Judge: School finance system flawed

STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

The Texas school finance system remains unconstitutional despite this year's overhaul by the Legislature, a judge ruled today. Rep. Troy Fraser (R-Big Spring) called the move "a clear victory for West Texas."

State District Judge Scott McCown said the $14 billion-a-year system is still flawed. But he deferred making any immediate changes, giving the Legislature until Sept. 1, 1991 to act.

Fraser said he had expected that the current plan would not "hold up" under the scrutiny of a judge. "All we did in Senate Bill 1 was add more money (to the system). The judge said we have basically two choices now: take money away from the large urban districts or add to the taxes." Tax increases are not likely, he said.

"I predict we'll go back and pull money from those urban districts," Fraser said. "It's the large districts like Dallas and Houston." He said Big Spring, Coahoma and Stanton, all considered "poor" districts, could gain twice as much funding when a new plan is passed next year.

The judge said the finance system doesn't give all schools "substantially equal" access to state aid money.

"In short, what the rich districts spend creates educational opportunities for their children that are denied the children of poor districts. Under Senate Bill 1 (the reform plan), the rich districts are left rich, the poor districts poor," McCown said.

"The legislature did not have the courage to do what was right on this," Fraser said, adding that he had voted against the plan three times. He said he voted for the bill only when urged to do so by superintendents in his district.

When he goes back to Austin in January, Fraser said, he will refile a plan he had submitted during the past legislative session. It not only increases funding to poor districts, it protects budget-balanced districts like Forsan, Borden County and Garden City from losses, he said.

Fraser added that he plans to request a spot on the Education Committee for the next session.

Kevin O'Hanlon, a lawyer for the Texas Education Agency, said the state would appeal the ruling.

O'Hanlon said the 52-page decision didn't give state officials

Books to be sent to troops in Gulf

A local branch of the National Guard will hold a drive to collect books to be sent to troops in the Middle East.

The drive will take place at Wal-Mart Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Books need to be in good condition. Paperbacks, hardbacks, magazines, crossword puzzles and playing cards are all acceptable for the drive.

Donors will get a yellow ribbon showing support for the people involved in Operation Desert Shield.

The drive is sponsored by Battery A, Third/132nd Field Artillery, Texas Army National Guard, Big Spring.

Veterans urged to schedule now

All veterans entitled to use the VA Follow-up Clinic should make appointments now for the Sept. 27 clinic at Dyess Air Force Base.

Services to be available include a physical examination, lab work, X-ray, pharmacy service and screenings. The clinic will operate from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on an appointment-only basis.

Call Dan Garcia, Taylor County Service Officer, 915/677-1711, ext. 328 or 329; or the scheduling clerk in the medical administration office at the Big Spring Department of Veteran's Administration Medical Center.

Local firm wins road building bid

Price Construction of Big Spring has been awarded a $1.5 million contract with the Federal Highway Administration, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's office reported today.

The contract involves the repair of 2.9 miles of road in the Big Bend National Park. An employee of the company said they had not been officially notified of the award this morning.

Lane McMillan, office manager for Price Construction, said they had been in contact with the Denver headquarters of the highway administration for some time after bidding on the project.

"We knew we were low (bidder)," McMillan said. "We were really hoping to get it. I guess we'll be hearing from them today."

YMCA schedules open house

The local YMCA will hold their annual open house from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sept. 29.

This year there will be aerobic, gymnastic and martial arts demonstrations.

Refreshments will be served, and games will be provided for the kids. For more information, contact Linda Perez at 276-8234.

County fugitive arrested in Detroit

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Anthony "Tony" Ginetti, 42, accused of defrauding the Coahoma State Bank of $260,000, was arrested in Detroit, Mich., Sept. 21 and charged with embezzlement, two counts of fraud and escape.

He is currently being held without bail, reported a spokesperson with the Wayne County Sheriff's Department in Detroit.

District court records in Howard County list seven Nov. 12, 1985, felony theft indictments involving amounts over $20,000 each on Ginetti in connection with incidents in 1982-84. The indictment amounts total a quarter of a million dollars, according to a Sept. 9, 1985, Big Spring Herald story.

But Howard County complaints list $410,000 swindled from the bank and individuals in a car title fraud scheme. Ginetti, who owned and operated Car City Auto Sales at 1506 Marcy, left Big Spring in April 1984, about two weeks before county warrants were issued for his arrest.

The Howard County Sheriff's Department was contacted about Ginetti's arrest late last week, said Sheriff Deputy George Quintero. "They wanted to know if he was wanted by this department," he said.

Texas Ranger Charles Brune, Sinton, who handled the Ginetti investigation, said he is not sure when Ginetti will be extradited to Texas. He said he will travel to Detroit next week when a federal hearing will be conducted. Quintero said an FBI official from Abilene will also travel to Detroit next week.

District Attorney Rick Hamby said he could not predict when or if

Commissioners join opposition to facility

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Howard County Commissioners unanimously passed a resolution Monday to oppose a Mitchell County proposed hazardous waste facility which would be located about a mile east of the county line.

They are the fourth government entity since August to oppose the waste incinerator and landfill proposal by National Waste and Energy Development Inc., Pittsburgh. Others are the Westbrook Independent School District, where the facility would be located, the Scurry County Commissioners Court and the Ira ISD in Scurry County. Mitchell County Commissioners support the proposal, saying it could boost the economy.

"I live right straight north of that and I don't want it blowing in my bedroom window every night," said Howard County Precinct 4 Commissioner David Barr, who placed the item on the agenda. He said he has received numerous calls from citizens in his precinct and from Mitchell County, asking him to oppose it.

"I don't live close to it, but I think people who make hazardous waste should keep it to themselves if it's so safe," said Pct. 1 Commissioner O.L. "Louis" Brown, who made the motion to oppose the proposal.

"If it was just household waste, I wouldn't have any objection to it," said Pct. 2 Commissioner Paul Allen.

"They said it wasn't going to be hazardous waste, but it is," Barr said.

"I agree with David. I'm opposed to bringing in hazardous waste, if it is, and some people think it will be," said County Judge John Coffee.

"If the people in that part of the county feel like it's a detriment to Howard County, then I'm opposed too."

Soviets stand firm against Iraq

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze today said that war could break out in the Persian Gulf at any moment, and called Iraq's invasion of Kuwait an "act of terrorism."

In a speech prepared for delivery to the General Assembly, Shevardnadze referred to Aug. 2, the date of the invasion, as "Black Thursday."

"Iraq flagrantly violated the United Nations Charter, the principles of international law, the universally recognized norms of morality and the standards of civilized behavior," the minister said in his prepared text.

Shevardnadze spoke on the second day of the General Assembly session. On Monday, leaders from France, Iran, Brazil, Argentina, Poland and Indonesia condemned Iraq for invading Kuwait and demanded an immediate pullout.

The Soviet foreign minister hinted at the possibility of a United Nations military operation in the gulf region, noting that "the United Nations has the power to suppress acts of aggression."

"There is ample evidence that this right can be exercised," he said. But such a step should come only after all peaceful, non-military forms of pressure have been applied, he said.

Up until the invasion, the Soviet Union was Iraq's strongest ally. But the Soviets have firmly sided with the U.S.-led effort to isolate and pressure the Baghdad government. The Soviets have said they might be willing to participate in a U.N. military effort in the gulf provided that the Soviets share command.

The Soviet foreign minister termed Iraq's actions a "major affront to mankind" and added: "Unless we find a way to respond to it and cope with the situation, our civilization will be thrown back by half a century."

"War may break out on the gulf region any day, any moment," he said. "An act of terrorism has been perpetrated against the emerging new world order."

Later today, Shevardnadze was to preside over a special meeting of the Security Council attended by up to 12 foreign ministers. The session is expected to end with passage of a resolution extending to air corridors the U.N.-ordered embargo on trade with Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III is expected to fill the U.S. seat in the 15-member council.

Public Works crews work to repair a rupture in a six inch water line at the intersection of fifth and Owens. A portion of the roadway collapsed, allowing the water to flood the street. Public Works Director Tom Decell said the water was flowing at a rate of 700-800 gallons per minute and added that the break was probably caused by electrolysis. Water service to a three-block area was disrupted during the repairs. Decell said he didn't expect any problems with the repair, adding that the extent of the repairs would be determined by the condition of the pipeline.

Democrats press for spending cut delays

By ALAN FRAM Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Democratic leaders were pressing an effort today to delay $85 billion in imminent spending cuts while the White House said it would rather "negotiate into the night" than accept a delay.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration had not budged in its opposition to a stopgap plan to put off the spending cuts until Oct. 20 to give budget negotiators more breathing room.

The plan is being pushed by House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., and other Democratic leaders. The White House has threatened a veto if Congress accepts the plan.

The House Appropriations Committee planned to vote on the measure today, just six days before the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law triggers the automatic cuts because of the yearlong budget stalemate between President Bush and Congress.

"Our position has not changed with respect to a veto threat," Fitzwater said.

He said the administration still hoped an agreement was within reach that could prevent cuts from taking place on Oct. 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

The cuts — called a "sequester" — will take place unless the targets of the Gramm-Rudman law are modified or delayed and will mean across-the-board reductions of up to 40 percent throughout the government.

"We want to avoid a sequester. We are willing to negotiate into the night," Fitzwater said.

Negotiators from the two sides met in a back room of the Capitol until nearly 12:30 a.m. today, emerging to say they were still searching for a deal.

JFK memorial wall reinstalled

DALLAS (AP) — A memorial wall recounting President John F. Kennedy's trip to the Parkland Hospital emergency room after being shot by an assassin in 1963 has been reinstalled at the hospital.

The memorial, which was placed in boxes in 1982 because of remodeling and construction at the hospital, was reinstalled last week in a glass enclosed alcove near the hospital's administrative offices.

The memorial wall is paneled with cherry mahogany, and its centerpiece is a new 30-inch presidential seal. It hangs between Texas and U.S. flags and portraits of Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson.

"Although we don't want to dwell on what happened here in 1963, to not display a memorial would be equally bad," said William DeMuth, the architect responsible for most of the construction at Parkland.

The memorial wall also contains a bronze plaque detailing the events that occurred at Parkland between the emergency room arrivals of the president and his accused assassin.

Lack of track costs state, breeders say

AUSTIN (AP) — Lack of a major, Class 1 horse racing track is costing Texas millions of dollars annually, the Texas Thoroughbred Breeders' Association says.

A new report by two Southern Methodist University economists shows that a Class 1 track in the Dallas-Fort Worth area would create $83 million in metroplex income its first year of operation, the breeders' group said Monday.

The breeders also said about half the 1.5 million visitors to Louisiana Downs in Shreveport, La., are from Texas. It estimated that the Texans each spend an average of $136.05 each day at the Louisiana track.

Texas law allows the Class 1 tracks in three metropolitan areas — Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio. However, no Class 1 licenses have been issued by the Texas Racing Commission.

Many horsemen and potential track operators complain that the state's 5 percent tax on each dollar wagered is too high to make operating a big track economically feasible.

Navy plans to cut student aviators

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The Navy plans to cut 400 student-aviators from its flight training program, partly because of looming cuts in the Pentagon budget and low pilot attrition rate, officials announced Monday.

The cuts will be made across the board at all six bases that make up the Naval Air Training Command, including air stations in Corpus Christi, Kingsville and Beeville, said Rear Adm. Jimmie Taylor, chief of naval air training.

Although Naval Air Station Chase Field, near Beeville, is being studied for closure, the cuts won't pose a real threat to the base, said members of a task force dedicated to keeping the base open.

Taylor wasn't able to say just what cuts would be made at which air stations. He said officials will base the cuts on how well student aviators score in their training.

But the reductions will have to be made in such a way to maintain a balance throughout the flight training program, Taylor said. The program takes students two to three years to complete.

"The Navy says the pilot pipeline is overloaded," Taylor told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "We had been scheduled to graduate more than 1,600 pilots in 1991. That's been dropped to about 1,300."

State schools: Have the problems been solved?

DALLAS (AP) — Some parents of residents at state schools for the mentally retarded say years of legal battles have done little to improve conditions at the institutions.

"I see bruises and injuries all the time. It's awful. I want the abuse to stop," said Fay Rogers, whose 34-year-old son Denne has lived at the Fort Worth State School for the mentally retarded for 13 years.

"Over the last seven or eight months, I've seen an increase in the number and severity of injuries to him," she said. "It's extremely frustrating. I can't understand it."

But another parent said she believes the positives at the Fort Worth school, which houses about 350, outweigh the negatives.

"We have problems just like any other large organization," said Nancy Ward, president of the Fort Worth State School Parent Association. "But I feel that for every bad thing, a thousand good, positive things happen every day. I am completely satisfied."

Mrs. Ward's daughter, Dianne, has been at the school for 13 years.

The Fort Worth school is among four such institutions for the mentally retarded covered by a lawsuit filed in 1974 against the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

FORT WORTH — Fay Rogers sits with her 34-year-old son Denne in his room at the Fort Worth State School for the mentally retarded. Mrs. Rogers says that over the last seven or eight months she has seen an increase in the number and severity of injuries to her son, who has been a resident at the school for 13 years.

Although initially settled in 1983, U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders held the state in contempt of court in 1987 for failing to improve conditions.

New settlement terms were reached, but the plaintiffs are asking for a second finding of contempt covering the Fort Worth and San Antonio schools.

