Rain helped slow losses in cotton fields

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Above normal rainfall in July has slowed losses of some of Howard County's cotton crop, but up to half the crop is still expected to be lost, County Extension Agent Don Richardson said.

Martin County is expected to experience similar losses, said Greg Jones, the agricultural extension agent in that county. However, the Mitchell County extension agent said he expects a full yield this year and attributes the good crop area's cotton crops. to farmers planting their cotton a

So far 2.70 inches of rain has fallen this month, bringing the the yearly total to 9.77 inches, according to reports from the U.S. Agricultural Research Station on N.W. 12th Street. Average rainfall. according to records kept over a 75 year period by the Research Station, is two inches for July and 10.55 inches for the year by July 26. But this month's rain all came after July 11, following no rainfall in June — too late to save all of the

Richardson said they may lose little later than Howard and Martin around 40,000 bales of cotton, a value of about $10 million. There are roughly 80,000 acres of cotton planted in Howard County.

However, it could have been worst, he said. "Area producers feel that at least a 20 to 30 percent increase in the prospects of crop yeilds has come about due to the rain.

"The biggest benefits right now appear to be prospects for hay crops. Hay had become increasingly in short supply," he said. "It looks like we'll at least be able to produce a good hay crop.

Last week Richardson predicted a 20-50 percent loss of the cotton crop. Following more rain since then, he changed those figures to a loss of 40-50 percent.

"If we don't have a real bad insect outbreak, maybe 50 or 60 percent normalcy can be expected,' he said. "The rain, generally speaking, probably came too late for optimum benefits for the cotton crop.

Martin County Extension Agent Greg Jones said that of 113,242 acres planted, about 10,000 to 11,000 will not even be harvested. Of those harvested, he said he expects each acre to yield only about half a bale.

'Some of it looks good. Some of it doesn't look so good," he said of the effects of this month's rains, which have dumped only a half inch in some areas but more than three inches in others.

"It's been so dadgummed spotted," he said. Generally the north sections of the county have received abundent rainfall while it has been dryer near Stanton, he said.

Another problem that farmers could face are insects. "Bollworm populations are pretty bad right now in some areas," Jones said. "Some fields it would be economical to spray and some it RAIN page 8-A

Council approves prison lease

By MICHAEL DUFFY Staff Writer

Following a two-hour-10-minute executive session, the Big Spring City Council approved the final reading Thursday night of a resolution authorizing lease agreements with Mid Tex Detention Centers, Inc. for a new correctional center at the airpark.

Brady businessman Ed Davenport, the financial backer of the project, said he was pleased with the agreement and groundbreaking should begin "within two or truck. Apparently using tools obtained from prison, he reportedly was able to cut his way out of the truck's roof and fled when it stopped in Abilene

The Snyder correctional center opened last Aug. 12 and Gray has been only the inmate to remain at large for an extended period of time, Woods said.

"We had an inmate escape in December, but he was recaptured the same day," he said.

Gray, 31, was convicted of first-degree murder by a Mitchell County jury in connection with the death of his (then) wife Tammy Lynn Gray. He received a 40-year sentence.

OPEC ministers reach agreement

GENEVA (AP) - OPEC oil ministers agreed today to raise the cartels' prices and restrain production in hope of forcing up crude prices by several dollars in the next few months.

All 13 ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries signed the accord raising their target price from $18 a barrel to $21. Because of an oil glut, the actual price recently has been about $16.25 per barrel.

The agreement set a new output ceiling of 22.5 million barrels a day, a bit above the current cap but lower than the cartel's actual production. To reach the new target price, OPEC will have to rein in production by about 700,000 barrels a day.

Word of the agreement sent oil prices higher in international trading. In London, North Sea Brent, a widely used benchmark, jumped 39 cents from Thursday to $19.65 a bar rel for September delivery.

The September contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude, rose 9 cents to $20.39 per 42-gallon barrel.

Iranian Oil Minister Gholam Reza Aqazadeh said the agreement would be valid through the end of the year. Asked whether he was confident the output levels would be adhered to, he said: "At this time I am sure 100 percent.

The announcement capped the regular mid-year OPEC meeting, which began Thursday necessary to have some standard. Freshman Lara Stevenson said the new rule is "great.

"I'll probably re-do my whole wardrobe with shorts," Stevenson said. "I'll probably wear them even when my mom doesn't want me to. It'll be great."

Caleb Hamilton, a junior, said the new dress code will be "cool." The 3-inch rule is okay because 'you can get some pretty bad (stylish) shorts that are like that,"

Hamilton said. "I'm going to wear them a lot.' The code outlaws spandex bicycle pants, unless they are worn underneath shorts or a skirt. In that case, the outer garment will be measured by the 3-inch rule, Bowermon said.

"That's okay," Stevenson said. "I don't have any of those anyway.

No cut-offs will be allowed at all. "At the high school, we're going to allow them some leeway (in the measurement)," Bowermon said. "That 3 inches will be an approximation. At Runnels and Goliad, it will be exact.

Shayne Kotara, a sophomore, said some of the miniskirts he saw last year at school were too short.

WASHINGTON - Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall says he is mystified by President Bush's choice to succeed retired Justice William J. Brennan, a man Marshall says "cannot be replaced.'

In a rare public interview, Marshall also suggested the appointment of David H. Souter to the high court may have been a political move dictated by conservative White House Chief of Staff John Sununu.

In an interview broadcast Thursday on ABC's "Primetime Live," Marshall also said he would vote against Bush if he came up for election but felt constrained not to say too much bad about the president.

"It's said that if you can't say something good about a dead person, don't say it," Marshall said of Bush. "Well, I consider him dead."

Marshall, 82, a staunch liberal ally of Brennan on the high court, has another Republican president, man? Ronald Reagan.

In a televised interview in 1987, Marshall said Reagan's civil rights record "ranks at the bottom" among U.S. presidents.

In the interview conducted Wednesday in Marshall's office in the Supreme Court building, the justice said he expects to be voting in the minority a lot more because of Brennan's departure.

"There's nobody here that can persuade the way Brennan can persuade," Marshall said. "Brennan will sit down and talk to you and show you where you're wrong. Well, there's nobody with that power on the court today. I say that Brennan cannot be replaced.'

"If you're wrong, he'll - in the most gentle language - let you down. There's not a vicious bone in his body. He's_a real ... Bill's a gentleman," Marshall said.

He said the Souter appointment might be the work of Sununu, who as governor of New Hampshire put Souter on that state's Supreme Court.

Marshall said when Souter's appointment was announced on television, he turned to his wife and been outspoken in the past about ' said, "Have I ever heard of this

> He said he then called Brennan's home to find out whether he knew Souter. Marshall said Brennan's wife answered the phone and said

Brennan "never heard of him either.

