HOUSTON — Mary Johnson of Houston talks to a reporter on the telephone as she watches President George Bush on television make the telephone call to her earlier in the day. President Bush picked her number at random when he was making calls from gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams' phone bank in Houston Sunday.

Candidates bring out top guns for final days of race

DALLAS (AP) - Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Bush's veto of the civil rights bill Richards criticized her rival, Clayton Williams, for not paying federal income taxes in 1986, then putting millions of dollars into his campaign for governor.

Richards also asked voters Sunday to remember President Bush's veto of the civil rights bill when they cast their ballots on Tuesday.

Republican Williams made no public appearances Sunday other than to attend church with the president and make a brief stop at a GOP phone bank in Houston.

Bush planned to make appearances with Williams today in Tyler, Waco and Houston as the hotly contested race for governor enters its final hours with polls showing the race is a tossup. Richards also planned several appearances across the state.

Richards visited four black Baptist churches in Dallas and appeared at a rally in Waco with former Congresswoman Barbara Jordan and Virginia Gov. Doug Wilder, the nation's first elected Richards told the crowds that and Williams' admission last week that he didn't pay any federal income taxes in 1986 were evidence that the GOP was the party of the rich and white.

"'He tells us he didn't pay any income tax in 1986 and yet four years later he writes a personal check for over $8 million to . . . try to buy the governor's race in Texas, Richards said of Williams.

"If the wrong person is there," Wilder said, "they'll handle the state money like they handle their own, and I don't have to tell you what that means.

"Because if he didn't pay any taxes in '86, God only knows what would happen with the state money if it got into his hands.

Williams, a multi-millionaire with ranching and oil interests, said he wanted voters to know that he filed an income tax return in 1986, but that he didn't owe any taxes because his businesses took a beating in the poor economy "and I lost my shirt.

tioning the City Council to reconsider a decision made at the last meeting.

At the Oct. 23 meeting, the council voted 4-3 to pass a resolution supporting a number of proposed amendments to the Texas and Local Government Code Municipal Civil Service Act. The proposed changes, developed the the Texas Municipal League, deal with the management and organization of fire and police departments.

At that meeting, the president of the Big Spring Firefighters Association, Paul Brown, spoke against the amendments.

Brown told councilmembers he had "heard no complaints (about the code as it stands), and I think it would be unjust that you would pass it if citizens haven't complained.'

City Personnel Director Emma Bogard expressed her support for the amendments at the last council meeting, saying they would help "clean up" the code.

Subjects covered by the proposed changes include the hearing examiner process, demotions and affirmative action procedures. Firefighters have mailed letters to all city councilmembers, asking for their support in achieving a reversal of the decision. A detailed list of the proposed amendments Big Spring Firefighters are peti- and the firefighters' specific objections to each one is included.

"By supporting the TML amendments, you sell out to a lobbying group that represents municipal management and not the citizens of the community," the letter states. It is signed by Brown.

A petition circulating now has been signed by almost all members of the department, and copies will were sent along with the letters, Brown said.

Bogard, when contacted today, said she had no comment about the firefighters' actions, but affirmed her support for the proposed amendments.

Brown said the ultimate goal of the letters and the petition is to encourage the four members who had voted to support the amendments Sidney Clark, Mayor Max Green, Corky Harris and Tim Blackshear — to change their

The resolution, a show of support only with no real power to change the code, will appear on the council's agenda for a second reading at the Nov. 12 meeting.

At that meeting, councilmembers have the option to reject the resolution or to reaffirm support for it, said city secretary Tom Ferguson.

Kuwaitis seek quick liberation

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) Secretary of State James Baker III met today with the emir of Kuwait and that exiled leader said he would like to see his country liberated "today and

"What I would like to see isthe liberation of Kuwait as soon as possible, whether through the (U.N.) Security Council or not," the robed monarch said in measured tones

Baker visited him in Taif, the mountain resort of Saudi Arabia, on the second leg of a 7-country rip designed to test support among Arabs, Europeans and the Soviets for military action against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Since the emir and his royal family were thrown out of Kuwait more than three months ago by the Iraqi invaders, his reply to reporter's question at a photo session was not surprising.

More critical for Baker is what he hears later in the day from the leaders of Saudi Arabia, the lynchpin in the Arab alliance, and from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on Thursday.

Still, the statement by Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah reflected determination to undo the Aug. 2 invasion. Asked if a date should be set now for a military offensive to evict the Iraqis, he replied: "This is up to the Security Council of the United Nations.

But then, he added quickly,

'as far as I am concerned I would like my country to be liberated today and before tomorrow." Asked if the United Nations should set a deadline, the Emir responded: "I think this is up to the members of the Security Council, not the Security Council as an organization is concerned. This is up to the members.

The emir did not explain his statement. But the Bush Administration, for instance, takes the position that nations under the U.N. charter have a right of self-defense that does not require approval by the world organization.

In that regard, President Bush and Baker have placed great stress lately on the hostage-taking of Americans and the siege of the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait

As a matter of policy, however, the Administration would like any military move against Iraq approved by the Council as a whole, just as it economic and political measures designed to pressure Baghdad were adopted

Baker flew here from Bahrain where the message given him by leaders of the U.S.-aligned mini-state was to stand fast against Iraq. But evidently, there was no date set to launch an attack.

A military move "is one of the options responsible governments have to study," a U.S. official said Sunday night.

The official, who barred use of his name, said Sheik Isa bin Salman Al Khalifa and other leaders of Bahrain were firm in rejecting anything short of a total withdrawal of Iraq from Kuwait.

Scenic Mountain Medical Center will be celebrating National Radiologic Technology Week Nov.

