Ivie selected to receive award

Big Springer Owen Ivie will be honored as one of three "Outstanding West Texans" at the regional council meeting of the Texas Chamber of Commerce Oct. 31.

Ivie, manager of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, was chosen for the honor for his "years of achievement and leadership in the development of water supplies in West Texas," according to a press release.

"It's wonderful," Ivie said of the award. "It's quite an honor. It will be good publicity for our city as well, and definitely for the CRMWD."

Ivie was nominated for the honor by CRMWD President John Taylor, with seconding letters from Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas and San Angelo City Manager Stephen Brown.

Ivie, also president of the Moore Development for Big Spring board, is a member of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers, the American Society of Professional Engineers, the American Water Works Association, the Governor's Water Task Force and the National Conference on Rivers and Harbors.

Views to be aired at candidate forum

A public forum will allow Howard County candidates to express their views and answer questions, an organizer said.

Bob Coltrane, of Leadership Big Spring Alumni, said all opposed and unopposed Howard County candidates have been invited to attend the event, Thursday, Oct. 25 in the East Room of the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum at 7 p.m.

The forum will also be carried live by radio station KBST.

Coltrane said he encourages people to "come out and ask questions, anything they want to know." The forum will be moderated by Sonny Choate.

The general format of the event will be: introduction of each candidate, a brief statement, and a question and answer session.

Candidates who are elected will be honored at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce community luncheon Nov. 7, Coltrane said.

"This will be a good time to find out where the candidates stand on certain issues," he said. "In some of these areas there may be some interesting questions that come up."

The event is sponsored by the Leadership Big Spring Alumni Town Hall Committee.

Space available for downtown market

Booth space is now available for the Trash and Treasures market scheduled to take place Dec. 1 and 2. It will be the second such event in downtown Big Spring.

Negotiators narrow budget differences

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Budget negotiators are ready to boost gasoline taxes by at least a nickel a gallon and are narrowing differences over new taxes for the rich and cuts in Medicare benefits.

After a weekend of dickering, that featured a well-timed walkout by an unusually talkative White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, a final agreement on a $250-billion assortment of tax hikes and spending cuts remained elusive.

"It's a very difficult negotiation," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said as talks among congressional leaders ended late Sunday. "Our problem is trying to put something together that passes both houses."

Lawmakers planned to resume their search today for a compromise package that would satisfy President Bush and allow Congress to go home for the year by week's end.

Narrowing one important dispute, Democrats agreed to accept a nickel increase in the 9-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax, two cents less than Republicans wanted. The Senate, last week, approved a nine-cent boost, but the House insisted on no change.

Divisions remained over how much new taxes the rich should pay. The two sides seemed to be nearing an understanding — amazing progress considering Bush's opposition to any tax increases just a few months ago.

Both sides were willing to boost the marginal rate on the wealthiest Americans — families with incomes above $180,000 a year — to 31 percent, up from the current 28 percent. And each party was willing to limit the deductions that people earning more than $100,000 can claim.

A big gap existed over a Democratic demand to levy an additional 7.5 percent surtax on those with incomes above $1 million. Republicans said they would not accept the plan, and instead offered a proposal — rejected by Democrats — to reduce deductions on incomes above $1 million by 8 percent.

In addition, Republicans wanted to lower from 33 percent to 31 percent the tax rate on families with incomes between $80,000 to $180,000. Democrats opposed the idea.

Negotiators also moved closer to each other on Medicare. Democrats would restrain the Campaign spending compared

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

Republicans, in the four Howard County contested races, have collected 62 percent more in contributions and spent 6 percent more — minus candidate filing fees — than their Democratic counterparts.

They have four times as many contributors giving over $50, but the Democrats averaged slightly larger contributions over $50, according to campaign reports filed with the county clerk's office. The next filing period ends eight days before the Nov. 6 election.

The figures for the county judge, commissioners for precincts 2 and 4 and district clerk races include donations and expenditures from the party primary races, in which all of the Republicans ran uncontested while the Democrats, except for the district clerk candidate, had opponents. The two Democratic commissioner candidates also had runoff opponents.

A total of $7,769.55 in contributions have been collected by the Republicans, while the Clinic plans restoration, improved patient services

Hall-Bennett Clinic is 60 years old this year, and the administration has big plans to celebrate.

Administrator Joe Bowman and the board of directors of the non-profit clinic plan to improve patient services, restore the physical appearance and bring in more doctors.

A study recently found that, despite the hopes of many, a campaign to reopen the facility as a full-service medical center was not feasible at this time.

Bowman said the news did not discourage clinic officials, who immediately set out to devise an alternate plan. It includes the establishment of an ambulatory surgery center with five to ten beds for day surgery and short recovery periods.

He said the clinic's future is "looking up."

"Before July, we were losing $5,000 a month," Bowman said. "Now we're doing fine. We're

Contract decision postponed

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

An ambulance company supervisor told Howard County Commissioners this morning that they would like to see the county's subsidy share of the city-county service increase from 43 percent to 45 percent.

Some commissioners have said in the past that they are concerned about paying 45 percent of the subsidy to American Medical Transport. At their meeting this morning, commissioners postponed a decision on the contract pending a recommendation from Steve Stone, the county's representative on the city-county ambulance board.

"We want to see if this rate increase is justified or try to decide if this rate increase is justified," said Precinct 3 Commissioner Bill Crooker.

Figures compiled in July by County Judge John Coffee, show that from July 1989 to June, only 11 percent of ambulance runs in the county were outside of city limits. In September, Coffee asked AMT for a financial report and later clarified his request, saying he wanted to know about the national company's services in Howard County.

Stone received that financial report on Friday afternoon. "He hasn't had a chance to look it over," Coffee said. "At this point I don't think we can make a decision."

AMT Supervisor Brenda Whatley responded, "What I would like to do is just give you what I'm looking for."

Her proposal calls for a one-year contract increasing the 1989-90 subsidy of $50,916 by $3,565.10. With that contract, which ended in July and is now continuing on an optional monthly basis, the county paid 43 percent of the total county-city subsidy, she said. The increase would bring the county share to 45 percent compared to the most recent proposal to city officials.

"That was what the original contract was," Whatley said of the 45-55 percent breakdown. The increase is "not quite $2 per capita per person annually," she said.

Commenting on the 45-55 percent breakdown at a Sept. 10 meeting, Crooker said, "I think we should be paying a lot lower than that."

Whatley said a five-year contract between AMT and the city, approved Sept. 18 by the City Council, has still not been signed. If the contract, which calls for annual increases not to exceed 5 percent, is signed, then they would consider separate contracts for the county and city.

The American dream: one couple's nightmare

Michelle Reed, left, holds her new daughter as the rest of the family looks on. Sitting next to her is husband Dan, with sons Toby, top, and Mikie.

By LYNN HAYES
Lifestyle Editor

They left their home in search of the American dream.

But Dan and Michelle Reed's dream became a nightmare when their plans literally fell apart.

The Reeds, and their two young children, left Norman, Okla., Monday enroute to California to look for work.

Leaving home with only the bare essentials and $450 in cash, the Reeds were sure they were headed for a better life. However, their car broke down twice and their funds dwindled to almost nothing after paying for repairs.

"We never thought it would be this hard. Right off the bat the car started breaking down before we got out of Oklahoma," Dan explained.

With no money in their pockets, they traveled as far as Big Spring where they stopped Thursday to find shelter. Michelle, who was already 16 days overdue in her pregnancy, was showing signs of labor.

"Her back was hurting so bad from riding in the car. We had to stop so she could rest," Dan explained.

Realizing they needed money to buy food and pay for a motel room, Dan said he began looking through the Yellow Pages and called the painting and construction companies.

"The only one who acted like he cared was Jack Cathey. He treated me just like a man. He didn't look down his nose at me. He's a wonderful man," Dan said.

Cathey offered Dan a job, but Dan said he declined because he couldn't wait two weeks for a paycheck.

"We need money now and I didn't want to ask for an advance," Dan explained. "Jack didn't stop trying to help. He stayed on the phone trying to find me some work."

To raise money quickly, the Reeds decided to stand in front of a local store holding a sign that read "Pregnant. Will work for food." Dan said he was apprehensive about the sign because he feared the authorities would take their children from them.

"We were afraid to make the sign. We were afraid if the police or somebody saw it they might take our kids away. But we knew we needed food and money. Our life means nothing without our children," Dan said. "... We wrote on the sign with Toby's crayons from school," Dan said. "Michelle held the sign most of the time because nobody really paid attention when I held it."

Already in early labor, Michelle stood at the store's parking lot entrance holding the sign, hoping someone would come to their aid. Dan stayed in the car with the two children.

Dan said several people stopped to offer assistance, including a minister who gave them a $15 gas voucher.

"Everyone's been so good to us. I want to thank them for what they've done for my family. It tears my heart out to take money from these people. It's not their responsibility to take care of my family — it's mine," Dan said.

The Reeds called some local churches and the Salvation Army to ask for assistance.

"Everyone was so nice. I mean it. They helped as much as they could. And I'll always be grateful for that," Dan said.

They declined the Salvation Army's offer to spend the night because they didn't want to be separated.

"We're a family and we want to always be together. I explained it to them and they said they understood. They did tell us to come eat though."

Dan said he doesn't like the idea of taking handouts, but said

Parents 'shelling' out the money

DALLAS (AP) — Gone are the days of homemade Halloween costumes. This year, trick-or-treaters of all ages are shelling out between $38.95 and $1,000 for Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles costumes.

"There's only one company that's licensed through the copyright owners to sell the costumes. They're in a little town called Collegeville, Pa., and they're sold out. They have back orders to November," said Jerry Moore, retail sales manager for a Dallas costume store. "I know there's already a black market for Ninja Turtle costumes."

Johnny Trevino, who helps manage a costume store which he calls the Neiman-Marcus of costume shops, has high quality outfits similar to the copyrighted costume. But Trevino's costumes sell for $1,000 and may be rented for $100.

Clients don't mind shelling out the big bucks for the Costume World costumes, Trevino says.

Day care worker given probation

HOUSTON (AP) — A former day care center employee who spiked an infant's formula with rubbing alcohol because she was angry at co-workers has been sentenced to 10 years probation.

Patricia Ann Escareno, 21, pleaded guilty to injury to a child in connection with the April 24 incident and was sentenced Friday by State District Judge Mike Wilkinson. She also received a $5,000 fine.

The 4-month-old boy who drank the formula was hospitalized at the time, but authorities said he suffered no lasting effects because he vomited the concoction.

Assistant District Attorney Carol Davies said authorities believe Ms. Escareno was angered at the boy's mother and her co-worker at Chuckles & Grins day care center, Dawn White Lewis.

Fisheries service to hold hearings

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Proposed regulations that would make feed-the-dolphin tours against federal law will be discussed when the National Marine Fisheries Service holds a public hearing tonight.

The hearing will be held at the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center.

The Marine Mammal Commission has said that wild dolphin-feeding programs such as the one operated at Corpus Christi Beach by Erv Strong and his wife, Sonja, could adversely affect the dolphins.

Strong says that he cannot understand why officials are concerned about programs that feed the dolphins in their natural surroundings can be declared illegal while the fisheries service continues to allow water amusement parks to capture and hold dolphins in captivity and train them to perform for audiences.

Exotic animals popular

LUBBOCK (AP) — Some West Texans have taken to lion cubs and baby pythons instead of the usual puppies and kittens, but a wildlife official says this new breed of pet owner is in for trouble.

