Waiver of water bills must wait

City officials are advising residents in the Capehart addition that no action on the waiver of their water bills can be taken until the second and final reading of a resolution by the city council.

Final approval of that resolution is expected at the Aug. 28 council meeting, Finance Director Tom Ferguson said.

The council had the first reading of the resolution that waived the June 20 through July 19 water bills for Capehart residents because of the rust-colored problems they recently experienced.

Ferguson said city hall has been inundated by callers asking that their water bills be waived.

No new leads on escaped convict

A brief segment on America's Most Wanted Sunday night has not produced new leads for authorities investigating the escape of convicted Big Spring murderer Travis Dale Gray.

Travis Gray

Ranger John Billings, in Big Spring Thursday, said that he has not received any new information about Gray's whereabouts since the broadcast.

"I'm probably going to have them run it again," Billings said of the 30-second segment that aired on Odessa's KPEJ-Channel 3.

Price Daniel Unit (Snyder) Warden L.L. Wood said he was unsure whether the segment on Gray was even broadcast.

"I taped it on my VCR, but when I played it back there was nothing on him that I actually saw," Wood said. "People keep telling me that they saw it, though."

Gray escaped from the minimum security prison on June 20 by hiding in a truck. Apparently using tools he obtained from prison, he reportedly was able to cut his way out of the truck's roof and fled when it stopped in Abilene.

The 31-year-old man was convicted of first-degree murder by a Mitchell County jury in connection with the death of his (then) wife Tammy Lynn Gray, 27. He received a 40-year sentence.

Forsan pool to close for season

Forsan Independent School District announced that its public pool will be closed for the rest of the summer vacation.

The pool filtering system has not operated properly for some time, officials said. The school board recently approved a plan to finance repairs this year, so the pool is expected to open next summer as usual.

Hispanic Women make a difference

Hispanic women in the Crossroads area have the opportunity to work for education, literacy and community involvement with Hispanic Women for Progress.

The social service education-oriented group offers programs to keep local students in school, help them go to college and encourage parental involvement.

Esther Lopez, president of the group, said their motto "Together we can make a difference" really means something.

"Everybody has something to offer," she said. "Alone, these things might not seem to mean so much and wouldn't get anything accomplished. The group together is much more powerful."

Two scholarships were given to high school graduates this year. For that, the group had to raise $1,000. They hold periodic fund

Store clerk makes effort to save a life

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Jace Elliott was not expecting to be involved in an attempt to save a man's life when he reported for work at Furr's Supermarket Saturday evening.

He had arrived about 5:30 p.m. and just begun his duties stocking groceries when a woman entered the store frantically screaming that a man was injured and needed help.

Elliott said he and a part-time employee, Terry Huit, rushed to the parking lot and discovered an elderly man slumped behind the steering wheel of his car.

"We could see he was in trouble," Elliott said. "He had lost consciousness and his face had turned blue."

An off-duty nurse told the men they had to get the victim out of the vehicle and both men carried him to the sidewalk, he recalled.

"The woman (nurse) began administering mouth-to-mouth (resuscitation) and told me to begin CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation)," Elliott said.

After several minutes passed, Elliott said he noticed the woman becoming "very tired." Fortunately, another man, Bobby Sumner (a Big Spring State Hospital employee), arrived to provide assistance.

"Those several minutes seemed like an eternity, but Bobby knew CPR and was able to relieve her," Elliott said.

He explained that he became encouraged when the man began breathing.

"The color in his face came back, his eyes were dilated and we could detect a heartbeat," Elliott advised.

At approximately the same time, paramedics from American Medical Transport arrived and began administering CPR and other life-saving procedures.

Howard County Justice of the Peace said the man, 75-year-old Orville Bryant, was pronounced dead of an apparent heart attack a short time later at Seenic Mountain Medical Center.

"We understood he died on the way to the hospital," said Elliott, although an AMT spokesperson said she was not allowed to release that type of information.

It was obvious to a Herald reporter who arrived shortly after the ambulance left that the experience had left Elliott emotionally drained.

Elliott, who has been employed by Furr's for 14 years, said he took CPR classes in high school and during a martial arts class, but had never before found it necessary to practice what he learned.

U.S. forces grow beyond defensive role

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — American firepower on the Arabian Peninsula has grown beyond the strictly defensive role that President Bush described nine days ago in pledging to protect Saudi Arabia from Iraq.

The clearest sign of a shift toward offensive capabilities is the departure Thursday from Langley Air Force Base, Va., of F-117A stealth fighter bombers.

The stealth fighter-bombers, which saw their first combat action during December's invasion of Panama, are designed to penetrate heavily defended areas to attack vital targets. In Iraq they could hit supply depots or key oil facilities.

Military sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said plans called for sending 22 of the radar-evading fighter bombers to the Persian Gulf area.

Additional signs of a shift toward offensive status from a defensive posture:

- An armada of Marine Corps amphibious assault ships is heading for the Persian Gulf. The seaborne assault units, equipped with amphibious tracked vehicles that can travel on land at speeds of up to 50 mph, are designed for offensive as well as defensive operations. They are supported by a variety of aircraft, including the F-18 Hornet, a ground attack airplane also capable of air-to-air combat.
- The Air Force said B-52 bombers have been sent overseas since the start of the gulf crisis.

Leaders share views and news

By DEBBIE LINCECUM

Representatives from city and county agencies and local businesses gave reports at a Communication Roundtable Thursday. The meetings, started after a 1988 Chamber of Commerce planning retreat, are organized quarterly by Howard College President Bob Riley.

Riley noted that representatives from the VA Hospital were unable to attend, as were Howard County officials.

- Michael Fitzpatrick, warden of the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, updated the group on the progress of the prison's conversion to a Level II security rating. The new prisoners are expected to begin arriving next month, he said.

The prison recently received approval to add 55 new jobs of various specialties, Fitzpatrick said.

- Ed Moughon, assistant superintendent of the Big Spring State Hospital, said the hospital is undergoing several remodeling projects, including remodeling rooms for patient privacy. Other work, such as landscaping projects, repainting, and carpeting of existing buildings, is planned.

Plans for a new patient education and rehabilitation building have been developed, and construction is expected to start around Christmas of this year, Moughon said.

The planned relocation of the outpatient clinic, Howard County Mental Health Services, is moving forward, he said. The clinic will be located downtown on the corner of Fourth and Runnels Streets.

Moughon said the hospital's budget for next year was increased by $1.2 million, allowing a staffing increase of three new physicians and 12 out-patient care employees. The hospital has proposed adding a new adolescent unit next year, he said.

- Bill McQueary, superintendent of Big Spring schools, said the board's decision to consider building two new schools has apparently created some public concern. The administration plans to advise the board on the issue by February, following an analysis and evaluation of several determining factors, he said.

"The biggest concern by far has been 'What are you going to do with Runnels Junior High School?'" he said. "I have to say I really don't know at this point."

- Don Reynolds of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce said the agency is actively seeking an executive director and has a candidate in mind. In the economic development area, a plastics manufacturer is reportedly looking at a possible location in the area.

Drug sale nets 99-year term

HENDERSON (AP) — A Rusk County first offender got a tough prison sentence — 99 years — for selling two-tenths of a gram of crack cocaine to an undercover police officer.

It was the longest sentence in a drug case in recent years, court observers said, and surprising because Alma Sherman, 44, had no previous criminal record.

"This sends a message to the whole drug community in Rusk County people are not tolerating this any more," Assistant District Attorney Bill Saban said.

The jury deliberated half an hour before finding Ms. Sherman guilty of the first degree felony. The same jury took an hour to decide her sentence.

"We expected some time, but we didn't expect the maximum," prosecutor Kyle Freeman said. "This is the longest sentence handed down in recent memory."

The rich get even richer

AUSTIN (AP) — The price tag for joining the 100 richest Texans is going up.

According to Texas Monthly magazine's new listing of the Texas 100, it took a $120 million fortune to qualify this year — a $20 million jump from 1989.

"A unit — $100 million — just isn't what it used to be," the magazine declared Thursday.

Texas' oil output is declining, its real estate bust has bankrupted thousands, and it leads the nation in savings and loan failures. But the really rich are doing just fine.

"Fierce competition bumped 21 of last year's rich-listers off this year's list — and 21 even wealthier Texans have taken their place," Texas Monthly said. And the magazine said its estimated net worths were conservative.

Of the 79 repeating rich, 40 ranked higher this year than last. Only 10 repeaters dropped in the dollar derby.

Houston smoggiest city in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal government report shows Houston's air quality continues to be state's worst and that the city metropolitan area is one of four areas in Texas where the smog levels topped federal standards last year.

The report Thursday from the Environmental Protection Agency showed smog levels in the Houston-Galveston-Brazoria area exceeded the federal standard an average of 12.2 days per year from 1987 through 1989. A previous survey, for 1986 through 1988, showed levels were exceeded an average of eight days.

The survey also found Beaumont-Port Arthur passed the federal standard an average 3.7 days per year, Dallas-Fort Worth 3.5 days and El Paso 7.9 days. El Paso also overstepped carbon monoxide standards for five days.

Under the Clean Air Act, which is up for revision, Houston and other cities exceeding air pollution limits may be required to, among other things, increase auto emission inspections and require tailpipe tests.

Texans, Australian flee Kuwait

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

Driven by an Australian and a tongue-in-cheek desire to be home for Christmas, a Texas couple raced across the heavily armed Kuwaiti desert in a stolen all-terrain vehicle as they fled that country for Saudi Arabia.

About 30 well-wishers and family members greeted Bill and Sharon Gilbert as they arrived Thursday afternoon at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport on a flight from London. The Gilberts, who lived in the Central Texas town of Salado before leaving for the Middle East three months ago, fled Kuwait early Monday morning.

"Texas never looked so good," Gilbert, 55, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Freedom has a new meaning."

The couple joked with reporters and relatives about their tense two-hour escape.

"We decided we didn't want to spend Christmas in Kuwait or Iraq, so we left Monday morning at 5 o'clock," Gilbert said.

"We just said, 'We've come this far, y'all want to go for it?' And we said, 'Let's go for it.' So (the Australian) floored that car and we went between two tanks." — Bill Gilbert.

The American businessman and his wife were helped out the country by an Australian they knew only as "Wild Max."

"They said are you ready to go, and I said, 'This Australian will drive. He's a bush driver,'" said Mrs. Gilbert, 54.

The couple said they saw no atrocities committed by occupying Iraqi troops. "They were kind to us," Mrs. Gilbert said. "They kind of ignored us and we ignored them."

But the Gilberts said they sensed that the time was right to get out and decided to leave in a bullet-riddled all-terrain vehicle they found with half its front and rear windows blown out.

At one point the group sped toward a line of Iraqi tanks, but were determined not to turn back.

"We just said, 'We've come this far, y'all want to go for it?' And we said, 'Let's go for it.' So (the Australian) floored that car and we went between two tanks."

'Hunt' quarry: What's the fuss?

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — An inmate pursued by dogs as the quarry on a top state prison official's "Ultimate Hunt" says he's puzzled by all the hoopla over disclosure of the chase.

"Really, it's insignificant," Alvin Hughes, 47, says of his role as the bait in what he calls a dog training exercise that occurred last year with Jerry Hodge, the vice chairman of the Texas prison board, and two of Hodge's hunting buddies.

"The only thing I was concerned about was doing my job. I can't understand what is the big deal here."

"I feel he was just doing his job. He wanted to see what was going on with this dog business. I don't really feel like he did anything wrong, but who am I to say?"

Hodge has been under fire since disclosure of the incident earlier this week.