"A grim and scandalous situation exists" at the schools, according to the motion, filed June 1. "Conditions at that state school (Fort Worth) continue to be egregiously defective and substandard."

In July, a court-appointed monitor found several deficiencies and said the department had not complied fully with the court order.

On Aug. 1, three workers at the Fort Worth school were indicted on felony abuse charges.

The charges demoralized other workers.

"People think everyone out here is like that," said Preston Ball, who teaches living skills. "I resent it. People take their jobs real seriously."

Confirmed incidents of abuse have increased from 21 in 1985 to 55 last year, but school Superintendent Rick Campbell attributes the increase to increased awareness and better reporting.

At the 13 state schools, confirmed incidents have risen from 200 in 1987 to 381 in 1989.

"Any abuse is too much," Campbell told The Dallas Morning News. "We take real aggressive posture with regard to reporting abuse. Of all the things related to working at this institution, the thing I can tolerate the least is any incident of abuse. We can't have abuse."

Campbell attributes some abuse to the difficulty in dealing with mentally retarded people.

"There's a potential for a fairly high frustration level," he said. "But that doesn't make it OK for people to lose their temper."

Some of the injuries parents attribute to abuse are instead caused by altercations with other patients or are the results of accidents, according to staff reports.

A report on one incident said in part: "Because of his aggressive behavior toward peers, Tim is at risk of injury through counter-aggression. While every precaution is taken to prevent injuries, they do occur..."

Mary Cash is skeptical about the report on her son Tim.

"When they tell me that every time he initiates those incidents, I have to wonder," she said. "I don't trust them."

Assistant District Attorney Steve Chaney, who has reviewed some of the complaints, said he believes the staff is trying to improve.

"I'm very impressed with how quickly the management out there is attempting to respond to those things, and prevent them in the first place," he said. "There is some encouragement."

Barbara Harris, whose daughter has been at the school since 1976, said the school offers a needed service.

"The mentally retarded are so vulnerable," she said. "Most people chose the state school because they thought their children would be secure there. I've never been unhappy."

Radio station buys guns

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin police have collected a stockpile of weapons from an unusual place — a radio station.

Station KBTS offered to pay $100 for each firearm turned in, and disc jockey Mike Butts said it was money well spent.

A total of 16 weapons were handed over to Austin police Monday, and four other gun owners had made appointments to turn in their firearms today, Butts said.

Most of the weapons turned in were sawed-off shotguns. Two were sporting rifles.

"It's spooky when you're sitting here with sawed-off shotguns and automatic assault rifles," Butts said.

Butts said he and radio station of-officials decided to make the offer last week after two teen-agers and a 61-year-old man were wounded in a shootout at a crowded downtown Austin bus stop.

Witnesses said the shooting occurred after two youthful gangs were taunting one another. The next day, police increased patrols and Mayor Lee Cooke urged citizens to remain calm.

"We wanted to get some of these Saturday night specials and illegal guns off the streets. So we offered to pay $100 for every one of these," Butts said.

Butts said a few teen-agers were among those turning in guns, but most ranged in age from their early 20s to early 30s.

Judge suggests tents to house jail inmates

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. District Judge James DeAnda says temporary buildings or tents may be used to hold felons until the state's prison system has space to hold them.

DeAnda hinted Monday that he may order the state to provide facilities in Harris County to hold the felons. He said temporary buildings or tents could be put up on county land at the present Harris County Detention Center in Humble.

But U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler has ruled that tents are unacceptable for housing state prison inmates.

But DeAnda said he will consider them because of the generally shorter stays involved with county inmates and the expected opening of a new downtown jail in September 1991.

"My thinking is that the county provide the land and the state provide the money," DeAnda said. He noted that a state court has held the state liable for counties' costs in housing convicts, although the decision is being appealed.

At a hastily called hearing on the long-running lawsuit over conditions in the overcrowded

Harris County Jail, the judge prodded lawyers for the state, the county and the jail inmates to work out some solution that will prevent wholesale releases of dangerous criminals.

"I'm not saying I'm going to start a prison-building program in Harris County," DeAnda said. "What I'm saying is that we're going to explore every avenue there is to handle this."

DeAnda says he has asked court-appointed jail monitor J. Michael Keating Jr. to "check on the availability of temporary housing" as well as the cost and time involved in building it. He told the lawyers to have their clients make similar inquiries and inform Keating.

Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen and the attorney for the inmates, James Oitzinger, said they were generally pleased with the idea.

But Klevenhagen said it would be faster and cheaper to put the state prisoners in vacant jail cells in adjoining counties, and Oitzinger suggested using existing housing.

DeAnda said that whatever solution he chooses, he intends to see that inmates' rights are preserved.

Hostages-rescued by SWAT team

LA VERNE, Calif. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies lobbed "flash-bang" grenades into a McDonald's to divert a gunman and stormed the restaurant early today, rescuing the last of 20 people held hostage up to seven hours, authorities said.

None of the hostages was injured, authorities said. The suspect was taken into custody.

The Los Angeles County sheriff's SWAT team, which never made contact with the gunman, got help from an 18-year-old assistant manager of the restaurant who hid in the kitchen. Ramiro Gironas spied on the gunman, reporting his movements by telephone throughout the standoff, authorities said.

"All I know was to take care of my people, my crew," Gironas said. "I'm glad I'm safe and that all my people are safe. I'm not a hero. I just did what I had to."

Some hostages, including a 3-year-old girl and an 85-year-old woman, had been forced to lie on the floor under tables at the after-school hangout, authorities said.

GM pact receives flood of support

DETROIT (AP) — Early returns from a United Auto Workers vote this week on a national contract with General Motors Corp. show the agreement is headed for overwhelming approval.

The union's 300,000 workers in 29 states were expected to ratify the tentative agreement reached a week ago that guarantees full income for laid-off workers. The voting ends Sunday.

The union plans to use the three-year contract as a pattern for agreements with Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

At GM's Arlington, Texas, assembly plant, with about 3,000 workers, Local 276 President David Perdue said Monday that production workers voted 98 percent and skilled trades workers voted 94 percent to accept the contract.

"There really weren't that many concerns," he said. "Everybody for the most part is pretty happy."

Locals in Bedford, Ind., with about 1,200 workers, and Baltimore, with about 3,100 workers, also voted overwhelmingly to ratify the pact.

Meanwhile, Ford of Canada workers went back to work Monday after ratifying a new contract following a week-long strike. The shutdown halted work in all nine factories operated by the Ford subsidiary.

The GM contract includes a $4 billion commitment to guarantee the income of workers who are laid off more than nine months. It also maintains a program to hire one new worker for every two who quit, retire or die.

Reserve call-up falls short of expectations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is continuing to activate reserve forces for Operation Desert Shield, but the total call-up is likely to fall well short of the 50,000 authorized by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, military sources say.

The Pentagon was expected to announce today that activations now total about 25,000.

In its latest official accounting of reserve call-ups, the Pentagon said Thursday that 21,653 members of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard reserve forces had been placed on active duty since President Bush authorized use of the reserves on Aug. 22. It is the first reserve call-up since the Vietnam war.

Cheney told a House committee last week that he expected nearly 50,000 reserves to be on active duty by Sept. 30, but a military source said Monday the total is unlikely to exceed 40,000 and that it would take several more weeks to reach even that total. The source spoke on condition he not be identified.

"It's not going to be anywhere near" the 50,000 figure projected by Cheney, the source said, unless war with Iraq breaks out. In the case of war the Pentagon would be expected to activate far more reserves, including combat units.

It was not immediately clear whether the services had scaled back their original projections of how many reserves would be needed or whether Cheney had miscalculated.

In response to a reporter's inquiry, the Pentagon issued a statement Monday evening saying Cheney's original approval of the call-up plan was "designed to allow the services a maximum amount of flexibility" to meet their needs.

"At present, it is not possible to forecast whether the needs of the services will come up" to the nearly 50,000 total authorized by Cheney, the statement said.

Bush's decision to mobilize the reserves marked an important political moment in the administration's campaign to try to force Iraq's army out of Kuwait.

"Weekend warriors" from around the country have been forced to leave their jobs, families and communities to provide medical, transportation, airlift and other services in support of Operation Desert Shield in the gulf region.

Those placed on active duty are obliged to serve 90-day tours, and the period can be extended another 90 days if Cheney decides the extra help is needed.

When Cheney signed an order Aug. 23 approving a reserve activation plan, his spokesman, Pete Williams, said as many as 49,703 reserves could be placed on active duty by Oct. 1. He said the actual number was likely to be about 46,000 because the Marine Corps did not plan to use the 3,000 reserves it was allowed to call.

Williams stressed that the services would call up "only what we need and only when we need it," but the total was likely to be near the figure authorized by Cheney.

Last week the Army, Navy and Air Force activated more than 7,000 reserves, and the Army announced that it had alerted 24 reserves units in 13 states and Puerto Rico to prepare for activation.

Deep hatred led to Israeli murder

NUSSEIRAT CAMP, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — The young man from Bureij was explaining why Palestinians stoned and burned to death an Israeli soldier at the refugee camp. His first words were "deep hatred."

The man was 20, a carpenter with dark brown eyes. He had fled across the highway to Nusseirat five days earlier, just after Sgt. Amnon Pomerantz died in his car on Bureij's main street.

The 46-year-old reservist had driven into the camp by accident. He was stoned, tried to speed away in panic and rammed into a donkey cart, injuring two youngsters.

Then came a barrage of stones and the flaming, gasoline-soaked rags that incinerated his car and ended his life.

The slaying proved the fragility of what Israelis have called a "relative calm" in Palestinians' 34-month revolt against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza.

At the entrance to Bureij, soldiers blocked almost everyone from entering or leaving.

Lilov re-elected after resignation

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — A day after offering his resignation, the chairman of the governing Socialists was re-elected today by delegates to a party congress whose majority appears reluctant to forge ahead with quick reform.

Alexander Lilov, who was opposed by reformers in the party, was re-elected during an all-night session of the long-ruling party that shed its Communist appellation last spring, then won multiparty elections.

He gained 833 of the more than 1,300 votes, officials said, defeating radical reformer Alexander Tomov.

Tomov won election to the party's 151-member Supreme Council, formerly its Central Committee.

Lilov announced Monday that he was stepping down to make way for a new, more "pragmatic" leader.

But the announcement apparently was a tactical maneuver to elicit support, and his re-election appeared a victory for conservative forces.

Lilov, 57, became party leader in February, four months after hard-line leader Todor Zhivkov was ousted. Since then, however, Bulgaria has made fewer changes in its Communist system than some of its Eastern European neighbors.

Progressive and conservative factions of the renamed party are now vying for control. Throughout the congress, spokesmen for reform factions repeatedly called for Lilov's replacement.

Gas truck explodes in Bangkok

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — At least 54 people were killed when a gas truck overturned and exploded at a busy Bangkok intersection, quickly engulfing cars, shops and a women's dormitory in flames, police said today.

Another 97 people were injured, many seriously, said Bangkok police superintendent Col. Kongdej Choosue.

The 6-wheel truck overturned after crashing into a car at a railway crossing on Monday night. The liquefied gas gushed out of its two huge tanks, and flames swept over 43 cars and 30 shops and other buildings on both sides of the street, said deputy commander of the Bangkok police, Col. Wanlop Watjanapooka.

Gas had leaked under the cars and ignited and the fire raged for two hours before 60 fire engines and hundreds of volunteers extinguished it.

"We were driving back to the hotel after dinner and we got caught in a traffic jam," said Peter Gillies, who was slightly burned.

De Klerk to speak to U.S. leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — South African President F. W. de Klerk is seeking to convince congressional leaders that he is serious about his commitment to establish a non-racial system in his country.

De Klerk planned meetings this morning with Senate leaders and after an appearance at the National Press Club, a visit with House members.

Part of de Klerk's mission is to persuade Americans that his goal of dismantling apartheid is irreversible. But some black activists said they are not yet convinced.

The 24-member Congressional Black Caucus canceled a meeting it had scheduled with de Klerk because it feared the session could be misinterpreted.

After de Klerk's meeting Monday with President Bush, Randall

Quitting smoking will always improve health

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's never too late to quit smoking to save one's health, the U.S. surgeon general's annual report on tobacco said today.

The health benefits of quitting are "immediate and substantial" and extend to men and women — young and old, sick and well, Surgeon General Antonia C. Novello wrote in the preface to the report.

People who quit before age 50 have half the risk of dying in the next 16.5 years compared with continuing smokers, the report said.

And for all ages, 10 to 15 years of abstinence reduces ex-smokers' risk of dying to nearly the level of people who never smoked.

"Smoking cessation represents the single most important step that smokers can take to enhance the length and quality of their lives," Novello said.

Twenty previous reports issued since 1964 by the surgeon general's office have considered most of the health aspects of smoking. The 1990 report, the first by Novello, focuses on the health benefits of smoking cessation by analyzing data from the American Cancer Society's Cancer Prevention Study II.

About 390,000 Americans die each year from diseases attributed to smoking. Although nearly half of all living adults who ever smoked have quit, about 50 million Americans continue the habit.

Male smokers are 22 times more likely than nonsmokers to die of lung cancer and female smokers have 12 times the risk of nonsmokers. This disease is leading cause of cancer death for both men and women.

But quitting smoking steadily reduces the lung cancer risk, and after a decade of abstinence, former smokers have 30 percent to 50 percent the risk of dying of lung cancer as continuing smokers, the report said.

