Grenade found near highway

LAREDO (AP) — a grenade, believed to be live, was found today under a bench at a rest area near here, authorities said. Fire Chief Mike Perez said the grenade, discovered at Highway 83, was being disarmed. The grenade was found shortly after 7:30 a.m. about two miles southeast of Laredo. Authorities would not immediately confirm a report that a note may have been attached to the grenade. Other details about the grenade's discovery were still sketchy, officials said.

Mary Kay donates products to troops

SIERRA VISTA, Ariz. (AP) — The founder of Mary Kay cosmetics gave a $50,000 boost to an effort to provide Christmas gift packages to Fort Huachuca soldiers serving in the Persian Gulf. Mary Kay Ash visited the base Wednesday to donate 5,000 tubes of sun screen for soldiers supporting Operation Desert Shield. She also donated 1,800 cans of shaving cream and 3,000 sample kits. The items had a retail value of $50,000. Her appearance was initiated by Julie King, a Army civilian employee whose sister, Joanne Krieger, works in Mary Kay's corporate public relations office in Houston. Fort Huachuca is home of the Army's Intelligence Systems Command, which has sent elements of the 11th Signal Brigade to Saudi Arabia. Bob Evans, one of the organizers of the locally organized "Christmas Stocking" gift effort, said a manufacturer donated $25,000 worth of sunglasses to the project. He said the manufacturer did not wish to be identified.

Chairman: funding a challenge

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas National Research Laboratory Commission's greatest challenge is to keep the flow of federal money moving in its direction, its new chairman says. But J. Fred Bucy of Dallas said that "every year will be a fight to keep the funding going." Bucy, retired president of Texas Instruments, was appointed as a member and chairman of the commission, Gov. Bill Clements announced Wednesday.

Saddam invites families to visit hostages

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press Writer

Faced with heightened talk of war and vehement complaints about its treatment of American hostages, Iraq is offering to let relatives visit the captives for the holidays.

Iraq is holding hundreds of Westerners at strategic installations as shields against a feared attack. In letters released today by a U.S. official, two of the captive Americans described their isolation and anxiety.

"You can survive. But individually interned, (one) must be psychologically capable of living alone within himself," said one of the letters.

It ended with a plea: "Please do not forget the guest hostages." Iraq refers to the captives as guests.

The names of the letter-writers were not released for security reasons. The letters were brought to the U.S. Embassy by non-American foreigners, said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

A spokesman for the Iraqi government insisted Wednesday that diplomats in Kuwait and other foreigners were "well-treated and all receive good care."

The Iraqi offer of holiday visits came just hours after President Bush said he was fed up with the treatment of American diplomats in occupied Kuwait. Iraqi troops who are trying to starve them out of the U.S. Embassy.

Also causing concern were new expressions of pessimism from U.S. allies. Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and a British commander said Wednesday that war now seems increasingly likely.

But a Soviet envoy who met twice last month with Saddam Hussein said the Iraqi president is more open to a peaceful settlement than he was in early October.

Yevgeny Primakov also said Wednesday that Iraq agreed that 2,500 Soviet citizens can leave Iraq before the end of November. He said 34 Soviet military experts were flying home to Moscow today.

Meanwhile, a published report today quoted U.S. officials as if there is an allied assault on Kuwait by sea, Iraq planned to blow up several oil tankers. The report in the Washington Times said three tankers are anchored near the Saudi Arabian coast, and there may be others as well. The infor-

Gulf war could triple oil prices

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — War in the Persian Gulf would send a shock wave through world oil markets aimed directly at the wallets of consumers, petroleum industry officials say.

"The day the war starts, prices will explode," John Lichtblau of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee on Wednesday, and "there is no limit" to how high prices could rise. Short of quickly winning a war against Iraq, he added, there is little the United States could do to control prices.

Oil prices hovering in the $33 per barrel range could easily triple, said Professor Fariborz Ghadar of George Washington University's business school. "I would not be surprised if oil prices reached $100 per barrel," he said.

Translating a crude oil price increase into a higher price at the pump is an inexact science. But some industry experts use a ratio of 12 cents more per gallon for every $5 increase in the price of crude.

At $100 per barrel, under that formula, gasoline could rise to nearly $3 per gallon at the pump.

The reasons for the sharp price rise, the experts said, would be fear that war would disrupt supply lines, combined with the likelihood that a gulf war would curtail Saudi Arabia's oil-producing capabilities.

With oil production already at or near capacity, oil-consuming states could do little beyond release oil reserves onto the market, the witnesses said.

Conversely, they said, if Iraqi President Saddam Hussein suddenly ends the crisis by withdrawing his forces from Kuwait, the price of oil could drop just as suddenly to levels below those that preceded the Aug. 2 invasion.

"That range is likely to be reached approximately 48 hours after the crisis is over," Lichtblau said.

If the stalemate continues, it is likely that oil prices will remain about where they are, the witnesses said, but they could jump quickly with any disruption of a supply system already straining to

Williams, Richards meet on television

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — In their final televised meeting before Tuesday's election, the gubernatorial candidates each voiced disapproval of a state income tax and disagreed sharply on abortion.

Republican Clayton Williams said he would favor a state law requiring parents to be notified before minor daughters could obtain abortions.

Democrat Ann Richards said parents should be involved but writing a law to require it was so difficult that some young women could be driven to "back-alley butchers."

The two participated in a "mini-debate" arranged by KDFW-TV and conducted in separate studios Wednesday night. They have not taken part in a face-to-face debate during the campaign.

Each candidates promised to build more prisons, start "boot camps" for first-time offenders and be generally tough on crime.

Williams asked Richards whether she would veto a state income tax, as he has promised to do. "I'm totally against an income tax, have said that consistently," Richards replied. The Republican said afterward that Richards still hasn't promised Texans a veto.

The two were at odds over parental consent

C-City seeking advice on vacancy

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

COLORADO CITY — With City Council elections postponed in May due to a voting rights suit filed by a Hispanic organization, city officials now are waiting for a legal opinion to find out if they can appoint someone to a recently vacated council position.

The open City Council seat was vacated by Dee Hearn whose resignation was accepted at a regular Council meeting Oct. 9. She said her son is in Saudi Arabia and she needed to take care of his three-year-old child. She is also a full-time student at Western Texas College and plans to attend the University of Central Texas in Killeen next semester, she said.

The issue may be on the agenda for the next regular meeting Nov. 13. "I feel like it will be," said City Manager Brenda Hammond. "I'm waiting from the city attorney to see if we can (appoint someone) or not."

There is currently no Hispanic on the City Council and members of the League of United Latin American Citizens, the group which filed the voting rights suit in December, plan to submit a petition Friday to request that one of their members be appointed.

City Attorney Tom Rees did not return a phone call this morning but LULAC attorney Rolando Rios, San Antonio, who has looked into the matter, said he believes they can appoint someone.

"My understanding is that they can pending another election," Rios said.

The next election will be held in May, according to an ordinance passed in August as part of an out-of-court settlement which still needs approval from the U.S. Justice Department. Six at-large positions will convert to single-member districts and the mayor will remain at-large. District 1 on the westside has a majority of Hispanics.

Meanwhile, LULAC member Esther Goss said she will present petitions to city officials Friday to recommend that Sara Ortiz, one of the founders of the local LULAC council, be appointed to the vacated position. Her husband, Oscar, is president of the council.

Bill on TV violence goes to Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation giving the television industry a three-year antitrust exemption to adopt voluntary guidelines on violence in programming is awaiting President Bush's signature.

The House and Senate included the provision in a bill on the federal judiciary passed during the waning hours of the 101st Congress.

Bush is expected to sign the measure, according to an aide to Sen. Paul Simon.

The Illinois Democrat, who has been trying to get such legislation passed since 1985, has cited studies that show by age 16, the average American child has seen 200,000 acts of violence on television, including 33,000 murders.

Simon said the bill could help "scale back the atmosphere of violence" on television.

The American Civil Liberties Union has attacked the bill as being a "Trojan Horse" that could lead to censorship of TV programming.

U.S. will pay back dues to U.N.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five years after it started withholding dues from the United Nations to force a belt-tightening in the world organization, the United States is paying up.

The 101st Congress, in its final days, passed legislation to pay nearly $800 million in current and back dues owed to the United Nations, its specialized agencies and other international and regional bodies to which the United States belongs. President Bush has indicated he will sign the bill.

The United States pays one-fourth the cost of U.N. operations, the largest share of any country.

The congressional action "underscores the increasingly important role the United Nations is playing in a changing world," Assistant Secretary of State John R. Bolton said Wednesday.

The administration has warmed toward the United Nations in recent months, largely because of tough stands the world organization has taken against Iraq following its invasion of Kuwait.

The bill also includes $33 million in current dues for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and $54 million in dues owed the Organization of American States.

But federal law requires the United States to withhold future dues from the United Nations or any U.N. agency that deviates from a new cost-screening system.

Protesters crash prayer meeting

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An evangelist ordered the devil to get out of the San Francisco area without delay as a shrieking crowd of 1,000 pro-homosexual activists cursed him and his 5,000 Halloween "prayer warriors."

The two-hour confrontation Wednesday evening took place at the Civic Center Auditorium, the site of a Christian crusade organized by evangelists who say the city is plagued by immoral homosexuals, crime, witchcraft and general sin.

After the three-hour revival, motorcyclists tossed a tear gas canister into a crowd leaving the hall, police said. Police donned gas masks and some 300 people, their eyes tearing, fled upwind.

Health care costs are soaring out of control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over the next decade, millions more Americans will be shut out of the health care system unless the federal government acts to prevent a national catastrophe, two social activist groups said.

With the nation's health care costs expected to soar from $606 billion this year to $1.5 trillion by the turn of the century, America's quality of life is on the line, said Robert Brandon, vice president of Citizen Action.

"Increasingly, health care is becoming a luxury item that fewer and fewer individuals and families will be able to afford," Brandon said. "The already frayed safety net will be in shreds by the end of the decade."

A report by Citizen Action and Families USA Foundation, released Wednesday, projected meteoric rises in health care costs that it said would harm American businesses and hurt their competitiveness with foreign companies. Americans, too, would have to spend larger portions of their income on medical care and insurance, the report said.

"We've got to do something to get health care costs under control or health care is going to be unaffordable for millions of Americans," said Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA Foundation.

"Unless the United States takes bold action now to curb health care costs, the explosion of health care costs will mean a declining standard of health care and a declining standard of living," he said.

The report does not recommend any specific solutions to the problem of rising costs, but at a news conference Pollack said, "This is a national problem... Ultimately we need a national system."

Pollack and Brandon blamed the rising costs on a variety of factors, including insurance companies' inefficiencies, escalating fees for doctors and hospitals and uncoordinated use of expensive, sophisticated technology.

The report, which lists state-by-state health care spending, identified Massachusetts as the largest per-capita spender. There, state and federal governments, residents, employers and other private sources will pay an estimated $3,031 for every man, woman and child in the state this year.

The national average is estimated to be $2,425 this year, rising to $5,515 by the year 2000, according to the report. It based the estimates on 1987 Medicare and Medicaid data.

President encourages birth control

LIMA, Peru (AP) — In his sharpest attack on the Catholic Church, President Alberto Fujimori has accused the church of controlling minds and obstructing freedom by refusing to support a planned birth control program for the poor.

"A sector of the church is restricting the freedom of citizens with its medieval opinions and recalcitrant positions," Fujimori said Wednesday.

"It is unethical to manipulate consciences and sow fear and doubt among the population."

The government "wants the use of contraceptives to be the free choice of citizens," Fujimori told a national mayors' convention in the coastal town of Huaral, 40 miles north of Lima.

A planned birth control program was announced last week for this overwhelmingly Catholic nation. If it is not put into effect, Fujimori said, Peru's population of 22 million would reach 30 million by the turn of the century.

The program would distribute free condoms and birth control pills to the poor.

Boat people struggle with guards

HONG KONG (AP) — Masked Vietnamese wielding homemade spears battled tear-gas firing security personnel today at a camp for boat people. Authorities said at least 16 people were injured, including three security officers.

The fight at the Whitehead Detention Center broke out in the early afternoon as corrections officers conducted a sweep for weapons, a government spokesman said. He said between 40 and 50 masked boat people were involved.

Tensions are on the rise in Hong Kong's squalid detention centers for boat people, temporary homes for thousands of Vietnamese who fled their homeland only to face the likelihood of repatriation.