Sources have said Gov. Bill Clements planned to name Hodge chairman of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice on Tuesday, but delayed the announcement after the revelations. Clements, however, denied Hodge had been selected to succeed Charles Terrell, who is stepping down Sept. 1.

Hodge, 47, a former Amarillo mayor, acknowledged taking friends along on the dog-training exercise in which inmates were tracked down. He said he later sent his companions jackets bearing the inscription "Ultimate Hunt."

Hodge has defended his attending the exercise and said the inmates all were volunteers and never were endangered. But while denying any impropriety, Hodge has acknowledged the jackets were a mistake.

Texas prison inmates long have been used as quarry for dog exercises, and officials have defended it as an effective tool in teaching the animals to hunt down prison escapees.

"I know that most people outside of this job don't ever know what we're doing," Hughes, of Dallas, said Thursday in an interview at the Ellis I Unit northeast of Huntsville, where he is serving a life sentence for burglary, his fifth prison term and second life sentence.

"I do it every day. The most important thing is that they find me," he said of the tracking dogs, which he cares for. "Wherever we go, they go."

Oil companies lift price freeze

NEW YORK (AP) — Two oil companies that had frozen wholesale fuel prices as consumers cried foul over steep increases at the pump lifted the moratorium, citing competitive pressure.

Spokesmen for the Amoco Corp. and Unocal Corp. declined to say whether the one-week price freezes caused losses. Amoco and Unocal said they would monitor prices daily and that increases were possible.

President Bush, in a televised address, last week called on the nation's oil companies to hold down pump prices and not take advantage of market jitters and rising crude oil prices following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Amoco and Unocal were among several big oil companies to freeze or lower wholesale prices. The reductions did not directly affect retail prices at gas stations, which by federal law set their own prices.

"There remains a lot of upward pressure," Amoco spokesman Michael Thompson said Thursday. "We'll be watching the marketplace in the days to come and we'll see what happens."

Sailors question nuclear safety

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Four sailors have lost their clearance to work on nuclear ships because they publicly questioned nuclear reactor program safety on the aircraft carrier Nimitz instead of telling superiors, Navy officials said.

The sailors have been temporarily assigned to the ship's engineering department, received pay cuts, and will eventually be assigned to another post because the Navy no longer trusts them to work around reactors, Navy spokesman Cmdr. Bob Pritchard said Thursday.

"The commanding officer lost confidence in their ability to perform," Pritchard said. "They would be made available for reassignment to another ship or installation, depending on their qualifications."

But family members awaiting the Nimitz's arrival today at North Island Naval Air Station contend the Navy made scapegoats of the men without adequately investigating their complaints.

Trump Case to be decided Tuesday

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The state casino board today said it would hold off ruling on Donald Trump's financial restructuring until next Tuesday despite his attorneys' pleas that a quick ruling was needed to save off a possible bankruptcy.

Valerie Armstrong, acting chairwoman of the Casino Control Commission, said the panel realizes the importance of a quick decision but said it needed more time to look over the more than 1,000 pages of documents detailing a $65 million emergency loan granted to Trump in June by banks.

"As far as I am concerned, this is expedited," Ms. Armstrong said.

On Thursday, Trump attorney Thomas Cerabino had said that if the panel delays making its ruling for a week, the plan could fall apart because the delay could trigger a string of defaults. But today, Ed Tracy, president of the developer's three Atlantic City casinos, played down any such talk. Asked about the effects of the delay until Tuesday, Tracy said "Nothing specifically. It's merely a delay."

Palestinian support

NABLUS, Occupied West Bank — Masked Palestinians waved an Iraqi flag while carrying a large Palestinian flag during a pro-Iraq demonstration Thursday in the West Bank city of Nablus. About 300 demonstrators marched through the Nablus casbah chanting "Saddam, go on, we will support it."

College students serve as interns near border

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Eleven U.S. students have spent the summer near the Mexican border listening to horror stories and trying to give them happy endings.

They weren't studying fiction — they're trainee human rights activists.

The students from colleges across the nation served as interns for Amnesty International. For 10 weeks, they worked on behalf of asylum-seekers who claim to be fleeing harassment, torture and death squads from Haiti to El Salvador.

"The people who are fleeing their countries are fleeing because of human rights abuses there, or fleeing because of war there," she said. "But those human rights abuses and those wars are really supported by the United States government."

They will take back memories of those they helped. Among them was a Honduran soldier who said he was beaten for refusing to torture prisoners, and a Guatemalan who said he fled after seeing soldiers shoot to death his cousin.

Amnesty International said its "Asylum Summer" program tries to help asylum-seekers from being deported and becoming abuse victims.

The students, ages 18 to 23, trained in southern Texas with human rights organizations and helped prepare legal cases.

In one case, a 17-year-old Salvadoran army deserter won asylum with help from students assigned to ProBAR, a legal aid office in Harlingen.

Melissa Jameson, 19, a sophomore at the University of Redlands in Redlands, Calif., said the man was forcibly recruited, then "made to torture and kill animals for training. They had to bite the necks of vultures and dogs."

"Then the trainers cut off the arm of a human body and played with it like a toy," Jameson said. "They said this will make you more of a man, and when he cried they said you're going to have to get used to this."

The man, whom she did not identify, claimed he would be tortured or killed by government forces or harassed by guerrillas if sent back.

In another case, asylum was denied to a Honduran who said he was forcibly recruited into the army at 14 and was beaten and tortured when he refused to torture prisoners. The youth, who is appealing the denial of asylum, also said he feared being tortured if returned home.

Salvadorans want human rights

Salvadoran rebel leaders say they will ask President Alfredo Cristiani to accept U.N. human rights observers as a condition for an immediate cease-fire in El Salvador's decade-old civil war.

The proposal will be presented later today when the latest round of peace talks begins in San Jose, according to Miguel Saenz, a spokesman for the leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front.

"If the Salvadoran government accepts that such a commission oversee observance of human rights in the country, then agreement could be reached for a cease-fire at this meeting," Saenz said Thursday.

The five-day meeting, under U.N. mediation, is the fourth round of talks between the rebels and the government since Cristiani took office last year.

The previous rounds ended in deadlock, with the government insisting the rebels enter into a cease-fire agreement before any other issues were discussed.

Outlook bleak for U.S. hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Shiite Moslem leader says the U.S. military intervention in Saudi Arabia "leaves no chance" for a quick release of any Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

But Hussin Musawi, a reputed mentor of pro-Iranian kidnap factions in Lebanon, said Thursday that a Western European hostage might be freed soon.

Musawi spoke hours after the leftist Beirut newspaper As-Safir said all 14 Western hostages held in Lebanon, including six Americans, will be freed by year's end.

"I think there is a demarcation line between American and European hostages," Musawi said in a telephone interview from his home in Baalbek.

"I think the American occupation of Saudi Arabia leaves no chance for an early release of the American captives. But there is a chance the case of the European hostages might shortly ease up."

Dominican president defends plan

JOAQUIN BALAGUER

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Setting out on his sixth term in office, President Joaquin Balaguer has asked Dominicans to cooperate with an austerity plan that touched off deadly protests this week.

Balaguer, 83 and blind from glaucoma, defended his austerity plan during the ceremony Thursday.

"As I assume another term, I am obligated not to make promises, but to point out the changes that are needed to make the government work," the conservative president said in his inaugural address.

The nationwide strike Monday and Tuesday brought this Caribbean nation of 7 million people to a near-standstill. Clashes between protesters and security forces left at least 11 dead and 50 wounded. Police arrested 2,000 protesters.

Balaguer narrowly defeated his longtime leftist rival, Juan Bosch, in an election May 16. Bosch, 81, who accused Balaguer of widespread voter fraud, did not attend the inauguration.

High flying

Frank Lorenzo is among the living symbols of the booming, over-leveraged '80s in America. A few days ago, he sold his stock in Continental (the holding company for all his airlines), stepped down as chairman and exited the field, leaving all the wreckage behind him. And that may well turn out to be symbolic of the '90s.

Lorenzo's control of Texas Air and New York Air and then Continental and then People Express and Frontier and Eastern — until, at one point, he ran the biggest airline conglomerate in the world — was a wobbly achievement built of the favorite Tinkertoys of the Reagan era: deregulation, junk bonds, hostile takeovers, strategic bankruptcies, union-busting. For a while, it all seemed to hold together. That's when Lorenzo was hailed as a corporate hero, by the people who spent those years hailing such things, for bringing creativity, efficiency and (briefly) profitability to a dowdy old American industry. And Lorenzo's low fares were, as the rhetoric of the day promised, a boon to consumers, too.

But eventually, the overwhelming debts, the management turnovers (seven chief executives of this empire in seven years), the service cuts and safety violations and, maybe most devastating in the end, the labor strife, took their toll. With Eastern's unions picketing Lorenzo's home and its creditors in bankruptcy court demanding his ouster, the game stopped being fun some time ago.

There's no need to feel too sorry for the former mogul. He sold his stake to Scandinavian Air Systems for $30 million. Raking in $14 a share for his stock, on a day when the market price for anyone else's Continental shares was only $4.50 (down from $23 a year ago), Lorenzo didn't exactly suffer. But there's another ending to this story as well: at least one airline likely to fold and several others in dire straits; serious personal losses for thousands of employees, creditors and investors; a less diverse and competitive industry than before all this started; and, of course, higher prices for consumers.

Eastern Airlines, insistent defenders of the economic sensibility of the '80s, was a hopeless mess before deregulation, before leveraged buy-outs, before Lorenzo ever got near it. And that's probably true. What the '90s have to cope with, however, is a mess far, far larger — a mess not just at Eastern and Continental, but in virtually every industry touched by the heedless corporate "creativity" of the era that made Frank Lorenzo.

The writer's art

Safire's painless pedantry

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

On any given Sunday, according to the Audit Bureau of Circulation, 1,628,056 persons will read The New York Times. It seems a reasonable assumption that every one of these readers will read William Safire's weekly column, "On Language." After all, for what other reason would one buy the Sunday New York Times?

That is a hefty audience, to be sure, but it falls short. Obviously millions of other potential readers are out there somewhere, and all of them could benefit from my brother Safire's wit and wisdom. Let them be of good cheer. The summer brings from Safire's free-flowing pen not one, but two books on language. (Actually the books come from Doubleday, but no matter.) Let me commend them to every aspiring writer.

The heftier of the two is "Language Maven Strikes Again." Like its five predecessors, this is a collection of Safire's Sunday columns, delightfully garnished with letters from his readers. The pleasant thing about Brother William is that he takes language seriously, but never too seriously.

Thus he takes up any topic that even tangentially touches the prose art. At random, one finds him discussing the origin and use of that splendid verb, to slam-dunk. He is abashed to discover that "inartful" is a familiar adjective, even if standard dictionaries do not include it. He examines the idiomatic phrase, "to cry uncle," meaning to yield. He looks at the subtle distinctions between "one on one" and "head to head." Give Safire a field of language, and he is off and running.

His second book of the summer, scheduled for September publication, may properly be described as a little book. It is a collection of 50 "Fumblerules." This would be my book of choice to give to anyone who aspires to be a writer but hasn't the time or the discipline to work hard at the task.

Here Safire begins by debunking one of the legendary Miss Thistlebottom's hobgoblins. This fabled schoolmarm instructed her pupils never to traffic in sentence fragments. She wanted a subject, a verb and preferably an object. Otherwise, in her view, there was no sentence at all. Safire's reasonable comment is that an occasional sentence fragment may produce a desirable "rhetorical effect." Precisely so.

