C-City council calls special session

COLORADO CITY — The City Council here will meet in a special session Monday to discuss a permit requested by the League of United Latin American Citizens for a Dec. 1 march to protest a May, 1988, fatal police shooting of a Hispanic man.

"The march route is lengthier than our typical parade," Mayor Jim Baum said Wednesday. "Our city manager wanted us to be aware of it."

The 40-block route from the county courthouse to the county cemetery and back is 25 blocks longer than the annual Christmas parade and could require extra city personnel to cover it as well as extra costs.

Baum said it would probably cost about $300 just for the Fire Department to handle it. A problem could arise if there is a fire that day.

However, he said, "I don't anticipate there'll be any problem."

Educator named to state board

A Big Spring woman was appointed to fill an unexpired term on the Governing Board of the Texas School for the Deaf.

Beatrice M. Burké, 56, was appointed to the position by Governor Bill Clements on Sept. 14. Burké is an assistant professor and division head at the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

A graduate of Gallaudet College, she earned a master's degree from Southwest Texas State University. She was instrumental in establishing the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf in 1979 and 1980.

She will serve on the board until Jan. 31, 1995. Burké replaces Irene Jones of Fort Worth, who resigned.

Coahoma ISD OKs homecoming date

The Coahoma Independent School District board of trustees approved the date for the homecoming dance in their regular meeting Monday.

The student council received the board's support for the proposed date of Oct. 19. The dance will take place from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

A new policy, adopted to comply with Senate Bill 1 requirements, designated a committee of teachers and administrators to make district-level decisions. Each campus will have two teacher representatives and one administrator on the committee, said Superintendent Gary Rotan.

The teacher appraisal calendar was set from Sept. 11-12 through Dec. 12 and Jan. 14 through May 3. Teachers requiring a single appraisal will be appraised from Sept. 11 through May 3, Rotan said.

A short executive session held by the trustees ended in no action, Rotan said.

Fair attendance hurt by rain

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

Attendance has been great, but slightly down from last year's attendance, said J. Arnold Marshall, Fair Board chairman, Wednesday. "It's been a tremendous success so far, with good participation. We've had good booths, good food, good community displays."

"And the entertainment portion has been very successful," Marshall added.

Last night's entertainment included Cindy Nix, from Big Spring, followed by husband Jody Nix. It was the first time Cindy Nix had performed at the Fair.

Calf roping was held Wednesday in the Rodeo Bowl, with Carey Burchett winning Ribbon Roping Champion. Burchett was awarded a belt buckle Wednesday night. Calf roping concludes in the Rodeo Bowl Thursday night, with 70 teams entered in team roping. Belt

Coming up

Highlighting the activities at the Howard County Fair tonight will be the "Old Timers' showmanship contest at 7:30 p.m. in the Judging Arena."

The Clyde Foley Cummins show will be in the entertainment tent with two performances, 7 & 9 p.m.

Tomorrow will be Bake Day, with judging of cakes and candies at 1:30 p.m. buckles will be awarded to the team with the best of three average times, and a saddle will go the team with the best steer and calf roping time. Trophies and prizes will be awarded about 9:30 p.m., said John Burson, who's in charge of calf roping.

Friday night there will be Horseback Jumping in the Rodeo Bowl, Marshall said. This is another first-time event at the Fair.

Marshall said the biggest drawback to Fair attendance has been the weather.

"The rain Monday night hurt us. The bottom fell out just before the circus. And Tuesday night it fouled us up, although it didn't rain. We moved the Cheerleading Contest into a safe place in anticipation of the rain, but then nobody could get in. That might hurt us in that event for next year," Marshall said.

He said that many students attended the Fair to support the cheerleading squads in the Battle of the Cheerleaders.

"There were as many kids (attending) as we've ever had. Some were up here from Big Lake, so area-wide attendance has been great," Marshall said.

Greenspan warns of economic risks of rising oil costs

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The recession of 1990, if it comes, could be longer and deeper than expected because of a tough anti-inflation stance being taken by the Federal Reserve, some economists contend.

These analysts believe that was the message Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan delivered to Congress on Wednesday when he talked about "new and substantial risks" to the U.S. economy from the rise in oil prices after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Greenspan gave no indication that the central bank was on the verge of pushing interest rates lower. He said the economy was facing threats both from rising inflationary pressures and a possible recession.

The comments disappointed the Bush administration and financial markets, which had been hoping the Fed chief would emphasize recession risks and signal a willingness to ease credit conditions to avert or at least lessen the severity of what would be the country's first economic slump in eight years.

Many analysts said Greenspan's comments sounded remarkably like the views being expressed by central bank officials in such countries as Japan and West Germany. Officials there have said they viewed the inflationary threats from the oil price shock as the greater threat.

"Central bank officials seem determined not to repeat the same mistakes they made in the oil price shocks of 1973 and 1979," said David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York securities dealer.

Iraq requests equal TV time for Saddam

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press Writer

Iraq today asked U.S. networks to broadcast a videotaped message by Saddam Hussein to the American people, and international efforts to further isolate Iraq moved ahead at the United Nations and the Asian Games.

Organizers of the Asian Games today banned Iraq from the competition, which begins Saturday in Beijing.

The expulsion of Iraq from the Asian Games came as punishment for its invasion of Kuwait, said delegates from the Olympic Council of Asia.

Delegates leaving a closed meeting of the 38-member council in Beijing said that of those present, 27 voted today to expel Iraq, three opposed expulsion, five abstained and one ballot was invalid.

Approval of two-thirds of voting delegates was needed to pass the ban. Abstentions did not count.

The push for an air embargo against Iraq has gathered momentum with an agreement by the five key U.N. Security Council members to limit cargo flights into Baghdad to those carrying medicine and humanitarian food aid.

The United Nations has already imposed a naval embargo, and there has been broad support for the U.S.-led multinational force assembled in Saudi Arabia. Hundreds of French soldiers gathered in southern France today to begin a four-day sea lift to join the force.

Iraq's information minister was quoted as saying today that Iraq will knock out Persian Gulf oil fields if attacked by multinational forces assembled in Saudi Arabia.

The official, Latif Nassayef Jassim, also said "Iraq will use all weapons at its disposal to respond to any aggression" intended to force its troops out of Kuwait. His comments were reported by the English-language daily Jordan Times and were made to Jordanian journalists in Baghdad this week.

Jassim was quoted by the Iraqi News Agency as requesting the U.S. TV time. He did not disclose what Saddam's message says, but it is likely a rebuttal to President Bush's speech to the Iraqi people televised Sunday.

If the United States blocks the attempt, Jassim said, "The concerned Iraqi authorities will find alternative ways to transmit the message to the American people."

Canterbury residents prepare treats for soldiers

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

Residents of Canterbury North in Big Spring have been busy preparing boxes of home baked cookies, candy and popcorn to send to U.S. personnel deployed in the Persian Gulf and Saudia Arabia.

Don Coppock, a World War II veteran, said it was his idea to send packages of cookies, and that once it caught on, lots of people helped.

"It went over great," Coppock said. About 20 people helped bake and prepare the packages, while some donated money for postage.

The cookies and candy, some homemade, were packed in popcorn, resident Shirley Smith resident, said.

One of the five boxes will be sent to a Navy vessel in the Persian Gulf, Coppock said, and the remaining four will be sent to Saudia Arabia, to the Army, Air Force and Marines serving there.

"I remember I received a lot of boxes and really appreciated them, and I thought these fellas would, too," explained Coppock, who served in the Navy and traveled twice around the world during World War II.

Coppock said he went to Tina Arguello, Canterbury North operations manager, with his idea for the resident facility to send boxes of sweets. Arguello agreed to make notices for the project, complete with yellow bows.

"We put them on the bulletin boards about a week ago. It started slow, then it just boomed. It was important that we schedule everything when Shirley could be here because she's worked so hard on this," Coppock said, indicating Smith.

Smith also worked to get the boxes packaged and ready to be mailed. The boxes will cost about $1 a pound to mail, and Coppock estimated the five packages will weigh about 60 pounds.

"We figured we might do it again, but after Christmas, because they'll get lots of stuff for Christmas," Coppock said.

"But it sure would be nice if they were home for Christmas," said Smith.

The Canterbury residents who donated money for postage or worked making cookies and packing the boxes are: Melva Hodnett, Minnie Cannon, Georgia Fields, Dorothy Hull, Inez Benjamin, Lewis Miller, Mary Bridges, Hilda Butts, Pearl Hayes, Carrie Alexander, Jo Dann, Hele LeBarre, Richie Mae Smith, Neva Hille and Ann Bailey.

Hayes, LeBarre and Fields have family serving in the armed services now.

Teens arrested in rape case

DALLAS (AP) — Police have arrested two 14-year-olds and a 16-year-old in connection with the rape and shooting of a woman in front of her children.

Authorities said Tuesday that the teen-agers were arrested during the last two weeks. Police said they also know the names of two more 18-year-old suspects and hope to have them in custody soon.

The 25-year-old Oak Cliff woman was paralyzed from the neck down in the Aug. 28 attack. She remains in critical condition at Methodist Medical Center in Dallas.

She has been unable to give detectives any information about her attackers.

Detective Roberta King said many of the woman's neighbors hesitated at first to give information on the five suspects, all of whom lived in her neighborhood.

Police said the woman was walking near her apartment at about 11 p.m. on the night of the attack when five teenagers accosted her and took her inside. As her four children — ages 2 to 8 — looked on, the teens reportedly tore off her clothes and raped her repeatedly.

Ag programs get Senate nod

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee approved funds for several agriculture research programs in Texas for 1991, officials said.

The committee on Wednesday also funded crop insurance, a program opposed by the Bush administration.

"Many Texas farmers cannot get financing to plant their crop without the protection provided by federal crop insurance," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Two of the largest research items in the bill go to projects at Houston's Medical Center Complex. The Children's Nutrition Research Center receives $10.9 million and $3.3 million to build Texas A&M's Institute of Biosciences and Technology at the complex.

Another $4 million was appropriated to build a facility at Texas Tech's Plant Stress Lab. The committee also accepted Bentsen's request to increase the lab's research budget by $150,000 to $1.75 million.

Crews remove leaking acid

CHIDESTER, Ark. (AP) — Union Pacific hopes to know by next week what caused one of its trains to rattle off the tracks, spilling nitric acid and forcing the evacuation of about 300 area residents, a railroad spokesman said.

"They probably aren't going to know (what caused the accident) until they get that whole area cleaned up and examine the site," Union Pacific spokesman Ed Trandahl said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the evacuees still didn't know when they could return to their homes.

Authorities evacuated an area within a mile of the derailment site. Officials said there were no injuries in this southern Arkansas town, about 84 miles southwest of Little Rock.

"We're working as fast as we can within the parameters of safety," Trandahl said Wednesday. "We don't want to give them the impression that (Thursday) afternoon they're going home. I don't want to keep disappointing them by telling them that by 'X' hour they can go home."

Price stands behind his 'call to arms'

J.W. PRICE

DALLAS (AP) — Any violence that might erupt in a city with strained relations between police and its minority community would only be defensive, says a county commissioner who refused to apologize for his "call to arms."

Commissioner John Wiley Price, who warned violence would result if the city hires a "good old boy" police chief who's insensitive to minorities, told a news conference Wednesday evening he was clarifying — but not apologizing for — the remarks.

"And so I say to you today that the call to arms is not an offensive move — it's not a move of aggression," Price said. "We will say we will defend our community; historically, we had to defend our community and we will continue to defend our community."

"That does not mean that we are going to be aggressive in going after police officers in this community," he said. "But we are saying to you that we must defend our community at all costs."

Price had made the earlier remarks in an interview published Wednesday in The Dallas Morning News.

"If you try to bring in a good old boy in this system, we're going to be in the streets. Physically, literally, shooting folks. We're not going to tolerate it," the Dallas County commissioner said in Wednesday's article.

He had later softened his remarks and told the newspaper he would advocate violence against police only in the event of officers' violence against civilians.

But the Dallas County District Attorney's office said it was investigating the legal implications, if any, of Price's statements on violence. Prosecutors said they had received more than 100 telephone calls about the statements Wednesday.

