Annual Football Banquet Held Wednesday Night

By EDDIE BULLOCK
The last football game of the season had been played and the boys had put away their cleats and pads, most of them for the last time in High School, but the spirit lingered on for there still remained the annual football banquet. The crowds in front of the City Pharmacy, with all the 'Sunday morning quarter backs' in attendance, should grow smaller now for the flag has been officially lowered. The annual banquet, sponsored by the Callahan County Luncheon Club was held in the basement of the Methodist Church Wednesday night, December 3, with an overflow crowd in attendance.

Festivities were launched by the singing of "God Bless America" by the entire assembly, followed by the invocation by Judge L. L. Blackburn. After an address by Mr. Ace Hickman, Luncheon Club President presiding a delicious and tasty turkey dinner was served. The tables were delightfully decorated with autumn leaves with a football made from a pecan on each place card, adding to the decorations.

Mr. Hickman introduced School Superintendent, Olaf G. South as toastmaster. After recognition of guests by the toastmaster a reading "My Home Town" rendered by Pickard Wagner was received with great enthusiasm by the assembly. Mr. T. A. White then proceeded to cast a little gloom upon the gathering by making public the annual financial report of football activities for the current season.

In an address by Coach Bill White, all members of the 1941 Bear Football Team were recognized with special tribute being paid to Buddy Brumbaugh, J. C. Earp and Frankie Crow, with the announcement that they had been selected by the Coaches of District 6A as mythical All-District Performers—the highest honor that can be bestowed upon class "A" players. Recognition was also afforded Junior Cutbirth, James Earp and Elwood Goin for placing upon the second team. Raymond Cook co-captain of the 1941 team then presented the coach with a present from the boys of the squad.

After two songs delightfully rendered by Miss Bettie Lou Lewis, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. W. O. Wylie, Jr., as inspiring address was given by Rev. A. H. Carleton, Pastor of the First Methodist Church. And then came the spot everyone had so anxiously awaited the presentation by your 'stage frightened' scribe of two beautiful pieces of luggage to Coach Bill White which was donated by the Baird Fans, together with enough of Uncle Sam's "cabbage" to take in the Cotton Bowl game at Dallas New Year's Day.

Following the time-honored custom of the host club impromptu speeches then began coming thick and fast (and short) with Messrs. J. C. Shockey, Harold Ray, Howard Farmer, Judge Blackburn, Bob Norrell, Jim Lawrence B. L. Russell, Jr., Judge Freeland, Claude Flores, Judge Felix Mitchell, R. L. Elliott, Jr. and Dr. Ray Cockrell, all contributing to the confusion.

The assembly was dismissed with the rendition of the Baird High School Loyalty song ably led by Iva Dell Mitchell.

New Bank Building Nearing Completion

The First National Bank building which is being enlarged and rebuilt is nearing completion. New fixtures were received a few days ago and are being put in place and it is expected that the First National Bank of Baird will move into their new home sometime within the next week.

The bank has been housed in the old postoffice building while the old bank building was being rebuilt.

The bank will hold "open-house" in the near future.

Bayou School News

The Red Cross drive has been completed in our community with the following members:

Jodie E. Baker
H. W. Walker
B. C. Chrisman
Walter Jones
Mrs. Blain Odom
Mrs. W. B. Sparkman.

The School has 100 per cent membership. Mrs. Blain Odom was absent from school Thursday due to the death of an uncle in Kerrville, whose funeral she attended.

Tuesday of last week a basketball game was played in the Bayou Gym between our girls and Mozelle, a school in the southern part of Coleman county. The score was 30-18 in our favor.

The Bayou Girls Team goes to Cross Plains this week end to enter a tournament there.

The pupils of all the rooms presented a nice Thanksgiving program Wednesday afternoon to a large number of visitors.

School was dismissed Thursday and Friday for the holidays.

Mr. Baker went deer hunting in Mason county and bagged a nice buck. Mrs. Barker and Mrs. Sparkman spent the week end in Santa Anna, and Mr. and Mrs. Blain Odom attended the H. P. C.—H. S. U. football game at Abilene.

Red Cross Roll Call Closes About Dec. 15

The Annual Red Cross Roll Call Campaign will be closed about Dec. 15. Baird has donated something near $400.00.

Mrs. Sidney Foy is Local Chairman; Carl South, County Chairman, reports something over $700.00. Our county quota is $1000.00.