Here is another of his fumblerules: "Avoid run-on sentences they are hard to read." He offers sound advice: "Last but not least, avoid cliches like the plague." He reminds us not to make verbs out of such nouns as "gift," but he approves "to con-verbs. Ah, says Safire truthfully, there are times when slam-bang sentences cannot be justified. An occasion may demand more diplomacy than boldness. Now and then even the most vigorous stylist should be persuaded to lower his voice.

Let me remark one notable omission. Safire warns against writing dialect, but he forgot to lay down a specific reminder on the matter of foreign words and phrases. If these are to be used at all in English composition, they should be used sparingly and accurately. In Franklin, Ind., a surveyor who had fought in France in World War I decided to add a touch of class to a subdivision he was plating. In Paris the famed boulevard may be Les Champs Elysees, but in Franklin, Ind., the street sign reads "Champ Ulysses."

Let me put Bill Safire in high cotton: His 50 fumblerules are in a class with E.B. White's justly famed "suggestions" in that classic work, "Elements of Style." Any would-be writer who takes the fumblerules to heart will be a better writer. I can say this without fear of contradiction (cliche) because I have been expounding these very same reminders myself.

tact" as an acceptable substitute for "to get in touch with."

On the matter of "repetitive redundancies," Safire sensibly waffles. It is true that such phrases as "nape of the neck" and "small hamlet" could be trimmed, for a nape is a nape and all hamlets are small. Similarly, all gifts are free, all geezers are old, all bombers are attack bombers, and we gain nothing by writing of a bouquet "of flowers." How else would you make a bouquet? But as he remarks, some redundant phrases have become so tightly fused that no crowbars of reason will pry them apart. He does condemn "basic essentials" as a phrase that is "circular in shape, colorless in color, and stupid in nature."

My brother also condones the passive voice as a device for deliberate obfuscation. All the textbooks on writing urge us to use the active voice, to be forceful, to smack our targets with action

"Mr. President, aren't you sad as you boast about democracy that your allies are the retarded, thieves and liars among the Arabs, while the believers, the warriors and the elite be on the opposite side? But despite all that, we will continue to pray, and pray hard, that there will be no confrontation by which you will receive thousands of Americans wrapped in sad coffins after you had pushed them into a dark tunnel." — President Saddam Hussein of Iraq, in an open letter to President Bush.

Historians don't think Middle East crisis is a new Vietnam

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Saddam Hussein's takeover of Kuwait wasn't 24 hours old when the Senate interrupted its business to deplore it and denounce him. But what was that echo in the chamber?

Why did a senator or two refer — in a looking-over-his-shoulder way — to the "Gulf of Tonkin Resolution"?

Why did minds turn back to an August debate 26 years ago? In that debate, the Senate, over the misgivings of only two senators, reacted to reports that U.S. Navy vessels had been attacked off North Vietnam's coast by authorizing President Lyndon Johnson "to prevent further aggression."

LBJ used that resolution as the equivalent of a declaration of war, the basis on which he sent 250,000 American soldiers to fight an Asian war, America's longest war, the first it lost.

Almost by stealth, America was sucked into a guerrilla war on the side of an unpopular government. Johnson hoped each escalation would be enough — only to find that each, instead, made withdrawal more difficult.

And Vietnam deteriorated into a quagmire, an inextricable situation. The United States couldn't win and couldn't quit.

Is the gulf crisis another quagmire in the making, another place where U.S. forces can't win and can't get out, stuck in 100 degree heat, unable to do more than wait to react to Saddam Hussein? Does history offer some guidance here?

Capitol report

For the most part, historians familiar with the region and with the ways war develop are more optimistic than that. They find some similarities to Vietnam. But they draw encouragement from some big differences.

"Not the least of which," said John Gaddis, diplomatic historian at Ohio University in Athens, Ohio, "is that this thing really is a multinational effort that grows out of a rather shocking provocation — and neither was true in Vietnam."

Bernard Lewis, a retired Princeton University historian and author of 20 books on the Islamic world, said Saddam Hussein made a crucial miscalculation last weekend. He sought to turn his invasion of Iraq into a religious crusade; instead, said Lewis, he only "succeeded in isolating himself even in the Arab world."

If his maneuver had worked, Saddam might have made his battle into an Arab-against-the-West struggle. Instead, he made it the world-against-Iraq, Lewis said.

Saddam called for a jihad, a religious war, for the Arab masses to rise up against their leaders. And he did it just as the leaders were assembled in a summit in Cairo.

produced this call to jihad," said Lewis. "This was a direct challenge. It was an act of desperation."

In response, the leaders of Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia and the other oil states of the Persian Gulf, in an extraordinary rebuff to a fellow Arab, decided to send a military force to protect Saudi Arabia from Saddam.

In Vietnam, by contrast, America's allies, even in Asia, largely limited their support to the sidelines. Only Australia, New Zealand, Thailand and Korea sent sizeable combat contingents.

Political scientist Nathan Brown, a Mideast specialist at George Washington University, said quagmire in the Persian Gulf may be "the best we can hope for," considering the alternatives — a humiliating U.S. withdrawal or a military offensive against the Iraqis in Kuwait, requiring a scale of warfare "that is politically impossible."

Brown questions whether the Bush administration thought through its options.

Even if Iraq gains enough control in the region to restrict petroleum output and boost the price, "I'm not sure the repercussions are serious enough to say our national security is at stake," Brown said.

"The worst that people are talking about is a recession," Brown said. "We've lived through recessions before. That doesn't really affect our national security."

fall into Egypt's hands. But that's what happened. Eleven years later, in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, the canal was closed for seven years — "and nobody noticed."

But Lewis views the threat of Saddam controlling the oilfields of Iraq, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia as graver than that.

"You simply can't allow this man to obtain a stranglehold on the world's supplies," he said.

George Herring, a University of Kentucky historian of the Vietnam war, said he sees in the Persian Gulf one big similarity to Vietnam and one big difference.

The difference, he said, is that the American commitment to Vietnam was slow and as concealed as Lyndon Johnson could manage. It grew from a few hundred U.S. troops sent to advise the French in the 1950s to more than 200,000 troops, engaged in full-fledged combat in July 1965.

In contrast, the Persian Gulf operations has been "sudden and dramatically large," Herring said. Where Johnson sought to underplay the buildup, President Bush broadcasts his determination to commit whatever force it takes to pry Iraq out of Kuwait.

The similarity, Herring said, is in "the nature of the beast you are dealing with. All the Vietnam policymakers have admitted in the last 10 or 15 years that the crucial mistake they made was underestimating the enemy and the enemy's willingness to make huge sacrifices."

in the French war against the Vietnamese."

Gaddis said the proper analogy is Korea, not Vietnam. Then, as now, he said, there was a swift cross-border invasion. Then as now, it was met by a multinational, U.N.-backed, response.

Korea became an American quagmire, too, but Gaddis sees a crucially different factor at play this time.

"Korea proved difficult to get out of but what kept us there was Chinese intervention in November 1950," he said. "What's interesting this time is that this is the first crisis where the great powers have all been in agreement. Saddam Hussein doesn't have that ability to play the superpowers against each other. It's been a most remarkable thing, the unanimity that Bush has been able to rally behind him."

Kenneth Oye of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, an expert on economic warfare, also finds remarkable the degree of compliance Bush has commanded so far in his call for an international embargo against Iraq.

But he questions the staying power of nations for whom sanctions against Iraq — and life without oil from Iraq and Kuwait — will be painful.

"If Saddam Hussein makes no big moves, doesn't use poison gas, doesn't go into Jordan, doesn't stage air raids on the Turkish border, if he just sits tight, I suspect that international support for sanctions will lose ground," Oye says. "And if they are not universally supported they lose their effectiveness."

He notes how President Jimmy Carter's grain embargo to punish the Soviet Union for its Afghanistan invasion became so unpopular with farmers that Ronald Reagan used it as an issue in his campaign against Carter.

Lewis concurs that patience is the key. He says Saddam clearly hopes the American people and business, with their famously short attention span, ultimately will pressure Bush to bring the boys home — just as public opinion ultimately forced the United States to find a face-saving formula for leaving Vietnam with the war unwon.

But this time he thinks it won't work. "My guess is that the Iraqis will break under the pressure of sanctions before American patience wears out. But that's the key question."

Bush compares Saddam not to Ho Chi Minh, the ideologically driven strategist who commanded communist forces in Vietnam, but to Adolf Hitler, a dictator who invaded his neighbors to enlarge his fascist Reich.

Historians Lewis and Gaddis find the comparison apt.

"I think what happened (in Kuwait) is very much the decision of one irrational leader and not some new trend in world politics," said Gaddis. "It is almost a reversion to the way leaders used to act in the 1930s."

Said Lewis: "If one can invade another country and get away with it, we're back in the 1930s, we're back in the international jungles. Then the world will belong to the violent and the ruthless."

Youth revival Event geared for teen-agers

Special to the Herald
College Baptist Church, 1105 Birdwell Lane, will host an area youth revival Sunday through Thursday.

At the beginning of 1990, the youth of College Baptist Church dedicated it to be "The Year Of The Lost Friend" and vowed to concentrate more than they ever had before on bringing their peers to Christianity, said Rick Hope, minister of youth.

The youth have participated on witnessing trips to the Midland Mall, and several door-to-door visitations. They also participated at an evangelism school in Plainview this past June.

Several of them have made commitments to stand for their beliefs this year when school begins, Hope explained. To remind them of their commitments, and to get other youth in the area to join with them, they have organized a youth revival.

The theme of the revival is

... the youth of College Baptist Church dedicated it to be "The Year Of The Lost Friend" and vowed to concentrate more than they ever had before on bringing their peers to Christianity.
— Rick Hope, minister of youth.

"The Main Event," which focuses on the spiritual battle between God and Satan that goes on today in the lives of Christian youth, Hope said.

Evangelists for the event include Jonathan Woody, Hewitt; Chet Haney, Big Spring; Jason Martin, Monahans; and John Gonzales from Cisco. Musical evangelists include Tracey Farrell, Big Spring; and Ronnie Foster, Hobbs, N.M.

The revival is geared for teenagers from grades 7-12. Even the stage has been decorated for the occasion. The revival concludes on Thursday with musical "Hi Tops" presented by the College Baptist Youth Choir under the direction of Debra Lewis.

The Sunday night revival service begins at 7 p.m. All other services begin at 7:30 p.m.

A fellowship will follow each service. The public is invited to attend.

Religion roundup

DALLAS (AP) — An art expert says stolen German treasures stored at Dallas Museum of Art rank among the world's rarest and most important religious artifacts.

One of the treasures may contain material linked to the Virgin Mary, said Dietrich Koetzche of the Kunstgewerbe Museum in Berlin.

He visited Dallas to study the relics for a German church that claims to own them. They were believed to have been taken from a mine shaft at Quedlinburg, East Germany, near the end of World War II by a soldier from Texas.

The objects "rank among the three most significant medieval church treasures in Germany," he told the Dallas Times Herald. Joe Meador, the soldier, died in 1980, leaving the art to his brother and sister. It later was turned over to the museum.

Officials say most of the treasures were reliquaries or containers used to hold relics. Koetzche said he believes some small reliquaries hold items belonging to the Virgin Mary, possibly including a lock of her hair.

CAROL STREAM, Ill. (AP) — William Bentley Ball, a noted religious-rights attorney, urges Roman Catholics and evangelical Protestants to become partners in opposing trends toward secularism.

Ball, a Catholic, writes in the evangelical fortnightly, Christianity Today, that evangelicals and Catholics share positions in opposing the breakdown of sexual morality, affirming the sanctity of life, rejecting abortion and euthanasia, favoring parental choice in schooling and supporting religious efforts to influence political decisions.