Smoking during pregnancy doubles the risk of having a low birthweight baby, but this excess risk is eliminated when a woman doesn't smoke during pregnancy, the report said. Simply cutting back without quitting appears may have little or no benefit for birthweight, the report said.

Quitting also reduces risk of heart disease, the leading cause of death in the United States.

The report also said smoking has been associated with facial skin wrinkling in white people, particularly "crow's feet" around the eyes. However, scientists have not studied the effect of quitting smoking on skin wrinkling.

The average weight gain by smokers when they quit is five pounds, but this poses very little health risk, the report said. Less than 4 percent who quit gain more than 20 pounds, it said.

Smokers are wrong if they believe they don't need to quit because they have survived many years of the habit or already have developed smoking-related disease or symptoms, the report said.

Gorbachev is facing winter

A few weeks ago it was bread. Now it's meat. Tent cities of the homeless are springing up in the middle of Moscow. Thousands of demonstrators gather outside the Kremlin to demand the resignation of the government and protest the general deterioration of living standards. For the citizens of what for the moment is still called the Soviet Union, it promises to be a long, cold winter.

President Mikhail Gorbachev has been caught between the demons of a failed socialist system and the deep, bracing waters of free enterprise and competition. For a long time he was able to keep the demons at bay without getting wet. But the rising expectations of the Soviet citizenry were outrunning the reality of perestroika. In a desperate effort to keep up with events, he now appears ready to go all the way: He has called for an open referendum on private property.

Gorbachev has now been in power for five-plus years. In many respects, life in the Soviet Union has grown immeasurably better in that time. Thanks to glasnost, people no longer have to fear immediate imprisonment for speaking their minds, and books and newspapers that would unquestionably have been banned earlier now circulate freely. Foreign travel and emigration are greatly loosened up.

But in terms of delivering the goods that mark everyday life — food and shelter — Gorbachev has been a failure. The situation has deteriorated to the point where the Soviet Union is seeing the return of the "cigarette economy" of post-war Germany, where packs of Marlboros substitute for money. The Kremlin recently promised precious hard currency to American tobacco companies in return for an emergency infusion of nicotine.

One result is that individual Soviet republics are increasingly behaving as independent states, setting their own economic and even foreign policies. In the Russian Republic, which accounts for about half the Soviet population, Boris Yeltsin is moving swiftly with a "500-day plan" to implement a free market economic system. Gorbachev is apparently trying to regain the initiative with his idea for a referendum on private property.

This represents an intellectual revolution of stunning proportions. It recognizes what Gorbachev and his fellow reformers have shrunk from acknowledging during the past five years. There is no halfway house to capitalism; there is no such thing as "market socialism." Nobody is going to take the necessary risks with capital and personal effort unless they can be reasonably assured of a return. And people are not going to do that if as basic a question as security of property — the very heart of capitalism — is still up for debate.

Whether Gorbachev has time even for a referendum is open to question. The patience of the Soviet man in the street has been stretched to the breaking point. But the last intellectual bridge is being crossed. A yes by the Russian people would be far more important than any Western aid or technical assistance in finally setting the Soviet Union on the road to peace and prosperity.

Citizens help pay the debts

By MARIO CHRISTALDI
Thomson News Service
WASHINGTON — To finance Operation Desert Shield or shrink the national debt, average Americans are offering Uncle Sam a helping hand.

With the budget deficit swelling and bills from the Persian Gulf crisis looming, these patriotic souls have been quietly slipping the federal government a little extra money and other assistance. At the Pentagon, a special hotline was set up in late August to handle the wave of callers from around the country who want to donate cash or other items for the military effort.

Officials at the Defense Logistics Agency won't say how much they've taken in, but they will gladly give out the address where checks should be mailed. Of course, private donations are only a tiny blip on the budget screen in the context of a military operation expected to cost at least $15 billion a year — about half of which U.S. allies have agreed to pay.

"No one ever envisioned that other countries would be kicking in billions of dollars like this for our military operations," said Sen. Sam Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The Georgia Democrat noted the "patriotic clause" that allows private citizens to make donations for military efforts, and he speculated that the image of a cash-strapped U.S. going hat in hand to other nations certainly hasn't hurt this year.

Capitol report

The Pentagon hotline is averaging scores of calls a day, with a small percentage of the people offering money. Most others want to send mail, food or other comforts to the U.S. troops sweltering in the Saudi Arabian desert.

"People want to help out as a patriotic gesture," said Linda Stacy-Nichols, a spokeswoman for the supply arm of the Pentagon. "They've offered everything from a hundred head of cattle to ice cream and bottled water." The most popular offerings? "Cookies and books, by far," said one of the operators handling the hotline.

But sadly for the soldiers, they'll have to get by on military meals because cookies and other "perishables" are prohibited. That includes the couple thousand pounds of live Maine lobsters that one caller wanted to donate. Bottled water is also being refused because current supplies are adequate.

Other no-nos are alcoholic beverages and pornographic materials, which are forbidden under Saudi law. Stacy-Nichols said all items are reviewed for whether they are "needed for operations or wanted for morale," and she said the only things accepted so far have been cassette tapes, stationery and stamps. Cookies and stamps are one thing, but who really wants to hand over money they don't owe to the government? A lot of people, judging from the records of a little-known arm of the Treasury Department.

For nearly 30 years, the Bureau of Public Debt has been accepting citizens' contributions to reduce the federal debt. At $1.9 million through the first six months of 1990, donations are being made at a record pace this year.

"The more attention given to the size of the debt, the more money we take in," said Ron Couch, a bureau employee who has tracked public donations since the first $10,000 came in during 1961-62. He said donations generally rise in proportion to media coverage of the deficit and public awareness, both of which are up this year as the White House and Congress wrangled over a budget package.

Coming from groups ranging from scout troops to senior citizens, nearly $18 million has been donated to the fund over the years — a good start, perhaps, but still $3 trillion short of the mark.

Exporting the cough to Moscow

By ART BUCHWALD
There are other things going on in the world besides the Middle East crisis. One is that the Philip Morris Company and RJR-Nabisco have just signed a contract to sell 34 billion cigarettes to the Soviet Union.

I asked Boris Gum, a Russian trade official stationed in Washington, if the importation of that much tobacco would cause a coughing problem in the Soviet Union.

"Smoking has never been a health issue in the U.S.S.R.," he replied. "Finding the cigarettes has been the difficulty. We don't have any consumer goods in our country right now, so people smoke a lot to forget that this is the first day of the rest of their lives."

"But with 34 billion cigarettes, the United States could bury you!"

"Why do Americans care as long as they make money on it?" "In the past we didn't care, but now we need every Soviet citizen we can get to beat the hell out of the Iraqis."

Boris said, "Don't worry about our health. Your cigarettes are too mild to hurt our people."

"Are you going to put warnings on the U.S. cigarettes before you sell them?" I asked Boris.

"The Soviet Union does not believe that government should interfere in the private lives of its citizens," he said.

"What about people who object to other Russians smoking? Will their rights be respected?"

"We plan to divide the Soviet Union up into Smoking and No Smoking sections. The smokers will live in Siberia — the nonsmokers in the Ukraine."

"How did the tobacco deal happen?" I wanted to know.

Boris told me, "The Soviets have always admired America's ability to blow smoke. We dreamed of manufacturing our own cigarette that would match the firepower of a Camel or a Virginia Slim. Unfortunately, our nicotine scientists could never come up with anything as good. So when the American cigarette companies offered to sell us cigarettes, we threw out the food budget for the next five years to buy all the butts in Philip Morris."

"When it comes to smoking, the Russians have it made."

"Not exactly," Boris said. "We're still lacking."

"In what?" I asked.

"Matches. The U.S. deal didn't include matches."

"Why not?"

"The Americans were afraid that we'd set fire to Lithuania." Boris continued, "It doesn't matter because this agreement will make it possible for the U.S. and the Soviet Union to become brothers again. It's a religious experience."

"How?"

"Every time a Soviet citizen lights up, he says, 'Thank God for the Marlboro Man.'"

U.S. patent office thwarts inventors

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA
WASHINGTON — Name an industry in which the Japanese aren't pummeling Americans and it's likely to be a loser. If there is money to be made, the Japanese are making it and the Americans are spending it.

Now America has the chance to excel in biotechnology that could lead to new cancer treatments, better medical devices and environmental and agricultural breakthroughs. But thanks to a snail's-pace American bureaucracy, the Japanese are poised to surpass the United States there too.

Biotechnology is a science still in its infancy but with a lucrative future. The United States holds a slight lead, but the Japanese are moving in and the U.S. government's bungling could allow that to happen.

The problem is red tape. Scientists and corporations that develop technological breakthroughs want the exclusive right to market their finds, and that means they need patents from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, where the nightmare begins.

Inventors and even some members of Congress are raising their voices to complain about how long it takes the patent office to approve applications. Some companies wait for years.

Our associate Scott Sleek obtained a report, yet to be made public, from the General Accounting Office confirming that the patent office is crippling American entrepreneurs.

Despite efforts to speed up the process, the backlog of applications in the patent office has increased. The number of applications has gone up 33 percent in the past year and a half. The applications still pending last year had been in the approval process for anywhere from two to four years — long enough to discourage a would-be inventor, and more than long enough for a foreign competitor to capture the market.

This year, the patent office says it has reduced the waiting time to about two years — still a daunting prospect for entrepreneurs in a hurry to beat the competition.

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., has been trying to light a fire under the patent office. He thinks it needs more people and better computers. A spokesman for the office told us more biotechnology experts are being added, but the training takes time, and those with the expertise are courted by private industry too.

At stake is the future of biotechnology and who will control it. Biotechnology may be the most important scientific advance of the 21st century. Scientists are already testing special petroleum-eating bugs that can be used to clean up oil spills. Biogenetic engineering can develop a super strain of farm animals. Stronger and faster-growing trees can be developed. But no one wants to spill the secrets without a patent, and that means years of sitting on vital technology.

Son could enroll in school of hard knocks

DEAR ABBY: Our bright, soon-to-be 18-year-old son feels that he has reached an impasse with us regarding his future.

His mother and I feel that as long as he is living under our roof, we have an obligation to be actively involved in every aspect of his future in order to protect him from what we fear might be mistakes. He feels that we are being unfair to deprive him of acquiring the experience necessary to achieve his goals. He insists that even though he may make some mistakes, it's his future, and he will have to learn from his mistakes.

We have all agreed to use your insight as a basis for compromise.

HIS PARENTS IN BROOKLYN
DEAR PARENTS: How has his judgment been so far? If he hasn't made any mistakes so serious that he needed you to rescue him, I'd be inclined to trust his judgment.

There's a delicate balance between "protecting" an 18-year-old and controlling him. I applaud your conscientious parenting. Mom and Dad, but must you be actively involved in every aspect of your son's future? Please don't hamper his growth by smothering him.

DEAR ABBY: I am surprised that you had so many letters from readers who were on "your side" in the matter of whether or not a couple should marry because a baby was on the way.

I would like to go on record as being firmly opposed to your advice to marry because a child had been accidentally conceived. I should think the pitfalls and hopelessness of a forced marriage (forced in any sense of the word) would be obvious to all parties concerned.

Dear Abby

But all of that aside, Abby, please consider this: What if the baby is miscarried, or is stillborn, or dies shortly after birth, etc. Then what? — S.S. IN PINE LAKE, GA.

DEAR S.S.: If the baby does not survive for any of the above reasons, at least the mother and father will have the satisfaction of knowing that they did the right thing in their willingness to legitimize the child, even though it had been accidentally conceived.

Members meet for '42'

BY MICKIE HARRINGTON
Luther Correspondent

Ten members of the Luther "42" Club met Sept. 13 at the C.S. Harrington residence for a table of "88" and "42." Refreshments included a yellow cake with white icing and four chocolate dominos — all doubles, ice cream or frozen yogurt and chips.

The club met Sept. 20 at the home of Zella Lindley in Big Spring. The next meeting is Thursday and will be hosted by Dollie Jarman in the Canterbury Recreation Room, Big Spring.

Hawaiian luau

The Golden Agers of the Big Spring First Church of God enjoyed a West Texas Hawaiian Luau Sept. 14 in the fellowship hall.

Truett Thomas was the emcee and began the festivities by leading the celebrants singing "Love Lifted Me," "Jesus Saves" and "Sunlight." He then sang the "Preacher and the Bear."

Betty Reagan Thomas then teamed up for "I'm An Old Cowhand."

Twenty-six people attended the covered dish luncheon including one visitor, Lou Grant, Truett's sister from the Moore community. Each received a lei as he or she entered. Many couples were attired in Hawaiian skirts and shirts to match.

Decorations included the head table covered with a fish net, which featured a 14-inch ceramic pig over a roasting pit. The fire was simulated by flashlights under red tissue paper. This was surrounded by plastic lobsters, crabs and two 20-inch tissue paper pineapples.

The program was enhanced by a background of quiet Hawaiian music throughout.

Tables were centered with Hawaiian leis and rosette fans as favors, interspersed with bananas. Hawaiian napkins were used during the luncheon, with "Let's Have a Luau" printed on them.

The Rev. Darrell Hendrickson was invited to the podium to receive a Cross pen for his birthday, which was Sept. 18.

The recent death of Billie Bob Rodman, daughter of the late Rev. Elrah and Emily Phillips was observed with a time of silence and a prayer for the family.

