weeks before. NBC held its convention in Washington earlier last month.

The CBS function was different, mostly because the network is in the undesirable position of last place and has been there for a while.

This point is not lost on CBS executives, or on the stations across the country that carry its programming.

Acknowledging this, while at the same time putting on a brave, optimistic face, makes for a schizophrenic three days.

For hours on end, CBS executives use a giant monitor to trot out their new shows, their new would-be stars and their new advertising strategies.

It's no fun being the bottom-rated network, but CBS's acknowledgment of that fact was funny, at times.

Take the entire session devoted to rolling out the fall advertising campaign. The official slogan and song is the Motown classic "Get Ready."

Grant Tinker, the driving force behind television classics such as "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," introduced his new production for CBS titled "WIOU," an irreverent but realistic look at a local television news station.

The mea culpas and apologetic tones were balanced by rah-rah pledges of CBS being "on the move," of "innovative" fall shows and of boldly going where the network has not consistently been lately — namely, out of last place.

CBS' ambitious plans include a complete overhaul of its late-night schedule to compete with Johnny Carson on NBC and Ted Koppel's

"Nightline" on ABC.

Its Tuesday-night strategy against ABC's powerhouse "Roseanne" is a movie package of box-office hits such as "Field of Dreams," "Fatal Attraction" and "Moonstruck."

Specials, a ratings-booster staple for CBS, will feature Cher, the Muppets, the Grammy awards, an "I Love Lucy Christmas" and the People's Choice awards.

'Die Harder' is harder to believe

Movie review

By DELORES BARCLAY
AP Arts Editor

At the very center of "Die Hard," a thriller sleeper from 1988, was the hero's sheer reliance on his wits and jerry-rigged defenses. There were well-developed characters, a strong human factor and a pronounced battle of wits, as directed by John McTiernan, who succeeded so well with "The Hunt for Red October."

In Renny Harlin's sequel, maverick cop John McClane (Bruce Willis) dissolves into a wisecracking James Bond, and high tech subs for imagination.

But die-hard "Die Hard" fans needn't be too alarmed. "Die Hard 2" is filled with mouth-drying thrills and heart-stopping chills, high-speed chases on snowmobiles, plane crashes, sprayed bullets, rib-crushing fights and lots of blood.

The action is played out at what filmmakers want us to think is Dulles International Airport outside of Washington, D.C. Only problem, it doesn't look like Dulles and the filmmakers stupidly allow a closeup of a pay phone to reveal "Pacific Bell." Very sloppy. And since the movie was filmed at the Alpena, Mich., airport and in Denver and Washington State, all the more reason to pay attention to details.

Once again, it's Christmas and McClane is waiting for his wife's plane to land so they can spend the holiday together with her folks. McClane, ever the eagle-eyed cop, notices some pretty suspicious guys milling about the airport carrying suspicious looking packages. He sees one go to a restricted area and follows.

A gun fight follows, one of the terrorists is killed and the airport is quickly propelled into a nightmare. But McClane is the only one aroused enough to suspect more than holiday hanky-panky.

The terrorists set up shop near the airport, tap into the control tower and assume command of runways and communication with air-borne planes that are battling their way through a fierce snow storm.

McClane bumps heads with an idiot airport security chief, finally teams with Army special forces honchos, led unconvincingly by John Amos, and races to a boiling climax.

Along the way, Steven de Souza and Doug Richardson provide some spirited and fun dialogue, especially for Willis. When the agent at a rent-a-car counter allows him to use their Fax machine so he can send the fingerprints of the dead terrorist to his pal, Al (Reginald Veljohnson) in LAPD, she asks him out for date. His snappy reply as he flashes his wedding ring: "Sorry, just the Fax, Miss."

There's also some nice caustic repartee on the plane between Holly McClane (Bonnie Bedelia) and the bozo TV reporter who almost got the McClane family killed in "Die Hard." Yes, Thornberg is back for "the big scoop," and William Atherton is his smarmiest.

There is too much reliance in "Die Hard 2" on gimmicks and gadgets and characters from central casting, such as the terrorist leader who works out naked — muscles primed — before going off to the mission. McClane does use his resourcefulness — and it seems never-ending. Just as the guy comes up for air, he goes under again and comes back even stronger.

But where McClane found himself in a crazed situation by accident in "Die Hard," he's superhero by choice in "Die Hard 2." This, somehow, makes it very different and lessens the sympathy or empathy we might have for him.

There are loads of laughs — even when unintended by the filmmakers, lots of raw, macho action and a few surprises in this Gordon Company-Silver Pictures Production. And a lot of people probably won't want to fly again once they learn about "the outer perimeter" and that great parking lot in the sky.

Produced by Lawrence Gordon, Joel Silver and Charles Gordon, "Die Hard 2" is rated R for violence, including an icicle impalement and language.

Fires

 Howard County Volunteer Fire Department Chief C. Roy Wright said the giant public fireworks display started eight small fires almost at once on South Mountain. As spectators watched, firefighters climbed up and down the side of the mountain extinguishing blazes. "It created havoc for a little while," Wright said. He said four firefighters were sent briefly to Scenic Mountain Medical Center suffering from heat exhaustion. "We're flatland firefighters," Wright said. "We're not accustomed to going up and down these hills. It was a combination of the heat and the physical activity." Wright said two men were pulled up the hillside on stretchers with the help of American Medical Transport and Big Spring Fire Department personnel. All recovered quickly and were released from the hospital, he said. The mountain fires are believed to have started when several of the shells used by the professional fireworks company misfired, he said. Most of the bursts of flame were designed to extinguish before hitting the ground. "All in all, it was better than we had expected," Wright said. "We were geared for the entire side of the mountain to catch fire." In addition, volunteers responded to 10 fireworks-related fires south of Big Spring, he said. Most of those were handled quickly by one truck, Wright said. The great amount of activity throughout the day was expected, he said. "It was the Fourth of July."

Lamesa among finalists for new state prison site

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
 Staff Writer

Howard County did not make a cut from 20 to eight proposals for one of four state prisons opening up, announced a spokesman this morning from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. Local representatives will now be asked by officials from Lamesa, who did make the cut, for their support in getting a prison located about a mile east of Lamesa near the smaller city of Los Ybnez, an official said. Others making the cut are Angelina County, Bell County, Hondo, Jasper, Lamesa, Pampa, Polk County and the Trans-Pecos area, reported Charles Brown of the Institutional Division of the TDCJ. On July 10 the Texas Board of Criminal Justice will award one

2,250-bed maximum security prison and three 1,000-bed minimum security prisons. They will make their decisions following 15-minute presentations from representatives of the eight areas making the cut. Howard County, as well as Lamesa, had submitted a proposal for either size prison. Howard County's proposed package of incentives totaled $5.5 million. Lamesa's package totaled $2.3 million for the larger prison and $1.9 million for the smaller unit. "They took in a lot of factors," Brown said of the selections. "I know they went through them very thoroughly." "I'm very disappointed," said Howard County Judge John Coffee when contacted this morning. "I hope everyone that's worked will not give up. Let's keep working. "We're going to start working on economic development," he said. "I'll try to put forth my efforts into the expansion of the federal prison and look around for other industries to bring in." Mayor Max Green had a similar comment. "I think we should go ahead and start working on new projects and continue our effort to improve our economy," he said. Those efforts include making the most of the Big Spring Economic Development Board which is being funded by a 1/2-cent tax increase, he said. Lamesa Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Luke Nichols, a member of the Lamesa Prison Task Force, expressed optimism that a prison in Dawson County would benefit the region, helping to stabilize the economy. "We feel like this will bridge the valleys of the oil and agriculture business," he said. Howard County Commissioner Bill Crocker, a leader in the prison effort here, had said earlier that the larger prison would employ 800 people with a monthly payroll of $1.4 million. It would cost $64 million to build. The smaller prison, he said, would employ 280 people with a monthly payroll of $461,000. It would cost $2 million to build. Nichols said they are garnering support from area officials to speak on their behalf and have already gotten confirmations from the Mayor of Lubbock, the chairman of industrial foundations in Snyder and Andrews, Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and Rep.

Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield. "We hadn't asked Big Spring because we didn't know whether they would be vying for a prison at this time," he said. "We will approach them today for their support." "I have no objection," Green said, "if there is some way we can help them." Coffee replied, "I really don't have any comment until I find out some more." Lamesa and Howard County had both made the semifinalist list for competition for six state prisons last year. Legislation passed last month renewed the competition for four more prisons but only the semifinalists from last year were allowed to compete. They had to resubmit their same proposals without any changes.

The bricks were covered with barnacles, indicating they had been adrift for some time, said Petty Officer John Barber. The origin of the cocaine is not known, said a news release by the Coast Guard.

 thousands of the smaller sets. "I figured it was going to bring some business, but I had no idea, no concept of how much it was going to bring," Parish said. "It brought more than I ever imagined and it's still coming." Hotels, restaurants, banks, stores, businesses, apartment complexes and ordinary residents have kept the four machines at Capitol Flag Co. humming from about 6 a.m. to 7 p.m., six days a week. Meanwhile, Joe Parish and another worker have repaired or installed hundreds of flagpoles around the city. "It's the biggest function that Houston's ever had since I can remember," Parish said. "Good ol' Bush is taking care of us." Already, flags from the United Kingdom, Japan, West Germany, Canada, Italy, France and the United States have been unfurled from buildings downtown to hotels in the Galleria area where the dignitaries will be staying. And the cutting and sewing continues. "We're having a hard time making all six of these flags — we don't make the U.S. or the United Kingdom," Mrs. Parish said, adding the complicated Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack are purchased from mass-producing factories on the East Coast. "But we sew all the rest of them and we've had to work extra and pull everybody just on these summit flags." Special flags for banks, apartment complexes and television stations have been backlogged as workers crank out as many as 16 summit flags an hour. "We've silk screened a lot of our own EEC flags because they're fairly expensive sewn," Parish said, adding a 3-foot-by-5-foot hand-sewn model costs about $59. "We just barely got started printing — not even two weeks ago. I mean, we're barely even learning how to do it, and we've had to go full blast into printing EEC flags." Mrs. Parish said the hand-sewn EEC flags take longer to produce than many of the other flags — like the tricolored bars of France, Italy and West Germany. "It's time consuming to sew them because there's 12 stars on them, but we've done a lot," she said of the EEC flags. Special orders for material and supplies have driven up some prices in recent days, but Parish said the family is working hard to get all orders — ranging in size from 4-by-6-inch to 5-by-8-foot — filled by the weekend. "We're getting a lot of business here, but we're spreading our money around everywhere getting our supplies," Parish said. "Like the 16 poles that came for the summit — at Rice University — came from Oak Creek, Wis. So they cut a nice chunk of our money up there. "That summit — the money's not only being spread just here in Houston, it's actually going out a lot further than those people imagined," Parish said.

Holiday

 Ms. Richards urged those attending to help the Democrats raise money for the campaigns because the Republicans "all have a lot of money." "And we are not going to let them buy this election. The governor's office... is not for sale," Ms. Richards said. Three people were wounded by gunfire and nine people were arrested Tuesday night when one early celebration turned ugly at Fort Worth.

The annual July Third celebration in the Como neighborhood turned violent after a parking lot shooting. Several in the crowd threw rocks and bottles at police and emergency workers. At least six people had died in traffic accidents around the state by late Wednesday. The Department of Public Safety predicted the 30-hour holiday period would claim at least 15 lives. Three of the accidents involved alcohol, the DPS said.

Garrison upsets distracted Graf

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Zina Garrison turned up the heat on a chilly, blustery Centre Court to overpower two-time defending Wimbledon champion Steffi Graf in three sets today and reach her first Grand Slam final.

Garrison, the fifth seed, attacked the net behind almost every serve to win 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 and prevent Graf from reaching a Grand Slam final for the first time since 1986.

"I didn't play well at all. I just didn't feel confident," Graf said. "She didn't make mistakes. She used to make many more errors, but she didn't do that today at all. She played a solid match."

Graf, who had been in 13 consecutive Grand Slam finals, now has failed to win three consecutive tournaments — the first time that has happened in more than four years.

"She played much better than I did, that's for sure," Graf said. "She played a very, very good match. Nothing worked for me."

Garrison, rated an 80-1 longshot for the title by London bookies before the tournament began, will face the winner of the Martina Navratilova-Gabriela Sabatini semifinal in Saturday's final.

Garrison scored three service breaks in the opening set and took advantage of several unforced errors by Graf. The West German rebounded in the second set, holding her serve throughout and breaking the 26-year-old American's serve twice.

But the athletic Garrison, who is from Houston, stepped up the pace of her attack in the final set and recorded the only service break in the third game. She closed out the two-hour battle with an ace.

Today's loss was only the third time since Graf became No. 1 in the world, in August 1987, that the West German failed to reach the final of a tournament. She has played in 42 events during that time.

Ivan Lendl, Boris Becker, Stefan Edberg and Goran Ivanisevic turned up the power Wednesday to reach the men's semifinals, serve-and-volleying their way past shell-shocked opponents.

The fearsome foursome proved that real men don't try dropshots, or bother with dainty lobs. They blast aces and service winners, or crush volleys at the net.

And they showed that real men win — especially on the Wimbledon ● WIMBLEDON page 2-B

WIMBLEDON, England — Zina Garrison, left, of the United States stunned defending Wimbledon Champion Steffi Graf during their semifinal match this morning. Garrison qualified for her first Grand Slam final. Ivan Lendl, right, who has never won a Wimbledon title, is making a strong run this year. Lendl won his quarterfinal match with Brad Pearce on Wednesday to advance to the semifinals.

TURIN, Italy — West German players pile up on their goalkeeper Bodo Illgner (on ground) after he stopped England's Chris Waddle's penalty kick after extra time in their World Cup semifinal match. West Germany won 5-4 and gained the final against Argentina.

Argentina meets old foe in finals

ROME (AP) — After 30 days and 50 games, the World Cup tournament is back where it was in 1986, with West Germany and Argentina playing for the trophy.