SPRING GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — A Jewish scholar says Orthodox Judaism, one of three major branches of the faith, is on the rise despite "Orthodox bashing by its detractors."

Rabbi Norman Lamm, president of Yeshiva University, told a recent convention of the Rabbinical Council of America, representing Orthodox rabbis, that "Orthodox bashing appears to have abated, but it is still powerful."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Membership in the United Methodist Church declined during 1989 to 8,873,638, down about 68,000. But that loss was 7,000 less than the year before, the denomination reports.

The denomination, second largest in U.S. Protestantism, had a peak membership of more than 11 million in 1968. But like most mainline Protestant bodies, it has declined in size for the last 22 years.

Money's not everything

NEW YORK (AP) — More money, often singled out as the key to improving schools, apparently in itself doesn't do the job.

That's the conclusion of two different recent studies, one secular, the other religious. They say cohesive purpose, less centralized bureaucracy and parental choice are what count.

"When it comes to education, money is not the panacea many politicians and educators would have us believe," says Brother Robert Kealey, chief researcher for a study by the National Catholic Educational Association.

"Placing more trust in teachers and parents is the key."

This also is the general thrust of a recent study by the Brookings Institution of Washington, D.C., in calling for a reformed system open to parental choice of schools and competition among them.

"Money is not what makes some schools more effective than others," says the study, contending that reduced bureaucratic constraints and more freedom in decision-making about instruction and discipline are what gets better results. The book long study, "Politics, Markets and America's Schools," by John Chubb, a Brookings fellow, and Terry Moe, a Stanford University political scientist, says the U.S. education system is hobbled by top-heavy regulations.

"Private schools — which outperform public schools, on the average — also tend to spend less than the public schools do in educating their students," the study says. "They get better schools for less money."

That — with figures to back it up — also is the contention of a study by the NCEA, which compares consolidated financial figures from U.S. Catholic elementary schools and from the National Center for Education Statistics.

"The economies in the Catholic school network are related most directly to the leadership responsibility placed in the hands of Catholic school principals and teachers," says Sister Catherine T. McNamee, NCEA president. "Their empowerment and their success — precludes the need for high administrative costs."

The Rev. Morris Chapman stands in front of the First Baptist Church in Wichita Falls where he pastored for 11 years. Chapman, 49, was recently elected president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Baptist leader insists on fixed view of Bible

By JOHN A. BOLT
 Associated Press Writer

WICHITA FALLS — The Rev. Dr. Morris H. Chapman puts it bluntly: "For us, not to believe in inerrancy is not to believe in God."

Chapman, new president of the nation's 14.9 million Southern Baptists, says he will follow recent predecessors in appointing to denominational positions only those who believe the Bible is literally without error in all respects — in history and science as well as religion.

For that fixed view, the battle to control the nation's largest Protestant denomination is over: the fundamentalists have won.

So says the polished Chapman, and so say the beaten moderates, who have failed to elect one of their own as president for 12 straight years. Chapman's victory at June's annual meeting in New Orleans was by the largest margin for a non-incumbent since fundamentalists began their crusade in 1979.

Moderates talk more and more about leaving the convention and founding a new denomination. A meeting is planned soon to discuss options.

"Many of us are ceasing to think of ourselves as Southern Baptists... It has become a new denomination," said the Rev. Stan Haste, executive director of the Southern Baptist Alliance, one moderate group.

Jimmy Allen, head of another, Baptists Committed to the Southern Baptist Convention, suggests that instead of breaking away, moderates will reduce contributions to the denomination and directly fund programs abandoned or cut by fundamentalists.

Chapman knows that what may happen, but said, "God will honor his people for standing upon truth... God will provide for God's people."

At the 7,700-member First Baptist Church in Wichita Falls that Chapman has pastored since 1979, hallway conversations can be overheard discussing "Bible-believing preaching," a code word for inerrancy.

Chapman says his sermons stress "Christ crucified" and rarely deal with secular issues.

The goal is to save souls, he said, proud of his average of 169 baptisms a year since 1979, among the highest in the denomination.

"He is a super guy, with a lot of depth and scriptural authority," said 40-year-old Steve Cookingham, a deacon who has been a member of the church since he was 11. "He won't compromise the truth."

Tom Banks, a local judge and another deacon, said he believes Chapman will help ease the denominational fighting because "I don't think he will manipulate the situation."

But others doubt Chapman will ease the rift.

Cramps, fever early clues to rare bowel disease

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, our 13-year-old son, Josh, who had always been a healthy, active boy, started having sharp stomach pains and a constant fever. It was the beginning of a nightmare that lasted nine months.

Physicians in our small town told us that Josh had a "nervous" stomach. We were asked if he was having trouble in school. He wasn't. Then the doctors suggested that it was stress, common in adolescents, and would probably pass. It didn't. Josh's condition rapidly grew worse. He lost his appetite and, in a few weeks, he dropped 25 pounds! Seriously alarmed, we went to more doctors. They told us that his symptoms were "imaginary" — and suggested Josh needed psychological "counseling."

Our happy, outgoing son became more and more withdrawn. His friends grew impatient with him. His teachers accused us of coddling him, and complained of his frequent absence from school.

In desperation, I took Josh to a pediatric gastroenterologist in a nearby town, where he was immediately hospitalized and put on intravenous feeding. He was diagnosed as having inflammatory bowel disease, a collective term for Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis. We were told that an estimated

2 million Americans — of which 200,000 are children — have it. Although the cause is not known, and thus far there is no known cure for it, the symptoms can be controlled by medication.

Today, Josh is back at school and actively involved in sports. His disease is now under control, and we have a happy, energetic son once more.

For nine months, I painfully watched my son's health slowly deteriorate. Other parents can be spared my experience by simply being aware of the early warning signs of inflammatory bowel disease:

- Persistent diarrhea;
- Abdominal pain or cramps;
- Blood passing through the rectum;
- Fever and weight loss;
- Skin or eye irritation;

• Delayed growth and retarded sexual maturation. — JOSH'S MOTHER, WILMINGTON, OHIO
DEAR MOTHER: Thank you for writing so that I can alert other parents.

Readers, if you or anyone you know has the above symptoms, help is available: Call the National Foundation for Ileitis and Colitis at its toll-free number: 1-800-343-3637. They will send you a list of doctors in your area who specialize in treating inflammatory bowel disease. Also available are free educational brochures, and the location of local chapters that sponsor seminars and support groups.

DEAR ABBY: I do volunteer work at a very large medical center. I feel very good about it. We have 400 volunteers at this hospital, and we all feel very proud of what we do for the patients. The other day, I was with a group of women (not at the hospital) and several of them said they thought I was foolish for working at the hospital for nothing. One woman said she would never do that kind of work — she was paid for her time.

Abby, what do you think of a remark like that? — LONGTIME VOLUNTEER

DEAR VOLUNTEER: You rattled the right cage. "B.C." (Before Column), I worked as a "Gray Lady" for the American Red Cross — training women to work in hospitals — and it was one of the most rewarding experiences of my life.

The rewards that come from volunteer work are far more valuable than any monetary compensation.

Researchers say teen pregnancy rates down, but . . .

By MARIO CRISTALDI
Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The birth rate among teen-agers has dropped over the last three decades, but the news isn't all good, researchers say.

More teens are actually getting pregnant, and the birth rate is just being offset by more abortions, according to experts here for the American Sociological Association's annual meeting.

They also stressed that many more of today's adolescent mothers are unmarried than they were a generation ago.

"The birth rate is clearly going down for teens, but that can be deceptive," said Wendy Baldwin, of the Center for Population Research in Bethesda, Md.

"Problems can get smaller, but harder," she said, a good-news-bad-news theme echoed by other specialists in adolescent sexuality who took part in a panel discussion Wednesday.

For example, the birth rate for 15- to 19-year-olds plunged more than 40 percent from 1960 to 1987, to 51 births per 1,000 young women.

But at the same time, the rate of unmarried teens bearing children doubled, to 34 births per 1,000, reflecting the overall U.S. trend of more women postponing or forgoing marriage.

That translates into about 470,000 babies born to unwed teen mothers every year, said Kristin A. Moore, of the Washington-based Child Trends, Inc.

"The income of these young women is extremely low, often much too low to support a family," Moore said.

The "life outcomes" of teen mothers is generally worse than the lives of women who delay having children, according to Moore's research. "Teen mothers tend to come from disadvantaged backgrounds, so part of their disadvantage as a parent stems from the fact that they were more likely to be poor or doing poorly in school," Moore said.

Figures show that girls aged 10 to 17 give birth every three minutes in the United States. The South has traditionally shown the highest teen pregnancy and birth rates, accounting for about half of the babies born to teen mothers.

In 1987, the most recent year for which figures are available, the highest rates of pregnancies in the 10- to 17-year-old category were in Georgia (29.6 percent) and North Carolina (29.4 percent).

Adolescent pregnancies and births costs taxpayers billions of dollars a year in welfare, medical and food assistance costs, according to lawmakers and others working to address the problem.

Among other statistics figures cited by sociologists:

The advent of AIDS prompted more contraceptive awareness and use. In 1988, 58 percent of men aged 17 to 19 said they used a condom the last time they had sex, up from just 21 percent a decade ago. The AIDS scare has not frightened teens away from sex. In fact, there were gradual increases in the level of sexual activity among young men and women during the 1980s.

In 1979, about 78 percent of men and 76 percent of women said they had sex before age 19; by 1988, the figures had risen to 97 percent of males and 81 percent of females.

U.N. sanctions have had limited impact

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Trade sanctions of the type imposed on Iraq by the United Nations are difficult to enforce and often take a long time to work.

The United Nations has only twice before imposed trade sanctions on nations — South Africa and Rhodesia. In both cases, the sanctions failed to have any immediate impact, and sometimes they helped rather than hurt the nations.

For example, the South African and Rhodesian governments both found that the international condemnation increased their internal support. The idea of fighting back against an unsympathetic world united whites in both nations.

"Let's show them. Be South African. Buy South African," said the slogan of an anti-sanctions campaign.

The U.N. Security Council voted Aug. 6 to ban most trade with Iraq to force it to pull out of Kuwait. The sanctions, the toughest imposed by the United Nations in its 45-year history, are designed to cripple the oil-dependent Iraqi economy and force a quick capitulation.

The only comparable action was when the United Nations imposed trade sanctions on Rhodesia in 1967 to force the white-minority government to share power with the black majority after it broke away from Britain. A far less harsh arms embargo was imposed on South Africa in 1977 to protest apartheid, and it is still in force.

The restrictions imposed on Iraq, such as cutting off pipelines that carry Iraqi oil, have been put in to place far more quickly and strictly than the measures imposed on Rhodesia and South Africa.

And while many U.N. members secretly violated the sanctions against Rhodesia and South Africa, the United States and other nations are using their power and extensive monitoring capabilities to ensure the sanctions against Iraq are not broken.

Ironically, the U.N. sanctions helped strengthen the Rhodesian economy at first. The country was forced to reduce dependence on imports and develop its own industries to provide vital goods. This made it stronger.

Rhodesia's economy boomed during the first year of sanctions. At least 250,000 new jobs were created and economic growth averaged about 10 percent annually in the first 10 years after Rhodesia declared independence.

South Africa became a vital conduit for Rhodesia. Oil and other commodities were shipped through South Africa, evading U.N. sanctions. Foreign businesses helped evade sanctions for high profits, and Rhodesians set up dummy foreign firms to channel imports and exports.

At least 60 U.N. nations ignored sanctions, secretly purchasing Rhodesian chrome, copper, tea and tobacco. Nations breaking sanctions included the Soviet Union, China and Czechoslovakia, which were arming the black guerrilla movements fighting the Rhodesian government.