Government officials said the three security officers suffered cuts and bruises, one Vietnamese woman was hospitalized and about 80 homemade spears were seized.

The sweep for weapons followed a fight Wednesday night between two groups of newly arrived boat people from the Haiphong area of northern Vietnam.

After firing three canisters of tear gas, the officers quelled the outbreak, said the spokesman, who cannot be identified under briefing rules.

The violence was the latest in a series of skirmishes among boat people and between Vietnamese and security personnel who patrol the camps.

Israeli stabbed in revenge attack

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Arab stabbed an Israeli garage owner 10 times in the chest and back in a Tel Aviv suburb today, the latest episode in a wave of Palestinian nationalist attacks, police said.

Shlomo Shtezi, 48, was stabbed in his automobile workshop in Rishon Lezion by a former employee who had slept in the shop overnight.

After revenge attacks last week, Defense Minister Moshe Arens closed off the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip for four days, barring Palestinians from entering Israel.

On Monday, Arens announced tougher restrictions for Palestinians to come to Israel from the occupied lands.

Children's TV needs guidelines

Congress, responding to complaints about the overcommercialization of television programs aimed at children, has passed legislation to curb such abuses. The bill would limit commercial time on such programs to 10½ minutes per hour on weekends and 12 minutes on weekdays.

The limits are more than fair to broadcasters. Before the Federal Communications Commission unwisely abolished advertising guidelines in 1984, commercials had been limited to 12 minutes on weekdays but only 9½ minutes during weekends. Four years later, a survey by the National Association of Broadcasters (which supports the bill) found that one children's program in five had more than 12 minutes of commercials, with some approaching 14 minutes; prime-time programs aimed mostly at adults have only about 8 minutes of advertising.

While the bill's limits on commercial time are modest, another element may turn out to have real long-term impact. It would require the FCC, when reviewing applications for license renewals, to consider broadcasters' overall record in serving the educational needs of children. That puts them on notice to provide creative and genuinely informative programming, not just cartoons or sitcoms, by way of meeting their obligations.

President Bush dislikes that provision, calling it a threat to broadcasters' First Amendment right of free expression. That concern might be valid if the FCC had a record for leaning too hard on broadcasters to meet their public service commitments. Nothing in its recent history, however, suggests any such thing.

Another welcome focus in the bill is on so-called "program-length commercials" — not those clearly labeled as such but children's programs in which program content is all but indistinguishable from the commercials, which hawk toy models of program characters and gadgets. The bill orders the FCC to study this phenomenon to determine whether corrective action is needed.

The absence of serious opposition to this legislation suggests two things: that by common consent, it's badly needed, and that it's at most a very modest incursion on the latitude of broadcasters.

'Tis the season to give our money to strangers

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Random thoughts while tending to my hurting wife and sick kittens:

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas... CHRISTMAS!?!?!?!?

That's right, folks. November is not even 24 hours old, and already we are beginning to be bombarded by advertisements advising us of the perfect Christmas gift for the perfect someone in our lives.

It's not fair. I'm still recovering from the post-Halloween blahs. I haven't even finalized my plans for Thanksgiving, and now some yahoo on the boob tube wants me to buy a copy of Wayne Newton singing Elvis Presley's favorite Christmas song or some such nonsense.

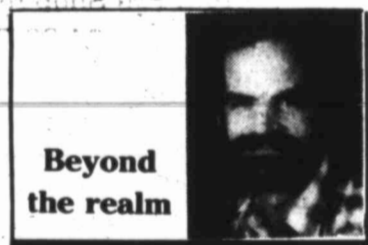

Yeah, like that'll get me in the Christmas spirit. More than likely, the only thing it'll get me is a case of heartburn — and more debt I don't need right now.

But I'm in a bind. You see, if I don't do at least some of my Christmas shopping pretty soon, my procrastination instincts will kick in, and the next thing you know, my family members will end up with Christmas cards again this year.

So shop I must, no matter how horrendous the idea seems. And, as anyone will tell you, I like shopping about as much as I'd like to buy a Christmas present for Saddam Hussein.

What makes shopping such a nightmare for me is not necessarily the crowds, the surly help, the screaming babies, the cramped parking, the high prices or the severe case of depression I get every time I have to give money to another person that I don't know — although those reasons combined are enough to make me want to pull out the few remaining strands of hair left on my head.

No, what really disgusts me about shopping is that I don't trust my own shopping instincts. Maybe it's a mental block or something, but I seem to be unable to purchase a gift that the person it's intended for will appreciate.

Beyond the realm

That's one thing I really admire about my wife. Give her 10 minutes and a blue light special, and she'll bag enough gifts to make it a very Merry Christmas in your average third-world country.

I, on the other hand, couldn't find the right gift for my wife if I had two weeks, six charge cards and she was there to tell me what she wanted.

If you think I'm joking, just stop by the house some day, and see all the presents my wife has already purchased for Christmas. You think I bought any of those bundles? Me? Surely you jest.

Things haven't gotten any easier as I get older. When I was young, I could always use my tender years as an excuse. After all, my dad would never complain about that tacky tie he received from his fine young son.

I don't have that excuse anymore, however. I am now an adult, which means that if I give my family and friends any after-shave, ties, socks or cookbooks, they will sadly shake their heads, mutter something like, "Thanks for nothing, deadbeat," and write me out of their wills.

I also have a wife and son to buy gifts for now, so some degree of consideration is required before I make a purchase. I don't think my darling bride would be too impressed if I bought her a chainsaw or something like that.

So, a-shoppin' I will go. Sometime during the next few weeks, I hope an item jumps off the shelf, grabs me by the lapels and screams, "Buy me, you fool, Geri really wants me for Christmas."

Failing that, I at least hope that whatever I buy her pleases her enough so she won't be tempted to throw it at me.

Ho, ho, ho.

Awards for good conduct

By ART BUCHWALD
They handed out medals on the shoulder of the Capital Beltway to lobbyists who had shown bravery and coolness under fire during the "Battle of the Budget."

It was a moving moment for the PAC soldiers who stood at attention with their checks in their hands as they presented arms.

Commended for bravery was Durban Dumbarton, chief lobbyist for the Golden Parachute Brigade. His citation read as follows, "Durban Dumbarton, by use of skillful maneuvers you single-handedly managed to stop any attempts to tax golden parachutes. In an effort to prevent the bill from getting out of committee, you threw your body on a surcharge amendment, thus saving the retirement incomes of thousands of high-priced executives, including everyone in the Fortune 500. Your President is proud of you."

The second was Sam Trubrinin. "Sam Trubrinin, during a night patrol in the Senate halls, you spotted a resolution urging a sin tax on fast food, which you represent. You tossed three grenades of PAC money at the Chairman of the Committee. The Chairman cried, 'I surrender,' and retreated while you captured a majority of fast food votes on the House floor."

"Suzie Total, as a registered lobbyist for chewing tobacco and baseball playing cards, you have demonstrated that when it comes to fighting the regulations in the Senate, you are capable of anything. By threatening to go in to a Senator's state and call him a closet heterosexual, you managed to get the Senate to pass a subsidy on chewing tobacco at a time when Congress was intent on reducing the budget by $500 billion. Not only did you risk your life for chewing tobacco, but you sacrificed everything to get a government subsidy on baseball cards."

"Fred Dimbleby, on October 9, 1990, you were asked by the cellulite industry to reconnoiter the White House and find out if the President felt as strongly against taxing cellulite now as he did when he was Vice President. You risked your life by climbing over the fence and crawling through the Rose Garden into the President's office. You found him in his jogging suit, driving his golf cart over to the couch to talk with John Sununu. Despite a fierce battle between you and Sununu, you were able to ask the President how he felt about taxing cellulite. The President told you, 'I have never taxed anything in my life and I'm not going to start now.' You then escaped under heavy fire and brought this important intelligence back to all the lobbyists who were dug into the trenches surrounding the Capitol."

"Theo Fremont, we honor you today with this special citation for changing the hearts and minds of 60 Republicans and 59 Democrats, just before the budget vote. You courageously bought $1,000-a-plate dinners for 3,000 political fundraisers, which provided key lawmakers with enough money to get re-elected for another term. Mr. Fremont, you were the point man for the anti-budget budgeteers, and the person responsible for sending our legislators back to the drawing board.

For delivering a defeat to those who would bring dishonor on this country, we present to you today this gold medal with a likeness of President Bush's lips on it, which are saying, 'Our country, right or wrong, as long as we don't have to pay for it.'

Tough talk is campaign tactic

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's escalation of threats against Iraq may be aimed at Saddam Hussein, but the message also is bound to play well to Republican audiences.

With just a week to go to midterm elections, growing talk of war in the Persian Gulf is providing a diversion for the White House after weeks of pounding on taxes and the budget.

"I think Americans should be focused on what's going on in the gulf and in many ways it's too bad we had that dip in attention during those two or three weeks," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, only partly in jest.

Bush asserted today that he was keeping his Persian Gulf policy totally separate from the political process.

"I don't think even the most cynical would ever suggest that a president would play politics with the lives of American kids halfway around the world," Bush said.

Fitzwater and other Bush aides deny any political motivation in the new round of coordinated saber-rattling by Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

But there's no denying that emphasizing the gulf crisis in the closing days of the campaign may help steer the electorate's attention away from the budget fiasco and the president's reversal of his "no new taxes" pledge.

On Monday, Bush said in San Francisco that he would not hesitate to use force if provoked. And he discussed possible military action against Iraq in a meeting with congressional leaders Tuesday on the gulf crisis.

Baker, who told a Los Angeles gathering "we will not rule out a possible use of force if Iraq continues to occupy Kuwait," embarks Saturday on a week-long visit to Arab and European countries, beginning with Saudi Arabia.

There is considerable speculation that Baker will discuss military options with Saudi leaders.

And the United States was clearly favoring the United Nations Security Council's vote Monday declaring Iraq responsible for all damage and personal injuries resulting from its occupation of Iraq.

The council said the UN would take "further measures" under its charter, although the use of force was not explicitly mentioned. It was the latest in a series of resolutions designed to increase pressure on Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

At the White House, Bush discussed military options with congressional leaders — and was cautioned by some of them not to give up too soon on the economic sanctions against Baghdad, or let impatience draw him into war.

"There's concern on Capitol Hill... that this is somehow a prelude to immediate military action," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. After stepping up its threats against Iraq on Monday, the White House was trying to dampen fears Tuesday that fighting was imminent.

"I would say that it's pretty much steady as she goes," Fitzwater said, trying to downplay suggestions that Bush's heightened talk about military options was new.

"If that's true, I'm a dismal failure, because I'm trying to play it down, be calm," he said.

Asked pointblank whether the get-tough rhetoric was designed to help focus the final week of the election on the Persian Gulf instead of new taxes, Fitzwater said:

"I don't think there has been a shift... I think the big factor is simply that the Congress is leaving and they finished up all the legislation, and now this has become a major focus again, which is probably good."

Ed Rogers, White House political director, said there has been no effort to gin up Bush's speeches for the last few weeks to stress his toughness on the Persian Gulf. "That's pretty much a constant," he said.

At the same time, Rogers said that Bush has clearly stepped up his partisan attacks on Democrats, reflecting GOP strategy for the final week of the campaign.

Bush leaves Thursday on a cross-country political barnstorming tour for GOP candidates — many of whom have kept him at arm's length on tax issues. The trip will last through Election Day.

On Tuesday, addressing a group of about 500 party workers at a hotel rally, Bush moved easily from denouncing the Democratic Congress as a "hot dog factory" to seeking to put a GOP seal on his Persian Gulf policy.

"In times of crisis and challenge, the American spirit has been a constant source of strength. It's true now, obviously, in the Persian Gulf, and it's just as true at home today... the spirit to which Republicans are responding."

Father's experience is lesson for others

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "A Loving Mom in Durham," about using harnesses for her young children, I had to write.

Our son, Carl, was also a very active child — almost from birth. My mother-in-law suggested we consider a harness when we took him in large crowds, etc. I thought she was old-fashioned and cruel. Her insistence eventually caused a rift in our relationship.

When Carl was 3 years old, he and I were downtown waiting to cross a street when he noticed a large stuffed animal in a store window. He jerked his hand from mine and dashed into the street. Before I could catch him, he was struck by a car!

Both of his legs were broken; one was badly crushed. He also suffered head and chest injuries. At first, the doctors doubted that they could save him, but after three major surgeries and nine weeks in the hospital (three weeks in intensive care), Carl survived. He sustained some permanent loss of vision and balance, still suffers occasional headaches and walks with a limp.