The Rev. Charles Harrington sang "When I Made My Last Move," which he dedicated to his aunt and uncle, Louise and Bill Harrington, Odessa. He then sang, "Thank the Lord for the Valleys."

The Rev. George Harrington briefly talked on the importance of reading and encouraged all to continue to do so.

Truett Thomas sang "The Lord's Prayer" as a benediction then alohas were said.

Club selects evaluators

Tall Talkers Toastmasters held its weekly meeting Sept. 18 at Days Inn. Feature of the meeting was to select an evaluator to represent the club at its district conference. Honors were divided between Donna Jackson and Dene Sheppard, who tied in voting by the club members.

Next week's meeting will feature the selection of the humorous speech representative. If you are interested in becoming a Toastmaster, call Bailey Anderson, 267-3008.

Tourists buy lunch for San Francisco homeless

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A pair of tourists decided not to just walk on by at the sight of so many homeless and hungry people.

Dennis Seifert, 38, Newport Beach, and Howard Hawley, 38, of Corona, invited about 70 street people to lunch Sunday.

At first, only 10 street people accepted. But word spread quickly and soon dozens lined up at the counter of a Carl's Jr. fast-food restaurant.

The manager, who would not identify himself, at first encouraged the homeless to eat outside, saying he was worried that fleas and ticks from them would infest the salad bar. But Seifert insisted that they eat indoors.

One man, who gave his name only as Jack, finished three hamburgers and took one to go.

"Anytime you get to eat free hamburgers, man, it's like winning the lottery," he said, patting his stomach.

The tab for lunch came to $96.81, but Hawley said the experience was worth much more.

Spring board

How's that?

Q. When fishing becomes legal in Comanche Trail Lake next summer, will the fish have to be released back into the lake, or will there be a restocking program set up?

A. People will be allowed to keep the fish, says Tom Decell, director of Public Works. The specific rules of fishing will follow state law. Hopefully, there will be enough spawns for the lake to be self-stocking. This is the purpose behind the current ban.

College board approves hiring of five employees

By DEBBIE LINCEUM Staff Writer

The Howard County Junior College District board of trustees accepted two resignations and approved the hiring of five new employees at their regular meeting Monday.

Resignations were accepted from Bill Coleman, computer specialist at Howard College; and Doug Pounds, instructor at the Big Spring Federal Correctional Institution. College President Bob Riley said the computer position vacancy is being advertised.

Joseph Gallegos was approved to replace Pounds as electrical cable fabrication instructor at the FCI.

Ellen Phillips was approved for the new position of real estate instructor at the FCI.

Jennifer Symes was hired as full-time dental hygiene instructor at Howard College. Riley said the position was added to take the place of several part-time slots and was needed with the addition of six new students.

Vanessa Hull was hired as a chemistry instructor at Howard College. She replaces Gary Sims, recently appointed to the new position of associate vice president for instruction.

Mildred Mead was approved to take a position at the licensed vocational nursing program in Fredericksburg.

In other business, trustees accepted a delinquent tax collection agreement with the county. The agreement allows Attorneys Bancroft & Mouton of Big Spring to continue to supervise collection.

Two college vehicles are to be ordered: a minivan from Pollard Chevrolet in Big Spring, and a pickup truck from Tolver Chevrolet in Sweetwater.

In his President's Report, Riley said the fall enrollment of 2,736 has far exceeded estimations. He compared the number with the amount registered during 1988, the last base funding year. At that time, there were 1,540 students registered, he said.

The dorms are 99 percent complete at this time, Riley said. The trustees plan to make a tour through the facility after the next meeting, Oct. 22.

Dean of Students Dusty Johnston said that after some shifting, the men's dorms are 98 percent full and the women's are 85 percent full. He said the new sections of both were filled first.

Riley announced that the college will participate in Project Oasis (sending a note with a 12-pack of Coca-cola to troops in Middle East) by offering the Cokes for sale to students and staff. A table will be set up in the foyer of the student union building Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. for the sales.

Ron Brasel, administrator at Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf, said the school had participated in the project last week.

Riley briefly announced that the Miss Howard College and Miss SWCID pageant will take place Oct. 16. He also mentioned that the college will have a "Fall Fit" fitness competition at Homecoming this year.

Two one-act play productions will take place Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. The shows are "Juvie" and "A Game." The curtain goes up at 8 p.m. each night and tickets are $4 for adults and $3 for students and senior citizens.

Parks board approves Lake Fest 1991

By DEBBIE LINCEUM Staff Writer

The Parks and Recreation board members accepted proposals concerning Lake Fest 1991 and improvements to Moss Creek Lake in their regular meeting Monday.

A contract for the boat race at Moss Creek Lake names RD Racing Promotions of Big Spring to organize the event. The board voted to recommend approval of the contract to the city council.

In a presentation to the board, Rob Sanders of the promotional company said he lost $691 due to low attendance and other problems associated with rain. He outlined several ways the board and city council could insure a more successful event next year, including the installation of permanent boat ramps at the lake.

He said he hopes the event can become popular enough to bring national attention to Big Spring.

Several board members agreed and expressed their support for the event.

The board voted to recommend that proceeds from the event be put back into the lake improvement fund.

In related business, members voted to approve a proposal asking for funds from the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce Visitor's Bureau. It would be used for three construction projects at Moss Lake: a recreational vehicle (RV) park, additional restrooms and the boat ramps.

Total cost of the three projects is estimated at $16,000 in the proposal.

Work on the restroom project, a plan to build additional restrooms on the lake's north side, has already begun. City council member Gail Earls told the board the "dirt work" was apparently complete.

The boat ramp frames are in place, and need only to be filled with concrete, Sanders told the board. Earls said she planned to secure a donation of the material for the project.

The proposed RV park, to include 20 spaces, would be built with volunteer labor, the proposal states. Board members voted to discuss a plan for the park in detail at their next meeting.

Also to be discussed at the next meeting are:

• Possible change in traffic patterns at Comanche Trail Park to deal with complaints about drag racing on the roads.

• Lack of wheelchair access to public areas of Comanche Trail Park.

• A plan to deal with the concrete frame that once housed a wading pool at the park.

The board will meet again Monday, Oct. 29, at 5:30 p.m. in the City Hall conference room.

enough direction on how fix the system.

"He held it unconstitutional because it wasn't good enough, but he didn't give us a heck of a lot of guidance on what would be good enough," said O'Hanlon, a former assistant attorney general.

He said that unless the courts tell the state how to make a constitutional system, the litigation could last for years.

Rick Gray, a lawyer for poor school districts which challenged the school funding system, applauded the ruling. He said McCown did "a very exhaustive, thorough analysis. We think it's a great day for all school children and we hope the Legislature will set about the task of fixing the system in the future."

The new school finance plan was adopted in June by the Legislature after four special sessions.

Lawmakers added $528 million for public schools in 1990-91 and made numerous changes backers said would improve education.

But poor school districts challenged the new funding plan. They argued that it is no different from the old system that was scrapped by the Texas Supreme Court on a 9-0 vote. The high court ordered the state to even out funding to rich and poor school districts.

State Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston, a member of the House Public Education Committee, blamed Gov. Bill Clements for blocking an alternative finance plan that poor school districts would have accepted. Clements killed that proposal by vetoing the taxes needed to pay for it.

"It's entirely because of Gov. Clements' foot-dragging and the Republican legislators who upheld his veto that we're back in the court again, and we're literally about to turn over the keys of the schoolroom to the courts," Colbert said.

Clements wasn't immediately available for comment, said Sheila Allee, deputy press secretary to the Republican governor.

McCown allowed the school finance system to remain in place this school year. But he retains jurisdiction over the case.

The judge said that if the Legislature fails to devise a constitutional school finance plan by next September, he would consider stopping the spending of state and local tax money, or ordering how the state should spend school funds.

Ginetti would be prosecuted in Howard County. "We don't know where we are on the pecking order," he said.

Asked how many other charges in the country are pending against Ginetti, Brune said, "I'll say numerous." The FBI in Dallas was checking on information this morning and FBI officials in Abilene could not be reached.

According to the 1985 Herald account, Ginetti's picture was circulated by the Governor's office with the name "Terry Lee Prero" in connection with the state's most wanted fugitive list. Brune did not confirm or deny whether Prero is a real name or an alias.

Aliases used by Prero, a habitual gambler, included Terry Argus and Tony Culpert, according to the newspaper story. He was wanted for theft, making false statements to a bank, flight to avoid prosecution and theft of a rented car. In addition, he is wanted on a Swisher

County warrant in connection with a bad check written to a Tulsa car dealer for a Corvette.

Quintero said Ginetti was working in a Detroit bar under the assumed name of Gregg Collie when he was arrested on other charges and his fingerprints sent to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. When prints were matched, it was found that he was wanted on charges pending in other parts of the country.

Colorado City Council lacks quorum for vote

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — Although a majority of the City Council did not show up for a special meeting last night to consider a permit for a civil rights march protesting the May 1988 fatal police shooting of a Hispanic man, four council members indicated they will approve it tonight.

Of those absent, one said he will reconvene tonight in hopes of having a four-member quorum, while two said they will not, and another could not be reached for comment. City Manager Brenda Hammond called the meeting to inform the Council of the $850 cost and the manpower needed for the Dec. 1 march, which, at 40 blocks, is four times as long as the average city parade.

The three council members in attendance last night decided to meet as a committee and agreed to recommend that the Council approve the permit as requested. The approximately 35 supporters of the parade who were present at the meeting expressed satisfaction with the recommendation.

Of the four councilmembers who did not attend the meeting, one said he would attend tonight's meeting and saw no reason not to approve the permit. "We don't have anything against them not having a permit," said Rex Thacker.

"It's pretty cut and dried."

Of the other three absent, councilmembers Gary Redwine and Brian Bassham said they would not attend tonight's meeting either.

On Monday, after Shevardnadze and British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd held a two-hour private meeting, reporters asked if the air embargo would be approved. "I hope so," said Hurd.

Shevardnadze nodded confidently. He said through a translator: "We want action. There is no other way."

"It is a fairly balanced draft that takes care of the safety of air flights, but at the same time, continues the idea of sanctions until Iraq agrees to withdraw from Kuwait," said Soviet Ambassador Yuli Vorontsov, president of the Security Council.

The air embargo would ask all nations to bar flights to and from Iraq, but it would not authorize shooting down airplanes.

On Monday, the council adopted a brief resolution calling for aid to nations suffering economic hardship from loss of Councilmember Dee Hearn could not be reached this morning. Redwine said the permit should be granted. Bassham said he needs to learn more about it before deciding.

Mayor Jim Baum, who was at the meeting, said the recommendation was to issue the permit exactly as requested by local LULAC Director Oscar Ortiz. "I feel strongly that the Council will accept," he said. Their concerns centered on possible traffic control problems, he said, not fears of violence. Also at that meeting were councilmembers Bob Riley and Eric White.

Ortiz said he was informed that the permit would be ready by 6 p.m. tonight. "I think they're making the right decision," he said. "I hope they're understanding the importance of what we're trying to do. It would be to the benefit of all to work together. If we have a few bad apples in the police department then we need to get rid of them."

Meanwhile, a committee will meet Oct. 7 to begin planning for the march, which will proceed from the courthouse to the cemetery and back, said LULAC organizer Cruz Chavirra, San Antonio.

Ortiz said he expects twice the number of people to show up as the more than 250 who came to a similar LULAC march on Nov. 4. The police department reported that no problems occurred during that march.

trade with Iraq. They include Jordan and about a dozen other nations.

Every speaker who strode to the rostrum of the General Assembly on Monday denounced Iraq for its Aug. 2 seizure of Kuwait. In his address, French President Francois Mitterrand declared: "Kuwait is a sovereign state, a member of the international community. In the name of what can one decide that this state has ceased to exist?"

The Iraqi U.N. Ambassador, Abdul Amir Al-Anbari, listened impassively at his seat. Iraq's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, stayed away after U.S. officials barred him from coming on a special Iraqi flight.

Iran's foreign minister, Ali Akbar Velayati, told the gathering that his government would obey all Security Council sanctions and embargoes targeting Iraq.

Crooker, mentioning state regulatory agencies, said he did not feel comfortable with how a nearby hazardous waste facility might be supervised.

"I just don't feel we're prepared for it," he said. "I feel that we should follow their (precinct 4 citizens) thought and feeling on it, and I'm opposed to it."

In a Sept. 10 meeting, the Commissioners Court had been asked by Big Spring geologist Mike Robinson to oppose the proposal. Robinson said there is a possibility that leakage from a landfill could find its way into the Colorado River, which goes to Lake Spence, a source of household water for Big Spring and other West Texas communities.

At the same meeting, Mitchell County Commissioners had asked Howard County Commissioners to postpone a decision until further studies were conducted.

In a host agreement signed with NWED, Mitchell County could collect up to $1 million in fees from the operation, according to information provided by local developer Jim Moody. The facility, which would be located on 1,200-1,500 acres, would handle 2,000-5,000 tons of waste daily and would employ about 100 people.

Pokes deal Walsh to Saints

NEW YORK (AP) — Dallas quarterback Steve Walsh, who has been Troy Aikman's backup since both were drafted last year, was traded to New Orleans today for three draft picks.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said his team will receive the Saints' No. 1 and No. 3 choices in 1991 and a No. 2 pick in 1992. Jones said the No. 2 pick could be upgraded to a No. 1 if Walsh performs well for the Saints.