Asked by interviewer Sam Donaldson why he thought Bush picked Souter, Marshall replied, "I don't have the slightest idea. Never heard of him. I just don't understand what he (Bush) is doing .... This last appointment is the epitome of what he's been doing. I think somebody's calling his shots Asked about his feelings toward Bush, Marshall said, "If he came up for election, I'd vote against him.

Asked if he believes Bush is running for re-election, the justice said, "I don't think he's ever stopped."

He added that he is not discouraged by Brennan's retirement

"It's not going to slow me down at all," he said. "I asked each one of my law clerks that I hired for this year .... 'Do you mind writing dissenting opinions?

Marshall also repeated what he has said many times before: that he was appointed to a life term on the court and means to serve it.

But, he said, "I have a deal with my wife that when I begin to show any signs of senility, she'll tell me.

'The response has been great,' she added. She said the club has only helped women so far. Leatham says this is due to the fact that men usually have better paying jobs than women.

Leatham wants single parents to know that there is someone there to help them. "We feel they're trying to better their lives for their children. One of our main goals is service for children," Leatham stated. 'We've got a very good organization. We try very hard. We've made some lives a little bit better for some people.

Leatham said parents have been real appreciative. "Most all of them have done real well, considering they have a family." Leatham said

Single parents may reach Leatham at 263-1091 or 267-7734.

Museum to store disputed art

DALLAS (AP) - A trove of medieval art treasures missing since late in World War II will be stored in the Dallas Museum of Art while a court decides who owns the 1,200-year-old objects.

The Quedlinburg treasures will remain hidden from public view while stored in the museum vaults, but museum director Richard R. Brettell said they likely will be on public display after ownership is determined.

'Each party was interested in eventually displaying the art for the people in Texas," Brettell said.

The treasures are now stored in a bank vault in rural Whitewright, Texas, the home town of the former U.S. Army officer accused of stealing the art from their hiding places near the end of the war.

AI head raps immigration policy

HARLINGEN (AP) - TheUnited States should deport far fewer Central Americans and other asylum-seekers. the head of Amnesty International USA said on a visit to South Texas. Human rights abuses and violence are well documented in Guatemala and El Salvador, and violence is increasing in Honduras, said John G. Healey, executive director of the human rights organization

He said there is no debate that 72,000 have died in El Salvador's civil war during the past 10 years, and at least another 50,000 in Guatemala.

"What proof is proof after a while?" he asked during a speech in Harlingen Thursday night. "It reaches the theater of the absurd.'

Healey planned to be in the Lower Rio Grande Valley through today visiting with Amnesty International volunteers and looking at detention centers where hundreds of Central Americans and others are detained.

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Texas were a country, it would rank ahead of such industrial nations as Britain. France and Italy as a source of carbon dioxide emissions, an environmental group says. The Natural Resources Defense Council reported Thursday that several states are among the world's top producers of the gases blamed for the "greenhouse effect" said to be warming the entire planet.

This means state governments can make a major contribution to fighting global warming, it said.

The 10 states with the highest emissions account for half the total carbon dioxide put into the air in the United States, the NRDC study said. Those states together would rank third in the world as a source of carbon dioxide.

Texas alone would rank seventh, behind the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Japan, West Germany and India.

atmosphere is one of the chief sions of carbon dioxide and other building new power plants and reasons scientists expect global temperatures to increase in coming decades with possibly disastrous consequences.

The NRDC, a public interest environmental organization, said its study, "The Statehouse Effect: State Policies to Cool the Greenhouse," was timed to influence the annual meeting of the National Governors' Association next week in Mobile, Ala. Ideas for fighting global warming are on the agenda

Daniel A. Lashof, senior project scientist at the council, recalled at a news conference that President Bush promised during his 1988 campaign to counter the greenhouse effect with a "White House effect.'

"So far, all we've gotten is the whitewash effect," Lashof said. But he said state governments can step in to take the lead.

Environmentalists say the Bush gases blamed for global warming, while calling for further study.

Other industrial countries, such as West Germany, Canada, Britain and France, have pledged to stabilize or reduce carbon dioxide emissions and have pressured the United States to take similar actions

Texas tops in carbon dioxide emissions

"The principal finding of our report is that states are big players when it comes to global warming,' Lashof said.

The study recommends that state governments promote energy efficiency with tough building codes and appliance standards, call a moratorium on investing in new coal-fired power plants, encourage utilities to invest in energy efficiency, reduce harvesting of state forests and plant more trees. "The good news is that states can do a heck of a lot in reducing their carbon dioxide emissions," said Robert Watson, an expert on energy efficiency at the NRDC. Energy-saving policies, he said create more jobs within the state.

The study, based on 1988 figures, put Texas at the top of the state-bystate list in carbon dioxide emissions with 553 million metric tons, well ahead of California's 310 million metric tons.

Texas put out more carbon dioxide than Britain, Italy or Canada, while California ranked ahead of France and Mexico.

The rest of the top 10 emitting states were Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Louisiana, New York, Michigan and Florida.

Watson said California, New York and Florida, although they rank in the top 10 because of their large populations, were leaders in promoting energy efficiency and scored well on per capita emissions

"Texas is a hopeless cause," Watson said. "There's something of a frontier mentality. People are very resistant to adopting energy standards because they don't like to be told what to do. They don't want to do it, they're not going to do it, even though it's probably costing their citizens billions of dollars and thousands of jobs.

Texas was eighth-highest in per capita carbon dioxide emissions, as well as highest in total emissions. Per capita emissions were highest in Wyoming, but Watson said the result could be misleading.

"Wyoming has a very small population and it has a coal production industry and some coal-fired power plants whose electricity is probably consumed out of state. Wyoming is something of an anomaly," he said. "It may also be inefficient, but it's hard to tell."

For its study, the NRDC analyzed national carbon dioxide data from the Oak Ridge (Tenn.) National Laboratory, and calculated state-by-state figures based on energy consumption data from the U.S. Department of Energy. Emissions from power production for electricity consumed in other states are included in the exporting state's figures, rather than that of the importing state.

broaden a freeway. running through the heart of town has uncovered a forgotten layer of Dallas history - hundreds of unmarked graves belonging to generations of former slaves and black settlers.

Clearing a path for the expansion of the North Central Expressway earlier this year, a backhoe scraped across portions of caskets, wooden markers and gravestones. Archaeologists were brought in to relocate some of the graves, an excavation that was supposed to take a few weeks to complete.

That was three months ago.

"That was a naive estimate I made last spring," said Jerry Henderson, the archaeologist overseeing the project for the State Highway and Transportation Department.

As more and more graves at Freedman's Cemetery are uncovered along the freeway where they've been covered for years - some containing fascinating relics, officials now say the dig may take two years.