But the wave of Rhodesian prosperity also depended on the healthy world economy during the 1960s and early 1970s. When the world economy dipped, the Rhodesian economy started to suffer, and sanctions began to bite.

South Africa, facing problems of its own, withdrew backing for Rhodesia, and ultimately sanctions began to take effect. Eventually the government was forced to capitulate in the face of growing guerrilla activity and accept elections that rums industries. Faced by a cutoff of arms imports, state companies developed everything from aircraft to warships and tanks.

South Africa's arms exports include long-range artillery to Iraq. South African military commanders have said the U.N. sanctions were a blessing in disguise for the country's military self-sufficiency.

But other sanctions imposed by Western nations on South Africa have had more of an impact. The economy has suffered from cutoffs of credit and loans from Western banks, disinvestment by foreign firms and limits on exports and imports.

"Sanctions did certainly undercut economic growth, mostly because of capital constraints," said Nico Czyplionka, chief economist of the Standard Bank.

Driftnet effect

PACIFIC OCEAN — A shearwater seabird is found drowned in a Japanese driftnet by a Greenpeace diver. Other birds were released alive by the environmentalists, on an expedition to document harm caused by the 35-mile long nets used to catch squid, tuna and salmon. It is estimated over 800,000 seabirds die annually in the nets.

Study: Alzheimer's drug useless

DENVER (AP) — A study today concludes that the only medication approved for treating Alzheimer's disease is useless.

Hydergine, the 11th most prescribed drug in the world, neither helped nor harmed the patients in the study of 80 people conducted in Denver by scientists at the University of Colorado medical school.

The findings of the study, the most extensive U.S. attempt to evaluate the drug's effects, were reported in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Hydergine is the only drug approved by the Food and Drug Administration for treatment of Alzheimer's, an incurable brain disease that slowly robs its victims of the ability to function. The drug supposedly reduces memory loss and other symptoms of dementia.

"It's a useless drug," said one of the study's authors, Dr. Christopher M. Filley, assistant professor at the medical school.

The study, begun in 1985, was paid for by the Sandoz Pharmaceuticals Corp. of East Hanover, N.J., which has manufactured and marketed Hydergine worldwide for more than 20 years. The drug costs patients about $700 a year.

Police beat

Big Spring police have determined the bullet that struck Lara Ramiro, 32, in the forearm on July 31, was self-inflicted, according to Sgt. John Leubner.

Ramiro, who has been released recently from the hospital following surgery, told police an unidentified person shot him in the 300 block of Owens Street.

Leubner said investigators believe the shooting was accidental, although they have not yet determined whether a charge of filing a false police report will be filed against Ramiro.

The police department also reported investigating the following incidents:

Election leaves Sweetwater without water solution

SWEETWATER — Guaranteeing enough water in the future remains a major problem for officials in this town of 12,500 since voters on Saturday defeated a proposition to contract for water with the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

"The need for water remains crucial today," said the city comptroller and secretary Russell Thoma. "The only thing that's changed is that voters do not consider water from the CRMWD as an option."

But at this point there are no options, he said.

"We'll have to be innovative and see what we can come up with," he said. "At this point we don't know what that will be."

The vote was 1,572 to 1,018, a 22 percent victory margin for opponents.

About 65 percent of registered voters cast ballots. "It was an excellent turnout," Thoma said.

Nevertheless, less votes were cast this time than there were in elections for similar propositions that were defeated in 1980 and 1984. About 2,800 voters voted in those elections, Thoma said.

One complaint voiced in letters to the editor of the local newspaper was the bad quality of water in Lake E.V. Spence where the contracted water would have come from, Thoma said. It's salt content, measured in chlorides, is more than three times the recommended levels set by the Texas Department of Health.

However, City Manager David Maddox said last week that the water would have been mixed with the city's current water from Lake Oak Creek at an 85 to 15 percent ratio, bringing the chloride content down to under almost half of the state recommended level.

In addition, a proposed $7 million reservoir in Mitchell County, which would draw bad water from the Colorado River and Beal's Creek, is expected to reduce the chloride content in Lake Spence by more than 25 percent, said CRMWD public information officer Joe Pickle.

Pickle said they were disappointed that voters did not accept the lifetime contract for a one-time payment of $4 million in exchange for 3,000-acre feet, about one billion gallons, of water a year. The city, which consumes about five million gallons of water daily, would have also needed to build about 20 miles of pipeline at an estimated cost of $4.1 million.

"Since the district is an area water supply, we're interested in everyone having a supply," Pickle said. The district, formed in 1949 by Big Spring, Odessa and Snyder, has water contracts with Midland, San Angelo, Abilene, Stanton, Robert Lee and Ira Dunn District lakes include Spence, B.J. Thomas and O.H. Ivie.

CRMWD General Manager O.H. Ivie said that West Texas cities that do not arrange for an adequate water supply "are going to dry on the vine."

Thoma said that economic opportunities have been lost in Sweetwater because the city cannot guarantee an adequate future water supply.

A recent example this year was a company which was considering locating a private prison in the county, he said. They withdrew the proposal saying there was a lack of water for the operation. "We couldn't guarantee it in the future," he said. "For the good of the city we'll have to come up with something. We still have a major problem."

Besides water quality, comments in letters to the local paper also indicated that some people just did not think more water was needed, Thoma said.

A city water management plan in use since 1986 has never been invoked, said City Manager David Maddox. However, there have been several curtailments on use in the past, with the last one in the early 1980s.

"This community has struggled with that obstacle, lack of water, for at least the last 20 years," Maddox said.

Right now Lake Oak Creek is about a foot over the level where water curtailment would be implemented, Thoma said. But, he said, for August, that is probably above normal.

Reynolds also noted the appearance of an article in Thursday's Dallas Morning News about an economic "comeback" for Big Spring.

• Joe Wallis of the Texas Employment Commission said unemployment is at 5 percent, a 1 percent decline from last month. The figures show a slight improvement over last year, he said.

• J.F. Poynor, superintendent of Forsan Independent School District, told the group that "comradery" is the new educational buzzword.

He said his teachers have undergone various training workshops this summer, and it was in those that he noticed the change.

• Howard College had four representatives at the meeting. Cheri Sparks, assistant to the president, said Homecoming is set for the first weekend in November (Nov. 2-4), at which time the new dorms will be inaugurated.

Terry Hansen, vice president for fiscal affairs, said the new residence hall at SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf is complete. Workers on the Howard College dorms are making "amazing leaps of progress," he said.

Riley reported that the former Webb Air Force Base NCO Club had recently become college property, to be converted into a student center and auditorium for SWCID.

Andy Hicks, vice president for vocational instruction, said the college has eight new instructional programs planned in five locations for the coming year, utilizing 30 instructors.

• Hooper Sanders, TU Electric district manager, discussed the company's 10.2 percent rate increase and the operation of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant. The plant will operate as a "base" to which others would be added as needed.

Sanders noted that Cheryl Stephens, customer operations supervisor, has been promoted and moved to the Dallas office.

• Becky Moughon, child care consultant hired to study options for the community and the college, said recent grant proposals to fund child care programs were not accepted. She said she will work on writing new grant proposals.

Moughon said she plans to explore the issue and submit community child care proposals before the next quarterly meeting.

• KBST newscaster Keith Leuty said the station is planning to boost its power to reach Midland/Odessa, though no definite date is set. A new music director has greatly increased the number of compact discs used at the station, he said.

• Coahoma City Council member David Elmore said the group's main issue of concern is the proposed waste incinerator in Mitchell County.

"We have people on both sides of the issue," he said. "They have very definitely opposing views."

Elmore, also an employee of the Texas Highway Department said state funding cuts will limit the amount of construction projects which can be completed next year.

Woman killed in one-car accident

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

Lois Underwood Franklin, 75, a former resident of Big Spring, died from massive head injuries shortly after failing to negotiate a turn as she topped Chalk Hill on FM 821 about six miles east of Forsan.

Franklin, who was following her husband eastbound as he towed a trailer home, was ejected from the 1989 Dodge Ram pickup she was driving when it hit an embankment and rolled 3 1/2 times, said Texas Highway Patrol Trooper Troy Hogue. She was not wearing a seatbelt. There were no passengers.

Her husband Clyde, also a former resident of Big Spring, said he did not even know she was missing until he got to his destination in Big Spring. He then searched for her but could not find her and finally called the hospital. "I called the hospital and she had already died," he said. "It's a shock to all of us."

He said she may have been driving too fast. "I guess she got behind and I guess she couldn't catch up," he said. "I couldn't see behind me."

Road conditions were dry and the speed limit is posted at 55 mph, Hogue said.

"I think the contributing factor was excessive speed and her unfamiliarity with that road. You can really get in trouble on that road if you're not familiar with it," he said. "Once you top this hill it immediately goes into a curve and she didn't make that curve."

She was discovered by an oilfield worker driving by at 11:45 a.m. She was unconscious but breathing, Hogue said. She later died of massive head and internal injuries at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, where she was transported by ambulance. Justice of the Peace China Long pronounced her dead at 1:25 p.m.

Franklin, who lived with her husband in Lake Brownfield, had grown up in Big Spring and lived here most of her life. She married Clyde in 1984 and moved to Lake Brownwood in 1986 but they still owned a house on Young Street in Big Spring.

"We still have property out here that we have to take care of," her husband said. They had just purchased the trailer which he was towing with a Mac diesel truck.

Franklin was preceded in death by another husband, John Underwood, who died in 1981.

B-52s conducted massive bombing raids in the Vietnam war. Also moved to within striking range of Iraq are U.S. F-111 long-range bombers in Turkey.

• The Marines are sending in 45,000 of their finest and deploying A-6E Intruder bombers used in the U.S. bombing of Libya in 1986.

"In Vietnam we phased forces in more gradually. This is assertive," said Lt. Gen. Carl Mundy, commanding general of Fleet Marine Force Atlantic.

"The barn doors are open and all the Marine Corps spigots are wide open," Mundy said, adding that the movement would last until next week.

Bush said Aug. 8 in announcing the U.S. military operation, code-named Desert Shield, that it was "purely defensive" and aimed at protecting America's vital interest in the Saudi oil fields, which provide 15 percent of U.S. oil imports.

Bush had said his ultimate goal was to get the Iraqi army out of Kuwait, which it captured on Aug. 2, and to restore the Kuwaiti royal family to power. He has not ruled out the use of U.S. force to try to dislodge the Iraqi army from Kuwait.

Asked whether the stealth planes had any defensive role in the gulf crisis, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said Thursday, "I think this gets into the question of deterrence. Some of those forces that you have there would be deterrent by their mere presence."

Williams was referring to the idea that simply by sending offensive weaponry and large numbers of troops to Saudi Arabia, the Bush administration could deter Iraqi President Saddam Hussein from launching an attack on the Saudi kingdom.

Spicing the U.S. military deployments with several prominent offensive weapons such as the stealth fighter-bomber is part of an apparent Bush strategy to gain the psychological upper hand in his risky standoff with Saddam.

The Iraqis are playing equally hard at the intimidation game.

Diving champ defends title

DALLAS (AP) — Defending U.S. platform champion Pat Evans of Cincinnati captured the men's one-meter springboard title at the U.S. Outdoor Diving Championships at Southern Methodist University.

Evans held off a strong field Thursday, beating Mark Lenzi of Fredericksburg, Va., 626.67 points to 604.05.

Evans won the men's platform title at the U.S. Indoor Championships in Beaverton, Ore., on April 22. Last year, he captured the one-meter indoor title and the three-meter NCAA title.