Radiologic technology, or X-ray, is not only a fully-staffed department of the hospital, it is also a school to train future personnel. Vivian Gordon, program director of the training course and department supervisor, said having a week to honor X-ray technicians will help educate the public.

"We're often mistaken for nurses," she said. "It seems like people in a hospital are used to thinking anybody in a uniform is either a nurse or a doctor."

Radiologic technologists or radiographers are actually highly trained in their very specialized work, she said. They complete two years of training in physics, anatomy and patient care procedures in addition to the operation of X-ray equipment. Then, all Texas radiologic technologists must be licensed as well. At the Scenic Mountain Medical Center program, more than 40 technologists have graduated since 1974.

"Now many of the people who work here are graduates of the program," Gordon said.

She said there are currently 20 in the department - 10 students, seven technologists and three support personnel. Dr. Stan Kremsky is the medical director for the department and director of the training program. In the entire country, there are 180,000 technologists, and only 10,000 in the state of Texas. A good candidate for such a job would be 'someone that leans toward the math and science end of academia and who's interested in patient care," Gordon noted. The week will be observed with an invitation for the public to take eguided tours of the department. During tours, personnel will explain the equipment and its uses,

Gordon said. Tour stops will include routine • RADIOLOGY page 8-A

Texans grumble about area code

FLOYD (AP) - Residents in this tiny Hunt County town fear a new area code will only add to the troubles of a telephonic twilight zone.

At least three phone companies serve the Floyd area, about 40 miles northeast of

"It's really strange here," said Katherine Chapman, a cashier at the town's only gas station. "I can't call next door. I can't call the grade school. It's a long-distance call."

And as of Sunday, life got more complicated for Mrs. Chapman and others in the area. A new area code — 903 took effect at midnight. The northeast Texas zone was created by splitting the old 214 area that served since 1947.

Growth around Dallas forced phone companies to create the new area code, which brings the state's total to eight and puts Texas in a second-place tie with New York. California leads with 10

The 903 area will have about 600,000 customers, while the new 214 area surrounding Dallas will have about 2.4 million.

Only three Southern states -Virginia, Florida and Kentucky are among the 32 sponsoring lotteries now. But traditional opposition, even in fundamentalist areas, shows signs of eroding.

Will every state in Dixie eventually offer the games?

"I think so," says Duke University economics professor Philip Cook, an authority on lotteries. 'The polls as a rule show strong backer, whichever gubernatorial support."

Carolyn Shaw hopes such predictions are wrong. She's with the Georgia Council on Moral and A pro-lottery initiative in Arkan-Civic Concerns, which is using sas was favored in opinion polls but speeches and mass mailings to try lottery.

"It's as bad as having an illegal numbers racket in your state," she says. "It's wrong to have the state doing that.'

Besides, she said, lotteries can become addictive, can victimize the poor, and can discourage the public from supporting needed taxation for the functions, such as education, that the games often support.

Louisiana voters in October overturned a lottery ban prompted by a notoriously corrupt game a century ago. Opponents decry the new version as "a bloodsucker," but supporters say it will add tens of millions of dollars in revenue to the economically depressed state.

Professor Cook says historic opposition to lotteries, in the South and elsewhere, has been led mainly by governors and legislative leaders who were "resisting the will of the majority in taking that position." Cook is co-author, with Charles Clotfelter, of the book "Selling Hope: State Lotteries in America." Both teach at Duke in Durham, N.C.

Recalling the lottery referendum in Florida, Cook says, "They do have their fundamentalist region, but every region of the state voted "People see it as innocuous," he says.

Support for lotteries is documented in dollars. For the fiscal year ended in June, state lottery sales totalled $20.2 billion, according to Smith. About half goes to payouts, and, after administrative costs, roughly 37 percent on average is state profit.

When proceeds go to "useful purposes" such as education or programs for the elderly, that becomes part of lotteries' appeal, says Saul Leonard of Laventhal and Horwath, a Philadelphia-based business consulting firm

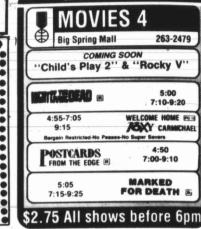

But the basic reason lotteries are spreading isn't their familiarity or noble goals. It's greed, something hat no region lacks.

As Leonard puts it, "People d like to hope for that pot of gold at the end of the rainbow."

Prison crowding eased by increase in paroles

WASHINGTON (AP) - An increase in the number of convicts paroled last year reflects efforts by the criminal justice system to make room for a similar rise in individuals sent to prison, authorities

The number of parolees increased 12.1 percent to 457,797, coupled with a 5.6 percent rise in defendants on probation to a total of 2.52 million, according to a fresh study from the Justice Department.

Authorities were unanimous in saying states have used parole to reduce overcrowding, particularly when courts have set caps on the number of inmates that can be housed in particular prisons. Georgia led the nation with a 54.2

percent increase in paroles in 1989. The state's parole board releases non-violent offenders to avoid prison overcrowding and lawsuits, spokesman Mike Fleming said. The rise in paroles "is simply a reflection of the board's attempt to maintain the level of the prison population in the state of Georgia, Fleming said. "We're trying to keep it at capacity or less so that we don't get into federal lawsuits or federal control.

According to criminologist Norval Morris, the latest parole figures "are descriptive of a system in chaos.

Wide use of mandatory sentences for drug offenses and other crimes has strained prisons and forced parole boards to release more inmates, the University of Chicago scholar said.

"When you put a cap on facilities and fill them up with street-level drug dealers and users, you've got to do something," he said.