It's an emotional, archaeological and historical issue," Ms. Henderson said. "You didn'tdo it and I didn't do it, but let's face it: The people who were buried here were wronged. And it's up to us to see that their final resting place is restored and their memories preserved.' About 800 graves have so far been marked off with twine, and Ms. Henderson said the final count may exceed 2,000. She said no more than 500 graves will have to be moved to make room for the highway expansion. There is little written record of the cemetery, located just north of downtown, but Ms. Henderson said most of Dallas' blacks apparently were buried there from 1861 to 1925. "When you're looking at black history, it's very difficult to track down because you have no paper trail to follow - unlike white history," said Steve Mabry, a local preservationist. Underlining this fact, Freedman's Cemetery is bordered on one side by an equally old, but wellkept Catholic cemetery.

DALLAS - Texas Highway Department worker Mark Stelmas works to relocate unmarked graves at Freedman's Park here Thursday. Archaeologists are preparing to relocate hundreds of the graves belonging to generations of former slaves and black settlers.

More than a century ago, the area was dubbed North Dallas Freedmentown, for the emancipated slaves who lived there, Mabry said. Many of the community's residents worked on the nearby railroad and others worked for well-to-do whites.

Freedmentown was virtually wiped out in the 1940s when North Central Expressway was built right through the middle of the cemetery. In the 1960s, a memorial park was built over part of the remaining cemetery The relocation of the graves will be difficult because most are bunched together

"We don't want to disrupt the internal integrity of the organization," Ms. Henderson said. "For example, we don't want to move the mother right here and then move the baby over there."

The sensitivity Ms. Henderson and her crew have displayed is one reason the excavation hasn't caused controversy.

mail that now gets delivered the next day will take a day longer starting this weekend.

Postmaster General Anthony Frank announced Thursday he will go ahead with selective cutbacks in overnight delivery service. originally announced last January, despite opposition from the independent Postal Rate Commission.

The commission, in an opinion issued Thursday, said it opposed the reductions nationally, although cutbacks in delivery goals might be justified locally in some areas.

The commission criticized the postal service for failing to estimate how it might save or customers might lose with the change. It also said the market research on which the service based its decision didn't accurately measured what customers want.

A national list of the changes was not issued by the postal service. Officials said information on cutbacks was being made public locally in the areas to be affected.

'We have concluded that (commission opposition) does not warrant delaying our scheduled Saturday implementation of changes in overnight delivery areas, Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some quired to seek the opinion of the rate commission when it wants to make such delivery changes, it is not legally bound to abide by that opinion.

Frank announced in January that the post office planned to tighten up the areas scheduled for regular overnight delivery to provide what it hopes will be more consistent service nationwide.

Local mail is not affected by the changes, which officials said will affect areas where there is only a small volume of mail moving between communities but where current standards call for overnight service

Currently 55.5 percent of all first class mail is designated for overnight delivery. Frank said that the new standard will reduce that to 50.7 percent.

"I consider these changes to be minimal in light of the many changes in transportation networks, increases in mail volume and shifts in population that have occurred since the standards were last examined more than a decade ago," said Frank.

Nonetheless, the plan drew opposition from the beginning, particularly in light of the fact it was first reported at about the same time the post office announced that it would seek to raise rates next year.

Herald opinion Dolphins doing our dirty work

Killer dolphins sound like a menace made for James Bond, but former trainers with the U.S. Navy maintain there is nothing fictional about them. They say that dolphins in a highly classified Navy program are being taught to kill enemy divers with nose-mounted guns and explosives. They also say that more than a dozen dolphins have been killed or injured in training.

Navy officials acknowledge that marine animals, including dolphins, are being trained in San Diego and at naval bases in Florida and Hawaii. However, they pointedly deny that marine animals are being trained to kill people.

Yet, the rumors persist about a practice that, if true, is "morally repugnant and ethically untenable" — to use the words of a proclamation adopted by international conservation groups meeting in Geneva earlier this month.

Meanwhile, the Navy has suspended a plan to use bottle-nosed dolphins to guard a nuclear submarine base in Washington state. Animal-rights groups had filed suit, claiming that the warm-water animals are not accustomed to the colder waters off the coast of Washington.

Although the Marine Mammal Commission, a federal agency, found last year that the Navy's $20 million-a-year training program was well-run, Congress should reconsider the ethical questions involved. The commission dealt with means; Congress should consider ends.

Liberals, conservatives: the difference

by JAMES J. KILPATRICK WASHINGTON - George Bush sent a message to the House on June 29, explaining his veto of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990. This week the House sustained the veto on a roll call that fell 54 votes short of an override. That ends the matter for this session. Even so, the president's veto message is worth your attention, because it speaks eloquently to the difference between liberalism and conservatism in contemporary politics. The difference merits a few minutes' discussion. Those of us who make an occasional political lecture are familiar with the question. It constantly arises. "Explain what you mean by a 'conservative' view! We respond - some of us do with an earnest explication of traditional values, the wisdom of our forefathers, the need for restraints upon power, the virtues of prudence and caution, and so on. We have need of specific illustrative examples. Bush's veto message exactly fills the bill.

By way of background: The parental leave bill sought to impose a new requirement upon every employer whose payroll covers at least 50 employees. On request, a worker would be entitled to up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave to care for a newborn or adopted child, or to look after a spouse or parent suffering a serious health condition.

During periods of leave, health benefits would have to be maintained. The bill contained elaborate provisions for enforcement, not only by the Department of Labor but also by civil suit.

The bill had substantial popular support. All the very best liberal groups were behind it -Americans for Democratic Action. the National Organization for Women, all of them. The measure passed the House in May by 237-187 and rolled through the Senate on a voice vote in June. The president himself acknowledged that "time off" is an important benefit. Nevertheless, he vetoed the bill. His reasons were both practical and ideological. On the practical side, Bush spoke to the stiff competition faced by American employers in global markets. It is especially important that employers at this time have flexibility in their personnel requirements.

Evidently current labor policies work effectively: Between 1980 and 1989 the United States created more than 18 million new jobs. All of Europe, where mandated benefits are more extensive and labor markets are less flexible, created only 5 million new jobs

The practical objections were the least of Bush's objections to the bill. It was the compulsion the mandated nature of the parental leave benefits — that drew his veto. The measure, he said, 'ignores the realities of today's workplace and the diverse needs of workers.

Some employees may prefer short paid leave to extended unpaid leave. Some might like an arrangement that permitted them to care for a sick friend, a brother or a sister. For others, expanded health insurance, better pension coverage, a longer vacation or a simple raise would be more useful.

"Choosing among these options traditionally has been within the purview of employer-employee negotiation or the collective bargaining process. By substituting a 'one size fits all government mandate for innovative individual agreements, this bill ignores the differing family needs and preferences of employees and unduly limits the role of labor-management. negotiations.

And there you have it. Bush was drawing critical distinctions between variety and uniformity, between freedom and compulsion, between private decisions and governmental mandates.