"Over the last year I've been able to control myself better, to keep my adrenalin under control," Evans said.

Defending outdoor one-meter champ Mark Bradshaw of Columbus took third.

Kelly Jenkins of Houston held the edge in the women's platform semifinals. Jenkins outscored Linda Pesek, also of Houston, 398.85 to 384.48.

Defending platform champ Wendy Williams of Bridgeton, Mo., was fourth.

The top 12 finishers advanced to Saturday's final.

The championships continue Friday with the women's one-meter semifinals and finals and the men's three-meter semifinals.

SWC realignment

House Speaker vows to do everything possible to keep A&M, UT

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, says he strongly opposes the University of Texas and Texas A&M University leaving the Southwest Conference. He vowed "to do everything in my power to prevent it from happening" — even slashing appropriations to the two universities.

Lewis also said he would form a special House study group to look into the potential ramifications.

Democratic Sen. Chet Edwards, who has moved to Waco, home of Baylor University, scheduled a news conference today in Waco to announce that he and two colleagues have asked for a formal Senate inquiry into the unfolding drama.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, chairman of the Senate State Affairs Committee, said he will convene the committee Sept. 8 in response to Edwards' request.

The question among many lawmakers is whether the departures can be prevented through laws or the threat of reduced state spending. But some lawmakers argue that it may be in UT and A&M's best interest to leave the conference and that they've been doing their own research on the legal issues.

Lewis told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, "I am not for A&M and Texas pulling out of the conference at all and will do everything in my power to prevent it from happening. I feel very strongly about it."

Lewis, who attended Texas Christian University and Sam Houston State University, said he's looking at the situation as a football fan and a state official.

"It's a great conference, and I think if Texas and A&M — for selfish and monetary reasons — want to pull out of it, it would destroy the conference overall. As long as they are state-supported schools and I have something to do with the state, they're not going to do it," Lewis said.

Lewis asked leaders of the House

State Affairs and Higher Education committees to convene a special meeting to gather information on the proposals, which could result in Texas and A&M going to either the Pacific Ten Conference, known as the Pac-10, or the Southeastern Conference.

While the negotiations have been under way for the past several weeks, legislators have been hearing from university officials, students, ex-students and others.

A common concern is that the smaller schools left in the conference would lose too much income from television revenues and ticket sales without UT and A&M on their schedules.

Many UT and A&M supporters — including several members of the Legislature — believe the schools have every right to go where the money is, even if it's just $1 million a year more. Lewis challenged that rationale.

"I would think that if they're just talking about $1 million, the inconvenience that they are going to put their fans through to travel to the West Coast to see a football game versus having to lose their appropriation from the state — I don't think that's a good trade."

For fiscal 1991, the Legislature appropriated $233 million to UT and $183 million to A&M — none of it for athletics.

Norman has a lot of catching up to do

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — With 82 golfers ahead of him, Greg Norman has some catching up to do.

Norman, the defending champion of the International, needs to be among the top 72 players after today's second round to advance to Saturday.

"I figure six points, maybe four, will do it," Norman said on Thursday, well before the opening round had concluded. He may be right.

Under the International's modified Stableford scoring system, medal scores don't count. Instead, points are awarded according to the following formula: 5 points for eagle, 2 points for a birdie, none for a par, minus-1 for a bogey and minus-3 for a double bogey or worse.

Norman, the PGA Tour's leading money-winner this season, shot a 2-over-par 74 on Thursday that translated to no points. He had two birdies and four bogeys.

He was in jeopardy of missing the 36-hole cut, as was course designer Jack Nicklaus, who limped home with a minus-1 score, also shooting 74.

The cut was projected to be in the range of plus-2 to plus-4.

There will be another cut to 24 players after Saturday's third round. Scores are cumulative for the first three rounds, but on Sunday the two dozen finalists start from scratch.

The carry-over of points for three rounds is a departure from previous Internationals — when there were daily cuts and no carry-over — and it is a format change the pros universally acclaimed.

"I like this format so much better — accumulating points," said

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Hale Irwin, of Hawaii, blasts from a sand trap near the 17th green during Thursday's opening round of the International Tournament. Irwin made the shot for an eagle.

Tom Purtzer, who led the scoring on Thursday with a plus-14 that featured two eagles.

Purtzer said he planned to shoot for birdies again today, but would be prudent.

"I plan to take chances when the opportunity presents itself and play smart the rest of the time," he said. "I just want to be one of those guys playing for all that cash on Sunday."

Purtzer also is in the running for today's daily payoff, which goes to the top four players after two rounds.

Purtzer got to plus-14 after just eight holes. He holed a 165-yard, 8-iron on the par-4, 439-yard 13th hole, and added another eagle at the par-5 17th, hitting his 3-iron within three feet of the cup. He also had birdies at the 12th and 15th holes.

He had two bogeys and one birdie the rest of the way to finish at plus-14.

"When you make eagles it's a lot more fun," he said. "I've probably only made seven all year. To get two in one nine-hole stretch is really something. I ought to save some."

At plus-10 were Donnie Hammond, Bob Gilder and Steve Elkington.

"I think this is the best format yet," Hammond enthused. "You're trying to get through Saturday. Another six or eight points (today) would put me in real good shape, and I could coast on Saturday."

Another trio was at plus-9 — Mark Calcavecchia, Bill Buttner and Argentine Eduardo Romero. U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin was in a group at plus-8.

Irwin, who started at the 10th hole, also eagled the 17th and was at plus-10 at one point before slipping back. He holed out a 30-foot bunker shot for his eagle.

Green first round leader

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Beth Daniel went four years without a victory before winning four titles and $504,851 in 1989, the best of her 10 years on the LPGA tour.

That success has carried over to this year — four more championships and $520,530 in earnings.

Still, the 33-year-old millionaire is finding it tougher and tougher to drag herself to a tournament.

"I've reached all my goals," Daniel said after shooting a 2-under par 70 Thursday, good for an eight-way tie for fifth place in the $400,000 JAL Big Apple Classic.

"Frankly, if this tournament was not here (Wykagyl Country Club), I wouldn't have played. I took the last two weeks off and was tempted to make it three."

"It's a privilege to play at a course like this. I rate it second-best (behind Bethesda) in the country."

Daniel, who won the second of her 22 titles here in 1980, birdied three of the final four holes Thursday. Tammie Green, who got the only win of her career on the tour last year, is the leader with a 68.

Kris Monaghan, a first-time winner this year, shared second place at 69 with Marcie Bozarth, who has missed nine cuts in '90, and Danielle Ammaccapani, who rebounded from last week's 47th-place finish in the Stratton Mountain Classic.

"I had three goals this year and I've achieved all of them. I wanted to win a major title and I did (the LPGA championship). I wanted to get back winning and I wanted to be in the top five on the money list (currently she is second)."

Is Daniel, who has amassed $2,550,436 for her career, planning on quitting?

"I'm not ready for that," said Daniel, a graduate of Furman, who won the U.S. women's amateur in 1975 and '77. "I am ready, though, to trim my schedule. There will be six more tournaments this year (giving her a total of 23). Next year I'll play less."

"People ask me about the money. I really don't care about money. It's no indication as to who is the best player. I earned $150,000 in winning the LPGA, so that's a big part of my earnings."

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. — Tammie Green, of Somerset, Ohio, watches her tee shot on the second hole during first round action at the JAL Big Apple Classic Thursday. Green stroked a four-under-par 72 to lead the field.

So what are her plans? "There's still a lot of golf left in me," she said. "Some golfers don't reach their peak until their mid-30s, and I feel I'm in that category. I've always had the talent, but it took me a while to mature. Now I have, and I realize that I have to take care of myself. I had mononucleosis (in 1988) and I was out for three months."

"Since then, I've been careful of my schedule. When you're playing well, it's difficult not to continue. However, I have to do the right thing for me."

Flying high Soccer clinic student Paul Foresyth fires to execute a backwards kick under the watchful eye of coach Vince Taylor during the soccer clinic being conducted at the Industrial Park.

Pete making small change

MARION, Ill. (AP) — Former Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose got millions when he played. Now, he gets 11 cents an hour as he pays.

Rose spends eight hours a day in the machine shop welding and fabricating metal. He earns 11 cents an hour and works with 70 other inmates of the Federal Work Camp at Marion. That's a far cry from the $1.2 million he earned playing for the Philadelphia Phillies in 1983.

"His work supervisor says he has been getting good reports. He gets in there and works just as hard as the rest of them," Assistant Warden Randy Davis said Thursday.

Rose is serving a five-month prison term for filing false income-tax returns.

After work, Rose has been watching the inmate softball teams play, but hasn't been able to participate because his knee is healing from surgery on July 20, Davis said.

Rose lives in a non-air-conditioned dormitory while he awaits assignment to the modern main dormitory where the majority of the camp's 200 inmates stay. He is expected to move by Monday.

It was time for another brawl in the National League.
Last week it was the New York Mets and Philadelphia Phillies engaging in a free-for-all at Shea Stadium. This time it was the Houston Astros and St.

ST. LOUIS — Houston Astros manager Art Howe (18) is restrained by first base umpire Bob Davidson after third base umpire Ed Montague (second from right) threw Howe out of the Astros-Cardinals game Thursday night. Howe was tossed out of the game in the seventh inning after Astros pitcher Danny Darwin and Cardinals Pedro Guerrero threw punches at one another. Rudy Jaramillo (42) is Astros first base coach.

Pedro Guerrero again got the big hit for the St. Louis Cardinals. But this time it came on a punch, not a pitch.
Guerrero socked Houston pitcher Danny Darwin in the head Thursday night, starting a bench-clearing brawl that got both players and Astros manager Art Howe ejected.
The fight came in the seventh inning with the Astros ahead by two runs. Both teams scored again, and Houston wound up winning 4-2.
In other games, Pittsburgh edged Atlanta 4-3. New York beat Los Angeles 4-1. Philadelphia defeated San Francisco 6-4 and San Diego downed Montreal 3-2 in 11 innings.
For the umpteenth time this season, some inside pitching led to some outside problems.
Darwin pitched close to Guerrero in the sixth inning, and they exchanged words. In the seventh, Darwin reached on an infield hit and then got clubbed by the Cardinals' first baseman.
"He's a cheap-shot artist," said Darwin, cut on the left side of his face. "When the umpire got there he showed how brave he was and he swung around and hit me in side of the face."
Darwin tried to retaliate, but instead hit first base umpire Bob Davidson in the head. The benches cleared, but unlike the recent full-scale fight between the Mets and Philadelphia, this one ended without further bodily harm.

Guerrero and Darwin, however, traded angry words outside the locker rooms at Busch Stadium. After the game, several police officers were called to the clubhouse area for precautionary reasons.
Howe was ejected for arguing about Darwin's ejection. Guerrero didn't want to talk about the trouble.
"I ain't got nothing to say," Guerrero said. "I'm not talking to nobody."

Darwin (8-1) won for the sixth straight time since moving into the starting rotation. He gave up four hits in six innings and left with a 3-1 lead, and Dave Smith got his 20th save.
Joe Magrane (8-13) lost for the first time in seven starts since July 7. He had won four consecutive decisions.
The Astros won three times in the four-game series. They still are the major leagues' worst road team at 17-41.

Pirates 4, Braves 3
Andy Van Slyke, cleared to play by team doctors just before gametime, hit a solo home run in the bottom of the ninth inning that lifted Pittsburgh over Atlanta. The Pirates stayed in first place in the NL East, one-half game ahead of New York.