Turkey Market Opened

The Christmas Turkey Market opened yesterday. Prices range from 16 to 18 cents. Quality of turkeys on the Christmas market are said to be much better than those offered on the Thanksgiving market.

Local buyers are in the field for a good part of the business in this territory.

The Christmas turkey market is expected to close about December 13.

NYA CENTER TO BEGIN OPERATION AS DEFENSE PROJECT AT CORPUS CHRISTI NAVAL AIR BASE

Operation of an NRA Resident Center, set up as a Special Defense Project in Corpus Christi and sponsored by the United States Naval Air Base there, will begin this week for one hundred Texah boys who will receive six months' work experience at the Base in the repair, construction, and maintenance of air-planes and airplane engines, according to J. C. Kellam, state NYA administrator.

Fifty young men are to report this week for work at the Center and fifty more will be assigned January 4, the youth being selected by the Texas State Employment Service, which agency later will assist in placing them into regular jobs in defense industries.

To be assigned to the Naval Air Base shop units in engine repair, aero repair, metal manufacture and repair, electrical, drafting, maintenance, and instrument work, these boys will assist in checking the conditions of the airplanes and engines; will make repairs, replacements, and adjustments to each; and will inspect critical parts of the craft, such as electric and control systems, undercarriage brakes, motors, and propellers. Besides the work experience which these young men will receive at the Naval Air Base, after working hours they also will obtain related information and training in radio theory, shop mathematics, and blue print reading from instructors furnished by the Corpus Christi Public Schools and the State Board for Vocational Education.

Grammar School Promotes Puppets Show

The Grammar School is bringing an excellent show to Baird. Next Wednesday, December 10, at 2:30 o'clock Miss Doris Jones of Waco, is bringing her Puppet Theatre to the school children and the people of Baird.

This show comes highly recommended in every respect, according to Mr. Hugh W. Smith principal of grammar school. Miss Jones has put the show on from Texas to New York. Words of approval have been given her in most of the larger cities of Texas. The Puppets have performed on the Chautauqua circuit for several seasons. This alone stamps it as superb entertainment. The Kiwanis Club in New York enjoyed the Puppeteer.

There will be a charge of 10 cents and the High School Auditorium has been secured for this program. Young and old alike will enjoy this show.

The school's share of the proceeds will be used to buy duplicator paper. BE THERE!

Jack Wier Family Move to Big Spring

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Wier and daughters, Emma Rose and Frances Marie left Monday morning for Big Springs where they will make their home. They have recently bought a residence on Bell street. Their son, W. J. Jr., did not go with the family as he has a position with the Western Electric Company in Abilene. W. J. Jr. is a graduate of the Clyde High School class of '39.

Emma Rose a senior in Clyde High School and Frances Marie grammar grade pupil will enter Big Spring public schools.

The Wier family have resided on their farm one mile south of Clyde for the past eleven years. They sold the farm to H. F. Phillips of Rowden, who has moved there.

Jack Wier is a retired T and P Ry. Engineer, who came to Baird in 1886. He worked for the T and P for 42 years.

Making his home in Big Spring much of that time, Mrs. Wier is the former Emma Newbauer, a native of Baird. The Star regrets to have the Wier family leave, but wish them every happiness in their return to Big Springs their old home.

REPAIR YOUR FARM MACHINERY NOW

M. R. Bently, agricultural engineer of the Texas A and M Extension Service, represented Texas at a farm machinery and equipment repair conference in Chicago December 4-5.

"Prompt repair and maintenance of farm machinery and equipment has always been a good farming practice," Bently pointed out, "but this time it looks as if farmers will have to keep their equipment in working order or do without."

Defense requirements have reduced the materials for new farm machinery to about two-thirds of that used in 1941. The shortage will extend to such farm items as bolts, chains, pipes, wire, and bar and sheet steel. Every effort will be made to keep up the supply of repair parts.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the state extension services have launched a farm machinery repair program to help farmers meet the double challenge of an equipment shortage on one hand and increased agricultural production on the other.

SAVING LATE FEED—

In localities over the state where early feed crops were short, farmers who have cows many lack feed unless they save all late growth, warns E. R. Eudaly, dairyman of the A and M College Extension Service.

"There is some feed in nearly all fields which is worth saving," he adds. "Any kind of feed beats no feed at all."