Until the semifinals, the teams had progressed in vastly different fashion. The Germans were awesome, overpowering nearly everyone with a precise attack, speed and strength. The Argentines were lucky, getting by on experience and guile.

Both took the same route through the semis, however. After 1-1 ties, they won shootouts, 4-3, putting in all four of their penalty kicks while their opponents missed the final two.

West Germany made its third straight final, fifth overall, by beating England on Wednesday night in Turin. The previous evening, in Naples, the defending champion Argentines edged host Italy. On Sunday, in Rome, as they did four years ago in Mexico City, Carlos Bilardo's Argentina plays Franz Beckenbauer's West Germany.

"It should be an open game, just like tonight," Beckenbauer said. "It's great to have the opportunity to beat Argentina."

"It will be like a chess game, with a lot of marking in the midfield. Whoever makes a mistake will lose," Bilardo said. "The bottom line is that if we want to be world champions, we have to beat everybody."

It will be the third final in the last four World Cups for Argentina, seeking to equal Brazil's record of winning three of four. The Germans are the first to make three straight finals.

But they aren't getting cocky about it. "The match was more difficult than expected. We can't remember ● WORLD CUP page 2-B

Brewers, Toronto player state independence

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

On the Fourth of July, the Milwaukee Brewers and Toronto utilityman Tom Lawless made statements of independence.

The Brewers, who were 1-12 against Oakland's Dave Stewart, got home runs from Greg Vaughn, Bill Spiers and Dave Parker and pounded the Athletics' no-hit pitcher 7-1.

"When you've got nine or 10 wins against a club like I have against the Brewers, you're not going to continue to beat them every time," said Stewart, who gave up six runs and eight hits in 2 1-3 innings. "Eventually they're going to make adjustments. I made some good pitches, but they hit them."

Meanwhile, the seldom-used Lawless singled home a key run with his first hit of the season and the Blue Jays survived a 12-hit attack and beat the California Angels 4-2.

"Every time up there you want to get a base hit. It just doesn't happen," Lawless said. "This time we had a guy at second and he was stealing and they couldn't catch it."

It marked the third time in the last five years that Lawless was the last position player on a major league roster since opening day to get a hit.

In other American League games Wednesday night it was Detroit 10, Chicago 7 in 12 innings; Boston 4, Minnesota 3; Seattle 3, Cleveland 2; Baltimore 9, Texas 4; Kansas City 13, New York 6. Stewart (10-7) pitched a no-hitter against Toronto in his previous outing but any hope of another one disappeared quicker than you can say Johnny Vander Meer. Jim Gantner hit his first pitch for a single and eventually scored on Parker's sacrifice fly.

Consecutive homers by Vaughn and Spiers in the second inning made it 4-0 and Parker hit a 425-foot homer in the third.

The outing was Stewart's shortest ever as a starter for the A's and his shortest since he went two innings for Texas against Chicago in September 1985.

"The man is a power pitcher, and when you're a power pitcher you're going to get hit out of the yard," Parker said. "That happens. It's usually a team in our situation. We've been struggling, and nor-

Gooden wasn't good, but it didn't matter

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dwight Gooden wasn't at his best — but the way the New York Mets are playing these days, it didn't matter.

"They have eight guys who can hit it out. That's one dangerous lineup," Houston pitcher Larry Andersen said after the Mets beat the Astros 7-4 Wednesday night for their 21st victory in 24 games.

"They're so hot right now that even if you make a good pitch they'll drop it in the seats. A bad pitch, forget about it, they'll crush it."

That's exactly what happened Wednesday night with Darryl Strawberry hitting a three-run homer and Howard Johnson a two-run shot.

The homers supported a so-so effort by Gooden (8-5), who pitched with a blister on his right index finger. He lasted eight innings and gave up all four Houston runs on eight hits. He eight strikeouts.

"The blister was better than I thought it was going to be," Gooden said. "I had a little pain, but nothing of any consequence. I backed off the curve ball in the middle innings and then went back to it in the seventh and eighth."

In other National League games, it was Chicago 5, Los Angeles 3; San Francisco 9, St. Louis 2; Montreal 5, Cincinnati 3; Atlanta 4, Philadelphia 1; San Diego 5, Pittsburgh 4.

Strawberry hit a three-run homer in the first inning for New York and Johnson also drove in three runs, two with his homer in the eighth to cap a three-run rally.

The Astros had rallied from a 4-0 deficit with three runs in the sixth, including Franklin Stubbs' two-run homer, and Rich Gedman's sacrifice fly in the seventh.

"That had nothing to do with the blister," Gooden said of Stubbs' homer. "I had him two and zero and threw a fastball away. He went and got it, so give him the credit."

In Canandaigua, N.Y., Safety Kept, $2.60, cruised to a 2 1/4-length victory over Northern Crush in the $183,700 Finger Lake Budweiser Breeders' Cup at Finger Lakes Race Track, while in Chicago, French colt Mister Sicy, $13, beat Silver Medalion by a neck in his American debut in the $116,500 Grade III Stars and Stripes Handicap at Arlington International Racecourse.

Capriati named to Federation team

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jennifer Capriati has been named to the U.S. Federation Cup team, which will seek to defend its title later this month. The 14-year-old sensation will join Zina Garrison, Mary Joe Fernandez and Gigi Fernandez for the competition in Atlanta from July 21 to July 28. The Americans beat Spain for the title last year. A record 47 nations will participate in the Federation Cup, which awards total prize money of $461,000.

Bauer still leads Tour de France

such a good and dramatic match as this one," Beckenbauer said. "Both teams had reached their peak for tonight. "It was advertising for soccer. All 120 minutes were played to full tempo, and England played a great game. "It was the first time England did so in the tournament. "We get told we play medieval, old-fashioned football," Manager Bobby Robson said. "We have shown, with all our players, that our game hasn't gone back at all. "I couldn't be more proud. We can go back home in honor. We always played sensibly, we've done our best and that's all we can ask. "Perhaps they could have asked for more success in the shootout. The English came up with a late goal for the third straight game, with Gary Lineker scoring his third in two games on a defensive mistake with 10 minutes remaining. That offset Andreas Brehme's shot that nicked the leg of defender Paul Parker and soared over goalie Peter Shilton in the 59th minute. Both teams hit the goalpost in the overtime, and then came the shootout. "I prefer you play until a team scores the first goal," Robson said. "Someone is going to crack and a goal will be scored... I feel at this level, with this importance, I say we play on." Sounds like a loser in the shootout, doesn't it? "There has been no better way, no better solution reached yet, for breaking draws," Beckenbauer said. "Certainly, it beats the flip of a coin." Sounds like a winner, of course. The shootout featured 23-year-old German goalie Bodo Illgner, in his first World Cup, against 40-year-old Shilton, the record holder for international appearances. It was Illgner who had the magic, however. Shilton just missed on several of West Germany's shots, but could not stop Brehme, Lothar Matthaus, Karlheinz Riedle and Olaf Thon. England's Lineker, Peter Beardsley and David Platt made their kicks before Stuart Pearce shot right at Illgner. He stopped it with his feet.

grass. "I saw a lot of balls go by," Kevin Curren said after losing to Ivanisevic. "I don't think I've beenaced 25 times before." On a day when the Wimbledon weather finally lived up to its miserable reputation with a four-hour rain delay, balls were flying faster Wednesday than the bone-chilling wind. Becker, the defending champion known as "Boom Boom" for his overpowering serve, eliminated seventh seed Brad Gilbert 6-4, 6-4, 6-1 on Wednesday. The second-seeded Becker lost his serve early in the first set and never faced another break point. Lendl, the top seed, lashed 12 aces while defeating Brad Pearce 6-4, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4. Lendl has won $16 million in a career based on baseline brilliance, but he has learned to serve and volley to seek a Wimbledon title. Pearce, ranked 120th in the world, never before playing beyond the first round of Wimbledon, gave a sluggish Lendl fits. It was Pearce's third quarterfinal appearance in "any tournament in a five-year pro career.

