Firefighters to sponsor fundraiser

Big Spring Fire Fighters will have their annual fund-raising drive for the Muscular Dystrophy Association Saturday morning, Sept. 1 at the Coronado Shopping Center.

Working with the Big Spring Wal-Mart, fire fighters will collect donations to "fill the boot" while demonstrating aerial rescues throughout the day.

The drive is one of many held locally to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association before its Labor Day telethon.

Auction scheduled as DAV fundraiser

The First Annual Disabled American Veterans Charity Auction and Welfare Fund for the Needy will be scheduled Sept. 6 at 7 p.m. at Spring City Auction at 2000 W. Fourth.

All the money raised will stay in the Big Spring area, to be used for families whose homes have been destroyed by fire and who need some help getting a fresh start, said Disabled American Veterans officials. It is not just for veterans but for anyone needing help.

Army sets up mail system for Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says it has set up a special mail address system to speed delivery of letters to GIs now operating in Saudi Arabia.

Mail for members of the seven Army units now in Saudi Arabia as part of Operation Desert Shield should be addressed with the following New York Army Postal Office numbers:

- 101st Airborne Division: APO New York 09309.
- 82nd Airborne Division: APO New York 09656.
- 24th Mechanized Infantry Division: APO New York 09315.
- 1st Corps Support Command Fort Bragg: APO New York 09657.
- 197th Infantry Brigade: APO New York 09315.
- 11th Air Defense Artillery Brigade: APO New York 09656.
- 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment: APO 09209.

Mail directed to soldiers' home stations will be redirected to their Saudi location, the Army said.

Sands trustees set tax rate

ACKERLY — Only one item was on the agenda for the Sands Independent School District meeting Monday night, according to Superintendent James Blake.

The tax rate for the district was discussed at length between the board and Martin County chief appraiser Delbert Dickenson, according to Blake.

"We had no one at our meeting for this public hearing on the proposed tax notice. Our taxes will be reduced from $1.15 to $1.12 per hundred dollar property valuation," Blake said.

Arab pressure on Saddam increasing

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press Writer

Iraq's two-pronged approach to Middle East peace — proposing talks but maintaining its anti-U.S. propaganda blast — fell on cynical White House ears, and Arab pressure grew against Saddam Hussein.

At the United Nations, the Security Council was scheduled to talk again today about a proposal to enforce its embargo on Iraq by military means. U.S. and other warships already have been shadowing Iraqi vessels.

With no sign of letup in the nearly 3-week-old Persian Gulf crisis that began with Iraq's invasion of oil-rich Kuwait, the Tokyo stock market tumbled today, following a rout on Wall Street the day before.

The buildup of U.S. military hardware and manpower protecting Saudi Arabia's northern border from Iraqi forces was intensifying. President Bush planned to sign an order today activating about 40,000 reservists. White House aides said Tuesday.

The U.S. aircraft carrier

Saratoga and the guided missile cruisers Biddle and Philippine Sea sailed through Egypt's Suez Canal today en route to the Mediterranean to the gulf region, said canal officials speaking on condition of anonymity.

At the first all-European meeting on the crisis, Spain, Belgium, the Netherlands and Italy said in Paris they were sending warships to the region.

Iraq, meanwhile, has moved surface-to-surface Scud missiles into occupied Kuwait, increasing the threat of a chemical weapons attack, Brig. Gen. Turki Bin Nassar, a Saudi base commander, told reporters in the kingdom on Tuesday.

But he said that U.S. and Saudi forces have defenses against the Scuds, including U.S. Patriot anti-ballistic missiles in place in Saudi Arabia.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater dismissed an address Tuesday by Saddam as the "same old litany from Iraq" and said no talks are possible until Iraq withdraws its tens of thousands of troops from Kuwait.

Iraq's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, visited Jordan Tuesday and called for a negotiated settlement, but did not offer to withdraw troops from Kuwait, which Iraq seized Aug. 2 in a dispute over land and oil.

In a speech directed at President Bush, Saddam defended detaining foreigners and promised "a major

Senior speller wins bee

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Gary Tate is living proof that spelling bees aren't just kid stuff.

Howard County native Tate, 65, struck a blow for senior spellers when he recently won the Texas Senior Citizens Spelling Bee in Dallas. Tate, who represented Midland in the bee, now advances to a five-state regional meet Saturday in New Orleans.

The state meet, sponsored by the Texas Department of Aging, pitted Tate against 30 other spellers. After surviving through several rounds, his last opponent misspelled "cardinalate," giving Tate his shot at the crown.

After correctly spelling that word, Tate then spelled "arthroscopy" to win the bee.

Although he expressed surprise at capturing the title, good spelling has always come naturally for Tate, who was born in Coahoma and graduated from Big Spring High School.

"I've always been a pretty good speller," he said. "A good speller is someone . . . who's able to picture the word. It's kind of a gift from God — and your parents, to a great extent."

Tate, the son of Mr. and Mrs. A.H. Tate of Tarzan, credited his wife with getting him interested in the senior bee.

"(The bee sponsors) put an ad in the paper, and my wife encouraged me to enter," Tate said. "She knew I was a pretty fair speller."

Tate entered his first bee last year, and advanced to the state level before finally finishing 15th. He found the experience enjoyable enough to try again this year.

He prepared for the bee by studying the Scripps-Howard Word List

Bridge repair

Construction workers are pictured Tuesday repairing and widening bridges on I-20 at Birdwell Lane. Dan Richardson, engineering assistant with the State Department of Highways and Transportation, said a local firm has been contracted to also widen a bridge on U.S. 80 overpass. The projects are expected to be completed in January 1991.

Increased oil prices boost property values

EDITOR'S NOTE: This the first of three articles on factors affecting area property tax values and what property owners can expect in the future.

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Increased oil prices and inventories were the leading causes of an increase of $30 million, more than 2 percent, in county property values. The total taxable county value this year is $1,294,688,618. Oil prices are expected to go up again next year.

The value of county mineral reserves alone increased $6.7 million from last year's $537 million, a little more than 1 percent, according to figures released by the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal District.

But another $38.9 million increase, about 15 percent, from $279 million in mineral inventories and utility values in 1989, is also partly due to increased oil prices, said an Appraisal District official. Utility values went up 4 percent.

However, decreased oil production lowered mineral values in some of the county's eight taxing districts, including a $22 million decrease, about 17 percent, in the Big Spring Independent School District. Large inventories, primarily at Fina Refinery, compensated for the decrease, explained Weldon Peoples, assistant chief appraiser for Big Spring.

Overall county home and business values were down about $18 million, almost 3 percent. All three cities in the county as well as the Big Spring and Coahoma ISDs also experienced overall property value declines, while values in the Forsan ISD went up more than 10 percent.

Because of the conflict in the Mideast, mineral values may be increased again next year even though oil production in the county has been dropping, predicted Steve Halseth, an oil and gas appraiser

Sanders: Expansion a priority

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Hooper Sanders is a firm believer in providing continued support for businesses that have been successful and good for Big Spring.

Sanders, who has served as Big Spring TU Electric district manager for the last 10 years, said high on his priority list as a board member of the Moore Development of Big Spring, Inc. is the expansion of local businesses.

"I think we should pay particular attention to our longtime successful industries and assist them in any expansion plans they may undertake," he said.

Sanders stressed, however, that the creation of new jobs for people in the Big Spring area is the "Number One priority."

"I strongly believe that the reason the citizens here passed the 1/2-cent sales tax was to help bring more jobs to Big Spring," he said. "It is my strongest hope that the board can help create new jobs and bring new industry to the area."

Sanders, 63, echoed the views expressed by other board members who want the EDC board to have flexibility in their dealings with business prospects.

"I think the board needs to have a great deal of latitude in its dealings," he said. "Of course, the city council should be kept informed."

The $50,000 limit on expenditures without council approval that was discussed at a recent work session is an unrealistic figure, Sanders said.

"We're going to need some latitude in finances if we seriously hope to attract new industry here," he said.

Although the EDC may employ a director of economic development, Sanders said he doesn't believe that to be an immediate necessity.

"Most of the (business) prospects, I'd say nine out of 10, come through the chamber of commerce, anyway," he said. "I really think we can work with the different entities involved."

"I believe if we get everyone working together, we can be successful in bringing new jobs and industry to Big Spring."

Having worked 33 years as a district manager for TU Electric in several Texas cities, including Fort Worth and Midland, Sanders knows the key to a successful operation is mutual cooperation and believes that attribute is critical for everyone involved with Moore Development for Big Spring, Inc.

"I believe if we get everyone working together, we can be successful in bringing new jobs and industry to Big Spring," he said.

Mexican holiday events planned

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

Diez y Seis de Septiembre, the day Mexico won independence from Spain, will be celebrated locally Sept. 14, 15 and 16 by two social service organizations. The League of United Latin American Citizens will hold an event at Comanche Trail Park, while Amigos del Barrio will organize at Los Tres Amigos Club on I-20.

The local chapter of LULAC plans musical entertainment, a golf tournament and food, game and sale booths among its eighth annual recognition of the holiday, said organizer Pat Deanda.

The League is an organization which sponsors programs to help the community's needy, elderly and students, Deanda said. She said the non-profit organization holds fund-raisers — the upcoming celebration and Cinco De Mayo — to provide scholarships to Hispanic youth.

"We have helped in a lot of endeavors in the community," she said. "The repairing of homes, paying for funerals, helping students buy supplies and many other things."

Booths for food and drink sales, games, "garage-sale" type goods, and local health agencies, and organizations are welcome, Deanda said. Cost is $30 for three days, all profit to the vendor.

For information about LULAC's activities, call 267-7839 or 263-6612.

Amigos del Barrio, a group which plans to become a non-profit organization, will hold its first celebration of the holiday this year, said organizer Libby Uribe. The group plans game and food booths, music and a parade among its weekend activities.

"We are a group to help the elderly in the community," Uribe said. She said the group will not focus its weekend celebration on

Inside Texas

Groups hail court decision

DALLAS (AP) — Texans soon will be able to see previously secret documents stemming from legal battles, including those fought over sensitive environmental and product-liability cases.

Civil liberties advocates, good-government groups and media organizations are hailing the state Supreme Court's first-in-the-nation procedural change, which takes effect Sept. 1.

"It's not that we expect, on the first day, a line of people walking into the courthouse," said Jim Harrington, Texas Civil Liberties Union legal director. "But the rules will turn the files there into a public library for our watchdogs."

Environmentalists and consumer organizations were particularly thrilled by the change, adopted in April at the request of the Legislature. They frequently have won settlements only to have sealed court records keep information on toxic substances and other hazards unavailable.

Society to buy infamous theater

DALLAS (AP) — The theater in which Lee Harvey Oswald was captured following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in 1963 has been rescued from a possible date with a wrecking ball.

The historic building will be sold to the Texas Theatre Historical Society by United Artists Theatres Inc. for $175,000, according to Bob McElearney, president of the Oak Cliff Chamber of Commerce.

United Artists closed the 1,350-seat theater in December for financial reasons. Since then, the historical society has been negotiating with the company, searching for a way to save the landmark in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas.

"We came up with a deal that we both could live with," said McElearney, who was asked by the society to handle the negotiations.

The purchase will be final at the end of September, "but we do have it under contract," he said. The historical society has collected about $30,000 in donations for the building's purchase and renovation, he said.

Educators fear skills test biased

EL PASO (AP) — Some local educators fear a new standardized test may be biased against Hispanic and black students, which could hinder accreditation efforts in districts with large minority populations.

The state plans to use the new test as an indicator of school district performance. A district with a pattern of poor scores on the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills can lose its accreditation.

Blacks and Hispanics scored far lower than Anglos in the trial run of the new test given last October. More than 200,000 students from 784 school districts took the preliminary test.

"I was looking at those statistics and found them very alarming," Gary Ivory, coordinator of research evaluation and testing for Ysleta Independent School District, said Tuesday.

The TAAS will be administered for the first time in October. It replaces the 5-year-old Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills test. Students will take the exam every other year and must pass a final test to receive a high school diploma.

KILLEEN — Troops of the 2nd Armored Division pass in review during a May ceremony at Fort Hood. The Army announced in June that it planned to deactivate the 12,000-man division, but the Persian Gulf crisis has prompted the Army to reconsider the decision.

Texas soldiers continue readying for deployment

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

Trains bearing the armament and equipment of the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment rolled away from Fort Bliss Tuesday night, headed toward the Texas Gulf Coast.

The trains, loaded with armored vehicles and trucks, began moving southeastward at about 11:30 p.m. CDT.

The 4,500 soldiers of the 3rd Armored Cavalry were ordered to the Middle East last week as part of the massive U.S. buildup in Saudi Arabia. An unknown number of troops from the 11th Air Defense Artillery Brigade at Fort Bliss also have been ordered to the Middle East. Some already are in Saudi Arabia.

The 3rd Armored Cavalry is expected to act as a flank guard or as a scout, doing reconnaissance and feeding intelligence to other units. Fort Bliss officials refuse to reveal when the unit will actually move.

For the past 10 days, crews have been loading tanks, anti-aircraft weaponry and other armored vehicles from the 3rd Armored Cavalry onto trains at Fort Bliss.

The trains that left Tuesday night are believed headed to Beaufort, but the Army has refused to confirm or deny the destination.

A military transport ship has been docked in Beaufort for several days, but port officials have refused to discuss its mission.

Meanwhile troops from Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene and Fort Hood near Killeen continued preparing Tuesday to move out.

Maj. Mary Beth Kilgore, a Dyess public affairs officer, confirmed that a tanker squadron from Dyess had flown its first missions in support of the Persian Gulf troop and equipment buildup Monday.

She declined to reveal how many of the KC-135 Stratotankers were involved and where the refueling missions took place. Dyess has only one tanker squadron, the 917th Air Refueling Squadron. It usually has 17 KC-135s assigned.

Still awaiting orders on when and where to send its C-130 cargo planes, however, was the 463rd Tactical Airlift Wing.

"Other wing personnel and equipment have been tasked and are just awaiting transportation," Ms. Kilgore said. But the equipment doesn't include the wing's major weapons system, the B-1B bomber, she said.

Carswell Air Force Base officials Tuesday confirmed deployment of some KC-135 refueling tankers. The tankers refuel planes in flight at a rate of 1,000 gallons a minute.

Carswell, in Fort Worth, has a fleet of 18 KC-135s, which are part of the more than 600 aircraft in the Strategic Air Command that can refuel. Officials refused to say when or how many of the planes were deployed.

But Col. Julian B. Hall, commander of the 7th Bomb Wing at Carswell, said: "We're ready to do whatever the president asks us to do."

So are an undisclosed number of Air Force reservists who have volunteered to provide airlift support for the 433rd Military Air Wing at Kelly Air Force Base near San Antonio.

The 433rd has 3,700 members in Texas and Oklahoma; 3,400 of those reservists are assigned to Kelly, said wing spokesman Maj. Meade C. Wharton. It is one of several military units assigned to Kelly.

None of the reservists has been called to active duty, which would require authorization from Congress.

The air wing flies the C-5A "Galaxy," designed to airlift cargo and personnel.

About 125 miles north in Killeen, troops at Fort Hood were "still preparing to go," a base spokesman said. Elements of the 2nd Armored Division and the 1st Cavalry are expected to be deployed, but the spokeswoman said she could not say when they are going to leave.

Advocates criticize football flap

AUSTIN (AP) — Advocates of social programs say many lawmakers are acting more concerned about the possible breakup of the Southwest Conference than they have been about school finance reform and welfare funding.

"When we do this kind of thing, we end up looking rather frivolous," said Genevieve Hearon, past president of the Texas Alliance for the Mentally Ill. "Our overzealous fascination with sports as bigger than any other issue is perceived as a joke."

Several activists say lawmakers have dragged their feet on many issues, the Austin American-Statesman reported Tuesday.

For example, it took three special sessions for the Legislature to answer a Texas Supreme Court order to change the public education funding system. And the welfare budget is so troubled that Medicaid payments recently were suspended for 10 days.

But when the University of Texas and Texas A&M University said they were thinking about leaving the SWC, many lawmakers quickly huddled. Their response showed the peculiar priorities in Texas, said the activists.

Rosie Torres, who tracks health and human service issues for the Texas Alliance for Human Needs, said of the SWC debate, "I don't think that conflict is as pressing as our current budget crisis. We're more concerned with the poor and elderly who are lacking services."

"I'm appalled," said Mary Dees, spokeswoman for the Texas Mental Health Consumers.

But Tim Conger, press secretary for House Speaker Gib Lewis, said, "I would have to disagree that state leaders have dragged their feet on other issues. I think they've been very responsible."

Lewis on Friday promised to use his political power to keep UT and Texas A&M from leaving the SWC. He attended Texas Christian University, a private SWC school that could be financially hurt by a pullout of A&M and UT.

Blond bandit object of officials' search

KILGORE — East Texas authorities are searching for a slender woman with bleached-blond hair who has used a distinctive long-barreled revolver in the holdups of three convenience stores in the past 10 days, officers say.

The latest robbery in which the woman is suspected was at the Fast Stop convenience store on Monday night, according to Sgt. Maxey Cerliano of the Kilgore Police Department.

Cerliano said the woman was described as being in her early 20, about 5-4, 110 pounds, with a slender build. A clerk at the store said the woman was wearing a baseball cap, a blue long-sleeved sweat shirt and a blue bandana around her neck.

The woman pointed "a long-barreled revolver with designs on the wooden grip" at the clerk and demanded "Give me the money," Cerliano said.

"Which, naturally, the clerk did," he said.

Greyhound drivers stick out strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Greyhound strike grinds well into its sixth month with no resolution in sight, drivers are using odd jobs, their savings or unemployment checks to scrape by.

"The old-timers... some of them are having a hard time finding any other work," said Darrell Horn, president of a drivers union local in Portland, Ore. "They're very despondent. But they're not going to go back to work under these conditions."

The bus line's 6,000 drivers walked out March 2 over a dispute in wages and job security. Drivers contend they only wanted to regain ground they lost after taking pay cuts over the past decade that dropped their salaries from $31,000 to $24,000.

Now, the bus line, currently under the protection of bankruptcy court, has told those drivers their jobs no longer exist because it has resumed "business as usual" with 3,000 strikebreakers it hired.

"We still consider Greyhound our company, the one we built, the one we gave up our wages for and vacations for, just to keep the company afloat and give it a chance to breathe," Bob Beard, a Greyhound driver for 29 years, said from his home in suburban Washington.

Greyhound contends the union created its own problems with excessive wage demands. It blames the company's financial trouble on security and legal costs stemming from initial strike violence it contends was orchestrated by union leaders.