Choice of method for storing this late crop of feed is of great importance, Eudaly says. For example, ripe Johnson and sudan grasses are worth more as silage than as hay. The same is true of second growth cane, hegar and kafir, notwithstanding they will make fair hay. Second growth cane and grain sorghums will make sour silage which will scour cattle if cut in the immature stage and stored immediately. If second growth feed is cut before frost and the ground is dry it should be left in the field to partly dry out. If the weather is wet, let it remain in shock in the field for two or three weeks, or until partly dried.

Enough water should be added to make dry or partly dry feed feel wet when it is put into the silo. Should frost kill the feed it is best to wait three or four days before cutting it. It then can be stored immediately after frost, but the silage will not be as good as when cutting is delayed or it is allowed to dry on the ground after cutting.

Eudaly says that if cotton-stalk pasture is needed it is cheaper to let the cows do the harvesting. But when there is a surplus it will be profitable to cut some for silage before the frost. As cotton stalks do not contain enough sugar to ferment properly, a mixture of five gallons of molasses to 15 gallons of water should be sprinkled on each ton when placed in the silo. There still is time to plant oats, barley, wheat and rye grass for winter and spring pasture Eudaly says. These crops can be planted any time in November south of Fort Worth.

NEED A NEW MILK BUCKET?

Word that priorities officials in Washington have granted a preference rating to manufacturers of dairy equipment has been received by E. R. Eudaly, dairy specialist of the Texas A and M Extension Service.

The rating applies to such hot-dip tinned and tin-plate products as milk cans, pails, strainers and cream cans.

Steel is so necessary to defense needs that civilian use of the metal is being sharply restricted. The priorities officials, however, apparently realize the importance of milk in the Food for Freedom campaign.

Only enough steel will be allocated to produce the 1,340,000 milk cans needed for normal replacements plus a 6.8 percent increase to handle the additional eight million pounds of milk called for in the U. S. Department of Agricultural national production goals for 1942.

"I don't usually like to holler 'buy now', Eudaly commented, "but this is one time the defense agencies want farmers to figure out their needs and to buy or order as soon as possible. Seems that will help manufacturers to estimate their steel needs."

Manufacturers will be required to get the cans and utensils to the milk producers before next spring, according to the terms of preference order.

CURING AND STORING SWEET POTATOES

Curing sweet potatoes in storage houses is the most suitable method, provided there is sufficient volume to justify the expense. Otherwise, says E. A. Miller, agronomist of the A and M Extension Service, banks may be used satisfactorily if they are properly constructed.

The bank should be placed on a well-drained spot, properly ventilated and protected by a shelter or large losses will result. If less than 20 bushels are to be stored the cone-shaped bank may be used, but for larger quantities the bank should be long and narrow with a V-shaped trough inverted and laid in the bottom of the bed. Supports should be placed beneath the trough so as to hold it about two inches above the ground with the ends extending beyond the bank, Miller says. The ridge of the trough should be cut to allow the air drawn into it to pass through the banked potatoes from the bottom. These openings should be covered by hardware cloth to keep out rats. As upright flue extending out of the top covered to keep out moisture. The edges of the flue should be open along its entire length so the air can circulate into it from the potatoes. About four inches of good clean straw should be placed under and over the potatoes and covered with enough earth, where necessary, to prevent freezing. In cold weather all openings should be closed. A bank five to six feet wide at bottom, four feet high and 20 feet long will store around 200 bushels.

Miller cautions to handle potatoes as carefully as eggs because they bruise easily. Bruises affect their quality and often set up rotting.

Buy Christmas Seals To Help A Worthy Cause

President Roosevelt endorsed the 35th annual Christmas Seal Campaign of the National Tuberculosis Association as a vital part of national health.

The campaign, which opened November 24 was termed by President Roosevelt "A valuable and far-reaching tradition" is the anti-tuberculosis fight.

The President's endorsement: "With the approach of the Christmas Season, my mind turns to one of our most valuable and far-reaching traditions, the Christmas Seal which supports the fight against tuberculosis.

"For 35 years the appearance of the small tuberculosis Seal on the flood of holiday mail has proved that we Americans are sincerely trying to protect our own against an insidious, communicable disease.