Carl is now 5, and he is facing five more major surgeries over the next 11 to 15 years to deal with his crushed leg's inability to grow as quickly as the other.

Shortly after the accident, I was hospitalized for a nervous breakdown, and I'm still in therapy to help me deal with my feelings of guilt about the accident. The poor woman who struck Carl is still in touch — no one will ever convince her it was not her fault.

I must apologize for the length of this letter, Abby, but I just had to tell you how I feel about harnesses for hyperactive children.

When I see a child wearing a harness, I always smile and say, "Good for you!" to the adult at the other end. — A LOVING DAD IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: Please help me to impress on schoolteachers that the now popular idea of using baby pictures for graduations and year-books is not a good idea.

I have cared for many foster children in my home, and I also have four adopted children, all of whom have no baby pictures. All of our children's sixth-grade graduations used baby-picture slides. Some children are hurt by this. Often, the teachers would suggest that they bring in some other picture, but when everyone else brings in a cute baby picture, and your picture is of Little League a year ago, it's like announcing to everyone that you didn't have a family until a few years ago. These kids dread such occasions.

Don't get me wrong — I've seen many touching ceremonies done with baby pictures of the class, but I've also seen the tears, as a child desperately looks for a baby picture — anyone's baby picture — to take to school so he won't be different than the others. — SENSITIVE TEACHER.

Design winners protest new plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four architects who won a $20,000 contest to design a Korean War veterans memorial saw the government turn the plan into a battle scene that glorifies war, their lawyer says.

"Architects have to have some faith that when they enter a design competition and win, then that's what it's going to be," attorney Robert Sokolove said in an interview Wednesday. "You can't change the rules in the middle."

Particularly galling to the architects is that the new version depicts soldiers in battle-ready positions, Sokolove said. The original plan called for "a dream-like" collection of 38 soldiers moving, some unevenly, across a remote landscape toward an American flag.

The architects are fighting to have the original design restored. Sokolove said he learned of the changes two months ago when they were presented by a Washington architectural firm that he thought had been retained only to implement the earlier plans.

But Col. William Ryan, director of operations and finance for the American Battle Monuments Commission, said last week that the new model "is so far superior to the other design, it's unbelievable." The commission erects and maintains memorials honoring American soldiers.

The new design retains the essential elements of the old one, adding a pool, pathways and benches and cutting back bushes — all to accommodate large numbers of visitors, Ryan said.

Sokolove said the new, circular pathways "look like an I-95 interchange."

He represents four Pennsylvania State University architects who beat out 1,018 competitors last year to design the memorial across the Reflecting Pool from the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial.

President Bush was the guest of honor as a one-eighth scale model was unveiled at the White House on June 14, 1989. The entry was declared the winner of a $20,000 prize by a jury of Korean War veterans.

The soldiers were to show "the experience of moving into and through war," according to the architects' original design statement.

But the redesign "no longer alludes to the struggle and sacrifice of walking a hostile landscape, but instead glorifies war" by depicting a battle, said a statement delivered by the architects to President Bush's aides last month.

The changes were ordered by the National Capital Planning Commission, the Commission of Fine Arts and the Interior Department, Ryan said. Also playing a role in the final design, he said, were Korean War veterans serving on the panel that selected the design.

"The main thing is the 38 heroic statues of ground combat personnel. They're still there," Ryan said. He said the final design was submitted by the Cooper-Lecky architectural firm of Washington.

Sokolove said the government was still using a photograph of the original design to raise funds for the project. But Ryan said that is only because photos of the new model are not ready.

Originally budgeted at $6 million, the memorial is now expected to cost $14.9 million, according to Ryan. Organizers hope to have a dedication in 1993.

Some 5.7 million Americans served in Korea during the 1950-53 conflict, and more than 54,000 were killed.

The controversy recalls the designing of the Vietnam War memorial. A vocal group backed by then-Interior Secretary James Watt opposed the 1982 design as unheroic.

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. — Residents of Leningrad hold a memorial service at a commemorative stone in the town's Revolution Square Tuesday evening for those who perished in Stalin's concentration camps.

Victims honored

MOSCOW (AP) — Tamara Skiba was 20 when she was sent to the Kargopol labor camp in the Soviet north. By the time she got out nine years and seven months later, she was an old woman.

"They broke my spine and took out my female organs. They ruined one ear and pulled out almost all my teeth," she said, pulling back her withered gums to reveal rows of false teeth.

Mrs. Skiba, 63, was among an estimated 3,000 to 6,000 Soviets who marched to the headquarters of the KGB security police on Tuesday night for the unveiling of a monument to victims of political repression.

The daughter of a high-ranking army officer, she was arrested and charged with spying for the West when her father fell out of favor with Josef Stalin in 1947. A decade later, after Stalin's death, she was released and rehabilitated — given a clean political bill of health — by Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

"This building is a symbol — a symbol of lawlessness, inhumanity and illegality," historian Yuri Atanasyev told the crowd.

In Moscow, a city with scores of monuments to wars, poets and politicians, the new monument is the only one to victims of repression.

It is a simple but eloquent marker: a rough piece of rock, 3 feet wide and 8 long.

"This was my father," said Alla Krichevskaya, crying softly as she held up a faded photograph of a young man in an old-fashioned high collar.

"I never knew him. He was sent to Solovetsky after his arrest in 1932, a few months before I was born, and they shot him in 1937."

Symphony tickets are on sale now

Don't forget about the opening concert for the Big Spring Symphony's new season. The event, set for Nov. 10 at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, will feature a variety of sounds — from the music of the Big Band era to that of familiar local hit, "Big Balls in Cowtown."

A dance will follow the performance, courtesy of Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys. There will be many more familiar songs, a sing-a-long, and a tribute to Leroy Anderson.

Tickets are available at several local businesses, as well as the Chamber of Commerce office and at the door.

MCT opens run of 'Runner' Friday

Midland Community Theatre presents "The Runner Stumbles" beginning this weekend. The psychological mystery is based on the true story of a priest accused of murdering a nun in Michigan in 1909.

It is a membership show but single tickets are available. Call 682-4111 for information.

Cold War kids

For a kid growing up in the post World-War II suburbs, it was a comforting world of Captain Kangaroo on the tube, a new washing machine in the basement, a shiny gas guzzler in the garage and a bomb shelter in the back yard. This photo, the popular character Beany Boy and a 1955 issue of Time Magazine, are from the new exhibit at the Smithsonian Institution Museum that chronicles childhood and American culture from 1945-68.

HC Theatre looks at lying

The play "A Pack of Lies" by Hugh Whitmore, opening tonight at Howard College, examines lying from almost every conceivable angle.

In the theatre department's production of the play, directed by Bill Doll, one character stands out. It seems as though the play's entire process depends on Barbara Jackson, played by Lanelle Markgraf. Perhaps it does.

Barbara appears to carry the world on her shoulders — and she definitely carries the audience right there, so they can see through her eyes. It is through her memories, emotions and outbursts that we experience what "Lies" has to tell us.

Markgraf handles a difficult role in outstanding fashion. Her Barbara is straight from the pages of English author Virginia Woolf, smoothly-crafted from the tip of her sculpted hairdo down her straight back to the tips of those constantly-at-work fingers.

After Barbara learns that lies have betrayed her, and that because of lies she will lose her best friend, the smooth surface of her demeanor begins to crack. Markgraf takes the audience along for this rocky ride.

We are never left out of what's going on with Barbara, no matter how small the detail. And because of that, this play succeeds in its apparent mission.

The lies we discover here are not all outrageous or shocking, though some certainly are. Here, too, through Barbara's observations, we begin to question those "little white lies" told to protect ourselves.

Telling all these lies, she says at one point, hurts, like grief. And in the course of two-plus hours it takes to tell this spy-novel shocker, Barbara must surely cover all stages of the grief process. In the end, the audience will grieve as well.

Plan to arrive early for Marine Band Sunday

Ticket-holders for Sunday's United States Marine Band performance should plan to arrive by 2:15 p.m. at the Municipal Auditorium. The performance, which begins at 2:30 p.m., is free to the public.

After 2:45 p.m., all those without tickets will be allowed to be seated in the remaining space. The general public is welcome and invited to attend the performance.

As of presstime, a few tickets were still available at the office of the Big Spring Herald.

The band, billed as "The President's Own," is on an extended tour with stops in Abilene and Odessa.

Play review

by
Debbie Lincecum

As her husband, Bob, Ben Fritzier does a fine English gentleman, complete with pipe. Daughter Julie, played by Angela Reed is another standout and entirely believable as a member of the "younger set." The family as a unit works very well together.

Brandy Qualls as Helen Kroger has what must be a tough role. Qualls must create a Helen who, though living constantly, is believable to the audience because she is believable to her "friends." This she does, and adds a twinkle that makes Bob's "Dizzy Lizzy" comments seem right-on.

As her husband, Peter, M. Joel Jennings is less of a focal-point than Qualls becomes as the silly, chattering Helen.

The set, designed by Doll, is functional and believable as a family home. In several of the more "talky" scenes, however, you may find yourself reaching for the volume knob to turn down the living room wallpaper.

Doll has pulled together a group of strong actors for this difficult production. A warning to lovers of cop-shows and shoot-em-up movies, however, there is a lot of talk in "Lies."

Once again, Doll has offered up a tasty dish for Big Spring theatre-goers. And that's no lie.

The play begins tonight, continuing Friday and Saturday in the Howard College Auditorium. Performances begin at 8:15 p.m.

NEW YORK — From left, Tom Selleck, Alan Rickman and Laura San Giacomo horse around for a photographer during a party last week. The three are starring in the upcoming movie release "Quigley Down Under," an adventure set in Australia. It is set to open this week. So far, reviews say it may be "Crocodile Dundee" in reverse. Director Simon Wincer is best-known for "Lonesome Dove" on TV.

Candidate would not make laws from bench

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
 Staff Writer

Addressing a Libertarian Party call for legalizing victimless crimes as a protection of individual freedoms, Court of Criminal Appeals Place 3 candidate Carol Caul, 42, Houston, said she would not make laws from the bench.

CAROL CAUL

However, Caul, the only Libertarian in the five positions up for election on the state's highest criminal court, said she would give the greatest support possible to civil liberties guaranteed under the Texas and U.S. constitutions.

"I do not believe a judge has the authority to legislate from the bench. They would be usurping the Legislature and the right of the people to vote on such issues," said the oil and gas attorney and consultant while in Big Spring Tuesday during a three-city campaign swing in West Texas.

Caul faces Democratic incumbent Bill White, San Antonio, in the Nov. 6 general election. No Republican is running.

By law, judge candidates cannot discuss positions on issues which may be part of past or future cases in the court. But in light of a Libertarian platform which advocates the legalization of victimless crimes such as the use of heroin, cocaine and marijuana as well as removing government services and interference in a free market system, she did confirm that she would uphold state laws as they now exist.

"I would uphold the laws of Texas unless I think they are unconstitutional," she said. "I'm not an activist in terms of thinking I can sit on the bench and make up laws."

That includes upholding the residual powers clause in the U.S. Constitution, which reserves any rights to individuals that are not conferred to national and state governments. "My attitude is if the people haven't granted the government an express power, then the government doesn't have it," Caul said.

In other issues facing the court, Caul said she is sympathetic to victims rights but says the issue cannot be legislated by the court. She also said she would work to reduce the possibility of cases being dismissed on technicalities and would work to speed up the caseload.

Caul said victims presently have recourse through civil suits and in Texas, unlike some other states where legislative victims rights initiatives are pending, victims are allowed to be present during sentencing hearings. Any changes in the system would have to be done in the Legislature, she said.

Commenting on public statements made by White declaring that he is a victims' rights advocate, she said, "I don't know what authority he has from the bench to give them a fair shake."

In a prepared statement she said that White has not specified what he means when he says "fair shake" and he has not referred to any cases of a victim not being given a fair shake. "I think he meant that he felt for the victim and I do too," she said.

White, contacted Wednesday, said he made his comments in response to allegations that the criminal justice system "bends over backwards" to help defendants.

"I just feel like the victims are entitled to a fair shake just as defendants are," said White, a former criminal district attorney in San Antonio and an assistant district attorney there for 15 years. "I certainly intend to follow the law as I always have."