Drivers have found a variety of ways to make ends meet. Jim Gajdos has a job hawking $1 programs at a minor league ballpark in Boise, Idaho. For Jerry Reidell in Bellingham, Wash., the dispute has meant switching roles with his wife: He's now at home with their two children while she works at the Postal Service.

Other striking drivers have taken temporary and part-time jobs with tour or charter bus companies. Some have been forced to use their savings or are trying to survive on unemployment and $50-a-week strike benefit checks.

Most drivers enjoyed their jobs, despite the pay cuts, because of the independence and cross-country trips, strikers said.

"People don't really think of us as cowboys, but we're kind of the stagecoach drivers of the '90s," Gajdos said. "There's a certain romance to the job."

Gajdos and Reidell have both dipped into their savings to help in the pinch of lost paychecks. Gajdos said that because his Greyhound pay had dropped over the years, he's used to a life without the extras.

"I guess you could say we've been introduced to poverty on the installment plan," Gajdos said.

Many local unions have food bank set up where grocers and charities donate canned goods and cereals for drivers.

Horn said union drivers are pinning their hopes on some potential resolutions:

• A bankruptcy judge might replace Greyhound Chairman Fred G. Currey with a trustee willing to resume negotiations with union drivers.

• A New York investment banking firm, the Blackstone Group, could take over the company, a move it has been studying. Blackstone has said a takeover would include bringing union drivers back and possibly allowing employees to have part ownership.

• A National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge in Milwaukee could agree with the board's general counsel and find that Greyhound engaged in unfair labor practices. That would mean the bus line would have to take back the union drivers and give them as much as $10 million a month in back pay. However, Greyhound has already said it would appeal such a decision, which could mean court battles for years.

USAir fires 1,500 new employees

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — About 1,500 USAir employees will be given pink slips today and into next week as company officials cancel a planned expansion.

In making the announcement Tuesday, airline officials said only probationary employees would be released in response to a weakening economy and a lull in the airline business.

Spokeswoman Susan Young said the employees were hired as part of the planned expansion.

USAir flies about 3,000 domestic flights daily, supported by 55,200 employees.

The cuts are "across the board, in most departments and in most geographic areas of the country," Young said. She said specifics were not available but would include all types of employees anywhere from airport maintenance workers to secretaries. "We deeply regret that this action is necessary, but these employees were hired in anticipation of an expansion program that has been reduced in light of current economic projections," said USAir president Seth E. Schofield.

Young said travel has been flat, the nation's economy weakening, and the economic climate for the next 12 to 24 months does not look so good.

The airline completed a $1.6 billion takeover of Piedmont in 1989 and a $385 million buyout of Pacific Southwest Airlines in 1987. Since then, USAir has grown rapidly under deregulation and still has plans to add new overseas routes.

Last week USAir announced it would furlough 211 pilots effective Jan. 1.

Paying respects

Booby trap killer pleads guilty

DENVER (AP) — A handyman Tuesday was ordered to pay $9,500 and placed on six years' probation after he pleaded guilty to setting up a shotgun booby trap that killed a young man who broke into his warehouse.

Philip Connaghan, 46, of suburban Arvada, pleaded guilty to manslaughter. He said he was deeply sorry for what happened, and that his booby trap was the wrong solution to a major problem.

"There must have been three or four attempts a month where they came in and destroyed things. But it was never really a personal thing. It was like a war," he said. "It was my survival I was trying to protect."

He was fined $2,500 and ordered to pay $7,000 restitution to the family of 19-year-old Michael McComb, who was killed April 14. Charges that Connaghan violated the state's booby trap law were dropped.

The case triggered overwhelming support for Connaghan from residents.

Police waited until the morning after the shooting to retrieve McComb's body, fearing more booby traps.

Three teen-agers who broke into the warehouse with McComb fled.

Colorado has a "make my day" law that allows the use of deadly force to protect householders from intruders, but the district attorney's office said it only applied to people in fear of their lives.

Trump uses casinos for collateral

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — No sooner did Donald Trump buy himself some time to shore up his empire than the clock began ticking for his next showdown with gambling regulators.

The state Casino Control Commission voted 5-0 to approve Trump's plan to put up his three Atlantic City casinos as collateral for a $65 million bank loan he received to make a $43 million bond payment on the Trump Castle casino.

Trump had argued his empire could have collapsed without the commission's approval.

But the commission decided to call Trump in early for relicensing hearings on all three casinos because of questions about his financial stability. Trump wasn't scheduled for the hearings until the spring; the commission wants to see him in October.

NASA loses contact with Magellan again

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — NASA engineers today struggled to restore radio contact with Magellan after losing touch with the Venus-orbiting spacecraft for the second time in five days.

Space agency engineers' failure this morning to hear from Magellan after the link broke indicated the craft's computerized emergency systems didn't immediately activate to help re-establish communication with Earth, NASA said.

So the engineers at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory repeatedly sent new computer commands toward Magellan's presumed position around Venus in an attempt to tell it to radio Earth, said NASA spokesman Bob MacMillin.

Nothing was heard hours after the commands should have elicited a response from Magellan. Engineers met to plan their next step.

"Bad news. Nothing. Not a peep out of it," MacMillin said. "It's kind of a mystery."

Contact was lost at 7:03 p.m. Tuesday while NASA was tracking Magellan with an antenna dish near Canberra, Australia, said laboratory spokesman Jim Doyle.

The latest blow to Magellan's $744 million mission to map Venus came Tuesday night, less than eight hours after the space agency released the craft's first snapshots of Venus.

The pictures revealed a remarkably violent landscape shaped by impact craters, quake faults, vast lava flows, and ridges and valleys like those in the western United States.

The loss of Magellan would be another major blow to NASA, which grounded the space shuttle fleet temporarily because of fuel leaks and found the Hubble Space Telescope was impaired by a flawed mirror.

The spacecraft's emergency systems allowed engineers to locate the spacecraft on Friday, more than 14 hours after they lost contact with it the first time. Eight hours later, they restored steady contact by sending Magellan a command to stop spinning and keep one of its antennas pointed at Earth.

Magellan's mission is to map up to 90 percent of Venus' surface using radar to peer through the planet's thick clouds, which prevent the use of optical cameras.

Salvadoran peace talks deadlock

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — A fourth round of talks to end El Salvador's bloody civil war has deadlocked with a new wave of leftist guerrilla attacks on government troops.

Both sides said they were pessimistic about reaching any agreement before five days of talks were scheduled to wrap up today. The government rejects rebel demands to dismantle the army and punish officers for alleged human rights abuses during a 10-year-old war that has killed 73,000 people.

"Tomorrow, the meeting will end and there will be no agreement on the issue of the armed forces," rebel negotiator Salvador Samayoa told a news conference late Tuesday.

Samayoa accused President Alfredo Cristiani's rightist government of failing "to make any move whatever" to get closer to the rebel position demanding that both the army and the guerrillas be dismantled.

"It could be said that we are stuck," Justice Minister Oscar Santamaria, who heads the U.S.-backed government's negotiating team, said even before Tuesday's session began.

He criticized the rebels for the attacks Monday and Tuesday that killed 11 people and wounded 12. A San Salvador army barracks across the street from Cristiani's residence was among the targets.

The State Department said rebel violence during the talks raised doubts about the rebels' willingness to negotiate.

"The guerrillas should immediately cease these attacks and negotiate seriously to end the war," said the department's deputy spokesman.

Indians block Canadian rail lines

MOUNT CURRIE, British Columbia (AP) — Police have arrested about 40 Indians blocking a rail line, but another group of natives set up another blockade within hours further down the tracks.

The premier of this Canadian province, Bill Vander Zalm, condemned the second blockade Tuesday, called because of a dispute over land claims.

"I would suggest they are doing harm and they should cease, desist and avoid the sort of confrontational issues this could lead to," he said.

Earlier Tuesday, police arrested about 40 Indians at Seton Portage for defying a provincial Supreme Court injunction ordering them to end their blockade of British Columbia Rail's main line.

Those arrested included three chiefs — Marvin Bob of the Pavilion band, Rod Louie of Seton Lake and Roger Adolph of the Fountain band — all part of the St'at'imx nation. The St'at'imx, unhappy with British Columbia's response to their land claims proposals, had asked the police inspector to charge the provincial government with the theft of their land.

Those arrested at Seton Portage were taken to Lillooet, about 100 miles northeast of Vancouver. They were to be released on their own recognizance after being charged with disobeying a court order, authorities said.

Rival gangs ignore calls for peace

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rival Xhosas and Zulus battled with guns, axes and spears today, killing at least 39 people despite peace calls to end violence that has claimed at least 478 lives in 10 days.

Police and witnesses said gangs of Zulus and Xhosas clashed early today at a sprawling migrant workers hostel at Vosloorus, a township east of Johannesburg. Scores of armed Xhosas stormed the complex, grappling with Zulus in hand-to-hand fighting as the hostels were set on fire.

"It was awful. The bodies had been castrated. There were lots of burnt bodies," a local journalist said. "Everyone was in shock."

Police said at least 39 people were killed in Vosloorus. After dawn, police moved in and fired tear gas to break up the fighting. Bodies were put in small piles for collection.

Indians tribes in high demand as firefighters

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — There is a small village north of Albuquerque where people wait all summer to hear a siren's wail.

It is a call to action for the Indians of Pueblo Jemez, renowned for their ability to fight wildfires. Somewhere, there is a fire, and the first ones to reach the town's community center will be hired to fight it.

"Everybody, whether they're naked or eating or whatever, has to run. That's when the physical training comes in handy," said Lawrence Tosa, who coordinates the Jemez crews.

Similar crews from Navajo, Hopi, Apache, Zuni and smaller tribes are called upon each year as fires flare across the country. Wildfires that closed Yosemite Park for the first time in its history were battled by crews that included Apaches from eastern Arizona.

Other recent California fires have been fought by Northern Cheyenne, Acoma, Santo Domingo, Taos, Mescalero and Navajo crews, said Dennis Orrick, fire intelligence officer for the state Department of Forestry and Fire Protection.

The Indians do everything from digging fire lines to lugging water pumps.

"They're invaluable to us. If they were not available, we'd have real difficulty finding other people to fill that void," said Lee Singer, public affairs officer for the Cibola National Forest.

"They're really known for their ability to work, their endurance," said Ray Kirgan, a fire management officer for the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Justice for both sides

The 1985 murder in Mexico of Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena led to the biggest manhunt in U.S. history, resulting so far in seven convictions in U.S. courts and 28 in Mexico. This success is owed mainly to the zeal of DEA agents infuriated by the involvement of some Mexican police officials in the killing and in trying to block the subsequent investigation.

Unfortunately, that zeal occasionally has been excessive, as when last April, DEA agents engineered the abduction and delivery to this country of a Mexican physician, Humberto Alvarez Machain, accused of taking part in the torture of Camarena. Mexican officials protested loudly, to no avail — until early in August, when federal Judge Edward Rafeedie in Los Angeles ruled that Alvarez's abduction violated the U.S.-Mexican extradition treaty, and that U.S. courts thus lack jurisdiction. Rafeedie ordered Alvarez returned to Mexico, where authorities have indicted him, belatedly, on the same charges.

This is a bitter blow to Camarena's DEA colleagues, but it's the right decision nonetheless. Seizing fugitives in foreign countries is wrong, because it violates others' sovereignty and exposes Americans to retaliation. And in this case, it could weaken joint efforts to fight drug trafficking.

Legal scholars believe Rafeedie's decision may be reversed on appeal, given the U.S. courts' history of not quibbling about how suspects get before them. Such an unfortunate result would strengthen a wrongheaded policy, reiterated last year by the Justice Department, that U.S. agents may seize suspects abroad without the local government's permission. The end is worthy — to bring criminals to justice — but the means are unacceptable. There are other, legitimate ways, diplomatic and economic, of applying pressure.

U.S.-Mexican relations are always bumpy, but lately they have been improving. Despite continued friction over the Camarena case, Mexico in June gave DEA agents there both diplomatic immunity and the right to carry weapons, the lack of which had been an inhibiting factor in the dangerous world in which they operate; in return, Mexican agents were allowed to work in the U.S. Southwest. In July, Bush administration officials outlined a plan to help Mexico pursue drug traffickers by furnishing up to $65 million worth of armored helicopter, radar, vehicles and other equipment.

These gains may be jeopardized if the Justice Department successfully appeals Judge Rafeedie's order to return Alvarez to Mexico. Angry Mexican officials now demand the extradition of the DEA operatives who orchestrated the doctor's kidnapping. A Justice Department spokesman says that's out of the question, a perfect example of Washington's one-sided attitude.

That attitude is understandable in light of the way in which Enrique Camarena was killed, and by whom, but it's still not defensible. Sending Alvarez back to face prosecution would give Mexican officials a further opportunity to demonstrate their commitment to justice, and to a campaign against drug traffickers that can only be won jointly, despite all the lingering bitterness among those on the front lines.

Street gangs with gunning little ways

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

City officials said they hoped people wouldn't be frightened away from the Atlanta mall because there was a gang rumble in the vicinity and a man was shot dead.

Of course we won't. Just because the Drips and Cruds were playing war games near the mall and a guy got blown away, why should we be afraid to leave our homes and our alarm systems to go to the mall and visit a real crime scene? Beats watching the Braves.

Mayor Maynard Jackson, in a rare showing of good sense, wants the police to arrest anybody suspected of being involved in a gang, since gangs are known for their drug dealings and their penchant for violence.

So, reasoned the mayor, if we rounded up gang members, the city's streets and the mall might be a lot safer.

But the American Civil Liberties Union wouldn't hear of that. "Just because you belong to a gang," an ACLU spokesman said, "doesn't give the police the right to arrest you."

We're not talking about the Boy Scouts here. We're talking about dangerous young men with guns and a tendency toward pack mentality. They like to wear their own colors.

If policemen see the colors on the street they at least should have the right to see if anybody's packing AK-47s, bazookas or surface-to-air missiles — some of the preferred weapons of gangs that can, in fact, shoot straight.

But that probably wouldn't stand up in court, so I've got another idea.

We let the gangs fight it out in Atlanta Stadium and sell tickets. Which would you rather watch: the Braves strand another 15 base runners or the Mad Dogs and the Killer Bees shoot it out?

We flock to see violent movies. I went to see "Lethal Weapon II" and 416 people got shot while they were still running the credits.

Promoters would put up protective shields at the stadium so paying customers wouldn't get shot. Proceeds from the events could go to help families of innocents killed in gang violence.

We might even televise such events.

"Hello, again, everybody. This is Skip Caray with another exciting night of 'Gang Shootout.'"

"Tonight, it's the Brutes against the Really Really Bad Boys. I'll be back for the starting lineups, but first this word from the Grim Reaper Funeral Home and Death Knell Hospital, featuring the latest in emergency room techniques."

You don't think the wrestling fans would flock to see something like that?

"Hey, look Harold, them's real bullets! That's real blood!"

OK, I know you can't really do that. Too barbaric, too much like the Roman Games. But allow me the fantasy.

Is there a right to indecency?

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
WASHINGTON — Two separate efforts to protect children from the excesses of radio and TV will be coming together this fall. One effort, launched by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), is intended to protect minors from "indecent" broadcasts. The other, launched by Congress, would protect children from too many TV commercials.

Under present regulations of the FCC, broadcasters may not broadcast indecent material between 6 o'clock in the morning and 8 o'clock in the evening. On Aug. 6 the commission announced that it intends to enforce its ban around the clock. The order will be fought out in the federal courts.

On July 23, the House of Representatives approved by voice vote the Children's Television Act of 1990. The bill would limit commercials on children's programs to 10.5 minutes per hour on weekends and not more than 12 minutes per hour on weekdays. A companion bill passed the Senate on July 19. Under the Senate bill, $10 million would be appropriated to launch a National Endowment for Children's Broadcasting. Otherwise the bills are substantially identical.

The FCC's 24-hour ban on indecent material makes sense to me. I have some reservations about writing commercial time limitations into statutory law, but the bill authorizes reconsideration after Jan. 1, 1993. Two years ago, President Reagan vetoed a similar limitation bill. This time around, once the Senate's proposed "endowment" has been sidetracked, President Bush is expected to approve the measure.

Most broadcasters are prepared to go along with the 24-hour ban on indecent material, but a few freethinkers will continue to resist. Opponents contend that only a negligible number of children listen to radio or watch TV at night. The FCC's ban, they fear, will have a chilling effect on adult programming. The commission's definition of "indecent" is unconstitutionally vague. In any event, according to the FCC's statement of Aug. 6, counsel for the objecting licensees believe that broadcasters "have a right to transmit indecent speech and listeners have a right to receive indecent programming."

If we were not talking about broadcasting, counsel's formulation would be entirely acceptable. Of course artists, actors, songwriters and novelists have a right to create material that many persons may regard as "indecent." The First Amendment to the Constitution, protecting freedom of speech and of the press, guarantees such a right.

But broadcasters have no right to be indecent on the public airwaves. The controversy over broadcasting exactly parallels the controversy over grants to purported artists from the National Endowment for the Arts. On their own time, in the private marketplace, artists are free to do whatever they want to do, subject only to the risk of prosecution for disseminating "obscene" material.

The FCC has compiled an impressive record — more to the point, a smelly and distasteful record — of the kind of broadcasting it would ban altogether. Here again newspaper editors face a dilemma. We cannot describe such plays as "Jerker" or such songs as "Penis Envy" without offending readers; but without offending readers we cannot realistically convey what the argument is all about.

Over the past few years the FCC has cited a number of radio stations under the existing limitation. In December 1988 station

WXRK in New York broadcast a morning "Christmas party." A part of the entertainment, marking the birth of Christ, called for hypnotizing "the big black lesbian" until she went "out of her mind with lust."

On a June afternoon in Cleveland, the host of a call-in show on station WWWE asked a caller "when he had his first erection." At 6:50 a.m., station KSD in St. Louis talked about fellatio.

Oral sex similarly occupied a place on a show on KJSJ in San Jose. The FCC imposed a $2,000 forfeiture on KLUC in Las Vegas for broadcasting "Erotic City" by Prince, and a $6,000 forfeiture on KFI Los Angeles for a talk show that interviewed a woman who got her jollies by masturbating her dog.

It is nonsense, puerile nonsense, to contend that broadcasters have some constitutional right to put this stuff on the air. Hokum! Licensees do not own the airwaves, in the same way that newspapers own presses. From the beginning of broadcasting 75 years ago, the public has owned the airwaves. If a smut-loving American wants to watch an X-rated movie or listen to dirty lyrics, let him go to a record store. Plenty of this stuff is widely on sale.

Playing hard at the game of war

By TIM APPEL
Staff Writer

The United States vs. Iraq. George Bush vs. Saddam Hussein. Butter vs. margarine. Who can figure . . .