"There is a fine line between what is constitutionally protected free speech and what is not," said Ted Steinke, an assistant district attorney. "We are attempting to determine whether Commissioner Price's words have actually crossed that line."

At the news conference, Price said his statements quoted by the newspaper were "irresponsible" and may have been "inflammatory."

"I don't want anyone to take what I say and take it to the streets," he said. "At this particular time, taking it to the streets is inappropriate behavior."

He said he was saddened by this month's firing of Chief Mack Vines, hired in 1988 to mend relations with minorities that were strained, mostly over a record number of police shootings of blacks and Hispanics.

Vines was accused of lying to a special panel investigating the firing of officer Patrick LeMaire, who fatally shot an unarmed Mexican national last year. Black and Hispanic leaders had demanded LeMaire be fired.

Texas weather decade extreme

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The last decade started off with sizzling heat in Texas and ended with some of the coldest temperatures ever recorded.

These and other weather tidbits are documented in "A Decade of Texas Weather: 1980-89" available through the Office of the State Climatologist at Texas A&M University.

The 1980s brought unprecedented highs and lows, one of the state's worst blizzards and what was reported as the worst hailstorm in history.

July 1980 stands as the state's hottest month of the decade, with an average temperature of 86.5 degrees. December 1983 was the coldest month, with an average temperature of 38.6 degrees, the fifth coldest month in Texas since records began in 1888.

The decade's last month was also the second coldest month, 39.6 degrees average, in a cold snap that sent temperatures six to eight degrees below normal statewide.

Other weather highlights for the decade include:

- A multiple-vortex tornado that hit Saragosa on May 22, 1987, killing 30 people and injuring 121. Most of the town was destroyed.
- Hurricanes Allen, in August 1980, and Gilbert, in September 1988, ranked as two of the most powerful hurricanes to reach Texas. The storms killed three people.
- More than 10 inches of rain hit Austin in May of 1981, killing 13 people.
- On May 8, 1981, a storm packing softball sized hail hit Tarrant County. The book says some people called the storm the worst in American history.
- A blizzard that some called the worst in 70 years hit the Texas Panhandle on March 23, 1987. As much as two feet of snow fell, and 60 mph winds created drifts as high as 12 feet.
- Sleet and freezing rain coated the eastern two-thirds of Texas in a February 1989 ice storm. Six related deaths were reported.
- June, July and August of 1980 were the driest in the last decade, with monthly averages of 4.46 inches of rainfall. April 1984 was the driest April on record with a state average of .57 inches.

Future brighter for Fort Hood

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) — Although prospects are brighter for the 2nd Armored Division than they once were, the large deployment of troops to the Mideast has triggered cutbacks by area merchants.

Half of the 10,000 troops in the division have been deployed to the Middle East because of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, and the remainder of the division is slated for deactivation.

But if the deactivation continues, the departure of the 5,000 soldiers and their families from the Fort Hood area will be a relatively slow process that will take place largely through attrition, not a large-scale transfer of troops to other military posts, Army spokeswoman Liz Crossan said.

"People are sensitive around here, and they're afraid of a mass exodus," Crossan said.

"We've tried to reassure them that won't happen. There eventually will be 5,000 fewer soldiers. When they transfer or retire, the majority won't be replaced," she said.

However, area merchants say it really doesn't make a difference if soldiers exit by the tens or the thousands. The economic impact caused by the troops being sent to the Middle East is their immediate concern.

Emil Pitrucha, the manager of Tire Town in Killeen, said this is the second departure of large numbers of soldiers since the mid-1960s when he first launched a business in the area.

"Those of us who have been in business for a while know what to expect, like we're already cutting back on hours and shoring up our businesses in other ways," Pitrucha told the Austin American-Statesman.

"We do expect unemployment to rise because the businesses with two or three (employees) won't be able to make it."

He said during the 1960s, when troops were being moved to Vietnam, every other house in the Killeen and Copperas Cove area was empty.

"Those were some tough times," Pitrucha said. "We do think they will gradually stabilize and bring troops back in."

Said Denise Huntwork, the assistant manager of Po Folks Restaurant: "Mostly we've missed the business from the guys going to Saudi Arabia. We don't think it will get worse by 1991 (the target completion date of deactivation of the 2nd Armored Division) but we won't be experiencing an increase."

Army officials said Wednesday the deactivation of the 2nd Armored Division will not result in a mass exodus of thousands of troops from the Fort Hood area.

In fact, if the Senate agrees with the House, the deactivation will never take place.

The House on Wednesday approved a $283 billion defense budget that postpones the deactivation while removing several other military posts from a list of facilities slated for closure.

That budget must still be approved by the Senate and signed by President Bush.

The House vote came a day after the Army announced it would continue its deactivation of the Fort Hood division, halted last month in the wake of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Whether troops leave en masse or trickle away doesn't make a difference, said Carola Cochran, the executive director of the Fort Hood Area Board of Realtors.

"Those people will not buy a house, but we're just rolling with the punches," she said.

The 2nd Armored Division, which was Gen. George Patton's, is one of the oldest in the Army.

About 37,000 soldiers are stationed at Fort Hood now, compared to 39,000 at the beginning of the year. When the deactivation was announced in June, the division shrunk from about 12,000 to 10,000.

But the Dallas County District Attorney's office said it was investigating the legal implications, if any, of Price's statements on violence. Prosecutors said they had received more than 100 telephone calls about the statements Wednesday.

"There is a fine line between what is constitutionally protected free speech and what is not," said Ted Steinke, an assistant district attorney. "We are attempting to determine whether Commissioner Price's words have actually crossed that line."

At the news conference, Price said his statements quoted by the newspaper were "irresponsible" and may have been "inflammatory."

"I don't want anyone to take what I say and take it to the streets," he said. "At this particular time, taking it to the streets is inappropriate behavior."

Contract too expensive for Chrysler

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — General Motors Corp.'s proposed pact with the United Auto Workers would be too expensive for Chrysler Corp. to match, executives say.

"GM may have deep pockets and we don't," Chrysler Motors Chairman Bennett Bidwell said Wednesday.

Chrysler especially objects to health-care provisions in the pact, which the union hopes to use as a pattern for contracts with

Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler. Health-care costs are a big issue at Chrysler, which has more retirees and an older work force than GM or Ford. Chrysler has about 60,000 active UAW-represented employees and almost the same number of retirees, who typically file more health claims than younger, active workers.

It appears Ford can live with the GM-UAW contract, which covers 300,000 GM active workers in 29 states.

Bail hearing scheduled for Keating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors surprised by a judge's decision to set bail at $5 million for Charles H. Keating Jr. on savings and loan fraud charges agreed to a hearing today on lowering the amount.

For District Attorney Ira Reiner and his staff, the high bail set Tuesday by Superior Court Judge Gary Klausner came as something of a shock.

In negotiating Keating's surrender, prosecutors told the defense the bail decision would be left to the judge, but they indicated the amount would probably be far lower.

Keating and three co-defendants, whose bail was set at $1 million each, remained in jail in the first criminal case stemming from the $2 billion collapse of Lincoln Savings and Loan, the nation's biggest S&L failure.

They face up to 10 years in prison if convicted.

Keating, a 66-year-old developer from Paradise Valley, Ariz., headed Lincoln's parent, American Continental Corp. in Phoenix.

The defendants were accused of swindling junk-bond investors by misrepresenting the safety of the investments. All told, more than 20,000 investors are believed to have lost $250 million on the now virtually worthless securities.

The judge, in setting bail, said he considered the charges serious.

House, Senate debate versions of defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is on a collision course with the Senate over the B-2 stealth bomber and other vast differences in their versions of the fiscal 1991 defense bill.

"There's a couple of sticking points. Clearly, the B-2 is a big one," Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said after Wednesday's House action.

By a party-line vote of 256-155, the House approved a $283 billion defense bill that stops production of the B-2 bomber at the 15 planes in development and slashes $2.4 billion from President Bush's request for the Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly known as Star Wars.

The Senate, in approving its defense blueprint last month, adopted a $289 billion bill that makes no change in the administration's plan for the B-2 and trims about $1 billion from SDI.

Negotiators for the House and Senate will meet later this month in the hope of finding some common ground in their widely divergent bills and then producing a package acceptable to the president. Moments before the final House vote, Rep. Bill Dickinson of Alabama, ranking Republican on the Armed Services panel, said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney vowed to recommend a veto of the House measure.

Dickinson also was sharply critical of the final legislation.

"With Democrat defense bills like this, Saddam Hussein should have waited another couple of years before invading Kuwait. That way, we wouldn't have had the men or machines to oppose him," he said.

Aspin and other Democrats shared a different perspective of the package.

"The bill provides for a military still primarily sized and shaped to meet the Soviet threat. But it takes the first steps toward buying the right defense for a new era," Aspin said.

First on the agenda for members of the House and Senate Armed Services committees who will take part in the conference is an overall spending total for defense.

That number will be decided by White House and congressional negotiators hammering out an agreement on how to pare $50 billion from the federal deficit.

Thatcher visits new democracies

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — In many ways British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's first visit this week to two new East European democracies, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, was like a family reunion.

She hailed both for their bloodless revolutions, which ended decades of Communist rule and led to elections this year that installed the countries' first democratic governments in more than 40 years.

They had, she declared, returned "once more to their rightful place in Europe."

But Mrs. Thatcher, who traveling to Switzerland today on the last leg of a six-day trip, singled out for special attention Hungary's Prime Minister Jozsef Antall. He is the only true political soulmate the upheaval in Eastern Europe has produced for the British Conservative Party leader.

"We believe in the same things and act on our beliefs," she told Antall.

Conditions worsening in Liberia

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Sickness, starvation and the possibility of further fighting are on the rise in Liberia, but rival guerrilla chiefs are willing to talk peace, a senior U.S. diplomat said after meeting the leaders.

Herman Cohen, U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, had put himself at considerable personal risk in traveling to the civil war-ravaged land, where sporadic fighting continues.

"The prospects for increased warfare are growing," Cohen told a news conference Wednesday in Abidjan after returning from the visit.

"I feel the situation in Liberia is deteriorating. More and more people are in danger of starvation and death from diseases, especially a growing cholera threat," Cohen said.

He said conditions worsened after President Samuel Doe, accused by the rebels of corruption and human rights abuses, was captured and killed last week by the rebel forces of Prince Johnson.

Reprisals against Doe supporters have been reported and many Doe loyalists are still refusing to surrender to rebels for fear of being killed. Rival rebel forces have also clashed.

More than 5,000 people, mostly civilians, have died in the conflict. They were killed mainly because of their tribal affiliation.

Government takes over bordello

MUSTANG, Nev. (AP) — Ladies of the night who have kept the red lights burning at America's best-known brothel have a new employer — Uncle Sam, by way of federal Bankruptcy Court.

The Mustang Ranch, Nevada's oldest legal bordello, shut down Tuesday after filing for bankruptcy liquidation. On Wednesday, a court trustee took charge of the money-losing business until it can be sold or creditors are paid off.

Prostitutes who had earlier fled out of fear that tax collectors were about to raid the place filtered back Wednesday, some to pick up belongings and others to resume work at the 105-room brothel.

GOVERNMENT BROTHEL

"A lot of girls don't like the idea of working for Uncle Sam," said 22-year-old Bree. "They don't like the idea of having to pay taxes."

Americans warned about terrorism

DOWNED UNCLE SAM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are being warned about "a possible imminent terrorist bombing" in Manila, where talks on the future of U.S. military bases in the Philippines are underway.

"The U.S. government believes this threat to be both specific and credible," the State Department said in a statement late Wednesday, linking the possible bombing to the communist New People's Army.

There have been several bombings within the last few weeks, but the government of President Corazon Aquino has blamed most of them on right-wing rebel soldiers.

KGB wants to exchange information with CIA about Iraq

MOSCOW (AP) — The KGB would like to exchange information with the CIA on Iraq but has not made the offer directly because past proposals for cooperation have been rebuffed, the spy agency's chief has told The Associated Press.

"I am convinced that we could really tell each other something valuable, especially about ensuring the security of Soviet and American citizens" in the Persian Gulf region, KGB chairman Vladimir A. Kryuchkov said in an interview.

If the CIA wants help, "You can be sure that our reaction would be positive," Kryuchkov told the visiting AP board of directors and executives on Wednesday.