Walsh, who started five games last season when Aikman was injured, will compete for the starting job in New Orleans with John Fourcade, who has been erratic in the Saints' first three games.

The deal was concluded at NFL headquarters just prior to a meeting of league owners.

"I still have to go out and perform regardless of who that guy is backing me up," Aikman said in Dallas. "I'm glad that Steve's able to go somewhere that he can play because he's an outstanding quarterback."

"I don't think in this particular situation it was a disruption to the team," Aikman said.

But, he added, "It is nice to have that aside. Now we can really concentrate on football."

Thurman thumps Jets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It wasn't anything special that made the night so special for Thurman Thomas and the Buffalo Bills.

No trickery. No fleaflickers. No outlandish, totally out of character maneuvers.

It simply was a matter of the Bills executing to perfection in a 30-7 execution of the New York Jets on Monday night.

It was Thomas running wild for a pro career-high 214 yards, 11.9 yards a pop. It was the defense, led by Bruce Smith, shutting down New York's attack. It was total domination.

"It feels great doing it on national television," Smith said after the Bills moved into a tie for the AFC East lead with Miami at 2-1. "We wanted to make a statement about the Bills."

Thomas made the loudest statement, running through gaping holes for big yardage, including a 60-yard dash that was a personal NFL high, a 39-yarder and a 24-yarder.

"It's the old counter play," tackle Will Wolford said. "Everyone knows it, everyone uses it. I don't know why we were so successful with it."

"I don't know if this was the best I've ever seen a runner, but I can't remember another game when I looked downfield and saw our back still shaking and baking."

Thomas couldn't believe the size of the holes in the middle of the Jets defense, which had done well against the rush in its first two games.

"The offense came out with fire in their eyes and they just knocked huge holes in the defense," he said. "I never thought in the NFL I would be 20 yards downfield without ever being touched, just me and a safety."

Nor did the Jets ever expect to be so overwhelmed on the ground. The Bills had 292 yards, their most in 12 years.

"It's unstoppable when you can't tackle in the gaps," Jets coach Bruce Coslet said. "I didn't think anybody could really physically manhandle us like that."

"They got us going in one direction, then cut back between the gaps," nose tackle Scott Mersereau said. "Every time Thomas made a cut, it seemed nobody was there. They definitely were more ready to play than we were."

It didn't look that way at the outset as the Jets sought to break a five-game losing streak against the Bills and establish themselves as a division contender in their first year of rebuilding under Coslet. New York went 75 yards in eight plays, helped by a 29-yard interference call on rookie James Williams in the end zone.

Brad Baxter scored from the 1, but it was the last time the Jets would score.

The Bills came right back with a 76-yard drive that featured a 43-yard pass from Jim Kelly to wide-open Keith McKeller that carried to the Jets' 1. Kenneth Davis scored on the next play.

Then Thomas, an All-American at Oklahoma State where he preceded Barry Sanders, went to work. His 60-yarder came on the first play of Buffalo's next possession. Later, after Butch Rolle scored on a 2-yard pass, giving him touchdowns on his last seven receptions over a span of four years, Thomas had runs of 39, 24 and 15 yards.

Scott Norwood kicked field goals of 48, 42 and 27 yards and McKeller caught a 6-yard TD pass from Kelly for the rest of Buffalo's offense.

The victory reaffirmed that the Bills are the team to beat in the division they have controlled for more than two years. Their loss at Miami last week ended a 33-game stay in first place. Are they beginning another long stint on top?

"After being embarrassed last week," Wolford said, "we had a lot to prove. We wanted to show we're the same Bills that won the division."

They certainly showed that to the Jets.

"They did everything they wanted to," Mersereau said. "Everything."

Crossroads Chalk Talk

In the third week of football play, Crossroads Country teams went 5-5.

The Klondike Cougars are the lone remaining unbeaten team in the area. The Coogs defeated New Home 38-6 in six-man action Friday.

Falling from the ranks of the unbeaten were the Garden City Bearkats, who were ranked No. 5 in the state in the Associated Press Class A poll. Garden City fell to Rankin 27-14.

Also dropping from the unbeaten ranks were the Sands Mustangs, who were ranked No. 12 in the state in the six-man polls. Bit it took the number one team in the state, Christoval, to beat Sands 24-9.

Area teams that were winners were: Big Spring, a 20-14 victor of Lubbock High; Coahoma, a 21-0 winner over Tahoka; Grady, a 22-12 winner over Ira, and Forsan, a 20-6 victor over Roscoe.

Area teams on the losing side were Colorado City, who got dominated by Slaton 43-12; Stanton, who was whitewashed by Greenwood 24-0, and Borden County, who dropped a 24-8 decision to Wellman.

Here is what area coaches had to say about last Friday's games, and this Friday's encounters.

Tom Ramsey, Colorado City, on the loss to Slaton, and this week's encounter with Slaton. — "We got into a track meet and couldn't run with them. We matched them the first quarter; they score and we'd score; they score and we'd score. Then they started pulling away, and we had a hard time cutting them off at the pass. The second half we couldn't do anything offensively."

"Merkel is playing everyone fairly close. They're not giving up much, but not scoring; that's why they're 0-3. I hope it isn't a defensive game."

David Thompson, Big Spring, on the win over Lubbock High, and this week's game against Snyder. — "We think our offensive line is getting better. Needless to say Jermaine (Miller) ran good. We thought the defense played good considering the circumstances. I thought Pat Chavarria had heck of a game. I'm pleased with the way we played overall."

"Snyder is well-coached, they've got a bunch of kids back from last year. They're 2-1, they beat Clyde and Littlefield. They're going to play football, they try to block you and tackle you; no tricks."

Sam Scott, Garden City, on his team's third straight loss to Rankin, and this week's game with Wink. — "They (Rankin) just seem to score more points than we do. The kids had a great effort; best we've had all year, maybe best since I've been here at Garden City. We changed up some things we were doing, and shut them down for a while. They adjusted, and we didn't re-adjust."

"Wink returns seven starters on defense and six on offense. They have a tailback (Jason Bound) who rushed for 1600 yards last year. He is their offense. The way he goes is how they go. They're big, they average a little over 200 pounds both ways. We're going try to do our

Fighting Irish still No. 1

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia wide receiver Derek Dooley says he's a bit wary of the Cavaliers' No. 7 ranking in the latest Associated Press college football poll.

"If you let the ranking get to your head, then it's going to cost you," Dooley said Monday after Virginia jumped to its highest spot ever in the weekly poll. "It's cost a lot of teams in the past and it will always cost a lot of teams because they start believing they are better and they forget how they got to that ranking."

With that caveat, the son of Georgia athletic director Vince Dooley said Monday the unbeaten Cavaliers can turn their newfound national prominence into a positive.

"It can help you if you look at the ranking and use it as a source of pride and try to improve each week and focus each week on the game at hand," Dooley said.

Virginia got to the seventh spot with a 59-0 whipping of Duke. The Cavaliers, who earlier this season notched their first victory over Clemson in 30 tries, have outscored their four opponents 194-31. They leaped three spots from last week's No. 10 to top their best previous ranking of No. 9 in 1949 and 1952.

Meanwhile, Notre Dame received 43 first-place votes and 1,478 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters and held onto its No. 1 ranking for the third consecutive week.

Florida State is second, followed by Auburn and Brigham Young. The Seminoles, who beat Tulane Tennessee is fifth, followed by Michigan, Virginia, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Miami, Texas A&M, Washington, Houston, Illinois, Ohio State, Arizona, Florida, Southern Cal., Clemson and Colorado. Rounding out the Top 25 are Arizona State, Michigan State, Arkansas, Fresno State and South Carolina.

Miami, which did not play, fell one spot to No. 10.

Southern Cal and Arkansas plummeted in the rankings after suffering their first losses.

Southern Cal dropped 13 places to No. 18 after getting blanked by Washington 31-0 and Arkansas fell 10 notches to No. 23 following a 21-17 loss to Mississippi.

Fresno State and South Carolina moved into the rankings for the first time this season, replacing Texas and Pittsburgh.

Fresno rose to No. 24 after beating New Mexico State 42-3. South Carolina moved up to No. 25 after downing Virginia Tech 35-24.

Texas, 22nd last week, is 1-1 after losing to Colorado 29-22. Pittsburgh, last week's No. 25, is 2-1-1 after being tied by Syracuse 20-20.

Washington made the biggest jump, nine places to No. 12.

Idle Tennessee moved up one spot to No. 5. Michigan rose a notch to No. 6 after defeating UCLA 38-15. Nebraska stayed at No. 8 after routing Minnesota 56-0 and Oklahoma moved up two places to No. 9 with a 52-10 victory over Tulsa.

Slimmer Foreman going for 24th straight

LONDON (AP) — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman had a surprise at the weigh-in today for his fight with Terry Anderson. He weighed 259 pounds, about six pounds less than expected.

Anderson also had a surprise. He failed to show for the weigh-in, and faces a fine.

The two Americans were scheduled to meet at the London Arena later today with Foreman, 42, aiming for his 24th comeback successive victory since he returned to the ring three years ago.

John Morris, secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, said: "Anderson will now have to weigh in tonight and the Board will consider a fine because of his discourtesy."

Anderson was understood to have been waiting at his hotel six miles away for his management team to arrive. But fight officials told him to get in a cab on his own as the deadline for the weigh-in approached. He still did not make it. Foreman was six pounds lighter than he had indicated when he arrived in London, despite boasts that he had been eating large meals.

If you're hungry, Foreman says, London is the place to be.

That's why he flew 3,000 miles from his home in Houston for a little snack, his fight against Anderson.

Then he weighed up the main course — a proposed world title shot against either Evander Holyfield or champion James "Buster" Douglas.

Foreman says he wants back the world title he held from January 1973 until he was knocked out by Muhammad Ali in October 1974.

Bel passes test with flying colors

By The Associated Press
This is how George Bell's latest eye examination went:
The first line read: J-A-I-M-E-N-A-V-A-R-R-O.
Bell doubled in the second inning, singled in the third and hit a two-right eye. Bell was 0-for-13 and 11-for-65.

"I guess that answered one of the questions of whether George can see or not. I guess he put a stop to the fact that a lot of people thought he wasn't seeing well," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said.

Rookie Mark Whiten homered and Jimmy Key pitched seven solid innings for the Blue Jays, who are 16-6 in September and have eight games remaining, all on the road. The Red Sox have nine games left, eight at home, including three games with Toronto over the weekend.

Royals 10, Athletics 3
Kurt Stillwell doubled home the first of six Kansas City runs in the fifth inning and added a three-run inside-the-park homer in the seventh. Oakland has an eight-game lead over the idle Chicago White Sox with nine games to play. The A's magic number is still two. Royals starter Tom Gordon (12-11) scattered five hits and survived six walks in 6 2-3 innings.

Mark Davis went 1-1-3 innings and Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth. A's starter Curt Young (9-6) was charged with six runs in 4 1-3 innings. Reggie Harris yielded the other four runs.

Angels 3, Rangers 2
Nolan Ryan held California hitless for 5 2-3 innings and pitched a four-hitter, but one of them was Lance Parrish's two-run homer in the seventh. The 43-year-old Ryan (13-8) struck out 11, giving him the major league lead with 221. But he was outdueled by Mark Langston (10-16), who pitched a four-hitter over 8 1-3 innings.

Parrish's homer erased a 1-0 Texas lead and the Angels scored what proved to be the winning run in the ninth on Donnie Hill's double, Brian Downing's single and Dave Winfield's sacrifice fly.

Langston left after Rafael Palmeiro hit his 14th home run with one out in the ninth. Bryan Harvey earned his 24th save and 66th of his career, a club record.

Dave LaRoche held the old mark of 65.

Orioles 6, Yankees 3
Cal Ripken led off the 10th inning with his 19th home run of the season and Billy Ripken added a two-run double as the Orioles, baseball's best extra-inning team, extended their winning streak to six games. The Birds are 13-4 in extra innings, the best record in the majors.

Cal Ripken connected on a 2-0 pitch from rookie Alan Mills for only his second home run in 27 games. Mills (1-5) took over to start the 10th after Lee Guetterman, New York's second pitcher, shut the Orioles out for five innings on two hits.

Jose Bautista (1-0), the third of five Baltimore pitchers, got the final out in the Yankees' ninth for his first major league decision since June 17, 1989. Gregg Olson pitched the bottom of the 10th for his 34th save, tying the club record set by Don Aase in 1986.

best to forget about Friday night; play a new week."
Jan East, Forsan, on his team's first win of the season against Roscoe, and this week's district-opener against Ozona — "It's pretty important to win a ballgame; more important going into district and we've got seven tough ballgames. We're getting better, I think we ran 38 plays on offense, which isn't good; so we played a lot of defense. Old Roscoe had first and goal on the six and first and goal on the four, and we stopped both times. That was the turning point of the ballgame.

JAN EAST

"Ozona is 0-3 but they've played Big Lake, Crane and Sonora, so they've had a tough schedule, they haven't been playing babies. They're going to get in the 1 (formation) and run the option and power. Defensively they get in a five (5-2 defense) and put about nine men on line of scrimmage."

Randy Roemisch, Sands, on the loss to No. 1 Christoval, and this week's game against New Home — "We played good defense. Offensively it was tough running against them. The weather took the pass away from us and they took the run. Finally we got into the spread, and we moved the ball against them. They didn't make many mistakes and our offense didn't have a turnover, and that's good. Our tailback and safety Charles Rhodes separated his shoulder; he'll be out about three weeks.