It was just several weeks ago, some no-name from some no-name state was tabbed as Supreme Court nominee, and the news was saying that despite OPEC trying to raise oil prices, the U.S. had a hearty 16-month supply.

Suddenly, one Arab country invades another Arab country, something that hasn't happened in several months, and our government panics.

So our president has justified placing troops in Saudi Arabia, as a purely preventative measure, on the chance that Iraq does decide to invade. Now there is always the chance that North Dakota will invade South Dakota, yet you don't see the militia digging foxholes around Pierre.

So there we sit, and there they sit. A virtual stalemate, with our trump card being food and medicine, and their trump card being Western hostages.

Of course, I guess it depends on which side of the fence you

Column as I see 'm are sitting on.

Personally, I believe that if the presidential election was conducted today, Saddam Hussein would receive more votes than George Bush in Texas. Why? First, because the Iraqi president did something that the powerful United States couldn't do; kick the Ayatollah's butt. I mean, who actually rooted for Iran in their war against Iraq?

And, of course, Hussein has done far more for West Texas in two weeks than Bush has in two years: Driving oil prices higher and perhaps getting unemployed oil field workers back on the job. Viva la Hussein!

Of course, on the opposite side of the coin, four out of five doctors surveyed declare that Hussein is brain dead, the result of wrapping those towel-hats around his skull too tight. And there he is, surrounded by millions of fanatical crazies who spend every waking hour chanting anti-American slogans in the streets of Baghdad. Doesn't anybody in Iraq have a job?

They say that "idle hands do the devil's handiwork." So here are millions of unemployed freaks, looking for something to do. And after their eight-year conflict with Iran, Iraq was simply bored, so they invaded Kuwait.

But before blasting Iraq on invading such a military powerhouse like Kuwait, let's face it: Our past two invasions have been nothing short of a joke, especially our glorious storming of Grenada. Breaking it down in football terms, that invasion was tantamount to the San Francisco 49ers playing the Pecos Eagles.

For the United States, the pre-season schedule is over. For years, we have seen television coverage of those wimps burning our flag and ridiculing us before the world. Morale in the states is low, recession is just around the corner, and George wants to play by civilized rules. Phooey!

The people of the Middle East cry for a holy war against the "Great Satanic Imperialists."

Fine, but the excitement of such a holy war would equal, in comparison, the last holy war. I refer to the slaughter inflicted upon SMU by the Notre Dame football squad last year.

Would such a skirmish be limited to a "gentleman's war," with simple rifles, grenades, tanks and conventional air power? Of course not. Hussein, who would make the perfect wrestling bad-guy, would turn the match into no-holds-barred free-for-all.

In that case, it would finally be time for the United States to act tough for once. The heck with world opinion, let's have a little fun for once. And hey, why not bring our new friends, the Soviet Union, into the picture.

We both have massive financial problems, and with the new arms pact, we have to pay more to have our atomic weapons dismantled and destroyed. Therefore, should Hussein get a bit out of hand, the superpowers could host a BYON (bring your own nuke) party.

In this way, we could be getting rid of our bombs without cost. Once again, Hussein proves to be a financial asset to the red, white and blue.

Spelling errors confuse drivers

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va. (AP) — It's bad enough when out-of-staters confuse this Eastern Panhandle town with the state capitol of Charleston.

Now 14 new road signs direct West Virginia drivers down the road to Berryville, Va., instead of Berryville, thanks to a spelling error by the state Division of Highways.

"Maybe they don't spell as well as we do," said Billy Thompson, president of the Berryville Chamber of Commerce.

Ken Kobesky, director of the DOH's engineering department, said the letters can be removed and the signs corrected.

"We don't want to offend anyone with the spelling," Kobesky said.

But Berryville should be used to such mistakes. It is the county seat of Clarke County, Va., named for the Lewis and Clark expedition, Thompson said.

What about the extra "e"? The Virginia Assembly spelled Clark wrong when it incorporated the county, Thompson said.

Wise son quotes his mother's advice

EDGEWORTH, Pa. (AP) — Robert Popovich is one son who listened to his mother.

Popovich passes his mother's advice on to clients as a corporate consultant and has even put her nuggets of wisdom in a book due out later this year.

"I'm a product of Dorothy. I'm taking her efforts and teachings and spreading them around," he said. Popovich, 46, called the book "Mother Always Said, Robert ... A Mother's 10 Commandments to Personal and Business Success."

"I never knew he would quote me," Mrs. Popovich said. "I guess it sinks in. What parents say is very important."

From Mrs. Popovich: — If you give respect, you will get it back. If you give love, you will get it back.

— Intellect is measured by the questions that you ask, not the statements that you make.

— Run to adversity, not away from it.

Popovich said his company, Popovich & Associates, serves Fortune 500 companies in the United States and clients in Europe.

'S tough to slink and slither

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's harder work being a snake than scientists once believed.

Three University of California, Irvine, scientists studying the energy cost of locomotion report that it takes as much energy for a snake to undulate along the ground as does for an animal with legs to walk.

This, says Bruce Jayne, a coauthor of a study published today in Science, is contrary to what scientists have long believed.

"Our findings do not support the widely held notion that the energetic cost of terrestrial locomotion by limbless animals is less than that of limbed animals," he said.

In plain language, it is as hard to wiggle along as it is to walk along. Or it takes as much energy to slither as it does to stroll.

To find out how hard a snake has to work to get from one place to another, Jayne and his colleagues got a group of black racer snakes and figured out a way to put them through an aerobic workout.

The scientists then compared the results with similar studies of limbed animals, such as lizards, of the same mass, or weight. The energy used by both the footed and the fanged was about the same, they discovered.

Teachers with special skills in big demand

WASHINGTON (TNN) — A new study of American teachers shows there are plenty of trained teachers available to handle swelling school enrollment.

The study by a private research group claims there is a surplus of people with teaching credentials who come and go from the classroom according to demand and pay — although the nation's schools are facing a shortage of teachers in particular disciplines.

The study contrasts with concerns expressed in recent years by the federal Education Department that the nation risks a shortage of teachers, particularly in mathematics and science.

Federal officials are expecting the nation's elementary and secondary schools to employ about 30,000 more teachers this year, for a total of 2.7 million.

A new survey of 3,000 teachers by The National Center for Education Information, a private research firm shows nearly half have left the profession in the past, only to return in later years because of changing circumstances.

have to do with more geography. Smaller, rural districts and urban districts report shortages, while wealthier districts have far more of 191 school districts showed that roughly 25 percent reported difficulty in getting teachers for specialized positions, such as bil-for a time, or for people to leave other careers for teaching.

"The teaching profession shows remarkable flexibility," she said. "The one area that showed a stubborn shortage was special education — teaching the handicapped. That requires an unusual amount of training and dedication."

NEA officials said higher teacher salaries and the growing number of school students has fostered new interest in the teaching profession. The average salary in 1988 was $28,500 and is expected to climb to $32,500 by the year 2000.

"We're expecting about 89,000 new teachers to graduate from college this year. That's an increase over previous years when public school enrollments were declining," Watts said.

Overall, there is expected to be a turnover of 200,000 teachers in 1990.

"There are shortages, but they have to do with more geography. Smaller, rural districts and urban districts report shortages, while wealthier districts have far more applicants than positions," — a National Center for Education Information researcher.

"What I discovered is there is a surprising number of teachers out there," said Emily Feistritzer, who conducted the study. "I used to think there were a few thousand surplus people with credentials out there. Now I'm ready to believe there are perhaps a million."

Feistritzer said that school districts have been able to fill mathematics and science positions if they have been willing to offer incentives, such as higher pay.

"There are shortages, but they applicants than positions," she said.

The National Education Association, the nation's largest teachers union, essentially agreed with the new study.

"Math and science teachers have been in demand for some time, but there does not appear to be an overall shortage of teachers," said Stephen Watts. "We're concerned that there aren't enough minority teachers or bilingual teachers."

NEA officials said a recent study ingual teachers and special education. California public schools alone estimate they need an additional 8,000 teachers who can speak either Spanish or Asian languages, according to the NEA.

"Those kinds of skills are difficult to find, but there seems to be a pool of people out there to fill those jobs if they are attractive," Feistritzer said.

Her study indicated it was common for teachers to leave the profession and go into another career

Soviet condo will be built at Moscow

EAST HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Will a luxurious condominium project lose anything in translation when builders try to duplicate its design near a lake outside Moscow?

Victor Malnev thinks not — even though wood will be replaced by concrete and steel.

"Maybe it will even look nicer than here," he said as he toured the Four Beaches condominium development on Long Island Sound.

Malnev is chairman of the Soviet farm collective Zavet Ilyicha, which jointly developing the suburban Moscow project with Siberian Kerschner International Housing Ltd. of Westport.

The 1,000-member collective will not only lease the land for the project but also provide produce for those living in the complex, the first of its kind in the Soviet Union, Malnev said.

Groundbreaking for the $130 million townhouse community, designed to house foreign businessmen, is scheduled for the end of September.

The international residential community, to be named Rosinka, is modeled on Four Beaches, a 135-unit condominium community consisting of three-story, wood-frame buildings.

Family dinner pies

Old-fashioned pot pies take center stage at meal time

Food is fashion, and as hemlines rise and fall, so such tried-and-true family favorites as pot pies are back on the culinary scene.

Today's mini skirt is not identical to those that set trends 20 years ago. Nor are today's pot pies exactly what grandmother served — except for their flaky crusts.

Chefs who are practitioners of new American cuisine are elevating pot pies with nostalgia as part of the return of comfort foods, yet the pies of today are lighter than those of the past. Main meal pies, stressing nutritious vegetables and carbohydrates, are consistent with two important contemporary food trends — increasing consumption of vegetables and complex carbohydrates and speeding up cooking time.

As testimony, Crisco has developed "Garden Harvest Chicken Pie" with cubes of moist chicken and colorful vegetables in a light creamy sauce between two tender, flaky pie crusts.

Each serving is a meal in itself, and has only 440 calories and 27 milligrams of cholesterol. In addition to the healthful vegetables, the sauce is made with skim milk, and the only salt is that from the very low sodium bouillon powder.

Main meal pies can hardly be claimed as American, as fond as New Englanders may be of their clam pies and Southerners are of chicken pot pie.

Although we write that something is "as American as apple pie," the French might claim their "tarte tatin" as older. And while Mary King's "Fiesta Beef Pot Pie," one of those showcased in the August issue of Good Housekeeping — was chosen the 1990 American Pie, ancestors of current English steak and kidney pies have been known since they were served in Medieval manor houses.

Pies are a wonderful way to "stretch" leftovers, and feed a crowd most economically.

CLASSIC CRISCO FLAKY PIE CRUST
(Double crust for 9-inch pie)
2 level cups all-purpose flour
1 level teaspoon salt
3/4 cup shortening
5 tablespoons cold water (some brands of flour may need more water)

Using measuring cups and spoons. Measure ingredients carefully. Spoon flour into measuring cup and level. Mix flour and salt in bowl.

Cut in shortening using pastry blender (or two knives) until all flour is just blended-in to form pea-sized chunks. Sprinkle with water, one tablespoon at a time, tossing lightly with fork until dough will form a ball. Divide dough into two parts. Press between hands to form two 5-6-inch "pancakes." Flour rolling surface and pin lightly. Roll dough into circle and trim 1-inch larger than inverted pie plate.

Loosen dough carefully. Fold into quarters. Unfold and press into pie plate; moisten edge; add filling. Roll out top crust; fold and lift onto filled pie. Fold top edge under bottom and flute with finger or fork. Prick or slit top crust to allow steam to escape.

GOLDEN HARVEST CHICKEN PIE
Unbaked 9-inch double pie crust
Creamy chicken filling:
1 tablespoon shortening
1 medium onion, thinly sliced (1/2 cup)
2 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons very low sodium instant chicken bouillon granules
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 1/3 cups skim milk
2 cups 1/2-inch cubed potatoes, cooked
2 cups cut-up cooked chicken breast
1 1/2 cups frozen peas and carrots, thawed
3/4 cup frozen corn, thawed
1 tablespoon snipped fresh parsley, or 1 teaspoon dried

About 1 3/4 hours before serving: Follow directions for preparing and rolling double crust. For filling, in 3-quart saucepan over medium heat, melt shortening. Add onion; cook, stirring often, until tender. Combine flour, bouillon granules, thyme and pepper; stir into onion mixture. Cook, stirring often, 1 minute. Stir in milk gradually; cook and stir until mixture thickens. Remove from heat. Stir in potatoes, chicken, peas and carrots, corn and parsley. Spoon hot filling into unbaked 9-inch pie shell.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Moisten edge of bottom crust with water. Lift top crust onto filled pie. Fold top edge under bottom crust; flute or make rope edge. Cut slits or design in top crust to allow steam to escape while baking. Bake pie 35 to 45 minutes or until chicken filling begins to bubble and crust edges are brown. Makes eight main-dish servings.

FIESTA BEEF POT PIE
Beef vegetable filling:
1 tablespoon shortening
1 pound lean boneless beef chuck steak, cut into 1/4-inch chunks**
1/2 cup chopped green pepper**
1/2 cup chopped onion**
1 14 1/2-ounce can Mexican-style stewed tomatoes**
1 8 1/2-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained
1 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained
1/2 cup water
1/3 cup tomato paste
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon crushed red pepper (optional)
1/3 cup sliced ripe olives
Flaky crust:
1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1/3 cup yellow cornmeal
2 tablespoons toasted wheat germ
1 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup shortening

1/3 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
5 to 6 tablespoons cold water
Glaze:
1 egg beaten
Topping:
1/3 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
*One pound ground round can be substituted for the cubed chuck, if desired.
**If Mexican-style tomatoes are not available, substitute a 14 1/2-ounce can stewed tomatoes; increase green pepper and onion to 3/4 cup each and add one tablespoon diced jalapeno pepper and 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder to filling.

About 1 1/2 hours before serving: For filling, in 10-inch skillet over medium heat, in hot shortening, cook meat until well browned, with slotted spoon, remove meat to bowl.

In drippings remaining in skillet, cook green pepper and onion until tender. Add stewed tomatoes, corn, mushrooms, water, tomato paste, sugar, chili powder, cumin, salt, crushed red pepper, and cooked beef; over high heat, heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 30 minutes, stirring mixture occasionally. Remove skillet from heat; stir in sliced ripe olives.

Meanwhile, for crust, in bowl, combine flour, cornmeal, wheat germ and salt. Cut in shortening and cheese to resemble coarse crumbs. Stir in water, 1 tablespoon at a time, until dough forms a ball. Divide dough in half. On floured surface, roll half of dough 1 1/2 inches larger all around than inverted 9-inch pie plate; ease into pie plate. Trim edge with plate.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees F. Spoon hot filling into unbaked 9-inch pie shell. Roll remaining dough as for bottom crust. Moisten edge of bottom crust with water. Lift top crust onto filled pie.

Cut slits or design in top crust to allow steam to escape while baking. Trim pastry edge, leaving 1/2-inch overhang. Fold top edge under bottom crust; flute or make rope edge. For glaze, brush egg over top crust. Place a sheet of foil underneath pie plate; crimp edges to form a rim to catch any drips during baking. Bake pie 35 minutes or until meat filling begins to bubble and crust is golden. Sprinkle with cheese. Makes 6 servings.

POTATO PATCH PIE
Unbaked 9-inch double pie crust
Filling:
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon instant chopped onion
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
4 medium new red potatoes (about 1 pound)
1 10-ounce package frozen chopped broccoli, thawed and drained on paper towels
1 2-ounce jar sliced pimientos, drained
8 slices (3/4-ounce each) Swiss pasteurized process cheese food, divided
1/3 pound cooked ham, trimmed and cut into 1/2-inch chunks
Topping:
1 tablespoon skim milk
2 teaspoons grated Parmesan cheese
About 1 1/2 hours before serving: Follow directions for preparing and rolling double crust. For filling, in small bowl, combine flour, onion, mustard, oregano and garlic powder. Set aside. Peel and thinly slice two potatoes into bottom of unbaked 9-inch pie shell. Sprinkle with 1 tablespoon flour mixture. Spoon broccoli over potatoes. Sprinkle pimientos over top.

Sprinkle remaining flour mixture over top of vegetables. Place three slices cheese on top of vegetables. Break fourth slice into quarters. Fill in spaces. Sprinkle ham over cheese. Peel and thinly slice remaining potatoes over ham. Top with remaining cheese slices. Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Moisten edge of bottom crust with water. Lift top crust onto filled pie. Fold top edge under bottom crust; flute or make rope edge. Cut slits or design in top crust to allow steam to escape while baking.

Bake pie 35 minutes; then remove from oven. For topping, brush top crust with milk and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Cover edge of crust with foil to prevent over-browning. Return to oven for 10 minutes. Let stand 10-15 minutes before cutting and serving.

Makes eight main-dish servings.

Mom not in a greeting mood to welcome uninvited guests

Editor's Note: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.

DEAR ABBY: Our only son, Sammy, is a wonderful young professional man who practices in another state. He recently became engaged to a girl who lives where he practices. We have met her and think she's a nice young woman, but we're wondering what kind of family she comes from.

Sammy telephoned last week, saying he wanted to bring the girl and her mother here to meet us. I discouraged him, saying it was too soon — that I preferred to wait until after summer to have them here.

Today he called again to say they are coming! I was shocked to think that this girl and her mother would set aside formalities and come without my personal invitation. (I'm sure they pressured Sammy into it.)

Of course I'll be hospitable, but what do you think of people who would come without a personal invitation from the hostess? — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: After a couple has announced their engagement, it is never "too soon" for the families to meet. (In fact, it's customary to meet before.) I suspect you aren't too keen on Sammy's girl; your preference to "wait" reveals your reluctance to accept her.

If you don't want to lose your "wonderful son," you'd better mellow fast, Mother, and forgo the "formalities."

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend asked me if he could borrow my car, so I said OK. (His was in the shop.)

When he brought it back I noticed a cigarette butt with lipstick on it in the ashtray. I asked him how it got there, and he said he didn't know.

Do you believe it's possible that he doesn't know how it got there? Or do you think he's lying to me?

Your answer is very important to me, so please give it some thought.

— HURT
DEAR HURT: One swallow doesn't make a spring, and one cigarette butt shouldn't necessarily hang a man. I would like to know more about your boyfriend and his record of reliability before expressing an opinion.

DEAR ABBY: Our widowed daughter, approaching 50, recently remarried and moved halfway across the country. When we visited her recently, I noticed only two pair of pajamas in the laundry and none in their drawers. Doesn't it strike you as odd, if not improper, for middle-aged people to wear night clothes only when they have guests? — SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: What people wear (or don't wear) to bed is between them. The only impropriety I see here is your concern about something that shouldn't concern you.