These are among the distinctions by which we identify "conservative" and "liberal" positions.

The liberal tendency, in this regard, is to think benignly of employees en masse. They are essentially faceless, these workers. A given textile mill may have a thousand human beings at the looms, but the liberal mind does not perceive them as a thousand different human beings.

They are a class, a statistical subset. Seeking to do good, the liberal would benefit them inflexibly and identically. And the liberal would invoke the power of federal law toward this end.

The conservative tendency, by contrast, is to look to the potty little individual, to realize that human beings have different needs and different desires, to champion diversity, to resist benign compulsions and to take the voluntary way.

In vetoing this well-intentioned but misguided bill, Bush acted as a conservative. Michael Dukakis would have signed it. There's the difference.

Zeroing in on a smiling Japanese buy out

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

My friend Rigsby, the paranoid schizophrenic, was voicing his concern about the visit of Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu to Atlanta.

'What's your problem with Prime Minister Kaifu?" I asked him

"Ever since he arrived in town, all he's done is smile, I saw him on television." said Rigsby

Why would you be concerned about his smiling?'

"Did you see the movie 'Tora! Tora! Tora!'?'' Rigsby asked me. 'Sure I saw it,'' I said. "It was about the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

"And remember when the Japanese pilots realized they had, indeed, pulled off a sneak attack? They smiled."

"So?'

"And do you remember those World War II movies where the Japanese fighter pilot gets on his radio and talks to the American pilot he has in his gunsights?" "I've seen that, yes

"The Japanese pilot always says, 'I was educated at UCLA, Yankee dog, Brooklyn Dodger. Now, you die.

"That's vaguely familiar." "Well, the Japanese pilot is smiling the whole time.

"Let me see if I'm reading you correctly," I said to Rigsby. "You think when you see a Japanese person smiling it means they're up to something.

'You've got it. "So what are you afraid of Mr. Kaifu for? Do you think he's planning a sneak attack on Atlanta?"

part of which I am not particularly proud." - Rep. Barney Frank,

D-Mass., who was reprimanded

"Worse," said Rigsby. "I'm afraid he's going to figure out a way to buy it." "The whole town?"

"It could happen," said Rigsby 'The Japanese already have gotten a head start. They've bought office buildings and a golf course in Atlanta. Georgia is second only to California in the number of Japanese investments.

"So you see a dangerous trend? "I do," said Rigsby. "First, they buy up office buildings and golf courses, then they get their hands on hotels and apartment buildings

'Next, comes auto dealerships and pancake houses. Then, Kentucky Fried Chicken franchises and liquor stores. Then they take over places that sell Oriental rugs because they figure the rugs are theirs in the first place.

"After that, movie theaters and hardware stores. All you'll be able to see are martial arts movies where the sound doesn't match the actors' mouths, and every time you buy a screwdriver you'll just be adding to the Japanese wealth. Before you know it, they'll own the airport, the governor's mansion, the newspaper, all the radio and television stations, the rights to 'Gone with the Wind' and Coca-Cola, and we'll be foreigners in our own city

'Coke would never sell to the Japanese," I said. 'You haven't heard what the Japanese are offering," said Rigsby. I certainly wasn't taking Rigsby seriously, but I did continue to humor him. "Is there anything in Atlanta, then, the Japanese won't try to buy? "Only two things," he answered. "The Braves and the

Falcons. 'Why not?'

The governor said the New Hampshire tax system works to keep a rein on government by restricting state revenues. "It has served us well . . ." Gregg said in an interview. "We continue to be the lowest taxed state in the country on the basis of personal income.

New Hampshire has neither general sales nor income tax, and the pledge to keep it that way has become standard in state campaigns, a line breached only by losers

Most campaign years, the pledge against a broad-based tax has been unanimous among the contenders in both parties. Robert Preston, minority leader of the state Senate, has taken that pledge in his bid for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The other two Democratic candidates in the Sept. 11 primary are talking of tax change. Grandmaison said the system should be reviewed and reformed, ending the era of no general sales or income tax, although he isn't proposing a specific formula. Paul Blacketor, a state representative and college professor, recommends a state income tax. Those are perilous campaign positions. That lesson was reinforced when John Sununu, now the White House chief of staff, was elected governor in 1982, upsetting a Democrat who eased away from the orthodox ban against sales or income tax, just as a wavering Republican was ousted in a primary a decade earlier. In 1988, when Vice President Bush limped into the New Hampshire presidential primary campaign after losing his first campaign test in Iowa, the no-tax issue was tailored to his needs Sununu ran the campaign in which Bush and his barrage of campaign commercials depicted Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas as a protax Republican. The tactic helped Bush overtake Dole to win the primary; he had no more trouble on his way to the GOP nomination. The tax pledge became a staple of the Bush campaign, and eventually a one-liner:

federal budget deficit. Bush said he'd had to rethink his position in changing circumstances. Sununu mistake when he dropped the tax bar without a Democratic commitment to slash spending. "My experience in Congress is that they'll take all the taxes you'll give them, and spend it," he said.

He said Bush's concession on taxes muted a basic Republican theme. "It blurs the distinction between the parties," Gregg said. But the governor said it won't hurt the GOP in New Hampshire, where conservative Republicans are absolutists on the tax issue, federal and state. Gregg said he'll try to cope with slumping state revenues and an increasing deficit with spending curbs, not with a broad-based tax.

New Hampshire already has raised the rates on its assortment of state taxes, and imposed a new 5 percent communications tax.

Property taxes have spiraled upward, stirring signs of the kind of tax rebellion that has hit elsewhere. It shows in town votes to turn down local school budgets. Rising property taxes have become a staple of talk radio programs. A poll conducted this spring by American Research Group of Manchester showed that 57 percent of those surveyed were opposed to a state sales tax - but 58 percent would favor one if it came with a guarantee that the revenues would be used to cut property taxes Grandmaison is banking on those attitudes as he proposes changing a system in which more than 60 percent of combined state and local revenues come from property taxes. The national average is 20 percent.

"Our reliance on the property tax is inherently unfair," he said.

He said any proposed tax bill would have to provide for the return of revenues to the towns to ease the property tax burden, or it wouldn't stand a chance of enactment

Gregg said that won't work and New Hampshire voters know it. "You don't reduce taxes by raising taxes," he said. "That's medicine man politics.

The federal jury also convicted Matta of actually kidnapping Camarena and holding him for interrogation. But he was acquitted of the agent's murder.

Matta, 45, shook his head slightly when the verdict was read. Tears streamed down the faces of family members in court.

Jurors today were to resume deliberating the fate of three other defendants in the trial, the second U.S. prosecution in the case. In 1988, a former Mexican policeman and two Mexican drug traffickers were convicted of conspiracy charges stemming from the agent's slaying by Guadalajara's powerful drug cartel.