Johnson followed with his 13th homer off reliever Andersen. Cubs 5, Dodgers 3 Joe Girardi had three hits and drove in three runs and Marvell Wynne hit a two-run homer as Chicago beat Los Angeles and Fernando Valenzuela. Valenzuela, 6-7, was bidding to become the second pitcher in major league history to throw back-to-back no-hitters, but he allowed 10 hits and all five Chicago runs in seven innings. He walked one and struck out two while throwing 99 pitches. Valenzuela had pitched the first no-hitter of his career last Friday night in the Dodgers' 6-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. The only big-league pitcher to throw back-to-back no-hitters is Cincinnati's Johnny Vander Meer, who did it on June 11 and 15, 1938. The Cubs went ahead for good in the fourth on a two-run double by Girardi. Giants 9, Cardinals 2 San Francisco scored eight late

The victory completed a three-game sweep for the Giants, who have won 14 of their last 18 at Candlestick Park after losing their first eight home games this season. Expos 5, Reds 3 Dennis Martinez pitched a five-hitter over eight innings and Mike Aldrete and Andres Galarraga had two RBIs each in a five-run first to lead Montreal. Braves 4, Phillies 1 Dale Murphy homered and knocked in two runs as the Braves concluded their first winning road trip since September of 1989. The Braves, fifth in the National League West, wound up their current road swing at 4-2. Padres 5, Pirates 4 Eric Show earned his first victory in more than a year and hit a two-run single as San Diego ended a seven-game losing streak. Texas starter Charlie Hough (7-6) walked Cal Ripken with one out in the sixth and Horn followed with his fourth homer. Baltimore added two more runs on Steve Finley's sacrifice fly and Bill Ripken's RBI single. Royals 13, Yankees 6 Bo Jackson's seven-third-run homer keyed a towering third-inning as the woeeful Yankees lost despite a season-high 18 hits. Cleveland lands two on All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Last season, the San Diego Padres thought they had two All-Star catchers in their organization. They were right.
 San Diego traded Sandy Alomar to the Cleveland Indians and kept Benito Santiago. Both were selected starting catchers for the All-Star Game in voting announced Wednesday.
 Ray Fosse in 1971 and Manny Trillo in 1983 were the only other Indian players voted to the team since fan voting resumed in 1970.

Cleveland's low attendance traditionally has hurt its players' chances of winning fan balloting.
 The 61st All-Star Game is scheduled for Tuesday night at Wrigley Field.
 "It's really special because I got traded from the National League to the American League," said Alomar, hitting 298 with three homers and 31 RBIs. "As a rookie, I wasn't expecting to be that close."
 "Being in Cleveland, nobody expected me to win the thing. But if you play 100 percent, they're going to vote for you."

 Santiago was elected for the second straight year at catcher but will not be able to play because of a broken arm. Mike Scioscia of Los Angeles was the runner-up at catcher with 571,378 votes to Santiago's 1,785,412. Rookie catcher Todd Zeile of St. Louis was third with 570,971 votes.
 The Padres traded Alomar, infielder Carlos Baerga and outfielder Chris James to Cleveland last December for outfielder Joe Carter.

"I thought he would be an All-Star," San Diego Manager Jack McKeon said of Alomar. "Wouldn't it have been nice to have two of my catchers on the All-Star team, both as starting catchers?"
 Jose Canseco led a parade of three Oakland Athletics on the AL team and Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs topped the balloting in the National League.
 Canseco led all players in fan balloting with 2,313,091 votes, the most since catcher Gary Carter received 2,785,407 in 1982 while playing for Montreal. Sandberg was next with 2,262,245 votes.
 Canseco, who signed a five-year, $23.5 million contract last week, has been elected twice before as an AL starter. Sandberg will be making his fifth straight start for the NL and sixth overall.