White has said that he supports prosecutors, victims of crimes, law abiding citizens and the harmless error rule. If an error is not harmful to the defendant then the case does not have to be reversed and started over, according to the rule.

To help avoid cases being reversed due to technicalities, Caul said she wants to develop a task force to provide written updates to law enforcement agencies to assist them in knowing what constitutes legal conduct "rather than being second-guessed by the court."

Caul, a 1973 graduate of Arizona State University with a jurisprudence degree, said there is no particular reason why she chose to run in the Place 3 race instead of any of the other at-large positions.

It is "just happenstance," she said. "That doesn't have anything to do with the judge who's in office."

Although her law experience is in civil areas, she said, "The same skills and techniques that apply in one area of the law apply in other areas of the law. The constitutional issues are what you're confronted with (in the Criminal Court of Appeals)."

She pointed out that five incumbents on the nine-member court had not had previous experience as judges before assuming office.

Caul was also a 1988 candidate for Place 2 on the court. Before joining the Libertarian Party, she had been active, first as a Democrat and then as a Republican, while in school.

Fund-raiser gives hope

By DEBBIE LINCEUM

Hall-Bennett Clinic raised about $10,000 at its first-ever fund-raising event Friday, giving employees and directors hope for its future, the administrator said.

Joe Bowman said the lunch and dinner-dance event drew between 350-400 people. Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys played to about 250 locals in the giant tent on the clinic lawn.

"We accomplished some good, positive public information," Bowman said. "We were able to let people know we are still around. I was surprised that so many people thought we had gone away for good. We're definitely still here."

"I think a lot of people had a very good time (at the event)," he added.

Board member Jerry Worthy said the money will be a "good start."

"We are thankful to the people of Big Spring for recognizing the historic aspects of that building and its future ahead."

He said the board is pleased to have completed the first phase of a three-phase plan for the clinic.

"The three phases are to make our income match our (expenses), to stabilize the operation; the recruitment of physicians as needed, and begin improving the building; and phase three is a continuation of phase two," Worthy explained. He said the first phase was met a couple of months ago when the clinic no longer lost money.

Of the money raised by the barbecue-dance, Bowman said plans are set to put it "in reserve" until enough is saved to fund the establishment of an ambulatory surgery center. He said another fund-raiser is tentatively planned for the spring.

"We'll need $100,000 to really remodel, decorate and reopen (the center)," he said.

Clinic directors and employees were "extremely" pleased with the turnout for the event, he said.

"Donations are still coming in," he said. "I got some yesterday and more today. Of course, (donors) are welcome to keep sending them in."

Hall-Bennett, operated by a non-profit foundation, hopes to attract more doctors as well as open the day-surgery center. The clinic is celebrating the 60th year since its founding.

 mation was attributed to Pentagon, military and intelligence officials, who were not named.

In Washington, oil experts told U.S. lawmakers that the outbreak of war over Iraq's refusal to relinquish Kuwait could triple oil prices to $100 a barrel — causing gasoline prices to rise to $3 a gallon.

Washington did not immediately comment on the offer of holiday visits for the hostages, which came Wednesday from an Information

Ministry spokesman in Baghdad. But Britain's Foreign Office on Wednesday called it "a cynical propaganda move."

"It's probably just another psychological ploy," said Dawn Bazner, whose husband, Mark, was videotaped early in the crisis asking Saddam to let foreign women and children go.

"I'm hoping that we won't have to visit (Mark) there... but if it comes down to it, I will go," she said in Palm Desert, Calif.

The Iraqi spokesman said foreigners were not being mistreated.

"The safety of all diplomatic premises and staff and the American Embassy in Baghdad and the former American Embassy in Kuwait are guaranteed," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In Baghdad, Information Minister Latif Jassid said it was possible the United States was spreading "false reports" on the treatment of its "foreign guests" to seek an excuse to attack Iraq.

Already the biggest U.S. deployment since the Vietnam War, Operation Desert Shield is expected to grow by an additional 100,000 troops from the current 210,000 in the Saudi desert and aboard ships in the region.

About 100,000 soldiers from other countries also are in the region, facing Baghdad's estimated 460,000 troops in Kuwait and southern Iraq.

meet demand. "This is a very tight market," Ghadar said. "A pipe blowing up in Nigeria, a fire in Venezuela, some other disruption," could be enough to spread panic and push prices higher.

"The witnesses said there was little the United States could do to break up the oil cartel and that meantime, the simple laws of supply and demand would govern the price of oil.

Witnesses rejected as unworkable, for example, a suggestion by Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., that Saudi Arabia unilaterally lower the price of its crude in exchange for U.S. military support. The market would quickly absorb the cheap Saudi oil and no other countries would be compelled to lower their prices, Lichtblau said.

The best the United States could hope for is more money from Saudi Arabia to help pay the cost of Operation Desert Shield, he said.

Candidates

 for abortion. Richards has described herself as pro-choice on abortion, while Williams opposes abortion except in case of rape, incest or danger to a mother's life.

"I've been talking about the right to privacy for a very long time," Richards said.

"I think any parents should be involved in such a difficult decision, regardless of the age. The problem is that when you write legislation, you have to take the exceptions, like incest. Then what are you going to do?"

"The difficulty is that no recourse is offered to her. And what we're going to do is find young women going to back-alley butchers as we did in previous years, and no one wants that," she said.

But Williams disagreed. "Well, you can legislate many things," he said. "I believe in my heart that when a 13-year-old girl gets pregnant — a major problem for her life — that the parents should be involved. I feel like we must have legislation that be involved in that decision."

"I will work for legislation to involve the parents, that it's required for the parents to participate in that decision before she can have that abortion."

Williams said he supports the state GOP platform on other abortion issues. He said he opposes abortions for gender selection and favors requirements for "safe health clinics" that perform the operations.

"We had many young women die last year because abortion clinics weren't licensed," he said. But Richards said clinics are required to be licensed. "They are routinely examined by the health department," she said.

Richards also said a parental consent law could send some young women before judges. "The absurdity of it is, that the judge's decision is if the person is too immature to make the decision then she must bear the child. If she is mature enough to make the decision, then she can terminate the pregnancy."

Williams later said, "Part of the Republican platform establishes health and safety standards for clinics. The standards are not up to snuff and it is our belief that they should have more emergency equipment and be prepared for bleeding problems... There were several young women who died in abortion clinics across the country, I think seven or eight." He said he didn't know if any were in Texas.

The Republican candidate also was asked during the debate about his failure during a televised interview Tuesday night to remember what the proposed constitutional amendment on this year's ballot would do. Proposition One would clarify when the state Senate must confirm or reject appointees of governors.

Williams said he had been briefed on the amendment, which was on an absentee ballot he cast earlier. But he said it slipped his mind during the TV program.

"I just have to fess up: I forgot that," he said.

Steers trying to keep their intensity

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Editor

The Big Spring Steers go after district win number four when they host the Pecos Eagles Friday at 8 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

The Steers, unbeaten in district play, are coming off an impressive 16-7 win over the Sweetwater Mustangs last week. The Eagles, coached by Daylon Whitehurst, have a 2-6 overall record and 0-3 district mark.

But that district mark is misleading, according to Big Spring coach David Thompson. "I think Pecos has a good football team. The last two weeks they've had chances to win. They could've beaten Monahans and they should've beaten Andrews," said Thompson.

Except for the Steers, Pecos has played the brunt of the district lineup. The Eagles lost to Sweetwater, 27-7, in the district opener, then was edged by Andrews, 26-25, and lost to Monahans, 14-10 last week.

Whitehurst puts the close losses in blunt perspective. "We're scrappy, we've just had a hard time winning. If we had had a break or two we could've won — but if doesn't count in football. The bottom line is they're in the W column and we're in the L column," he said.

One positive thing about the losses is that it shows the Eagles what they are capable of doing, said Whitehurst. "The kids are still playing hard, they're not quitting. I hope the close losses encourages them to keep playing hard. They have good attitudes," he said of his players.

He's not looking forward to playing the Steers. "They play with a lot of intensity; they just about killed Sweetwater," he said. "We have the sixth ranked offense in the district, they have the best defense. I'd say that's quite a test for us. It might be like running into a brick wall."

The Steers have the second best defense in the state, allowing 134 yards per game. They haven't allowed a district team 100 yards so far.

"I think their defense is better than last year," said Whitehurst. They've got lots more speed on it. They're quicker, they're more aggressive and they have good size."

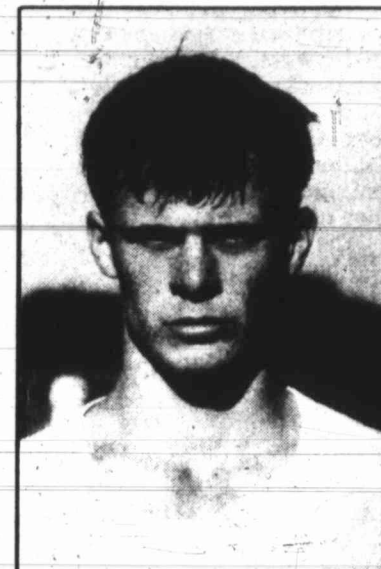

Last week the Steer defense held a speedy Sweetwater team to 90 yards. Leading the charge was end Fernando Alvarez with 13 tackles. Middle linebacker Felipe Saiz recorded nine tackles and one quarterback sack. Tackle Joey Franco made seven tackles and strong safety Freddie Rodriguez and tackle Freddie Williams made six tackles each. Strong safety Pat Chavarria and cornerback Abel Hilarrio picked off passes.

Coach Thompson is hoping his team can keep that same intensity for Pecos. "The main thing we've got to guard against is being down and not taking them seriously," Thompson said. "We have maintain that consistency. Against Sweetwater we were ready to play

New look Lady Hawks start season Monday

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Editor

The Howard College Lady Hawks will have a new look for the upcoming basketball season in more ways than one.

The Lady Hawks will showcase their new look Monday when they host Ranger Junior College Monday at 6 p.m. in the season-opener at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. It also will be HC's homecoming.

In coach Royce Chadwick and wife and assistant coach Lisa's second year at Howard, the Chadwicks have a hard act to follow. Last year the Lady Hawks were consistently ranked in the top 20 in the nation, earned a berth in the regional tournament and finished the season with a 27-5 record and 14th national ranking.

The bad news is that Chadwick lost four starters from that team, including two-time all-conference post player Shannon Lawson, along with all-conference forward Linda Waters. Also gone is forward Ana Carroll and point guard Monique Cook. All went to Division I schools.

The good news is that Chadwick returns All-American guard Kim Robinson from Slaton, and guard Cindy Williams from Houston and Homer, La. forward Lisa Moore, both who saw lots of playing time last season.

Also returning is post player Mulu Tosi from San Diego, Calif. Tosi saw limited playing time last season.

To go along with his four sophomores, Chadwick has 11 freshmen. Unlike last year's Howard's team, which played a halfcourt offense and defense, this Howard team will run more.

"Last year we worked it around and played a halfcourt game, this year we'll play a fullcourt game," said Chadwick. "We'll play more fullcourt defense, we'll try to dictate the tempo with our quickness."

"A lot of people like to see it, and I'm one of them; with the ability these athletes have, I can use it this year. I never have been able to do that before."

shooter who has good outside range. Last year she averaged six points and four rebounds per game.

Robinson has the chance to be the first-ever Lady Hawks to be a two-time All-American. Last year playing the shooting guard, she averaged 13 points, nine rebounds, three steals and five assists per game.

Chadwick said he will probably move the 5-foot-11 Robinson to the point guard spot. Robinson is coming off knee surgery and Chadwick says she is fully recovered. "In 10 days she was back at full speed; the knee is really better than ever," said Chadwick. "In the preseason scrimmages she shot 55 percent from the floor. If we play her on the point, we'll have to give up her offensive rebounding. I think she likes playing point because she can get a better look at the defense and read it over."

The 5-foot-8 Williams will play the other guard spot. Last year Williams displayed the characteristics of a streak shooter who has good outside range. Last year she averaged six points and four rebounds per game.

This year in preseason games, Williams shot 52 percent from the floor. "Cindy has the potential to score four or five baskets in a row, she's very streaky," said Chadwick. "This year she's more mature. If she's hot she'll shoot it, if not, she'll do something different."

Chadwick said that if Robinson plays the shooting guard spot, Williams will play the small forward spot.