"We have full confidence in the Christmas Seal, a confidence deeply rooted in the victories which have been won over the disease. But the fight against tuberculosis is not yet won. We must continue to give our full support to the National Tuberculosis Association and its 1,700 affiliated organizations throughout the county. We must help overcome a disease that still kills more persons between the ages of 15 and 45 than any other cause of death.

"The anti-tuberculosis campaign has long been a vital part of the foundation of the structure of our country because

Methodists Dedicate New Buildings At Orphans Home

ELIZABETH PROTHRO HOME given by Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Perkins, Wichita Falls

BRIDWELL HOME given by Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Bridwell, Wichita Falls

Culminating the most outstanding year of more than half a century and launching the drive for funds to finance next year's $125,000 budget, the Methodist Home at Waco dedicated five new buildings on its campus Friday, November 28, Bishops A. Frank Smith of Houston and Ivan Lee Holt of Dallas will take leading parts on the program, and more than 2000 out-of-town visitors are expected from the six conferences of Texas and New Mexico which support the home.

The affair begins with a barbecue on the Home campus at noon, the dedicatory service following at 1:30 p. m. Each new building will then be opened, its donors and the boys and girls who are to live in it serving as welcoming committee and guides. Four of the new structures are residences, furthering Superintendent Hubert Johnson's long time dream of doing away with dormitories and transforming the orphanage into a group of homes, each with its own house mother, its own dining room, kitchen and bedroom so that children may be brought up in an atmosphere as near like home life as possible. Half the Home's 400 children are now living in cottages. The fifth is an infirmary.

Donors are, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Perkins of Wichita Falls, who are giving a second cottage for girls after two years ago giving a home for senior girls; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Bridwell of Wichita Falls, a boys' home; Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Mitchell of Marfa, a girls' home; the late Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Williams of Ft. Worth, who will be represented by relatives, a boys' home; R. P.

Superintendent Hubert Johnson Sr., of Atlanta and the late Mrs. Willie Willis, who gave the infirmary. This building has been furnished by W. T. Penn of Wichita Falls and the late Mrs. Penn.

After the dedication, there will be an evening session of the 48 district superintendents of the Texas and New Mexico conferences. They will discuss the budget campaign, due to be held in all Methodist churches during the month of December. The Home, existing for more than half a century without endowment, has relied on free will offerings for support during its entire history. Because of the limited budget all buildings have been donated by private individuals, 1941 marking an all-time high in gifts of this nature to the Home.

No Electric Shortage

The alleged "oil shortage" on the eastern seaboard provided a perfect example of a politically created crisis which had almost no foundation in fact, states a nation-wide industrial news review, recalling that the unnecessary rationing of gasoline has been abandoned and that reserve stocks of oil, instead of dwindling, are reported on the increase.

To West Texas, conscious of shutdowns in oil fields and knowing that refineries were operating far below capacity, the so-called shortage appeared incredible.

They also may be skeptical of the so-called "electric power shortage" which are periodically forecast with scare headlines, for they fall in the same category as the non-existent oil shortage. Promoters of socialized power for the past decade, have used various subterfuges to promote political control of the electric industry including flood and irrigation projects inasmuch as they had popular support and could be used to "cover up" the real objective.

Now it looks as if they're adopting a new angle. Under the claims of "power shortage" none of which has ever put in its scheduled appearance, they are trying to divert defense funds for the purpose of duplicating an electric system already serving the country adequately and prepared to expand as the need arises.

What is the truth of the matter? Not one really serious power shortage has occurred except, perhaps, in the TVA area where drought played havoc with the water-power theories of the socialist-politicians and after they had taken over the private companies. Even in the defense "boom towns" where industrial development for military purposes has taken place at an incredible speed, power is being quietly and efficiently provided. More than 90 per cent of that power comes from private utilities.

In short, while a few politicians cry "shortage" to promote government ownership of the industry, the private utilities are going ahead and doing the work. While the utilities are subjected to every known form of political vilification, they are spending the money to build for tomorrow without expense to tax payers—probably the only defense industry to do so.

The purpose behind these periodic denunciations of private industry is obvious—to destroy the faith of the people in the private enterprise system, and to mislead the people to the point where they will accept widespread socialization of industry, according to the Review.

"The politicians who denounce industry loudest and oftenest," it is stated, "are the politicians who are most lustful for more power, more authority, more pork barrels. They are attempting to use this emergency to destroy from within the American system which the arms program is designed to defend, to protect, and to perpetuate."