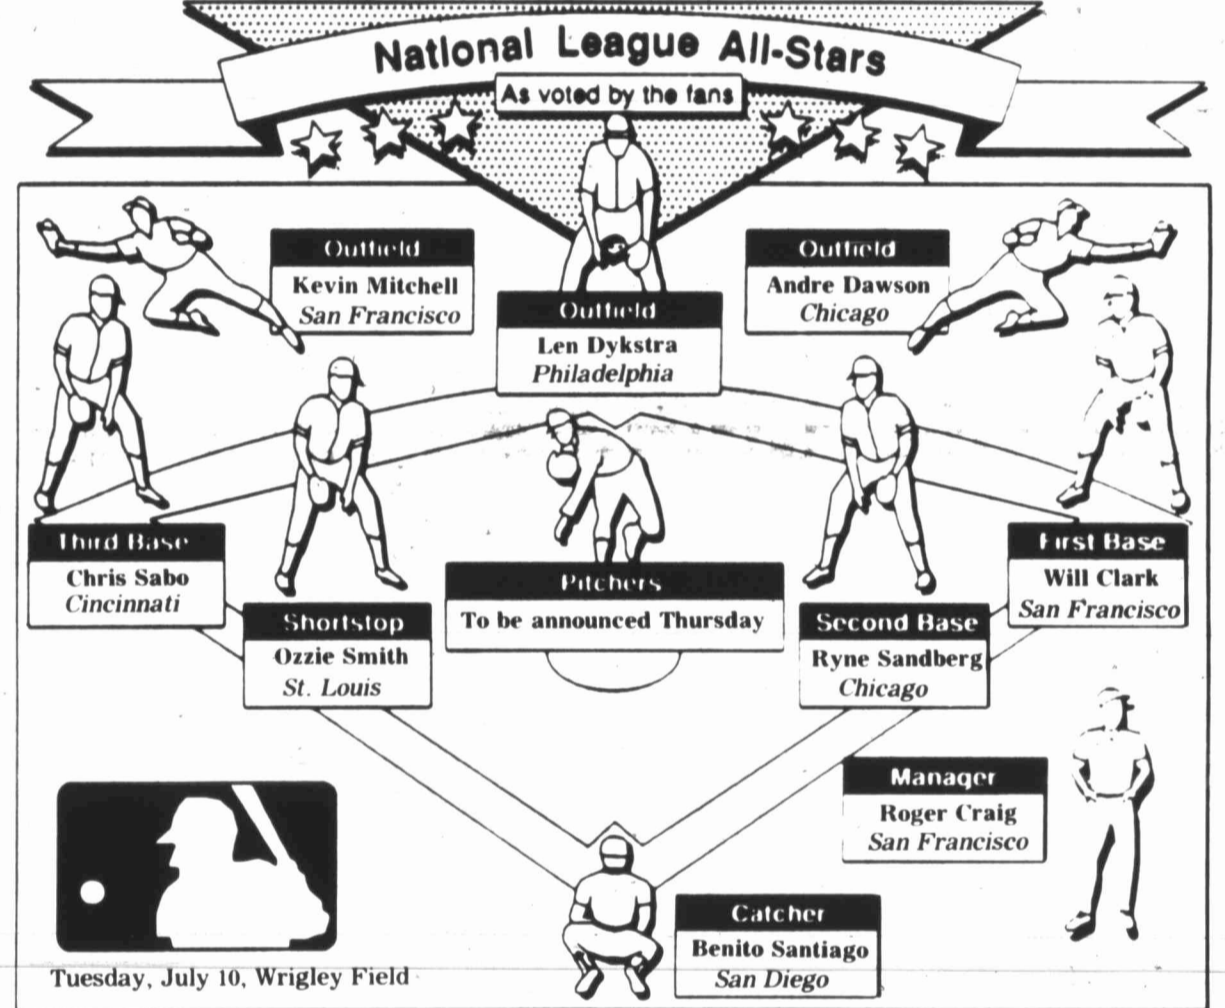

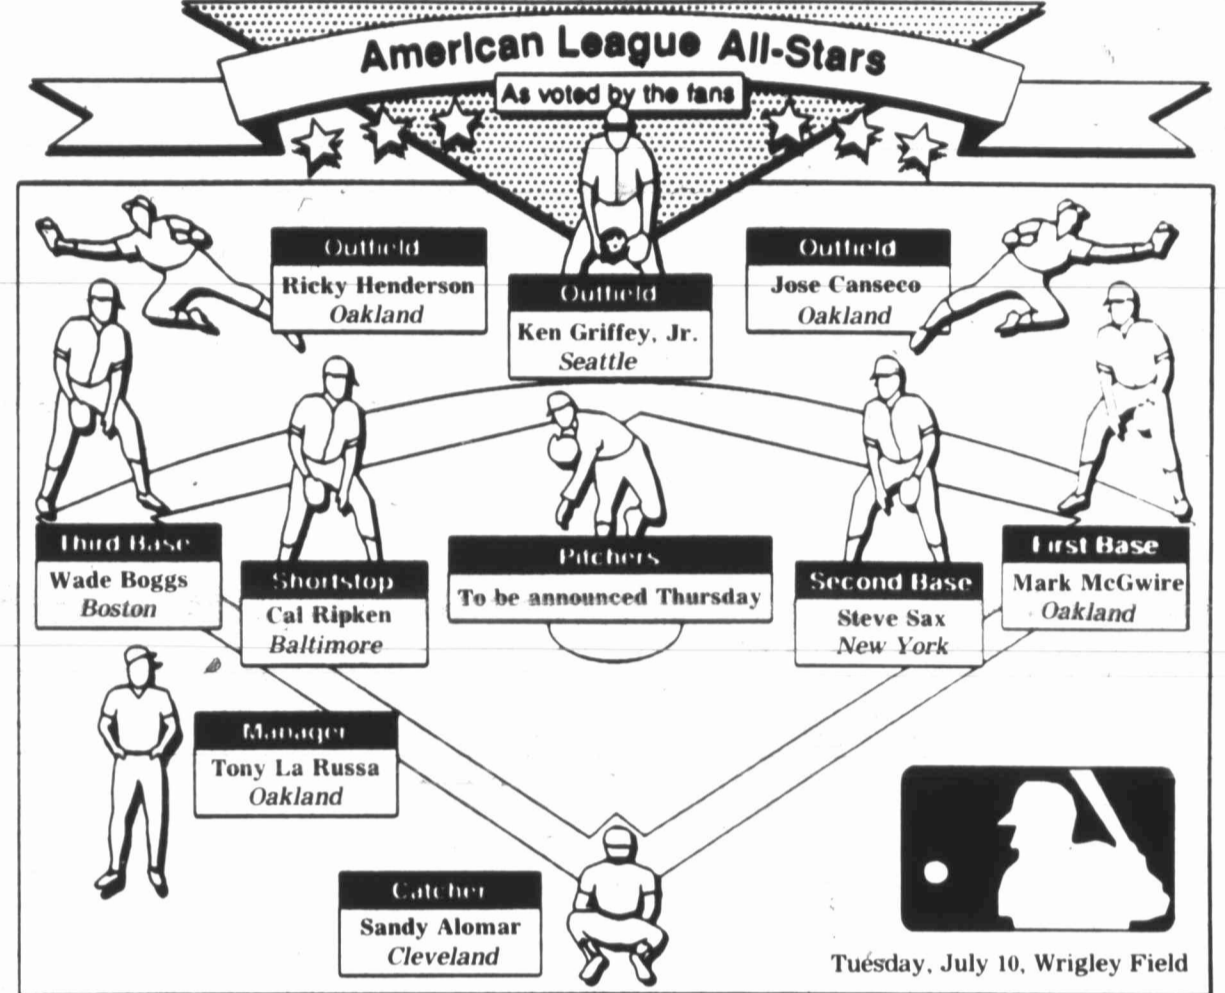

Joining Canseco in the starting AL outfield will be Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. and Oakland's Rickey Henderson, making his sixth All-Star start. Griffey is the first player in Mariners' history to be elected as an All-Star starter.
 Starting in the AL infield will be third baseman Wade Boggs of Boston, shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. of Baltimore, second baseman Steve Sax of New York and first baseman Mark McGwire of Oakland.
 For Boggs, batting .299, it's his sixth straight All-Star appearance. "You can always say you'd rather have the three days off to let your body rest," Boggs said. "It's not only a thrill, but an honor to represent the Red Sox and all third basemen."

Toronto third baseman Kelly Gruber was runner-up to Boggs. Gruber is hitting .303 with 20 homers and 65 RBIs.
 Cecil Fielder of Detroit, who leads the AL with 27 homers and 70 RBIs, was runner-up to McGwire at first base with 1,151,099 votes.
 Chicago White Sox shortstop Ozzie Guillen, hitting .324, was second to Ripken with 1,054,370 votes.

Starting with Sandberg in the NL infield will be first baseman Will Clark of San Francisco, third baseman Chris Sabo of Cincinnati and Ozzie Smith of St. Louis, making his eighth consecutive start at shortstop. Smith was the top vote-getter in 1987 and 1988.
 "I'm happy, but I'm not surprised," Sabo said. "I almost got elected last year and I stunk. It's a popularity contest. It doesn't mean you're the best by any means. It must mean a lot of people want to see you play and I guess I had a lot of fan support."
 Smith is having an off-year so far, hitting .224 with seven errors. But his 1,337,815 votes beat Cincinnati's Barry Larkin by 79,220. Larkin is hitting .317.