"You're dealing with a wild animal and while it's real cute, especially when it's young, there's been too many cases of them reverting back," said John Rische, a staff lieutenant with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. "That's the reason I really discourage it."

But Lubbock resident Gene Light says he understands the risk. Light bought a baby Bengal tiger. He says he intends to breed it, and sell the offspring to interested buyers.

"They're just neat animals," said Light. "They really make good pets."

Julio Franco, Texas Rangers second baseman, took his baby Bengal to the ballpark this summer, delighting fans who came out early to watch batting practice.

Tigers make good pets because they love to roll around and play fight with their owners, just as they would with other tigers in the wild, Light said.

However, he says he realizes that playing with a tiger cub is different from playing with a full-grown tiger.

"It's not that they're going to turn any meaner, it's just that they get so powerful," Light said.

And that's why Light's pet, named Holly Hobbes, will eventually be confined to a double-fenced pen designed to keep her in and curious neighborhood children out.

Of course pets like Light's tiger, or the 11-foot-long Burmese pythons that John Hamilton owns, hardly go unnoticed by neighbors accustomed to more traditional pets.

But critics say too many people never realize that the cute tiger cub or baby wolf they cuddle today can grow to be a large, ill-tempered animal that requires special attention.

That's why state law requires exotic pet owners to get a permit for their animals.

Lubbock, unlike the state, requires exotic animal owners to have a $300,000 insurance policy.

Cisneros drops smear charge on Williams

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams and Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland worked together to smear Democrat Ann Richards by accusing her of using cocaine 13 years ago, former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros says.

"I took Harlon Copeland to be willing to put his hands into the cesspool of filthy politics," Cisneros said Sunday. "What this says about Clayton Williams is that he is willing to let one of his partisans set in motion the lowest kind of campaign tactics. It has been characteristic of the Williams style to let third-party persons do the dirty work."

Cisneros, co-chairman of the Richards for Governor campaign, made the remarks following

"(Copeland) decided by some stretch of logic that it was within his responsibility to investigate a matter that allegedly occurred in 1977 — 13 years ago, in Dallas 250 miles away — and that justified sending an investigator to Santa Fe, N.M.. Then he would have us believe that there is no political motive, that he is just doing his job in Bexar County." — Henry Cisneros.

Industry survey finds optimism

DALLAS (AP) — Oil prices should drop after the Persian Gulf crisis ends, but probably will still wind up higher than they were before the invasion of Kuwait, says a survey of independent oil executives.

The survey, released Sunday, also indicates independent producers are not changing their plans based on current oil prices.

Two-thirds of the 203 executives responding to The Roper Organization survey said they were "somewhat optimistic" about the long-term future of the petroleum industry, while another 20 percent said they were "very optimistic."

Seventy-three percent of the executives said the Gulf crisis will result in a permanent increase in the price consumers pay for oil; 94 percent said the crisis will spur interest in non-oil energy sources; and 97 percent said the demand for domestically abundant natural gas will increase because of the higher oil prices.

While 80 percent said the crisis would increase North American energy insecurity, 66 percent of the executives said the conflict will not result in decreased use of oil from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cartel.

Nevertheless, the executives said the crisis hasn't changed their plans:

—71 percent said they have not increased production since Aug. 2, when Iraq invaded Kuwait and 73 percent said they had not increased capital spending.

—80 percent said they have not changed strategic planning since the invasion.

"The survey shows that though people are optimistic, they haven't changed their strategy because of what's happened in the Middle East," said Grant Porter, a managing director of Lehman Brothers, which sponsored the survey along with the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

"What the industry needs right now is stability," Porter said. "They are not making planning decisions based on $40 a barrel oil. They may enjoy the cash flow, but they're not making plans."

Asked where they thought the price of oil would stabilize once the crisis ends, 38 percent said it would settle at $25 a barrel, and 30 percent said it would return to between $21 and $24 a barrel. A barrel holds 42 gallons of oil.

On Friday, the near-term contract for light sweet crude, the benchmark U.S. grade, fell to $33.79 a barrel, down $3.01 from Thursday and $5.81 from a week ago.

The price, which hit a record $41 a barrel earlier this month, was less than $20 in July, the month before the invasion.

incident did not occur."

"Most troublesome is the readiness of the Williams campaign to compromise a legitimate law enforcement office for political purposes in a manner that abuses the public trust so essential to the administration of law and jurisprudence," Cisneros said at a news conference held at Richards' local campaign headquarters.

"He had decided by some stretch of logic that it was within his responsibility to investigate a matter that allegedly occurred in 1977 — 13 years ago, in Dallas 250 miles away — and that justified sending an investigator to Santa Fe, N.M.," Cisneros said. "Then he would have us believe that there is no political motive, that he is just doing his job in Bexar County."

Scientist collars barking problem

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — People are calling Jon Hunter at all hours to complain about barking dogs — their own barking dogs.

Hunter, an associated professor of veterinary physiology and pharmacology at Texas A&M, has developed a high-tech dog collar he says can silence chronic barkers with a high-frequency beep.

"It's not an electric shock collar. It will not hurt the dog," Hunter said.

The device needs fine-tuning and its effectiveness is uncertain, he said. But the principle is simple.

When the dog barks, a miniature microphone in the collar emits a burst of high-intensity sound, startling the animal into silence. The sound is inaudible to most humans.

"It will not be so effective that it will stop dogs from barking completely," Hunter said. "Many people want their dogs to bark in order to warn them of intruders."

Negotiators reach clean air accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional negotiators reached a tentative agreement today on a wide-ranging clean air bill that will require factories, automakers and utilities to cut pollution dramatically over the next decade.

The legislation, which toughens federal air pollution laws for the first time in 13 years, was expected to be formally approved by a House-Senate conference, possibly later today, and then go back to the two chambers for endorsement.

Congress began considering the clean air measure more than a year ago.

The compromise bill retains a five-year, $250 million aid program for workers who lose their jobs because of tougher pollution controls. The White House had objected to financial assistance and had threatened to veto the bill if it were included.

But the administration appeared to soften its opposition to the provision after language was included to keep the program from becoming too costly.

Expected veto called political ploy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's rebuke of new civil rights legislation is a "race-conscious" political ploy reminiscent of the 1988 Willie Horton campaign ad, civil rights advocates are charging.

"It is a clear attempt to incite fear in white workers, to incite fear in white businesses," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said Sunday.

Bush said Saturday he would veto the bill today, declaring it would force businesses to adopt hiring and promotion quotas to ward off lawsuits. He sent Congress an alternate plan, but it was quickly condemned by civil rights activists.

Congressional leaders said they would wage an override battle over the vetoed bill, which they said is necessary to combat job discrimination.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., called the Bush alternative a "sham that would leave wide gaps in our anti-discrimination laws."

"The president's actions demonstrate that he is more interested in appeasing extremists in his party than in providing simple justice for the millions of working women and minorities who face bias on the job," Kennedy said.

Lawyers file documents by Fax

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The fax machine is making the wheels of justice turn a little more smoothly these days in California.

A two-year experiment approved this year by the Legislature lets lawyers file lawsuits and probate and family law documents by facsimile machine.

In Los Angeles, the most clogged court system in the state with more than 10,000 documents filed daily in Los Angeles County Superior Court alone, the clerk's office is not equipped to receive a flood of fax transmissions.

Instead, Fax Court Filings Inc., a company formed by 30 attorney service firms in the area, accepts fax transmissions of documents to its office, then walks them over to the Los Angeles County Cour-

JERUSALEM — Two female soldiers carry a wreath to the funeral of their comrade soldier Iris Azolay who was stabbed and killed by an Arab in Jerusalem Sunday morning. The assailant killed three Jews and wounded one child. Two of the victims were buried here on the same day.

Jerusalem closed to Arabs to stop violence

JERUSALEM (AP) — Security forces closed a tense Jerusalem to Arabs today to prevent further violence after a Palestinian went on a rampage and stabbed to death three Israelis. Thousands of police patrolled the city.

National police spokesman Adi Gonen said the move intended to "protect the Arab population... In a tense situation, there can be cases where hot-headed people beat the Arabs."

After Sunday's murders, incensed Israeli youths had stoned Arab-owned cars on a Jerusalem highway, and shouts of "Death to the Arabs!" resounded in the streets of the west Jerusalem neighborhood where the killings occurred.

Arabs were being kept out of the city today by roadblocks in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Gonen said they would be barred from Jerusalem as long as the risk of clashes exists.

The triple slaying Sunday in the quiet Baka neighborhood strained nerves in a city already stretched to the limit by the Temple Mount killings, in which police opened fire on stone-throwing Palestinians and killed 19.

In a different neighborhood today, an Arab stabbed a Jewish youth. Israel radio said the stabbing followed a fight between two delivery boys and that the Jewish youth was rushed to the hospital. It was unclear if the attack was politically motivated. Police Chief Aryeh Bibi said the suspect, who was being sought, had a criminal background.

Police said the 19-year-old Arab laborer accused in Sunday's stabbing deaths was seeking revenge for the Oct. 8 killings on the Temple Mount, which is sacred to both Moslems and Jews.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's senior adviser, Avi Pazner, sought to lay some blame for Sunday's rampage with the U.N. Security Council, which condemned Israel for the Temple Mount killings.

He said the U.S.-supported condemnation created "an atmosphere that incites extremist actions against innocent Jewish civilians."

Israel has refused to cooperate with a U.N.-ordered investigation of the Temple Mount shootings, which occurred after Palestinians showered rocks down on Jews praying at the Western Wall.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens voiced fears Sunday that Arab-Jewish violence was damaging prospects for a Middle East peace settlement. He told Israel Television's Arabic-language service he feared "a chasm is opening" that will make any reconciliation difficult.

Assaf Hefetz, operations chief of Israeli police, said police would decide later in the day whether to extend the closure beyond 24 hours.

President trying to end civil war

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Elias Hrawi's government is moving to accelerate the process of unifying Beirut, disbanding rival militias and freeing Western hostages, aides said today.

They said plans were made during two days of talks in Damascus between Hrawi and Syrian President Hafez Assad, who renewed a pledge to support efforts to end Lebanon's 15-year-old civil war.

Hrawi returned to Beirut on Sunday night, hours after gunmen killed Christian leader

Dany Chamoun, 56, his wife and two young sons at their home in suburban Baabda.

Today, the Christian area staged a day-long shutdown to protest the slayings, which came a week after Hrawi's army and Syrian troops crushed the mutiny of Christian Gen. Michel Aoun. The general took refuge in the French Embassy.

"All militias will be disbanded by peaceful means, but we will use other means if we face objections," Hrawi said.

Ukrainian protesters win demands

KIEV, U.S.S.R. (AP) — More than 200 went on hunger strike. Six were hospitalized. But in the end, the students who created a bloodless version of Tiananmen Square in the Ukraine were sad to go home.

For 16 days this month, the pro-independence hunger strikers lived in a tent city on the main square of Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, deliberately duplicating the tactics of pro-democracy Chinese students in Beijing in 1989.

The Ukrainian students gambled that Soviet authorities would not dare to follow China's example and send the army to crush them.

They turned out to be right. "We went in with cold minds, prepared for any kind of conflict, but with the conviction that the only real path open to the government was peaceful," said Vladimir Boyarsky, a 22-year-old medical student.

On Wednesday, the Ukrainian government capitulated to most of the students' demands for faster steps toward independence, including the resignation of the republic's prime minister.

"After the government announced it was giving in, we went wild with joy," Boyarsky said.

Taiwan protests move to stop ships

EGG-TOSSING PROTESTER

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Premier Hau Pei-tsun today protested Japan's move to block two Taiwanese ships from reaching a disputed island chain and warned of "effective measures" if Japan harasses Taiwanese ships in the area.