Moore, a 6-footer, will play the strong forward position. Last year she averaged six rebounds and seven points per game. "She improved her shooting touch, she can shoot from about 15 feet," said Chadwick. "In the preseason she was the second-leading rebounder behind Mulu. In about 20-25 minutes she

Bucs manager tops in the NL

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Leyland thought some changes might be good for himself and the Pittsburgh Pirates this year.

So he stopped screaming at his players, stopped smoking cigarettes and stopped drinking coffee. Calmed down, he then charged up his team and turned the Pirates from a fifth-place club into division champions.

On Wednesday, Leyland was rewarded with the National League Manager of the Year award.

"Sure, I'd thought about having a chance to win it," he said at Three Rivers Stadium soon after receiving the honor. "But it still was a shock. It was an unbelievable feeling."

Not much was expected from the Pirates this season after they went 74-88 in 1989. But they bounced back to become contenders, held up to the pressure of a stretch drive and held off the New York Mets in September to win the National League East. Pittsburgh finished 95-67, second best in baseball to Oakland's 103-50.

Leyland, 46, was a catcher for seven seasons in the Detroit organization and managed for 11 years in the Tigers' system.

He joined the White Sox as a coach in 1982 and studied under manager Tony La Russa, who remains one of Leyland's closest friends, and stayed in Chicago until he was hired by Pittsburgh.

Leading the way was Leyland, regarded as one of the most intense men in the majors.

"I took a little bit of a different approach. Everybody in the world has to make adjustments," Leyland said. "I stayed a little more low-key and I disciplined myself more."

"I think they were tired of hearing me yelling all the time and seeing hamburgers go flying across the clubhouse," he said. "I thought this club was at a point where it was important to keep things low-key and let the players stay focused on what they had to do."

Leyland had Barry Bonds and Bobby Bonilla for offense, but did not have a set starting rotation or a relief ace. Leyland juggled his staff and 18 pitchers wound up winning games.

Leyland got 17 of the 24 first-place votes and finished with 99 points. Lou Piniella, who led Cincinnati past Pittsburgh in the playoffs and sent the Reds to a sweep of Oakland in the World Series, got three first-place votes and was second with 49 points.

Montreal's Buck Rodgers also got three first-place votes and was tied for third with 32 points with Los Angeles' Tom Lasorda, who got the other first-place vote. San Francisco's Roger Craig and New York's Bud Harrelson tied for fourth with two points each.

No manager was named on all 24 ballots. Two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in each NL city vote, and voting was completed before the start of the playoffs.

Jeff Torborg of the Chicago White Sox was selected the American League manager of the year on Tuesday. "This is kind of like icing on the cake for this season," Leyland said. "But I still wish I was in the position Lou Piniella was."

PITTSBURGH — Jim Leyland of the Pittsburgh Pirates smiles at a reporter's antics during a press conference Wednesday night where he was being named 1990 National League Manager of the Year.

Leyland had spent most of his 22 years in baseball in the minors before getting his first major league managing job, in 1986 with the Pirates. At the time, they were among the worst teams in the majors, on and off the field, and there was talk that the franchise might leave Pittsburgh. "A lot of people asked why in the world I took that job and I'd facetiously answer that it was the only one that was offered," Leyland said.

Jury rules against Tyson

NEW YORK (AP) — A jury decided that former heavyweight champion Mike Tyson fondled a woman at a Manhattan dance club in 1988 and awarded the woman $100 in compensatory damages.

The five-women, one-man jury returned to Manhattan's federal court today to hear testimony on Tyson's financial status before ruling on punitive damages. The woman, Sandra Miller, asked for up to $2.5 million in punitive damages in her civil lawsuit.

The jury deliberated about 4½ hours before finding that Tyson, the former heavyweight champion, grabbed Miller's breasts and buttocks after she refused his advances at Bentley's Disco on Dec. 10, 1988.

McEnroe chokes with double fault

PARIS (AP) — John McEnroe was in no mood to shake hands. Not after double faulting on match point in the richest indoor tournament of the year.

"I guess you can say I choked," McEnroe said.

No one could deny that.

After coming back from a break down in the final set against Switzerland's Jakob Hlasek in his first match in the $2 million Paris Open, McEnroe watched his second serve at 5-6 in the tiebreak go long. A whistle went up from the Cyclops machine signifying a fault.

That was just the start of the whistling as the French crowd started their own form of booing — whistling — as McEnroe stomped off the court without shaking Hlasek's hand.

"I know John. So sometimes it is just that he is so upset that I am not taking it bad," Hlasek said.

McEnroe won the first set handily, but then slammed a ball into the net in the second game. Then, after the seventh game, he hurled his racket across the court that earned him a penalty point on his serve.

Still he won his game but lost the set, forcing a third set that eventually went to the deciding tiebreak.

"I stayed with him," Hlasek said. "You have to stay with him and stay cool."

With the match on the line at 5-all in the tiebreak, Hlasek had a service winner to take him to match point. Then McEnroe served once, twice and was out of the tournament.

It was the second time that Hlasek has knocked McEnroe out of the Paris indoor tournament. Two years ago, Hlasek won their quarterfinal battle.

"It's not easy to play McEnroe here because of the crowd and the pressure," Hlasek said. "But it's the second time that I've defeated him here and that gives me confidence."

Cowboys coach sees bright future

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have tripled last year's victory output and coach Jimmy Johnson sees nothing but improvement down a road leading to next April's bountiful NFL draft in which they have three first-round draft picks.

Dallas was 3-5 at mid-season and could have been at .500 if it wasn't for another Randall Cunningham football miracle which stole a 21-20 victory for the Philadelphia Eagles away from the Cowboys last Sunday.

Although Dallas is next to last in the NFL in total offense, Johnson said the Cowboys have avoided the panic button.

"We're already a much better football team than the one we had when the season started," Johnson said. "The second half of the season I think we can show what we can do offensively. We'll still be inconsistent at times because we have some players who didn't go to quarterback school or training camp."

Johnson was speaking of first-round draft pick Emmitt Smith of Florida, who made quarterback school but missed training camp; second-round draft pick Alexander Wright of Auburn, who missed some quarterback schools and training camp; fullback Alonzo Highsmith, who was obtained in a trade from Houston a week before the regular season began; and offensive guard John Gesek, who was obtained in a trade with the Los Angeles Raiders.

"We had three motion penalties last week against the Eagles and they were against players we didn't have in training camp," Johnson said. "They were critical penalties, too. That's the kind of thing that causes you to be inconsistent. With another training camp we can get rid of those kind of mistakes."

Smith is learning the NFL is tougher than the Southeastern Conference.

He averaged 5.6 yards per rush in his career at Florida. For the Cowboys, he's averaging 3.6 yards per carry.

"He's going to be a big-time back in this league," Johnson said. "But missing training camp hurt him a lot."

Johnson has enjoyed this season much more than the last.

Johnson, who was 1-15 in his rookie year, called it the worst coaching experience of his life.

"It was miserable and I never want to go through another like it," said Johnson, who was used to playing for national championships at the University of Miami.

This week he said, "I feel better about our future than I've ever felt before. We're getting ready to take advantage of our opportunities. We're getting the financing set up to be aggressive in signing our draft picks."

The Cowboys will have 17 draft picks in April, including three first rounders.

Welcome back Cecil

TOKYO — Detroit Tigers' Cecil Fielder (right) and wife Stacey, walk in front of rows of photographers after arriving at Tokyo International Airport Wednesday evening. Fielder, who played in the Japanese League last year, is among U.S. Major League all-stars who will play the Japanese in an eight game series.

Former defensive back's lawsuit continues

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Seahawks and their trainer have been dropped as defendants from a lawsuit filed by former All-Pro safety Kenny Easley, who claims large doses of a medication led to kidney damage that ended his career.

King County Superior Court Judge Steven Scott on Wednesday

entered an order dismissing Easley's claims against his former team and trainer Jim Whitesel.

Easley will continue to pursue his injury lawsuit against the other defendants: Whitehall Laboratories of New York, the distributors of Advil; team doctors James Trombold and Pierce Scranton; and Dr. Gerald Pendas, a kidney specialist.

In return for his voluntary dismissal, the Seahawks will not oppose Easley's application for workers' compensation.

"We are very pleased that the suit against the team and Jim Whitesel has been dismissed," Seahawks President Tom Flores said in a statement.

Lady Hawks

averaged nine. In our intersquad game, she scored 20 points in 20 minutes.

Although the 6-foot-2 Tosi probably won't start, Chadwick said she'll see lots of playing time. Last year Tosi had troubles with her fouls; she averaged three points and four rebounds per game.

In pre-season action this year, Tosi shot 57 percent from the floor and averaged 13 rebounds per scrimmage. "Mulu improved her free throw shooting to 73 percent from 50 percent last year," said Chadwick. "When she posts up, she's unstoppable. She tends to rush her shot and shoot offbalance. But teams will have to consider her an offensive force before it's over."

A freshman that is making a strong bid for a wing position is Felice Mann, a 5-foot-7 product from Buffalo, N.Y. Last year Mann led prep schools in scoring, averaging 43 points per game. Chadwick calls her a "scorer." In pre-season she shot 59 percent from the floor.

"She's a tremendous offensive player — her one weakness is playing team defense," said Chadwick. "Her range is from 16 feet on in, and I've seen her score with everything from jumpers to left-handed hook shots. She's understanding that she has to learn the concept of team-defense though."

Another frosh that has the inside track at a inside position is 5-foot-11 Desiree Wallace from Amarillo. Chadwick says Wallace is a very good defender. "She's a tenacious defensive player. She can rebound and she's quick and very smart. She shot 44 percent in the scrimmages, but she does the dirty work. She hustles and plays good defense," he said.

Two other freshmen that will be valuable assets are 5-foot-7 Kathy Mangram from Matador and 6-foot-1 Yolanda Wells from Houston.

"Kathy has been a pleasant surprise," said Chadwick. "She played post in high school and is trying to make the change to guard. She's doing well; her ball handling isn't pretty, but she always gets its there."

He said Wells could blossom into a strong scorer. "She's a great offensive threat at the post, but she has really struggled on defense. Her future looks extremely bright."

The Lady Hawks will also have a local blend on the team in 5-foot-6 point guard Peggy Smith from Big Spring and 5-foot-10 wing player Kelly Williams from Coahoma. Chadwick said Smith has done a good job of rehabilitation from knee surgery, and Williams will be a help in the long run.

Rounding out the squad are guard Julie Lempea (5-6) of McMinnville, Ore.; post player Rebecca Brown of Jayton (6-0), forwards Lidia Oliveira (5-10) and Marcia Oliveira (5-9) of San Paulo, Brazil; and LeAnn Heinrich of (5-8) of Slaton.

Looking far down the road, Chadwick expects South Plains, which went to the national tournament last year, to be the toast of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

"They've got nine sophomores, and all five starters back," he said. "Odessa will be solid, but they'll lack the depth they've had in the past. Frank Phillips has only two girls from the United States on the team, so they're a question mark. New Mexico is supposed to have two girls from New York that are awesome, plus they've got a 6-4 girl."

"I feel pretty good going into the conference race talent-wise. I felt better about the team last year because we had more sophomores though. In this league you have to rely on your sophomores."

he'll be healthy. They line up in the offset I and try to run, I imagine they'll try to throw some. We'd like to make them throw it, because they're a running team."

Jenkins, nursing a bad ankle, won't be healthy for the contest, but will play, said Whitehurst, the 170-pound senior leads the Eagles with 618 yards, averaging 5.2 yards per carry. The second-leading rusher is fullback Chris Machuca who has 254 yards.

Quarterback Brian Gonzales has completed 27 of 86 passes for 559 yards and one touchdown, but also has thrown eight interceptions.

Wide receiver Cruz Abila has 11 catches for 228 yards and one TD.

Whitehurst says his top defenders this season has been Abila at free safety and Jason Chandler at defensive end.

Offensively Big Spring won't do anything different. "We're not going to do anything we haven't been doing. We'll try to run the ball and pass some," said Thompson. "This week we've been throwing and catching the ball well. Oscar Cervantes will play a little more at receiver."

Thompson said Alvarez is nursing a hurt knee but will play. Outside linebacker Kevin Rodgers is out with a bruised sternum. He'll be replaced by Richard Krissen, who filled in well for Rodgers in the second half last week, added Thompson.

Whitehurst says if his troops are to have a chance at an upset, they'll have to play keep-away. "We have to keep the ball away from them. We'll have to keep the ball, make some first downs and try to score every so often. If we could score 21 points, it might be a close game."