"New Home is big. They've got a 239, 222 and 198-pound kids that sit out front. They try to get behind them and blow you out of the tubb."

Dale Ruth, Stanton, on the loss to Greenwood, and this week's game with Wall — "We had a tough one. Greenwood is strong and well-coached. They had a good backfield. They came right at us.

"We knew what they were going to do, and we did what we could. I felt like we played good defense. The kids got after it, but their defense completely shut us down.

Wall has a real good quarterback (Shawn Box); he's a great one. He throws the ball real well, and he can scramble. Their tailback is real good (Brandon Braden). They've got an excellent mixture of passing and running."

Steve Park, Coahoma, on the win over Tahoka, and this week's game with Iraan — "We had a good ballgame offensively and defensively. We moved the ball pretty well, we shot ourselves in the foot at times. We had seven penetrations; we should've scored more. The defense gave us good field position.

"Defensively, it's a real good game. Offensively, we're looking for more consistency.

"Iraan have a couple of real good running backs. They like to give it to Riley Malone (fullback). He has good size and good speed. They're run-oriented, but they can throw the football."

Leandro Gonzales, Grady, on the win over Ira, and this week's game with Lorraine — "The kids played extremely well the first half, both offensively and defensively. In the third quarter we got a little lax, and Ira came back and scored on us. Overall we're pleased with the way we played.

"Lorraine going through rebuilding process. They run every kind of set there is in six-man."

Tom Ham, Klondike, on the win over New Home, and this week's homecoming game with unbeaten Smyer — "We're doing okay. We started off slow, and can't continue to do that. We had a slow start the first game; the second game we were hot as a pistol in the first quarter, and this game kept shooting ourselves in the foot. It wasn't so much turnovers as missed blocks and dropped passes when we had drives going.

"We talked at halftime and kind of straightened out some things, got more back on track, and the kids came out like housefires. It was a complete turnaround.

"Smyer has got some transfer students, and they're probably one of the biggest six-man schools in the state. They've got a lot of kids out. They're basic offense is the O'Brien Veer. It's an old formation, that basically has lot of crossing and pitching, a true option offense. It's complicated and they do a good job. So far I've looked at nine different formations.

"I don't think any coach looks forward to homecoming because there's so many things going on. I'm glad we can do it, but we've also got six weeks test."

run double in the fifth.
The next line read: C-H-U-C-K-C-R-I-M.

Bell singled and scored in the eighth inning.

The bottom line read: J-U-L-I-O-M-A-C-H-A-D-O.

Bell singled in the ninth inning.

Bell passed the test and his vision was found to be 5-for-5 — the baseball equivalent of 20-20 — as the Toronto Blue Jays increased their American League East lead over idle Boston to 1 1/2 games by defeating the Milwaukee Brewers 9-5 Monday night.

Time running out on luckless Mets

By The Associated Press
It's beginning to look like a match-up between the Pittsburgh Pirates and Cincinnati Reds in the National League playoffs.

Not that it's all over or anything. It's just becoming a matter of simple math.

The second place New York Mets lost a game they had to win on Monday, 4-3 to the Chicago Cubs at Wrigley Field.

In a way, the loss was a microcosm of the Mets' season. New York lost on the road, lost to a left-hander, and left 10 on base.

"We had three opportunities to score runs," Mets manager Bud Harrelson said. "Somehow we managed to wiggle out of them."

The loss left the Mets three games behind the Pirates in the NL East with nine games remaining for both teams. New York plays six of its nine games on the road.

"It doesn't look good," pitcher Frank Viola said, "but we still have time."

Harrelson hopes Chicago will remember New York when it plays a three-game series against the Pirates starting tonight.

"I hope Chicago has some momentum going into Pittsburgh," Harrelson said. "And I hope we have it in Montreal."

Whatever hopes Montreal had were dashed in Philadelphia when the Phillies completed a four-game sweep with a 3-0 victory on Monday.

The Expos entered the series off consecutive three-game sweeps of Pittsburgh and New York. But they self-destructed against the Phillies — scoring only seven runs in the four games — and dropped seven games behind the Pirates with nine games left for both teams.

"We've been looking dead at bat," Expos manager Buck Rodgers said. "The Pirates will have to have a total collapse not to finish first."

Over in the NL West, any combination of five Los Angeles losses or Cincinnati victories will clinch the title for the Reds. The Dodgers hung on by beating Houston 7-5 in 11 innings on Monday.

"It's over. Yogi Berra says it's not over until it's over, but I say it's over. I know some people will say I shouldn't say that, but I can feel it. I know this team. I know it's over," — Cincinnati Reds pitcher Jose Rijo concerning the Reds four game lead over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda would rather believe in Yogi's wisdom, though.

"I don't have any idea how it will end but I'm proud of everybody on this team," Lasorda said.

"Everybody was ready to write us off when we were 14 games out, but this team kept believing that someday we'll get closer to Cincinnati."

Cubs 4, Mets 3
Ryne Sandberg hit his league-leading 38th home run as Chicago rallied past New York in its final home game of the season.

New York, 34-41 on the road, lowered Pittsburgh's magic number to seven. Any combination of Mets' losses and Pirates' victories totalling seven will give Pittsburgh its first division title since 1979.

Viola (19-11) was trying to join Doug Drabek of the Pirates, the league's only 20-game winner. Viola had a 3-1 lead in the sixth inning when Sandberg led off with a homer. Mark Grace, Andre Dawson and Luis Salazar followed with consecutive singles to tie the score. After Shawn Dunston grounded into a double play, Doug Dasencho singled home Dawson with the go-ahead run.

Kevin McReynolds homered twice for the Mets and Howard Johnson hit a solo shot.

Phillies 3, Expos 0
Pat Combs pitched a four-hitter and singled home a run as Philadelphia beat visiting Montreal to complete its first four-game sweep since June 29-July 1, 1987, against Pittsburgh.

Combs (10-9) struck out four and walked none for his third complete game and second shutout of the season. The Phillies, who had 10 hits, all singles, scored all their runs with two outs.

Dodgers 7, Astros 5

Los Angeles picked up a half-game on first-place Cincinnati as Mike Sharperson's run-scoring triple broke an 11th-inning tie.

The Dodgers, hanging onto slim hopes, moved within 4 1/2 games of the idle Reds in the West. Los Angeles has eight games left, five on the road, while Cincinnati's remaining nine games are at home.

Giants 3, Padres 1
Kelly Downs gave up one run in six innings and Will Clark hit his 19th homer as San Francisco handed visiting San Diego its sixth straight loss.

The Giants won their sixth straight home game and stayed mathematically alive in the NL West race. But one more loss or Cincinnati win will eliminate them.

Foreman

Since returning to the ring three years ago, he has won all 23 of his fights.

Anderson, a 30-year-old with three defeats on a 22-fight record, was a substitute opponent. He replaced Argentina's Walter Masseroni, who pulled out without giving a reason, and the fighter from Tampa, Fla., was expected to join those other 23 on the vanquished list.

Foreman's record now stands at an impressive 68-20, good enough, his handlers say, to warrant a shot at the world title.

Foreman said he had been in negotiations with both Holyfield and Douglas, who clash for the world title next month.

REQUEST FOR BIDS ON TEXAS HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION

Sealed proposals for constructing 0.00 miles of safety lighting on Loop 322 at US 83/84, Loop 243 intersection in Abilene covered by CRP 50 (348) M in Taylor County...

This contract is subject to all appropriate Federal laws, including Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Plans and specifications including minimum wage rates as provided by Law are available for inspection at the office of Steve Hill, Resident Engineer, Abilene, Texas, and at the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, Austin, until 1:00 P.M., October 12, 1990, and then publicly opened and read.

Shane Geringer, 19, was arrested for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon following the attack, Lt. Rich Molony said. Geringer was released after posting $22,000 cash on a $30,000 bail, Molony said. He was scheduled to be arraigned in Municipal Court Oct. 15.

No weapon was used during the attack. However, police said it constituted assault with a deadly weapon because the victim was kicked after being knocked down.

Molony said police were told by witnesses that Albrecht was attacked as he held up a picture of a Steeler player to deflect a barrage of beer and peanuts thrown by Raiders fans.

Albrecht was standing directly behind the Steelers bench, just off the 50-yard line, when he was struck.

Fan beaten at LA game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — District Attorney Ira Reiner said an attack that left a Pittsburgh Steeler fan critically injured should be "dealt with so severely" that it won't happen again.

"To get beered up and drunk at a game, and yell and scream, yell obscenities in front of other people that are there, and then it denigrates down to this, where you're actually attacking somebody and leaving them critically injured, that's gonna have to be dealt with so severely that other people that go to the games aren't going to do that," Reiner said Monday.

Paul Albrecht, 35, of Tucson, Ariz., remained in critical condition after suffering a head injury during the Steelers' 20-3 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders on Sunday at the Coliseum.

County-USC Medical Center spokeswoman Adelaida De La Cerda said Albrecht regained consciousness and responded to treatment.

Shane Geringer, 19, was arrested for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon following the attack, Lt. Rich Molony said. Geringer was released after posting $22,000 cash on a $30,000 bail, Molony said. He was scheduled to be arraigned in Municipal Court Oct. 15.

No weapon was used during the attack. However, police said it constituted assault with a deadly weapon because the victim was kicked after being knocked down.

Albrecht was standing directly behind the Steelers bench, just off the 50-yard line, when he was struck.

Chief says his officers followed right procedure

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Declaring, "This is Wellesley, Massachusetts, not Wellesley, Mississippi," an angry resident criticized police for pulling guns on Celtics' rookie guard Dee Brown when they mistook him for a bank robber.

About 11 residents, who were among about 100 people at meeting with town officials Monday night, called the police actions racist and demand that Brown receive an apology.

Several black residents of this wealthy suburb said Monday night that they were frequently stopped for no cause by white police officers.

"At least you should open your mind to the possibility that racism is involved," — Selwyn Cudjoe, a resident who teaches at Wellesley College.

However, Wellesley Police Chief John K. Fritts repeated his assertion that police were following procedure when they ordered Brown out of his car Friday and forced him at gunpoint to lie on the pavement.

Within a few minutes, the police determined he was not a suspect in the recent robbery of the South Shore bank, he said.

"In reviewing all the police reports and reports from witnesses, there is no evidence to conclude this was a racist incident," he said.

The Wellesley Board of Selectmen took no formal action Monday night and members asked to review police documents, including a transcript of radio dispatches, before going into executive session to discuss a resolution of the case with Brown's lawyer, Alan Margolies.

Margolies said he met earlier Monday with Barbara Shanahan, selectmen board chairwoman, Jan Volk, Celtics general manager, and the Wellesley town attorney to discuss a resolution that he refused to specify.

"The last thing he (Brown) wants is litigation," he said. At Monday night's meeting, Fritts addressed the five-person board to explain why police Friday mistook the rookie Celtics guard for a bank robbery suspect and ordered him from his car at gunpoint.

Brown, 21, has demanded an apology for the incident and has said he is reconsidering plans to buy a home in Wellesley.

Richard D. Carr, 47, of Wellesley, who is black, echoed the remarks of several Wellesley black residents claimed police have viewed them with suspicion for no reason.

"There hasn't been a year that's passed that I haven't been stopped by the police," Carr said. Fritts told selectmen that officers acted properly when they drew their guns, and would have reacted the same were a white suspect involved.

But resident Andy Cook attacked the police, saying amid much applause, "This is Wellesley, Massachusetts, not Wellesley, Mississippi."

One man defended police. Al Indrisano, 67-year-old lifetime resident of Wellesley, said he did not feel the local police had acted improperly, saying he felt blacks were well treated in the town.

Shanahan said the board "recognizes very well the seriousness of this incident. I don't want to see anyone leave this room tonight thinking it is the last word."

Some residents have launched a petition drive to apologize to Brown and to ask him to reconsider his decision not to buy a home.

"As residents of the town of Wellesley we apologize to you and your fiancée for the deplorable and insensitive treatment that you received from the Wellesley police," the petition reads.

Brown was not at Monday's meeting as he was attending an NBA rookie orientation session in Dallas, but Margolies was there on his behalf.

Margolies said the situation had "gone beyond a simple apology at this point," he said. "But I would guess if a resolution is made, it will be public."

After Monday night's meeting, Margolies said he did not hear what he wanted to hear from the board, but he would not specify what he wanted the board to do.

The Wellesley police chief Monday reiterated his offer to the NBA rookie to explain Friday's incident. The 6-foot-1, 161-pound Brown has said he was sitting in his car with his fiancée, Jill Edmondson, reading through mail when police approached him with guns drawn and ordered him to get out and lie on the ground.

Fritts said two employees of the South Shore Bank, which had been recently robbed of $1,800, called police to say someone who looked "strangely like" the bank robber was in a car across the street.

He said the dispatcher then told the shift officers that the person who had robbed the bank was outside the bank.

About 1 1/2 minutes after first approaching Dee, officers realized they had the wrong man, Fritts said.

The chief told selectmen Monday that the officers were following police procedures whereby officers draw their guns if they feel their lives are in danger.

No beer this year at Yale-Conn tilt

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The battle for college football supremacy in Connecticut will be missing something this year: the beery atmosphere that has made the Yale-Connecticut game a blast for partying students and a nightmare for some city residents.