People are eating them up! To order your copy of Abby's favorite recipes, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

A ringer

BEAUMONT — Bettie Lou Radke displays her South Park High School class ring that she lost in 1950 in Waxahachie. The ring was found two years ago by the Rev. Walter H. Huber while he was prospecting with a metal detector. Huber then set out to find the owner by tracing her initials "BLR" and seeking the location of the now defunct Beaumont High School.

Elbow school to see some changes

By KATHRYN HOLLINGSHEAD
Forsan Correspondent

School bells will ring once again Monday at Elbow Elementary School, where Principal Richard Light announces some changes. The class schedule has been altered to include a 30-minute "enrichment period" for all students.

According to Light, this time will accommodate tutoring, a Higher Order Thinking Skills program for at-risk students, UIL activities, a gifted and talented program, or any special interest project. "We have a lot of talented teachers with interesting hobbies" comments Light. He hopes this enrichment period will be a time to implement special projects for the students.

There will be a teacher-supervised study hall after school hours for students not completing assignments, with the exception of sickness. "Incomplete classwork becomes homework," Light noted. Teachers will not give zeros for incomplete work, he said. Instead, they will contact the parent and allow a student two days to finish an assignment.

If the task has not been acceptably completed, the student will stay for a 30-minute study hall after school. The parent must then pick up the student at 4:30 at the school.

To reinforce language skills, a 30-minute computer lab will be provided for each student twice a week.

The Hawaiian English Program will be replaced by the new schedule. "We've outgrown HEP," Light states. He also notes that the state requirements for study have cut into the time previously allotted for the HEP program.

Elbow elementary welcomes Chuck Clarke as a fourth grade teacher. Clarke was a reading specialist at Garden City, and has nine years teaching experience.

Students and visitors will find a novelty in the Elbow school office: A phone booth, complete with door and window. The intent of the booth is to ensure privacy and cut confusion in the school office.

Elbow secretary Elaine East encourages parents to come this week to pay for student lunches, before classes resume. As many as 90 parents and students have jammed the school entrance and swamped the office in the past.

buying lunches on the first day of school.

Elbow will have an open library this year. Joan Rock, school librarian, will open the library daily at 7:45 and encourages students to find time in their schedules to stop to check out books. She hopes the new library schedule will encourage students to read every day.

Pastor celebrates 18th year in Forsan

The Rev. Jack Clinkscale, pastor of Forsan Baptist Church, was honored Sunday evening at a pastor appreciation fellowship for 18 years of service at the church.

Long-time member Zimmalew Boeker took advantage of the occasion to print the following in the church bulletin.

"Each of us can recall times in the past 18 years when Brother Jack has shared our laughter and our tears, listened to our problems as well as our joys, seen us through illness, admired our children and grandchildren, and preached some mighty fine sermons through it all. Thank you, Brother Jack."

Former Chalk residents reunite

The Chalk community of southeast Howard County, a victim of post World War II economic and social changes, regained its life for a few hours as about 50 former residents met at Forsan High School. Chalk, later named Otis Chalk, and Ross City were sister oil communities closely linked with Forsan.

Six states and 17 towns and cities were represented by the group. Several family reunions resulted from the gathering.

After a couple of hours of greetings, sharing memories and old snapshots, an informal meeting was conducted with exchange of information about occupations, families, and places of residence.

Announcements of those who sent greetings but who could not attend included Mrs. Ada (Bob) Odom who is 98 years old of Nixon, Tx. and Mrs. Boone Cramer of Colorado City, first principal of Chalk School 1928. This first reunion after as long as 50 years had resulted from word of mouth, telephone calls, and exchange of copies of reunion announcement from one person to another. It was suggested that another gathering be held in two years. Ruby Adkins a resident 50 years ago was the first to agree, with others quickly concurring. Ozella Long, 2909 Navajo, Big Spring, Texas 79720, will serve as coordinator and names and addresses of former Chalk and Ross City residents may be mailed to her.

The Chalk group then joined the Forsan High School reunion. Chalk school consisted of seven grades with students continuing high school studies at Forsan, so the reunion for the Clark group began again with Chalk/Forsan students renewing acquaintances.

Chalk reunion information was submitted by Ozella Long.

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incidents:

• Dennis Ray Buchanan, 23, of Coahoma, pleaded guilty Tuesday in County Court to driving while intoxicated. He was sentenced to 15 days in jail and fined $800. He will serve his time in a work-release program.

• Bill Junior Loftis, 32, 1707 Aylford, was released Monday after posting a $5,000 bond for a charge of revocation of probation for possession of a controlled substance.

• A residence on Angela Road was burglarized Friday, it was reported. Taken was a $150 .22-caliber revolver, two gold rings — one set with diamonds — worth $2,500 and three blank checks.

Police beat

Two young girls suffered minor injuries in a two-car collision Tuesday afternoon in the 500 block of North Lamesa Highway, according to police reports.

A late-model van driven by Charles D. Reed, 33, Fort Lewis, Wash., and a car driven by Caroline Salazar Cuellar, 815 W. Sixth St., were traveling in the northbound lane when Reed, who was apparently watching another car, failed to stop in time to avoid striking the rear of Cuellar's car about 4:15 p.m., reports state.

Cuellar's five and seven-year-old daughters suffered minor injuries and were transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center by American Medical Transport personnel, according to reports.

Cuellar was cited by police for allowing a passenger to ride in a portion of vehicle not intended for passengers and Reed was cited for failure to control speed to prevent an accident.

Big Spring police also reported investigating the following incidents:

An employee of Rip Griffin Truck Terminal reported someone left without paying for $230-worth of diesel.

• A woman who resides in the 1800 block of Barnes Avenue reported someone stole a bicycle valued at $120.

• A Springtown man reported someone stole items valued at $112.

• A man who resides in the 2100 block of Johnson Street reported someone smashed the windshield of his car.

• A man who resides in the 2500 block of Fairchild Street reported someone stole an air conditioner compressor valued at $480.

• A man who resides in the 200 block of Circle Drive reported someone stole tires valued at $150.

• Lloyd Wayne Swanson, 36, Lamesa, was arrested for failure to identify and a warrant for speeding.

• Julia Marie Wickliffe, 47, P.O. Box 363, was arrested for driving while intoxicated and defective equipment.

• Wiley Eugene Ulmer, 44, Midland, was arrested for driving while intoxicated and driving under suspension.

Commission attempting to eliminate 'speed trap'

By MICHAEL DUFFY
 Staff Writer

The Big Spring Traffic Commission approved a motion Tuesday night to ask the city council about creating a uniform speed limit on FM 700 along a 2½-mile stretch of highway that runs through Big Spring.

Traffic Commission Chairman Don Proctor complained that drivers must alter speeds seven times along a section of FM 700 between the Burger King restaurant and Wasson Road to comply with variances that specify between 40 and 55 mph.

The city council must recommend a change in the speed limit to the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation before any action can be considered, officials said.

Proctor informed the commission that he has received numerous complaints from American Petro Fina employees who allege the 2½-mile stretch of FM 700 is a "speed trap."

"You may be hearing from their union," Proctor said.

He also believes the speed limit on Gregg Street should be increased to 45 mph. It is currently 30 mph.

Proctor said Chetty had informed him he would discuss changing the speed limit on Gregg Street following completion of the Highway 87 widening project, however Chetty never contacted him before he reinstated the 30 mph limit.

Proctor said he was informed by Bill Burnett, district engineer for the state Department of Highways and Transportation, that the highway and transportation department would study the lengthy amount of time it takes for traffic lights to change at the intersections of Birdwell Lane and Goliad Street on FM 700.

He said it often takes 35 seconds for the lights to change — even when traffic is light.

"People sit and wait for those lights to change, then they get mad

Meeting notes untyped

Big Spring Traffic Commission Chairman Don Proctor, responding to numerous complaints about the thoroughfares that run through the city, has been attempting to make recommendations for improving the most serious problems affecting drivers.

Frustrated by the response he was receiving from resident engineer Mike Chetty, Proctor expressed his concerns in a three-page letter to Arnold Oliver, state Department of Highways and Public Transportation engineering director, on Aug. 2.

Two days later, Bill Burnett, district engineer (Austin), called Proctor and set up a meeting to and get in a hurry," Proctor said. "That's what causes accidents, in my opinion."

The chairman complained that the City Council rarely takes action on the traffic commission's recommendations.

"I would like to have this commission get a little more action from the council when there's a problem, but when brought to their attention it disappears," Proctor said.

He added that in conversations with the HDSPT officials, he was informed that the commission could exercise more authority.

"It would just take a letter from the city, but I don't think we will get it," Proctor said.

He also expressed concern about the intersection of FM 700 and Virginia Street — the site of two serious accidents.

Although admitting no set speed limit can effectively prevent accidents, Proctor recommended that the 40 mph zone just before Birdwell Lane be moved west to beyond the Virginia Street intersection.

discuss the issues the traffic commission chairman raised.

Proctor, Burnett, Chetty, City Manager Hal Boyd and Public Works Director Tom Decell met in Big Spring on Aug. 10.

Proctor complained at last night's meeting that he was unable to get a copy of the notes taken at the meeting by Decell.

The notes have not been transcribed and Boyd, who along with Decell attended last night's meeting, told Proctor he would personally have to pay for the transcription.

Chetty is out of town this week and was unavailable for comment.

Traffic Commission member Clyde McMahon Jr. expressed appreciation to the Glasscock County commissioners for their recent commitment to help obtain the right-of-way for a possible Texas highway trunk system.

At stake in the future is a possible federal designation of Interstate 27 along a four-lane route from Lubbock through either Big Spring or Midland and then through Sterling City.

Approximately six weeks ago, McMahon said Burnett discussed the trunk system and the possibility of it running through Big Spring with members of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce.

"He (Burnett) told us that Highway 87 will one day be a major highway," McMahon said.

He also said Burnett told him that the highway department places significant importance on roadways where 30,000 cars travel in a 24-hour period.

McMahon said an average of only 7,500 vehicles travel through the intersection at FM 700 and Goliad Street.

with Capitol Appraisal Group Inc., of Austin, the firm which determines mineral values for the Appraisal District here.

The trading price of West Texas intermediate sweet crude on Jan. 1, the date used to gauge oil prices for appraisal values, was $21 compared to $17.25 at the same time last year, Halseth said. In addition, he said, since most oil in Howard County is sour, they make a $1 to $2 adjustment downward.

But since Jan. 1, trading prices have shot up to $29.25 for a barrel of crude oil as of this morning, according to Delta Commodities in Big Spring. Halseth expects the price on Jan. 1 to be higher than this year's $21.

"I would say prices are going to be higher, even if things quiet down (in the Mideast)," he said. "Who knows, if all hell breaks loose, prices could go up to $35 a barrel."

"With people barely hanging on at $16 to $18 bucks a barrel (in previous years), they're making money now," he said. Meanwhile, he expects production to keep decreasing until it becomes feasible to invest in oil production. "It's going to take a while for them to get some extra cash in their pockets," he said. Oil production decreased more than 7.5 percent, from 11.6 million barrels in 1988 to 10.7 million in 1989, he said.

The biggest drop was a more than 20 percent decrease in oil production in the Big Spring ISD, Halseth said. It went from 2 million barrels in 1988 to 1.6 million in 1989. About 60 percent of the decline is attributed to a Vealmoor unit operated by Exxon, he said.

"That property has had a large production decline in the last two years," he said. "In the future I even see another production decline on that."

The Coahoma and Forsan ISDs also experienced production declines. However, values increased in the Forsan ISD by $36 million, almost 15 percent, while Coahoma ISD decreased by only $9,000, about 6.5 percent.

Production in Coahoma ISD went from 3.2 million barrels to 2.9 million, more than an 8.5 percent decrease, while production in Forsan ISD went from 5.7 million to 5.5 million, less than a three percent decrease.

"The production in Forsan is what has helped the whole county," Halseth said. "Conoco (FINA) was the big reason that Forsan's production was about the same as last year."

Forsan ISD approves budget

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
 Staff Writer

Forsan school board members approved a $3.7 million budget, to be funded by a 96 cent tax rate per $100 of value in their regular meeting Monday. The budget expenditures are up by 1 percent over last year.

In other business, board members agreed to change a policy regarding the annual senior class trip. The trip will no longer be subject to board approval nor will it be the responsibility of the board.

Member Rip Patterson brought the board a recommendation for the change from a committee which had studied the issue. Superintendent J.F. Poynor will develop an appropriate policy change and bring it to the board for approval at the next meeting.

Trustees voted to maintain district policy with regard to the career ladder, a tool for teacher evaluation mandated by the state. Forsan teachers can move easily into level II on the ladder, but higher levels are made intentionally hard to reach, Poynor said.

The policy has been the board's way of dealing with what has become a very troublesome issue for many schools, he said.

"I think there's an understanding by our staff on this," he said.

"I have asked teachers to talk to the principals about it."

He explained that keeping the policy seems to be a good idea, based on input from administrators and teachers.

"Nobody's complaining with it this way," he said. "(The board) can always go back in and change it later if need be."

Trustees voted to reinstate a contract with American Medical Transport, a Big Spring ambulance service, to stand by at athletic events.

The board set a special meeting to be held Aug. 30 to amend the 1989-90 budget.

Used by youngsters in the National Spelling Bee and compiling a notebook full of words he might face at the bee.

The first step toward State was March 18, when he won the Midland Bee. He then placed first in the regional spell-off in Andrews, clearing the way for a return trip to the state bee.

He said the format for the senior spelling bee is basically the same as that used by younger spellers.

"It's the same format, except that it's not a national competition yet," Tate said. "All the books are the same... I don't know how those eighth-graders pull it off. Some of those words are way out there."

The five-state competition is the highest level for the senior spellers at this time, but Tate expressed optimism that the tournament will go national in the near future.

Tate was a wire chief at the Big Spring railroad station from 1948-63. Now retired from the railroad, he sells insurance. "I'm independent; I can come and go as I please," he said. "I'm still pretty active."

catastrophe" if fighting breaks out in the Persian Gulf.

"Preventing some foreigners from traveling is not an act of vengeance, but a force... to deter a crime of aggression President Bush intends to commit against the people of Iraq," he said.

Of the 3,000 Americans trapped in Iraq and Kuwait by the Aug. 2 invasion, 54 are believed to have been seized by Iraqi authorities, the State Department said Tuesday. Iraq has said it is using some as human shields at potential military targets.

U.S. officials said the Bush administration is making contingency plans to cut back the U.S. Embassy staff in Kuwait, but said the embassy will not shut its doors despite Iraqi demands that foreign missions in Kuwait City be transferred to Baghdad by Friday.

Thailand intends to keep its embassy open until all 5,000 Thai workers are evacuated, a senior Thai official said today. The embassy would close only if forced to by Iraqi soldiers occupying that country, said Kobsak Chotikul, an ambassador-at-large.

Arab efforts to counter the Iraqi aggression grew. Egypt, which has led Arab opposition to the invasion, urged Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait or face a war "that will devour everything."

Iraq's official news agency rejected as "over-simplification," the appeal by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Syria formally announced it was sending troops to Saudi Arabia but did not say how many.

Yemen promised to turn away an Iraqi oil tanker, but questions about its intentions surfaced when at least two Iraqi oil tankers appeared in its port.

It was uncertain whether today's scheduled U.N. Security Council meeting would produce a military-enforced embargo against Iraq.

The Soviet Union has slowed U.S. efforts to gain such approval, Western diplomats say.

The Soviets the past week sought to revive the Military Staff Committee composed of the five permanent U.N. members before imposing a blockade, and have emphasized they would only participate under a U.N. flag. China has asked for more time to see whether voluntary measures against Iraq succeed.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said in an interview that some elements of Saddam's proposal to end the Middle East crisis "merit serious attention," but he did not elaborate.

Financial markets took another beating from the Gulf crisis. Tokyo's Nikkei Stock Average today lost 1,086.93 points, or 4.13 percent, to close at 25,210.91. On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 52.48 points to close at 2,603.96.

Bearcats, Steers and Cowboys

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

There's one thing all the prognosticators seem to agree on — the Garden City Bearcats will have a good football team.

All the preseason Class A polls have coach Sam Scott's Bearcats ranked high. The Harris Poll has them ranked fourth, the Texas Sportswriters Association has them ranked third and most recently, the Associated Press has them ranked fifth.

I agree with the football experts. Coach Sam Scott returns a very strong foundation with more than 20 lettermen. It's kind of scary to consider the abundance of talent that this Class A school has.

There's not many AAAAA schools where one has to bench press more than 310 pounds to be in the strongest top 15. There's not that many schools who have a running back with 4.48 speed in the 40-yard dash, or how about a 238-pound fullback who bench presses close to 400 pounds and runs a 4.63 40? Or what about a freshman linebacker who can high jump 6-2, has 4.9 speed and is a 300-pound bench presser?

The Bearcats are 19-5 the past two seasons, making the playoff both years. Surprisingly they haven't won a district championship under Scott.

I wouldn't bet against that happening this year. In fact, I wouldn't bet against the Bearcats still being around in December.

The AP poll had the Big Spring Steers ranked No. 7, while they are tabbed fifth in the Harris Poll.

A&M Consolidated, which was beaten by Tyler Chapel Hill in the state championship game last year, is ranked no. 1. McKinney is second, West Orange Stark is third and Jasper is fourth and the Steers round out the top five.

Area football fans can get an indication of what to expect when the Crossroads Country football edition comes out the first weekend in September.

An important preview to the season, this special section is for the die-hard football fan. It gives you a close and personal look of the 10 teams in the five counties the Big Spring Herald covers.

In football-crazed West Texas, the Herald gives you complete area football coverage. Be sure to keep the copy of the Crossroads Country football edition as a reference for the 1990 season.

Dallas Cowboys first round draft choice Emmitt Smith came up with the Move of the Week, and he hasn't even been in practice.

Smith has shunned a total package deal by the Cowboys of $3.2 million for an undisclosed number of years; but I'd say five at the most. At five years that would come to about $640,000 per year.

Smith and his agents are asking for $800,000 a year. Since the Cowboys haven't matched that offer, to show that he means business, Smith has enrolled at the University of Florida, where he'll work on getting his degree, taking 15 hours the fall semester.

It's good to see a young man know where his priorities are, right? After all, Mr. Smith's major is one of the toughest in college — public recreation, and he's been a model student.

In four years he lacks only 42 hours to get his degree. Yeah, that's right, 42 hours. At his current pace he could possibly get his degree by the year 1992 — if he stays aggressive.

If, by chance, he plays football and continues his education, he'll probably get his degree by the 21st century.

Wise up, Emmitt. Some guys are in college to someday play pro football. Forty-two hours short after four years doesn't seem like a prototype student. Take the money and do what you do best, because it certainly isn't school.