WOODMEN CIRCLE WOMEN SHARE IN NATION-WIDE SAVINGS

Many local women and girls are sharing in nation-wide distribution of savings by the Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle this month, it was learned here recently.

The society is paying the November Supreme Forest Payment for all members in good standing whose certificates were issued before the end of 1938, according to national headquarters in Omaha, Nebraska. This payment will total $250,000, it was said, because the society has over 230,000 active members holding life protection valued at approximately $105,000,000.

There are 684 adult groves and 508 junior groups in Texas alone with a total of 4,331 such lodges in the nation, it was said. Texas members and their beneficiaries have received more than $12,096,000 from the Woodmen Circle in the past 50 years. Total payments to members and beneficiaries in this period exceed $45,000,000.

SPANISH CLUB MEETING

Mrs. L. L. Blackburn, president of Las Primeras, presided for the November 24th meeting in the home of Mrs. T. P. Bearden.

MAKE MEALS MORE FUN

Unless meals satisfy the appetites of hungry people and produce genuine satisfaction, they may go half eaten. So it takes appetizing food to sell good nutrition to a family and make eating fun.

Good cooking, skillful meal planning, and attractive serving all make eating fun, in the opinion of Hazel Phipps, Extension Service specialist in food preparation. To help homemakers plan meals for skillfully, she suggests use of the Texas Food Standard. It can be obtained free from county home demonstration agents or from A. and M. College Extension Service at College Station.

Since many food values can be retained or lost in cooking, learning to prepare food properly is a primary responsibility for every home maker. Here are some simple basic principles for successful cooking which help conserve food values and help make food taste better:

Use little water in cooking vegetables, and never add soda to the cooking water.

When most green vegetables are cooking, don't use a lid. Don't waste the liquid vegetables are are cooked in. If it isn't served with the vegetables use it in soups, sauces, or gravies.

Cook meats—and all other protein foods such as eggs, milk, and cheese—at moderate temperature.

Tender cuts of meats are cooked in an uncovered pan with no added water. Less tender cuts may be made more tender by cooking them slowly with added liquid in a covered pan. Tough meat may be made more tender by grinding.

BUYING A NEW COAT

This year's coat likely will cost more and have to last longer than the one before, as women buying new ones need to be extra careful in making their selections.

"Check every detail of coat quality before you buy to make sure you get the best material and the best made coat you can afford." That's the advice of Mrs. Dora R. Barnes, clothing specialist for the Texas A. and M. College Extension Service, to women buying winter coats now.

The first step is to find out the fiber content of the coat, and this year consumers have the new Wool Products Labeling Act to help them. The exact wool content and the kind of wool must be included in the label of every coat containing more than 5 percent wool.

Next, look carefully at the lining and interlining, making sure the seams are generous and well stitched. Otherwise they may fray badly. The inner-lining material is to provide extra warmth. It and the lining should be seamed separately so the coat will look better and fit better.

A woman will likely get better wear from her coat and look better in it if the grain of the cloths hangs straight all around if it's seam lie flat, if it's hemmed and finished with silk-ribbon binding, and if the thread is strong and matches the coat materials.

Maybe Next Christmas

by ANNE MARY LAWLER

Ma Shannon's doctor has warned her that this is her last Christmas. She is unwilling to inform her children, now pursuing careers in other cities, for fear the news will disturb them. However, she plans a last family reunion and writes to each of her four children, Lydia, Kenneth, Robert and Sally, inviting them home to Mountain Creek for the holidays.

In New York, Lydia is secretary-companion to a wealthy and dying woman, and in love with her employer's husband. She sees a rival in Margot Haines, a publicized beauty.

Installment 2

She opened her mother's letter, and was suddenly touched. Home for Christmas! For a moment, Lydia was struck with a sharp loneliness for all the old familiar faces and places of her childhood. After all, she could fly West.

It had been a long while since she was home. Longer than she had realized. And besides, it might be a pleasure to return to Mountain Creek, sophisticated and handsome and sleek with her years of New York and foreign living.

The door opened. Carter Wainwright entered the dining room. As if by magic, Kato purred in from the pantry, laden with hemispheres of golden melon in valuable silver bowls.

"Good morning, Lydia," Carter's voice was warm and pleasant.