Seeking to end "raucous and anti-social behavior" by fans at the annual matchup, officials on Monday announced that kegs of beer will be prohibited Saturday in the parking lots surrounding Yale Bowl.

"The university and the police have finally acknowledged that the situation has gotten completely out of control," — Kathleen Bober-Sorcinielli, president of the Westville Residents Association.

In recent years, the Yale-Connecticut rivalry has developed into an all-day beer bash that attracted thousands of young people to parties in lots surrounding the Yale Bowl.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mickey Rooney, who turned 70 Sunday, is deeply saddened — not by his birthday, but because he thinks the industry in which he has worked for seven decades has aged badly.

"Hollywood doesn't exist anymore," said the veteran actor who drew attention as the young star of "Strike Up the Band" and "Babes in Arms" with Judy Garland. "They don't make pictures anymore. They make deals."

Rooney said that the executives who built Hollywood — the Mayers and Zanucks — have been replaced by lawyers.

"It's very sad. No one has the intelligence or intuition to say yes anymore. But everyone has the power to say no," he said.

MELINA MERCOURI MICKEY ROONEY

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Melina Mercouri remains undeterred in her quest to return the Olympics to Greece.

The movie star-turned-politician who's running for mayor next month sounded a rallying cry for Greeks despondent over losing the 1996 Games to Atlanta.

"If I am mayor, I will seek Athens' candidacy to host the Olympics in the year 2000," she said Saturday. "I have the feeling that the whole of Europe will support us."

She made her comments after returning from Tokyo, where Atlanta beat out Athens and four other cities in the International Olympic Committee voting.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Success will depend on knowing what is going on around you. A raise or promotion improves the financial picture in November. Making a fresh start can rejuvenate a close relationship. Put practical accomplishments before anything else in early 1991. A move to another city is a distinct possibility next April. A change of lifestyle contributes to family harmony.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Beware of a fast talker who has little to offer. Use restraint and diplomacy when others oppose your ideas. A relationship needs time to mature. Wait a while before asking for a commitment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take stock of your weaknesses and strengths. Stop letting little things upset you. Recycle old ideas to supplement your income. Enrolling in high-tech courses boosts your earning power.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1990

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good news sends your spirits soaring. Contact with old friends or a former employer could reveal new career options. Your desire to be the center of attention could make you appear pushy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your creative tastes and psychological insights are important assets. Something in the mail could make you happy. Give work your best shot. Postpone daydreaming. Romance looks super!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Many of you are aware of positive, perhaps dramatic changes in the works. Romance, friendship and travel prove important to upcoming trends. Be practical and guard against overspending.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Partnerships receive a welcome boost today. Talks are constructive. Those in positions of influence are receptive to your ideas. Follow up on a stockmarket tip and you get lucky!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A tense situation comes to a head. A tactful approach can effectively quell volatile people. You feel drawn to someone you meet under unusual circumstances. Look before you leap.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A very lucky day lies ahead. Plan to take advantage of it! A friend or group may help you further your goals. Someone with outstretched hands could be irresponsible. Avoid lending money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Research, organized effort and serious thinking are required. Be diplomatic if you are interrupted. You are more open to the initiatives of others now. A romantic relationship deepens.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Playing your hunch with an investment could stir up dissension. Avoid making impulsive purchases. A romantic urge is very compelling. The rapport that you two feel is simply electric!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Banish any defeatist thoughts today. Distractions could interfere with work progress. Unexpected developments call for flexibility. Be ready to make quick decisions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You wade through a thicket of paperwork, phone calls and errands today. Talks with advisers are quite productive. A friend in a different profession offers some sage advice.

Judge: school finance law illegal

STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

The Texas school finance system remains unconstitutional despite this year's overhaul by the Legislature, a judge ruled today. Rep. Troy Fraser (R-Big Spring) called the move "a clear victory for West Texas."

State District Judge Scott McCown said the $14 billion-a-year system is still flawed. But he deferred making any immediate changes, giving the Legislature until Sept. 1, 1991 to act.

Fraser said he had expected that the current plan would not "hold up" under the scrutiny of a judge.

"All we did in Senate Bill 1 was add more money (to the system). The judge said we have basically two choices now: take money away from the large urban districts or add to the taxes." Tax increases are not likely, he said.

"I predict we'll go back and pull money from those urban districts," Fraser said. "It's the large districts like Dallas and Houston."

He said Big Spring, Coahoma and Stanton, all considered "poor" districts, could gain twice as much funding when a new plan is passed next year.

The judge said the finance system doesn't give all schools "substantially equal" access to state aid money.

"In short, what the rich districts spend creates educational opportunities for their children that are denied the children of poor districts. Under Senate Bill 1 (the reform plan), the rich districts are left rich, the poor districts poor."

McCown said.

"The legislature did not have the courage to do what was right on this," Fraser said, adding that he had voted against the plan three times. He said he voted for the bill only when urged to do so by superintendents in his district.

When he goes back to Austin in January, Fraser said, he will refile a plan he had submitted during the past legislative session. It not only increases funding to poor districts, it protects budget-balanced districts like Forsan, Borden County and Garden City from losses, he said.

Fraser added that he plans to request a spot on the Education Committee for the next session.

Kevin O'Hanlon, a lawyer for the Texas Education Agency, said the state would appeal the ruling.

O'Hanlon said the 52-page decision didn't give state officials enough direction on how to fix the system.

"He held it unconstitutional because it wasn't good enough, but he didn't give us a heck of a lot of guidance on what would be good enough," said O'Hanlon, a former assistant attorney general.

He said that unless the courts tell the state how to make a constitutional system, the litigation could last for years.

Rick Gray, a lawyer for poor school districts which challenged the school funding system, applauded the ruling. He said McCown did "a very exhaustive, thorough analysis."

"We think it's a great day for all school children and we hope the Legislature will set about the task of fixing the system in the future."

The new school finance plan was adopted in June by the Legislature after four special sessions.

Lawmakers added $528 million for public schools in 1990-91 and made numerous changes backers said would improve education.

But poor school districts challenged the new funding plan. They argued that it is no different from the old system that was scrapped by the Texas Supreme Court on a 9-0 vote. The high court ordered the state to even out funding to rich and poor school districts.

State Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston, a member of the House

UTPB will host Special Olympics

ODESSA — Athletes from the surrounding towns of Abilene, Big Spring, Midland and Sweetwater will be in Odessa Sept. 29, for the Special Olympics Area 18 Softball Tournament.

This event is co-sponsored by Southwestern Bell Odessa Community relations Team and the Odessa Parks and Recreation Department.

Over 200 athletes are expected to participate in the tournament.

Opening ceremonies will begin at 11:30 a.m., at the University of Texas at Permian Basin Baseball Complex. For additional information, call Diana Ray, 367-6962.

Books to be sent to troops in Gulf

A local branch of the National Guard will hold a drive to collect books to be sent to troops in the Middle East.

The drive will take place at Wal-Mart in Big Spring Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Books need to be in good condition. Paperbacks, hardbacks, magazines, crossword puzzles and playing cards are all acceptable for the drive.

Donors will get a yellow ribbon showing support for the people involved in Operation Desert Shield.

The drive is sponsored by Battery A, Third/132nd Field Artillery, Texas Army National Guard, Big Spring.

Metro area alarmed over pet slayings

DALLAS (AP) — Less than two weeks after a Fort Worth man was fined $2,000 for killing a poodle with a bow and arrow, two Dallas cat owners have reported their pets have been wounded by archers.

Napoleon, a 2-year-old cat owned by Karen Van Cleave of Dallas, was shot in the face with an arrow Thursday. The arrow entered the cat's left eye and lodged in its jaw, police said.

The injured eye had to be removed by a veterinarian. Glynn Broussard of northeast Dallas reported Saturday that one of his cats' legs had been pierced by an arrow. A veterinarian extracted the arrow, Broussard said.

It wasn't known whether the cases are related.

On Sept. 10, Gary Roll of Fort Worth was sentenced to one year's probation, fined $2,000 and required to perform 150 hours of community service with the Tarrant County Humane Society after being convicted of cruelty to animals.

Roll admitted fatally shooting an 11-year-old poodle named Taffey with a bow and arrow. He said the dog was rooting through his garbage.

Congress facing spending deadline

By ALAN FRAM

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON — Democratic leaders were pressing an effort today to delay $85 billion in imminent spending cuts while the White House said it would rather "negotiate into the night" than accept a delay.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration had not budged in its opposition to a stopgap plan to put off the spending cuts until Oct. 20 to give budget negotiators more breathing room.

The plan is being pushed by House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., and other Democratic leaders. The White House has threatened a veto if Congress accepts the plan.

The House Appropriations Committee planned to vote on the measure today, just six days before the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law triggers the automatic cuts caused by the yearlong budget stalemate between President Bush and Congress.

"Our position has not changed with respect to a veto threat," Fitzwater said.

He said the administration still hoped an agreement was within reach that could prevent cuts from taking place Oct. 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

The cuts — called a "sequester" — will take place unless the targets of the Gramm-Rudman law are modified or delayed and will mean across-the-board reductions of up to 40 percent throughout the government.

"We want to avoid a sequester. We are willing to negotiate into the night," Fitzwater said.

He was asked about reports that one immediate impact of the spending cuts would be the cancellation beginning Monday of all U.S. commercial flights after 6 p.m.

The flights would be cancelled because of sharp cutbacks in air traffic controllers and in evening operation of U.S. weather forecasting stations.

"We're concerned about it, just like we're concerned about all the cuts," Fitzwater said. "But if you think this seems draconian, you ain't seen nothing yet. You're going to see a lot more dramatic and difficult things to deal with than night flights."

Negotiators from the two sides met in a back room of the Capitol until nearly 12:30 a.m. today, emerging to say they were still searching for a deal.

"We're making progress in cutting spending, but we're not quite there," White House chief of staff John Sununu told reporters.

The major sticking point to a five-year, $500 billion deficit-reduction deal has been over whether to slash the tax rate on capital gains, the profits from the sale of investments. Bush says the reduction would boost the economy. Democrats, insisting the break would aid the wealthy, have refused to accept it without a compensating tax increase on upper-

Bank announces retirement, promotion

By Marsha Sturdivant
Staff Writer

The Stanton National Bank has announced the retirement of E.P. Kolly and the promotion of Mary Belle Keaton.

In July 1988 Kolly came out of retirement to become vice-president for Stanton National Bank. He retired again Friday, Sept. 14, to return to his home in Abilene, according to bank president Joe Hodges.

Hodges had worked with Kolly since the 1950s, and when Hodges needed help at the Stanton National Bank, he called upon his old friend, he said.

"I told him he'd been fishing too much," Hodges said. Kolly retired in 1987 as president of the Security State Bank in Abilene. "We have not replaced him yet, but we do intend to find the proper person."

Mary Belle Keaton, Kolly's secretary, has been promoted to assistant vice-president. Keaton, who has been with the bank since 1988, will be assigned many of Kolly's duties.

"It's not our intention for her to take his place, but she has been his secretary and knows his work,"

"It's not our intention for her to take his place, but she has been his secretary and knows his work," Hodges said about Mary Belle Keaton. "She knows his customers, and knows the farmers here better than I do, better than he did. She's grown up in the area, and she's worked here all of her life. She knows everybody. Mary Belle is a Stanton Belle."

Hodges said about Keaton.

"She knows his customers, and knows the farmers here better than I do, better than he did. She's grown up in the area, and she's worked here all of her life. She knows everybody. Mary Belle is a Stanton Belle."

"Her background is ideal for the job. Because of her experience, we hired her knowing she had officer potential," Hodges said.

Keaton began working in the agricultural lending field two years after she graduated from Stanton High School in 1951. She became secretary-treasurer for the Midland Production Credit Association, commuting to Midland until 1958, when the company became the Western Production Credit Association, moving its offices to Stanton.

She worked for that firm until 1988, when the company relocated to Snyder and became the Texas Production Credit Association. Keaton, not wanting to move to Snyder, resigned and went to work for the Stanton National Bank that same year.

"All these years she's worked in the area of agricultural lending and finance, and that is the major portion of our business. Now the assistant vice presidency brings her into the officers staff," Hodges said, adding that the Board of Directors voted approval for Keaton's promotion, effective immediately.

In addition to her secretarial duties, Keaton will also take over the duties of assistant vice president, and Hodges said when practical, she will take care of the needs of Kolly's customers.

Hodges said this promotion was a complete surprise to Mary Belle.

"I just fell right into it," Keaton said, laughing. She added that she didn't know the bank's directors were even considering her for promotion.

"I'm pleased to make use of my previous years of experience in the agricultural lending field and with the area farmers," Keaton said of her 35 years working with farm and ranch finances.

Keaton is a member of the First Baptist Church in Stanton, includes gardening, china painting and reading as her hobbies. She and her husband of 34 years, Don Keaton, who retired from Mobile Oil and now works as an independent contract pumper, have no children or pets.

"We're always busy and involved with community activities," she said.

Keaton is one of the trustees to the Millhollon Educational Trust Fund in Stanton.

Soviet: War any moment

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze today said that war could break out in the Persian Gulf at any moment, and called Iraq's invasion of Kuwait an "act of terrorism."

In a speech prepared for delivery to the General Assembly, Shevardnadze referred to Aug. 2, the date of the invasion, as "Black Thursday."