Female hurler has rough start

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — The selection of a girl as a starter for the first game of the Little League World Series proved to be more hype than substance, but it wasn't planned that way.

Trail, British Columbia, manager Andy Bilesky wanted a full game out of 12-year-old Kelly Craig, but didn't get even a third of an inning.

"If she was on, she would have gone the whole way," Bilesky said after Canada's 8-3 victory over Matamoros, Mexico, in Tuesday's quarterfinal game.

In the day's second game, Kerrie Cordero struck out 12 as Cypress, Calif. beat Brooklyn, Mich., 9-0.

Craig, like Matamoros starter Ramon Macias, loaded the bases before being pulled in the first inning. The difference in the game was the relief pitchers.

Craig's reliever allowed only one run after taking over in the middle of a jam. Macias' threw a wild pitch and let two runs in.

"We didn't take (advantage of) that chance and they did. If you don't take advantage of things on your side, then you lose," Matamoros manager Alfredo de la Garza said.

Bilesky replaced Craig with David Caron, who he had hoped to use in Thursday's semifinal against Taiwan or West Germany, which met today.

"I didn't want to use him at all, but when we got the jump, we decided to go for the win," Bilesky said. "If we had been losing (when Craig ran into trouble), somebody else would have gone in."

Under Little League rules, pitchers can't pitch in consecutive games.

Where Caron succeeded, Matamoros relievers failed. Macias walked three of the first four batters he faced. Arturo Puig, in relief, let Keith Morris score from third on a wild pitch and Jason Bay scored on Todd Thompson's sacrifice fly to center.

"I think we kind of gave the game away," de la Garza said.

Puig walked Bay and Craig to open the third, Matt Mason singled and Thompson walked to drive in another run, giving Canada a 3-1 lead before Macias' homer in the bottom of the third.

Canada added to its lead late in the game with walks, two Mexican errors and three bunt singles. Caron scored in the fourth when the relay throw on a double-play attempt was high. Darren McCarthy reached on an error, then scored in the fifth on Morris' single to center.

Later in the inning, Danny Ashman, who walked, scored on a

Holdouts continue in NFL

By The Associated Press

Holdouts begin and holdouts end. But most of all in the NFL preseason, holdouts continue.

In Chicago, defensive tackle Steve McMichael and his agent met Tuesday with Bears franchise director Ted Phillips for two hours. There was no progress.

linebacker Lawrence Taylor, who wants $2 million a year in a renegotiated deal — uncharted territory for defensive players.

Also missing from the Giant camp are three other defensive regulars — cornerback Mark Collins, end Leonard Marshall and nose tackle Erik Howard.

Tackle Darryl Grant reported to the Washington Redskins, ending his holdout.

"I'm here," Grant said. "It feels good to be here. I've been working out and doing everything I could. I think I can play, but that won't be my decision. That's their decision."

Redskins GM Charlie Casserly said an agreement was reached because, "the timing was right."

A number of coaches waiting for their own players to show up couldn't agree more.

"There seems no sense of urgency and that's always bothersome," Chicago coach Mike Ditka said. "If there is a sense of urgency, you get it done. You don't vacillate and jockey for position. You meet head-on and say, 'Hey, let's talk about this thing.'"

Cowboys First-round draft pick Emmitt Smith was expected to return to the University of Florida to register for fall classes.

An academic counselor said the former Florida running back told him that he would register for classes on Friday, according to a story published today in The Gainesville Sun.

"He called two weeks ago and said he might be coming back and I said, 'Yeah right,'" said Tim Aydt, an academic counselor in the UF athletic department who spoke again to Smith on Monday. "I didn't really believe him. But after talking to him this morning — he's serious, I guess."

Smith, who is 42 credit hours away from his undergraduate degree, was the 17th player selected in the draft.

Colts Running back Eric Dickerson remains property of the Indianapolis Colts, trade rumors to the contrary.

GM Jim Irsay said the Colts expect Dickerson to be in Indianapolis on Thursday for a scheduled appointment with team physician Dr. K. Donald Shelbourne.

Dickerson has been in Houston since Aug. 6, the same day he reported to the Colts and failed his physical due to an injury to his left hamstring. His spokesman, Daryl Henry, said the running back won't be back until he's healthy. "Eric's not ready yet. His leg isn't healed," Henry said Monday from Sealy, Texas.

Irsay said he spoke Monday with Dickerson's agent, Leigh Steinberg, to set up the leg exam.

Meanwhile, the Colts waived place kicker Max Zendejas, a free agent out of Arizona and announced that rookie Jeff George will again be the starter when they play Philadelphia in a preseason game next Monday.

Chiefs Percy Snow, Kansas City's top draft pick, signed a series of five one-year contracts and worked out with the team on Tuesday.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

1965: A violent summer of baseball

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It was a moment of madness in a summer of fury, a time when there seemed no relief from violence on the streets, in the news, or at the ballpark.

Twenty-five years later, Juan Marichal's clubbing of John Roseboro with a bat stands out as one of the uglier incidents in baseball history, an event recalled with chills by those who watched and regrets by those who participated.

The two men who stood in the center of that brawl at home plate in Candlestick Park on Aug. 22, 1965, now work quietly on the fringes of baseball, slipping through small towns and minor league cities, endless airports and look-alike hotel rooms.

Marichal, Hall of Fame pitcher for the San Francisco Giants, is director of Latin American scouting for the Oakland Athletics. A few years ago he signed outfielder Felix Jose, a switch-hitting rookie with home-run power and star potential.

Roseboro, a Los Angeles Dodgers catcher during the glory years of Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale, is a roving instructor for the Dodgers.

After years of bitterness, they became friends about a decade ago, getting together occasionally at old-timers' games or golf tournaments — former enemies reconciled and tied to each other in history as Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney once were.

But unlike those two champions, who gladly recounted their fights as they grew older, Marichal and Roseboro would like to keep their battle in the past and not hurt each other anymore.

"Our friendship is very good," Marichal said from his home in the Dominican Republic. "I don't like to talk about (the bat incident). I was having a wonderful day until you mentioned that."

The Dodgers-Giants rivalry, born in New York and transported to California in the late 1950s, remains one of the most heated in professional sports. But with the teams trailing Cincinnati in the National League West all season, the tension this year isn't nearly as high as it was in 1965.

San Francisco pitcher Juan Marichal (27) swings a bat at Los Angeles catcher John Roseboro as Los Angeles pitcher Sandy Koufax tries to intervene.

During that hot summer, America was tense. Riots tore through the Watts section of Los Angeles, near Roseboro's home, in early August. Racial clashes broke out in other cities. U.S. troops had just begun fighting and dying in large numbers in a place called Vietnam.

In Marichal's native Dominican Republic, where he was a national hero, a civil war raged as American and other foreign troops landed to quell an uprising by communist rebels. The Summer of Love in San Francisco was still two years away, and the most popular song on the charts was "Eve of Destruction."

On the baseball front, the National League pennant race was close, with only 2½ games separating the top four teams in the 10-team league on Aug. 22. Minnesota had a more comfortable lead in the American League as it headed toward its first pennant.

The Dodgers entered the game that Sunday in Candlestick Park leading the Milwaukee Braves by a half-game and the Giants by 1½.

Marichal, 19-9, a right-hander with a karate-kick delivery and five pitches from three directions, took the mound for the finale of the four-game series. He was opposed by Koufax, 21-4, the Dodgers' left-handed master of the fastball and curve, and also a future Hall of Famer.

who does that gets it in the head."

Marichal, a countryman of Alou's, shouted at Roseboro from the Giants bench as players on both teams engaged in an exchange of taunts.

Marichal was known as the "Dominican Dandy," a dapper dresser who favored blue and cream, a practical joker and sweet guy away from the field. In a Giants uniform, though, he was a fierce competitor, brushing back hitters with inside fastballs and protecting his teammates with "payback" pitches.

According to Marichal at the time, Roseboro told several Giants, "Tell Marichal to shut his big mouth, or he's going to get one behind his ear."

No fights broke out that night or Saturday, but on Sunday tempers boiled over. Wills, a cunning player and speedster who stole a record 104 bases in 1962 and was on his way to 94 in 1965, beat out a bunt and went on to score in the first inning.

Marichal, determined not to let that happen again, threw a fastball near Wills' head in the third that sent him sprawling and got the attention of the rest of the Dodgers. Ron Fairly also went down from a pitch that inning, but Marichal denied throwing at him, and most witnesses agreed.

Marichal came up in the third expecting to be brushed back by Koufax. The first pitch was a strike and the second was low and inside and harmless. Instead, Marichal was startled when Roseboro's return of the second pitch either nicked his ear or came near enough to make him feel the breeze.

"What I did was part of being a catcher," Roseboro said years later. "It's retaliation. Somebody throws at you, and then it happens again, and our pitcher was a guy who wouldn't knock guys down for fear of hurting them because he threw so hard. The catcher buzzes the guy. It's standard operating procedure."

Marichal claimed he turned to Roseboro and asked, "Why do you do that?"

Roseboro came out of his crouch, his fist clenched.

"He didn't say anything, just

Lady Steer spikers drop opener

BRONTE — The Big Spring Lady Steers dropped their season-opener to the Bronte Longhorn-Honeys here Tuesday afternoon.

After Big Spring won the first game 15-12, Bronte came back to win the next two games 15-13, 15-9.

"The first game we looked really great," said Lady Steers coach Lois Ann McKenzie. "We had a 10-1 lead. In the second game we had 10 missed serves. The game stayed tied 13-13 for a complete rotation.

"In the third game, the heat just got to us; we only missed three serves. It was so hot I had my team change jerseys between games. It was whichever team could hang on the longest. Bronte has a good team, they made some great saves in the third game. They were scrappy."

The Lady Steers will compete in the Monahans tournament Friday and Saturday. Friday they will play Pecos at 11 a.m. and San Angelo Central at 2 p.m.

"I thought he would hit me with his mask, so I hit him."

Marichal raised his bat and quickly struck Roseboro at least twice on the top and side of the head, opening a two-inch gash that sent blood streaming down his face.

The crowd of 42,807 fans watched in amazement, then roared as both benches cleared and the ballplayers converged on home plate. Tito Fuentes, who had been in the on-deck circle, brandished his bat menacingly but didn't seem to do any damage.

Koufax raced in from the mound, as did Giants third-base coach Charlie Fox, and joined home plate umpire Shag Crawford in trying to separate Marichal and Roseboro. It was a summer of fury.

White Sox closing in on Athletics

By The Associated Press
Manager Jeff Torborg has insisted all season that he wants the Chicago White Sox to take it one game at a time.

And that's just what the White Sox have done this week, taking one game at a time off Oakland's lead in the American League West.

On Sunday, the White Sox beat Texas while the Athletics lost to Baltimore.

On Monday, the White Sox beat Oakland.

And Tuesday night, they beat Oakland again 4-1, cutting the A's lead to 4½ games.

Oakland's Mike Moore (10-12) had a 1-0 lead and a two-hitter going into the seventh when Dan Pasqua led off with a double. Frank Thomas walked and, after Sammy Sosa struck out, Ron Karkovics also walked.

Rick Honeycutt, a sinkerballer, relieved and 42-year-old Carlton Fisk batted for Robin Ventura.

Not to worry. Fisk ripped a double down the left-field line to clear the bases. He took third on the throw home and pinch-runner Steve Lyons scored on Ozzie Guillen's suicide squeeze.

Winner Greg Hibbard (10-7) gave up an unearned run and seven hits in seven innings. Barry Jones pitched the eighth and Bobby Thigpen went the ninth for his 41st save, tops in the majors.

Orioles 9, Red Sox 5
Joe Orsulak had a two-run single in Baltimore's four-run first inning and began a three-run third with another single. The Orioles scored all their runs in the first three innings, shelling Dana Kiecker (4-6) in the first and Dennis Lamp in the third in beating Boston for only the second time in nine games this season and fourth time in the last 25 meetings at Fenway Park. Staked to a 9-1 lead after three innings, John Mitchell (6-5) held Boston to three hits until he was tagged for three runs and six hits in the fifth. Gregg Olson got the final two outs for his 29th save.

Kiecker failed to retire a batter, yielding two hits, including an RBI single by Sam Horn, and two walks before Orsulak's bases-loaded single made it 3-0. Lamp relieved and another run scored as Mickey Tettleton grounded into a double play.

The Orioles scored two more in the second on an RBI single by Brady Anderson and a throwing error by Boston second baseman Jody Reed. Boston's Mike Marshall hit his first AL home run in the eighth off Joe Price.

Yankees 3, Blue Jays 2
Roberto Kelly got three hits and stole home and Chuck Cary won for the first time in 11 starts. It was the Yankees' fifth straight triumph, matching their longest winning streak of the season.

Cary (5-8) stopped his four-game losing streak with his first victory since June 19. He pitched seven innings and gave up two runs on five hits. Lee Guetterman pitched two innings for his second save. John Candelaria (7-6) gave up three runs and six hits in 4 1/3 innings and lost to the Yankees for the first time in five career decisions.

Nine-run, ninth inning sinks Dodgers

By The Associated Press
Scoring eight runs in an inning is quite a treat.

Watching your opponent score nine runs in the ninth inning is pretty neat.

And for the Los Angeles Dodgers on Tuesday night, that meant defeat.

"I'm shocked," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said after the Philadelphia Phillies overcame an eight-run deficit in the final inning to win 12-11. "I've never seen anything like this. It was the first time in my managerial career that something like this has happened.

John Kruk was one source of Lasorda's disbelief. His pinch-hit, three-run homer tied the game. Two batters later, Carmelo Martinez doubled in Rod Booker with the game-winning run. The Phillies trailed comfortably, 11-3, entering the ninth in a game where Lasorda substituted for everyone but third baseman Mike Sharperson. Even Fernando Valenzuela got a chance to pinch hit — and singled — on a night when Los Angeles sent up 14 batters in an eight-run fifth inning.

But in the ninth, Philadelphia began to batter rookie reliever Dave Walsh, who retired only one of seven hitters.

Tim Crews (1-4) couldn't do much better, giving up a two-run double to Dale Murphy and Kruk's third homer.

Rookie shortstop Jose Offerman committed two crucial errors as Philadelphia went on to score eight unearned runs.

Dickie Thon singled in the first run of the 14-batter inning, and he scored on Offerman's first error. Dave Hollins also had an RBI single.

Roger McDowell (5-6) worked the eighth inning for the victory and Don Carman got three outs for his first save.

Los Angeles wasted a four-RBI performance by Mike Scioscia and an eight-run fifth-inning, the team's most productive of the season.

In all 14 batters came up in the fifth and 10 straight reached base off three relievers.

Reds 8, Cubs 1
Billy Hatcher scored after three of his four doubles and Rick Mahler won his first start in four weeks as Cincinnati ended a five-game losing streak.

Astros 2, Pirates 1
Danny Darwin pitched a five-hitter to win his eighth straight game as Houston ended Pittsburgh's six-game winning streak.

Darwin (9-1) is 7-0 with a 1.54 ERA since entering the starting rotation on July 1. The right-hander gave up Jeff King's ninth homer in the third and gave up two runs or less for the ninth time in 10 starts.

Eric Yelding's single broke an eighth-inning tie, scoring Franklin Stubbs, who led off with a single.

Bill Doran hit his sixth homer to tie the game 1-1.

Pittsburgh rookie Randy Tomlin did not give up a hit until Stubbs two-out double in the fifth.

The Pirates remained three games ahead of New York in the NL East.

Braves 7, Cardinals 2
St. Louis made three errors, including two by second baseman Rex Hudler on the same play which allowed Dave Justice to score on his own routine popout.

Padres 7, Mets 0
Ed Whitson pitched his third shutout of the year and lowered his ERA to a league-leading 2.41 against New York.

Whitson (10-7) gave up only seven singles in his fifth complete

Kelly led off the Yankees' first with a double and eventually scored on a double steal with Oscar Azocar. Kelly opened the third with a single, stole second and later scored on Azocar's grounder. Steve Balboni followed with his 13th home run. Mookie Wilson's two-run single in the fifth accounted for Toronto's runs.

Brewers 6, Indians 5
Pinch-hitter Greg Brock singled over a drawn-in outfield for one out in the ninth inning. Darryl Hamilton opened the ninth with a single off the glove of pitcher Colby Ward (1-1), stole second and took third on Charlie O'Brien's sacrifice. Brock then singled on a 3-1 pitch from Jesse Orosco.

Tigers 6, Angels 2
Lloyd Moseby drove in four runs with a bases-loaded triple in the first inning and a homer in the fourth. Winner Dan Petry (10-9) gave up both California runs and four hits in six innings and Ed Nunez yielded one hit in 2 1/3 innings for his fourth save.

Mariners 4, Rangers 3
Dave Valle broke a tie with his first home run in 108 at-bats and the tying run was cut down at the plate to end the game as Seattle ended a four-game losing streak. Randy Johnson (12-7) gave up three runs and six hits in 7 1/3 innings. Mike Schooler finished but needed a great relay to get his 30th save.

Jeff Huson opened the Texas ninth with a single. With two out, Kevin Reimer doubled off the center-field wall but Huson was thrown out on a relay from Ken Griffey Jr. to shortstop Omar Vizquel to catcher Valle.

Valle, mired in a 2-for-28 slump, hit his fifth home run in the sixth inning off Charlie Hough (10-9). Ruben Sierra homered for Texas.

game and only one Met reached third. He struck out six and walked none.

Expos 10, Giants 5
Spike Owen scored when Dave Martinez's groundball skipped through Will Clark's legs and broke a seventh-inning tie in Montreal's victory.

The Expos added four runs in the ninth as Mel Rojas (1-1) went three innings for the win.

Trevor Wilson (8-6) walked Owen on four pitches, then threw a wild pitch that bounced far enough away from the plate to allow Owen to advance to third. After Jeff Brantley came on, Martinez hit a dribbler which Clark couldn't handle.

The Expos trailed 5-2 in the sixth, but tied the game on an RBI groundout and a two-run homer by Larry Walker, his 14th.

Mike Fitzgerald had his eighth homer, a two-run shot in the fifth.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Mel Gibson, star of such violence-studded films as "The Road Warrior" and "Lethal Weapon," is choosy about what he lets his six children see.

"I think there is a level of violence in films that's unacceptable," he said. "I don't think there's anything like that in 'Lethal Weapon.' It's not pornographic violence. I've seen films where it was too much."

But Gibson said he would not let his children watch "The Road Warrior," which is set in a violent, post-apocalyptic world.

"It is such a fantastic movie and some people come to some pretty bad ends there," Gibson said in the Sept. 3 issue of US magazine. "But to me it's not serious, it's almost comic."

Gibson has just finishing playing the title role in a film production of "Hamlet," directed by Franco Zeffirelli.