The NL outfield consists of Chicago's Andre Dawson, Philadelphia's Lenny Dykstra and San Francisco's Kevin Mitchell.
 Dawson will be making his sixth start and Mitchell (19 homers and 45 RBIs) will be starting for the second year in a row. Dykstra, the majors' leading hitter at .368, is the first Phillies' outfielder to be elected since Greg Luzinski in 1978. Dykstra gets a $25,000 bonus for making the All-Star team.
 Perhaps the biggest oversight by the fans was Barry Bonds' ninth-place finish in the NL outfield. Bonds is hitting .329 with 14 homers, 55 RBIs and 21 stolen bases.

The reserves and pitchers for both leagues were also announced today.

These are the starting line ups for both the American League All-Star team and the National League All-Star team. The all-star game will be played July 10 at Wrigley Field.

Foreman continues comeback attempt

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — George Foreman, hoping to earn a shot at the heavyweight title, will continue his comeback against Canadian champ Ken Lakusta July 31 in Edmonton.
 Foreman told a news conference Wednesday that he would prefer to be in the ring with Mike Tyson or heavyweight champion Buster Douglas, but said they are "literally afraid of George Foreman."
 After fighting Lakusta, Foreman will appear on a card with Tyson in Atlantic City Sept. 22 and then hopes to get a shot at Tyson.

Foreman, who held the heavyweight title from January 1973 to October 1974, has won 22 straight fights since returning to the ring in 1987.
 Douglas won the championship with a 10th-round knockout of Tyson in Tokyo last February.
 Foreman and Tyson both fought on the same card June 16 in Las Vegas with Foreman scoring a second round knockout of Brazilian Adilson Rodrigues.
 Canadians Scott Olsen and Mathew Hilton will be appearing on the undercard. Lakusta won the Canadian title from Tony Morrison in a fight in April.
 Foreman, who arrived from Houston two hours before the press conference, said he's looking forward to the fight.

"We know we're going to put on a good fight," Foreman said. "The only thing that stops me from showing up for a boxing match is if I lose a leg or something

"You can count on George Foreman being here and this young man over there. I don't think he's going anywhere," Foreman said referring to Lakusta.
 A fight scheduled for Edmonton last fall between Tyson and Razor Ruddock was cancelled after Tyson said he was sick.
 Foreman, 41, will earn $25,000 plus a percentage of the gate at the 5,800-seat Agri-Com, while Lakusta, 35, will earn a guaranteed $30,000, plus a percentage.
 The fight is being co-promoted by KO Boxing Promotions of Edmonton and Bob Arum's Las Vegas-based Top Rank. It will be telecast by USA Network.
 Foreman, who weighed 263 pounds against Rodrigues, was in fine form Wednesday.
 He flexed a bulging bicep for onlookers, mugged for photographers and graciously accepted a box of raspberry cookies, thrust into his hand by a young fan who stepped forward from a crowd of about 100.

"This time I'm going to have my senior-citizen-pick-up-a-bowl-of-soup, eat-a-pack-of-prunes-punch," Foreman said. "That's what I'm going to use on Ken Lakusta. He doesn't get to use it because he's too young. He has to get a little older to learn that punch."
 Lakusta, 30-15, let Foreman have the floor, but promised to command more attention on fight night.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Boy Scouts of America will honor singer-songwriter Michael Jackson with a new humanitarian award in his name.

The prestigious award was created and named for Michael Jackson in recognition of his humanitarian effort for all mankind, the Los Angeles Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America said Monday.

Jackson, 31, has raised thousands of dollars for such charities as the Make-A-Wish Foundation, The Prince's Trust, the United Negro College Fund and Child Help USA.

Michael Eisner, chairman of the Walt Disney Co., will preside over a Sept. 14 dinner at which the reclusive pop star will receive the Michael Jackson Good Scout Humanitarian Award.

Future candidates for the award will be selected by the Boy Scouts and officials at Jackson's company, MJJ Productions.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Less than thunderous reviews for the stock car racing movie "Days of Thunder" haven't diminished Tom Cruise's pride in his starring vehicle.

"I don't read reviews, even the good ones. They don't affect me or the film," he said Monday. "A lot of filmmakers whom I respect have called me to say how much they liked the movie. They were actually surprised."

"Days of Thunder" was No. 1 at the weekend box office but grossed $15.5 million, a slower start than "Dick Tracy," "Total Recall," "Another 48 HRS.," "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" and "Back to the Future Part III."

Local forum on aging scheduled

A local forum for the Texas White House Conference on Aging (TWHCoA) will be held for the public on July 12, at 10 a.m., at Spring City Senior Center, Industrial Park, Big Spring.

The forum, co-sponsored by Spring City Senior Center, Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging, and the Texas Department on Aging, will provide local citizens an opportunity to discuss key issues affecting older persons and their families.

"Similar forums are being held all over the state, and the feedback gathered in local communities will be examined during the Texas White House Conference on Aging next fall," said W.E. Smith, Director, Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging. "We're encouraging adults of all ages to attend. Aging is an issue that will ultimately affect all of us."

"We want to have some grassroots input on issues that will affect our elderly population in the next decade and in the next century," said Smith. "Voices we hear at our local forums can be instrumental in shaping future policy."

Local forums being held around the state will be completed by July 15, and the Texas White House Conference on Aging is scheduled for October 17-19, 1990, in Austin. A date for the national White House Conference in 1991 has yet to be called by President Bush.

Spectacular display

NEW YORK — An estimated 1.3 million people viewed the Macy's "land and sky spectacular" on the East River in New York in celebration of American Independence Day.

Willie's show, displays mark 4th

Texans celebrated the Fourth of July by swarming to lakes and parks, attending fireworks displays, baseball games and Willie Nelson's July 4th picnic.

Although it was a one-day holiday at midweek, Texans found time to celebrate.

Organizers of the Nelson bash worked hard to create a family atmosphere to erase the negative image of earlier concerts, which were marred by drunkenness, drug abuse, heat exhaustion, traffic jams and violence.

This year, there were children's rides, an inflatable castle, clowns and music.

"This is much more family oriented," said EMS technician Linda Varda.

No final attendance figures were available early today, but promoters expected 35,000 to attend the picnic and festival at Austin's Zilker Park.

Johnny Cash, Waylon Jennings and others joined Nelson on stage to entertain the fans. The concert ended late Wednesday with a fireworks display.

At Arlington, more than 41,000 fans attended the Baltimore Orioles-Texas Rangers baseball game which was followed by a huge fireworks display. Others attended a bash called Freedom Fest at the State Fair of Texas grounds in Dallas.

Some celebrated the holiday by attending traditional political rallies.

At Beaumont about 1,000 turned out for a political rally featuring an appearance by Democratic gubernatorial nominee Ann Richards and several other candidates for statewide office.

Richards took Republican nominee Clayton Williams to task for avoiding her and the issues.

"We think Clayton ought to come on out and fight like a man," Ms. Richards said.

Ms. Richards urged those attending to help the Democrats raise money for the campaigns because the Republicans "all have a lot of money."

"And we are not going to let them buy this election. The governor's office... is not for sale," Ms. Richards said.

Three people were wounded by gunfire and nine people were arrested Tuesday night when one early celebration turned ugly at Fort Worth.