"Overcrowding doesn't producemore severity, it just produces more random severity and random leniency," said Morris. He recently co-authored a book, "Between Prison and Probation," that urges alternatives to incarceration.

Texas had the largest number of parolees last year - 91,294.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) Prime Minister V.P. Singh's party broke apart today, leaving the government in disarray in a country already seriously shaken by Hindu-Moslem violence that has claimed more than 330 lives.

Hindu fundamentalists vowed today to dismantle 3,000 Islamic shrines across India. They have been thwarted at least temporarily in their campaign to replace a mosque in the remote northern town of Ayodhya with a temple.

The capital, meanwhile, was brought to a near standstill by a strike called by the right-wing Hindu party that provoked the political and religious crisis. Singh won the endorsement of more than half his Janata Dal Party's members in Parliament, but a large dissident faction deserted him today

Democrats accuse GOP of racism, intimidation

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - The GOP headed to federal court today to answer accusations it is employing racism and intimidation to try to scare voters from the polls in North Carolina and Texas.

The Democratic National Committee, which requested the hearing, claims the Republican National Committee is violating a 1982 consent decree prohibiting voter intimidation.

Republican officials on Sunday dismissed claims that voter mailings in North Carolina and Texas were designed to intimidate minority or elderly voters.

George Bush, August 1988 Apparently, Congress pushed harder than thenpresidential candidate Bush anticipated.

Times and circumstances do change. The federal deficit is considerably higher than it was when Bush made that emphatic promise in his acceptance speech at the Republican National Convention in New Orleans. The president made the decision to compromise in the national interest. But now he has taken to the campaign trail in an attempt to wash his hands of responsibility for the biggest tax increase in history. The Democrats in Congress made him do it, he told auidences over the weekend.

Well, the president obviously knew two years ago that he would be pressured to go along with a tax increase. He didn't just say, I'm against new taxes, he went further in declaring his intent to resist the inevitable push to raise them. It is understandable that the president's public standing and credibility have eroded somewhat as a result of his reversal.

The president would be better served politically if he would simply admit that his hard line was unrealistic rather than blaming the opposition for a tax package that he, his staff and Republican congressional leaders helped craft and approved.

The Meridian (Miss.) Star

Hidden messages

C.B. Scott Jones, an aide to Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, recently wrote Defense Secretary Richard Cheney with a startling revelation: When tapes of speeches by Cheney, Secretary of State James Baker and President Bush are played backwards, the word 'simone" can be heard. .

Jones alerted Secretary Cheney to his discovery because he feared "simone" might be a "code word that would not be in the national interest to be known."...

Pell himself says, "There may be some merit to it.". Jones modestly admits that the whole thing may be a 'non-event, just another mystery in a new technology we are developing."

Let's hear more about this new technology If, for example, we played Bush's famous "No new taxes" campaign speech backwards, might we not hear the spectral words, "I'm lying, I'm lying"? And those pious speeches by congressmen calling for fiscal restraint - wouldn't the reverse speech technique reveal a voice whimpering, "Let me keep my pay raise"

No wonder we've had such trouble reading their lips! The Evening Telegram, Superior, Wis.

How much is rich?

There may be some comfort in all this budget mess. We are learning that the definition of "rich" is not an exact one.

Both Republicans and Democrats want to use new taxes on the "rich" to help balance the budget. That's an easy target. Since few of us consider ourselves "rich" the proposed taxes meet the first obligation of a tax proposal; they tax someone else.

House Speaker Tom Foley thinks "rich" starts with an income of $100,000 per year. George Bush holds to the same figure in part: He would raise taxes on those with incomes that high by limiting their deductions. Dan Rostenkowski, the chief House tax writer, thinks it takes $200,000 a year in income to make one rich. Some other members of the conference committee think the floor of wealth is at $300,000.

But everyone is in agreement on one thing. An income of $1 million makes one truly rich. All are agreed on a new, higher tax for entertainers, for professional athletes and for those few leaders of big business who make that kind of money. That seems reasonable; few could argue that earnings of $1 million leave anyone disadvantaged. The Bulletin, Bend, Ore.

Congress not all bad

The 101st Congress has adjourned to the boos and catcalls of a disgusted public. Yet on balance it had a productive session, a fact of which today's anti-incumbent voters should take note.

Despite the shortcomings of the process, Congress did finally approve a major deficit-cutting measure, which for the first time in nearly a decade faces the need for new revenue to restore fiscal sanity.

It also endorsed the first major revision of the Clean-Air Act in 13 years, promising major improvements in the nation's air and water. Both the budget and clean air measures represent the resolution of tough political conflicts that completely stymied several earlier Congresses.

The legislative session was a messy one; divisions between a Democratic Congress and a Republican president didn't help. Nevertheless, the results were impressive. Democracy still works.

Opinions from U.S. Navy is still sailing

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Navy is taking some hits these days, not from new foes abroad but from old friends at home. Sam Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, has frowned a mighty frown in the Navy's direction. H. Lawrence Garrett, secretary of the Navy, is frowning, too. As one consequence, the next guy in the Navy who makes a pass at a woman sailor is likely to find himself in trouble. Garrett has spread the word on sexual harass ment, and the word is "zero tolerance

Garrett is the third secretary of the Navy in the past three years. In May of 1989 he succeeded William L. Ball III, who served for only 14 months. Ball had suc ceeded James H. Webb Jr., who served for only 10 months. Webb came on the winged heels of John Lehman, who served for six years and raised hell in every one of them. Since Lehman left and the earthquakes subsided, the Navy has needed a measure of strong, silent stability up top