"Why shouldn't I do it? It was like someone drawing a line on the ground and daring me to step over that line," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — M.C. Hammer, whose "Please Hammer Don't Hurt 'Em" is the biggest-selling rap album ever, is taking the rap from former employees.

"It was like modern-day slavery," Kent Wilson, Hammer's former turntable wizard, a.k.a. Lone Mixer, told Rolling Stone magazine.

"He wanted to have total control over everybody at all times," said Dontay Newman, a bodyguard who quit last year.

The magazine said nearly all 70 of Hammer's entourage of singers, dancers, bodyguards and others must return directly to their hotel rooms after each show and stay there all night or get a $100 fine.

Penalties also have been meted out for missing dance steps onstage and failing to have luggage ready on travel days, the magazine said.

Hammer said the entourage has a curfew to keep its members out of trouble.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1990

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Gene Kelly, actress Shelley Long, comedian Mark Russell, actor River Phoenix.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Come to grips with a problem that is creating tension between you and your loved ones. A social event could show you new romantic vistas. Move slowly. Things are not always what they seem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Many people are rooting for you today! Your intuition will guide you to your natural allies. Make every effort to be in a VIP's spotlight this evening. Valuable contacts can be made.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A faltering alliance has been weakened by a lack of rapport. You may be able to remedy the situation by holding a meeting behind closed doors. Do what feels right.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Confusion may reign at work. Conditions are not conducive to getting your work done. Keep a low profile. Work hard until the sun sets. Then get together with close friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tend to routine matters early in the day. Group activities may hold more appeal than one-on-one meetings. Curb an urge to drop out of sight! The social scene has plenty to offer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your popularity is on the rise. People want to draw closer to you. Something wonderful could occur in your household. Unveil your secret plan and put it into action. Romance is looking good!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Go ahead and look for the silver lining! A financial situation will not last forever. Other people's problems loom much larger than your own. Do what you can to help. Postpone travel.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Today's events should go according to plan. You are able to accomplish a great deal and appear to be operating at peak form. Avoid making mountains out of molehills where romance is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Put a big job aside and tackle those little ones that have been piling up. Relatives may be difficult to get along with. Limit personal spending and build up your savings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Nothing should stop you from carrying out your plans today. Be prompt about paying bills and returning phone calls. Your strong romantic inclinations lead to a happy new relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let go of the past and others will do the same. An attractive member of the opposite sex may be expecting you to take the initiative. Wait until sundown to begin partying.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The emphasis today is on eliminating bad habits. Get an early start if you must drive long distances today. Make certain you have everything you need before starting out.

Sands trustees set tax rate

ACKERLY — Only one item was on the agenda for the Sands Independent School District meeting Monday night, according to Superintendent James Blake.

The tax rate for the district was discussed at length between the board and Martin County chief appraiser Delbert Dickenson, according to Blake.

"We had no one at our meeting for this public hearing on the proposed tax notice. Our taxes will be reduced from $1.15 to $1.12 per hundred dollar property valuation," Blake said.

SHS registration set for Thursday

Stanton High School principal Johnny McGregor has announced that registration for high school students is set for Thursday morning starting with the seniors from 8:30-10 a.m.

Juniors will register from 10:11-30 a.m., followed by the sophomores from 12:30-2 p.m. and freshman from 2:30-3 p.m.

On Friday, junior high will begin registration from 9:10-30 a.m. for the eighth grade, followed by the seventh grade from 10:30-noon and the sixth grade from 1:30-3 p.m.

Any new elementary student in grades K-5 that has not registered can do so at the elementary office at any time.

All students will require to bring a copy of their birth certificate, a social security card, day and night phone numbers of their parents and a mailing and residential addresses.

Students that have been informed or notified by mail must submit an immunization record. Any new student will be required to bring all of their necessary records prior to registering.

"All students are required to bring their social security card. This year the State requires us to have a copy of the students social security card. Last year all we asked for was their number, now we need a copy of their card," said McGregor.

Noon Lions meet at community center

The Stanton Noon Lions met Tuesday for the first time at Martin County Community Center since the recent renovations there.

Graves Plumbing and Air Conditioning replaced the old swamp coolers with a more advanced heating and cooling system that county commissioners earlier recommended for the building.

On hand to preside over the club, Eugene Bryd opened the floor for discussion of old business and proceeded with new business. Special guests Stacy Tollison and Kelly Harden were introduced to the club. They were guests of Don Tollison and George Castlow, respectively.

Phillips tops talent find field

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Robbie Phillips, daughter of J. D. and Barbara Phillips of Stanton, competed in the Texas Farm Bureau Talent Find district competition held in Sterling City Friday night and came home with the district crown.

Phillips sang her way to the top with a country and western melody and came home with a $600 scholarship and the right to represent Martin County Farm Bureau at the state level in San Antonio Nov. 26-28.

Phillips won the Farm Bureau county division in late June to earn her the right to compete in district competition. She received a $200 scholarship to the college of her choice for her efforts.

Robbie plans to attend Texas Women's University in Denton with a major in Criminal Justice and eventually work with the probationary program, according to Farm Bureau secretary Wendy Creech.

Committee endorses use of videodiscs to teach science

AUSTIN — William Clark, president of Optical Data Corp., shows off a video disc his company produces. The State Textbook Committee on Elementary Science endorsed the videodisc science program for use in Texas classrooms.

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas elementary school students could learn science through "videodiscs" — like compact discs with pictures — rather than textbooks under a recommendation from a state committee.

The State Board of Education in November will consider the unanimous recommendation of the State Textbook Committee, which endorsed the videodisc science program for use beginning in the 1991-92 school year in elementary grades.

If "Windows on Science" wins final approval, Texas would be the first state to adopt a videodisc-based curriculum as an alternative to recommended textbooks, according to the Warren, N.J.-based Optical Data Corp.

The adoption would mean Texas school districts could use state textbook money to buy the videodisc program. Videodiscs already are being used in about 400 schools in the state, and more than 4,000 nationwide, the company said.

The program is "a better mousetrap," said William Clark, the company's president. "I think this will become a model throughout the country for literally redefining the textbook industry."

Rather than relying solely on a book to provide information, the program uses still and moving pictures to illustrate scientific concepts and principles. It also outlines "hands-on" activities for students to use.

For example, a videodisc program on weather and air includes video of a Minneapolis tornado captured by a television photographer. It uses graphics to illustrate weather occurrences, and shows how students can make a "differential temperature tester" with rulers and thermometers to measure heat from various materials.

Reading and writing assignments also are included.

The program, available in English and Spanish, stores more than 54,000 separate images on one side of a single 12-inch videodisc. The company says a teacher can move quickly from one subject or picture to another, operating the system on a television or video monitor with a remote control.

Designed for use in grades 1-6, the program costs $495 to $595. Schools also would have to purchase a laser disc player to use it, at a cost of about $400.

Ron Reed, a vice president of Optical Data, said he would expect a number of schools to consider videodiscs as their only science resource, but others to use textbooks for some students and videodiscs for others.

"Change is a slow process," he said.

Gulf

today en route from the Mediterranean to the gulf region, said canal officials speaking on condition of anonymity.

At the first all-European meeting on the crisis, Spain, Belgium, the Netherlands and Italy said in Paris they were sending warships to the region.

Iraq, meanwhile, has moved surface-to-surface Scud missiles into occupied Kuwait, increasing the threat of a chemical weapons attack, Brig. Gen. Turki Bin Nassar, a Saudi base commander, told reporters in the kingdom on Tuesday.

But he said that U.S. and Saudi forces have defenses against the Scuds, including U.S. Patriot anti-ballistic missiles in place in Saudi Arabia.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater dismissed an address Tuesday by Saddam as the "same old litany from Iraq" and said no talks are possible until Iraq withdraws its tens of thousands of troops from Kuwait.

Iraq's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, visited Jordan Tuesday and called for a negotiated settlement, but did not offer to withdraw troops from Kuwait, which Iraq seized Aug. 2 in a dispute over land and oil.

In a speech directed at President Bush, Saddam defended detaining foreigners and promised "a major catastrophe" if fighting breaks out in the Persian Gulf.

"Preventing some foreigners from traveling is not an act of vengeance, but a force... to deter a crime of aggression President Bush intends to commit against the people of Iraq," he said.

Of the 3,000 Americans trapped in Iraq and Kuwait by the Aug. 2 invasion, 54 are believed to have been seized by Iraqi authorities, the State Department said Tuesday. Iraq has said it is using some as human shields at potential military targets.

U.S. officials said the Bush administration is making contingency plans to cut back the U.S. Embassy staff in Kuwait, but said the embassy will not shut its doors despite Iraqi demands that foreign missions in Kuwait City be transferred to Baghdad by Friday.

Thailand intends to keep its embassy open until all 5,000 Thai workers are evacuated, a senior Thai official said today. The embassy would close only if forced to by Iraqi soldiers occupying that country, said Kobsak Chotikul, an ambassador-at-large.

Arab efforts to counter the Iraqi aggression grew. Egypt, which has led Arab opposition to the invasion, urged Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait or face a war "that will devour everything."

Iraq's official news agency rejected as "over-simplification," the appeal by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Syria formally announced it was sending troops to Saudi Arabia but did not say how many.

Yemen promised to turn away an Iraqi oil tanker, but questions about its intentions surfaced when at least two Iraqi oil tankers appeared in its port.

It was uncertain whether today's scheduled U.N. Security Council meeting would produce a military-enforced embargo against Iraq. The Soviet Union has slowed U.S. efforts to gain such approval, Western diplomats say.

The Soviets the past week sought to revive the Military Staff Committee composed of the five permanent U.N. members before imposing a blockade, and have emphasize ed they would only participate under a U.N. flag. China has asked for more time to see whether voluntary measures against Iraq succeed.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said in an interview that some elements of Saddam's proposal to end the Middle East crisis "merit serious attention," but he did not elaborate.

Financial markets took another beating from the gulf crisis. Tokyo's Nikkei Stock Average today lost 1,086.93 points, or 4.13 percent, to close at 25,210.91. On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 52.48 points to close at 2,603.96.

In other developments:
● Iraqi forces must steal water, food and fuel to survive, British intelligence sources in Saudi Arabia said. They also said the Iraqi threat of chemical warfare is not as great as first feared.

● The Moslem world's venerated center of theology, Al-Azhar, and Egypt's highest cleric Tuesday condemned Iraq's invasion, indirectly urged the execution of Saddam and justified the presence of "foreign" forces to defend Saudi Arabia.

● Thousands of foreigners poured across the Jordan border from Iraq, including two ex-U.S. congressmen — George Hansen of Idaho and Thomas Kindness of Ohio — who arrived on a flight from Baghdad. The pair had been in Baghdad on a fact-finding mission.

● U.N. officials said 75 U.N. staff and dependents have left Baghdad and that the world body intends to remove the remaining 235 staff and families from Iraq.

In the clearest official indication of the size of the U.S. military buildup in Saudi Arabia, Air Force Gen. Hansford T. Johnson estimated Tuesday that at least 35,000 personnel are either in or en route to the kingdom. It is the largest U.S. troop deployment since the Vietnam War.

In the gulf, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney met with Saudi officials to share military intelligence and discuss the possible sale of additional F-15 fighters and heavy tanks to bolster the kingdom's defenses.

There were more than 25 U.S. warships, including three aircraft carriers, in the region.

Stamp rise shows extent of poverty

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The sharp rise in food stamp recipients shows how prevalent poverty is in America, a congressional committee on hunger says.

"At some time everyone is going to have to come to grips with the fact that we have this many poor people," said Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, in a statement released Tuesday by his House Select Committee on Hunger.

The statement followed published reports about an Agriculture Department study that showed the number of people on food stamps rose 1 million between May 1989 and May 1990 to top 20 million for the first time in five years.

The Agriculture Department report had been requested by the Senate Appropriations Committee, which is still considering how much to allow for the food stamp program next year. The House has approved $18.1 billion. Congress appropriated $16 billion for this year's program.

"What is remarkable about the recent growth in participation is that there is no consensus about its causes," said the Agriculture Department, which released a summary of the report this week. "It occurred even though there were no major changes in the food stamp program or in the economy, at least as measured by the national unemployment rate."

Hall said, however, that the findings in the report demonstrate how even a slight downturn in the economy can be too much for some people, throwing them onto public assistance rolls.

The rise extended to 44 states and the District of Columbia, varying in size and timing from state to state. Nearly half the total increase was attributable to a rise in recipients in Texas, California and Florida, the report said.

The Agriculture Department investigators said the increases are so recent that much of the data traditionally used to analyze food stamp trends are not available.

However, the study offers several possible reasons for the increases:

- Greater long-term unemployment that's not showing up in statistics.
- More working poor.
- Higher food prices.
- Changes in the distribution of income.
- More female heads of household.
- Changes in the immigration laws giving thousands of aliens legal status and making them eligible for food stamps.
- Improved accessibility and outreach.

The 1990 farm bill approved by the House earlier this month would make even more people eligible than current law, with provisions designed to help children, the near-homeless and homeless, the elderly, disabled and rural Americans who traditionally have not had as much access to the food assistance program.

WASHINGTON — A prominent medical journal broke the rules of scientific impartiality by printing an article assuring the safety of a synthetic hormone that boosts cow milk production, says the head of a foundation that is critical of genetic engineering.

Jeremy Rifkin, president of the Foundation on Economic Trends, says today's article in the Journal of the American Medical Association was written by two scientists who have worked for a leading maker of bovine growth hormone.

Study: epilepsy drug prevents seizures

BOSTON (AP) — A widely used epilepsy drug reduces the risk of seizures by 73 percent during the first week after a serious head injury but is ineffective after that, a study concludes.

Seizures are a hazard of serious head trauma, and doctors routinely prescribe the drug Dilantin for up to three years after the injuries.

However, some researchers in recent years have questioned whether this treatment works. To help resolve these doubts, the latest study tested Dilantin, known generically as phenytoin, for one year.

The study "provides convincing evidence of the effectiveness of phenytoin in preventing seizures during the first week after serious head injury," the researchers wrote.

An estimated 500,000 Americans suffer head trauma that result in brain injury each year. About 2 percent suffer recurring seizures as a result.

The study, directed by Dr. Nancy R. Temkin at the University of Washington in Seattle, was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine. It was financed in part by Warner-Lambert-Park-Davis, which makes Dilantin.

Looking for the perfect gift?

Spring. A time for graduation parties and weddings. A time to look for those perfect gifts for a "first home" for which kitchen utensils, small appliances, cookware and bakeware are always welcome.

Kitchen space, or a lack of it, is a prime consideration in most "first kitchens." Find out what types of kitchen products are needed. If the gift is for a bridal couple, check local department store bridal registries. Ask the consultant for a list of the items that the couple wants. Then, follow these handy hints when choosing the perfect gift.

In cookware, bakeware and casseroles, look for versatility. Consider glass-ceramic items such as Corning Ware or Visions cookware. Some items, like the skillet shown here, now come with duPont's SilverStone non-stick surface for easy clean-up. And, glass-ceramic cookware and bakeware can be used in the microwave, conventional oven and the dishwasher. They're perfect for oven-to-tabletop convenience and to cut down on after meal clean-up.

If choosing items for high-temperature range-top cooking, consider stainless steel cookware. Every first kitchen can use a deep-sided chicken fryer and an appropriately sized stock pot. For the latter, Revere Ware makes stock pots in sizes ranging from 6 to 20 quarts.

Whatever the cookware, consider non-reactive cookware material. Glass, glass-ceramic or stainless steel provide ideal food contact surfaces. They won't react with or discolor foods and they clean up thoroughly with no food flavor or odor carryover from one meal to the next.

Small electric appliances make great gifts for a first home, too. Every starter kitchen needs the basics—a toaster, a coffeemaker, a blender and a can opener. Look for features that make a product special (a cool-touch toaster, or a thermal-carafe coffeemaker, for instance) and look for a combination of items designed to match one another—like Oster's new Designer Collection of small appliances. Don't forget important specialty appliances either. A waffle maker with a non-stick interior or an easy to use citrus juicer can make great gifts.

People who love to cook will need a stand mixer and a food processor. If time and space are a premium, consider a unit that features a heavy-duty motor base to power five important appliances such as Oster's Kitchen Center all-purpose appliance that combines a stand mixer, a doughmaker, a food processor, a blender and a slicer/shredder/saladmaker.

Families will have electronic super-servants in the '90s

The motto of the 1990s is turning out to be an echo—albeit faint—of the 1960s: "Get wired." Based on trends that have been strengthening since late 1988, Americans in record numbers are tuning on (their home computers), tuning in (to on-line services) and tuning connected to hundreds of ways of making their lives simpler and easier.

On-line services offer families an enormous variety of information, education and entertainment, electronic mail, home shopping, and such transactions as banking, airline reservations, stock trading—even grocery shopping. In fact, it's hard to imagine a fact that can't be found, a product that can't be bought, or a service not provided on-line. A household receives these features through its regular telephone line, which connects to a personal computer with a simple, inexpensive device called a modem.

In the coming decade, forecasters predict, America will catch up with and quickly pass other countries in the number of families using on-line services. These new electronic servants don't do windows, but that may be one of their few limitations.

They're more like super-servants. On-line services carry out the wishes of their users, providing information and doing chores. Because many people feel that they have less and less leisure time in their lives, on-line services offer Americans new independence—independence to plan leisure activities, manage personal finance and socialize.

There are several factors contributing to the growing use of on-line services. Statistics show that more and more people are buying personal computers. The prices of these machines are dropping sharply, and more family members are learning how to use computers at work or school. Today, ten percent of all U.S. households now have powerful personal computers such as IBM PCs and compatibles or Apple Macintosh computers. That figure is expected to grow to more than 30 percent toward the end of the decade.

Population trends point to another factor favoring on-line services: People born during the baby boom form a third of our population. They include most of the service providers, the sales clerks, travel reservations agents, bank tellers and others who handle our daily transactions. This 20-to-40 age group is large enough to handle the service needs of the 40- to 60-year-olds now in their peak-earning years.

But the balance won't last. As we begin the 1990s, the baby boomers are moving into their own peak-earning years. When they ask the service sectors of the economy to deliver, it's a simple demographic fact that the next generation will be no match for the task. There just aren't enough of them!

That's why 1990s consumers are looking for ways to circumvent long lines, uninformed service, traffic jams, busy signals and being put on hold. For increasing numbers of these consumers, on-line services will provide a welcome solution.

The fastest growing of the new on-line offerings is the PRODIGY service, which enables families with personal computers to handle such chores as shopping, securities trading and banking; to arrange leisure activities, like travel; to select a broad range of information, education and entertainment and to exchange electronic mail from their homes and offices.