Camarena's 1985 torture-slaying in Guadalajara incensed U.S. drug enforcement officials and strained running a cocaine syndicate that relations between the United States and Mexico.

Authorities had described Matta as one of the world's most active cocaine dealers. Last year, Assistant U.S. Attorney Gary Allen generated $73 million in just nine months in 1981. He was convicted by a federal jury here in September after his arrest in Honduras.

Camarena was a 31-year-old

Authorities had described Matta as one of the world's most active cocaine dealers. Last year, Assistant U.S. Attorney Gary Allen Feess placed him "on the level of the top 10 Colombian drug traffickers."

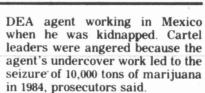

Feess placed him "on the level of DEA agent working in Mexico the top 10 Colombian drug traffickers. Matta's lawyer, Martin Stolar, called the verdicts a "terrible miscarriage of justice" and said he will appeal.

Matta "cannot conceive of being convicted for a crime he had nothing to do with," Stolar said. "He questions the ability of U.S. courts to fairly and adequately protect a Honduran citizen accused in this country.'

Matta could receive life in prison at sentencing Sept. 25.

Bill bans handicapped discrimination

By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer

6 A

WASHINGTON - As several thousand advocates for the disabled looked on, President Bush Thursday signed an act banning discrimination against the nation's 43 million handicapped people.

"Every man, woman and child with a disability can now pass through a once-closed door to a bright new era of equality, independence and freedom," Bush said as he signed the measure in a ceremony on the South Lawn.

The president likened the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 to the dismantling of the Berlin Wall as a symbol of freedom for a once-oppressed people. It "takes a sledgehammer to another wall," he said.

The bill prohibits discrimination against the disabled in employment, public accommodations, transportation and telecommunications, and defines as disabled anyone who has a mental or physical impairment limiting 'some major life function.'

The disabilities bill, like other major civil rights legislation, includes a variety of sanctions for violators, including those who discriminate in hiring. It allows victims of employment discrimination to seek back pay, reinstatement and attorneys' fees. However, the law exempts businesses with fewer than 15 employees from the hiring provisions

The measure includes new protection for AIDS-infected workers.

'This day belongs to you,'' Bush told the audience gathered outside the White House. It was one of the largest bill-signing ceremonies ever held at the White House.

About 2,000 people, representing groups that lobbied for the bill, sat in wheelchairs or on folding chairs at the ceremony in bright sunshine with temperatures in the mid-80s.

White House officials had considered moving the ceremony inside and reducing its size because of the anticipated heat.

But protests from disability groups, including a threat by some to hold a separate "people's signing" ceremony outside the White House gates, persuaded officials to

Key aspects of disabled Americans bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - Here are key provisions of the Americans with Disabilities Act that President Bush signed Thursday: DEFINITION:

Current users of illegal drugs. Homosexuals, bisexuals, transsexuals, transvestites. Pedophiles, exhibitionists, voyeurs and those with other sexual behavior disorders. Compulsive gamblers, kleptomaniacs, pyromaniacs. Anyone with a mental disorder resulting from current illegal use of drugs. EMPLOYMENT:

After two years, all businesses with 25 or more workers are covered. Coverage expands after two additional years to all businesses with 15 or more workers. Employers may not reject applicants or fire current employees on the basis of disability. Businesses must modify or buy equipment or devices or provide helpers - such as readers for blind workers - to help the worker overcome the particular disability. Businesses are exempt if the accommodations create an undue financial hardship, determined case by case.

PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS: Public accommodations must be made accessible to disabled patrons 18 months after the bill takes effect. Such public accom-

All new buses, rapid rail vehicles or light rail vehicles used in public transit must be wheelchair accessible. Existing vehicles need not be refitted, but key stations and all new stations must be made accessible within three years. All new cars for Amtrak and commuter rail systems must be made accessible. FOOD HANDLERS:

Employers could reassign employees with certain communicable or contagious diseases from food-handling duties. However, employers could only reassign workers with diseases the Department of Health and Human Services determines can be spread through contact with food. The provision was adopted after an unsuccessful attempt to make it possible for AIDS-infected workers to be reassigned. The government says AIDS is not spread through contact with food

Church hosts VBS

Many children in town took advantage of the Vacation Bible School which was held at the First Baptist Church July 16-20. The theme throughout the classes was "Helpers".

Before separating into different classes, the children were involved in a joint service in which they were taught about missions. Special speakers were present to talk to the kids a couple of days during the week.

In class the kids had fun with crafts, learning memory verses, singing, listening to the Bible stories and also a nature time. The "Reck Team" also had everyone for a time of fun outdoors. Friday, the kids and adults alike had a special treat as the Texas Tech Masked Rider (Blaine Lemons of Colorado City), and his horse Midnight Raider, made a special trip to visit and talk to the kids. Parents night was held on Sunday evening, to give the adults the opportunity to view their children's work.

Big Spring Herald, Friday, July 27, 1990 Should man's parents greet him at airport?

DEAR ABBY: I need some advice. My husband is stationed in England with the U.S. Air Force, and he's coming home for a 30-day leave next month. My problem is that his parents want to go to the airport to meet him, and I would prefer they didn't because I'd like to have him all to myself when he arrives. Besides, he's coming in at 11 p.m. on a weeknight, and his parents have to go to work the next morning. Anyway, I don't know how to tell them that I would rather meet my husband alone.

He hasn't been home in 13 months, but I flew to England to see him last November - so I've seen him more recently than his parents have. But he is my husband and we've been married only four years. My parents are not going to the airport.

I'm not sure how to handle this. What would you do, Abby? -UNDECIDED DEAR UNDECIDED: I would

parents to discourage their meeting him at the airport. As you know, a man can have more than one wife in a lifetime, but he will never have more than one set of parents. So put your nose back in joint, grow up, and don't make an issue out of who or how many people meet your husband at the airport.

Abby's family recipes are included in her cookbooklet. Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

The Forsan Independent School District will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in 1989 by 7.9 percent. Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property.

The public hearing will be held on August 6, 1990 at 7:00 p.m. at Forsan High School in the board room.

FOR the proposal: Lee George, Fred Holguin, Bill Mims, Robert Patterson, and Terry Wooten

AGAINST the proposal: None

ABSENT: Jim Alexander and Jack Howard

The statement above shows the percentage increase the proposed rate represents over the effective tax rate that the unit published on July 26, 1990. The following table compares taxes on an average home in this taxing unit last year to taxes proposed on the average home this year. Again, your individual taxes may be higher or lower, depending on the taxable value of your property.

	Last year	This Year
Average home value	$25,000	$25,000
General exemptions available (amount=available on the average home, not including senior citizen's or disabled person's exemptions)	5,000	5,000
Average taxable value	20,000	20,000
Tax rate	$0.99	$0.96
Tax	$198.00	$192.00

Under this proposal taxes on the average home would decrease by $6.00 or 3 percent compared with last year's taxes.