He said his agency is also willing to work with U.S. intelligence in fighting international terrorism and narcotics trafficking.

The balding, white-haired Kryuchkov sat beneath a portrait of Soviet founder Vladimir I. Lenin. Beside the KGB chief was a vase of bright flowers that contrasted with the stark decor of the wood-paneled conference room on the third floor of the Lubyanka, the gray, pink and yellow KGB headquarters in downtown Moscow.

He joked with the group about the fear the KGB and the Lubyanka inspired but said in serious tones that the agency was leaving behind that "tragic page" of history.

In meetings with American officials, Kryuchkov said, "we always give signals about being ready to work together in this or that field" with U.S. intelligence.

"The signals reach the right address," he said, but the answer is always something along the lines of, "We are not ready yet."

It was not clear precisely what sort of information the Soviets might be willing to offer the United States. Most Iraqi military equipment is Soviet-made, and providing intelligence on how to defeat that equipment in battle might

"We always give signals about being ready to work together in this or that field" with U.S. intelligence. — KGB chairman Vladimir A Kryuchkov undermine the effectiveness of the Soviet military in any possible confrontation with the United States.

Moreover, Kryuchkov acknowledged, the Kremlin is concerned about possible Iraqi actions against Soviets who remain in that country.

The Soviet Union still has about 5,000 specialists in Iraq, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said in a separate briefing.

"We used to have about 8,000 experts," including non-military specialists, he said.

"We said that we evacuated children and women ... which is not exactly correct. We evacuated spouses and children. There are some women experts still there. So far, 2,500 persons left Iraq, all the children, all the spouses," he said.

"The Soviet community is slightly more than 5,000. About 60 of them are women, these are experts of different Soviet establishments there, say, typists," said Gerasimov.

"The experts whose contracts expire leave the country using Aeroflot regular flights," he said, referring to the Soviet government airline. "Iraqi authorities did not make any impediments to that."

Kryuchkov, in his interview with the AP, also denied that the Soviet government had planted electronic eavesdropping devices in the new U.S. Embassy office building in Moscow.

U.S. officials have accused the KGB of lacing the brick structure with sophisticated bugging devices. The Bush administration is weighing plans to destroy the structure and build another at a cost of tens of millions of dollars.

Kryuchkov said he envisioned the day when the two superpowers would no longer spy on each other. Already, he said, "We do not consider the United States of America our main enemy."

In the interview, Kryuchkov also said he did not want to see the KGB divided into foreign and domestic intelligence-gathering operations, along the lines of the FBI and CIA.

He declined to disclose the KGB budget or the number of agents it employs, citing similar secrecy on the part of U.S. intelligence.

The Supreme Soviet parliament is drafting a law that would govern the actions of the KGB and give a legislative commission the right to learn all the agency's secrets, similar to the Select Intelligence Committees in the U.S. Congress, he said.

Already, he said, the Ministry of Finance has a special department that monitors the agency's expenditures.

Grant policies need a change

The recommendations of the congressional panel reviewing the grant-making policies of the National Endowment for the Arts make a lot of sense. They are likely to assure more public accountability without censorship, and they call for an end to some of the clubby back-scratching that, obscenity or no obscenity, often characterized the old system.

The bipartisan commission, named to advise the Congress in the wake of the controversy over the photographs of Robert Mapplethorpe and Andres Serrano, called for the repeal of NEA's controversial requirement that grant recipients pledge not to use their NEA money to produce obscene work. At the same time, however, it reminded the NEA to be "sensitive to the nature of public sponsorship" as opposed to private sponsorship and, more important, proposed basic changes in the review process.

Most important, the commission wants the peer review committees, which are now usually made up of artists, to include non-artists. In addition, it wants the committees, which have had virtually final authority in awarding grants, to become advisory panels to the NEA chairman and council. The latter would have authority to choose among the recommendations of the advisory panels. The commission also proposed rules prohibiting advisory panelists from sitting in judgment on applications from organizations with which they are themselves affiliated.

The last proposal is so reasonable that one wonders why it wasn't part of the process long ago. Over the years, the NEA has supported hundreds of worthwhile endeavors in the arts, from theater companies and museums to individual writers, painters and musicians. But clearly it also suffered from cozy friendships and cliques in which it was hard to determine how much of an award was based on merit, and how much on friendship or on the need of some group to score points for its own aesthetic or social outlook.

Extremists greeted the commission's recommendations with predictable hostility, as being either too restrictive, or not restrictive enough. But for many members of Congress, the proposals are likely to represent a reasonable compromise, a way to support the arts without censorship while still retaining general accountability to the public whose tax dollars go for that support.

German dragon is reluctant

By ART BUCHWALD

The secret is out. Germany is now the most reluctant of dragons when it comes to supporting the Western allies in the Middle East.

I asked a German acquaintance, Otto Kraus, why Germany has refused to help the U.S. in its battle with Iraq.

With tears in his eyes Otto replied, "We don't have any money."

"Come off it, Otto. What do you mean Germany doesn't have any money?"

He explained, "Iraq won't pay us for all the poison gas equipment and the biological weapons we sent them. They won't even pay for the nuclear machinery that we delivered. We're stuck with so many bills Germany can't afford to get into a quarrel with Iraq at this time."

"Why not?" "Because Saddam Hussein has been one of our best customers. We are unable to sell him anything now. However, once the embargo is lifted we want Iraq to remember us with kindness."

"That's fair, and yet don't you feel an obligation to the U.N. countries who are spitting mad that Iraq annexed Kuwait?"

"We don't like it, but you must remember that Germany annexed a lot of territory at the beginning of World War II, so we're not in a position to criticize anybody else. It is unreasonable that we should be singled out because we won't send troops to Saudi Arabia."

"Does this have anything to do with your constitution?" "No, it's because it's too hot there. German troops hate the heat, that's why we never did well in North Africa."

"Otto, you owe it to the United States. We helped rebuild your nation out of the rubble. We initiated the Berlin airlift to protect you from the Russians. We bought every camera Germany could make. Now that the chips are down, your people should reciprocate and come to our aid."

"Of course we should, but that means sending troops to the desert. Are you sure you want us to do that?" "I'm very sure. After all, the oil in Kuwait is your oil as well as ours."

"Nobody knows this, but we are in fact assisting the United States in the Middle East."

"How?" "We are supplying stereo equipment to U.S. PXes. This is top-of-the-line stuff you don't even find in Crazy Eddie's."

"I hate to tell you, Otto, but Germany is considered the 'cowardly lion' of the Western World."

"It doesn't matter what the world thinks as long as we can get Iraq to pay its bills."

"Once you had a reputation for being a bully — now everyone says that you are a wimp." "What business is it of yours what we do?" Otto asked.

I replied, "Because I have a vested interest in everything Germany does. I own a Mercedes-Benz."

Otto defended himself, "All we have been doing in the Middle East is following orders." "Whose orders?" "The German Central Bank's."

Souter was ready for questions

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Sometimes the obvious, simple question is the tough one. Supreme Court nominee David H. Souter is a judge who studies the precedents, so he was ready when asked why he wants the job he's about to get.

Souter told his confirmation hearing that he loves the judiciary, wants no calling but to be a judge, and would seek on the high court to serve as a steward of the Constitution.

He said it is the greatest responsibility a judge can undertake, "to join with eight other people to make the promises of the Constitution a reality for our time and to preserve that Constitution for the generations that will follow us after we are gone from here."

That's an unassailable if vague answer to a question that would seem elementary for any nominee or office-seeker. It isn't always answered effectively.

When Sen. Edward M. Kennedy was asked why he wanted to be president as he prepared to run in 1980, his awkward, rambling attempt to answer became a campaign liability.

Robert H. Bork told the contentious Senate hearing on his doomed nomination to the Supreme Court that service there would be "an intellectual feast." He also said he wanted to contribute to maintaining constitutional government as he saw it.

Bork, of course, had spelled out the way he saw it, in lectures, writings, and rulings as a federal appeals judge that established positions on most major constitutional issues of the times.

Souter has not. Three days of questioning by the Senate Judiciary Committee didn't change that. Souter talked about himself, about his experiences, about his judicial philosophy, about dozens of decisions and precedents. But he did not telegraph to skeptical liberals or to newly wary conservatives just where he would stand on the questions awaiting the closely divided court — matters including abortion, civil rights and criminal justice.

Souter foreclosed answers to the abortion question early in the process, declining to discuss the court's 1973 ruling or to express his personal opinion on abortion.

At the same time, he said that he believes the 14th Amendment to the Constitution "does recognize and does protect an unenumerated right of privacy." That position doesn't fit the conservative agenda.

The ruling that legalized abortions was based on the right to privacy, something Bork had said was invented by the court, was one contentious point among many at the 1987 hearings on his court nomination. Bork is a formidable legal scholar. He showed it in disputing critics and, at times, questioners.

Souter was said to have reviewed the Bork hearings and to have watched videotapes of some points in that testimony as he prepared for his own confirmation hearings.

Souter was no less the scholar; some of his answers came complete with footnotes as he cited legal history, Supreme Court cases and provisions of the

Researchers: Chronic fatigue is real disease

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Two weeks ago, independent researchers announced that the disease known as "chronic fatigue syndrome" is linked to the same family of retroviruses that has been associated with AIDS. Ironically, it was good news for those who suffer from the mysterious illness. At least now the scientific world may believe they are really sick.

Their disease has been derisively labeled "yuppie flu" because it often strikes young, middle-class people with symptoms that might as easily be caused by trendy workaholicism. The victims are tired, depressed and anxious in addition to suffering from flu-like symptoms. In severe cases, the patients cannot even get out of bed. The illness is not fatal.

These victims have had a tough time getting anyone, especially the federal government, to take them seriously.

For years, the government refused to do adequate research on chronic fatigue syndrome, even when Congress ordered that research. Up until two years ago, scientists from the National Institutes of Health and the Centers for Disease Control were apt to say that the disease was a figment of the patient's imagination.

Only constant grass-roots pressure from people with chronic fatigue syndrome has produced any action from the government. In 1988, Congress, under heavy lobbying from the victims, appropriated $1 million to the NIH for research into the disease and ordered NIH to investigate any links with AIDS or cancer.

So far, the government has little to show for its work except an ambiguous "surveillance" system of four cities to get a better count of the number of victims. Barry Sleight, a volunteer lobbyist with the Chronic Fatigue Syndrome Information Institute, told us that the government scientists "are supposed to unleash their dogs on this disease, and that hasn't happened yet."

An outbreak of chronic fatigue syndrome in Incline Village, Nev., in 1984 is typical of how the government has handled the disease. Two CDC researchers were dispatched to the town. They took blood samples from the victims and reached no conclusions.

asked the CDC to investigate the Incline Village outbreak. He told our reporter Paul Zimmerman that "it was like pulling teeth to get them out in the first place."

When the CDC researchers showed up, "they didn't spend a lot of time with the patients," Cheney said. He was convinced that the CDC didn't have an open mind about chronic fatigue syndrome.

Cheney is one of the independent researchers who released the study earlier this week linking chronic fatigue syndrome to the family of viruses responsible for AIDS.

Another researcher working with Cheney, Dr. Daniel Peterson, believes chronic fatigue syndrome has had to stand in line behind AIDS research in America. The powers that be in the government research community have "underestimated the severity of the illness," Peterson told us.

Since 1985, the CDC has not conducted any lab testing of blood samples of chronic fatigue sufferers. The government research lab hasn't even supported a consistent label for the disease, which has gone through four name changes in five years.

It took the CDC until 1988 to come up with a working definition of chronic fatigue syndrome, and there is still no test for the disease. Doctors can only diagnose patients by ruling out other ailments.

There are some recent signs of movement at the CDC. Dr. Walter Gunn, the head of the CDC investigative team looking into chronic fatigue, told us that the CDC no longer considers the disease a mental illness. Instead, the depression that victims suffer, he said, is a result of the illness, not the cause of it. Gunn is beginning case studies of chronic fatigue patients, which he hopes to finish within a year. He says the study may give the CDC answers about what causes chronic fatigue syndrome.