"Iraq flagrantly violated the United Nations Charter, the principles of international law, the universally recognized norms of morality and the standards of civilized behavior," the minister said in his prepared text.

Shevardnadze spoke on the second day of the General Assembly session. On Monday, leaders from France, Iran, Brazil, Argentina, Poland and Indonesia condemned Iraq for invading Kuwait and demanded an immediate pullout.

The Soviet foreign minister hinted at the possibility of a United Nations military operation in the gulf region, noting that "the United Nations has the power to suppress acts of aggression."

"There is ample evidence that this right can be exercised," he said. But such a step should come only after all peaceful, non-military forms of pressure have been applied, he said.

Up until the invasion, the Soviet Union was Iraq's strongest ally. But the Soviets have firmly sided with the U.S.-led effort to isolate and pressure the Baghdad government. The Soviets have said they might be willing to participate in a U.N. military effort in the gulf provided that the Soviets share command.

Public Education Committee, blamed Gov. Bill Clements for blocking an alternative finance plan that poor school districts would have accepted. Clements killed that proposal by vetoing the taxes needed to pay for it.
 "It's entirely because of Gov. Clements' foot-dragging and the Republican legislators who upheld his veto that we're back in the court again, and we're literally about to turn over the keys of the schoolroom to the courts," Colbert said.

Clements wasn't immediately available for comment, said Sheila Allee, deputy press secretary to the Republican governor.
 McCown allowed the school finance system to remain in place this school year. But he retains jurisdiction over the case.
 The judge said that if the Legislature fails to devise a constitutional school finance plan by next September, he would consider stopping the spending of state and local tax money, or ordering how the state should spend school funds.

Group challenges dictionary

By TAMARA STARKS
 Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — A definition of sexual intercourse has landed Webster's Dictionary among such banned and challenged books in the United States as the Bible, "The Grapes of Wrath" and "Hamlet," a library group says.

As part of its ninth annual Banned Books Week, the American Library Association has released a list of censored books and their authors, ranging from Dr. Seuss to Stephen King.

"We need to bring to the attention of the American public the fact that our First Amendment rights are under attack," said Judith Krug, director of the association's Office for Intellectual Freedom.

More than 1,000 attempts to challenge or ban books were reported to the 51,000-member American Library Association in the year up to May, Krug said.

Webster's Dictionary was challenged in the Upper Pittsgrove Township, N.J., school district by parents who objected to its definition of sexual intercourse as "the sexual joining of two individuals," said Paul Whitman, secretary of the school board.

Webster's 1986 edition was removed from fourth- and fifth-grade classrooms last fall but is still used in upper levels, Whitman said.

A year ago, "The Lorax" by Dr. Seuss was challenged in a Laytonville, Calif., school district. Parents working for a local logging company said the children's book offered a negative portrayal of the industry.

The book remained on the second grade's required reading list until teachers decided to put it on an optional list in the spring, said Superintendent Brian Buckley.

Stephen King's "The Stand" was restricted to ninth-grade students with parental consent at a Beaver-ton, Ore., school after parents raised objections to violence and sexual language.

Another King novel, "Christine," was removed from library shelves at a Connecticut district after a parent complained about offensive passages.

Banned Books Week, which runs through Saturday, is "a celebration of our freedom to read," Krug said.

"We've proven time and time again that censorship dies in the light of day," Krug said.

Krug said she advises librarians and teachers to set specific policies on censorship, but professionals aren't the only ones who can get involved. Anyone who attends school board meetings or writes letters to newspapers can have an effect.

"As individual citizens we have to stand up and be counted," Krug said.

Budget

income people.

The seemingly endless negotiations have left the government staring at the onset of the new fiscal year Monday with no budget, spending bills or other fiscal legislation in place.

"It's a game of chicken, that's all it is," said Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., who was a negotiator since May, until top congressional leaders took over last week.

To prevent a complete government shutdown, the Democrats, who control Congress, planned to begin working on a bill that would finance the government through Oct. 20. The date was chosen to give budget bargainers a chance to work out a pact and enact it into law.

"If you get into the business of suspending and suspending and suspending... we'll be at it for 114 years," said budget director Richard Darman.

The same legislation is expected to provide about $2 billion toward the expenses of Operation Desert Shield, the U.S. military deployment in the Middle East.

Unless some combination of tax increases and spending cuts is found, the fiscal 1991 deficit is expected to exceed a record $250 billion in a budget of about $1.2 trillion.

Limos run during conservation appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — While budget negotiators burned the midnight oil, idling Bush administration limousines burned gasoline — despite the president's pleas to the country to conserve energy.

The limousines, waiting to take White House Chief of Staff John Sununu and budget chief Richard Darman from the Capitol after the nearly four-hour session broke up past midnight this morning, were parked — their engines running for at least a large part of the meeting.

Darman had arrived on Capitol Hill at about 8:30 p.m., while Sununu appeared about a half-hour later. The two men departed shortly before 12:30 a.m., Darman in a Lincoln Towncar and Sununu in a Chrysler New Yorker.

Spot checks at about 11 p.m. and again at 12:15 a.m. revealed that both vehicles, parked on Capitol grounds, were idling. Drivers lounged in each car, apparently with heaters running to break the chill of the fall night.

A third automobile, a Lincoln Towncar used by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, was not running.

Bush has made occasional calls for energy conservation in light of the Persian Gulf crisis. He was criticized for repeatedly using a gasoline-guzzling motorboat during his August vacation in Kennebunkport, Me.

Suspect being held in Detroit for charge of embezzlement

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
 Staff Writer

Anthony "Tony" Ginetti, 42, accused of defrauding the Coahoma State Bank of $260,000, was arrested in Detroit, Mich., Sept. 21 and charged with embezzlement, two counts of fraud and escape.

He is currently being held without bail, reported a spokesperson with the Wayne County Sheriff's Department in Detroit.

District court records in Howard County list seven Nov. 12, 1985, felony theft indictments involving amounts over $20,000 each on Ginetti in connection with incidents in 1982-84. The indictment amounts total a quarter of a million dollars, according to a Sept. 9, 1985, Big Spring Herald story.

But Howard County complaints list $410,000 swindled from the bank and individuals in a car title fraud scheme. Ginetti, who owned and operated Car City Auto Sales at 1506 Marcy, left Big Spring in April 1984, about two weeks before county warrants were issued for his arrest.

The Howard County Sheriff's Department was contacted about Ginetti's arrest late last week, said Sheriff Deputy George Quintero. "They wanted to know if he was wanted by this department," he said.

Texas Ranger Charles Brune, Sinton, who handled the Ginetti investigation, said he is not sure when Ginetti will be extradited to Texas. He said he will travel to Detroit next week when a federal hearing will be conducted. Quintero said an FBI official from Abilene will also travel to Detroit next week.

District Attorney Rick Hamby said he could not predict when or if Ginetti would be prosecuted in Howard County. "We don't know where we are on the pecking order," he said.

Asked how many other charges in the country are pending against Ginetti, Brune said, "I'll say numerous." The FBI in Dallas was checking on information this morning, and FBI officials in Abilene could not be reached.

According to the 1985 Herald account, Ginetti's picture was circulated by the Governor's office with the name "Terry Lee Prero" in connection with the state's most wanted fugitive list. Brune did not confirm or deny whether Prero is a real name or an alias.

Aliases used by Prero, a habitual gambler, included Terry Argus and Tony Culpert, according to the newspaper story. He was wanted for theft, making false statements to a bank, flight to avoid prosecution and theft of a rented car. In addition, he is wanted on a Swisher County warrant in connection with a bad check written to a Tulsa car dealer for a Corvette.

Quintero said Ginetti was working in a Detroit bar under the assumed name of Gregg Colie when he was arrested on other charges and his fingerprints sent to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. When prints were matched, it was found that he was wanted on charges pending in other parts of the country.

Nestor's notes

Nominations for the local ASC committee are being sought from area farmers.

"Farmers are asked to nominate candidates of their choice by October 29 to be the local ASC county committee ballot," said Nestor Hernandez, County Executive Director of the local ASCS.

The local ASC county committee elections will be conducted by mail from November 23 to December 3.

ASC committees are responsible for managing federal farm programs on the local level, to meet the needs of the individual producers. ASC committee members must be concerned and responsible for individuals, according to Hernandez.

Local farmers have the opportunity to nominate people they feel would best serve the farm community.

In order to be valid, petitions must be limited to one nominee, must include written certification the nominee, if elected, is willing to serve, must be signed by at least three eligible farm votes in the ASC community, and must be received in the local county ASCS office by the October 29 deadline.

Farmers may circulate or sign nominating petitions for as many candidates as they choose. Anyone wishing to nominate a farmer for the ASC committee election should contact the county ASCS office for full details, including eligibility requirements for office holders.

"Farmers should petition for and elect those individuals they feel would do a good job as a member of the ASC committee. The election of concerned farmers to positions on ASC committees is essential in the administration of farm programs," Hernandez said.

Hernandez explained that the county ASCS office welcomes all valid petitions. The opportunity to nominate, vote, and be elected to office is guaranteed to all farmers regardless of race, color, religion, sex, age, marital status, handicap, or national origin.

Mideast

The Soviet foreign minister termed Iraq's actions a "major affront to mankind" and added: "Unless we find a way to respond to it and cope with the situation, our civilization will be thrown back by half a century."

"War may break out on the gulf region any day, any moment," he said. "An act of terrorism has been perpetrated against the emerging new world order."

Later today, Shevardnadze was to preside over a special meeting of the Security Council attended by up to 12 foreign ministers. The session is expected to end with passage of a resolution extending to air corridors the U.N.-ordered embargo on trade with Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III is expected to fill the U.S. seat in the 15-member council.

On Monday, after Shevardnadze and British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd held a two-hour private meeting, reporters asked if the air embargo would be approved. "I hope so," said Hurd.

Shevardnadze nodded confidently. He said through a translator: "We want action. There is no other way."

"It is a fairly balanced draft that takes care of the safety of air flights, but at the same time, continues the idea of sanctions until Iraq agrees to withdraw from Kuwait," said Soviet Ambassador Yuli Vorontsov, president of the Security Council.

The air embargo would ask all nations to bar flights to and from Iraq, but it would not authorize shooting down airplanes.

On Monday, the council adopted a brief resolution calling for aid to nations suffering economic hardship from loss of trade with Iraq.

Every speaker who strode to the rostrum of the General Assembly on Monday denounced Iraq for its Aug. 2 seizure of Kuwait. In his address, French President Francois Mitterrand declared: "Kuwait is a sovereign state, a member of the international community. In the name of what can one decide that this state has ceased to exist?"

The Iraqi U.N. Ambassador, Abdul Amir Al-Anbari, listened impassively at his seat. Iraq's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, stayed away after U.S. officials barred him from coming on a special Iraqi flight.

Iran's foreign minister, Ali Akbar Velayati, told the gathering that his government would obey all Security Council sanctions and embargoes targeting Iraq. However, a security and oil industry sources have said Iran has agreed to provide "humanitarian" food and medicine shipments across the common border with Iraq in return for 200,000 barrels of refined oil a day.

College board approves hiring five new employees

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
 Staff Writer

The Howard County Junior College District board of trustees accepted two resignations and approved the hiring of five new employees at their regular meeting Monday.

Resignations were accepted from Bill Coleman, computer specialist at Howard College; and Doug Pounds, instructor at the Big Spring Federal Correctional Institution. College President Bob Riley said the computer position vacancy is being advertised.

Joseph Gallegos was approved to replace Pounds as electrical cable fabrication instructor at the FCI.

Ellen Phillips was approved for the new position of real estate instructor at the FCI.

Jennifer Symes was hired as full-time dental hygiene instructor at Howard College. Riley said the position was added to take the place of several part-time slots and was needed with the addition of six new students.

Vanessa Hull was hired as a chemistry instructor at Howard College. She replaces Gary Sims, recently appointed to the new position of associate vice president for instruction.

Mildred Mead was approved to take a position at the licensed vocational nursing program in Fredericksburg.

In other business, trustees accepted a delinquent tax collection agreement with the county. The agreement allows Attorneys Bancroft & Mouton of Big Spring to continue to supervise collection.

Two college vehicles are to be ordered: a minivan from Pollard Chevrolet in Big Spring, and a pickup truck from Toliver Chevrolet in Sweetwater.

In his President's Report, Riley said the fall enrollment of 2,736 has far exceeded estimations. He compared the number with the amount registered during 1988, the last base funding year. At that time, there were 1,540 students registered, he said.

The dorms are 99 percent complete at this time, Riley said. The trustees plan to make a tour through the facility after the next meeting, Oct. 22.

Dean of Students Dusty Johnston said that after some shifting, the men's dorms are 98 percent full and the women's are 85 percent full. He said the new sections of both were filled first.

Riley announced that the college will participate in Project Oasis (sending a note with a 12-pack of Coca-Cola to troops in Middle East) by offering the Cokes for sale to students and staff. A table will be set up in the foyer of the student union building Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. for the sales.

Ron Brasel, administrator at Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf, said the school had participated in the project last week.

Riley briefly announced that the Miss Howard College and Miss SWCID pageant will take place Oct. 16. He also mentioned that the college will have a "Fall Fit" fitness competition at Homecoming this year.

Two one-act play productions will take place Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. The shows are "Juvie" and "A Game." The curtain goes up at 8 p.m. each night and tickets are $4 for adults and $3 for students and senior citizens.