Unlike many other on-line services, which charge for every minute of use, PRODIGY charges a low, flat monthly fee. For more information, call 1-800-PRODIGY, ext. 205.

Should you buy another home before you sell the present one?

Should you sell your current home before buying another one?

According to Monte Helme of the Century 21 Real Estate Corporation, buying a new home before you've sold your current one could be a mistake. "Sell first," Helme advises. "Most people can't qualify for a second home without selling the first one, so it's important to get a contract on it as soon as possible."

Helme says homeowners shouldn't even look for another home until they receive a first offer; here's why:

- 1) If you look first, find a house you fall in love with and can't buy it because you haven't sold your first house, you may have to buy another house.
- 2) You may have to buy a first house, you don't know how much money you have to spend on the next one.
- 3) Set the closing on your old house first and you won't have to juggle closing two properties at the same time.
- 4) If you sell first, you won't have to worry about obtaining a bridge loan to finance the second place.

5) If you don't sell first, you may end up with two homes, two mortgages and many sleepless nights.

"It's also important to have a contingency plan," Helme says, "in case your home sells quickly and your buyer insists on moving in right away."

Helme suggests scouting out temporary rental and storage situations in your neighborhood or town. And if worse comes to worst, find out if some warmhearted relative or friend will put you up until you find a new place.

Classic floor sweeper still helps make homemaking easy

In the 1870s, inventions that made daily life more pleasant proliferated. The telephone and typewriter were invented, simplifying and speeding communications significantly. The phonograph let everyone enjoy music at home. And the carpet sweeper was invented as a timesaving tool that lightened household drudgery.

The past century has seen drastic evolution of all of those early inventions. But one product—the sweeper—uses its original technology to remain a useful tool today.

Sweepers were invented in 1876 by Melville Bissell, a china purveyor who was bothered by the sawdust filler that fell from his packing crates. Sweeping with a broom stirred clouds of sawdust into the air. To make cleanup easier, he developed a machine with a rotating brush that deposited debris into a contained box. Thus, the sweeper was invented.

Today, BISSELL's sweeper design has been streamlined and updated, but the basic technology remains a useful part of many homes' cleaning regimen. Sweepers are quick, quiet and efficient.

"In many families both adults work, so there's less time for housework. Sweepers are a quick way to make your home look clean because they're lightweight, don't have to be plugged in, and store easily," says Jim Weaver, sweeper product manager for BISSELL Inc., the nation's largest sweeper manufacturer.

"Our research has shown the average home is vacuumed just once a week. While sweepers are not a substitute for vacuuming, they are very effective on topical debris such as pet hair, cereal and other dry spills. They're very popular with pet owners and parents of young children, who need quick cleanups between vacuuming," Weaver says.

In addition to convenience, sweepers offer the benefits of energy efficiency and affordability.

BISSELL makes six models of sweepers, ranging in price from $14.99 to $34.99. Many of the models include practical features such as corner brushes for cleaning up to walls and adjustable brush heights for bare floors and carpeting.

For more information on sweepers or the name of the BISSELL retailer nearest you, call 1-800-237-7691.

A breakthrough in sound quality from new telephone technology

Until now, technology's influence on life at home has centered on devices such as the VCR or kitchen appliances with new convenience features. But the next frontier of technological breakthroughs at home is arriving via the telephone. Now telephone conversations can be loud and clear for all telephone users.

Beyond the whiz-bang home telephone advances, such as home computers handling shopping and banking over phone lines, is a more universal technological advance. Just introduced is the first telephone that lets the user adjust the caller's voice to make it both clearer and louder.

One of the most common problems solved by the device is the difficulty people have in distinguishing the high-frequency sounds of hard consonants. That's why you may find yourself constantly asking callers: "Is that F as in Frank or S as in Sam?"

With a new technology called "signal processing," this new telephone first makes the caller's voice more intelligible, and then it amplifies the voice up to twice as loud as a conventional phone would. There are other telephones and devices which amplify only, but these do not make the sound clearer, and many produce annoying howling and squealing noises at high volume levels.

The new telephone, called the Teletalker, from Minneapolis-based Williams Sound Corp., is designed for all people who spend a lot of time on the telephone. For people with mild to moderate hearing loss, the device can make using the telephone trouble free. And hearing aid wearers can use the Teletalker with their hearing aid to complement its performance.

For information on this new technology, contact: Williams Sound Corp., 5929 Baker Road, Minnetonka, MN 55345; 1-800-328-6190, ext. 99.

THANKS TO NEW TECHNOLOGY, the Teletalker is the first telephone that lets users adjust the caller's voice to make it clearer and louder.

Need more miles between you and your next overhaul?

DELO® 400 PLUS Multi-Grade just might help.

It's a new formulation, developed to give your engine maximum protection from soot-related abrasive wear.

DELO 400 PLUS has a new 10 TBN 1% ash formula. Which means it can help prevent piston deposits, oil gelling and filter plugging.

Bottom line? DELO 400 PLUS can help maximize overall engine life while minimizing maintenance and operating costs.

So come in and see us about the new DELO 400 PLUS Multi-Grade. It'll help you haul more before your next overhaul.

Run with extra confidence.

Children break the sound barrier

Each year in the United States, one in a thousand children is born profoundly deaf. Hundreds more will lose their hearing due to illness and accidents. Until now, these children had very little hope of ever hearing environmental sounds, like a car horn, which could save them from danger, or the sounds of their playmates laughing and their parents saying, "I love you."

The tiny, 22-channel cochlear implant, which has been extremely successful in restoring sound and speech recognition to adults for over five years, is now bringing the gift of sound to the lives of many children and young adults. Availability of the implant for children, has the potential to change the course of deafness for young people in this country.

"Our hope is that cochlear implants will assist deaf children in acquiring skills that can help them achieve their educational and occupational goals," says Dr. William M. Luxford, M.D., of the House Ear Institute in Los Angeles. "Indeed, it is important to implant children in the years when they normally acquire speech and language skills."

Study results

Clinical studies began in 1985 for adolescents (10-17 years) and in 1986 for children (2-9 years). To date, approximately 350 children and young adults have received the cochlear implant. Children are carefully evaluated to determine if they are candidates.

When results from preoperative tests using hearing aids and vibrotactile devices (devices that use vibration and sense of touch to transmit auditory information) are compared to postoperative results with the cochlear implant, the outcome is extremely encouraging.

With the 22-channel implant, all of those evaluated could detect medium to loud sounds, including speech, at comfortable listening levels. Some children demonstrated the ability to identify environmental sounds chosen from a closed-set of alternatives at comfortable loudness levels.

Many children demonstrated improvements in speech production, including the ability to recognize the timing and rhythm of speech and identify words from a closed-set of alternatives without lipreading. A few even recognized open-set speech without lipreading.

How does the implant work?

The cochlear implant has five parts, two internal and three external parts. First, a tiny receiver with a magnet is implanted in the bone behind the ear and a band of 22 electrodes is surgically inserted into the cochlea, or inner ear. Later, the child is fitted with the three external parts: a small microphone that rests on the ear, a transmitter and magnet worn behind the ear and a pocket-sized speech processor (mini-computer) worn on a belt or in a pouch.

The microphone picks up sounds and sends them to the speech processor. Unlike a hearing aid, which amplifies sound, a speech processor codes this sound information and relays it to the transmitter.

The transmitter sends the information to the receiver, or decoder. This information is then carried to the 22-electrodes that stimulate the nerve fibers which, like healthy nerve fibers, send messages to the brain and allow you to experience hearing.

For more information

It is estimated that between 16-20,000 children in the U.S. have a profound hearing loss. If your child is at least two years old, has a profound sensorineural hearing loss in both ears (nerve deafness) and receives little or no benefit from hearing aids—the cochlear implant may help your child break the sound barrier.

For more information, and the name of a medical team in your area, call the Cochlear Implant Information Center from anywhere in the U.S. at 1-800-458-4999 (V TDD). In Colorado call 303-790-9010 (V TDD). BS900942

Ambitious author goes in search of America's values

By FRANCES MOORE LAPPE

Leaving home to go to college in the early 1960s, I was brought up short. Suddenly, I had to face devastating revelations about the United States' role in the Vietnam War, and the reality at home of poverty and racism so intense that it exploded in street riots. I was forced to try to become a grown-up myself. I had to discover what I believed.

That process led me first to work in the ghettos of Philadelphia and then to a graduate program in social work. But I was miserable. I knew that I wanted to contribute positively to our world, but I wasn't sure whether my work was helping to ease the needless suffering all around me.

So I made a big decision—a personal vow. It was to stop doing and to start listening. I knew I had to take the time to pursue certain questions for myself, questions so pressing that without their answers, I could not set my life's course.

We are what our brothers eat

Soon I discovered that to ask the biggest questions, it often helps to start with the most personal. And what could be more personal than food? You don't have to be a genius, after all, to figure out that food is so basic that if people aren't eating, little else matters.

I wanted to know how close we really were to the earth's limits. I wanted to know why millions were going hungry even amid apparent plenty. Hunger became my measuring rod of the effectiveness of any economic or political system.

While my understanding of world hunger has deepened, the problem itself has gotten worse. Today more people are dying from hunger and hunger-exacerbated disease than when I began, despite more than sufficient production for everyone. I refer not only to the dramatic, terrifying famines in Africa; for I have also come to see the less visible, relentless hunger that afflicts even more people in countries with so-called food self-sufficiency, such as India or South Africa. And the killing hunger in areas such as Central America where tremendous food-producing resources are tapped for export, not to meet local needs.

A hunger for ideas

As I've lived with such horrifying realities year after year, and visited the Third World myself, one question increasingly pressed itself upon me: What could be powerful enough, I wondered, to allow us to tolerate these millions of silent deaths each year?

I've finally come to believe that there's only one thing powerful enough. It is the power of ideas—the beliefs we hold about ourselves and our relationships to one another. It is these ideas that allow us to endure, or even to support, the horrors that which we as individuals, as a society, and somehow to tolerate the discomforting contrast.

I grew convinced that I would never understand the roots of hunger here or in the Third World until I probed my own values more deeply, and those of my fellow Americans. How could hunger exist in a society built upon freedom, fairness, and democracy, I pondered. To find an answer, and even to imagine a world without hunger, I had to define what I really meant by such beautiful concepts to begin with.

By this I do not mean repeating with more fervor our favorite clichés: "We're a free country! We're the world's strongest democracy!" I mean asking what is freedom? What is democracy? I mean giving new life to these values so that we're armed with confidence to face out our nation's grave problems and become part of the answer ourselves.

But how? I am convinced that the answer is only by talking to each other. The answer is public discourse. Many of America's founders understood public life to be just that—public talk to get at the roots of problems facing our common life, talk to define the values that we want to realize in that common life.

Polemics are crucial

Unfortunately, however, this is precisely what's missing: Political discourse in America is virtually dead! We need only recall the dismal superficiality of the last presidential campaign. But we imagine the future together through talk, and we can't create a future we can't imagine.

Money-Saving Coupons every Wednesday Big Spring Herald

With these realizations, I set myself a challenge. If I believed that only through dialogue can we clarify our values, then I had to start with myself. I had to take time to read the work of those with whom I'd always disagreed. I had to try to understand what made them tick.

But I ended up doing more. I wrote a book as a dialogue about the meaning of freedom, democracy, and fairness; it's called Rediscovering America's Values. One voice in the book is my own; the other disagrees with just about everything I say. I don't let either of us win, because I want my readers to join in with their own voices, using the book to ignite dialogue from the family dinner table to the classroom.

Devil's advocate

Why dialogue? First, I feel it is the only way to clarify my own beliefs. And with clarity comes new confidence. I also find that as we probe in dialogue to ask why we think the way we do, our society's dominant political assumptions become visible, assumptions that have their grip on us in part because they are now invisible, closed to our examination.

Take one such assumption, for example—that fairness and freedom are always trade-offs. The assumed truth goes like this: The more we strive to make our society fair, the less free it is, since more fairness means taking from the prosperous to give to the deprived, diminishing the freedom of those who have earned great wealth.

In Rediscovering America's Values my voice rejects this whole notion. To me, freedom means real opportunity for everybody to develop their unique human gifts. So freedom and fairness are hardly in competition. The fairer our society, the freer it becomes. Does freedom mean unlimited accumulation of wealth or unlimited human development? This is the kind of get-down-to-basics dialogue that I hope to spur.

Talking with each other about the direction of our country, we participate in reclaiming the values so desperately needed for safe passage into the twenty-first century.

Editor's Note: Frances Moore Lappe's latest book, Rediscovering America's Values, was published this year by Ballantine Books. She is co-founder of the San Francisco-based Institute for Food and Development Policy.

Refinishing restores beauty to hardwoods

Spring is a time of rebirth. One of the wonders of natural hardwood products is their remarkable ability to spring "back to life" with proper refinishing. Despite the age of a piece, careful refinishing can restore the original beauty of hardwood furniture, cabinets, and architectural detailing whether the surface was stained or previously painted.

The three steps to proper refinishing are stripping away the existing finish, sanding, and re-staining or painting. A clean, smooth, bare wood surface is a prerequisite before any new finish can be applied.

Most craftsmen and do-it-yourselfers agree that stripping is typically the most messy and time-consuming aspect of this process. Before you start, you'll want to gather together all the appropriate tools to complete the job. These include rubber gloves, fine steel wool, sandpaper, a putty knife, and plenty of newspapers and clean rags.

In the past, stripping away the existing finish down to the bare wood took a great deal of time because most wood stripping products require 15 to 20 minutes per application to work. Usually several applications of stripper are required, particularly if multiple layers of paints, varnishes or other finishes must be removed. In between applications, scraping and sanding is often advised to help loosen the finish.

New advances in refinishing products, however, have made the stripping of wood finishes a great deal easier. One new product, Ultra Speed Stripper, offered by National Solvent Corporation (NASCO), safely removes multiple layers of paint, varnishes, stains and other wood finishes in about 60 seconds, and in a single application.

Available in a paste formulation to eliminate dripping, the product can be applied to large areas at a time. Using this type of easy-to-use, fast-acting stripper can save a great deal of time and eliminate much of the hassle associated with wood refinishing.

Once the finish has been removed, the next step is sanding. Use a medium-grade sandpaper for rough sanding, then a fine-grade sandpaper and fine (#0000) steel wool to achieve the smoothest surface possible. Be certain to brush or vacuum all dust from the wood surface and the entire area before applying any stains, paints, varnishes or other new finishes. It's always a good idea to work in a well-ventilated area whenever you're working on a wood finishing project.

When stripping and sanding have been completed, the refinishing process begins. A number of wood stains are available which can add richness and enhance the natural beauty of wood. After staining, you will want to apply a protective finish to the wood surface. You'll need to choose from a number of different types of coatings. These include varnishes, polyurethanes, and tung oil finishes.

NASCO varnish is a clear wood protector specially formulated to provide long-lasting finish with superior weatherability. It can be used on all types of wood surfaces to prevent whitening, fading, cracking and peeling. Polyurethane provides a long-lasting protective finish that resists water and alcohol. It is available in either glass or a matte-finish. Used as a final step in the refinishing of wood, it will enhance the beauty of wood while giving it a hard, protective coating.

A tung oil finish is used to produce a hard-rubbed finish that will enhance the rich color, beauty and grain of the wood. Water and alcohol resistant, the oil is an easily applied protective coating that won't build up, and leaves a beautiful satin-luster finish.

For your free brochure on refinishing wood surfaces or the name of the NASCO dealer nearest you, call 1-800-321-8404 (in Ohio 1-800-648-8852) or write Customer Relations Department, National Solvent Corporation, 955 West Smith Road, Medina, Ohio 44256. NASCO offers a complete line of wood refinishing products designed for the do-it-yourselfer as well as the craftsman. The products are available at most hardware and home center stores. SJ905153

Direct selling undergoing revival in the 1990s

Owning your own business has long been the American dream. The lure of being the boss combined with setting one's own time schedule creates an appealing work package. Today, more and more people are exploring home business options, resulting in a renewed interest in direct selling as a career choice.

Two major consumer trends are reviving the popularity of direct selling in the 1990s. Baby boomers are reaching the "nesting" phase of their lives, and growing numbers of women are entering the workforce. For both these groups, balancing work and family is of major concern.

"Direct selling can offer people the independence of having their own business with the backing and top quality products of a major company," says David Chamberlain, president and chief executive officer of the Shaklee Corporation, a leading direct marketer of vitamins, personal care and household products. "Even more than the potential of earning good money and the incentive programs, our direct sales representatives are attracted to the field by the desire to work from home, be their own bosses and set their own hours."

As baby boomers settle down to family life, women are emerging as the greatest source of workers in the new decade. According to John Naisbitt, author of Megatrends 2000, women are expected to fill two-thirds of all new jobs created in the '90s. Of these women, mothers make up the largest percentage. Naisbitt writes, "the largest potential source of [workers] is the estimated 14 million non-working women caring for their families at home. The only chance of coaxing millions of these women back into the workforce is...flexible work arrangements...part-time, job-sharing, contract work and home-work arrangements."

DIRECT SELLING the Shaklee way allows sales representatives the independence of their own business with the backing and top quality products of a major company...in the comfort of their own homes.

"We estimate that 80 percent of direct sales representatives work part-time," says Elizabeth Doherty, director of communications for the Direct Selling Association. "In addition, 80 percent of the industry is comprised of women. Because of its time flexibility and home orientation, direct selling has historically proven to be a popular career choice with mothers."

These trends are already resulting in renewed signs of life for direct selling. According to the Direct Selling Association, recent years have shown an increase in nationwide sales representatives after a decline in the mid-eighties. Today, direct selling is a $9.7 billion industry employing four million full- and part-time sales representatives. Shaklee estimates that its sales network will grow an additional 20 percent during the next three years. Currently, Shaklee sales are estimated at $220 million, with more than 5,000 full-time sales leaders and 400,000 part-time sellers nationwide.

Taking the mystery out of soft contact lens care: Eyecare professionals discuss trends

With more than 20 million Americans wearing soft contact lenses today, there is a trend toward increased emphasis on the importance of proper contact lens care for maintaining good eye health.

The number of soft contact lens care products available today, and the "chemistry set-like" instructions that accompany some systems, often result in consumer confusion and frustration. This confusion can lead to short-cuts or negligence in contact lens care, which can create problems with contact lenses and the eye.

The Bausch & Lomb InVision Institute, a not-for-profit organization committed to educating consumers about proper eye care, answers commonly asked questions about daily wear contact lens care issues and concerns:

Q: What are the "necessary elements" of soft contact lens care?

A: There are two basic care elements, cleaning and disinfecting, that must be completed each time the lenses are removed from the eye.

Q: What is the difference between cleaning and disinfecting?

A: Contact lens cleaning removes most surface deposits, while disinfecting eliminates micro-organisms on the surface of the contact lens.