Syracuse gridded charged with abuse

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse defensive back Darrell Jones has been charged with sexual abuse and trespassing for allegedly fondling and harassing a 19-year-old student in her apartment, school officials said today.

The junior backup from Somerset, N.J., also has been suspended from the team and will not attend practice until allegations surrounding the incident are resolved, said sports information director Larry Kimball.

Jones, 21, was arraigned on second-degree criminal trespass and third-degree sexual abuse charges in city court Tuesday. He was released on his own recognizance pending a pre-trial hearing Nov. 20.

Leonard's wife wants more money

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The estranged wife of boxer Sugar Ray Leonard has charged him with adultery, physical abuse and humiliation in court records filed in connection with their divorce proceeding.

A hearing has been scheduled in Montgomery County Circuit Court Friday before Judge William Miller on Juanita Leonard's request to increase monthly payments for alimony and child support from $1,200 to $50,000. That action was confirmed by celebrity divorce attorney Marvin Mitchelson, who is representing Mrs. Leonard.

Miller ordered the court files unsealed Oct. 22 at Mitchelson's request. The files initially had been closed to the public because of concerns about media publicity and protecting the privacy of Leonard's children.

Ray Leonard and his wife were married Jan. 19, 1980. The couple have two children, Ray Charles Leonard Jr., 16, and Jerrel Leonard, 6.

Sugar Ray Leonard filed for divorce in March of this year. Her attorney said the couple permanently separated in December 1989.

An amended petition filed by Mrs. Leonard alleges that Leonard "has persistently engaged in cruelty of treatment" and has assaulted her bodily and has harassed and humiliated her.

Mike Trainer, Sugar Ray Leonard's lawyer and agent, has filed a motion to strike her allegations of abuse and "unfitness."

Follow the blue dotted line

NEW YORK (AP) — When Juma Ikangaa won the 1989 New York City Marathon in course-record time, he did not even take the shortest route to the finish line.

Sunday, when he tries for his second straight victory, Ikangaa will have no trouble identifying that course. It won't be the yellow brick road ... it will be the blue dotted lines.

Race director Fred Lebow has requested those lines to be painted in order to help the elite runners like Ikangaa.

"Last year, he did not take advantage of the shortcuts," Lebow said Wednesday.

Even so, Ikangaa was timed in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 1 second, smashing the course record of 2:08:13, set by Alberto Salazar in 1981. He also set Tanzanian and personal bests in beating runner-up Ken Martin of the United States by 1:37.

"I am ready again to do well," Ikangaa said.

He probably will have to be at his best to win for the second consecutive year. Although Martin is in the field again, he is hurting, and Ikangaa's strongest opposition is expected from Douglas Wakiihuri of Kenya.

Wakiihuri, the 1987 world champion, 1990 Commonwealth Games gold medalist and 1988 Olympic silver medalist, has beaten Ikangaa in three of their four meetings.

Ikangaa is not concentrating

NEW YORK — Marathon runner Greta Waitz of Norway warms up in Central Park, site of the finish of the New York Marathon Sunday. Waitz, who is competing in the race, has won the event nine times.

solely on Wakiihuri, whose best time is only 2:09:03, in winning the 1989 London Marathon.

"You should not underrate anyone," he said. "Anyone who is going to line up is ready. If you concentrate on him (Wakiihuri), you could get a problem."

Ikangaa appears ready for Wakiihuri and any other surprises. He has been training hard for more than three months — two in his native Tanzania and one at Alamosa, Colo.

In Tanzania, Ikangaa concentrated on mileage, reaching 180 miles per week. In the 7,046-foot altitude of Alamosa, Ikangaa concentrated on speed.

The speed work was necessary to give Ikangaa a strong finishing kick, something he has lacked in some races. His improved speed has "given me the confidence to run faster," Ikangaa said.

If he runs faster than a year ago, it would put Ikangaa into the elite group of runners who have broken the 2:08 barrier. Only nine others have done it, led by world record-holder Belayneh Densimo of Ethiopia, who clocked 2:06:50 at Rotterdam in 1988.

And he wins again, he would be only the second foreigner to win the New York City Marathon twice, joining Orlando Pizzolato of Italy, the 1984-85 winner.

It also would further enhance his stature in Tanzania, where he admittedly is the most well-known sports figure.

The NBA goes to Japan

TOKYO (AP) — With the next sumo wrestling tournament nearly two weeks away and the 1990 Japan Series baseball championship only a fading memory, what are Japanese sports fans to do?

For the first time, they will be able to go to a National Basketball Association game when the Phoenix Suns and the Utah Jazz open the regular season with a weekend series at the Tokyo Metropolitan Gymnasium.

"The only thing we don't know is how the fans will react here," Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said today.

Organizers say they expect capacity crowds of about 10,000 for the games at Saturday and Sunday, the first NBA played outside North America during the regular season.

Both teams arrived Wednesday. Fitzsimmons had run the Suns through practices at 3 a.m. both Monday and Tuesday in Phoenix to help the team get acclimated to the 16-hour time difference. Three in the morning in Phoenix is 7 p.m. in Tokyo.

Jazz coach Jerry Sloan did not have the luxury of attempting such adjustments because his team had to fly to Japan from New York after ending its exhibition schedule on the east coast.

Wilson in trouble again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Cincinnati Bengals running back Stanley Wilson is facing robbery charges in connection with a purse snatching last month, police said.

Wilson was banned from the NFL for using cocaine the night before the 1989 Super Bowl game between the Bengals and the San Francisco 49ers. He was not allowed to play in the game.

Sgt. Roy Langheld said Wilson, 28, was arrested Wednesday night in the Los Angeles suburb of Wilmington after officers stopped him in a car which witnesses identified as one used in a purse snatching on Oct. 10.

He is scheduled to be arraigned sometime this week in Superior Court in Long Beach, Langheld said.

Wilson also was arrested last January in Gardena for scuffling with officers and possessing drug paraphernalia.

He missed the 1985 and 1987 NFL seasons for violating the league's drug policy and entered a Phoenix drug clinic in 1989.

Names in the news

APPLE VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Cowboy star Roy Rogers is the "terror of the hallways" and anxious to leave the hospital where he is recovering from heart surgery, his son says.

The 78-year-old actor, who appeared in 87 Westerns, probably will be released from St. Mary Desert Hospital this week, Roy "Dusty" Rogers Jr. said Wednesday.

"He's the terror of the hallways from what I understand. He's walking from room to room and going as far as he can go," he said.

Rogers turns 79 on Monday, and the family usually holds one party for him, his wife, Dale Evans, who turned 78 Wednesday, and Dusty, who was 44 on Sunday.

"Dad was saying, 'It's mom's birthday, I've got to go out and get her something.' I told him, 'There ain't no way you're going to do it this year,'" Roy Jr. said.

Rogers underwent a four-hour operation last month in which doctors replaced a weak spot in his aorta with a graft of Dacron.

ROY ROGERS PELE

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Soccer great Pele celebrated his 50th birthday by playing with Brazil's national team against a group of world all-stars in what he said was possibly his last appearance on a soccer field.

Pele, who led Brazil to three World Cup championships in the 1950s and '60s, and the No. 10 jersey he made famous during the exhibition game Wednesday.

Pele surrendered to fatigue and emotion after 40 minutes, during which he made some clean passes, missed a long goal shot and led a fast counterattack in the 2-1 loss.

He ended his professional career in 1977 with the now-defunct New York Cosmos.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Better organization and scheduling will lead to a sharp rise in income. Place greater emphasis on making the most of every moment and opportunity! Certain changes you make in your routine in early 1991 will turn you into a much more effective worker. Scrutinize a proposal you receive next March for hidden clauses. Skimming over the fine print could be a costly mistake. Be sure to choose a romantic partner whose strength of character matches your own. Shared values and goals are essential.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: presidents James Polk and Warren Harding, actor Burt Lancaster, actress Alfre Woodard.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get in touch with a friend you have not seen for a long time. A business function could turn into a social event. Dress your best. An attractive newcomer enters the romantic picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be careful not to misinterpret a loved one's casual comment. Trying to do too much around the house this evening could leave you feeling exhausted. Remember, you have important things to do tomorrow.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep in step with the people around you. Act on the advice of well-informed friends. Community activities deserve more of your attention. Business associates will fulfill their promises.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Welcome a golden opportunity to give free rein to your artistic talents. Higher-ups are contemplating a promotion. Think twice before raising a sensitive subject with a friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance heats up. You may be asked to do a favor for an older person. Do not begrudge the time it takes. Refuse to put all of your savings into one venture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Consult the experts if faced with a tricky problem. Someone may ask personal questions you would rather not answer. Protect your reputation. Make long-range plans for the future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Turn to someone with a wealth of experience if you want sound advice. An employment situation is in a state of flux. Do not express an opinion until you have all the facts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You could have trouble coping with a co-worker's moods today. Try to find work that will let you keep a low profile. Romance will be particularly rewarding for married couples this weekend.

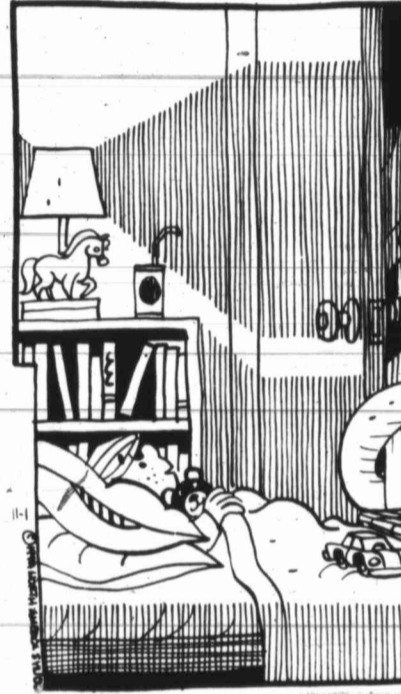

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your confidence grows as the day advances. Try not to talk too much on the job. Secrets between you and a loved one really should not be shared with others. Be discreet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Optimism will help you overcome any roadblocks you encounter now. Give anyone with a get-rich-quick scheme a wide berth. Only hard work will bring you lasting success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are likely to get your own way today. Certain people will be more accommodating than in the recent past. Pay more attention to the hopes and needs of your loved ones.

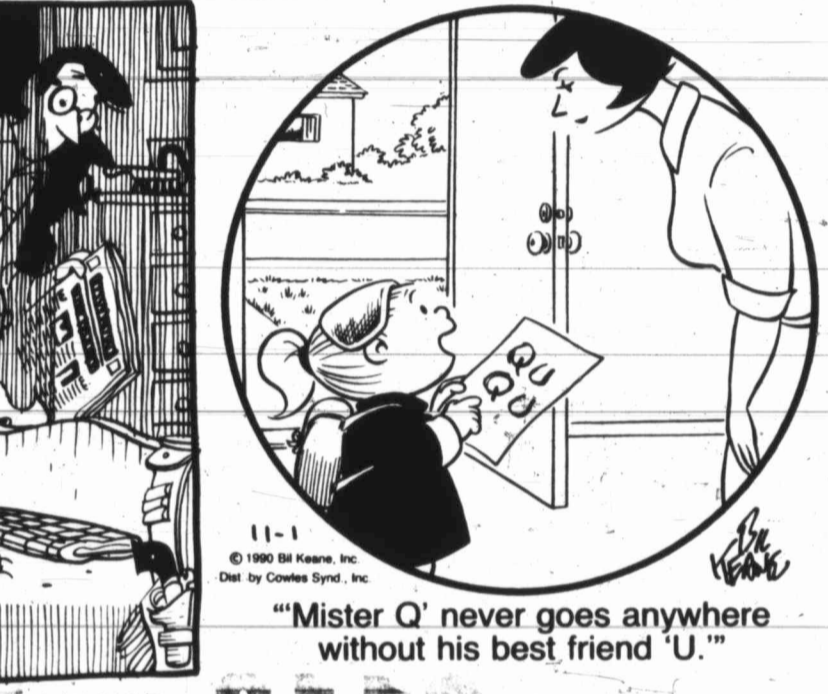

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A business or personal alliance will be strengthened this weekend. Take the initiative and financial success will come more easily. If you work overtime, smooth things over with mate.

GASOLINE ALLEY

The two-million dollar catcher

NEW YORK (AP) — If Darren Daulton can get more than $2 million per season, imagine how much it will take to get George Bell and Fernando Valenzuela. It will cost a lot more to sign Darryl Strawberry, which is why the New York Yankees say they might not even try to lure him from the New York Mets.