Comparing tax rates without adjusting for changes in property value, the tax rate would decrease by $0.03 per $100 of taxable value or 3 percent compared to last year's tax rate. These tax rate figures are not adjusted for changes in the taxable value of property.

Attorney calls suit against city 'groundless'

By MICHAEL DUFFY Staff Writer

The attorney who represents the Big Spring Police Department in a civil suit brought by a local woman has filed a series of special exceptions in 118th District Court and asked that a hearing date be set.

According to records filed in district court, Midland Attorney Terry Rhoads called the suit filed June 20 by Corina Calderon "groundless" and "brought about for the purposes of harassment and bad faith.

He also requested that a hearing date be set.

The suit names Chief Joe Cook, unknown police officers and the city of Big Spring as defendants.

Rhoads states in the exceptions that Calderon fails to state a claim against the defendants in which specify a claim and damage amount

Citing the Texas Rules for Civil Prosecution, the attorney writes that all the defendants seek a 'general denial" of the allegations and asks that Calderon prove them by a "preponderence of the evidence.

He also maintains that the woman's arrest came about "as a result of good faith conduct of police officers performing their duties to protect the property and citizens of this community.

Because the officers displayed good faith conduct, they had "adequate, equal justification" to make the arrests, Rhoads states.

The arresting officers are asserting the privilege of "qualified immunity" and the city is asserting Rhoads is also asking that exemplary damages be barred because "substantive and due process rights" were violated.

Calderon said Thursday she filed the hand-written suit with the assistance non-lawyers because she could not afford to retain an attorney

The 28-year-old woman alleges she was falsely imprisoned after being arrested Christmas day on suspicion of burglary of a habitation.

According to police records, Calderon and three other people were arrested about 1:30 p.m. at 1307 Sycamore St. She said she had received permission to Drug agents allegedly recovered four pounds of marijuana; an unspecified amount of cocaine: $7,200 in cash; a semi-automatic handgun; and two vehicles.

District Judge Robert Moore said because of an upcoming trial in Glasscock County, it will probably be late August before a hearing will be held on the exceptions. Calderon — the mother of three small children - said she will soon

'The police told me that the charge had been dropped, but they wouldn't give me any any kind of proof," she said. "I've been to the police station three or four times asking for some kind of paper saying I'm innocent, but I get a different answer everytime."

She is seeking unspecified damages and expenses.

Hospital offers top post to NHI employee

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

The top administrative post at Scenic Mountain Medical Center has been offered to an employee of National Healthcare, Inc., the hospital's parent corporation.

Ed Cunningham, currently group director for several hospitals owned by the company, has been given the opportunity and is considering the offer, a company official said Thursday.

Louis Gatto, executive director of assets management for National Healthcare, said Cunningham and his wife were in Big Spring this week looking at the city and the facility.

"He (Cunningham) was here looking at the hospital," Gatto said. "We're hopeful that he'll decide to take the job."

The job would be a transfer within the company, in effect a promotion, Gatto said.

'It's up to him and his wife now to make the decision," he said. "He's probably our best man in the company in his current job as group director and we feel this facility requires somebody like that. He's the man for the job."

Cunningham, if he accepts the administrator job, will continue to work as group director for several other hospitals as well, Gatto said.

"He'll be like the superadministrator, one step above an administrator," Gatto said. "He has been doing both (group director and administrator) jobs real well now (at another facility). It

Deanda to be charged with DWI

By MICHAEL DUFFY Staff Writer

Howard County Attorney Hardy Wilkerson said this morning that he has filed the information on an aggravated driving while intoxicated charge against a Big Spring woman involved in a traffic accident last week in which three people were seriously injured.

Wilkerson said he filed the information with the court clerk's office Friday morning after reviewing police investigative reports and he anticipates the issuance of an arrest warrant for Michelle Dawn Deanda later today.

The 22-year-old woman is reportedly out of town visiting a terminally-ill relative, however she is expected to surrender to police sometime Sunday when she returns to Big Spring, Wilkerson said.

When she surrenders to police, Deanda will be informed of her legal rights by a Howard County justice of the peace, who will set bond Conviction on an aggravated driving while intoxicated charge carries enhanced penalties which range from a minimum 60-day jail sentence to a maximum two-year prison term, Wilkerson advised.

He added that fines ranging from $100 to $2,000 can also be assessed.

On Thursday, Big Spring police issued four citations to Deanda and a passenger in connection with the July 20 accident. Deanda, 809 Aylford St., was cited for failure to control speed to prevent an accident and no safety belt. Rosendo Rodriquez, 20, who was arrested at the scene of the accident on a public intoxication charge, was issued citations for obstructing a driving mechanism and no safety belt, police said. Shortly after midnight last Friday, a car Deanda was driving left the roadway in the 1200 block of Scurry Street and struck four pedestrains, including 5-month-old James Elijah Lang, who is listed today in good condition at St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock, according to a nursing supervisor. He sustained a fractured skull and a cerebral hemorrhage. His mother, Lakisaj Lang and Tammi M. SEATTLE (AP) - The Soviets turned Yankee and, as expected, got knocked senseless, while track and field concluded with some outstanding Yankee performances. America's pastime began Thursday night when the Soviets made their international baseball debut against a team of American collegians. "I was petrified," said the 16-year-old junior at Forsan High School. "I said to myself, 'Oh God, just let me get out of here alive.'

Jennifer came out of the gate good, and "Shadow Rose" cut the first barrel well. But the horse seemed quite conservative when going through the remainder of the course.

"I wasn't real happy (with the ride). "She ("Shadow Rose") turned good barrels, but I guess I didn't push her hard enough. She was nervous. I was scared.

The daughter of James and Mary Dubose has been around horses quite a bit. "I've been riding horses and play-daying all my life. Shadow Rose is four years old and I've had her for two-and-a-half years. I didn't break her (for barrel racing) until she was three. But she's picked it up faster than I expected."

Now that's it's all over, she said her first rodeo was a good experience. "I needed to get some experience. I had a chance to win, and if I failed, I got some experience," she said.

"I got some moral support from my friends and family. They stand behind me. If I was in another town and didn't know anybody, it would be harder.

"I probably won't go to any more rodeos this summer; just some playdays at the horse club. But I plan on going at it hard next summer. Next time I'll calm myself down and do better, because I know what to expect.

> BOSTON (AP) - Brian Shaw has bowed under the pressure of $5,000 daily fines and agreed to break his contract with an Italian team, but he still doesn't want to play for the Boston Celtics, his attorney Laura Carroll said.

On June 27, U.S. District Judge A. David Mazzone ordered Shaw to notify Il Messaggero that he was rescinding his contract with the team and told him he could play only for the Celtics.