Garrett is just what the doctor ordered. He is 51, a native of Washington, D.C., a lawyer by profession. He is the only secretary of the Navy in history who went into the Navy as a raw recruit, then won a commission and rose through the ranks to his elevation to the secretary's

The current flap over sexual harassment has him fuming. First came reports about sexual harassment at the Naval Academy in Annapolis. Then a story leaked to the Florida press in July that over a period of 19 months, eight cases of rape and five cases of indecent assault upon women sailors had been reported at the Naval Training Center in Orlando

. The chief of naval education and training looked into the complaints at Orlando. The Navy's inspector general subsequently concluded that "although progress has been made in the way we treat women in the Navy, there is much to be done." Sen. Nunn found the whole picture "very disturbing" and ordered a subcommittee to make its own investigation of sexual harassment: The General Accounting Office will report on problems at

Last week Garrett created a study group of his own, headed by Rear Adm. Roberta Hazard. Her assignment is to update a 1987 report on the problems that the Navy has with women and the problems that women have with the Navy. These are not the same problems. The report is to be completed in three months.

The Navy never has been wildly enthusiastic about having women in service, but 60,000 of them are now on board - about 10 percent of total personnel — and their presence is now tolerated widely and welcomed selectively. They cannot serve in combat by federal law, but they fly all over the place and they serve in hundreds of support billets on land and sea. "We have much to be proud of."

Garrett says, and he points to recent success stories. In July Capt. Marsha Evans became the first woman to take command of a major naval station (at Treasure Island in San Francisco). In November Lt. Cmdr. Darlene Iskra will become the first woman to command a naval ship (the salvage ship USS Opportune).

Garrett has other concerns that he freely expresses to anyone who will listen. Under the defense budget just adopted, the Navy will lose about 20,000 personnel. "When we cut people, we cut ships." The Navy will be operating a worldwide fleet of 560 ships, far below the much ballyhooed goal of 600 ships, and Garrett is determined that every ship that goes to sea will have its full complement.

With the end of the Cold War with the Soviet Union, reductions were to be expected in both ships and manpower, but there have been no reductions in the global responsibilities placed upon the Navy. By employing civilian crews to man 46 cargo vessels from the ready reserve, the Navy moved 900,000 tons of military shipments to the Middle East in 60 days. The operation went so well that in three weeks the ships transported more cargo than wen to the Korean War in three months.

Since mid-August, in obedience to resolutions of the United Nations, U.S. ships have intercepted more than 2,500 vessels bound for Iraq. Fewer than half a dozen sticky incidents have occurred Are these acts of war? As an authority on the law of the sea, Garrett is cautious about expressing an opinion on boardings. If it were not for the authority of the United Nations, maybe — but he leaves the sentence unfinished. The best navy in the world, he says, will do what it has to do.

Cartoon unfair to Jesse Helms

To the editor:

I was very angry when I saw the cartoon in your paper (Sunday, Oct. 21), which was designed to belittle the good sense and decency of Jesse Helms. But then I realize that the man who drew the cartoon ws to be pitied, because of his apparent lack of a personal relationship with God, through the Lord Jesus Christ. I cannot believe that one who knows Him would have drawn such a cartoon. Though Hesse Helms needs to be out campaigning like others are doing, he has stayed on his job in the Senate because his vote is needed, among other things, to oppose the filth and indecency and blasphemy that is being fostered upon the American people, at their expense, by the National Endowment for the Arts. Many of the other Congressmen have OK'd this, but not Jesse Helms. I thank God for him, and for his influence in the Senate.

Federal increases good for Big Spring

To the editor:

Haven't seen nothing in the Herald about this but the newly passed federal budget isn't all bad for our local economy, especially with civil service, military and railroad retirees living in our city.

All of this because of people that retired from the late Webb AFB and the VA, plus our local railway. I'm an ex-Webb retiree, which means I will have an increase of $50 a month. Every penny of my whole retirement income is spent with our local merchants. We all got raises, as did the many on Social Security people here in Big Spring. My mom and dad, who live in Big Spring, spend all their checks here in town. I understand, there are many government retirees living in our city and county, so we should be thankful the budget includes increases for the retirement programs for us folks, as it does help the local merchants. I wish the Herald would print more on this for our benefit. Also does the Herald know how much money is guaranteed through visitors (outof-town) to our local VA each day? (To downtown merchants for shopping, gas, eating out, etc.) You might be surprised.

Farm bill carries protection for pets

By PAUL FURIGA Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON- Buried in the 1990 farm bill are new protections for lost, stolen or abandoned pets. The provisions are designed to assure household pet owners that the Fluffies and Fidos of the world are not sold into servitude at animal laboratories before they can be reunited with their owners, or adopted into new homes

The relatively common practice of animal brokers purchasing unwanted - and sometimes stolen pets for animal research has been the focus of campaigns from animal rights groups across the

The Pet Theft Act was tacked to the 1990 farm bill by House and Senate negotiators in the waning days of the 101st Congress and is already drawing praise from animal rights groups

"American Humane and all other major national animal protection and rights groups supported this legislation and worked hard for its passage," said Dennis White, animal protection director for the American Humane Association.

With the new law in place, "we believe that pet owners can be more confident now that their pets will not be taken illegally and sold to laboratories," he said.

The new law requires city pounds, animal shelters and others licensed to sell lost or unwanted pets to keep them for at least five days, so they can be returned to their owners, or adopted into new

In their report accompanying the farm bill, House and Senate negotiators directed "the Secretary (of Agriculture) to urge pounds, shelters and other entities holding dogs and cats to keep animals for at least one Saturday in order to provide individuals a reasonable opportunity to recover lost pets or adopt new pets.'