Cheerleaders find phony
 COLORADO SPRINGS, (AP) — A female impersonator enrolled at a high school, made the cheerleading squad and stole the affections of the football team before being found out eight days later, students and authorities said.
 Charles James Daugherty, 26, was arrested for investigation of forgery and criminal impersonation. He was released on $750 bail for a court appearance Oct. 1.
 Daugherty enrolled as a junior at Coronado High School, using the name Cheyan Weatherly, school officials said. He said he had been studying in Greece under a private tutor for the past two years, said Detective Bob Driscoll.
 Daugherty became a cheerleader without a formal tryout and performed in uniform at a pep rally, teachers and students said. He changed clothes in the women's locker room and became close friends with at least two cheerleaders.

Hope expressed during Holy Days
 NEW YORK (AP) — Jewish leaders saw both danger and hope on the horizon as they began the High Holy Days.
 Schindler, president of Reform Judaism's Union of American Hebrew Congregations, said Israel "is at special risk."
 However, he said there is "one shaft of light in an otherwise gloomy sky" — that the threat of Iraq will impel other Arab states to join Egypt in reaching an understanding with Israel.

Policy calls for BYOB parties
 PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fraternities at the University of Pennsylvania, their image tarnished by a series of crimes and pranks, have adopted a "bring your own booze" policy for parties.
 "We are attempting to take control of a dangerous situation before it takes control of us," said Bret Kinsella, a member of Kappa Sigma and president of the Intrafraternity Council.
 The policy, announced Tuesday, calls for doormen at all parties to check that guests are of legal drinking age.

Grace Niles, a resident of the Alzheimer's Center of Western Michigan, uses a photograph outside of her room to help find her way around. The photos are often replaced with older ones of the residents as they lose their short-term memories.

Memories: Pathways back

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Every so often, aides at the Alzheimer's Center of Western Michigan replace the snapshots that hang next to the doorway of each bedroom, gentle reminders to help guide residents.
 Instead of substituting updated portraits, the aides tack up photographs portraying the graying men and women in their youth.
 It is a clear sign of the devastating effects of the disease, which first steals its victim's short-term memory.
 "They remember themselves not as they are, but as they were," administrator Lynne Bylsma said. She stands in front of a room whose occupant is identified by a photograph of himself as a handsome World War II soldier.
 It is the same symptom that wipes out knowledge of children and grandchildren, but leaves childhood memories intact.
 "It's like a living death," Bylsma said. "Sometimes, we have to remove the mirrors in their rooms because they no longer recognize the person looking back at them and it's upsetting to them."
 The center, which opened in April and accommodates 20 residents, represents a trend in facilities that advertise as being designed for Alzheimer's patients.
 Many experts say traditional nursing homes, often plagued by space and staff shortages, are inappropriate for Alzheimer's patients, especially those who are physically fit. The memory loss is accompanied by increased irritability and a tendency to wander. There have been accusations of Alzheimer's patients being strapped down or over-sedated.
 It is widely believed that such patients fare better in more intimate, homelike settings with specially trained staffs, safety precautions and more individual attention.
 "What you want is a place that can be flexible — that's not going to take a cookie-cutter approach," said Deborah Beitler, director of state policy and chapter advocacy of the Chicago-based Alzheimer's Association.
 But as more facilities advertise as Alzheimer specialists, patient advocates worry about potential abuses.
 Nobody knows how many such homes exist because there are no licensing standards governing them, as there are with nursing homes, according to the Alzheimer's Association.
 "Pretty much anyone can put out a sign and call themselves an Alzheimer's center," said Ann Steslicki, executive director of the association's west-central Michigan chapter.

 The Alzheimer's Center in Grand Rapids is licensed by the state as an adult foster care home. That means it can operate without skilled nursing personnel, but cannot treat patients requiring extensive medical care.
 Sufferers of the disease, most of whom are over 65, sometimes linger for decades as the disease progresses from forgetfulness to loss of speech and bodily functions.

"We know that some people out there are going to be primarily motivated by profit and will prey on families who are under a tremendous amount of stress and particularly vulnerable. There definitely is that fear on the consumers' part and it's a justified one."
 Deborah Beitler of the Alzheimer's Association
 An estimated 4 million Americans have Alzheimer's.
 A private room at the center costs $2,500 a month. Insurance rarely pays for such long-term care.
 The modern, one-story building is part of a tree-shaded retirement village.
 There is a fenced-in yard with a concrete path, and buzzers on each door leading outside alert nurse's aides as residents come and go.
 Staffing ratios are five residents per nurse's aide. A licensed practical nurse is on hand during the day. There are memory therapy sessions, daily exercise routines and field trips.
 Studies are under way to determine whether such activities help to delay the most crippling stages of the disease.
 Shirley Leitz of Kentwood said she's impressed with the care her 77-year-old mother receives, but is unsure about the benefits of the specialized program.
 "This place is so much more than having fencing in the yard," Leitz said. "I appreciate that they encourage her to do as much as she can by herself because once something is unlearned she won't ever learn it again."

 However, sometimes when Leitz visits, she finds her mother wearing pajamas on top of her regular clothes or several layers of blouses and pants.
 "She is turning into a child," Leitz acknowledges. "It's hard to think of the day when I'll walk in and she won't recognize me."
 Until an accreditation system is created for Alzheimer's homes, the Alzheimer's Association urges caution for families seeking care for a relative with the disease. The association provides guidance to consumers about what to look for.
 While adult foster-care homes have relatively low supervision standards, many retirement villages and senior citizen centers that are not regulated at all have also begun advertising as Alzheimer's units, officials say.
 "We know that some people out there are going to be primarily motivated by profit and will prey on families who are under a tremendous amount of stress and particularly vulnerable," said Beitler of the Alzheimer's Association. "There definitely is that fear on the consumers' part — and it's a justified one."
 Janet Lewis, a supervisor for the Michigan Department of Social Services' adult foster care licensing division, said the department is limited in policing group homes because the department has no Alzheimer's experts.
 "As long as they don't advertise nursing care, they can call themselves whatever they like," she said.
 Meanwhile, more nursing homes are setting aside beds or adding wings designed for Alzheimer's patients.
 In 1987, 53,800 nursing home beds, or 3.3 percent of the nationwide total of 1.6 million, were set aside for Alzheimer's patients. By 1991, that number will almost double to about 100,000, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.
 "Ultimately, our goal is to have all nursing facilities improve to a point where they would be appropriate for Alzheimer's patients," said Stephen McConnell, the association's vice president of public policy. "If you're taking good care of an Alzheimer's patient, then you're probably taking good care of other patients as well."

Fitness king turns 75

MORRO BAY, Calif. (AP) — When Jack LaLanne opened the nation's first health club during the Depression, he was labeled a charlatan for promoting daily exercise and organic food.
 Time has leathened his face and his dark, wavy locks are threaded with gray. Yet the firebrand of the physical fitness revolution, now 75, has the body of a man 20 years his junior and an attitude that is ageless.
 "I never think of my age, never," said LaLanne. "I could be 20 or 100. I never think about it. I'm just me. Look at Bob Hope, George Burns. They're more productive than they've ever been in their whole lives right now."
 LaLanne follows a daily routine that usually consists of two hours of weightlifting and an hour in the swimming pool.
 "It's a lifestyle, it's something you do the rest of your life," said LaLanne, whose newest passion is golf. "How long are you going to keep breathing? How long do you keep eating? You just do it."
 He has built two gyms at his home nestled in a golden hill above Morro Bay in central California. The one furnished with equipment he designed 50 years ago could be considered a museum, said Elaine, his wife of 31 years.
 The LaLannes moved to Morro Bay from their Hollywood Hills home four years ago to escape smog-plagued Los Angeles. Their three-acre plot includes a chicken coop, a greenhouse, an aviary with parrots and parakeets, and a covey of statues — including David and the Discus Thrower.
 When the LaLannes met, Elaine was a chain smoker and a junk-food junkie. She soon was transformed into a walking testimonial to the LaLanne program.
 Like his wife, LaLanne was not always the picture of health.
 The son of poor French immigrants, he was born in Oakland in 1914 and grew up to become a sugarholic, he said.
 The turning point occurred one night when he heard a lecture by pioneering nutritionist Paul Bragg, who advocated the benefits of brown rice, whole wheat and a vegetarian diet.
 "He got me so enthused," LaLanne said. "After the lecture

Jack LaLanne

I went to his dressing room and spent an hour and a half with him. He said, Jack you're a walking garbage can."
 Soon after, LaLanne constructed a makeshift gym in his backyard. "I had all these firemen and police working out there and I kind of used them as guinea pigs," he said.
 At 21, he opened the first of his 100 health clubs in California, New Jersey and New York. He doled out $45 a month to rent space on the third floor of an Oakland office building.
 "The doctors were against me," LaLanne said. "They said: 'Don't go to that Jack LaLanne guy or you'll get a heart attack, hemorrhoids, you'll lose your sex drive. If you're athletes you won't be able to throw the ball. And you women will look like men.'"
 Eventually, his popularity grew and he had his own nationally syndicated show. It aired from 1951 to 1971 and was brought back for a few years in the early 1980s.
 When asked how he'd like to celebrate his 75th birthday on Sept. 26, LaLanne said he'd like to swim the 26 miles from Catalina Island to Los Angeles under water. "It's never been done."

There's a lot of news to report about various activities including band, football teams and players, teachers and students. My name is Julie McKinnon and I am a seventh grade student at Garden City. Tell kids about abuse

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing to you in the hope that our experience can help other families.

We all have heard horror stories of child molestation, but we think it can never happen to our children. Most literature on the subject advises that when your children are of school age, teach them that if someone tries to molest them, they should: 1) scream, kick, hit; 2) run; and 3) tell someone.

Well, don't wait until your children are that old! If your children are old enough to know where their private parts are, they are old enough to be taught that nobody should be allowed to touch those parts.

I started teaching our daughter at the age of 4. Within five months, she was molested. Unfortunately, that was not the first time. Through her therapy, we discovered that it had been going on for 2 1/2 years — since she was 21 months old! If I had taught her sooner, we could have stopped it sooner.

Dear Abby

There is one more thing that I cannot stress enough. Believe your child. Children do not lie about something like this. It's a known fact that children have been molested by sitters, neighbors and trusted family members of all ages.

If this letter helps just one person, then the pain our family has suffered will not have been in vain.

— ANONYMOUS, PLEASE
DEAR ANONYMOUS: I'm sure your letter will serve as a helpful "wake-up call" for any parents who think their child is too young to be taught this very important lesson. Thanks for writing.

New look?

NEW YORK — The ever-changing Madonna revealed her new look before stopping in at the Museum of Modern Art for the New York premiere of the new Martin Scorsese film, "GoodFellas." The film, already controversial, is based on the novel "Wiseguy."

NEW YORK (AP) — If you tape bad shows for a collection called "America's Funniest Home Awfuls," boy, have you got a treat tonight. It's the two-hour premiere of a new CBS series, "The Flash."

The series is based on the comic book hero who likes to wear a red skin-tight bodystocking with a mask and a hood that has winged ears that look like car door handles. You know, the sort of guy you find in punk rock clubs.

Only this one fights crime at incredible speed.

How bad is the CBS effort? It makes similar tableaux, like yesteryear's "Six Million Dollar Man" and "Bionic Woman," resemble high art.

It doesn't help that the show's handsome young star, John Wesley Shipp, appears to have studied acting at the Wooden School of Tights and Drama.

It's a shame. But Shipp just is not believable, particularly in a crucial early scene when he exceeds 347 mph on a laboratory treadmill, then asks, "What's happening to me?"

The Flash he plays lives in a dark, metropolis called Central City, where the streets are always wet, with clouds of rising steam here and there.

It vaguely resembles the city in the movie version of "Dick Tracy" (are there no TV or movie producers who don't read comic books nowadays?).

Those who don't know the origins of The Flash will learn tonight that he is a police crime lab ace named Barry Allen. Barry is transformed into a real whiz when a lightning bolt hits his laboratory and sprays a lot of chemicals on him.

A member of a family of cops, Barry has a girlfriend, Iris (Paula Marshall), a computer artist. She doesn't want to get married yet.

Good thing he also has a dog named Earl.