Van Slyke made his first start since Aug. 5 when he sprained his left ankle. He hit an RBI single in the seventh for a 3-2 lead, and hit his 13th home run with one out in the ninth against Kent Mercker (4-2).
Bob Kipper (5-1) pitched one scoreless inning for the victory.
Atlanta Dave Justice hit a solo home run, giving him 10 homers in 43 at-bats. He has 20 RBIs in 12 games and leads major-league rookies with 19 home runs.

Mets 4, Dodgers 1
Dave Magadan drove in two runs and Howard Johnson homered for New York. The Mets finished their homestand at 5-5 and tonight begin a 10-game trip to the West Coast. Los Angeles ended its road trip at 8-7.

Ron Darling (5-7) gave up one run on eight hits in six innings. Bob Ojeda, whom Darling replaced in the starting rotation, worked 2 1/3 scoreless innings in relief, and John Franco earned his 27th save in 30 chances by getting the final two outs.

Tim Belcher (9-9) took the loss. Mike Sharperson went 3-for-3 for the Dodgers with his first home run in 446 major league at-bats.

Phillies 6, Giants 4
Von Hayes hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning as Philadelphia swept a three-game series from San Francisco. The Giants have lost five straight and 10 of the last 13.
Darren Daulton drew a one-out walk in the ninth from Mark Thurmond (2-3) and Hayes connected on a 3-0 pitch for his 15th home run. Roger McDowell (4-6) went one inning for the victory.

Brewers complete sweep over struggling Tigers

By The Associated Press
Baseball doctors would prescribe the Detroit Tigers for any ailing team right now. They're good medicine.
Just look what a trip to Tiger Stadium did for the Milwaukee Brewers, who beat Detroit 8-4

AL Roundup

Thursday night to sweep their three-game series.
"It makes going back to County Stadium a little more comfortable," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "We left there 0-8 but we've had a good road trip (6-4)."

In the only other American League game, Cleveland beat Minnesota 7-5.

The Tigers worked as an elixir for Milwaukee in many ways:
— Dan Plesac, the Brewers bullpen ace despite a 4.53 ERA, earned a save in all three games.
— Brewers outfielder Rob Deer, who came into the series battling .214, had two homers and a triple among his six hits, drove in seven runs and left town hitting .225.

— Utility man Darryl Hamilton had his first four-hit game and scored three runs Thursday night.

— The Brewers' defense, last in the American League with a .975 fielding percentage, committed three more errors during the series but came up with several sparkling plays that were highlight-film quality.
The problem for the Tigers, as usual, was pitching. Starter Dan Petry (9-9) gave up five runs on nine hits in just five innings Thursday night.

For the series, Detroit starters gave up 15 runs in 14 1/3 innings. On a 14-game road trip that preceded the series, Tiger starters yielded 70 runs in 71 innings.

Detroit's 4.85 ERA is the highest in the American League.
"I wish I could tell you what the matter is," Detroit pitching coach Billy Muffett said. "In a lot of cases, I think our guys are trying to make 'great' pitches when just a bunch of 'good' ones would be better."

Plesac can identify with that. His season has been a series of highs and lows.

"I really can't explain," Plesac said. "All season long I haven't gotten into a groove. I've been all out of synch. I went back to a windup without runners on base. I'm trying a lot of things."

"It's so disappointing. I mean, health-wise, I have never felt better in my life. I feel good every time I go out there, but one time I'm good and the next time I'm terrible."

There have been a few bright spots for Detroit, of course. Cecil Fielder, who had four hits Thursday night, leads the major leagues with 37 home runs and is tied with San Diego's Joe Carter for the RBI lead with 95.

The series sweep gave the Brewers their first three-game winning streak since May 16-18.

The loss dropped the Tigers 12 games under .500 for the first time this season. Detroit has won just three of its last 13 games.

Indians 7, Twins 5
Greg Swindell won for the seventh time in nine decisions and Sandy Alomar homered as Cleveland beat visiting Minnesota.

Kirby Puckett, the Twins' All-Star outfielder, played shortstop, third base and second base in the eighth inning. He moved from position to position between batters and did not get any chances in his first career infield appearance. Minnesota manager Tom Kelly kept switching Puckett so that he could keep Kent Hrbek and Gary Gaetti on the bench for pinch-hitting roles in the ninth inning.

Swindell (9-7) gave up three runs on 11 hits in seven innings. Doug Jones got his 33rd save despite allowing RBI singles by Hrbek and Gene Larkin in the ninth inning.

Kevin Tapani (11-6) left after 2 1/3 innings with a strained rib cage.

Rookie QB gets starting nod for Colts

By The Associated Press
After getting his feet wet in the NFL, Indianapolis quarterback Jeff George will dive in head-first tonight.

The highly-touted George, who made his pro football debut last weekend, will make his first start tonight in the Colts' exhibition game against Seattle.

"It was an exciting time for me, but I was glad to get that one over with that. His tries of highs ain," Plesac haven't gotten all out to a windup e. I'm trying ng. with," George said of his professional debut in last weekend's 16-7 loss to Denver.

In that game, George completed eight of 16 passes for 82 yards and no touchdowns in relief of Jack Trudeau. George threw two interceptions.

George, the No. 1 pick in the April draft by the Colts, is confident about his first NFL season.

"Football is football," he said. "There'll always be people out there who are going to criticize you and wonder, 'Is he worth it or not?' But you can't put that added pressure on yourself."

George signed a $15 million, six-year contract with the Colts, forgoing his senior year at Illinois.

"He throws a strong, tight spiral, very similar to (Terry) Bradshaw," Indianapolis coach Ron Meyer said of George. "That's saying a mouthful, I know, but we gave up half the ranch to get him."

"He has a quick, dart throw, with a lot of velocity, that I really like. We better like it, or you'll be talking to another guy."

Minnesota visits Cleveland on Sunday and San Francisco is at Denver on Monday.

The Lions are hoping their game against Buffalo will provide an indication of how strong their defensive line can be this season.

The defense was dominant in last week's 34-10 victory over Houston, sacking the quarterback eight times and scoring a touchdown on cornerback Terry Taylor's interception return.

But the Oilers were experimenting with the run-and-shoot offense — a formation the Lions' defense sees every day in practice. The Bills will be running a more conventional offense against Detroit in the Silverdome.

"It'll be a bigger task for us to see exactly where we are against conventional offenses," Detroit free safety Bennie Blades said.

The Bills have had three days to prepare for the Lions after losing 20-6 to the New York Giants on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. In tonight's other games, it's Buffalo at Detroit and Pittsburgh at Washington.

On Saturday, it's New Orleans vs. Green Bay at Madison, Wis.; Dallas at the Los Angeles Raiders; Cincinnati at Atlanta; Miami at Philadelphia; New England vs. Tampa Bay at Jacksonville, Fla.; the New York Giants at Houston; the New York Jets at Kansas City; San Diego at the Los Angeles Rams, and Chicago at Phoenix.

Angry Johnson blasts reserves

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Three reserves were cut by Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson, who was livid over a lack of effort from his backup players this week.

"I feel bad for our first-unit players. They're trying to get better. Unfortunately, some of the bottom players on the 80-man roster can't execute well enough to give our first unit players a picture (of the Raiders' offense and defense). They're not putting forth the effort. As I told them, they're eating and I want them to earn their chow. I can find some people who'll give us an effort," — Jimmy Johnson, Cowboys coach.

The Cowboys are practicing on the campus of Cal-San Diego as they continue to prepare for Saturday afternoon's exhibition game against the Los Angeles Raiders at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Spears was among the Cowboys' league-high 16 Plan B free agents, becoming the second Plan B acquisition to be cut this week. Safety Antonio Gibson was waived on Monday.

"We didn't come away from Plan B thinking every guy we signed was going to make the roster," Johnson said. "We'll be pleased if we come away with three starters from the group. Spears has talent, but he didn't show it on a consistent basis."

In another camp development, quarterback Troy Aikman had his sore right elbow examined by Los Angeles orthopedic surgeon Dr. Frank Jobe on Wednesday. Aikman said the exam was strictly precautionary and that the soreness he has experienced in the elbow is natural after throwing as many as 200 balls a day for a month of camp.

Also, the Cowboys on Wednesday worked out all-time team rushing leader Tony Dorsett at their Valley Ranch headquarters in Irving, Texas. Johnson said the Cowboys have no plans to sign Dorsett.

Oiler safety not a fat kid any longer

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Bubba McDowell has shed the image of the chubby young kid and he hopes to do the same with the tough-guy reputation he and his Miami teammates shared in college.

The Houston Oilers believe he could take on a new title — NFL star.

"He reminds me of Donnie Shell of the old Steelers, but Bubba is quicker and stronger than Shell. He obviously has the capability of being a premier strong safety," Oilers secondary coach Pat Thomas said.

McDowell, he added, is "everything you want in a strong safety."

But growing up, McDowell said his brothers were the real athletes. He was simply the plodding nose guard.

"I was always kind of round, always chewing bubble gum," McDowell said at the Oilers training camp. "The coach started calling me 'bubble-gum' ... and it grew to be just Bubba."

Time passed, and he grew up to be slim, strong and fleet.

He became a three-sport star at Florida's Merritt Island High School and went on to be a defensive back for the Miami Hurricanes. Next, he became a prospect and now an Oiler.

A tough image apparently followed McDowell from Miami to Houston, although his fury seemed to rage only on the football field.

"I've always been kind of the calm one of the bunch," he said. "I was just always kind of quiet and stayed in the background, but at Miami people put a tag on you."

"Really, with me it's just like God shifted my personality the other way. I don't know how or why it worked out like that for me, but it has. I just always have tried to put my aggression on the field and leave it there," he said.

"A lot of people told me that since I was from Miami I should be at home with a nasty image like the House of Pain, but I've never really liked that stuff," he said.

McDowell also has avoided the distractions that caused problems for his two brothers, who both spent time in jail, got thrown out of school and essentially threw away their chances of making it big in sports.

"My brothers were actually better athletes than me," he said.

WHAT OUR CUSTOMERS THINK OF US

...we were impressed with their hospitality, driving 40 miles is nothing when you're treated that good, when you drive up someone is always there to help you...there's a nice comfortable lounge to sit in while you're waiting, so why wouldn't you do business with them, they're super...and even Mr. Elmore, he's not like the typical owner, he's out shaking hands asking you if you're happy, if you're satisfied, their service manager is really professional, he keeps his promises and I like that and less than an hour later we were on our way. I just want to tell you, it's the first time I ever bought an automobile from anyone and felt sorry for them at the same time, that's how good a deal I felt like I made. I'm Marlene Hamm and I live in Midland and I would recommend to anyone to buy their automobiles from Elmore Chrysler Dodge and Jeep.

Cavazos: English a necessity

LAREDO (AP) — Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos told educators from this Texas-Mexico border area today that students who do not speak English are not ready to learn, and drew swift criticism.

Cavazos, speaking to about 1,500 Laredo principals and teachers, urged them to get parents more involved in education and to make sure students have a command of English.

"Parental involvement and language competency are basic," Cavazos said. "If that child cannot speak English the first day of school that child is not ready to learn."

In a panel discussion afterwards, South Texas superintendents took issue with Cavazos' statement about language.

Cavazos, a native of South Texas and former president of Texas Tech University, said he supports bilingual education.

Fair starts today

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ Staff Writer

The curtain goes up today on the 15th edition of the Martin County Fair, which officially opened this morning at the county fairgrounds.

"Everything's going as planned," according to Fair Chairman Lester Baker. Baker and other members of the Evening Lions have been working on the preparations for the fair, which is located on the corner of Broadway and St. Theresa streets.

"There will a few changes and we still need more entries in some events, but everything is going as planned," Baker said. "Our cheerleading contest has been cancelled. We could still use some more entries in our brisket cookoff."