"We launch the severest protest against Japan's unfriendly harassment of our fishing boats," Hau said after an emergency Cabinet meeting.

In Taipei, about 30 Taiwanese pelted Japan's unofficial embassy with eggs, and demonstrators said they opposed what they called the "revival of Japan's militarism."

Hau also urged Japan to tear down a lighthouse built on one of the eight unpopulated islands that make up the chain.

Somebody better lead

People with a heart will feel sorry for President Bush. His budget flip-flops leave his party and his country wondering who's in charge and what to do next. But who wouldn't flip-flop when the budget decisions to be made are the toughest of the decade and when no one in his party, much less in Congress or the nation knows which way to go or can get anyone to follow?

If Bush doesn't know exactly what should be done, he has good company. No one does, and anyone who says he has the complete solution also may think that he is Napoleon.

Still, someone with more influence than Bush now must mount the podium, pick up a baton and turn confusion and discord into harmony if the government is to survive... and if the nation is to begin to climb out of its $3 trillion hole.

By default, that responsibility goes to the Democratic Party. As the majority party, it must rule the country in the absence of the president. If Bush can't corral his Republicans and force them to accept a compromise — and he surely didn't (earlier this month) — then the majority party must assume the leadership and take the first steps toward balancing the budget.

The Democrats already have made the first moves. By the time they are through, we expect them to raise the tax on the rich and thus restore the equity that was lost during the Reagan presidency, when, as even a former conservative insider said, the rich got richer and the poor got poorer.

Statesman Journal, Salem, Ore.

The piper must be paid

President Bush's popularity rating has declined, polls show, because of the budget troubles in Congress. Voters seem to be blaming him rather than Congress for proposed tax increases and spending cuts, plus the embarrassing spectacle of a weekend shutdown in the federal establishment.

While we think there's plenty of blame to go around, we'll defend Bush on this one. After all, he is trying to find a way to stanch the flood of red ink. He is pressuring Congress to rope in the federal deficits which may sink us all. He's trying to find a compromise by which Congress can gradually diminish these huge cash shortfalls.

Back home voters need to remember: Whether you are an individual, a business, a state or the U.S. government, you can't keep over-spending your available funds. That's what Congress has been doing for years, at an alarming rate.

If individual members of Congress don't have the guts to curb the exploding debt, then President Bush must use the full force of his executive powers to correct their ways. Bush was wrong when he pledged no new taxes. He is right now as he tries to forge a workable budget compromise that will satisfy budget-busters of both parties. He must keep it up until this budget problem, in brought under control.

The trouble in Congress is, too many congressmen are scared of special interests — the old people, the farmers, the poor people, the wealthy, arms industry.

For too long Congress has refused to cut spending. For too long President Reagan, then President Bush pretended a tax increase was not needed. For too long, the voters haven't really cared about or comprehended issues which concern hundreds of billions of dollars in the federal debt.

If we want goodies from the federal government, we have to pay for them through taxes. If we don't want to pay the taxes, we're going to have to give up some of the costly programs we have enjoyed. Our government cannot go on forever spending and borrowing.

Enterprise Journal, McComb, Miss.

No laws at election time

In search of a wise law, we have come upon this: Forbid Congress from enacting laws during election years — or at least, say, during the last two or three months before the election.

Chomping at the bit and galloping toward the stable, the House of Representatives approved "anti-crime" legislation... that would:

— Expand the death penalty by about 30 crimes — leading Rep. Dave Obey, D-Wis., to despair in sarcasm: "Would it be possible to bring the guillotines directly to the House floor?"

— Deny a lawyer for an indigent death-row inmate who petitions for a writ of habeas corpus. This clause may not survive a constitutional challenge, but any such reversal wouldn't take effect, of course, until well after the Nov. 6 elections.

To the House's credit, it approved a codicil in the bill that would allow defendants to challenge their death sentences by alleging racial discrimination. Sad to say, President Bush has threatened to veto the entire measure in order to remove that "Racial Justice Act." We wouldn't want to allow racial justice, would we, Mr. President?

None of this would be happening, of course, if this weren't an election year and if all 435 members of the House weren't up for re-election. Such goes the dispensation of justice in the United States... and the lawmaking without which justice could not be dispensed.

The dead horse department

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
WASHINGTON — A useful maxim teaches us that nothing is to be gained by beating a dead horse, but the metaphor permits exceptions. The Budget Summit Agreement of Sept. 30 is as dead as the pharaohs, but a post-mortem may be useful all the same.

The House performed a public service at 1:30 o'clock Friday morning. Members of both parties ganged up to kill a deal they had no part in making; they refused to swallow this particular fraud. It was a late hour, but a fine one. In the subsequent showdown with the White House, the heavens did not fall after all.

Lessons may be learned from the summit process, from the aborted agreement itself, and from the underlying reasons for this fiasco.

The process was indefensible. From time immemorial, Congress has worked through its standing committees. Heaven knows the committee system is subject to abuse, but most of the time the system works. It would have worked this year if the leadership had insisted on its working.

Instead, fewer than a score of men — a dozen from Congress, half a dozen from the White House — arrogated to themselves the responsibility for drawing up a kind of treaty to be imposed upon captive nations. They huddled in private at Andrews Air Force Base. At the last minute, under threats of governmental paralysis, they called for ratification. At a breakfast with senior correspondents Friday morning, Speaker Tom Foley acknowledged that the summit process had aroused "resentment." He put it mildly. The process fomented outright rebellion. So much for process.

James J. Kilpatrick

The agreement itself suffered from inherent fraud. It purported to produce a reduction in the federal deficit of $500 billion over the next five fiscal years. In page after carefully tabulated page, the authors described how this could be accomplished. But this was transparent hokum. It is hard enough to predict income and outgo for even one fiscal year. A reliable two-year budget is made of moonbeams. To predict that mandatory outlays in 1995 will amount to precisely $703.8 billion is absurd.

The same spirit of solemn nonsense hovered over the economic assumptions. Gazing into a crystal ball, or looking intently at entrails, the summit conferees made bold to predict changes in the gross national product: In 1991, up by 1.3 percent; in 1992, up by 3.8; in 1993, up by 4.1; in 1994, falling off to 3.7; in 1995, retreating to an even more modest 3.5 percent. Says who?

Economists are notoriously off the mark — wildly off the mark — in making such predictions. No one knows whether 91-day Treasury bills will carry an interest rate of 4.2 percent in 1995. The rate is unknowable. Will unemployment rise to 6.4 percent in 1992? Will oil prices average $21.79 a barrel in 1993? Where did the 79 cents come from? Pfu!

To be sure, some assumptions on income and outgo have to be made. Otherwise, planning fails altogether. The point is that the summit agreement, for all practical political purposes, professed to be unalterable. It was like the laws of the Medes and the Persians. If one key pillar were toppled, the whole structure would fall. Vote! Vote! Vote!

Members were terrified of purported "cuts" in spending for Medicare. In point of fact, outlays for Medicare would not have been cut. These were reductions in projected spending increases. Actual spending would have climbed by at least $15 billion over the five-year period. Another provision claimed "savings" of $8.1 billion by eliminating a lump-sum option for civil service retirees. This too was the stuff of moonbeams. Over time there would be no savings at all.

Underlying the failure of Congress is a failure of will. Members of the House and Senate, taken as a body, simply are not serious about reducing the deficit. Their essentially irresponsible approach is clear to any observer who troubles to read the fine print in appropriation bills.

The budget is larded with fat. It oozes fat. Given the awesome prospect of monstrous deficits, members ought to ask of every appropriation: Is this necessary? Is it absolutely necessary? Is it absolutely, positively, unavoidably necessary? Or is the proposal merely desirable? Can we do without it for a year or so?

Until the day comes when such questions are seriously addressed, we will stagger on from crisis to crisis. If a private business conducted its affairs as stupidly, the business would go broke. Year by year, that is where Congress is taking us now.

Smut and art aren't the same

By LEWIS GRIZZARD
I've never cared much for the artsy crowd. They hold too many benefits for one thing.

For another, they are the kind of people who would look at a photograph or a painting of a cat nailed to a telephone pole and say, "My, look at those lines," if it were hanging in a museum and somebody told them it was art.

The rest of us, of course, would say, "Good God. It's a cat nailed to a telephone pole. I think I'm going to be sick."

The artsy crowd currently is flitting about with great concern because of what it considers to be an effort by uncultured imbeciles to censor certain works it contends are not obscene, but of great artistic value.

There was Cincinnati where a museum showed photographs taken by somebody named Robert Mapplethorpe.

The photographs were quite explicit. The artsy crowd looked at them and said, "My, look at those lines."

Others said, "Good God. I think I'm going to be sick."

A trial was held to decide whether or not a museum had the right to show the photographs.

The artsy crowd won, and if I had been on the jury I would have cast my vote for allowing the museum to show anything it pleases, too.

Censorship in any form is wrong.

But that opinion doesn't stop me from saying that what's basically wrong with the artsy crowd is, it's full of it.

Sure, offer the photographs for those who want to gaze upon such. But don't try to pass it off as art.

One of the photographs in question was of a man with a bullwhip in his rectum.

During the Cincinnati trial the prosecutor asked the art director, who selected the photographs for the show, if he thought it depicted sexuality.

No, said the art director, it was a figure study.

Bullsomething else.

What it was was a photograph of a man with a bullwhip in his rectum, and no matter what the artsy crowd might call it, it's still a photograph of a man with a bullwhip in his rectum.

Doesn't common sense tell those people that?

Again, I'm not for censoring such a photograph. I'm just saying it's sleazy, filthy, obscene, decadent and sick, and anybody who would call it otherwise is a damn fool.

At the recent Atlanta Arts Festival there was a puppet show and at one point during the act, the puppets depicted oral sex.

Say it ain't so, Buffalo Bob. Puppets having oral sex and a photograph of a man with a bullwhip in his rectum.

If the artsy crowd doesn't awaken to the fact the rest of society isn't going to stop crying "smut" at such, then public support of the worthwhile might eventually stop, too.

The point here is, the artsy crowd can stick a bullwhip in its rectum and call it macaroni or anything else it wants to. Anything else but art.

At least we uncultured imbeciles recognize an old-fashioned maggot-gagger when we see one.

Interior Department failing to protect endangered species

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Anastasia Island cotton mouse is gone forever.

So is the insular long-tongued bat of Puerto Rico and the Texas Henslow's sparrow.

All are victims of mismanagement and a shortage of money that has kept the Interior Department from adequately enforcing the federal law that is supposed to protect endangered species, according to government auditors.

A report by the department's inspector general's office said Thursday that hundreds of other rare animals and plants may become extinct without any federal effort to save them because of shortcomings in the federal endangered species program.

During the past decade, 34 species have disappeared because of inadequate protection under the Endangered Species Act, the internal report said. It cited underfunding and personnel shortages and blamed the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for not adequately managing the program.

Craig Rieben, a spokesman for the Fish and Wildlife Service, acknowledged a huge backlog of endangered species cases, but he maintained the problem largely involves a lack of money.

"Working with the (budget) constraints that we are, we feel that we're doing the best job possible.

That's not to say that more couldn't be done," he said.

The internal report said it could cost as much as $4.6 billion to protect all of the presently known endangered species, while the Fish and Wildlife Service is provided about $33 million a year to administer the program.

During the past decade, 34 species have disappeared because of inadequate protection under the Endangered Species Act, the internal report said.

The cost of merely listing the current leading candidates for protection was estimated at $36 million. The agency's listing budget is $3.5 million.