"Good morning," she smiled. Lydia reserved her tenderest and most womanly smile for her employer's husband.

"How's Eve?"
"She had a restless night. Dr. Mason is calling at 10. I've sent up a very light breakfast."

He frowned. "Talked with Mason last week. He's not optimistic. Babled about the will to live and that sort of thing. Confound it, why should Eve lie upstairs in that monstrosity of a bed and just slowly fade away? She has everything to live for."

Lydia nodded sympathetically. "Well," his voice was impatient. "I do the best I can." He ripped open Margot's letter with a ruthless forefinger, scanned it hurriedly. Lydia spooned a mouthful of melon, waited breathlessly for his next words.

"Margot Haines is coming to New York for the holidays," he boomed cheerfully. "She and that old aunt of hers. Going to stay at the Waldorf."

The melon halted coldly in Lydia's throat.

"That's silly," he went on impatiently. "Why don't they stay here? A hotel's a cold place to spend Christmas. And Lord knows this place is big enough for a guest or two. We could have a nice dinner party, maybe. You'll make the arrangements, Lydia?"

"Of course," she feebly.

When Carter had departed for the office Lydia wrote to her mother. "Dear Mother—You'll have to count me out this year. Mr. Wainwright has invited a houseful of guests for the holidays and somebody will have to take care of things for him. I'm sorry, because I'd rather looked forward to a visit home this year. But since the other children will be with you it won't be as if you were alone. Maybe next Christmas things will be different. I'm rather busy now. Will write more fully later. Love,

"LYDIA."
"Maybe next Christmas things will be different," she thought as she sealed the envelope. "Maybe I'll be able to go home as Mrs. Wainwright next Christmas."

Dr. Kenneth Shannon had suffered a trying day at the clinic.

Kenneth's disposition, never the sunniest, was shredding under the strain of petty problems when he opened his mother's letter.

Across the proud candles and spotless damask of the long mahogany table his wife's cool eyes met his. "A letter from your mother?" she asked idly.

Kenneth nodded, annoyed. Phyllis Shannon turned amused eyes to the salad before her. "I suppose," she mentioned casually, "she wants you—us—to go back to Mountain Creek for Christmas."

"She does."
"It's a pity," Phyllis' regret was almost genuine, "but this year is simply out of the question. We have all our plans made."

Kenneth reread the letter carefully. "I haven't seen Mother in—how long—it must be over six years—"

"Five years. The Summer we went to Los Angeles we stopped off at Mountain Creek. Marilyn was two years old then."

"Five years is a long time."

Phyllis was properly sympathetic. "Yes, it is. But she will persist in living in that dreadful town, a million miles from anybody and anywhere."

The luxury of his surroundings pressed upon Kenneth.

"It was always a happy house," Kenneth said, more to himself than to the beautiful woman who was his wife.

Phyllis' well-bred voice beat against his ears. "It's sweet of her to want you—us—but I'm sure she'll understand."

"Understand what?" He was deliberately rude, deliberately inviting a quarrel.

But Phyllis was difficult to provoke. Calmly she continued, "I'm sure she'll understand that a man in your position has certain business—and social—obligations. After all, your father was a doctor. Surely your mother can realize—"

Lydia couldn't come. "Mr. Wainwright invited a houseful of guests," she wrote Ma.

"She's getting old," Kenneth said suddenly.

"She's only 65," Phyllis smiled. "And she's a strong and sturdy woman. She must have been to have worked the way she did."

She must have been strong and sturdy, indeed. Strong and sturdy and indomitable, to have faced so tirelessly the hard and thankless work of a farm woman.

"Father has the house party all arranged," Phyllis was gently persuasive. "And Mrs. Andrews will be there," she added as an afterthought.

Of course Mrs. Andrews would be there. Mrs. Andrews was a fabulously wealthy old widow, alone in the world. And the Clinic needed a new maternity wing.

"Nobody understands Mrs. Andrews the way you do," Phyllis smiled. "And besides, Father promised Marilyn a Christmas party of her own. And you know how eager she's been about it."

Yes, Marilyn was like her mother, winningly and persistently eager.

Kenneth sighed.

Later, in his room, Kenneth struggled with the proper, polite and regretful phrases for breaking his mother's heart. The check was already written, a generous check, blushing in little waves of embarrassment and guilt.