Barry's older married brother, Jay (Tim Thomerson), is a veteran motorcycle cop heading a task force to wipe out The Dark Riders — an extremely evil subterranean motorcycle gang led by an anti-social activist (Michael Nader).

The Dark Riders' leader, whose face is horribly scarred by bad makeup, is... surprise, an ex-cop gone wrong. For starters, he wears a ponytail.

The Dark Riders like to throw bombs and shoot automatic weapons as they roar by in the night. They like to do this even when the police chief, in a speech familiar to New Yorkers, is telling the press:

"Your police department is determined to give you back your streets and rid them of the fear that keeps us all awake at night." After the gang roars in and shoots and bombs, the ubiquitous TV reporter asks Jay for a statement. Snarls Jay: "We're gonna bury these guys, and you can quote me on that."

But it is hard. He can't figure out why he runs so fast his shoes smoke or why he eats more than 10 TV dinners at one sitting. A good doctor would tell him it's because he watches too much MTV.

But this is CBS, so he has to go to a secret government lab and become the subject of tests by Tina McGee, a lovely, widowed scientist played by Amanda Pays (Pays can act, and thus stands out here).

There is a nifty scene when, during a test, he breaks the speed of sound on a race track, then scoops her up and does it again. It is nifty because she is wearing clothes that endure the speed of sound, a fashion first.

Tina, who starts helping him, is the only one who knows his secret.

This is good, because most of the show — despite all the bombing, shooting, attempted prison breakouts and high-speed blurs of red — is strictly from arrrrrrgh.

There is one moment of high drama, when the bad ex-cop kills his hated foe — Jay, the head of the Dark Rider task force. But all is lost when The Flash arrives, holds his dead brother in his arms and emits a loud cry.

The cry is supposed to indicate anguish. Instead, it sounds as The Flash just suffered a snapped truss.

For the record, the script is by the show's executive producers, Danny Bilson and Paul DeMeo. The show comes from Pet Fly Productions, which may explain everything.

Slater is still a kid to audiences

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Just turned 21, Christian Slater is still struggling to get out of high school — in the movies, that is.

He was the high school killer in the black comedy "Heathers." Now he's a shy student who uses a pirate radio station to inflame his fellow high schoolers in "Pump Up the Volume."

"I'm trying to put high school behind me and age a little bit," smiled Slater, whose innocent face could easily pass for mid-teens. "I think 'Pump Up the Volume' will be my last high school film."

"On the set of the movie I was talking in an interview about how I would like to grow a little bit and play a character who had a bit of scruffiness to him, a little bit older. Then along came 'Young Guns 2,' which was perfect."

In "Pump Up the Volume," Slater is a newcomer to an Arizona school, a total outsider who nevertheless communicates with his frenetic, X-rated rantings and heavy-metal music on his makeshift radio station. The New Line Cinema film is obviously aimed at the young crowd, but the star has some impressive, high-pitch scenes before the microphone.

He can even find a message in the movie: "It deals with freedom of speech, expressing yourself, saying what you really feel in situations, and of just being the best you can be and not being afraid."

On "Young Guns 2," Slater was the new kid in the block that included Emilio Estevez, Kiefer Sutherland and Lou Diamond

Phillips from the first movie.

"There was no feeling of being tested or anything," said Slater. "I felt immediately accepted into that group. They were very supportive."

"I was the new rider, and I had a lot of catching up to do, working with the guns. Kiefer was fast on the draw; we had a lot of races. Luckily, we weren't given real bullets. Lou was an excellent rider, and he was teaching me different mounts and feeling comfortable in the saddle again."

Slater has been acting almost from birth. The son of stage and TV actor Michael Hawkins and Mary Jo Slater, now a casting agent, he was three months old when his mother brought him onstage in a play. According to family legend, she held him aloft and declared, "This is your life, my son."

Slater's big break came at 16: as Sean Connery's youthful sidekick in "The Name of the Rose."

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

A show featuring Santa Gertrudis cattle, the first breed of beef cattle developed in the United States, was Tuesday night at the Howard County Fair.

Originally produced at the King Ranch in Kingsville, the cattle are known for being adaptable, durable and good producers, say breeders who came from all over the southwest to show their animals at the fair.

Breeder Bill Barrett, of the Five Oaks Ranch in Waco, explained the history of the breed and what makes them good cattle to have.

"Every single one of the Santa Gertrudis can be traced back to one bull, so we have more consistency than (other breeds)," he said. "They are able to put on more pounds with less feed, produce more milk and can survive conditions of extreme heat."

The "cherry red" cattle are all around "good do-ers," said breeder Danny Casillas of Live Oak, Calif.

"They do well in the pasture on any feed, give a calf every nine to 11 months (and) are good milkers. Basically, they are the result of a good combination," Casillas said.

The combination that makes Santa Gertrudis is $\frac{3}{4}$ Durham short-horn and $\frac{1}{4}$ Brahman. The first bull, Monkey, was produced in 1920.

Breeders like Barrett and Casillas travel throughout the Southwest showing their cattle, hoping to sell a cow, a bull or sperm to other ranchers. They also compete with other breeders to find out who is doing the best job of developing the breed.

"As you go around the country," Barrett said, "with these other breeders, you beat them one time and then they beat you. It helps you know how well you're doing. Sometimes, if you beat them, they'll buy from you. It keeps us up to date."

Raising beef-producers is big business, but it's also a family affair, Barrett said.

"When you're raising cattle, everybody in the family works," he said. "You just get used to it. It's definitely a business."

through international television stations."

Saddam's statements have repeatedly been carried to American people over the Cable News Network since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2.

More than 400 Westerners, including 110 American women and children, flew from Iraq to London on Wednesday, and the Americans were to fly on to North Carolina today.

The State Department said a similar flight Saturday is the last U.S. charter planned from Baghdad and advised all wanting to leave to sign up. So far, about 1,500 Americans have been allowed to leave Iraq and Kuwait on seven chartered flights, but 1,000 more remain behind. Some of the American men remaining behind are being used to shield Iraqi installations from attack.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the U.N. Security Council's five permanent members — the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China — had agreed to extend the trade embargo against Iraq to air traffic.

"We know there is a need to have an air embargo and a need to have it enforceable," she told a news conference while visiting Budapest, Hungary.

The resolution is expected to be put to a vote in the 15-member council on Friday or Saturday, diplomats said.

Under its terms, participating countries could order aircraft headed for Iraq to land or be refused overflight permission. However, intercepted aircraft could not be shot down.

The U.N. embargo on trade with Iraq was approved just days after Saddam's forces overran Kuwait. It has been largely successful, having cut off nearly all export of oil, Iraq's main source of income, and caused food shortages in Iraq that have led to rationing.

The call for extending the embargo to the air — a largely symbolic gesture — was led by France, which was angered by Iraqi raids last week on the French and other diplomatic compounds in Kuwait.

Saddam has massed an estimated 360,000 of his troops in and around oil-rich Kuwait, which it annexed after the invasion.

To counter the Iraqi threat, more than 100,000 U.S. soldiers have been rushed to neighboring oil giant Saudi Arabia and half as many are aboard warships sent to the region. Thousands of troops and dozens of warships from other nations also have converged.

The French soldiers, including Foreign Legionnaires, gathered in French port of Toulon today to begin a four-day sealfit for Saudi Arabia. About 4,000 ground troops will take part in France's largest sealfit in at least 30 years.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney asked Congress to let the Pentagon accept and spend the billions in promised allied contributions for military operations in the gulf without prior approval from Capitol Hill.

But Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., called the administration request an attempt to set up "in effect, a military spending slush fund."

Losses to countries participating in the embargo against Iraq were running into the billions, and aid from industrialized countries was only partially offsetting the effect, officials said.

Lebanon's civil war-racked economy got some help from Saudi Arabia. The Lebanese government said today it has received $100 million from the Saudis to help offset the loss of funding promised by Kuwait and oil-rich Arab governments now faced with the gulf crisis.

Merrill Lynch in New York. "It would like to ease because the economy is rapidly weakening but at the same time inflation is rapidly accelerating."

Greenspan's comments represented a setback for the Bush administration. The administration has been lobbying for months for the Fed to lower interest rates in an effort to avert the first economic downturn since the 1981-82 recession.

Greenspan insisted that the economy is still growing, although at a very slow pace, but he said the risks of a recession had increased since Aug. 2.

"Regrettably, events in the Middle East have introduced new and substantial risks to the outlook," Greenspan said.

In a report emphasizing the weakness, the Fed on Wednesday released a review of economic conditions in various parts of the country. The Fed report said that economic activity in the Fed's 12 regions was either expanding more slowly or actually declining.

"Weakness is most apparent in the Northeastern and Mid-Atlantic districts," the report said.

"In each of those cases, they panicked over the thought of a recession and eased too soon before they had snuffed out inflation," Jones said.

Jones said he originally believed the country was headed for a recession but that it would be a mild one beginning in the fourth quarter of this year and lasting through the winter.

But after Greenspan's comments, he said the downturn was likely to be more severe and last for a full year because he believes the Fed has decided to postpone any easing moves while it tries to get inflation down.

"If the Fed waits to ease, the recession will be both longer and deeper," Jones said.

Other economists said they also were looking for a downturn to begin in the October-December quarter this year, but they were split on how severe it will be.

"We are looking for a mild recession lasting about two quarters unless the Middle East blows up," said David Wyss, senior financial economist at DRI-McGraw Hill. "But that forecast is very iffy, depending on what happens in the Middle East."

During his testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Greenspan rejected suggestions that the Fed was, in effect, being held hostage by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

While he conceded that the Fed's job of promoting non-inflationary growth had been made more difficult by events in the Persian Gulf, Greenspan insisted that there still were tools the central bank could employ to mitigate the fallout.

But private economists said Greenspan's generally gloomy report on economic prospects reflected the tough choices facing the Fed. Normally, rising unemployment and the current widespread economic weakness would prompt the Fed to lower interest rates to spur economic activity.

But the oil price shock means the country is experiencing the worst bout of inflation in nine years, according to a government report on consumer prices released Tuesday.

"The Fed is in a real bind," said Bruce Steinberg, economist at

Assault incident halts Greyhound in Stanton

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ Staff Writer

STANTON — A 29-year-old California native was arrested by Department of Public Safety troopers and charged with assault and criminal mischief after a Tuesday incident aboard a Greyhound bus in Stanton.

Karl Edward Walker II, no address given, was taken into custody at Martin County Jail Tuesday morning by DPS troopers Wade Turner and James Rand after the suspect tried to flee the stopped bus.

According to Trooper Turner, the suspect kicked a woman passenger in the chest and began fighting with the driver of the bus.

"We had a car stopped in a routine traffic stop west of Stanton, when we noticed a Greyhound bus stop parallel from us," Turner said. "We went over to check if there were any problems when we noticed the suspect trying to leave the bus. We apprehended the suspect and took him to the county jail. He managed to crack the windshield of the bus."

Walker was in the county jail until an emergency admission to Big Spring State Hospital was arranged. He was transferred to BSSH later in the day.

According to the DPS office, Walker had been treated in a mental hospital in Los Angeles some time before arriving in Texas. He had no identification when the arrest occurred.

There were 34 passengers on the bus at the time of the incident. The kicked passenger required no hospitalization. After an hour delay, the bus proceeded on its regular schedule.

Consumer groups wary of FCC phone 'price cap'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission says it's giving long-distance telephone users a nice surprise: lower phone bills.

But consumer and business groups are suspicious.

The commission said Wednesday it was extending its "price cap" regulatory regime to the interstate long-distance earnings of the eight largest local phone companies.

The FCC said the new regulations on local companies could save customers billions over the next four years. Last year, the commission replaced the 20-year-old "rate of return" regulation of the largest long-distance company, American Telephone & Telegraph Co., with price caps.

Previous commission decisions have largely been responsible for the 40 percent drop in long-distance prices since 1984.

But Brian Moir, an attorney representing the 730-member International Communications Association, said the FCC this time didn't provide statistics to back up its savings claims as it voted 4-0 to impose price caps.

"In the past, the commission was quick to announce what the benefit would be for ratepayers, although we've found those not to be correct," Moir said. "They didn't do that today. They did not say ... that this plan would produce 'X' dollars of benefit over the next four years. ... That's disturbing."