The Fish and Wildlife Service has put about 50 plants or animals on the threatened or endangered list yearly, but has a backlog of 601 applications where the species probably deserve immediate protection, the investigators said.

An additional 3,000 species are suspected of being endangered, but "are receiving little or no protection" while they await the federal review, the report added. It estimated that at the current pace it would take the agency almost 50 years to bring those species under the protection of federal law.

The Endangered Species Act, enacted in 1969 to protect species in danger of extinction, has been under attack in recent months, largely because of a bitter controversy over how to protect the Northwest's spotted owl.

The Fish and Wildlife Service last summer declared the owl threatened, and the Bush administration has been trying to come up with a way to protect the bird while limiting the loss of 20,000 jobs in the timber industry.

The owls are rapidly dying off because of intense cutting in the old-growth forests of the Pacific Northwest. Any owl protection plan is likely to include restrictions in cutting.

Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan caused an uproar last summer among environmentalists when he suggested the endangered species law be made more flexible to take economic considerations into account in some circumstances.

In its report on the enforcement of the law, the department's investigators concluded the Fish and Wildlife Service "has neither developed nor implemented a basic management system for effective administration of the (endangered species) program."

Panama Canal is questionable asset

BALBOA, Panama (AP) — The Panama Canal reverts to the Panamanians at the end of the century, but what kind of long-term asset it will be remains a question.

The 50-mile link between the Atlantic and Pacific is not the monopoly it once was and the potential for expansion is limited.

"I am convinced that the canal will continue being a key link in world transportation well into the 21st century," Fernando Manfredo Jr. told a reporter on his last day as acting administrator.

"It is true that technological developments mean more competition."

As examples, he cited the oil pipeline across the Panamanian isthmus and "multimodal routes" like land bridges.

"As ships become bigger and more efficient, with fewer people on board, it may be more efficient for them to take other routes even if the routes are longer," Manfredo said. "But a certain number and type of ships will always find the canal to be the best alternative."

Ocean-to-ocean transit of the canal takes about 24 hours and is thousands of miles shorter than the alternate trip around South America. The average transit fee, based on cargo capacity, is about $27,000.

More than 650,000 ships have passed through the canal since it opened in 1914 and about 12,000 now use it each year.

Manfredo said the annual increase in canal use has fallen from highs of 7 percent to about 4 percent, and a further decline is projected by the time Panama takes control at noon Dec. 31, 1999.

Panamanians are assuming key functions and make up 86 percent of the permanent work force, up from 69.5 percent before the canal treaties of 1979.

The treaties were negotiated by representatives of President Carter and the late Gen. Omar Torrijos. One returned the Canal Zone, an American-run enclave consisting of five miles on either side of the canal, in that year and the other gives Panama the canal itself.

Operating expenses are high. The treaties stipulate that Panama will get up to $10 billion a year in operating profits, but it has received a total of only $8.9 million in the past 10 years.

Panama also is to receive $50 million to $60 million a year from the United States through 1999 whether the canal makes money or not.

The canal has spent more than it took in for five of the past 10 years, including the last three. Rates were raised in 1983 to make up for losses to the cross-isthmus pipeline and the canal opened a marketing board that year to seek more business.

Rates went up again last year to make up for inflation and a smaller increase in demand. The canal is required by law to break even, and generally does.

More ships now are built to "Panamax" specifications, or the maximum size the canal can handle.

That means fewer ships carry more cargo and make slower transits through the 9-mile-long Gaillard Cut, the narrowest part, where only one-way traffic of large ships is possible.

Calculating future needs means predicting the "ship mix" of the world's merchant fleet and global economic trends, Manfredo said.

About 33 ships a day go through the canal.

"There is enough water now to run the canal at capacity even during extended dry seasons," Manfredo said. "If we add a third set of locks, there would be a water problem."

Ninjas popular for Halloween

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Watch out, dudes! Those lean, mean, green fighting machines are coming out of their shells this Halloween. But don't have a cow, man — Bart Simpson also will be on doorsteps threatening his tricks for treats.

Rentals of Teen-age Mutant Ninja Turtles costumes are among the most popular get-ups this year, a carryover from the characters' box office success, costume shop owners say.

"The Ninja Turtles are going like crazy," said Tammy Dooley, warehouse manager for Master's Tuxedo in Charleston. "Everybody just seems to be loving these turtles."

"We've had 57 calls for them in the past week," said Jennifer Rose as she scanned the inventory list at the Costume Co. in the Boston suburb of Arlington. "Kids, adults, male and female.

"We've had so many requests, we're having to turn people down for them. There's a lot of people who ask us if they think people will cancel out. We tell them 'not likely.'"

Lookalikes of Fox Television's Simpson family are doing well in some places.

Costumers who want to rent Simpsons outfits are popping up almost as much as Bart's bulging eyes at Stages costume shop in Wheeling, about 30 miles west of Pittsburgh.

"All the Simpsons are doing pretty good," shop spokesman Dan Fincham said.

"The greatest thing about the Simpsons is there's the mom and the dad and the son, so you get a lot of trios like a short guy or a kid and his parents," he said. "The head's the most important part."

But for those who are stuck on being green this Halloween, it's a Ninja or nothing. Theresa Sady, owner of Adele's of Hollywood in Los Angeles, said Wednesday she's received 20 to 30 calls a day for turtle costumes.

And don't be shellshocked at the price of an outfit. A Ninja costume rental goes for $45 to $90.

Safe contraceptives for men

LONDON (AP) — Regular hormone injections for men are more effective contraception than birth control pills, IUDs or condoms, according to a one-year study. The drawback is being poked with a needle once a week.

A study published Saturday found that the weekly injections of the hormone testosterone were a "safe, stable, effective and reversible" contraceptive. The World Health Organization's study of 271 men in seven countries said there were minimum side effects.

The study, reported in The Lancet medical journal, found the injections had an overall success rate of 99.2 percent, more effective than the birth control pill (97 percent) the intrauterine device (94 percent), and substantially better at blocking pregnancy than condoms (88 percent).

Although testosterone is the male hormone, disruption of hormone levels reduces sperm production.

The men had to be injected for an average of four months before enough hormone built up in their bodies to work as an effective contraceptive. After discontinuing the injections, the estimated mean time to recover sperm concentration was 6.7 months, it said.

The study was conducted among healthy men between 21 and 45 years old in stable relationships with women no older than 35 years old.

The report said 152 men left the study before its completion, most of them because of failure to become infertile within six months and dislike of the injection schedule.

Among those who withdrew, two cited weight gain, nine cited increased acne and three said they experienced increased aggressiveness and libido.

Two men stopped receiving injections because the couple planned another pregnancy. Both women became pregnant.

The men were injected with 200 milligrams of testosterone enanthate weekly. "The low rates of discontinuation due to side-effects of the hormone and incidental medical conditions in this study confirms the safety and acceptability" of the injections, the report said.

It noted long-term theoretical problems might include risks of prostate and cardiovascular disease, but "the real hazards remain uncertain."

Endangered art

This tapestry entitled "Sufi watching the poet Sadi in ecstasy" is part of an exhibit from the Kuwait Royal family, now on display at the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad, Soviet Union, which will tour the United States beginning in December. Art experts are concerned about other pieces from the collection that were on display at the Kuwait National Museum when Iraq invaded.

Precautions ensure a safe Halloween

DEAR READERS: Don't tell me it's time to prepare for another Halloween again! Well, it is, which means it's time to remind you that:

- Somebody's child will be seriously injured or killed in a Halloween-related traffic accident.
- Somebody's child will be badly maimed or fatally burned due to a flammable costume.
- Somebody's child will become violently ill or die after eating poisoned candy or an apple containing a razor blade.
- Somebody's child will be coaxed into an automobile or lured into a secluded area and sexually assaulted.
- To make sure that child isn't yours, here are some tips to ensure the safety of your children:
 - Use flameproof costumes only. If costumes are made at home, treat the fabric with a flame-resistant solution.
 - Because masks, floppy hats, wigs and veils often interfere with a child's vision, use makeup instead.
 - Accessories such as swords,

Dear Abby

broomsticks, hatchets, wands, etc. should be made of cardboard rather than plastic, metal or wood. Sharp items are dangerous.

- Provide youngsters with flashlights to prevent falls on sidewalks or porch steps. (Positively no lighted candles should be carried!)
- Decorate your child's costume and trick-or-treat bag with reflective tape to make them highly visible to motorists.
- Remind children that they should never enter the home of a stranger or accept rides.
- Adults can help by keeping their yards well-lighted.
- Parents should check all "treats" before allowing children to eat them.

• Very young children should never be out after dark unless accompanied by an adult.

So, make it a safe Halloween, and come Thanksgiving, you'll have more to be thankful for.

DEAR ABBY: What do you give a 78-year-old woman who doesn't need anything and can buy anything she wants? The woman is our mother.

The occasion was her birthday, so all five daughters came home to Elgin, Ill., for the weekend to help Mom celebrate. We included her only sister and her grown granddaughter.

We all got into my station wagon and drove to Sears for a family photograph. Then we drove to Chicago where my father had his business 30 years ago. From there, we drove to our old home from which we moved in 1954.

We had dinner at the restaurant where my sister had worked 20 years ago. The next morning we all went out for a farewell breakfast and then went on our way. We made plans to get together again next year to visit the Swedish neighborhood in Chicago, since Mom's parents came over from Sweden about 90 years ago.

The memories of that weekend meant just as much to us five daughters as they did to Mom. And the memories will last much longer than any material gift we could have given her.

Just thought I'd like to share this with you because I'm — GLAD WE DID IT

DEAR GLAD: I'm glad you shared it with me. A trip down memory lane is a wonderful gift for someone who has everything.

People are eating them up! For Abby's favorite recipes, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Sgt. Ronald K. Cox was presented the Air Assault Badge upon graduation from the U.S. Army's air assault school at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii.

Trainees learned to rapidly and safely exit a helicopter from a variety of difficult situations, whether descending into tree tops or lowering themselves or injured soldiers down sheer drops.

He is the son of Kenneth and Jan Cox of Lamesa, and is a 1983 graduate of Lamesa High School.

Navy Seaman Recruit Calvin W. Smith, son of Johnny L. Shook and Connie Bailey, both of Lamesa, has completed recruit training at Recruit Training Command, Orlando, Fla.

During Smith's eight-week training cycle, he studied general military subjects designed to prepare him for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic fields.

His studies included seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in Physical Education and Hygiene.

Lady Kats compete in cross country meet

By JULIE MCKINNON

The Lady Kats Cross-Country Team competed last weekend at Big Spring. The race was a 4-mile course, with each girl running a mile and passing the baton to the next runner. There were 24 relay teams made up of 5A through 1A schools. The Lady Kats were the only Class A team competing. The Relay Team ran the 4 miles in a total time of 28:16.04. The team members were Crishti Bryant, Jenny Phillips, Stacy Karnes, and Jennifer Jones. Rosario Gomez was alternate. The young Lady Kats placed 11th out of all the teams. This was only the third time to run for some of the girls and was the first time for Jones and Gomez. Coach Phil Swenson was very pleased with each girls' performance and hopes that they qualify for Regional when they run District at Mertz, Monday Oct. 22. The 1st and 2nd place teams and the first 5 individual placers in District will go on to Regionals. Coach Swenson feels the Lady Kats will do very well in the District Meet.

The school looked quite different now as compared to 1970. Back then, there were waxed wooden floors, radiator heaters, and the lights were dropped hanging lamps. The

How's that?