The fines, which began Saturday, reached $30,000. Carroll said she hoped the application, submitted to Mazzone, would stop further fines and convince the judge to wipe out those already incurred.

No female presidents

MARION, Ala. (AP) - A 1930 graduate of Judson College who has given more than 200 scholarships to students says she did all she could, in vain, to have a woman named president of the Baptist women's college.

The post, as before, went to a man. Trustees chose David Earl Potts to succeed N.H. McCrummen, retiring after 20 years as president. Potts, 40, has been ex-

Take pride in heritage GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) -African places and people are involved throughout the Bible, a United Church of Christ minister told a conference of black Christians, saying they should take pride in that heritage.

"Christianity is not just something we learned in slavery in America," said the Rev. G. Wesley Raney of Daytona Beach, Fla. "We were present from the very start, in biblical times.

He said African references occur from start to finish - from the Garden of Eden linked to a river around the land of Cush, which means "black" and represents Ethiopia, to African church leaders who ordained the apostle Paul.

"The Bible is an African book, containing stories by and about the people of the land of Canaan, who were blood brothers of the people of Egypt and Ethiopia,' Raney said.

He said other biblical terms denoting people with dark skin include Ham, Hamite, Hittite, Put, Libya, Nimrod, Jebusite, Amorite and Sheba under Heaven." Ecclesiastes 3:1. The longer I live, the clearer this principle of creation becomes. Understanding the different seasons of our lives will help us to adjust and more fully embrace them. Change is constant, and you will always be experiencing it. Those who try to resist its momentum will discover their own limitations.

If you are going through, coming out of, or anticipating a change, let this hope be an anchor to your soul. "He is the Lord and changes not, Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever." Hebrews 13:8.

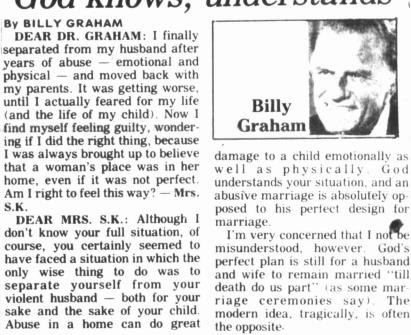

Our response to change is often more significant than the change itself. Many times these reactions are like sign posts, indicating our progress or lack of it. Anxiety can come when a person is reluctant to. take the next step or has gotten ahead of schedule. In much the same way, frustration or despair can paralyze one who misses the

It is very important to remember that God holds the seasons in his hands. Jesus said, "I am the light of the world. Whoever follows me will never walk in darkness, but will have the light of life." John 8:12.

Have you received Jesus Christ as your Lord and Saviour? Today is the day of salvation. This is the acceptable time. Where are you to- " day? In a valley or on a mountain top? The great shepherd is there to guide, protect, and provide for your needs. "He has made everything beautiful in its time." Ecclesiastes 3:11.

"Before this year's football season begins, we will implement certain limitations and restrictions on the activities of NFL teams ... in order to eliminate excesses and to assure that there is no unwarranted interference in the academic programs of student athletes," Tagliabue told the Knight Commission on college athletic reform last month.

The commissioner is unwilling, however, to allow the NFL to shoulder the entire burden for academic shortcomings.

'I think it is erroneous to suggest, and there is no basis for concluding, that NFL recruiting and hiring policies or practices have had a substantial negative impact on college programs, including on the academic progress of college football players," he said

That opinion is not shared, however, by a large segment of the collegiate community. The College Football Association adopted strong anti-NFL resolutions last month, citing the demands that cut into class time for student-athletes and lead many players to leave school short of their degrees.

The CFA said it wanted minicamps postponed until after the academic year and a commitment from the pros to pay for the completion of a player's education if he comes into the league without his degree. Until the NFL becomes more sensitive to such issues, the CFA said its members will not cooperate with the pro scouts.

Significant courtesies have been extended to pro scouts," said Chuck Neinas, executive director of the CFA. "Those courtesies will no longer be extended unless something is done. The moratorium is in effect now.

"We're just asking that pro foot ball pay attention to its farm system. The pros aren't giving the colleges the time of day. Let's face facts, pro football is interested only in pro football."

The strong words from the CFA can be traced directly to the offices of university and "college presidents, who are putting the pressure on their at letic departments to improve graduation rates.

Tagliabue thinks the institutions would be better served cleaning up their own houses before complaining about the NFL.

Based upon all the available information," the commissioner said it is evident to me that the graduation rates of college for ball -part is being eleaned up and itsis a players are overwhelmingly determined by the policies and practices of the colleges and universities themselves — and only marginally

FORT WORTH (AP) - For a while, it appeared that Fort Worth and Cleveland were headed for war. The spoils: Budapest, Hungary.

But now, the two cities have reached a compromise and apparently will share the eastern European capital Last month, Fort Worth consummated a sister city relationship with Budapest, after that city sought out Cowtown for its technology and economic development potential. But then Cleveland, citing strong cultural ties to Budapest because of its large Hungarian-American population, said it wanted to have Budapest as its sister city. Cleveland officials even went so far as to accuse Fort Worth of stealing the city on the Danube. Two weeks ago, August Pust, pro-

Marshall mystified by court nomination

By JAMES H. RUBIN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall says he is mystified by President Bush's choice to succeed retired Justice William J. Brennan, a man Marshall says "cannot be replaced.

In a rare public interview. Marshall also suggested the appointment of David H. Souter to the high court may have been a political move dictated by conservative White House Chief of Staff John Sununu.

Asked today if he was offended by Marshall's remarks, Souter responded: "I wouldn't care to say

In an interview broadcast Thursday on ABC's "Primetime Live," Marshall also said he would vote against Bush if he came up for election but felt constrained not to say too much bad about the president.

"It's said that if you can't say something good about a dead person, don't say it," Marshall said of Bush. "Well, I consider him dead."

Marshall, 82, a staunch liberal ally of Brennan on the high court, has been outspoken in the past about another Republican president, Ronald Reagan.

In a televised interview in 1987, Marshall said Reagan's civil rights record "ranks at the bottom" among U.S. presidents.

In the interview conducted Wednesday in Marshall's office in the Supreme Court building, the justice said he expects to be voting in the minority a lot more because of Brennan's departure.

"There's nobody here that can persuade the way Brennan can persuade." Marshall said. "Brennan • MARSHALL page 8-A will sit down and talk to you and show you where you're wrong. Well, there's nobody with that power on the court today. I say that Brennan cannot be replaced.

"If you're wrong, he'll - in the most gentle language - let you down. There's not a vicious bone in his body. He's a real ... Bill's a gentleman," Marshall said.