The law also requires those licensed to sell animals to keep accurate paperwork on each animal. A companion provision gives the U.S. Department of Agriculture the power to seek federal court injunctions against animal sellers suspected of mistreating their animals.

That provision, sponsored by Rep. Toby Roth, a Wisconsin Republican, grew out of Roth's experience with an animal seller in his congressional district who was able to continue selling animals despite USDA attempts to take his license away because of inhumane treatment.

Paula Henstridge, legislative analyst with USDA's Animal, Plant and Health Inspection Service, said such cases posed problems for USDA before the new law was passed because USDA could take away licenses for only 21 days before an animal seller's due process rights allowed them to continue their business.

With the new law, she said, animal sellers will be able to go back to their business after the 21 day license suspension, but USDA inspectors will be able to get a federal court order to enforce humane treatment during the sometimes lengthy process of taking away an animal seller's

'We won't be doing frivolous cases," Henstridge said, "but it'll be there in those cases where we need it. There have been many cases where animal dealers who flagrantly violated the (law) are allowed to continue their business," Roth said. "It's about time Congress allows the laws that it passes to be enforced — and this provision does that.

Register to vote; it can make a difference

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because you can reach millions of people, and there are millions who need to be reached. Two-thirds of the voting population is not registered to vote! Please, Abby, help reach those people. It is so important for everyone to get involved and to be aware of what is going on in our country.

With November elections right around the corner, this would be a great time to make a plea to the majority who are not registered and are, therefore, not voting. Think of the difference they could make. - WENDY NELSON, NOR-THGLENN, COLO.

County treasurer challenges accusations

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

GARDEN CITY - Glasscock County Treasurer Judy Kingston, Democratic nominee for re-election, has challenged accusations from her write-in opponent that she oversteppedher authority and has not run the office as efficiently as possible.

JUDY KINGSTON

In an Oct. 14 article in the Big Spring Herald, Alan Dierske charged that Kingston was trying to run areas of government that the Commissioners Court should be handling. He did not want to make public the specific incidents.

Kingston, who beat Dierske 176-175 in the March primary, said

Election

Vernons Statutes, if she has any doubt of the legality or propriety of any claim presented to her for payment, she should not pay it and must report it to commissoners for their consideration and direction.

As an example, she said she did that last year when commissioners decided to buy 12 25-foot lots for $27,000. After checking, she found the owner had a Quit Claim Deed, which is not legal, she said.

"Thus I did not feel that the county should buy the land and have to be out any additional expense to get a legal deed," she said. "The Commissioners Court agreed and told the owner he would have to get Glasscock County a legal deed, which he is still working on at this time.

Dierske responded, "To me that was an area that the commissioners should have looked into as far as clearing title to the land. I and that's fine." But, he said, that, according to Article 1713 in was under the impression that all "There are areas that I believe she said. "Just putting it in a cerbills were presented to the Commissioners Court and they were either approved or disapproved."

Kingston also said that she has given advice in the past when asked by commissioners. For example they consulted her before recently approving a for employees and changing the county's medical insurance company.

"Since I take care of all the insurance, the Commissioners Court asked my advice on each of these,"

she said.

Dierske said, "They may have asked her advice on those things gave unsolicited advice." He reiterated his desire not to make public the incidents to which he is referring. Concerning efficiency of the office, Kingston, who is in her eighth year as treasurer, said she has earned the county $650,000 in interest by setting up all county checking accounts to draw interest cafeteria plan and putting surplus money in certificates of deposit. She said she set up the interest earning accounts when she took office in 1983. "For years before I took office, there was no interest earned in the treasurer's office," she said. Dierske, a farmer who holds an accounting degree from Angelo State University, said that other areas of investment need to be looked into "Different investments . . . may draw higher interest than just a certificate deposit account," he tificate of deposit, anyone can do that."

Kingston said she has also entered all payroll, accounts payable and general government records into a computer acquired by the treaurer's office in 1988. Also set up on the computer by her are fixed assets dating from 1894. when the first courthouse was built, as well as road and bridge department files and employee insurance files, she said.

"I do feel I run my office efficiently, as I perform all my duties in a professional and timely manner. Also the Commissioners Court has given me three merit raises.' Kingston said. "To put it simply, I try to take care of the county treasurer's office in the same competent businesslike manner that I handle my own personal business.'

whether Richards would permit a state income tax. Williams said he supported a constitutional amendment prohibiting such a levy.

"I said I'd veto an income tax if it comes to my desk," Williams said. Richards "won't say if she will." Richards has said on several occasions that she opposes a state in-

Richards, the state treasurer, said her campaign had gained momentum largely because of Williams' income tax admission and a gaffe last week in which Williams acknowledged that he was unfamiliar with a ballot proposition dealing with gubernatorial appointments.

Williams later said his wife, Modesta, was familiar with the matter and had told him how to vote on it.

"I felt like I knew Clayton Williams very well," Richards said. "I felt that he was predictable, and what I thought he would do, he did.

Bush and Williams made voterturnout calls to registered Republicans on a list at a local GOP phone bank.

Bush accepted a reporter's dare that he call a somebody at random. He picked Mary Johnson, a staunch Democrat.

After the call, Mrs. Johnson told reporters. "I thought he was a joke," and "I don't vote for Republicans."

In Dallas, Richards asked voters not to forget the president's veto of the civil rights bill, which the president said would have imposed quotas on employers. Richards recalled the civil rights protests of the 1960s as a crowd of about 1,000 supporters cheered at the Martin Luther King Jr. Community Center Gymnasium in

"I invoke those old days because it ... must be called forward every once in a while," she said, because of what we saw take place with the civil rights act and its veto only a week ago. We know how precarious our freedoms are."