Q. How did Ann Landers get her start?
A. The woman we know as Ann Landers was not the original Ann Landers columnist. According to the Dallas Morning News, in 1955, Esther Pauline Lederer (Eppie) felt bored and restless, so she contacted the Chicago Sun-Times to ask if she could help with the "Ask Ann Landers" column. She was told that Ruth Crowley, who wrote the column, had recently died and that a competition was under way to find her replacement. For one of Eppie's trout letters she called her friend, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, for assistance. The powers that be at the Sun-Times were impressed and she got the job.

Employee Roand Bull and Lt. Bill Owens of the Salvation Army move a chair into the new thrift store location at 602 W. Fourth Street.

Thrift store will move

By DEBBIE LINCEUM Staff Writer

The Salvation Army Thrift Store is on the move.

The store, now located at 503 North Lamesa Highway, will be moving to 602 West Fourth Street, a house between C&L Garage and the Dora Roberts Citadel.

Lt. Bill Owens of the Salvation Army said the move will allow more efficient use of funds by keeping the programs more centrally located.

"This way we can better use our volunteers and cut down our expenses," he said. "We want the public to know we're trying to centralize everything to use the economic forces we have available to us."

The store will be around the corner from the Meadows Emergency Shelter, another Army facility. The main office is located on Fifth Street.

The thrift store's main purpose is offering clothing, furniture and household items to the needy, Owens said. After the move, it will concentrate more on that aspect — only opening Monday through Friday for emergency aid and help for poor or needy families.

Saturdays, the store will open to the public from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. to do "yard sale" type sales of the used goods to the general public.

The week-to-week focus of the business will be aid to those in need, Owens said. They receive vouchers from the Army's main office to be redeemed for store goods.

Recent statistics show that the store serves 18-20 families per month, and about the same number of transient persons.

"We help fire victims and special emergency cases and people on welfare who come to us for their basic needs," he said. "We always need donations — clothing, furniture, any (condition) at all. Call us and we'll come pick it up."

All proceeds from sales go to Army programs, he said. Items at the store are usually priced very low, including $1 for a pair of blue jeans, 50 cents for shirts and $1-2 for coats.

The store will have one paid employee at the new location. He will sort donated items, organize them and mind the store. Volunteers will run the Saturday business every other week.

The thrift store will close Oct. 27 to begin the moving process. It will reopen for business Saturday, Nov. 2.

Family

he has no other option until he finds work.

"We're not deadbeats," Dan said with tears in his eyes. "I want to work. But I need a job that pays enough to support my family."

On Friday night, Michelle's labor became more intense and they knew that it wouldn't be long before she gave birth.

Since they had no money and because they'd had a bad experience at a hospital during the birth of their son, Mikie, 2½, Dan and Michelle decided they'd have the baby in the motel room.

"We're Christians and we relied on our faith to get us through. We were praying. We knelt down and asked God to help us. I asked God to make her labor short and to help her with the pain," Dan said.

Dan called the ambulance service to ask advice.

"The lady was very nice and asked if I had money or insurance. She said she wasn't allowed to give me advice. She advised me to go to the hospital," Dan said. "I prayed about what she said and God spoke to me and told me he'd help."

While Michelle was in the last stages labor, her husband and children did everything they could to make her comfortable.

"I knew she was in pain. I was shattered because she was in so much pain," Dan said looking at his wife and newborn daughter.

At 1:30 a.m. Saturday, Dan helped bring his daughter into the world.

"He started saying, 'It's alive, it's alive, it's alive,'" said 12-year-old Toby.

Dan handed the baby to his wife and immediately, he said, she began nursing.

The Reeds took the baby to the emergency room to make sure their daughter was all right.

"The doctors examined the baby and said we did a good job," Dan proudly said.

The Reeds say they're thankful for the people of Big Spring who have tried to help, especially the motel's owner who offered a free night's lodging.

"She's been real good to us. She's one of the sweetest ladies," Dan said.

Dan said he'll continue his search for work here and maintains he made the right choice by leaving Norman.

"It broke our hearts to leave Norman," Dan said. "We tried and tried. We struggled. . . . After my work ran out I couldn't find a decent job. So we decided to head for California to make enough money so we can go back home to buy a piece of land to call our own. We want to have a garden and a couple of dogs. Things like that."

The Reeds, who once lived in California, said they left because they wanted to raise their children in the country.

"We left California to get away from the pollution and to live in the country. We went to Oklahoma and fell in love with it," Dan said.

The Reeds say they'll remain in Big Spring long enough to earn the money they need to travel to California. Dan said, although he and his family are going through rough times now, he has faith their luck will change.

"We've learned a hard lesson. I'll never put my family through this again. We're gonna have something. . . . We believe in the American dream and that's why we're going back to Oklahoma someday. This time as winners."

Council to discuss lease, contract, appointments

By DEBBIE LINCEUM Staff Writer

The City Council will discuss the lease agreement with Mid-Tex Detention Centers Inc., in executive session, when it meets at the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark tomorrow at 5:30 p.m.

Upon reconvening in open session, the council will consider approving the lease agreement on first reading.

Also in the executive session, the council will consider the contract with American Medical Transport and consider appointments to city boards.

In other business, the council will consider:

- Making the Heritage Museum board of directors responsible for the rules and regulations of the Potton House.
- Decreasing firefighter positions by three and increasing driver positions within the department by three, the total number of workers would remain 46.
- Adoption of the Standard Gas Code and the Southern Standard Plumbing Code will be under consideration by the council.
- A contract for "historical preservation and restoration projects" by the Heritage Museum.
- An agreement with Robert Sanders for Lake Fest 1991.
- A resolution supporting the Texas Municipal League's proposed amendments to the Texas Local Government Code. The amendments concern the management of police and fire departments.

The council will hear the second and final readings of resolutions concerning:

- An agreement with Basin Aviation Inc. to become a fixed base operator at the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark.
- A contract with Big Spring Main Street Inc.
- A contract with Howard County for 911 emergency service.
- Amendments to the contract with Ed Davenport and Mid-Tex Correction Center.
- The establishment of a fiscal policy for maintenance of the Big Spring Correction Center II.

The council will consider the request of two citizens to abandon and vacate an alley in Block 44, in the College Heights Addition.

Bids to be submitted to the council for approval include security and fire alarm systems, radios for the police department, computer upgrade for the police department and water treatment plant improvements.

The council will decide whether to continue to allow groups, other than the city, to use tables and chairs from the Dora Roberts Community Center.

Spending

Democrats have collected $2,960, reports show.

Minus the $600 filing fees for each candidate, the Republicans spent $7,119.10 and the Democrats spent $6,670.51.

The Republican candidates listed 34 contributors donating $4,187.15, for an average of $123.15 each. The Democrats listed eight contributors giving $1,390, an average of $173.75.

The Democratic candidates for Pct. 4 commissioner and district clerk outspent their opponents, but otherwise the Republicans individually had more contributions, more donations over $50 and spent more than their counterparts.

County Judge John Coffee had the most contributions, as well as expenditures. Pct. 2 Democratic nominee John Stanley had the least contributions and Pct. 4 Republican candidate Robert Crenshaw had the lowest expenditures. Stanley was the only candidate not listing any contributors giving more than $50.

The largest contributor was Mrs. John Coffee who gave $500 to her husband's campaign.

The only out-of-state address listed for a contributor giving more than $50 was: Don Forshee, Box R1000-23, Army Post Office, N.Y., who gave $300 to Judi Atkins, Republican candidate for district clerk.

All other contributors giving more than $50 have Big Spring addresses except for two. A Coahoma man contributed $100 to the campaign of Ben Lockhart, Democratic candidate for county judge, and a woman in Vealmoor contributed $100 to the campaign of Bobby Cathey, Democratic candidate for Pct. 4 commissioner.

The most expensive race is for county judge. A total of $6,619.58, minus candidate filing fees, has been spent while $5,583.90 in contributions has been collected.

Coffee spent $4,084 and Lockhart $2,535.58. Coffee brought in $3,463.90 in contributions, while Lockhart brought in $2,120. Coffee got $1,826 from 13 people giving over $50, an average of $140.46 each, while Lockhart got $890 from five people, an average of $178.

The least expensive race is the one for Pct. 4 commissioner. Reported so far is $1,687.35 in expenditures and $1,687.35 in contributions.

Republican candidate Robert Crenshaw spent $289 compared to Cathey's $1,398.35. Crenshaw received $581.15 in contributions while Cathey got $450. Crenshaw got $531.15 from five people giving more than $50, an average of $106.23, while Cathey got $400 from two people, an average of $200.

In the Pct. 2 commissioner race, $2,388.90 has been spent and $664 collected.

Republican candidate Jerry Kilgore spent $1,216.65, compared to Stanley's $1,172.25. Kilgore received $504, while Stanley has received $160 in contributions. Kilgore got $315 from three people giving over $50, an average of $105.

In the district clerk's race, $3,092.24 has been spent and $3,450.50 collected.

Atkins spent $1,527.91, compared to Democratic incumbent Glenda Brasel's expenditures of $1,564.33. Atkins brought in $3,220.50, and Brasel brought in $230. Atkins got $1,515 from 13 contributors giving over $50, an average of $116.54, while Brasel got $100 from one person.

Clinic

going to try to get the place back up."

Friday, the clinic will host its first fund-raising event, Bowman said. A barbecue lunch, dinner and a country music dance on its front lawn will be open to the public — donations accepted.

Not only is the facility turning 60, directors are "ready to announce the fact that we're in a positive cash position and no longer losing money," said board member Jerry Worthy.

While Hall-Bennett celebrates its prosperity and longevity, it is hope "a great amount" of money will be raised.

Worthy said the clinic has already had "many requests from people that want to contribute."

The directors, however, wanted to know where they were headed before taking local folks' money, he added.

"We probably won't ever be a big, thriving full-bed hospital. But I think we can . . . make our town better-rounded city in the area of medical service."

"Rather than go for some big grant or something, (to fund improvements), we wanted to see if we could go to the community that the hospital has served so long."

Administrators hope to buy new equipment, upgrade existing facilities and create a better all-around appearance, Bowman said.

The addition of doctors, often an expensive process, is part of the facility's plans as well. In that area, the clinic has suffered a recent setback.

In August, it was announced that a surgeon would be joining the clinic staff. The doctor changed his mind suddenly, however, opting for work in another city.

Recently a podiatrist, Dr. Bradford Glass, joined the staff. He sees patients at the clinic every Thursday.

Both Bowman and Worthy agreed that there are "prospects" for additional physicians.

Bowman said he thinks Hall-Bennett will always survive in some capacity locally, because its non-profit orientation means patient care is its first concern.

"We don't have to please people concerned with the bottom line," he said. "That's what sets us apart. Whatever (money) we raise, we'll put into improving our patient services."

Assistant Administrator Nikki Broyles said the clinic "stays busy every day."

"It's just that we'd like to see it full," she said. "We're already making a lot of changes. Mr. Bowman . . . has brought a new perspective, and the new board (of directors) is very enthusiastic."

Broyles said the clinic has a "personal touch" that patients appreciate.

"We know the patients by name, we know their situations, so we can accommodate them. When you're sick, you want someone to . . . care about you."

Friday's fund-raising event will be the first of several planned for this year, Bowman said. He added that donations are tax deductible, and the money will "stay in the community."

"Setting too specific a goal might limit our scope. Whatever we can do, we will do, the very best way we can."

"We could even continue as we are right now, we're doing fine. We just want to get better."

He said he, the board of directors and the employees of the clinic, are hopeful for a happy birthday year for Hall-Bennett.