The annual July Third celebration in the Como neighborhood turned violent after a parking lot shooting. Several in the crowd threw rocks and bottles at police and emergency workers.

At least six people had died in traffic accidents around the state by late Wednesday. The Department of Public Safety predicted the 30-hour holiday period would claim at least 15 lives. Three of the accidents involved alcohol, the DPS said.

Firefighters also were keeping an anxious watch for brush fires and accidents involving fireworks.

"I know how much people enjoy fireworks," said Austin Fire Lt. Scott Reynolds. But "with everything being so dry and brittle, if people would refrain (from using fireworks) and go watch public displays, it would probably save a lot of needless injury and fire damage."

Retired with honors

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Boy Scout Troop 628 of Gonzalez, Fla., participated Wednesday in a ceremony where American flags no longer fit for display were cut up and burned in a solemn service. The ceremony was held at Barrancas National Cemetery at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola. Scout Andy Mendrix, 12, salutes on of the 750 American flags burned, as Scout Master Glenn Jewell supervises.

Peeved postal workers defend rate increase

By JEFF BARKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Postal Service footed the cost when hundreds of postmasters mailed letters to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce defending a proposed increase in postal rates.

For a week, the chamber's Washington office has been getting 100 letters a day from postmasters and other postal employees in the Midwest and Western states, the organization says.

About half the letters are in envelopes marked "Official Business," which carry a penalty for private use. A few dozen contain form letters.

Chamber officials object. "It's wrong for people on the government payroll to be using government time and resources to lobby," said Tracey Schreft of the chamber's Small Business Center.

But the Postal Service says the letters were official business and were needed to combat a chamber-published brochure against the proposed new 30-cent stamp. Titled "Cancel This Stamp," the brochure invites the chamber's member businesses to battle the rate increase and "join the fight against waste in the Postal Service."

The brochure contains "inaccuracies and distortions intended to discredit the great job we're doing," said Jim Mruk, a Chicago-based Postal Service spokesman.

"We feel the use of the penalty envelope is warranted," Mruk said. "This is part of the normal course of doing business. We have no apologies for it at all."

The independent Postal Rate Commission has until early next year to review the agency's rate increase plan. A first-class stamp would go from 25 cents to 30 cents, post cards from 15 cents to 20 cents, and the cost of sending a seven-pound package would rise from $4 to $5.06.

The Postal Service says it does not know how much the

Flagmakers sewn up with summit business

HOUSTON — Lucille Parish has spent 36 years sewing flags of all states and nations. But she says her family-owned Capitol Flag Co. Inc. has never been busier as it continues preparations for the International Economic Summit.

"We've got our normal, heavy traffic from the Fourth of July and then with the summit piled on top of it. It's turned into so much work," said Joe Parish, 32, president of the company and Lucille Parish's son. "We haven't been this busy since the (Texas) Sesquicentennial."

"I think this year's going to beat that," said Mrs. Parish, 65. "I've been in business 36 years on July 4th and this year's going to top all the rest of the years."

Ever since the White House announced its choice of the Bayou City as host of the annual meeting of the seven wealthiest nations, the Parishes have been cutting, sewing, stocking and repairing flags for the July 9-11 event.

"We started months ago," Parish said. "Or at least we tried. We thought, 'Oh, we're set.' But once it started hitting, we said, 'We should have made 100 of each of these.'"

Thousands of small, printed flags for waving and for desk displays have been stocked and restocked — 18,000 tiny U.S. flags were sold in less than 30 days.

In recent weeks, the Parishes have sold at least 50 sets of eight 3-foot-by-5-foot, mostly hand-sewn flags — one from each of the seven summit countries and the 12-star European Economic Conference flag — as well as thousands of the smaller sets.

How's that?

Q. Which is the most powerful force in the universe - gravity or magnetism?
 A. Gravity is feeble compared to magnetism, according to Marilyn Vos Savant, Parade Magazine. For example, you can overcome the force of the entire earth's gravity with a little magnet that you stick on your refrigerator.

Bricks of cocaine found in Gulf

GALVESTON (AP) — The Coast Guard is investigating about 60 pounds of cocaine in plastic-covered bricks found floating in the Gulf of Mexico about 90 miles southeast of Galveston.

The cocaine was discovered about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday by an offshore supply boat near the area known as the Flower Gardens, the Coast Guard said in a news release Wednesday. The boat picked up the one-kilogram bricks, which had an outer covering of burlap, and notified authorities.

The bricks were covered with barnacles, indicating they had been adrift for some time, said Petty Officer John Barber.

The origin of the cocaine is not known, said a news release by the Coast Guard.

Patrol cars hit by drunken drivers

DALLAS (AP) — Police did not have to go out of their way this week to find two drunken driving suspects here: They ran into officers' squadcars.

The incidents occurred minutes apart early Tuesday, police said.

Lt. William Carter said he was in a gas station parking lot when a black Corvette jumped the curb and rammed into his unmarked car about 1:30 a.m.

Matta Gonzalez of Mission, the Corvette's driver, has been charged with drunken driving and attempting to evade arrest, police said.

Another officer who was on his way to help with the accident involving Carter's car was struck by a driver pulling out of a Greenville Avenue business.

Officer Stephen Walthall told investigators that Gilbert Martinez pulled his car out of a pool hall parking space without looking. He was charged with drunken driving and failure to yield right of way.

Both officers were slightly injured. They were treated at a hospital and released.

GOP wants to limit lawmakers' terms

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas GOP and consumer activist Ralph Nader both are pushing proposals to limit lawmakers' terms of office.

The state GOP has included in its 1990 platform two planks that urge limiting state and federal lawmakers to 12 years in office.

Nader wants a constitutional amendment that would restrict members of the U.S. House to six terms and U.S. Senate members to two terms.

He also is attempting a state-by-state campaign to persuade legislatures to pass laws limiting terms of office.

Such restrictions in Texas could transfer control of the state House from the Democrats to the Republicans.

Congress, president at odds on family legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once again the White House and Congress are at odds over how to protect a revered American institution.

First it was the American flag. Now, it's the American family.

Congress passed legislation requiring employers to grant parents up to three months of unpaid leave for medical emergencies or the birth or adoption of a child. Bush vetoed the bill, saying the measure forces businesses to provide a benefit that they should be free to negotiate with employees.

"If our nation's employers are to succeed in an increasingly complex and competitive global marketplace, they must have the flexibility to meet both this challenge and the needs of their employees," he said.

The dispute over family leave could lead to partisan bickering over an institution every bit as revered as the flag. Bush sought a constitutional amendment against burning the flag but Congress last month rejected it as an infringement on freedom of speech.

In the case of the family leave bill, veto override prospects are uncertain at best. The House passed the family care legislation in May, just before measure. Among the disagreements are whether Congress, as Dodd pro-thirds of all preschool children will have mothers working full time outside the home.

vatives object to the implication that the government favors working mothers over those who stay at home.

That both bills are in Congress simultaneously also has been a disadvantage, according to some.

Child care "is stalled for good reason. It created two new entitlements at tremendous cost and it helps only a small fraction of the population," said Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., a leading House backer of family leave. "The family and medical leave bill is far more consistent with the family values that Republicans have talked about over the campaign period."