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Getting the state "back on the fiscal track" through a debt management plan is the goal of Republican nominee for state treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, Dallas, who was campaigning in Big Spring last week. A state in-would only hurt Texas' economy, says Hutchison, a two-term state representative from Dallas. Her Democratic opponent, Nikki Van Hightower, the county treasurer in Houston, recommends having a state income tax as well as a lottery, according to reports. Both are running for the office vacated by Democratic gubernatorial hopeful

"I think it's the worst idea for Texas right now," Hutchison said of an income tax during a brief press conference Friday morning at the Basin Aviation hangar at McMahon/Wrinkle Airport. "It management division in the will hurt our economic development."

She said she is also against having a state lottery, as it is not a reliable source of income, but said she would go for it as long as it was not used to take care of basic expenditures.

"I would go for it only if it was for enhancement of our general budget," she said.

Otherwise, money can probably be saved through better fiscal management, Hutchison said. Although asset management is being "done well" under the eightyear tenure of Richards, an area for improvement is in debt management, she said. "We can plan for the future," she said. "We can keep Texas from flow reserve fund. becoming a mini-federal government."

Hutchison's recommendations, in a detailed plan which she says she will present to the Legislature next year, include creating a debt treasurer's office to study state debt and recommend limits.

Her plan calls for state debt being prohibited unless approved by a 2/3-vote of both houses and by voters in proposition form, provisions which are similar to those proposed by the Constitutional Convention of 1974. She also wants to limit debt increases to 4 percent of the state general revenue budget and slow the rate of growth of debt to 75 percent during any 10-year period.

In addition, according to her plan, the state's credit rating may be improved by eventually eliminating short-term tax and revenue anticipation notes by establishing a $300 million cash-

On hand to greet Hutchison as she arrived here was Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring. "Kay Bailey is the only person in the race that is qualified," Fraser told about a dozen people present.

In 1972 Hutchison was the first Republican woman elected to the House of Representatives. She served two terms before being named by President Gerald Ford to be vice chairman of the National transportation Safety Board, according to newspaper accounts.

She has also served on Texas governor commissions to address crime and women and was on the state treasurer's advisory committee. She was the first woman television news reporter in Houston and, in Dallas, was a bank director and owner of a small candy business.

Van Hightower, elected Harris county treasurer in 1986, has a doctorate degree in political science. She is not related to Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

COLORADO CITY — Answering rumors of bribes being taken by commissioners, who in March signed a host agreement with a company proposing a hazardous waste facility, Precinct 3 Commissioner Buddy Hertenberger has made a public denial

"A tacit confession is considered a confession because you failed to deny an accusation," Hertenberger said in a prepared, statement. "Well here is my denial.

"I have never been offered anything nor have I solicited anything, not even a cup of coffee, in return for signing the host agreement pertaining to the hazardous waste incinerator and landfill," I will gladly submit to a lie detector test to verify the statements I have just made. If anyone thinks I am bluffing, just name the time and place and let's get on with it."

Hertenberger said the truck was bought with money from an inheritance he received when his father and stepmother died.

The host agreement, which supports efforts by National Waste and Energy Development, Pittsburgh, in seeking permits for a hazardous waste facility in return for free dumping of county municipal trash and the right of the county to collect up to $1 million annually in fees for out-of-county trash, was signed in an effort to boost the economy, Hertenberger said.

Much of the disagreement with those opposing the facility, which would be located about eight miles west of Westbrook and about a mile south of Interstate 20, concerns whether state and federal permitting agencies can be trusted, he

"The fact is, I do trust these people. I think they will enforce the laws," he said. "I will visit with anyone about the concerns pertaining to the hazardous waste incinerator-landfill, as long as they show me the same respect as I show them. I will answer any question.

Browns give Carson walking papers

CLEVELAND (AP) - Bud Carson became the first coaching casualty of the 1990 NFL season today when he was fired by the Cleveland Browns a day after the worst home loss in their history.

Owner Art Modell said Carson would be replaced by Jim Shofner, Cleveland's first-year offensive coordinator. Shofner has 20 years experience as an NFL assistant, including three as the Browns' quarterbacks coach from 1978-80.

The Browns are the only AFC team that has been to the playoffs each of the past five seasons. But their 2-7 record marks their worst start since 1984 when they went 1-8. Sam Rutigliano was fired as head coach when they were 1-7 that Carson had sounded close to resigning after Sunday's 42-0 loss to the Buffalo Bills. He has been dogged by speculation about his job since the fourth week of the season.

Japanese lead U.S. by three

TOKYO (AP) — Makoto Sasaki of the Daiei Hawks singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning off Cincinnati's Rob Dibble to lead the Japanese all-stars past the major leaguers 2-1 Monday night for their third consecutive victory in the goodwill series.

The major leaguers got 11 hits off six pitchers but stranded 10 runners at Seibu Stadium on the outskirts of Tokyo. They loaded the bases with two outs in the eighth but Houston's Glenn Davis grounded out to end the inning

They loaded the bases again with one out in the ninth but Cincinnati's Chris Sabo flied out and Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. grounded out to end the Hideo Nomo of the Kintetsu Buffaloes got the victory by pitching the eighth and Tsuyoshi Yoda of the Chunichi Dragons survived the ninth for his second save of the series.

The major leaguers, 0-3 on the eight-game trip, went ahead in the first off Hisanobu Watanabe of the Japan Series champion Seibu Lions. Griffey Jr. doubled and scored on a single by Barry Bonds of Pittsburgh.