Services today for four-year-old hero

GALVESTON (AP) — Family and friends planned to gather today and pay their final respects to a 4-year-old girl who died after saving three family members from a house fire.

Funeral services for Princess Warren Compton were set for 11 a.m.

Princess died Sunday in the fire after she rescued her half-brother, Lonnie Bolden, 13; her half-sister, Lonnett Bolden, 11; and her 2-year-old cousin, Tony Bolden, from the blaze.

"Everybody loved Princess," said Warren Compton, Princess' father. "She was real sweet. She would always help out."

The fire is believed to have started on a couch in the living room.

Compton said the child's death should serve as a lesson to parents.

"You should pay more attention to your children," Compton said. "You should spend more time with them. Keep your matches, lighters and cigarettes away from children, and be careful where you use them. The fire could have started from an ashtray on the couch."

"I'm going to miss her a whole lot. I'm going to remember her as a hero. She's with God now."

Compton said he believes the fire started on a couch, and his daughter noticed it and got her cousin to the door. She then went upstairs to wake her brother and sister. When they tried to grab her, she pulled away to go downstairs to look for her mother.

All three of the children Princess saved escaped the fire without injury. Her mother had tried to get out of her bedroom door, but the flames forced her to jump out a window.

"Lonnie and Lonnett jumped out the window after they tried to look for her," said Compton. "She got lost in the smoke."

They found Princess in a bedroom.

All three of the children Princess saved escaped the fire without injury. Her mother had tried to get out of her bedroom door, but the flames forced her to jump out a window.

Compton said his daughter's brief life was too rough. The girl had suffered through her parents' divorce and a bitter custody fight.

"I didn't have the money to fight for custody," Compton said. "That's what hurts the most. But I was saving up money. I hadn't given up because I was going to get my baby back, but it didn't turn out that way."

Gulf forces take offensive flavor

By ROBERT BURNS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — American firepower on the Arabian Peninsula has grown beyond the strictly defensive role that President Bush described nine days ago in pledging to protect Saudi Arabia from Iraq.

The clearest sign of a shift toward offensive capabilities is the departure Thursday from Langley Air Force Base, Va., of F-117A stealth fighter bombers.

The stealth fighter-bombers, which saw their first combat action during December's invasion of Panama, are designed to penetrate heavily defended areas to attack vital targets. In Iraq they could hit supply depots or key oil facilities.

Military sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said plans called for sending 22 of the radar-evading fighter bombers to the Persian Gulf area.

Additional signs of a shift toward offensive status from a defensive posture:

—An armada of Marine Corps amphibious assault ships is heading for the Persian Gulf. The seaborne assault units, equipped with amphibious tracked vehicles that can travel on land at speeds of up to 50 mph, are designed for offensive as well as defensive operations. They are supported by a variety of aircraft, including the F-18 Hornet, a ground attack airplane also capable of air-to-air combat.

—The Air Force said B-52 bombers have been sent overseas since the start of the gulf crisis. B-52s conducted massive bombing raids in the Vietnam war. Also moved to within striking range of Iraq are U.S. F-111 long-range bombers in Turkey.

—The Marines are sending in 45,000 of their finest and deploying A6-E Intruder bombers used in the U.S. bombing of Libya in 1986.

"In Vietnam we phased forces in more gradually. This is assertive," said Lt. Gen. Carl Mundy, commanding general of Fleet Marine Force Atlantic.

"The barn doors are open and all the Marine Corps spigots are wide open," Mundy said, adding that the movement would last until next week.

Bush said Aug. 8 in announcing the U.S. military operation, code-

Man has mower replaced — and more

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin residents opened their hearts and pocketbooks to help a 37-year-old mentally retarded man whose life was shattered when a thief stole the lawn mower that had allowed him to make a living and remain independent.

All Danny Riddle really wanted was for his best lawn mower to be returned. He didn't get it but he got so much that he is overwhelmed.

So far, Riddle, 37, has received two new mowers and at least one more is on the way. A radio station even arranged for a new storage shed to protect against future thefts. Still others offered cash.

"I think it's great, you know," Riddle said. "Everybody is going to crank up their engines. They're coming out and helping people."

Most of the donors say they were impressed at Riddle's effort to make the most out of his life.

Although he once lived at a state school for the mentally retarded, he is now on his own, trying to live an independent life with money from his lawn work.

Riddle's mother makes payments on his home where he lives alone.

Mildred Riddle of Midland said the theft of the mower not only threatened to hurt his ability to help support himself, but also had shattered his faith in his fellow humans.

The outpouring of generosity has shed new light on the world for her son, Mrs. Riddle said.

Tom Angel, Cap Rock's financial controller, will retire in August after more than 30 years service with the Cooperative. Angel has been employed by Cap Rock since 1959. He is immediate past president of the statewide association of co-op accountants and was chairman and program chairman of Group V of that organization.

Angel plans to relocate in the Dallas area. His wife, Linda Bess, is retired from the Stanton Independent School District.

Angel was recognized for 20 years' service in the Martin County Cancer Society. He has been a member of the Lions Club since 1966 and served as president of that organization, as well as serving as secretary-treasurer for 10 years.

He has played both backup piano and organ at First Methodist Church, in the children's department and for the entire congregation, since he joined the church in 1956. The organ the church is currently using belonged to Angel's mother and was donated to the church by the family.

A retirement party is set for Angel at Cap Rock today.

Cotton Talk

By Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

According to Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., High Plains producer representation for 1991 on the governing bodies of three national cotton organizations was determined recently in Dallas at a caucus of 19 Texas cotton interest groups.

The caucus chose two delegates and three alternates to the National Cotton Council (NCC), three members and four alternates to the Board of Cotton Incorporated (CI), and two nominees each for members and alternates to the Cotton Board.

PCG was represented at the caucus by President J. Larry Nelson of Tulia, Vice President Wayne Huffaker of Tahoka and Executive Vice President Donald Johnson.

Selected to serve three-year terms as NCC delegates from the High Plains were PCG Board Chairman Steve Verett of Ralls and Kevin Belt of Lockney. Chosen as their alternates, respectively, were Ron Craft of Plains and Dan Smith of Lockney.

A third alternate, Douglas Martin of Tulia, was named to replace R. H. Reaves of Levelland who resigned to accept a position on the CI Board. Martin will serve as alternate to Jackie Burreis of Brownfield who became an NCC delegate last year.

Named as area CI Directors were Huffaker, Nelson and Doyce Middlebrook of Shallowater. Their respective alternates will be Kevin Riley of Dimmitt, Reaves and Jackie Mull of Idalou. The fourth alternate, Daniel Hirt of Garden City, was chosen to replace resigning Newt Dyer who was serving from the Lower Rio Grande Valley area.

Cotton Board members are nominated, not elected, by state caucus. One director and one alternate each are named as first and second choices. Although the Secretary of Agriculture normally accepts the first choices, he has the option to appoint either.

As first choices the Texas caucus nominated S. M. True of Plainview as Board member and Kent Nix of Lamesa as his alternate. The second pair of nominees consists of Myrl D. Mitchell of Lenora, member, and Verett, alternate.

The National Cotton Council is cotton's organization representing producers, ginners, warehousemen, merchants, cottonseed crushers, cooperatives and manufacturers.

Its primary purposes are to develop and effectuate industry policies on legislative, regulatory and trade matters, to expand domestic and export markets for cotton and cotton products, and to provide the industry with research support, economic analyses, public relations and technical services.

Its support comes from all industry segments and policy positions must be approved by a majority of delegates from all sectors.

Cotton Incorporated conducts programs of research, product development and consumer advertising and promotion, plus providing technical assistance to mills, manufacturers and retailers. It is funded solely by a producer check-off authorized under the Cotton Research and promotion Act of 1966.

Its 38 directors and 38 alternates, all cotton producers, are divided between states according to the volume of production and financial contribution of each.

The Cotton Board is a quasi-governmental body which represents USDA in administering the cotton research and promotion program. It contracts with CI to carry out approved activities, supervises the check-off collection and refund system, and conducts information programs for producers.

Commenting on the High Plains representatives to all three organizations, PCG President Nelson said PCG's paramount goal is to place the right people in the right position to make a maximum contribution.

named Desert Shield, that it was "purely defensive" and aimed at protecting America's vital interest in the Saudi oil fields, which provide 15 percent of U.S. oil imports.

Bush had said his ultimate goal was to get the Iraqi army out of Kuwait, which it captured on Aug. 2, and to restore the Kuwaiti royal family to power. He has not ruled out the use of U.S. force to try to dislodge the Iraqi army from Kuwait.

Asked whether the stealth planes had any defensive role in the gulf crisis, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said Thursday, "I think this gets into the question of deterrence. Some of those forces that you have there would be deterred by their mere presence."

Williams was referring to the idea that simply by sending offensive weaponry and large numbers of troops to Saudi Arabia, the Bush administration could deter Iraqi President Saddam Hussein from launching an attack on the Saudi kingdom.

Spicing the U.S. military deployments with several prominent offensive weapons such as the stealth fighter-bomber is part of an apparent Bush strategy to gain the psychological upper hand in his risky standoff with Saddam.

The Iraqis are playing equally hard at the intimidation game. Saddam has strongly suggested he would use his chemical weapons against U.S. troops if provoked.

As the war of nerves plays on, U.S. military forces continue to mass in Saudi Arabia.

Gen. John Dailey, the assistant commandant of the Marine Corps, said the deployment of Marines to the gulf was the largest such operation since Vietnam. A military source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said perhaps 45,000 Marines are involved in Desert Shield.

"We've been quietly loading ships all over the world," Dailey said.

Among the weaponry the Marines are taking to Saudi Arabia: more than 100 M1 battle tanks and more than 150 fixed-wing aircraft, including Harrier vertical takeoff planes used for light attack missions and close air support of ground troops, Dailey said.

The Marines also are deploying A6-E Intruder bombers used in the U.S. bombing of Libya in 1986.

Pentagon sources say contingency plans call for putting as many as 250,000 air, sea and ground forces in and around Saudi Arabia.

Mower

"It's just unbelievable," she said. "My heart has just been so full. He had been so upset to think somebody would do this, and now he knows there's an awful lot of good people. Danny was just bouncing off the walls."

After reading of Riddle's problem in the Austin American-Statesman, John Cartier took Riddle to a store and bought him a slightly used $199 mower that the store discounted to $99.

Cartier said Riddle's can-do attitude impressed him, too. "He's not looking for handouts," Cartier said.

"Danny is a businessman. He's a winner and as an individual he's an inspiration," he said. "The guy is a productive citizen of this community."

News director Cathy Conley of KEYI-FM said the station received about 100 calls from people wanting to donate mowers Thursday morning after the station mentioned Riddle's plight.

The station accepted the donation of Kathleen Bentley, who offered one of her company's "used but like new" mowers.

The radio station then arranged for Affordable Portables to donate a portable building where Riddle can store his lawn equipment.

Bob Nelson of Sacramento, Calif., a vocational rehabilitation counselor passing through Austin on business, bought Riddle a new mower although he knew that the man had already received a replacement.

"Let him hire someone else who is mentally retarded if he wants," he said.

Hi, I'm Willard Weaver and I work for TU Electric. You may not know, but often there are power lines buried underground, as well as overhead... sometimes even in your own yard! I'm telling you this because every year a number of serious injuries or deaths are caused by people accidentally digging into buried power lines.

Electrical safety is a priority.

These types of accidents can easily be avoided. If people would just think before they dig. Know the location of underground electric lines before you dig. If you're not sure, call us at TU Electric.

We care about your safety.