Gene Kimmelman, legislative director of the Consumer Federation of America, said the changes were a godsend for local phone companies.

"We're going to see long-distance rates actually rise for the first time in a long time because of the reduced regulation of the local carriers," Kimmelman said. "We'll probably see their profits rise as a result."

The rules, which go into effect Jan. 1, reduce the rates local phone companies charge for interstate services, such as levies for connecting long-distance companies with the local phone network.

Lower charges to the long-distance companies will mean reduced charges for long-distance customers, the FCC said.

The plan, first proposed in 1987, has gone through several major modifications after critics complained that phone companies benefited too much.

Steers want consistent play

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Steers and Lubbock High Westerners will be searching for consistency when they do battle Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

Both squads bring 1-1 records into the game and both coaches admit that are seeking congruity in their team's play.

Steers' coach David Thompson wants his team to have both a good offensive and defensive performance in the same game. Westerner coach Joe Laudermilk just wants his team to be prepared.

The Steers, ranked No. 9 in the state 4A poll, were defeated by No. 2 Lubbock Estacado 17-6 Saturday. In that game the Big Spring offense sputtered, but the defense sparkled, holding Estacado to 180 yards total offense.

In the season-opening 42-13 win over Amarillo Caprock, the Steers' offense exploded for more than 500 yards, while the defense, coaches said, played without intensity.

Lubbock High looked very good in defeating Dumas 48-20 in the season-opener. Dumas is picked to finish second behind Hereford in District 1-4A. Last week the Westerners were dominated 41-7 by LUBBOCK — Big Spring Steers defensive end Fernando Alvarez (84) fights off the block of Lubbock Estacado's Malcom Davis (26) during first half action Saturday night. Alvarez led the Steers defense with 17 tackles.

Lovington, N.M. Lovington is ranked No. 2 in the New Mexico Class AAA polls.

Coach Laudermilk, in his second year at LHS, is in a rebuilding period. Lubbock High has long been the largest school in Lubbock, but usually the weakest when it comes to football.

Laudermilk knows all about winning, since he was reared in Brownwood, where good football is a tradition. Laudermilk did exceptionally well in his first year with the Westerners. The team went 5-4-1, its first winning season since 1963. From that team Laudermilk returns 12 lettermen, including three offensive and four defensive starters.

"It makes a difference when you grow up in a winning tradition. The kids grow up more dedicated," said Laudermilk. That's what we're trying to get established here.

Laudermilk says his team's performance the past weeks has been puzzling. "We beat Dumas one week and got blown out by Lovington. It was feast one week, and famine the next. We really didn't get after it (against

Just call the Bonds the 30-30 family

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Not to be outdone by the Griffey's, the Bonds family have secured their place in baseball history.

Ken Griffey Sr. and Ken Griffey Jr. are the first father and son ever to play on a major league team at the same time. Last Friday, they even hit back-to-back home runs for Seattle.

On Wednesday, Pittsburgh's Barry Bonds hit his 30th and 31st homers and stole his 49th base at Chicago to join father Bobby in the exclusive 30-30 club.

"He told me, if you can hit 300, then you're capable of hitting 30 homers," Bonds said of his father. "But you have to hit 300 first and not try to hit a bunch of homers all the time."

Bonds became the first Pirates player — and the eighth player in National League history — to have 30 homers and 30 stolen bases in a season.

"I just wanted to put him and me in a class by ourselves, something that nobody else would ever be able to accomplish," Barry said. "That's what I really wanted to happen, and it has."

It also marked the first time that two Pittsburgh players have hit 30 homers in one season. Bobby Bonilla also has 31.

"The stolen bases will come easily," Barry said. "That's why I figure I'll get 50 very shortly. Stealing bases has never been a problem for me."

against Chicago. He joins an elite list of players who have hit 30 homers and stolen bases in the same season. He and father Bobby are the only father-son combination to do so.

More trouble for Wingate

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — For the second time in three days, San Antonio Spurs guard David Wingate has been accused of rape.

A 21-year-old woman filed suit in state district court Wednesday against Wingate alleging that he sexually assaulted her in June after drinking with her at a nightclub.

Wingate, 26, was charged Monday in Maryland with the rape of a 17-year-old woman at his apartment.

In the civil suit, the woman, who was a college student at the time, claims Wingate bought her alcoholic drinks at a San Antonio night club June 24 and later offered her a ride.

The suit claims that when the woman became ill, Wingate got out of the car with her down the street from his house and sexually assaulted and sodomized her.

Afterward, the suit alleges, Wingate left the woman in a room at his house and "allowed at least two other friends of his to rape her." The woman required medical care after the attack, the suit states.

The woman reported the incident to police while being treated at a hospital later. She also went to the police department the following day, her attorney said.

No criminal charges have been filed.

Police spokesman Sgt. Paul Buske refused to confirm Wednesday whether Wingate is a suspect in the case, which remains under investigation. "There have been some extenuating circumstances that have prevented us from completing the investigation," he said, declining to elaborate.

Attorney Marynell Maloney, who represents the woman, accused the San Antonio Police Department of choosing to play "slow ball" with the case.

"Unfortunately the Maryland incident may not have happened if they had acted properly," Ms. Maloney said.

She said the woman took a bag of stained, dirty clothes to a police investigator the following day as evidence, but the officer said he didn't need it.

"Basically, she was intoxicated (at the time of the alleged attack) and the attitude of the investigator at the police department was well, it must have been her fault," the lawyer said.

Spurs officials did not return a call late Wednesday from The Associated Press.

After the charge in Maryland was filed, Spurs owner Red McCombs said contract negotiations with Wingate, a restricted free agent, were on hold. McCombs said he wasn't assuming Wingate is guilty and said team and league officials would investigate the matter.

Wingate was jailed three hours Monday in Columbia, Md., on charges of second-degree rape, battery and a fourth-degree sexual offense.

Gamble pays off for Tech

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech cornerback Sammy Walker looks on the bright side of life — through his left eye.

After suffering an accident which left his right eye legally blind, Walker overcame the handicap to help lead the Red Raiders to a 9-3 season and a 49-21 trouncing of Duke in the All American Bowl last year.

Walker finds humor in his football success because he was never supposed to be a part of it.

While working at a summer job after his sophomore year in high school, Walker was trying to remove some boards from a building when a shard of wood splintered into his right eye.

The accident left him legally blind in the eye with 20-200 vision, or what Walker calls, "a view similar to opening your eyes in water with too much chlorine."

Despite doctors' approval to play and the fact he was one of the fastest running backs in the state out of McKinney High School near Dallas, no big-time colleges wanted to take a chance on him — except for Texas Tech.

"Mostly little schools wanted me," Walker said. "Because I was blind in one eye, none of the bigger schools wanted to risk it. And then Tech came along and they are always picking misfits. They had recruited people like tiny (5-3) Tyrone Thurman and James Gray, who nobody thought would make it with his awkward running style. When they recruited me they probably figured, 'Hey why not a blind guy. We got everything else.'"

Thurman, a kick returner, was an All-American and Gray, a running back, became a second team All-American at Tech. Coach Spike Dykes believes Walker, a 5-11, 190-pound junior, will have similar success.

"He is one of the best defensive backs in the country," Dykes said. "And he is a giving player. Whatever is best for the team is best for Sammy."

Dykes said he was turned on to Walker while recruiting two of Walker's teammates at McKinney.

reason they make up for it in other areas. Sammy just gives you everything he's got."

Walker, whose twin sister Tammy is a starter on Tech's women's basketball team, is one of the fastest college players in the country. He finished with the ninth best time in the 100-meter sprint (10.31) in last year's NCAA Track and Field Championships.

His lightning speed helped him intercept four passes in 1989, including one pickoff against Rice that still amazes Tech defensive coordinator Carlos Mainord.

"Sammy was behind the receiver a few yards," Mainord said. "When the ball was thrown to the kid, Sammy somehow raced up to him, grabbed the ball off of the guy's shoulder pad and returned it for a touchdown."

Walker, who was used to scoring on offense in high school, said the touchdown satisfied his withdrawal for the end zone since being converted to defensive back.

"I had a touchdown dance all ready and everything," Walker said. "But in all the excitement, I forgot to do it."

Walker, who describes himself as a hard, smash-mouthed football player, led the team in pass breakups last year.

Dodgers fail to gain ground on Reds

By The Associated Press
If the Los Angeles Dodgers fail to catch Cincinnati, they'll have a pretty good idea of why.
For the third time in less than a month, the Dodgers blew a game at home they figured to win. This time, it cost them a chance to move within 3½ games of the first-place Reds in the National League West. Cincinnati lost 5-2 at Houston.
With Fernando Valenzuela pitching, the Dodgers grabbed a 4-0 lead after three innings against San Diego, only to lose 9-4 when the Padres rallied for three runs in the fifth and six in the sixth.

NL

"It was a tough loss," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said. "Cincinnati loses and we know it, we score four runs in the first three innings and end up losing the game. . . . That's what hurts the most. We jumped up 4-0 and didn't win the ballgame."

The Dodgers have had some even bigger disappointments of late.

On Aug. 21, Los Angeles took an 11-3 lead into the ninth inning against Philadelphia and lost 12-11. Two weeks later, the Houston Astros rallied from a 7-0 deficit against Ramon Martinez to beat the Dodgers 10-8.

"We're not completely out of opportunities," Lasorda said. "We just missed on this one tonight."

The Reds were 31-12 at the end of May, but only 52-53 since. They have lost four of six.

"Look around this room. Do you see anybody panicking?" Reds outfielder Eric Davis said. "All that we've done is lose two in a row. It's no big deal. We'll just have to go get them tomorrow."

The closest the Dodgers have been to first place since May 4 is four games, and they trailed by 13½ on July 21.

"The media makes a big deal out of us losing. They did it when we HOUSTON — Cincinnati Reds Hal Morris (23) appears to have stolen second base in first inning action Wednesday as Houston Astros Rafael Ramirez makes a sweeping tag attempt. Morris, however had our first losing streak and they'll do it again," said Reds pitcher Danny Jackson, who lost to Houston. "Everywhere we go we hear the same thing, but we've been in first place since the get-go and we aren't about to roll over and die."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Pittsburgh 8, Chicago 7; Atlanta 5, San Francisco 1; and Philadelphia 8, St. Louis 4.

was called out on the play, and the Astros went on to defeat the Reds 5-2.

Reds. Padres 9, Dodgers 4

The Padres rallied behind Benito Santiago's sixth-inning grand slam to beat the Dodgers.

San Diego, trailing 4-0 after three innings, chased Fernando Valenzuela with three runs in the fifth. The Padres took the lead off rookie reliever Darren Holmes (0-1) in the sixth and went on for their fifth straight victory.

Pirates 8, Cubs 7

Doug Drabek became the NL's first 20-game winner and Barry Bonds hit his 30th and 31st home runs to join his father, Bobby Bonds, in the 30-30 club as Pittsburgh beat Chicago at Wrigley Field.

Astros 5, Reds 2
Mark Portugal gave up two runs in 7 2-3 innings and Ken Caminiti hit Houston's first homer at the Astrodome since Aug. 8 to beat the Reds.

Portugal (10-10) didn't give up a run until Eric Davis scored on Jeff Reed's single with two outs in the seventh. Herm Winningham hit his third homer in the eighth for the

Blue Jays maintain lead on Red Sox

By The Associated Press
Teams that are a half-dozen games out of first place in September have a way of setting little goals for themselves.

"Let's only be a couple of games out when we start that series late in the month," they say.

"I don't think anyone expected us to be one game up at this stage of the season," manager Cito Gaston said Wednesday night after the Blue Jays took over sole possession of first place for the first time since July 30.

A 7-6 victory over the New York Yankees, combined with Boston's 8-4 loss to Baltimore, gave Toronto a one-game lead.

Junior Felix's three-run homer, his 13th home run of the season, put Toronto ahead 6-0 in the fourth, and the Blue Jays made it 7-1 in the fifth. Hensley Meulens hit an RBI double and Jim Leyritz followed with a three-run homer in the Yankees' sixth to make it 7-5 before Roberto Kelly singled home a run in the seventh.