Japan tied the game 1-1 in the fifth off Oakland's Dave Stewart on three hits, including doubles by Tsutomu Itoh and Hatsuhiko Tsuji, both of the ren Moon versus Jim Everett. The Houston Oilers, the NFL's top passing team, against the Los Angeles Rams, the league's third-ranked passing team.

A wide-open, high-scoring affair?

Guess again. 'It's strange how football games don't go the way people expect them to," Rams coach John Robinson said Sunday after Los Angeles' 17-13 victory over Houston.

"To have three points scored in the second half sounds impossible. That's one of the great things about football. Most of us who try to predict what's going on don't ever quite get it right.'

The game started off in character for both teams, as each scored the first two times they had the football. The Rams (3-5) built a 17-10 halftime lead, then Moon and the Oilers (4-5) were able to come up with only a field goal in the second half.

Houston made it interesting in the waning minutes, however, as Moon was working with a first-andgoal from the Rams' 7-yard line with 1:45 left. But a run and a short pass netted just two yards, then Moon threw incomplete on third

With the game on the line, Moon scrambled to the right, finally found Allen Pinkett all alone on the left side of the end zone, then - too late - fired the ball straight at him. By then, Los Angeles cornerback Bobby Humphery had spotted Pinkett, streaked across the field and batted the ball away at the last moment.

"I saw Al (Pinkett) at the last second and the defensive back made a great play," Moon said.

That play marked a good game by the Rams' often-maligned secondary, which ranked 26th

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - 'As a rookie, Terance Mathis knows enough to listen to his elders, and to do what they

JoJo Townsell, whose place Mathis has taken at receiver and as a kick returner, was studying special teams films with Mathis last week. The injured Townsell noted a flaw in the Cowboys' coverage

Ever the attentive student, Mathis remembered his lessons Sunday. He fielded Mike Saxon's 60-yard punt over his shoulder at the Jets' 2, burst up the middle untouched, cut right and went 98 yards for a touchdown. Not only did Mathis tie an NFL record with the 98-yarder, he sparked New York to a 24-9 victory. It was the Jets' first win in five tries against Dallas (3-6)

"I figured if the ball gets to come downfield pretty slow,' said Mathis, a sixth-round draft choice from New Mexico, where he set five NCAA records, including alltime marks for receptions, yardage and games with a touchdown. "On the first one, I slipped into a hole and ran into one of my own guys. I could have gotten big vardage."

On the next Dallas punt, he got the big yardage, tying the record held by three players.

"I went back to catch the ball over my shoulder, looked down and saw the end zone," Mathis said. "I said, 'Whoa, I've got to do something with this.'

"He outkicked his coverage and there was a big old hole. No one touched me. Saxon wasn't impressed by 49ers keep barely winning

By The Associated Press The San Francisco 49ers don't beat their opponents badly. They just beat them.

The 49ers extended their winning streak to 16 games on Sunday with a 24-20 victory over the last team to beat them - the Green Bay Packers. As usual, the 49ers got a big game from Joe Montana, who threw for 411 yards and three touchdowns. And, as usual, the 49ers won, but not by much.

The 49ers improved to 8-0, but have won only one game by more than two touchdowns. Five of their eight wins have been by six points

"People want to knock us off, and it's not an easy road for us. You have to accept that and face the challenge," said Montana, who moved past John Hadl into fifth place in career passing yardage. "People think that we should blow everybody out, but that's not reality.'

The Packers (3-5) had been the last team to beat the 49ers, on Nov. 19, 1989, in San Francisco. But this time, despite an early 10-0 lead, they became San Francisco's an NFL-record 14 games tough. But this time we didn't make the mistakes we made last year," Montana said.

The unbeaten New York Giants try to keep pace with the 49ers when they play at Indianapolis

San Francisco trailed 10-0 when Don Majkowski hit Sterling Sharpe for a 20-yard TD pass with 38 seconds to go in the first half. But the Packers left too much time on the clock — Montana needed only three plays, the last a 23-yard touchdown pass to John Taylor, to pull within 10-7 at halftime. "The end of the first half was the key series. We were able to take the ball down the field and score," coach George Seifert said. Mike Cofer's third-quarter field goal tied the game and Montana hit remaining Majkowski hit Sharpe with a 17-yard scoring pass two minutes later and the Packers got the ball back with 2:12 left. But Perry Kemp's fumble - the only turnover of the game - ended Green Bay's last hope.

'That's why they are world champions. This is the way they've been winning. Great teams figure out ways to win games, and the 49ers did today," Packers coach Lindy Infante said.

with sleet and gusty winds, Lowery's final field goal, a 41-yarder early in the fourth quarter, gave the Chiefs (5-3) the victory and moved them within a game of the Raiders (6-2). The teams meet in Los Angeles on Nov.

Hot weather makes for slow marathon times

NEW YORK (AP) - The teachings of a Japanese coach whose philosophy of commitment and belief that the fusion of body and mind negates the ego has helped Douglas Wakiihuri become one of the world's top marathoners.

The 27-year-old Kenyan added the New York City Marathon to his victory cache Sunday, putting it alongside his triumphs in the 1987 World Championships, the 1989 London Marathon and the 1990 Commonwealth Games. Wakiihuri, a native of Kenya, went to Japan at 19 to train under Kiyoshi Nakamura, who had trained the outstanding Japanese marathon runner, Toshihiko Seko. "He told me the way is very long," Wakiihuri said. "If you are not careful, you will hit a stone. You have to have patience."

Wakiihuri showed extreme patience Sunday. He stayed with the lead pack for the first 20 miles, before breaking away and racing to a 40-second victory in 2 hours, 12 minutes, 39 seconds.