Q: Why should contact lenses be cleaned?

A: Deposits can adhere to contact lenses, causing wearer discomfort, reduced vision clarity, and red or irritated eyes. Long-term build-up can also damage contact lenses. Cleaners help to remove these deposits and prepare the contact lens for disinfection.

Q: How often should soft contact lenses be cleaned and disinfected?

A: Daily wear contact lenses should be removed, cleaned, and disinfected daily and enzymatically cleaned at least once a week. Extended wear contact lenses, which can be worn for one to seven days (as prescribed), should be cleaned and disinfected when removed and enzymatically cleaned weekly.

Q: What is the difference between daily cleaning and enzymatic cleaning?

A: Daily cleaning removes most surface deposits, but not all protein deposits. Some stubborn protein deposits on the lens can only be removed by enzymatic cleaning. Neither type of cleaning disinfects the lens.

Q: What contact lens disinfection methods are available?

A: There are two methods of disinfection, heat (thermal) and cold (chemical). The heat method utilizes a disinfecting unit, in which the lenses are heated to a temperature high enough to eliminate micro-organisms. With cold disinfection, there are several systems, from the various hydrogen peroxide disinfection regimens to the newer, more convenient systems utilizing advanced disinfecting, multi-purpose solutions.

Q: Is there a simple way to care for contact lenses?

A: Time-saving, multi-purpose products, such as ReNu Multi-Purpose Solution from Bausch & Lomb, combine cleaning, rinsing, and disinfecting into one easy-to-use convenient solution. ReNu can also be used to dilute Renu Effervescent enzyme tablets.

Q: Is it necessary to clean the contact lens case?

A: Yes. If not cleaned, the lens case can become contaminated with micro-organisms. The case should be cleaned and disinfected daily with hot water or a disinfecting or multi-purpose lens solution and air-dried upside down on a clean paper towel.

Q: Can product brands be switched?

A: Switching brands is not recommended. Each product has its own chemical make-up and if mixed and matched with other brands, can damage contact lenses or cause eye irritation. All contact lens wearers should consult their eye doctors before changing lens care products, and should always read the package insert before using any lens care products.

Q: Which contact lens care system is most recommended?

A: An eye care practitioner is the best resource to recommend the care system compatible with the type of contact lenses prescribed and the individual physiological makeup of the eyes.

Everyone can and should have financial security

Everyone who works for a living should and could have financial abundance at retirement, and even before, according to Barbara Martin in her new book, Minimum Wage to Maximum Wealth.

"You can do it without being a financial wizard, without winning a lottery, inheriting money or cleaning up at Las Vegas," says Martin.

One of the first things that must be done to make the dream come true, she says, is a plea for a new ethic in the employer-employee relationship.

"Employers can and should help employees build their personal fortunes—not through handouts that destroy self-respect and initiative, but through motivation and prudent financial planning assistance that would cost a company little or nothing."

While acknowledging that many companies do offer employees retirement plans, Martin says that far too many do not and this creates a "lopsided relationship."

"Why shouldn't the company help you build your financial security?" she asks. "You give your employer the choicest hours, days and years of your life to help the company reach its financial goals. How often (if ever) does the company talk about helping you reach your financial goals?"

"There is incredible magic in the working years. Just $25 each month put into a good investment program, and started soon enough, could net over a half million dollars at retirement, and even before."

Minimum Wage to Maximum Wealth is published by Tangible Assets Publications, P.O. Box 6099, Ocean-side, CA 92056. Paperback is $14.95 and hardcover is $19.95. Credit card orders are accepted by calling toll-free 1-800-642-0800, ext. 183. Books are autographed on request. Mention this newspaper and the publisher will include a free audio tape on wealth-building.

Barbara Martin is not a "financial guru." She's a pharmacist who is seeing—first hand—the devastation caused by insufficient financial resources of many older people.

"Many seniors are learning too late that retirement is not a TV mini-series that is over in five nights. They are finding it's the ultimate long term contract that expires only when they do and it's not "prime time," because there isn't enough money, even with insurance and Social Security.

"I want to help motivate those who are still working to avoid 'working class poverty,'" says Martin. "Our economic system is designed to allow everyone to make money through prudent investments. Making money—a lot of it—should not be the private domain of a privileged few."

A salute to the savory and versatile shrimp

Amazingly enough, it is only in this century that shrimp began to appear commonly on dining tables. Today, Americans are the largest consumers and producers of this versatile crustacean. Delicate in flavor, yet hardy in texture, shrimp is consumed more than any other type of seafood in the United States.

Although this delicacy from the water is popular in most regions of this country, New York is the biggest shrimp market in America, largely due to its immense population.

However, New Orleans is considered to be the shrimp capital of the U.S. A part of this city's colorful traditions, a New Orleans shrimp boil is the equivalent of a New England clam bake!

Shrimp, found in both salt and fresh waters, inhabit the muddy bottoms of oceans and rivers. They are found in hot tropical waters in addition to temperate and cold waters.

There are numerous species of edible shrimp, most inhabiting the Northern Hemisphere. In North American water alone there are at least a dozen different species of edible shrimp.

Until the '50s, consumption of shrimp was confined to the cold-water species. The discovery of large, deep-water shrimp with high quality flesh in the Gulf of Mexico set a new trend in this business. Now there are 35 known species of this type of shrimp that are fished throughout the world at a depth of up to 26,000 feet.

Most U.S. shrimp closely resemble each other in texture and taste. Northern shrimp are found in northern offshore waters of both the Atlantic and the Pacific. Southern shrimp are from southeastern and Gulf states, and North Pacific shrimp come from California and Alaska.

A majority of the American catch comes from the Gulf of Mexico. American fresh water shrimp often are found in Devils River, Texas. In addition to all this, huge quantities of shrimp are imported from all over the world to accommodate our passion for this variety of seafood.

Except for size, each species of shrimp cannot be differentiated. In the United States, there are six size categories: Giant (10 to 12 shrimp per pound), jumbo (15 to 20 shrimp per pound), large (20 to 25 shrimp per pound), medium (25 to 35 shrimp per pound), small (35 to 45 shrimp per pound) and tiny (75 to 100 shrimp per pound).

When shopping for fresh shrimp, look for a shell that is shiny and flesh that is firm.

Warning: Fresh shrimp is very perishable. Often, fishermen on board the shrimping boats immediately cook the shrimp in seawater or quick-freeze them. Quick-frozen shrimp often lose some of their flavor, so very fresh shrimp are better.

Shrimp cleaning is easier than most people assume. First, hold the shrimp by the tail, belly-side up and slit along the curve of the body. Next, use thumbs to pry shell apart and away from the body, removing legs simultaneously. Deveining, removing the black intestinal track, is optional and for aesthetics only, not safety or flavor. To do this, simply put the slit shrimp under running water.

There are a number of delicious ways to cook shrimp. They can be cooked in salted or sea water, fried, grilled...the list goes on and on!

One important rule to keep in mind is not to overcook shrimp—three to five minutes should be enough time when simmering shrimp. They should be cooked just until they are opaque and firm.

The following recipes are taken from Sunday Suppers: Informal American Home Cooking (Prentice Hall Press), by Melanie Barnard and Brooke Dojny. The first recipe, Southern-Style Shrimp Boil, is a traditional southern shrimp recipe that epitomizes informal dining. The shrimp is simmered in a seasoned bouillon and served with a dipping sauce. Sometimes, the simplest way to serve food is the best way!

Another offering from the same cookbook, Tortellini and Shrimp Pesto Salad, is a nonstandard pesto that combines particularly well with cheese tortellini and shrimp.

SOUTHERN-STYLE SHRIMP BOIL

- 3 pounds medium or large shrimp, in their shells
- 6 cups water
- 1 tablespoon black peppercorns
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 teaspoons whole cloves
- 1 teaspoon celery seed
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 3 bay leaves
- 1 rib celery, including leaves, broken in half
- 4 sprigs parsley, including stems

Seasoned Butter Dipping Sauce:

- 12 tablespoons butter
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tablespoon white wine vinegar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
- ½ teaspoon Tabasco

1. Rinse the shrimp well under cold running water and set aside. In a large saucepan, combine the water and the remaining ingredients for the shrimp boil. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat, and simmer, covered, for 20 minutes so that the flavors have a chance to permeate the water.

2. Meanwhile, make the dipping sauce. Melt the butter over low heat in a small saucepan with the lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, vinegar, salt and pepper. Remove the pan from the heat and stir in the Tabasco.

The dipping sauce may be made up to 2 hours ahead and kept at room temperature. Reheat before serving.

3. Bring the seasoned water back to a rapid boil and add the shrimp to the pot. Cook the shrimp for 1 to 3 minutes, depending on their size, until they turn pink but are not tightly curled. Do not overcook since they will continue to cook a bit after they are out of the water. Drain them into a colander and discard the celery and the parsley sprigs. Do not discard the rest of the whole spices since they look nice amidst the shrimp.

4. Dump the hot shrimp onto the center of a table that has been covered with several layers of newspaper. Pour the Seasoned Butter Dipping Sauce into 2 to 3 small bowls and invite your guests to peel the shrimp themselves and dip them into the sauce.

Yield: 6 servings.

TORTELLINI AND SHRIMP PESTO SALAD

- 1 cup packed parsley sprigs
- ½ cup packed fresh basil
- 1 clove garlic, peeled
- ¼ cup dry-roasted peanuts
- 3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
- ¼ cup olive oil
- 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
- About 2½ teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- ½ pound medium shrimp, shelled, and deveined if necessary
- 1 pound good quality frozen cheese tortellini
- Basil leaves for garnish

1. To make the pesto, combine the parsley, basil, garlic, peanuts and vinegar in the workbowl of a food processor or blender. Pulse until a coarse paste is formed. With the motor running, slowly pour the oil through the feed tube. Scrape down the sides of the bowl, season with the mustard, ½ teaspoon of the salt or more to taste, and the pepper, and pulse again to combine.

The pesto can be made up to one day ahead.

2. Bring a large pot of water to a boil. Add about 1 teaspoon of the remaining salt and the shrimp, and cook for 2 minutes. Remove the shrimp with a slotted spoon, refresh under cold running water to stop their cooking, and drain. Add 1 more teaspoon of the salt to the water and return it to a boil. Cook the tortellini in the rapidly boiling water until al dente about 5 minutes. Drain in a colander and refresh under cold water to stop the cooking.

3. Transfer the pasta and shrimp to a large bowl. Pour the pesto sauce over the pasta and shrimp and toss gently to coat. Serve at room temperature or cold; garnish with basil leaves if desired.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings. P578656

THE INNOVATIVE NEW CHILDREN'S PACK, Wiz™ from SGI, Inc., was designed according to children's specifications. Colorful, fashionable and functional, Wiz is a personal locker, perfect for organizing a busy day at school and the many after-school activities in which young students participate. BS900826

Get organized for back-to-school

After a long, carefree summer, children can often be a bit wary of heading back to school in the fall. Passing through their heads are questions like "Who will be my new friends? Will I be ready for the next level in math? Will I have everything I need for school?" These are all valid questions which parents should not ignore. Being prepared for the new year is of great concern to many youngsters.

One way for parents to make this yearly transition a bit easier is by helping their kids become more organized. Current market research shows that students of the 1990s are looking to be stylish, fashionable and innovative, but organized and practical when it comes to going back to school. That's why SGI, Inc., a Rhode Island sports and leisure products company, created Wiz™, a unique personal locker, designed after interviews with hundreds of children ages 6-11. Wiz serves as both a school bag and an activities organizer for after school and weekend projects and events.

"We found that kids in this age group don't have their own lockers yet, but still need a secure place to keep their belongings," says Ed R. Miranda, SGI's director of marketing. "Based on our research, we decided that children really want an ultimate school organizer that will help them plan their whole school day," he continues. Wiz, now available in stores, is a functional, colorful personal locker pack featuring solid construction. The easily portable product has straps on the top and back so that kids have an option of how they carry it—they can either "put a locker on their back" or hold it as they would a conventional school bag. Its sizable main compartment is big enough for a student's lunch box, books and Trapper Keeper™. A zipper-close side panel and foldaway top shelf allow room for athletic shoes and lunch boxes. The side panel contains a clip holder and special pockets inside for cards, crayons, and pencils—anything a child needs to locate quickly and easily.

Wiz is fashionable, available in four hot color combinations, such as black and cyan blue with neon accents, cyan and fuchsia with a lavender top and detail work, fuchsia and cobalt blue with neon, as well as cobalt and red with terrific black and yellow accents. Kids want 1990s colors, and they get them with Wiz. In addition, the product meets a parent's desire for practicality. A good-looking product that will last is something high on any parent's list.

So this year, the start of school might still be a bit scary, but at least kids will know they're organized and ready to go, carrying Wiz on their backs.

Manners and millinery are old partners in tradition

There is a joke of which film lovers are fond. In 1940s movies, when the police come to arrest the hero, they inevitably say, "Get your hat, we're going downtown." The comedian who first pointed out the cliché offered a means of escape: "Why doesn't the guy ever say 'I can't. I don't have a hat.'?"

Admittedly, this comment on B movies is only a B joke, but it does identify an interesting sociological phenomenon: the lost customs of men and their chapeaux. Not so long ago, it was unthinkable for men to go out hatless. When men stopped wearing hats they also abandoned a means of communication. The tipping and removal of a hat as well as its tilt on the head—rakash or otherwise—were useful and meaningful.

Here's what Amy Vanderbilt had to say on the subject of hats in 1952:

In the corridors and elevators of public buildings a man may keep his hat on his head. In crowded public elevators he is more considerate to keep his hat on, as holding it in front of him will require more space. If he approaches an information desk where a woman is sitting, it is polite of him to touch his hat when asking directions, though he need not remove it until he has actually entered an office. The same gesture—that is, of touching his hat but not removing it—is expected of him if he accidentally jostles a woman in some crowded place.

A complicated business, to say the least. When this silent manner of excusing oneself, showing respect or indicating friendship was carried away by the winds of fashion, many men must have found themselves running, bareheaded and ridiculous, after an alternative means of communication.

The choice they had was probably to express themselves verbally or not at all, since fashion provided no substitute. (A man cannot, for example, easily tip a jogging shoe, and even if he did so would probably offend rather than honor.) Silence does nothing for etiquette. The spoken word, however, is also inferior to gestures where gallantry is concerned. Imagine Sir Walter Raleigh, instead of removing his coat and casting it on the puddle threatening to soil a feminine shoe, saying "Here, walk on this." Actions will always speak louder than words.

This dependence on verbal communication does nothing for language itself and is probably responsible for the deterioration of "I beg your pardon" and "Please excuse me" into "Sorry" and "Soo me." It is much more efficient to touch the brim of one's hat, and more private, as not everyone within hearing distance is privy to what is communicated between acquaintances or between jostler and jostlee.

According to The Fashion Encyclopedia (St. Martin's Press), "Nothing confers a sense of presence and style quicker (sic) than a hat. Says designer Hubert de Givenchy, 'A hat changes a woman's behavior. A woman in a hat does not walk the same as one in jeans.'" The implications for a woman who wears jeans and a hat are unspecified. Is she prone, for example, to walk schizophrenically?

Judith Martin, the syndicated columnist known as Miss Manners, is no less concerned with hats than Amy Vanderbilt was. In Miss Manners' Guide to Excruciatingly Correct Behavior (Warner Books), she also offers tips on tipping and removing hats, though she disagrees on some of the finer points of hat behavior in elevators. A hat is also a help to her in undesirable social situations:

The cocktail party is a perfectly dreadful social event, and Miss Manners was planning to ignore it in the hope that it would go away. However, while Miss Manners is impervious to the charms of mixed drinks, stuffed eggs and the conversation they inspire, she suddenly finds herself being seduced by the new cocktail hats.

Her advice to a woman who feels conspicuous dining alone: "The only prop Miss Manners uses for Solo Appearances is a head held high, although she has been known to render it more conspicuous by placing a hat on top of it."

Miss Manners regrets the disappearance of hats for both men and women. On the rules for the wearing of hats, she offers the following advice: "The general rule is that if the hat looks as if you had it built, it may properly go to daytime functions; if it looks as if it just landed in your hair (tiny bits of feathers, sequins or whatever), it goes out at night."

With the renewed interest in tradition and gracious living, this symbol of civilized society may well come back into vogue. The behavior hat wearing encourages can only be a benefit to us all. As the witty watcher of ways writes, "Miss Manners, who can bear the idea that styles of clothing change, but not that the small courtesies of life do, firmly believes that the only reason men do not tip their hats is the same as the reason they no longer smack one another across the face with their gloves when they are angry: They don't have the sartorial equipment."

BUSINESS REVIEW

Pat Gray's Body Works: Precision!

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III. What does this mean to you? "When your car is in a collision, it can mean a great deal," says Pat Gray, owner of Pat Gray Body Works, 700 N. Owens.

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III is a revolutionary collision repair system for unibody cars that literally reverses the collision action by pulling out the way it went in, then squares and aligns each section of your car — the way it was meant to be.

"When your car is out of commission, you're thinking about one thing: get it fixed. You want it fixed right—the first time—and you want it fixed quickly. That's why we invested in the Kansas Jack," says Gray.

With its advanced gauging and analysis system the machine aligns each vehicle in conformance with the manufacturer's original specifications.

Unibody cars are built with more precise dimensions, explains Gray, because they're designed to be light, durable and reliable and at the same time roomy. The body parts may be asymmetrical to pack in the most features possible. "There is little

Quality repairs

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III, shown, is a revolutionary collision repairs system for unibody cars. This addition, plus an exclusive alignment machine and Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven, enable Pat Gray Body Works to provide quality collision repairs, alignment and refinishing service. Pat Gray Body Works is located at 700 N. Owens St.

margin for error in unibody repairs," according to Gray, who says the Kansas Jack can achieve repair results that are correct within one or two millimeters.

Pat Gray Body Works features an exclusive alignment machine for front-wheel and four-wheel drive vehicles. This machine applies a sensor on each of the four wheels so they can be adjusted individually, especially important for independent suspension systems. Computerized analysis is printed out on a screen.

Customers don't have to wait until they've had a collision to utilize the alignment machine, said Gray. If your car has a non-adjustable suspension, and you notice excessive or uneven tire wear or "pulling" it would be a good idea to bring it in.

Castor and camber adjusting kits are now available for installation on Ford, Chevrolet and Dodge trucks, says Gray.

Pat Gray Body Works is the only body shop in the immediate area to feature the Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven for factory-perfect paint jobs on vehicles following body work.

"When you start shopping around for collision repair, alignment or refinishing service you have the right to demand the best," says Gray. "With our equipment, trained technicians and our commitment to quality, we believe we offer the best."