In the first big deal of the off-season, Daulton and the Philadelphia Phillies showed that the salary spiral for free agents isn't likely to stop.

Daulton, a career .206 hitter before this year, and the Phillies agreed Wednesday to a three-year contract for $6.75 million. Daulton, valuable as a left-handed hitting catcher, batted .268 with 12 home runs, 30 doubles and 57 RBIs.

Daulton, 28, recently filed for free agency and although other teams were allowed this week to express interest, no club could make a financial offer until next week.

"We're glad to have him before he goes into the so-called mine field," Phillies general manager Lee Thomas said. "Once you get out there you don't know what can happen. You want to keep your own and that's what we did."

Daulton will get a $500,000 signing bonus, $1.75 million in 1991 and $2.25 million in each of the following two seasons.

"It makes him with Lance Parrish the highest-paid catcher in baseball," said Daulton's agent, Arn Tellum. "That's how we got to the number."

Parrish signed a $6.75 million, three-year deal with the California Angels last winter.

Greg Harris, 13-9 with a 4.00 ERA for Boston, was eligible to file for free agency. Instead, he re-signed with the Red Sox for $2.8 million over two years.

Bell, Valenzuela and Sid Bream each filed Wednesday, bringing the total of free agents to 89. Brian Downing is among nine other players eligible to submit their names by Sunday's midnight deadline.

Cincinnati declined to exercise its 1991 option on second baseman Ron Oester and Pittsburgh declined to exercise its option on pitcher Ted Power, and both players immediately filed for free agency.

Strawberry already was free, and has said he would be interested in playing for either the Mets, Los Angeles, California or San Diego. There has been speculation that the Yankees, in need of a star attraction — and preferably a left-handed slugger — might consider Strawberry.

Strawberry is asking for a contract similar to Jose Canseco's five-year, $23.5 million deal. The Yankees, always a major player in the free-agent market, are one of the few teams that could afford it.

But Robert Nederlander, who has succeeded George Steinbrenner as the Yankees' managing partner, said the team may not pursue the Mets' power hitter.

"We never said we were going to go after Strawberry," Nederlander said Wednesday. "We will try to be fiscally responsible in this club's operations, but it does not mean we won't sign a free agent if it will help us."

Bell, the 1987 American League MVP, batted .269 this season with 21 homers and 86 RBIs. Alan Hendricks, Bell's agent, said the outfielder was prepared to leave Toronto.

"We're exploring all options," Hendricks said. "I already talked to several teams and we plan to talk to all of them."

Asked if Bell could return to Toronto, where he has clashed with management, Hendricks said, "There's always a chance, sure. But he's a free agent and everyone's on a level playing field."

Royals don't want Willie

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Willie Wilson was billed as the fastest man in the major leagues when the Kansas City Royals brought him up in 1978, and he probably was.

Now, 13 eventful years later, Wilson and Kansas City have officially parted ways. At 35, the onetime American League batting champion and stolen base leader says he can still play for someone. But the Royals announced as expected Wednesday that they will not offer the outfielder a contract for 1991.

"He has been a tremendous asset to this ballclub for 13 years," general manager Herk Robinson said. "He helped us into two World Series and provided tremendous excitement for the fans of Kansas City. We'll miss him and we wish him well. He was a great ballplayer."

Wilson, a .290 lifetime hitter who hit .332 to win the 1982 batting title, could not be reached for comment. The Royals have at least four center fielder candidates for next year, including Bo Jackson and Brian McRae, who played well when brought up from the minor leagues in August.

"I don't know that he was greatly surprised by our decision," Robinson said. "But Willie took our notification, if you will, as a true professional."

Wilson, who filed for free agency last week, is the third veteran to be cut from the roster since the Royals finished a disappointing sixth in the American League West. The club notified longtime second baseman Frank White, 40, and catcher Bob Boone, 42, earlier that they would not be offered 1991 contracts.

Wilson was supplanted as the everyday center fielder last season but played in 115 games and hit .290 and led the Royals in stolen bases with 24. He said after the season that he did not expect to return to the Royals.

As the No. 1 running back prospect in the nation, Wilson was heavily recruited in football and signed a letter-of-intent with Maryland.

He was called up to stay in 1978 and the next season led the league with 83 stolen bases, then hit his full stride in 1980.

He had a team-record 230 hits, scored a club-record 133 runs and shared the league lead with 15 triples in one of the most productive seasons any player enjoyed during the entire decade. He also became only the second player in major league history that year to log 100 hits from each side of the plate, and broke Mickey Mantle's switch-hitting record with his 133 runs. From July 20-Sept. 30 of 1980 he set an American League record with 32 consecutive stolen bases.

In 1982, Wilson became the second Royal in two years to win the AL batting title, barely edging Milwaukee's Robin Yount.

But the following November, Wilson and four other members of the 1983 Royals became ensnared in a drug investigation in the metropolitan area. He eventually pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of attempting to possess cocaine and served a three-month sentence at a minimum-security facility.

He was suspended for one year but reinstated the following May 15, maintaining always that he was not a user but was trying to purchase the drug at the request of a friend. Also sentenced in the probe were pitcher Vida Blue, first baseman Willie Aikens and outfielder Jerry Martin.

Wilson finishes his Royals career with 1,968 hits and 612 stolen bases.

"Willie Wilson's style of play brought a lot of excitement to the Royals organization," Robinson said.

Strawberry wants to be a Dodger

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Darryl Strawberry is so serious about playing for the Los Angeles Dodgers, he has told Manager Tom Lasorda he is willing to play center field, Strawberry's agent said.

"Darryl has told Tommy that he will play center field or right field," agent Eric Goldschmidt told the Los Angeles Times in today's editions.

The seven-time All-Star has played right field most of the past eight seasons with the New York Mets. Strawberry started 10 games in center in 1984.

A move by Strawberry to center field would enable to Dodgers to sign him without having to disrupt their outfield with positions moves or trades. Last season, Kal Daniels played left field and Hubie Brooks right field.

Candidates differ sharply on abortion

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — In their final televised meeting before Tuesday's election, the gubernatorial candidates each voiced disapproval of a state income tax and disagreed sharply on abortion.

Republican Clayton Williams said he would favor a state law requiring parents to be notified before minor daughters could obtain abortions.

Democrat Ann Richards said parents should be involved but writing a law to require it was so difficult that some young women could be driven to "back-alley butchers."

The two participated in a "mini-debate" arranged by KDFW-TV and conducted in separate studios Wednesday night. They have not taken part in a face-to-face debate during the campaign.

Each candidate promised to build more prisons, start "boot camps" for first-time offenders and be generally tough on crime.

Williams asked Richards whether she would veto a state income tax, as he has promised to do. "I'm totally against an income tax," Richards replied. The Republican said afterward that Richards still hasn't promised Texans a veto.

The two were at odds over parental consent for abortion. Richards has described herself as pro-choice on abortion, while Williams opposes abortion except in case of rape, incest or danger to a mother's life.

"I've been talking about the right to privacy for a very long time," Richards said.

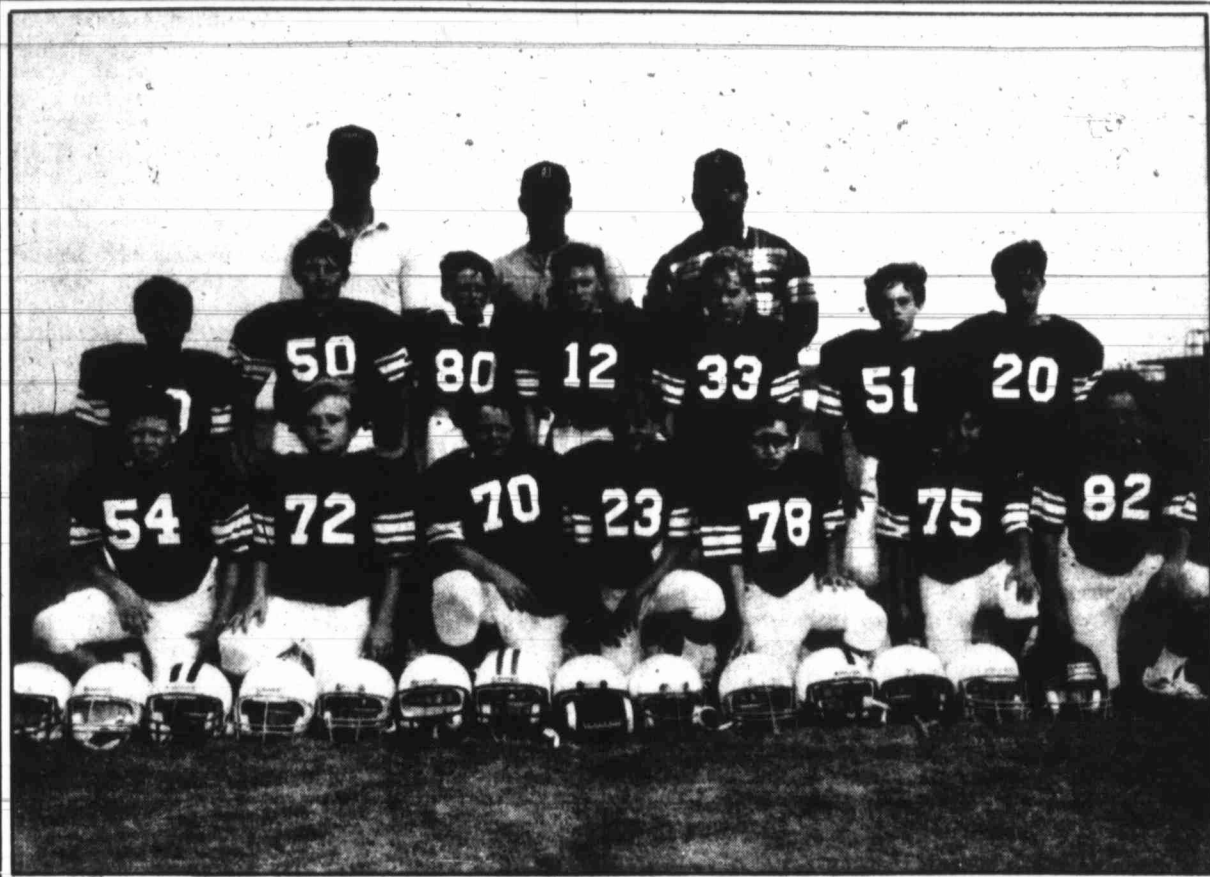

"I think any parents should be involved in such a difficult decision, regardless of the age. The problem is that when you write legislation, you have to take the exceptions, like incest. Then what are you going to do?"

"The difficulty is that no recourse is offered to her. And what we're going to do is find young women going to back-alley butchers as we did in previous years, and no one wants that," she said.

But Williams disagreed. "Well, you can legislate many things," he said. "I believe in my heart that when a 13-year-old girl gets pregnant — a major problem for her life — that the parents should be involved. I feel like we must have legislation that they be involved in that decision."

"I will work for legislation to involve the parents, that it's required."

Stanton Noon Lions PeeWee football came to an end Tuesday night as the Rams and the Chargers played to a 0-0 deadlock in Buffalo Stadium.

For the Rams, however, the tie was as good as a win.

They needed only a win or a tie to claim first place over the Chargers, and the defense stopped the Chargers to give the Rams the crown.

Neither team could not shake the other's defense, as both offenses were kept at bay in the opening quarter. The second quarter was the same as the first. The Chargers began a drive, but a fumble gave the ball to the Rams.

The Rams moved the football downfield, facing a fourth down and three for a first down. Quarterback Brad Cox went in for an apparent touchdown, but the play was called back for illegal movement in the backfield. The second stanza came to an end with the Rams and the Chargers tied at 0-0.

The second half was much the same as the first, as both teams moved the ball, but mistakes and turnovers kept them from putting any points on the scoreboard. The contest ended with the 4-1-1 Rams taking the city championship over the 3-1-2 Chargers.

The Superbowl will be played in Buffalo Stadium Saturday night beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Experts say Gulf war could triple oil prices

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — War in the Persian Gulf would send a shock wave through world oil markets aimed directly at the wallets of consumers, petroleum industry officials say.

"The day the war starts, prices will explode," John Lichtblau of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee on Wednesday, and "there is no limit" to how high prices could rise. Short of quickly winning a war against Iraq, he added, there is little the United States could do to control prices.