Barbecue will be served in a tent on the clinic lawn, 411 East Ninth Street, from noon to 3 p.m., and 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday.

Contract

However, commissioners expressed reservations about that, too, saying disagreements over costs or payments could lead to two separate ambulance services in the county. It is against the law for a county to enter into a contract for more than a year without levying taxes and setting up a sinking fund, Coffee said.

"I don't think separate contracts are advisable," Crooker said.

"I don't think it'll work," said Pct. 4 Commissioner O.L. "Louie" Brown.

But Whatley said that city officials may still consider a one-year contract with options for the future, which is the same deal she is offering the county.

In other provisions of the proposal, Whatley said they would take ambulance run assignments on insurance. She also mentioned costs for employee salary increases of up to 5 percent and new papers and repair costs for them.

The salary increases are less than $5,000, which is .0011 percent of their annual budget, she said. They have six full-time and 15 part-time employees.

"The average (raise) is 3-4 percent," she said. "It's up to 5 percent depending on their performance."

New papers and repair costs have run $3,000, she said.

Budget

growth of the program by about $44 billion over the next five years. Republicans want the cuts to be $3 billion deeper.

About one-fourth of the reductions would be borne directly by the 33 million handicapped and elderly people who use the program. Rostenkowski said the two sides were less than $2 billion apart on the precise cut to be aimed at beneficiaries.

Democrats also want to boost the $51,300 wage cap from which Medicare taxes are deducted to $125,000. Republicans would increase the cap to $98,000. The 1.45 percent Medicare tax is part of the Social Security deduction.

The final plan also is certain to include higher taxes on cigarettes, alcohol, luxury items such as furs, and airline tickets — elements that were in separate bills the House and Senate passed last week.

Cuts in crop payments to farmers, new fees for federal environmental tests and Coast Guard services, and stinger benefits for retired civil servants and veterans were also destined for the final bill.

Stewart calls Dibble punk

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Cincinnati pitcher Rob Dibble has accused Oakland pitcher Dave Stewart of intentionally hitting Reds outfielder Billy Hatcher with a pitch during the final game of the World Series.

The accusation prompted Stewart to call Dibble a "punk."

The Dayton Daily News said today that the exchange occurred during separate interviews between reporters and the two players following Saturday night's game.

In the first inning of the Reds' 2-1 victory, Hatcher was hit in the hand by a Stewart fastball. Hatcher, who set a World Series record for four games with a .750 batting average, left the game.

"I felt that was a horse feathers thing to do — hit a guy because he's hot," Dibble was quoted as saying. "Of course, I think it was intentional. He put his guys in jeopardy, and he is lucky he isn't in the National League, where he has to bat. If he would have ruined Billy's career, I guarantee somebody would have gotten him."

Told of Dibble's remarks, Stewart said, "Tell him he is a punk. Tell him to talk to me when he has won 20 games or saved 40. He's a reliever who doesn't know how to pitch. He has a fastball and that's it. Tell him to learn how to pitch. He is stupid and doesn't know anything about baseball. I hit people by mistake, not on purpose."

Former Heisman winner dies

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Frank Sinkwich, the 1942 Heisman Trophy winner from Georgia, died today at his home. He was 70.

Sinkwich had been in ill health for some time.

He was the first player from the Southeastern Conference to win the Heisman.

Sinkwich, a halfback, led Georgia to an 11-1 record in 1942 and a 9-0 victory over UCLA in the Rose Bowl.

In his Heisman Trophy-winning senior season, Sinkwich rushed for 795 yards and 17 touchdowns and completed 84 of 166 passes for 1,392 yards and 10 touchdowns.

During his three-year collegiate career, he ran for 2,271 yards and 30 touchdowns and passed for 2,331 yards and 30 touchdowns.

He owned a beer and wine distributor business in Athens. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Cowboys double-dip Buccaneers

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Troy Aikman and Michael Irvin could have been Bernie Kosar and Eddie Brown. The thought crossed Jimmy Johnson's mind on the sideline at Tampa Stadium.

Aikman and Irvin teamed on a 28-yard touchdown play with 23 seconds remaining Sunday to give the Dallas Cowboys a 17-13 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Six years ago, current NFL stars Kosar and Brown provided a last-minute victory for Johnson — then the coach at the University of Miami — at the same end of the field in a 1984 victory over the Florida Gators that was played at Tampa Stadium.

"Obviously that's an exciting way to win a ball game. I had visions of Kosar throwing to Eddie Brown in that same corner," Johnson said after the Cowboys' second victory in three weeks over the Bucs.

"We got various opportunities to get back into the game," he added, "and finally took advantage of it."

Tampa Bay (4-3) had five turnovers, but it was Aikman who created his own breaks on the game-winning drive. He completed three of six passes, including an 18-yarder to Jay Novacek on third-and-10, and scrambled 20 yards to the Bucs' 28 to set up Irvin's TD.

Dallas (3-4) generated only 100 yards total offense in a 20-3 loss to the Phoenix Cardinals last week. Driving 80 yards in the final two minutes on Sunday restored some of the team's confidence.

"We can be as good as we want to be. That last drive shows what we can do," said rookie Emmitt Smith, who was held to 48 yards rushing on 16 carries after gaining 121 yards against the Bucs two weeks ago.

"I think (the Bucs) designed their defense to try to shut down the run," he added. "I thought we responded pretty well. They put us in some situations where we were pretty uncomfortable, but they didn't shut us down."

The Cowboys finished with 223 yards and also scored on a 24-yard field goal by Ken Willis and Issiac Holt's 64-yard interception return that tied the game 10-10 with 6:46 remaining.

Tampa Bay drove 64 yards to take a three-point lead on Steve Christie's 32-yard field goal with 1:56 left but couldn't stop Aikman — or Irvin — when it counted most.

Oilers ruin Walsh's starting debut

HOUSTON (AP) — Steve Walsh got a passing grade in his first start at quarterback for the New Orleans Saints, outgaining the explosive Houston Oilers run-and-shoot offense.

But a scrappy Oiler defense and Walsh's own inexperience are sending the second-year pro and recent Saints acquisition back to the playbook and practice field for more study after Houston's 23-10 victory Sunday.

"I think I need to be a little more in tune on where to go with the ball," said Walsh, who came to New Orleans from Dallas on Sept. 25 in exchange for three top draft choices.

"It was pretty ugly but in another week or so, that's not going to happen to us," Walsh said. "I'm not discouraged at all by our performance. I don't feel it's my responsibility to make every play."

Walsh looked poised early in the game, completing six of his first seven passes in leading the Saints 97 yards after a Lorenzo White fumble at the 1 took away a near-certain touchdown for Houston (4-3). But the drive stalled and New Orleans (2-4) settled for a 20-yard field goal from Morten Andersen to take a 3-0 lead.

Houston's defense adjusted, turning up the pressure.

"I'm sure he feels the pressure of having to come in and have to be the key to jump start their offense," Oiler defensive end William Fuller said. "It's only natural with the ball being batted around and hands in your face as the game went on. I know he had to be rattled. I would be."

"I'm still not where I'd like to be, but I feel like I'm making progress," Walsh said. "I've learned the system. I just need more experience with it."

"Steve had a good game," Saints coach Jim Mora said. "It wasn't a perfect game by any means, but I'm encouraged by his performance."

Meanwhile, Oilers quarterback Warren Moon, who had five touchdown passes in a wide-open 48-17 victory over Cincinnati a week ago, settled for short completions when the Saints flooded the field with defensive backs.

"I'd rather have shorter drives and bigger plays, but the Saints played so much zone as a lot of NFC teams do," Moon said. "We were patient and we hung in there and our defense was fantastic again and got us some turnovers."

Moon had 202 yards, completing 23 of 37 passes, including a 6-yard scoring toss to White that put the Oilers up 7-3 in the second quarter. Moon's longest completion of the day, however, was only for 19 yards.

Walsh hit on 22 of 39 passes for 292 yards, including a 31-yard touchdown to tight end Hoby Brenner, but was sacked four times, lost a fumble and suffered an interception.

The pickoff, by linebacker Johnny Meads, set up a Tony Zendejas 43-yard field goal that gave the Oilers a 10-3 advantage at the end of the first half.

The Brenner score, in the fourth quarter, came after the Oilers had reeled off 20 straight points.

"It was great that he (Walsh) saw me," said Brenner, who had three catches for a game-high 77 yards. "A tight end is not usually the No. 1 receiver, but the fact he saw me really encourages me."

White atoned for his early fumble and gave Houston a 17-3 lead with a 1-yard TD run with 8:53 left in the third quarter following a 34-yard pass interference penalty in the end zone on Brett Maxie.

Another Saints turnover led to Zendejas' second field goal, a 45-yarder in the third quarter, that put Houston up 20-3.

After Brenner's TD narrowed the gap to 20-10, Zendejas added a 33-yard field goal with 8:50 gone in the final quarter. But on the ensuing kickoff, Zendejas broke his non-kicking leg while trying to make a tackle. He is expected to be out as long as six weeks.

"I should have never been on that tackle," Zendejas said. "I had no business there. I should have just gotten out of there. Things were looking up for me and then this happens to me. It's sad."

"This was a scratch-and-claw win and not very pretty," Moon said.

"We ended up giving up more yards than we would have liked," Oilers coach Jack Pardee said. "It's good to get out of that one with a 'W.'"

The loss snapped the Saints' NFL record-tying streak of 13 consecutive victories against American Conference teams, dating back to 1986.

A very special season for Reds

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds have no plans this winter to think about dynasties or their place in baseball history.

They're more than content with what a special year this was. It was season that comes along only once in a lifetime, if you're real lucky.

The Reds fans can talk forever more about the season their team led from wire-to-wire and incredibly swept the mighty Oakland Athletics in the World Series.

Fans in Boston, Cleveland and Chicago have waited decades for such a season, and it's possible it may never come.

Lou Piniella doesn't care if he's not considered the best manager, either. He saw something in the Reds that others missed.

"I saw a club with a lot of physical ability," Piniella said. "We could run, we could throw, we could hit, we had good pitching. My message in spring training, simply stated, was you've played together four or five years, now it's time this club goes on and wins. It's your turn. Let's gear ourselves up for that, and that's exactly what they did."

The Reds got off to a 33-12 start and their lead over San Francisco and Los Angeles

Reds Coach Lou Piniella give the number one sign after the Reds swept Oakland.

World Series twice in three years to the underdog does not make for one of the all-time great teams.

"I felt coming into this World Series that in order to be classified as a great team, as a special team, we had to win this Series," A's third baseman Carney Lansford said. "If you lose two out of three World Series, you can't be considered a great team yet."

A week ago, the A's thought they had a great team.

"The disappointing thing is I think we have more talent than the Reds," said Dave Stewart, who lost twice in the Series. "But you have to give the Reds credit. They outplayed us. I've always said the best team doesn't always win; the team that plays best wins."

The A's were outpitched, outhit and, surprisingly, outmanaged. They also fell into the unforgivable trap of pointing fingers at Jose Canseco when their money man came up a dollar short.

The Reds outscored the A's 22-8, holding Oakland to seven extra-base hits. The A's never scored after the third inning in the four games.

49ers keep rolling

By The Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers and the New York Giants continued to march along as the NFL's only unbeaten teams. But they took decidedly different and unexpected routes to victory.

NFL

The 49ers, with backup Dexter Carter leading the way, rushed for more than 100 yards for the first time this season, beating the Pittsburgh Steelers 27-7 Sunday.