Family leave, Dodd said, "is a matter of human decency," much in the way the federally mandated 40-hour work week was deemed a matter of human decency decades ago. Child care, he said, addresses an obvious human need.

Added Lenhoff: "Child care is what you need when everything's normal — you're going to work and you need help caring for your kids. Family and medical leave is what you need when you can't go back to work."

"The President is going to have this bill on his desk every year. He's going to have to veto a family and medical leave bill one way or another."

Mother's Day, by a 237-187 vote. That's 46 votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed to override a presidential veto.

The Senate passed the measure on a voice vote on June 14. But according to Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., a substantive test vote on the issue came out 55-45 in favor, or a dozen votes shy of the needed two-thirds majority.

"The President is going to have this bill on his desk every year. He's going to have to veto a family and medical leave bill one way or another," Dodd says, almost angrily. "I'm going to serve this legislation up to him. He's going to have to explain and explain and explain as the situation gets worse out there."

Meanwhile, a congressional turf fight, along with a possible veto threatens a landmark child care poses, would review the child care aid program every year or whether, as the House favors, the aid should become an entitlement that would automatically roll over every year.

Bush has said he will veto any child care measure that spends more than $15 billion over five years. Both House and Senate versions exceed Bush's limit.

In some ways the strengths of the two bills are also their weaknesses, according to some observers and participants. They concern the needs of two-income families and single mothers forced by economics into the workforce.

Only one American family in 10 consists of a working father and a stay-at-home mother. More than half of all mothers of infants work outside the home. And by 1995 twosome business, but I had no idea, no concept of how much it was going to bring," Parish said. "It brought more than I ever imagined and it's still coming."

Hotels, restaurants, banks, stores, businesses, apartment complexes and ordinary residents have kept the four machines at Capitol Flag Co. humming from about 6 a.m. to 7 p.m., six days a week. Meanwhile, Joe Parish and another worker have repaired or installed hundreds of flagpoles around the city.

"It's the biggest function that Houston's ever had since I can remember," Parish said. "Good ol' Bush is taking care of us."

Already, flags from the United Kingdom, Japan, West Germany, Canada, Italy, France and the United States have been unfurled from buildings downtown to hotels in the Galleria area where the dignitaries will be staying.

And the cutting and sewing continues.

"We're having a hard time making all six of these flags — we don't make the U.S. or the United Kingdom," Mrs. Parish said, adding the complicated Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack are purchased from mass-producing factories on the East Coast. "But we sew all the rest of them and we've had to work extra and pull everybody just on these summit flags."

Special orders for banks, apartment complexes and television stations have been backlogged as workers crank out as many as 16 summit flags an hour.

"We've silk screened a lot of our own EEC flags because they're fairly expensive sewn," Parish said, adding a 3-foot-by-5-foot hand-sewn model costs about $50. "We just barely got started printing — not even two weeks ago. I mean, we're barely even learning how to do it, and we've had to go full blast into printing EEC flags."

Mrs. Parish said the hand-sewn EEC flags take longer to produce than many of the other flags — like the tricolored bars of France, Italy and West Germany. "It's time consuming to sew them because there's 12 stars on them, but we've done a lot," she said of the EEC flags.

Special orders for material and supplies have driven up some prices in recent days, but Parish said the family is working hard to get all orders — ranging in size from 4-by-6-inch to 5-by-8-foot — filled by the weekend.

"We're getting a lot of business here, but we're spreading our money around everywhere getting our supplies," Parish said. "Like the 16 poles that came for the summit — at Rice University — came from Oak Creek, Wis. So they cut a nice chunk of our money up there."

"That summit — the money's not only being spread just here in Houston, it's actually going out a lot further than those people imagined," Parish said.

Lamesa among prison finalists

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Howard County did not make a cut from 20 to eight proposals for one of four state prisons opening up, announced a spokesman this morning from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Local representatives will now be asked by officials from Lamesa, who did make the cut, for their support in getting a prison located about a mile east of Lamesa near the smaller city of Los Ybnez, an official said.

Others making the cut are Angelina County, Bell County, Hondo, Jasper, Lamesa, Pampa, Polk County and the Trans-Pecos area, reported Charles Brown of the Institutional Division of the TDCJ.

On July 10 the Texas Board of Criminal Justice will award one 2,250-bed maximum security prison and three 1,000-bed minimum security prisons. They will make their decisions following 15-minute presentations from representatives of the eight areas making the cut.

Howard County, as well as Lamesa, had submitted a proposal for either size prison. Howard County's proposed package of incentives totaled $5.5 million. Lamesa's package totaled $2.3 million for the larger prison and $1.9 million for the smaller unit.

"They took in a lot of factors," Brown said of the selections. "I know they went through them very thoroughly."

"I'm very disappointed," said Howard County Judge John Coffee when contacted this morning. "I hope everyone that's worked will not give up. Let's keep working."

"We're going to start working on economic development," he said. "I'll try to put forth my efforts into the expansion of the federal prison and look around for other industries to bring in."

Mayor Max Green had a similar comment. "I think we should go ahead and start working on new projects and continue our effort to improve our economy," he said. Those efforts include making the most of the Big Spring Economic Development Board which is being funded by a 1/2-cent tax increase, he said.

Lamesa Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Luke Nichols, a member of the Lamesa Prison Task Force, expressed optimism that a prison in Dawson County would benefit the region, helping to stabilize the economy.

"We feel like this will bridge the valleys of the oil and agriculture business," he said.

Howard County Commissioner Bill Crooker, a leader in the prison effort here, had said earlier that the larger prison would employ 800 people with a monthly payroll of $1.4 million. It would cost $64 million to build. The smaller prison, he said, would employ 280 people with a monthly payroll of $461,000. It would cost $2 million to build.

Nichols said they are garnering support from area officials to speak on their behalf.

Postmasters

postmasters' letters cost because it is uncertain how many were sent.

Mruk said there was no "organized effort to lobby the chamber."

Rather, he said, the Central Region's postmaster general wrote the chamber about the brochure and sent copies to medium-level managers "who shared them with postmasters."

All the letters are from the Postal Service's central region, which includes Colorado, Wyoming, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Missouri.

"As an employee who works closely with the community and the Chamber of Commerce, I must complain strongly and bitterly against the article being disseminated from your office entitled 'Cancel This Stamp,'" began a letter from postmaster Cecelia White of Ada, Kan.

The letter criticizes the brochure for alleged inaccuracies, and for soliciting Postal Service "horror stories" from businesses.

The same letter arrived from postmasters in Partridge, Redfield and other Kansas communities. All were in officials' envelopes instead of bearing stamps.

In an interview, White she did not think about paying for the letter herself.

"We're willing to put stamps on some things. I didn't think they told us to put a stamp on this," she said.

A letter from postmaster Robert J. Herman said: "I am going to tell the business community of Raymond, Ill., the truth about the requested postage rate increase by the United States Postal Service — the best postal system in the world!"

Last month, the Postal Service withdrew a $21,000 advertisement from a chamber magazine following stories critical of the rate hike plan.