Winning pitcher Jimmy Key (11-7) allowed four runs on six hits in 5 2-3 innings. Tim Leary (9-19) was the loser, allowing six runs, five earned, on six hits in four innings. The last pitcher to lose 20 games in one season was Brian Kingman with Oakland in 1980.

Orioles 8, Red Sox 4
Boston lost for the sixth time in seven games and dropped out of the tie for first place after Sam Horn broke a 2-2 tie with a three-run homer for Baltimore.

Steve Finley singled and Cal Ripken walked in the Orioles' fifth before Horn lined a pitch from Greg Harris (13-8) into the front row of the right field bleachers.

Athletics 7, White Sox 3
Oakland snapped a six-game losing streak at home against Chicago as Dave Stewart won his 21st game and Mark McGwire hit his 38th homer.

The victory reduced the Athletics' magic number to clinch the AL West to five. The A's lead Chicago by nine games with 13 to play.

Rangers 6, Mariners 5
Texas won for the 11th time in 14 games as Jeff Kunkel scored the go-ahead run on Billy Swift's wild pitch in the eighth inning at Seattle. Swift relieved Matt Young (8-16) with the bases loaded and two outs in the eighth, and his second pitch to Juan Gonzalez went to the backstop, allowing Kunkel to score.

The Mariners scored four runs in the first inning with the help of Ken Griffey Jr.'s two-run homer off Nolan Ryan, but the Rangers tied it with four runs in the fourth.

John Barfield (4-2) pitched the seventh inning for the victory. Keny Rogers got the last five outs for his 15th save.

Tigers 12, Angels 5
Travis Fryman knocked in four runs, Mark Salas hit a three-run homer and Detroit took advantage of four California errors to win its fourth straight game.

Lou Whitaker's 18th homer and Salas' homer gave Detroit a 4-3 lead in the fourth off Joe Grahe.

AL

Most of the time, the goals are a pipe dream, the fading gasp of a beaten team.

In the American League East, however, the Toronto Blue Jays are exceeding even their own hopes.

Bonds

36-40 for the New York Giants in 1956.

Bobby Bonds says 30-30 is going to happen again, probably several times. In fact, Atlanta's Ron Gant is close with 29 homers and 28 steals.

Entering 1987, there were only six players in major league history who had hit 30 home runs and stolen 30 bases in the same season.

But in 1988, membership in the "30-30" club increased as Davis, Joe Carter, Howard Johnson and Darryl Strawberry all joined. Johnson did it again last season with 36 homers and 41 steals for the New York Mets.

"It's an individual achievement and I'm more interested in what we do as a team right now with the playoffs coming up,"

said Strawberry, who has 35 homers and 15 steals this season. "I think I have the ability to do 40-40, but it's just a numbers thing."

Steers

Lovington). We got down early and couldn't come back. We had six turnovers and most of the happened early.

"I think the Big Spring Steers have an excellent ballclub. I think Coach Thompson and his staff have done a super job. We'd better be prepared to play the whole game of football."

Thompson hopes maybe this is the week his team puts it together.

"We were pleased with the way the defense played against Estacado; the offense didn't play very well," said Thompson. "We did the same thing last year, one week the offense would play well, and one week the defense would play well. We need to put it together all at once."

Leading the Steers' defensive effort against Estacado was defensive end Fernando Alvarez, who made eight solos and nine assists, for 17 tackles. Two of the tackles were behind the line, causing one fumble and sacking the quarterback once.

Middle linebacker Felipe Saiz made 15 tackles and outside linebacker Kevin Rodgers made 13 tackles. Tackle Freddy Williams, end Frank Garza and cornerback Abel Hilario each made nine tackles.

Thompson knows his defense will have to be on its toes because the Westerners have the potential to score lots of points. "They whipped Dumas and played terrible against Lovington," said Thompson. "I figure they're due to play good this week."

"They are supposedly a passing team, but Chris Petties (tailback) is a tremendous back. Their quarterback (Val Gonzales) is an outstanding thrower and they've got a split end (Jason Williams) and a wingback that doesn't even start (Lester Dewberry), that are fast and have good hands."

"They run a variety of sets. They run the swinging gate play, where two guys line up at the ball; all kinds of spread stuff; Wing-T; you never know what they're going to do."

Laudermilk explained his offensive theory in brief: "We do use a lot of formations. Each year is different and you have different players. You have to use what you've got."

Offensively, coach Thompson said his team will stick to the basics. "We're going to play basic football, block and run. Until they (Lubbock High) prove that we can't, that's what we'll do," said Thompson.

Thompson did praise the play of left offensive tackle David Risner in the Estacado game. He added that wingback Neal Mayfield, who suffered a sprained ankle in the Estacado game, is about 80 percent. Thompson said that Pat Chavarria will start at the position.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Gov. George Sinner is taking some heat from legislators for a radar detector in his truck.

But he shrugged off the complaints by state Sens. Bryce Streibel and L.L. Naaden, saying: "They have all these big issues to deal with. They worry about those things, not budgets."

The two Republicans, frequent critics of the Democratic governor, noticed the detector on the dashboard of Sinner's truck when they visited the Capitol last week.

"That's a heck of an example to set," Streibel said Monday. "You've got a fuzzer in your car for one reason and that's to

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys is suing a law firm for $100 million, contending it helped A&M Records defraud him of the publishing rights to hits, including "Good Vibrations."

The lawsuit, filed Monday in Superior Court, accuses Irell & Manella of Century City of fraud and negligence, said Wilson's lawyer, James T. Tierney.

The action will be consolidated with a similar suit filed last year against A&M and another law firm. That case seeks $100 million in damages and the return of the song rights.

The push for an air embargo against Iraq has gathered momentum with an agreement by the five key U.N. Security Council members to limit cargo flights into Baghdad to those carrying medicine and humanitarian food aid.

More than 400 Westerners, including 110 American women and children, flew from Iraq to London on Wednesday, and the Americans were to fly on to North Carolina today. Iraq may not be prepared to let many more Americans leave.

Iraq said today that President Saddam Hussein has recorded a message to the American people and he wants U.S. networks to broadcast it.

The official Iraqi News Agency did not disclose what Saddam's message said, but it is likely a rebuttal to President Bush's speech Iraq televised Sunday.

In another development, organizers of the Asian Games in Beijing today banned Iraq from the competition, which begins Saturday. Kuwait and other Gulf nations threatened to boycott the games if the Iraqis participated.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the Security Council's five permanent members — the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China — had agreed to extend the trade embargo against Iraq to air traffic.

"We know there is a need to have an air embargo and a need to have it enforceable," she told a news conference while visiting Budapest, Hungary.

The resolution is expected to be put to a vote in the 15-member council on Friday or Saturday, diplomats said.

Under its terms, participating countries could order aircraft headed for Iraq to land or be refused overflight permission. However, intercepted aircraft could not be shot down.

The U.N. embargo on trade with Iraq was approved just days after Saddam's forces overran Kuwait on Aug. 2. It has been largely successful, having cut off nearly all export of oil, Iraq's main source of income, and caused food shortages in Iraq that have led to rationing.

The call for extending the embargo to the air — a largely symbolic gesture — was led by France, which was angered by Iraqi raids last week on the French and other diplomatic compounds in Kuwait.

Iraqi troops are trying to force all foreign embassies in Kuwait to close, but French, British, U.S. and other diplomats have held out.

Saddam has massed an estimated 360,000 of his troops in and around oil-rich Kuwait, which it annexed after the invasion.

To counter the Iraqi threat, more than 100,000 U.S. soldiers have been rushed to neighboring oil giant Saudi Arabia and half as many are aboard warships sent to the region. Thousands of troops and dozens of warships from other nations also have converged.

So far, about 1,500 Americans have been allowed to leave Iraq and Kuwait on seven chartered flights, but 1,000 more remain behind.

Iraqi soldiers have seized at least 90 American men — as well as other Westerners — and are holding them at strategic locations as human shields in the event of

Troopers transfer suspect

A 29-year-old California native was arrested by Department of Public Safety troopers and charged with assault and criminal mischief after a Tuesday incident aboard a Greyhound bus here.

Karl Edward Walker II, no address given, was taken into custody at Martin County Jail Tuesday morning by DPS troopers Wade Turner and James Rand after the suspect tried to flee the stopped bus.

According to Trooper Turner, the suspect kicked a women passenger in the chest and began fighting with the driver of the bus.

"We had a car stopped in a routine traffic stop west of Stanton, when we noticed a Greyhound bus stop parallel from us," Turner said. "We went over to check if there were any problems when we noticed the suspect trying to leave the bus. We apprehended the suspect and took him to the county jail. He managed to crack the windshield of the bus."

Walker was in the county jail until an emergency admission to Big Spring State Hospital was arranged. He was transferred to BSSH later in the day.

According to the DPS office, Walker had been treated in a mental hospital in Los Angeles some time before arriving in Texas. He had no identification when the arrest occurred.

There were 34 passengers on the bus at the time of the incident. The kicked passenger required no hospitalization. After an hour delay, the bus proceeded on its regular schedule.

PONTOTOC, Texas (AP) — In the area around the hamlet of Pontotoc, about 100 miles northwest of Austin, parents had to drive their children today the 20 miles to school in Mason, the county seat.

Because of a massive manhunt for a gunman who killed a resident in Pontotoc's general store on Wednesday, school buses didn't run Wednesday afternoon. And they weren't running again today.

Authorities sought Michael Joseph Griffith, 35, of Mason in the shooting of Ivan H. Herron, 58, of Pontotoc.

Officials said Herron was shot several times during a mid-morning struggle in the "Pontotoc Stop" country store.

Mary Ann Wells, 54, the manager of the store, said Herron got suspicious about her whereabouts and resisted when the gunman tried to force him into a rear room where she had been bound and placed under some boxes.

Authorities said Herron died of multiple gunshot wounds, which were believed to have come from a pistol, but shotgun pellets also were found.

The gunman fled in Mrs. Wells' pickup after her husband and several customers walked into the store, she told officers.

Pontotoc is on Texas Highway 71, about 20 miles northwest of Llano. Its population is about 200.

Greenspan: Rising oil costs risk to economy

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The recession of 1990, if it comes, could be longer and deeper than expected because of a tough anti-inflation stance being taken by the Federal Reserve, some economists contend.

These analysts believe that was the message Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan delivered to Congress on Wednesday when he talked about "new and substantial risks" to the U.S. economy from the rise in oil prices after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Greenspan gave no indication that the central bank was on the verge of pushing interest rates lower. He said the economy was facing threats both from rising inflationary pressures and a possible recession.

The comments disappointed the Bush administration and financial markets, which had been hoping the Fed chief would emphasize recession risks and signal a willingness to ease credit conditions to avert or at least lessen the severity of what would be the country's first economic slump in eight years.

Many analysts said Greenspan's comments sounded remarkably like the views being expressed by central bank officials in such countries as Japan and West Germany. Officials there have said they viewed the inflationary threats from the oil price shock as the greater threat.

"Central bank officials seem determined not to repeat the same mistakes they made in the oil price shocks of 1973 and 1979," said David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York securities dealer.

"In each of those cases, they panicked over the thought of a recession and eased too soon before they had snuffed out inflation," Jones said.

Jones said he originally believed the country was headed for a recession but that it would be a mild one beginning in the fourth quarter of this year and lasting through the winter.

But after Greenspan's comments, he said the downturn was likely to be more severe and last for a full year because he believes the Fed has decided to postpone any easing moves while it tries to get inflation down.

"If the Fed waits to ease, the recession will be both longer and deeper," Jones said.

Other economists said they also were looking for a downturn to begin in the October-December quarter this year, but they were split on how severe it will be.

"We are looking for a mild recession lasting about two quarters unless the Middle East blows up," said David Wyss, senior financial economist at DRI-McGraw Hill.

"But that forecast is very iffy, depending on what happens in the Middle East."

During his testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Greenspan rejected suggestions that the Fed was, in effect, being held hostage by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

While he conceded that the Fed's job of promoting "non-inflationary growth had been 1 mile more difficult by events in the Persian Gulf, Greenspan insisted it at there still were tools the central bank could employ to mitigate the fallout.

But private economists said Greenspan's generally gloomy

In Morocco today, talks on ending the crisis were expected to continue between King Hassan II, Jordan's King Hussein and Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid, who held their first meeting on Wednesday.