The Giants, who generally win with the run and a rock-solid defense, relied on backup quarterback Jeff Hostetler's clutch passing before Matt Bahr kicked a 40-yard field goal at the gun for a 20-19 victory over the Phoenix Cardinals.

"If I play one play, three plays or the whole game, I run hard," said Carter, who admirably spelled the injured Roger Craig.

Carter, San Francisco's top draft pick — heretofore a disappointment — put up Craig-like numbers. He ran 17 times for 90 of San Francisco's 150 rushing yards and caught seven passes for 67 more.

"We ran the ball just like we do all week in practice," Carter said.

Coach George Seifert was impressed.

"Dexter's a darting, aggressive, hard-nosed guy," Seifert said. "With a team like the Steelers, you've got to peck away at them, and that's what we were able to do."

Giants coach Bill Parcells, whose team also rose to 6-0, had little to be impressed about.

"We can consider ourselves lucky and fortunate," Parcells said after the Giants rallied for 10 points in the final 3:21. "I can't recall us ever being down by that much with that little time to go and coming back like that."

New York looked like a beaten team after Al Del Greco kicked his fourth field goal, a 45-yarder that put Phoenix ahead 19-10 with 5:38 remaining.

"As long as there was time on the clock we felt we had a chance," Giants center Bart Oates said.

Cincinnati is at Cleveland tonight.

Giants 20, Cardinals 19

Although New York rushed for 157 yards, the Giants had to depend on Hostetler, filling in for the injured Phil Simms, for their biggest comeback victory since overcoming a 13-point deficit with seven minutes to go against Kansas City in 1984.

The Giants, trailing 19-10 with 5:38 remaining, drove 79 yards, getting the last 38 on a pass from Hostetler to Stephen Baker. Phoenix (2-4) got one first down before punting with 58 seconds remaining.

Hostetler hit Mark Ingram for 26 yards to the Phoenix 45 and a holding penalty gave the Giants five more yards. Three plays later, Hostetler, who hit 11 of 21 passes for 180 yards, found Lionel Manuel for an 18-yard completion with 13 seconds to go.

"They were covering us and playing good defense," Hostetler

Knicks whips Mavs, 110-99

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing sparked New York with eight quick points at the start of a blowout third quarter Sunday night, leading the Knicks to a 110-99 victory over the Dallas Mavericks in an NBA preseason game.

Ewing, who scored only six points in 18 first-half minutes, finished with 14 points, 11 below his average in three previous exhibition games, while Gerald Wilkins led the Knicks with 16.

The Knicks, who led by seven points three times in the first half, outscored the Mavericks 30-16 in the third quarter to give them a 87-67 lead. They opened 24-point leads twice in the fourth quarter.

Ewing hit two layups, a jumper and a slam dunk in the first 4:36 of the second half but was replaced less than two minutes later and never returned.

Roy Tarpley topped the Mavericks with 25 points and Randy White added 12.

Ewing and Tarpley exchanged shoves during a brief skirmish at the end of the second quarter and were both charged with technical fouls.

The Knicks, leading 28-26 after the first quarter, fell behind 42-38 before going on a 13-2 streak that carried them to a 57-51 halftime lead.

The Knicks, who were making their debut at home, topped their preseason record to 3-1. The Mavericks dropped to 1-4.

said of the Cardinals. "But at the end, everything seemed to come together."

The Giants rushed to the line as the clock kept running and Hostetler grounded the ball with three seconds to go. Bahr's kick went right through the middle of the uprights.

"It felt good going off my foot, but you never know..." Bahr said. Johnny Johnson of Phoenix became the first player to rush for more than 100 yards against New York since Washington's Gerald Riggs on opening day last season. Johnson carried 30 times for 108 yards.

Bills 30, Jets 27
Buffalo overcame a fourth-quarter deficit for the third straight game. The Bills (5-1) and tied with Miami for the AFC East lead) won on Jim Kelly's fourth touchdown pass, a 19-yarder to Jamie Mueller with 19 seconds remaining.

The loss was the third in the closing minutes for New York (2-5), which took a 27-24 lead with 2:46 left on Pat Leahy's 25-yard field goal.

Kelly (19-for-32 for 297 yards) found Mueller to complete an 11-play drive of 71 yards. Earlier, Kelly threw two touchdown passes to Andre Reed and a 60-yarder to James Lofton.

The Jets' Ken O'Brien threw touchdown passes to Mark Boyer and Al Toon.

Redskins 13, Eagles 7
Stan Humphries passed 33 yards to Gary Clark and 44 to Art Monk to set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Gerald Riggs late in the second period.

Washington's Chip Lohmiller missed four field goals before connecting from 33 and 39 yards, but Philadelphia's Roger Zatkas, playing with bruised ribs, missed two kicks.

The Eagles (2-4) averted a shutout on Randall Cunningham's 9-yard pass to Fred Barnett with 43 seconds left.

The Redskins (4-2) sacked Cunningham five times and forced him to fumble once.

Raiders 24, Chargers 9
Los Angeles (6-1) took a two-game lead in the AFC West on the strength of 5-and-7-yard touchdown runs by Bo Jackson in his season debut. Jackson gained 53 yards on 12 carries.

San Diego (2-5) was held without a touchdown for the first time this season. The Chargers were limited to three field goals by John Carney.

Seahawks 19, Chiefs 7
Seattle (3-4) held Christian Okoye and Barry Word to a combined 66 yards rushing and got four field goals from Norm Johnson, who had struggled most of the season.

The Seahawks overcame four interceptions thrown by Dave Krieg and were helped by three fumble recoveries. Kansas City (4-3) fell two games behind the Raiders in the AFC West.

Broncos 27, Colts 17
John Elway passed for 307 yards and two touchdowns to spoil the return of Eric Dickerson to the Indianapolis backfield. Denver (3-4) ended a three-game losing streak, its longest in seven years.

David Treadwell kicked a 42-yard field goal with 3:45 remaining and Steve Sewell scored on a 4-yard run two minutes later.

Dickerson gained 55 yards on nine carries after missing six games in a contract dispute, passing O.J. Simpson for sixth place on the NFL's all-time rushing list with 11,281 yards. Indianapolis (2-4) got two touchdown passes and 312 yards from Jack Trudeau.

Rams 44, Falcons 24
Los Angeles (2-4) broke a three-game losing streak as Jim Everett passed for 302 yards and three scores and Henry Ellard became the Rams' all-time yardage receiving leader. Ellard caught six passes for 109 yards to total 6,311 for his career.

Working against the NFL's worst pass defense, Everett completed 24 of 38. Atlanta (2-4) had allowed six touchdown passes a week earlier to the 49ers.

The Falcons, with Andre Rison catching five passes for 161 yards, continued to be plagued by penalties. They were assessed 10 for 93 yards.

"We moved the ball up and down the field but didn't score. We put our defense in trouble too many times," he added. "When you only score 13 points, it puts your defense in a bind."

Irvin missed the last 10 games of 1989 and the first four weeks of this season recovering from knee surgery. Until he caught a 14-yard pass to begin the Cowboys' game-winning drive, he didn't have a reception in 1990.

"To tell you the truth, there wasn't really any pressure on me (on the final drive)," said Irvin, who ran past Tampa Bay's Rodney Rice and made the winning catch in the left corner of the end zone.

"It's a situation I enjoy being in. That's where I get my nickname, 'The Playmaker.' ... 'I just said, 'Get it to me, get it to me,' and he Jose Rijo wasn't supposed to be the best pitcher in the Series, but he won two games and was the MVP. Rijo was brilliant in Game 4, giving up only two hits and retiring 20 straight batters until Randy Myers got the last two outs to finish the Reds' 2-1 victory.

In the playoffs, the Reds combined on a one-hitter to finish off the Pirates in Game 6.

Changes in technology make basic math skills more valuable

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

I don't think it's cool to hate math anymore. According to "Voice," a vocational educational publication, math can lead to many more careers than you might expect. Changes in technology have made basic math skills valuable; calculus and trigonometry can lead to careers in agriscience, telecommunications and biotechnology.

"What counts more than a genius IQ is a willingness to stick with a problem until you've solved it," says Voices. Anyway, it's something to think about.

Observance has county 'seeing red'

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
Staff Writer

Martin County residents woke up seeing red all over as Grady, Sands, Klondike and Stanton students decorated buildings, buses and themselves as part of Red Ribbon week.

The Red Ribbon campaign is aimed at defeating drugs in the schools, workplace and other areas. The campaign originated when Federal Agent Enrique Camarena was murdered by drug traffickers in 1985.

Red ribbons became a national symbol to reduce the demand for drugs, just as yellow ribbons symbolized remembrance of hostages, according a spokesman for McCoys Building Supply, which is participating in the observance.

"During Red Ribbon Week, there will be communities that will participate in designating its community as drug-free," the spokesman said. A local participant in the program is the Evening Lions Club.

"We sent Red Ribbons to all the area schools that wanted to participate. This morning we had a community turnout to help tie Red Ribbons around town. We had help from the Student Council, Future Homemakers, Methodist youth, National Honor Society, several area churches and many, many volunteers," said program chairman Bob Deavenport.

"This will kickoff the Health Fair that starts this morning at the community center. The theme of the fair this year is the drug-free campaign. Last year, we had speakers and different people doing different things. This year we kept it as a community project and everyone was very happy to do their part," Deavenport said.

According to Evening Lions President Steve Garlington, the club bought 3,000 ribbons as part of the project.

"Some of the area businesses contributed some money to help in this project. This has been our second year that we have been part of this campaign and we feel that it is for a good cause," Garlington said.

Stanton Elementary is participating in the project by having Trooper Bud, the Department of Public Safety robot, at an assembly to talk to kids about the importance on staying away from drugs. They also entered a coloring contest with prizes awarded to the top three winners in each of the 26 classes.

Grady's kindergarten and first grade also entered in a coloring contest. The GHS student council will judge the winners. Second through fifth-graders will participate in a poster contest, according to administrative secretary Pat Romine.

Judge Deavenport brought the red ribbon to me and we distributed it all over the Grady community. We have red all over: our buses; all over the school; on each classroom door; and our kids are wearing red ribbons. On Wednesday, all of our school kids are asked to wear something red," Romine said.

Eta Master meets Wednesday

Eta Master Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met Oct. 17 at the home of Helen Ruth Louder. Members were greeted by the hostess and led to the dining room where dinner was served. Afterwards, President Sammie Laws presided during the business meeting.

Plans for attending the Fall banquet Oct. 30, were finalized. The chapter voted to order 1960 Sorority Cookbooks for each member.

Sammie gave the program, entitled "America's Women," which gave a summary of the 1876 convention held in Philadelphia. Susan B. Anthony presented her ideas on rights of women.

Several members were out of town, but members attending were: Margaret Rouchee, Mamie Roten, Helen Cobean, Sammie Laws, Pauline Wood and the hostess, Louder.

Board OKs prison funding

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Board of Criminal Justice today authorized an estimated $68.4 million to build a 2,250-bed, maximum security prison in Beeville.

It also tentatively approved about $19.8 million for a 1,000-bed, medium security prison slated for Dilley, said board administrative assistant Susan Power.

Funding for the Dilley prison is linked to the city coming up with a promised incentive package, said Ms. Power.

The board, in a teleconference meeting, gave Dilley a Nov. 1 deadline to put together the package offered the state for building the prison there, she said.

"If they don't meet the requirements by Nov. 1, or come up with the necessary funding, we are considering going to a second choice," said Ms. Power.

James Hall, lawyer for the institutional division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said that in a telephone conversation after the meeting, Dilley officials said they have the necessary money.