Oil prices hovering in the $33 per barrel range could easily triple, said Professor Fariborz Ghadar of

George Washington University's business school. "I would not be surprised if oil prices reached $100 per barrel," he said.

Translating a crude oil price increase into a higher price at the pump is an inexact science. But some industry experts use a ratio of 12 cents more per gallon for every $5 increase in the price of crude.

At $100 per barrel, under that formula, gasoline could rise to nearly $3 per gallon at the pump.

The reasons for the sharp price rise, the experts said, would be fear that war would disrupt supply lines, combined with the likelihood that a Gulf war would curtail Saudi Arabia's oil-producing capabilities.

With oil production already at or near capacity, oil-consuming states could do little beyond release oil reserves onto the market, the witnesses said.

Conversely, they said, if Iraqi President Saddam Hussein suddenly

Saddam offers to let relatives see captives

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press Writer

Faced with heightened talk of war and vehement complaints about its treatment of American hostages, Iraq is offering to let relatives visit the captives for the holidays.

Iraq is holding hundreds of Westerners at strategic installations as shields against a feared attack. In letters released today by a U.S. official, two of the captive Americans described their isolation and anxiety.

"You can survive. But individually interned, (one) must be psychologically capable of living alone within himself," said one of the letters.

It ended with a plea: "Please do not forget the guest hostages." Iraq refers to the captives as guests.

The names of the letter-writers were not released for security reasons. The letters were brought to the U.S. Embassy by non-American foreigners, said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

A spokesman for the Iraqi government insisted Wednesday that diplomats in Kuwait and other foreigners were "well-treated and all receive good care."

The Iraqi offer of holiday visits came "just hours" after President Bush said he was fed up with the treatment of American diplomats in occupied Kuwait. Iraqi troops who are trying to starve them out of the U.S. Embassy.

Also causing concern were new expressions of pessimism from U.S. allies. Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and a British commander said Wednesday that war now seems increasingly likely.

But a Soviet envoy who met twice last month with Saddam Hussein says the Iraqi president is more open to a peaceful settlement than he was in early October.

Yevgeny Primakov also said Wednesday that Iraq agreed that 2,500 Soviet citizens can leave Iraq before the end of November. He said 34 Soviet military experts were flying home to Moscow today.

Meanwhile, a published report today quoted U.S. officials as if there is an allied assault on Kuwait by sea. Iraq planned to blow up several oil tankers. The report in the Washington Times said three tankers are anchored near the Saudi Arabian coast, and there may be others as well. The information was attributed to Pentagon, military and intelligence officials, who were not named.

In Washington, oil experts told U.S. lawmakers that the outbreak of war over Iraq's refusal to relinquish Kuwait could triple oil prices to $100 a barrel — causing gasoline prices to rise to $3 a gallon.

Washington did not immediately comment on the offer of holiday visits for the hostages, which came Wednesday from an Information Ministry spokesman in Baghdad. But Britain's Foreign Office on

The Iraqi spokesman said foreigners were not being mistreated.

"The safety of all diplomatic premises and staff and the American Embassy in Baghdad and the former American Embassy in Kuwait are guaranteed," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In Baghdad, Information Minister Latif Jassim said it was possible the United States was spreading "false reports" on the treatment of its "foreign guests" to seek an excuse to attack Iraq.

Farm production costs at eight-year high

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm production costs are rising at the fastest clip in eight years because of higher oil prices caused by the Mideast crisis, according to the Agriculture Department.

The surge in costs of producing crops and livestock is expected to bite into farmers' income prospects in 1991.

New quarterly figures through October showed farm expenses jumped an average of 2.2 percent from July, when such figures were last available. The expense index was up 5.6 percent from October 1989.

"A sharp rise in fuel prices since July contributed most to the largest quarterly index increase since January 1982," said a report released Wednesday.

The monthly report by the department's Agricultural Statistics Board said prices farmers get for raw products declined 0.7 percent from September to October but still averaged 1.4 percent more than a year ago.

"Decreases in the prices of

broilers, milk, corn and apples were partially offset by higher prices for hogs, tomatoes, strawberries and eggs," the board said in its preliminary report.

Prices of most food and feed grains were down from September, although higher prices were reported for oats, rice and durum wheat. Soybean and sunflower prices declined, while peanut prices increased.

"The October all-hog price increased moderately over September, while the all-cattle price was up slightly," the report said.

Prices of steers and heifers sold as beef were at a record high for October, the report said. But broiler prices dropped sharply from September, partly due to large supplies and weaker seasonal demand.

USDA economists say consumer food prices will rise an average of 5 percent to 7 percent this year, compared with a 5.8 percent gain in 1989, the most since 1981. There has been no official forecast for 1991.

The net cash income of farmers in 1990 has been forecast at a record in the range of $59 billion to $63 billion, up about 10 percent from last year. The previous high was $57.2 billion in 1988.

Net cash income is the amount nationally that farmers have left from gross cash income in a calendar year after deducting cash expenses. It includes government payments and proceeds from crops grown previously but sold during the year.

In another method of agency accounting, which includes changes in inventories, depreciation and other allowances during the year, 1990 net farm income may be in the range of $47 billion to $52 billion, compared with $47 billion last year.

The Agriculture Department's first 1991 forecasts for food prices and farm income are scheduled to be released during an annual outlook conference here in late November.

Based on preliminary figures that could be revised next month, the October price index for all crops was down 1.6 percent from September and averaged 4.7 percent less than a year earlier.

The October index for livestock and products was down 1.2 percent from September but still averaged 5.6 percent more than in October 1989.

Milk prices, reflecting stepped-up production, dropped 60 cents from September to an October average of $13.60 per 100 pounds. The October price was down $1.20 from a year earlier.

The all-fruit price index in October was down 6.4 percent from September and 8.7 percent the October 1989 average. Lower prices for apples, oranges and grapefruit were mostly responsible for the decline from September.

The report also said: ● Cattle averaged $75.10 per 100 pounds of live weight nationally, up 10 cents from September. A year earlier, cattle averaged $68.70 per hundredweight. Those are averages for all types of cattle sold as beef.

● Hogs averaged $56.90 per hundredweight, up from $54.30 in September and $46.60 a year earlier.

● Corn, at $2.15 per bushel, was down from $2.32 in September and $2.22 a year earlier.

● Wheat prices at the farm, according to preliminary figures, averaged $2.39 per bushel, compared with $2.46 in September and $3.75 in October 1989.

● Rice averaged $6.34 per 100 pounds, against $6.25 in September and $7.37 a year earlier.

● Soybeans were $5.90 per bushel, compared with $5.99 in September and $5.54 in October 1989.

● Upland cotton was reported at 66.9 cents per pound, compared with 65 cents in September and 65.8 cents a year earlier.

● Eggs were 73.5 cents per dozen, compared with 68.5 cents in September and 71.6 cents a year earlier.

● Milk was $13.60 per hundredweight, against $14.20 in September and $14.80 in October 1989.

● Broilers were 29 cents per pound, live weight, compared with 35.2 cents in September.

Oil

ly ends the crisis by withdrawing his forces from Kuwait, the price of oil could drop just as suddenly to levels below those that preceded the Aug. 2 invasion.

"That range is likely to be reached approximately 48 hours after the crisis is over," Lichtblau said.

If the stalemate continues, it is likely that oil prices will remain about where they are, the witnesses said, but they could jump quickly with any disruption of a supply system already straining to meet demand.

"This is a very tight market," Ghadar said. "A pipe blowing up in Nigeria, a fire in Venezuela, some other disruption," could be enough to spread panic and push prices higher.

The witnesses said there was little the United States could do to break up the oil cartel and that meantime, the simple laws of supply and demand would govern the price of oil.

Witnesses rejected as unworkable, for example, a suggestion by Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., that Saudi Arabia unilaterally lower the price of its crude in exchange for U.S. military support. The market would quickly absorb the cheap Saudi oil and no other countries would be compelled to lower their prices, Lichtblau said.

The best the United States could hope for is more money from Saudi Arabia to help pay the cost of Operation Desert Shield, he said.

for the parents to participate in that decision before she can have that abortion."

Williams said he supports the state GOP platform on other abortion issues. He said he opposes abortions for gender selection and favors requirements for "safe health clinics" that perform the operations.

"We had many young women die last year because abortion clinics weren't licensed," he said.

But Richards said clinics are required to be licensed. "They are routinely examined by the health department," she said.

Richards also said a parental consent law could send some young women before judges. "The absurdity of it is, that the judge's decision is if the person is too immature to make the decision then she must bear the child. If she is mature enough to make the decision, then she can terminate the pregnancy."

Williams later said, "Part of the Republican platform establishes health and safety standards for clinics. The standards are not up to snuff and it is our belief that they should have more emergency equipment and be prepared for bleeding problems... There were several young women who died in abortion clinics across the country, I think seven or eight." He said he didn't know if any were in Texas.

The Republican candidate also was asked during the debate about his failure during a televised interview Tuesday night to remember what the proposed constitutional amendment on this year's ballot would do. Proposition One would clarify when the state Senate must confirm or reject appointees of governors.

Williams said he had been briefed on the amendment, which was on an absentee ballot he cast earlier. But he said it slipped his mind during the TV program.

"I just have to 'fess up: I forgot that," he said.

If the Christie schoolchildren create a new set of pictures under and around which Mrs. Killion can write the River of Grass story, that book might be presented to the National Wildlife Federation.

Mrs. Killion said her sister, Lori Warren of Melbourne, Fla., is investigating that possibility.

Mrs. Killion's visit with her sister last July set the stage for the book's creation. The two accompanied Baker on a daylong tour of the 60,000-acre wildlife preserve.

Schoolchildren set forth man's Everglades story

PLANO (AP) — When death overtakes Rubba Baker, a Seminole-Apache Indian now tending Florida's Everglades, he wants two treasures buried in the grave with him.

One is a rifle more than 100 years old — the legacy of a Seminole chief who never surrendered.

The other is a looseleaf book recounting the glorious days of the River of Grass. The story is his own story, as told last summer to Judy Killion, a first-grade teacher at Christie Elementary School in Plano. It is illustrated with the Crayola-bright pictures of Christie first-graders.

The book has been copyrighted, Mrs. Killion said. She and the first-graders who contributed their pictures are discussing whether it should be published.

Baker, a wildlife management technician at Corbett Wildlife Preserve on the northeast side of the Everglades, has loaned the children's original book to the Corbett Teacher Training Institute in hopes that it can be used to foster positive environmental attitudes.

He has told Mrs. Killion he was particularly touched by the last lines in the book: "What if we could reflood the River of Grass? Maybe the panthers would come back... Maybe the alligators would come back... and maybe those who camp at distant fires would know that... we care."

Mrs. Killion's visit with her sister last July set the stage for the book's creation. The two accompanied Baker on a daylong tour of the 60,000-acre wildlife preserve.

They traveled in a mud buggy, a vehicle with huge tires that float on water.

They came to the remains of what are now called the Mound Cities — Caloosa Indian villages that ringed the Everglades in about 500 A.D. The mounds consist of sand brought by canoe from the Gulf of Mexico. They were used to protect the village from flooding Lake Okeechobee and from the ebbs and flows in the vast River of Grass, Mrs. Killion said.

For hours Baker told the women about the River of Grass, a hundred-mile-wide expanse of water studded with sharp-pointed saw grass. It extended from Lake Okeechobee in south central Florida to the Keys at Florida's tip.

Baker told about the alligators that lurked in the tall reeds; the black panthers that hunted on its edges; the playful manatees that sported in its warm waters.

He talked about the coming of the Spanish explorers and their impressions of the River of Grass. They called it "Everglades" because glades of green were all the eye could see, he said.

Abruptly, the Caloosa Indians vanished — the victims of white men's diseases, Mrs. Killion said. All that was left were piles of bones on the Florida Keys. For a long time, no one even realized what the bones were, Mrs. Killion said.

Baker talked about the bobcat and deer and the various reptiles that were native to the area. As he talked on and on about his beloved River of Grass, Mrs. Killion said, she and her sister grew more and more anxious to see it.

"I almost cried when he told me it was gone," Mrs. Killion said.

"It was so sad, that there was nothing left in all the world that was like the River of Grass. And now it was gone."

Mrs. Killion said the 50 square miles that remain of the River of Grass had no water last July. The underground aquifer was gone and Lake Okeechobee was low.