Officials in Rabat forwarded a peace plan that urges:
Total Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait, a summit of all Arab leaders including the Iraqi president, withdrawal of non-Arab troops from Saudi Arabia, a "privileged relationship" between Iraq and Kuwait, and a Middle East peace conference that includes Lebanon and the Israeli occupation of the West Bank.

Kuwaitis fleeing their homeland say most Iraqi troops they saw appear to be poor, confused teenagers, but that crack Republican Guards are tightening their control.

Refugees crossing into Saudi Arabia said Iraqi troops were becoming increasingly violent in their campaign to force Kuwaitis to accept Iraqi occupation.

More than 6,000 Kuwaitis have fled into Saudi Arabia since Iraq opened the border to them Saturday. But the numbers began falling Monday when Iraqi troops began grabbing men under 40 at random from cars trying to cross.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney asked Congress to let the Pentagon accept and spend the billions in promised allied contributions for military operations in the gulf without prior approval from Capitol Hill.

But Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., called the administration request an attempt to set up "in effect, a military spending slush fund."

Losses to countries participating in the embargo against Iraq were running into the billions, and aid from industrialized countries was only partially offsetting the effect, officials said.

Jordan will lose more than $2 billion this year and will face economic ruin without massive foreign aid, the country's finance minister said Wednesday.

Unless Jordan receives substantial support from the international community, the economy of Jordan will start to face very serious difficulties in October or November," said Finance Minister Bassel Jardaneh.

In Cairo, Kamal al-Ganzouri, Egypt's planning minister, was quoted as saying Wednesday his country's losses will amount to $2.73 billion.

Still, the economic news wasn't all bad: oil prices dropped about $1 a barrel after futures traders discovered the United States has a bigger supply of gasoline than they thought.

Lebanon's civil war-wrecked economy got some help from Saudi Arabia. The Lebanese government said today it has received $100 million from the Saudis to help offset the loss of funding promised by Kuwait and oil-rich Arab governments now faced with the gulf crisis.

Bill provision could help soybean producers

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A marketing loan provision in the 1990 farm bills in Congress could help U.S. soybean producers recover a larger share of the overseas market, an Agriculture Department analysis says.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter says the marketing loan idea, along with higher price support loan rates for soybeans, would be too expensive.

Yeutter said last week in Chicago that a marketing loan program for soybeans would have "a major budget exposure" and that lawmakers should look it over carefully.

The House and Senate have passed versions of a 1990 farm bill, each containing marketing loan provisions for soybeans. A conference is under way to iron out differences in the two massive bills.

Meanwhile, a report by the department's Economic Research Service sheds some optimism on the U.S. soybean situation and suggests "a more favorable environment" is developing for exports.

"Debate on the 1990 farm bill points to likely changes in policies affecting soybeans, while the growth of South American soybean production has slowed," the report said.

Further, farm price supports in the 12-nation European Economic Community are under budgetary pressures. Soybean meal exports by China, a major U.S. competitor, have slipped because of rising domestic use.

Economist Robert Cummings, whose report appeared in the September issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine, said the stagnant U.S. supply had been a major reason for the export problems of recent years.

Drought reduced soybean production in 1980, 1983 and 1988, he said. And farm policy, with higher price support loan rates in the early 1980s for grains and cotton — and no boost for soybeans — made those crops more attractive to farmers in some areas.

The 1985 farm law also put soybeans at a disadvantage relative to grains and cotton in some states, and the bean acreage continued to slide.

"Foreign producers, meanwhile, boosted production and grabbed a larger slice of the world soybean market."

Many soybean farmers have favored a marketing loan program as a means of stabilizing production and regaining some of the lost export ground. Yeutter said he would like to see soybean producers have target prices and deficiency payments like those for wheat, feed grains and cotton.

But "budget considerations made that impractical, so oilseed producers turned to the marketing loan framework" instead, he said.

Cummings said in a telephone interview Wednesday that it's understandable that farmers would like marketing loans.

For example, he said, if a commodity has a government loan rate of $2 per bushel, and the world market price as published by USDA is $1.50 per bushel, farmers can pay off the loans at $1.50 per bushel. Then, they can sell their crop at the world price of $1.50 per bushel.

That means a net of $2 per bushel, including the 50 cents made on repaying the loan at a lower rate, plus the value of the crop sold at the world price.

Cummings, in his report, said a soybean marketing loan program "would tend to maintain supplies at competitive market prices for export and domestic use whenever the world price dropped below the loan rate."

Generally, he said, marketing loans "discourage accumulation of government stocks" by moving products into commercial channels at prevailing market prices.

WASHINGTON — A monthly report by the Agriculture Department shows that the number of cattle being fed for the slaughter market as of Sept. 1 in the seven major beef states totaled 6.99 million head, up 5 percent from a year ago and 1 percent more than two years ago.

Feedlot inventories were up from a year earlier in Colorado, Iowa, Kansas and Texas.

WASHINGTON — Exports of tree nuts and other horticultural products are running well ahead of a year ago, according to an Agriculture Department report.

In June, the most recent month tabulated, the export value of these products were estimated at $285 million, up 25 percent from the same month a year earlier, the report said Wednesday.

The total, which didn't include shipments to Canada, included a sharp increase for tree nuts, particularly almonds. The European Economic Community was the major destination, the report said.

The SHS National Honor Society will hold installation of new members Friday morning at 7:30 in the high school library.

Stanton Buffalos will travel to Greenwood to take on the Rangers in pre-district action at J.M. King Stadium Friday night.

Last year, the Buffs beat the visiting Rangers 20-15, while Greenwood has won the two previous meetings. Greenwood coach Bob Purser will have his team geared up for this clash. The Rangers sport a 2-0 record, with wins over Ft. Stockton and Coahoma to their credit, while the Buffs will take a 0-2 record into Friday's game.

Both of Stanton's losses have been marred by turnovers, but the offensive unit is capable of scoring from anywhere on the field. The running combo of John Paul Barry and Garry Don Thompson have accumulated more than 300 yards of total offense, while the Buffs' defense have kept their two previous contests close till the last minutes of play.

At quarterback, the Buffs will play both Jeremy Stallings and John Eric Wyckoff. Both athletes can come in and add another dimension to their ballclub, SHS coach Dale Ruth said.

"I think it very positive to have two quarterbacks that can come in and lead our ballclub like Jeremy and John Eric can. They are both tremendous quarterbacks with talent to match," Ruth said.

Greenwood is led by senior QB Cody Mebane, who can pass the ball, but is best suited at running the option with running backs Eric Clutter and Jerry Gay.

Students in the rural area attend school in Mason.

Mason's schools were shut down on Wednesday and bus service stopped when word of a possible hostage situation circulated. School officials refused to let school buses run to the Pontotoc area or to the nearby communities of Fredonia, Camp Air or Katemcy.

"We won't run the buses again until we know he is in custody or out of the area," Mason school superintendent Ted Kerr said.

Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said the gunman was wearing camouflage attire at the Pontotoc general store. He was described as 5-foot-6, 170 lbs., with brown hair and grey eyes.

Griffith, who reportedly made his living as a house painter, is a Mason native with a son and several nephews and nieces attending the Mason schools, and Heron "was uncle of some of our children and grandfather to some," Kerr said.

Law officers came from Gillespie County to fill in for the officers out looking for Griffith, and patrolled the school area frequently during the day, he said.

In addition, he said, parents in the rural areas were notified that buses would not run Wednesday afternoon, "and that they could come and get their kids any time."

The gunman was rumored to be taking refuge around Union Band in the Fredonia-Pontotoc area late Wednesday, and Kerr said many rural residents not only picked up their children but also chose to spend Wednesday night in Mason.

Wells said about seven DPS SWAT team members, at least one helicopter and three airplanes were called to help in the search for the suspect. The aircraft came from Dallas, Midland and the U.S. Customs Service in San Angelo, he said.

Cox said "numerous" Texas Rangers and five patrol troopers blocked all major highways in Mason, San Saba and Llano Counties. The suspect was believed to be in a 1982 brown and tan Ford SuperCab.

He said the truck was last seen in the Valley-Spring community just east of Pontotoc on Highway 71, Cox said.

The gunman was accompanied by a woman that authorities said was an apparent kidnap victim. A man told Mason officers that he saw the man force his way into the woman's motel room Tuesday in Mason. Mrs. Wells said the woman had several bruise marks.

Mrs. Wells said she picked up the man and woman about 9 a.m. as they hitchhiked on the highway about one mile east of Pontotoc.

"I stopped and gave them a ride because the woman appeared to be injured," she said. "The man said they had had an accident and needed to call a wrecker," Wells said.

About 30 minutes later, the store operator said, Griffith pointed a pistol at her while they were alone in her store.

"He took her to a back room where they store feed, gagged her and tied her and put her face down on the floor," Cox said. The woman said she was told she would not be hurt if she remained quiet. The hitchhikers periodically returned to check on her, she told officers.

Mrs. Wells said the woman with the gunman never said a word or gave her any indication that she was with the man against her will.

Descendants honor San Jacinto veteran

By JOHN WEIMER

PLANO (AP) — For some reason, East Parker Road takes an abrupt turn before passing St. Paul Catholic Cemetery. The downhill slope leading to the graveyard makes the graveyard visible from the main road, but to someone in a passing car it usually goes unnoticed.

On Saturday, Sept. 22, the descendants of Charles C. Stibbens, the only soldier of the Battle of San Jacinto to be buried in Collin County, and some of their close friends will take the time to detour off the main road to visit the cemetery.

They, unlike the passing motorists, will consider the fact that history could have taken a different course just as easily as East Parker Road could have.

The descendants of Stibbens will gather around his tombstone to witness the unveiling of two bronze commemorative medals.

The Battle of San Jacinto was the turning point in the war against Mexico. Within 18 minutes, the battle transformed discouraged and retreating Texans into the proud founders of a new republic.

Without the presence of 300 American volunteers who assisted the Texan forces, the Mexican army might have had a decisive psychological advantage.

But the officers in the Texas army thought ahead. They collaborated with Texas politicians to advertise free land for U.S. citizens willing to fight in the Texas revolution.

Twenty-five-year-old Charles C. Stibbens of Baltimore, Md., answered the advertisement. He set out on horse for Texas to help fight for the territory's independence and to settle in what would hopefully become a new country.

Along the way, Stibbens persuaded other men to accompany him and provided them with rifles. They too did not mind defending the Anglo settlers from Mexican troops in exchange for a parcel of frontier property.

Stibbens and his company of volunteers were the first such group to reinforce a Texas army consisting of only a few hundred men. "I spent much money in raising the first volunteer company that ever came to the support of the Lone Star Republic," Stibbens said in a letter dated Dec. 2, 1872.

The volunteers arrived in Gonzalez, located 70 miles east of San Antonio, in time to fight in a series of small skirmishes between Texan and Mexican troops.

The fighting tapered off during the winter months but resumed once again in the spring.

During the interim, American volunteers continued to stream into Texas army camps, but it was not until the decisive military victory at San Jacinto in April that the bulk of American volunteers arrived. By July 1836, 2,000 of the 2,500 men in the Texas army were U.S. citizens.

Only a fraction of the men hoping to take advantage of the land grants actually participated in the battle that made Texas' independence inevitable. Without the help of these 300 men, the course of Texas history could have taken a different turn.

Economy

report on economic prospects reflected the tough choices facing the Fed. Normally, rising unemployment and the current widespread economic weakness would prompt the Fed to lower interest rates to spur economic activity.

But the oil price shock means the country is experiencing the worst bout of inflation in nine years, according to a government report on consumer prices released Tuesday.

"The Fed is in a real bind," said Bruce Steinberg, economist at Merrill Lynch in New York. "It would like to ease because the economy is rapidly weakening but at the same time inflation is rapidly accelerating."

Greenspan's comments represented a setback for the Bush administration. The administration has been lobbying for months for the Fed to lower interest rates in an effort to avert the first economic downturn since the 1981-82 recession.

Yard of the week
The yard of David B. and Winnie Thompson was selected as yard of the week by the Martin County Chamber of Commerce. The Thompson's well-manicured lawn provides a nice escape from the West Texas heat with the large tree in the yard. The residence is decorated by shrubs to add to the green scenery.