Acquittal won't hurt Dallas case

DALLAS (AP) — The acquittal of members of the 2 Live Crew rap group on an obscenity charge will not hurt a local case against two retailers for selling the group's album "As Nasty as They Wanna Be," a prosecutor says.

"It's like comparing apples and oranges," Dallas County District Attorney John Vance said Sunday. "In Florida, (2 Live Crew) was being tried for their live performance; here, we're trying retailers for selling the album to minors."

Sound Warehouse of Dallas and Hasting's Records and Tapes of Amarillo were named July 27 in misdemeanor charges for allegedly selling a 2 Live Crew album to minors.

Negotiators narrow budget differences

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Budget negotiators are ready to boost gasoline taxes by at least a nickel a gallon and are narrowing differences over new taxes for the rich and cuts in Medicare benefits.

After a weekend of dickering, that featured a well-timed walkout by an unusually talkative White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, a final agreement on a $250-billion assortment of tax hikes and spending cuts remained elusive.

"It's a very difficult negotiation," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said as talks among congressional leaders ended late Sunday. "Our problem is trying to put something together that passes both houses."

Lawmakers planned to resume their search today for a compromise package that would satisfy President Bush and allow Congress to go home for the year by week's end.

Narrowing one important dispute, Democrats agreed to accept a nickel increase in the 9-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax, two cents less than Republicans wanted. The Senate, last week, approved a nine-cent boost, but the House insisted on no change.

Divisions remained over how much new taxes the rich should pay. The two sides seemed to be nearing an understanding — amazing progress considering Bush's opposition to any tax increases just a few months ago.

Both sides were willing to boost the marginal rate on the wealthiest Americans — families with incomes above $180,000 a year — to 31 percent, up from the current 28 percent. And each party was will-

Saddam consents to free some Americans

By ANDREA HAMILTON
Associated Press Writer

Saddam Hussein has agreed to release some sick and elderly American captives, the leader of the American-Iraqi Association said today. The Iraqi leader also asked his parliament to consider letting all French hostages leave.

American and Australian sailors, meanwhile, halted and boarded an Iraqi freighter in the Gulf of Oman that over the weekend had ignored warning shots and defied orders to return to Iraq, a U.S. military spokesman said.

The 5,200-ton Iraqi vessel was stopped as it sailed toward the Arabian Sea. It had been shadowed during the night by U.S. and Italian warships, said Cmdr. J.D. Van Sickle, a Navy spokesman.

The operation went smoothly with "no shots fired, no resistance met," Van Sickle said. He said the boarding was "still in progress" and "the crew of the Iraqi ship is cooperating with the boarding party."

Salim Mansour, the head of the American-Iraqi Association, leads an American-Iraqi delegation that met with Saddam on Sunday night. He said today that he received a commitment from the Iraqi leader to release Americans.

"We don't want to talk about figures or names at the moment, but I'm happy to announce that some good news will come up," Mansour said.

It was presumed Mansour spoke about Americans held in Iraq and Kuwait, which Saddam annexed after his Aug. 2 invasion of the emirate. Saddam considers Kuwait Iraq's 19th province.

About 700 Americans are being held in Kuwait, and more than 300 in Iraq, many at strategic sites to deter a possible attack by the multinational forces arrayed against Iraq in the Persian Gulf.

How's that?

Q. How did Ann Landers get her start?
 A. The woman we know as Ann Landers was not the original Ann Landers columnist. According to the Dallas Morning News, in 1955, Esther Pauline Lederer (Eppie) felt bored and restless, so she contacted the Chicago Sun-Times to ask if she could help with the Ann Landers column. She was told that Ruth Crowley, who wrote the column, had recently died and that a competition was under way to find her replacement. For one of Eppie's tryout letters she called her friend, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, for assistance. The powers that be at the Sun-Times were impressed and she got the job.

ing to limit the deductions that people earning more than $100,000 can claim.

A big gap existed over a Democratic demand to levy an additional 7.5 percent surtax on those with incomes above $1 million. Republicans said they would not accept the plan, and instead offered a proposal - rejected by Democrats - to reduce deductions on incomes above $1 million by 8 percent.

In addition, Republicans wanted to lower from 33 percent to 31 percent the tax rate on families with incomes between $80,000 to $180,000. Democrats opposed the idea.

Negotiators also moved closer to each other on Medicare. Democrats would restrain the growth of the program by about $44 billion over the next five years. Republicans want the cuts to be $3 billion deeper.

About one-fourth of the reductions would be borne directly by the 33 million handicapped and elderly people who use the program. Rostenkowski said the two sides were less than $2 billion apart on the precise cut to be aimed at beneficiaries.

Democrats also want to boost the $51,300 wage cap from which Medicare taxes are deducted to $125,000. Republicans would increase the cap to $98,000. The 1.45 percent Medicare tax is part of the Social Security deduction.

The final plan also is certain to include higher taxes on cigarettes, alcohol, luxury items such as furs, and airline tickets.

Cuts in crop payments to farmers, new fees for federal environmental tests and Coast Guard services, and stingier benefits for retired civil servants and veterans were also destined for the final bill.

Sunday afternoon speaking to reporters just in time to make the evening's network news programs, the usually gruff Sununu complained that Democrats were dawdling rather than responding to the administration's offer to raise taxes.

Congressional study-itis may be going by boards

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS
 WASHINGTON — If the Agriculture Department is truly interested in saving money, it could consider eliminating some of the scores of studies that high-salaried economists and policy analysts spew forth each year.

Farm scene

But Congress has called the tune until now, leaving USDA no choice but to study such things as gypsy moths, brucellosis, flower sales and composting.

This could change under the 1990 farm bill approved last week by conferees from the House and Senate.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., was fed up with all the expensive studies the USDA was ordered to perform and conferees approved his amendment to cut back on some of the load.

"Many of these studies are duplicative and unnecessary, and very likely will never even be read or used to shape future policy decisions," Dole said. "This provision removes some of the nonsense which an election year has put into the farm bill."

Dole said his plan could potentially save up to $100 million by limiting the studies. "Let's save some money for a change and stop this silly study craze," he said.

Under his plan, the USDA would choose a minimum of 12 studies to be carried out as part of the five-year farm bill. The selection would also have to gain the approval of Senate and House agriculture committee chairmen.

According to Dole's office, the massive farm bill calls for 168 studies, reports and surveys.

The significance of the Dole amendment is that USDA would be able to pick and choose those subjects for study, with committee approval. Previously, it was mandatory for USDA to study whatever was specified.

Many of the studies over the years have been self-serving instruments for farm commodity groups, agricultural industries and individual members of Congress. Studies are sometimes an easy way to impress the home folk and to delay or affect legislative action.

In short, some of the USDA studies can be pretty dear to the hearts of certain lawmakers.

For example, when Senate members of the farm bill comference committee tried to eliminate a study on roses and other flowers, the House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, jumped to its defense.

The study on the effects of imported flowers on the domestic cut flower industry meant a lot to the House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, said de la Garza.

Flower-growing is an important industry in Panetta's northern California district.

"I don't want to make a big issue of this," said Sen. Richard Lugar, of Indiana, the ranking Republican on the committee. "But our research shows that in 10 of the last 13 years there has been a cut-flower (study) program" by the government, including the U.S. International Trade Commission.

De la Garza insisted another study was necessary. The Senate side of the conference table surrendered.

More than 200 studies were listed in the House and Senate farm bills. Some duplication appeared to exist even within single portions.

In the Senate bill, for example, the title on trade specified four separate studies or reports on: export assistance update; the trade assistance office; export sales, use of credit guarantees and direct loans; and food aid assistance.

The bill's portion about conservation sought a "study of compost uses and processes for composting agricultural wastes." It also asked for studies on "outreach to socially disadvantaged farmers" and "consolidation of USDA offices on Indian reservations."

on condition of anonymity they had no independent confirmation of Mansour's claims, but added: "We understand that what Mansour is saying could turn out to be true."

Also today, oil prices in New York opened down more than $3 a barrel — at $30.65. In London, North Sea Brent Blend oil fell to $29.10. Since the Persian Gulf crisis began, oil prices have fluctuated wildly on world markets, reaching above $40 a barrel at times, compared with pre-crisis levels of $22 a barrel.

Oil prices fell today on reports that Saudi Arabia's defense minister, Prince Sultan, suggested Arab countries were willing to grant Iraq "all its rights." The market interpreted this as a sign Saudi Arabia was prepared to agree to Kuwait ceding some land to Iraq.

In other developments: —Diplomats in Baghdad said a letter from Americans and other Westerners detained at strategic sites in Iraq reached a Western Embassy today. In the handwritten note, the captives complained about their treatment.

—Britain said today that Iraqi troops in Kuwait have rounded up seven more Britons and are holding them at the occupied city's Regency Hotel to await transfer to Iraq. The news comes one day after former British Prime Minister Edward Heath said Saddam had promised to release an unspecified number of sick and elderly British hostages on Tuesday.

—President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt traveled to Saudi Arabia today on his first overseas trip since Iraq invaded Kuwait. Mubarak, whose country is the leading Arab contributor to the multinational force, was expected to visit with his troops and King Fahd.

Saddam, in a letter to the Iraqi parliament, said that legislators should discuss freeing French nationals held in Iraq and Kuwait. He said such a move would be a sign of Iraq's friendship with France.

There are more than 300 French citizens in Iraq and Kuwait.

French leaders have favored linking a solution to the gulf crisis with negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians over the Israeli-occupied territories. Saddam has tried to make the same linkage.

Saddam's request, reported by the official Iraqi News Agency, did not say when the parliamentary discussion should take place.

To enforce the U.N. trade embargo on Iraq, a multinational naval force has been patrolling the gulf. It has searched numerous commercial ships, and in a dozen cases warships have fired warning shots to halt suspected transgressors.

The latest incident began Saturday, when U.S. Navy and Coast Guard inspectors boarded the Iraqi freighter Al-Bahar al-Arabi in the Persian Gulf.

The ship agreed to turn back to Iraq because its cargo was prohibited under the sanctions, Navy sources said. They said the 5,200-ton ship was carrying plywood and steel pipes.

But the freighter continued to sail southward, despite the fact that the O'Brien early Sunday fired three separate volleys of warning shots from its deck and machine guns in an attempt to again halt the vessel, the sources said.

The O'Brien and the Italian frigate Libeccio shadowed the vessel overnight.

The boarding team today included 15 men from the Australian missile frigate HMAS Adelaide and 11 from the American frigate USS Reasoner, Van Sickle said.

The ship had been sailing southward toward the port of Aden in Yemen, where there are strong sympathies for Saddam and his struggle with the West.

Military sources in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, said it was likely that the ship would be impounded at a port in Oman or the United Arab Emirates.

out red ribbons to everybody. "We have ribbons on classroom doors, the cafeteria and students are wearing red ribbons," SHS Student Council President Lance Hall said. "Also, Students Against Drunk Driving are sponsoring a locker-room decorating contest. The first three winners will receive prizes for their effort."

Wednesday is Red Day at Stanton schools. All students will be urged to wear something red to signify a drug-free environment. Before the homecoming game against Coahoma, the student council will release balloons as part of the project.

A note of thanks

We are grateful for the love and support of all our many friends during the illness and death of our daughter, Frances Rhodes Graham. We thank you for the memorials in her memory.

You were there when I (Fiji) was in the hospital. The visits, cards and food brought after we returned home were appreciated so much.

You seem to always be there when we need you.

Most of all, we thank you for your prayers that helped us through these difficult times. May God be with you each and everyone.

Fiji and Finley Rhodes.