He said the Souter appointment might be the work of Sununu, who as governor of New Hampshire put Souter on that state's Supreme Court

Marshall said when Souter's appointment was announced on television, he turned to his wife and said, "Have I ever heard of this man

He said he then called Brennan's home to find out whether he knew Souter. Marshall said Brennan's wife answered the phone and said Brennan "never heard of him either.

Asked by interviewer Sam Donaldson why he thought Bush picked Souter, Marshall replied, "I don't have the slightest idea. Never heard of him. I just don't understand what he (Bush) is doing

The deal would limit the cartel's production to 22.5 million barrels a day, which would require the producers to restrain output in coming months, and would increase the current target price from $18 per barrel. Because of an oil glut, however, the actual price has been about $16.25 per barrel

Iranian Oil Minister Gholam Reza Agazadeh said the agreement would be valid through the end of the year. Asked whether he was confident the output levels would be adhered to, he said: "At this time I am sure 100 percent.

The ministers from Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates confirmed the agreement had been reached. Ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries planned to formally approve the accord later in the day.

News of the accord helped push up energy futures prices in early U.S. trading today. Wholesale unleaded gasoline for August. delivery jump 1.44 cents to 66.70. cents a gallon minutes after; trading began on the New York; Mercantile Exchange.

The September contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude, rose 9 cents to $20.39 a 42-gallon barrel.

The announcement followed two days of talks at the regular mid-; year OPEC meeting, which was overshadowed by a bitter dispute involving Iraqi allegations that Kuwait and the U.A.E. drove down oil prices by exceeding their output quotas. Kuwait and the U.A.E. deny the claims

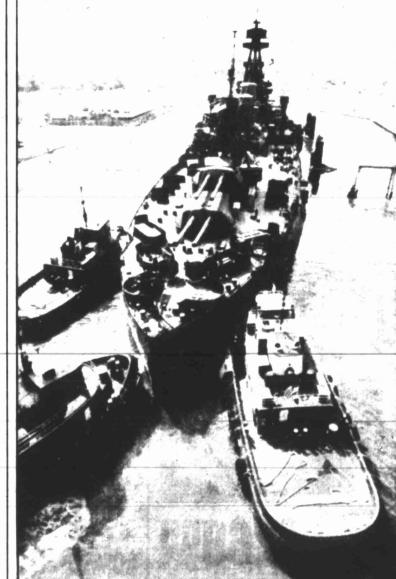

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein threatened last week to use military force against cheaters, and diplomats reported an Iraqi military buildup at the Kuwait border

In reaching agreement, the ministers persuaded Iraqi minister Issam Abdul Raheem al-Chalabi to back off his demand for a $25 a barrel target price. Others said $25 was too high

The current target price of $18 has been in effect since December 1986. The current production limit is about 22.09 million barrels a day. based on individual quotas set for each member nation.

Kuwait and the U.A.E. have been accused often of exceeding their output quotas, and Saddam claims his cash-hungry nation has lost $14 billion in oil revenue because of the resulting slide in prices.

Aqazadeh said the new agreement was reached at the highest levels of the OPEC governments, so he was confident the output levels it would be strictly followed.

ject director of Cleveland's Ethnic Affairs and International Relations office, vowed in a Cleveland newspaper to "take Budapest away from Fort Worth.

But Sister City International stepped in to negotiate a truce and appears to have worked out an unprecedented agreement to have the two cities share Budapest. The compromise was hammered out at the Sister Cities International convention being held this week in Albuquerque, N.M.

Mary Palko, president of Fort Worth Sister Cities Inc., said relations between Cleveland and Fort Worth throughout the negotiations have stayed within the bounds of international protocol.

But it's clear that they have been, well, somewhat strained. "I told Cleveland Mayor Michael White that I was taken aback by how vocal Cleveland officials got over the issue, claiming we 'stole' Budapest and so forth," Fort Worth Mayor Bob Bolen said Wednesday

'We didn't do anything. Budapest came to us, we didn't go to them," Bolen said. "(White) admitted things were said that shouldn't have been said."

Pust said the Fort Worth-Budapest relationship baffled Cleveland officials because the Cleveland-Budapest connection is a natural. There are about 100,000 Hungarian-Americans in Cleveland, many of them escapees from the 1956 bloodbath in Budapest when the Soviets brutally put down a rebellion against Communist rule. "We obviously could not be a sister city with Budapest until its government that had killed and persecuted millions of Hungarians had changed," Pust said. "That has happened and now we are ready. Because our deep ties to Budapest, we should be its Sister City, or at least share that status

Ms. Palko said a sharing agreement is very unusual because it potentially could diffuse business and cultural exchanges, and would have to be approved by the Fort Worth group's board.

> But, he said, "I have a deal with my wife that when I begin to show any signs of senility, she'll tell me. And she will.'

Marshall also said one of the differences between him and Brennan is that "He tells jokes. He doesn't tell dirty ones like I tell."

yearly total to 9.77 inches, according to reports from the U.S. Agricultural Research Station on N.W. 12th Street. Average rainfall, according to records kept over a 75 year period by the Research Station, is two inches for July and 10.55 inches for the year by July 26.

But this month's rain all came after July 11, following no rainfall in June - too late to save all of the area's cotton crops

Richardson said they may lose around 40,000 bales of cotton, a value of about $10 million. There are roughly 80,000 acres of cotton planted in Howard County.

However, it could have been worst, he said. "Area producers feel that at least a 20 to 30 percent increase in the prospects of crop yeilds has come about due to the rain.

"The biggest benefits right now appear to be prospects for hay crops. Hay had become increasingly in short supply," he said. "It looks like we'll at least be able to produce a good hay crop.'

Last week Richardson predicted a 20-50 percent loss of the cotton crop. Following more rain since then, he changed those figures to a loss of 40-50 percent.

"If we don't have a real bad insect outbreak, maybe 50 or 60 percent normalcy can be expected," he said. "The rain, generally speaking, probably came too late for optimum benefits for the cotton crop.

Martin County Extension Agent Greg Jones said that of 113,242 acres planted, about 10,000 to 11,000 will not even be harvested. Of those harvested, he said he expects each acre to yield only about half a bale.

'Some of it looks good. Some of it doesn't look so good," he said of the effects of this month's rains, which have dumped only a half inch in some areas but more than three inches in others.

'It's been so dadgummed spotted," he said. Generally the north sections of the county have received abundent rainfall while it has been dryer near Stanton, he said.

Another problem that farmers could face are insects. "Bollworm populations are pretty bad right now in some areas," Jones said. Some fields it would be economical to spray and some it wouldn't." Spraying, done one to three times a year, costs about $7 to $9 an acre, he said. Howard County also experienced spotted rains and as a result, different results.

Lomax farmer Neil Fryar said it probably would not be economical to harvest any of his 11,000 acres.

Darren Patrick and Kevin Barnes are two college students who have hired on as summer workers with Cap Rock Electric.