"Dear Mother," he wrote, "if only your invitation had come earlier. But Phyllis and I have made plans for Christmas that we cannot break at this late date. And, of course, things are so situated at the clinic now that I cannot be absent for more than a few hours at a time. You know what a doctor's life can be. I am inclosing a check. Buy yourself a new hat. I know it has been a long while since I was home, but, as you say, you will have the other children with you and won't be too lonely. Phyllis and Marilyn and I will try to make the trip a little later on. Or maybe we will have better luck next Christmas. Love, Kenneth."

"Oh, well," he thought to himself, "maybe next Christmas—"

Mrs. Dorgan's select boarding house presented an unusually bleak appearance.

The third floor back at Mrs. Dorgan's was an unhappy cubbyhole, rendered even unhappier by the waiting presence of the landlady herself.

As Robert Shannon opened the door, he saw her sitting in the battered rocking chair, inevitable as death.

Mrs. Amelia Dorgan viewed her tenant with a frigid eye. "I wanna talk 't' you," she mentioned ominously.

"Now wait a minute, Mrs. Dorgan," Robert protested. "I told you I was expecting a letter this week, and—"

Her glance was discouraging. "You gotta letter. I brung it up myself."

The letter wore no New York postmark. Robert faltered, "This is from my mother. The letter I was expecting would be from my sister in New York."

Mrs. Dorgan stabbed him with a vicious logic "I give ya till tomorrow," she announced, "an' if y'r board ain't settled then, ya needn't bother coming back I ain't in business for my health, an' I can rent this room a dozen times over."

Robert ripped open his mother's letter and dragged out the single sheet of notepaper within. Five worn bills fluttered from the envelope and fell bravely to the colorless carpet. He snatched them up, counted them desperately. Fifty dollars. He rushed to the door.

"Mrs. Dorgan—this letter—I didn't expect—" His hand trembled as he proffered a bill.

She snatched it suspiciously. "Ten dollars," she said reprovingly.

"On account, I told you I was expecting more tomorrow."

The green engraving slid from sight. "There's still $20 more due," she reminded him.

Robert went back to his room, closed the door and recounted the remaining miraculous bills.

Forty dollars—enough to buy the desired dinner jacket, enough to redeem his typewriter from the pawnshop, enough to make it possible for him to sit like a gentleman in the same room with Perry Boyle, the publisher. Robert shivered with delight and relief. It was not until then that he read his mother's letter.

Home to Mountain Creek for Christmas? So that's why his mother, usually so careful of money, had sent him the bountiful letter. But—the writers' banquet?

"I can't go back now," he thought frantically. "I can't. I've stayed too much here."

Too much indeed. Three years of Mrs. Dorgan and her icy eye; three years of greasy meals, faded wallpaper, lumpy mattresses.

Three years of tapping endlessly on the patient typewriter, of waiting in outer offices with manuscripts under his arm. Three years of rejection slips. It wasn't fair; it wasn't just. This was Robert Shannon's chance and he meant to have it.

Sophie Nash was making it possible for him to attend this dinner. Sophie knew Perry Boyle; not well, it is true, but well enough to make a casual introduction. The rest would depend upon Robert. He had to be at that dinner. If he went back to Mountain Creek this Christmas of all Christmases, he had lost his one great chance of placing his novel before an interested publisher.

He sat down at the rickety table and dipped the scratchy pen. His mother would have to understand, that was all.

"Dear Mother," he wrote, "your letter was welcome and the money was a godsend. I was down to my last dime and I was desperate. Something has happened that makes it impossible for me to come home for Christmas, however. There is a dinner I must attend, an important dinner. I have carted my novel from one publishing house to another, but I am unknown, and nobody even bothered to read it. But this dinner will give me a chance to meet the most important publisher in the business socially. I have to go. Everything depends on it. I know you'll understand. When the novel is published—and it's bound to be—I know it will be—I'll pay you back a dozen times. Sorry about everything, but maybe I can make it next Christmas. Love, Robert."

"Next year," he exulted, "maybe next year I can go back to Mountain Creek and prove to them I made good. Maybe next Christmas—"

"Two letters for Miss Shannon," the gaunt desk clerk stated.

Sally took her letters over to the bulky sofa in the corner and surveyed them gratefully. The first was carefully addressed in Dan Davis' small-town chirography to "Miss Sally Shannon, Hollywood Club for Working Women, Hollywood, California."