The time was not impressive; it was the slowest winning time at New York since Orlando's Pizzolato's 2:14:53 in 1984.

Weather conditions slowed both races. Six years ago, the temperature was 79 degrees, the highest in the race's 21-year history. Sunday, it was 72. The women's winning time also was slow, with Wanda Panfil of Poland beating Kim Jones of Spokane, Wash. by five seconds in 2:30:45, the closest women's finish ever.

While weather played havoc with the times, physical ailments took their toll on some of the elite runners.

McEnroe ended his season stamping out of the court after he was eliminated by Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland in his first match.

McEnroe, the oldest player of the tournament at 31, refused to shake hands with Hlasek and the chair umpire and left as fans whistled and booed.

Sampras was disappointed when 20-year-old French qualifier, Guillaume Raoux, stunned him in the third round.

Gomez bowed to Spain's Sergi Brugera, the eventual loser to Edberg in the semifinals.

Wheelchair winner

Robert Neuamayer of New York City, crosses the finish line of the New York City Marathon, winning the wheelchair division of the marathon.

Saints 21, Bengals 7 New Orleans spoiled the Bengals' return to Riverfront on the road as Craig Hayward and a non-strike season since 1975. Rueben Mayes each ran for more than 100 yards and scored a touchdown. It was only the third time in Saints' history that two backs have topped 100 yards in the same game. New Orleans (3-5) finished with 249 yards on the ground, the most allowed by Cincinnati (5-4) since 1985. Gill Fenerty ran for New score. Cincinnati suffered a major loss when strong safety David Fulcher separated his right shoulder late in the first half. He'll be out for four to six weeks

Vikings 27, Broncos 22 Minnesota spotted Denver a 16-point lead, then rallied after John Elway was hurt to overtake the Broncos and end a five-game losing streak. Elway hurt his toe after leading the Broncos to a 16-0 first-half lead, and backup quarterback Gary times, once for a TD by Joey Browner.

Alton Montgomery to catch Rich Gannon's 56-yard touchdown pass on a trick play with 14:04 left to put the Vikings (2-6) ahead to stay.Denver (3-5), the AFC's Super Bowl representative last season, lost for the fourth time in five Stadium after five straight weeks games and is off to its worst start in

> Steelers 21, Falcons 9 Pittsburgh, shut out for a half by the NFL's worst-rated defense, took advantage of three interceptions to beat Atlanta as Bubby Brister threw a pair of fourthquarter touchdown passes

Chris Miller, the NFL's fifthrated quarterback, threw his first interception in 116 attempts and 16 Orelans' other touchdown. Boomer quarters on the final play of the Esiason hit Eddie Brown with an first half, then was intercepted

> The Steelers (5-4), who tied Cincinnati for the AFC Central lead by winning for the fourth time in the last five games, overcame Larry Griffin's fumble on the opening kickoff and three field goals by Greg Davis for Atlanta (3-5).

Dolphins 23, Cardinals 3 Miami kept its perfect home record against NFC East teams intact by using a ball-control offense and the NFL's top-ranked defense to rout Phoenix for its fifth straight

The winning streak is the Kubiak was intercepted three Dolphins' longest in five years, and their 7-1 record at the halfway point is their best since 1984, the Anthony Carter jumped over last time Miami reached the Super Bowl. Phoenix fell to 2-6. The Dolphins' defense, which has given up the fewest points and yards in the league, has allowed one touchdown in the last 14 quarters. Bills 42, Browns 0 Thurman Thomas scored three touchdowns as Buffalo kept pace with Miami in the AFC East and handed the Browns their worst home loss ever. Thomas ran for two first-half touchdowns and polished off the Browns (2-7) by catching an 11-yard TD pass from Jim Kelly early in the fourth quarter, giving Buffalo (7-1) its first win in Cleveland since 1974. It was also the worst shutout loss in Cleveland's history, beating out a 34-0 trouncing at Kansas City earlier this season. Buffalo's biggest margin of victory previously was a 37-0 blanking of the Jets last December. Bears 26, Bucs 6 Chicago intercepted Vinny

Testaverde five times and scored 10 points in the last three minutes of the first half to win in Tampa.

The Bears led 7-0 when Mark Carrier, Chicago's first-round draft pick, came up with a pair of interceptions in a two-minute span to set up Neal Anderson's 1-yard touchdown run and Kevin Butler's 30-yard field goal.

Chicago (7-1) tightened its grip on the NFC Central Division lead with its fourth straight victory.

Second-place Tampa Bay (4-5) lost for the fourth time in five weeks after a 3-1 start.

Redskins 41, Lions 38, OT Jeff Rutledge rallied Washington from a 21-point second-half deficit and Chip Lohmiller's 34-yard field goal with 5:50 left in overtime gave the Redskins a victory at the Silverdome.

Rutledge, who relieved Stan Humphries, threw for 363 yards, ran 12 yards for the tying touchdown with 18 seconds remaining in regulation, capping a 7-point fourth-quarter rally.

The winning field goal followed a 12-play drive from the Redskins 10 to the Detroit 17 in which Rutledge completed five passes for 69 yards. Washington (5-3) tied an NFL record with 39 first downs. Detroit fell to 3-5. Eagles 48, Patriots 20

Philadelphia, which lost at home to a pair of heavy underdogs earlier in the season, made sure it didn't happen again.

Randall Cunningham threw four touchdown passes and scrambled for 124 yards and Heath Sherman rushed for 113 more as Philadelphia reached the .500 mark for the first time this season by defeating New England.

The Eagles (4-4) won their second consecutive game and the Patriots (1-7) lost their sixth straight.

Chargers 31, Seahawks 14

The Chargers won at the Kingdome for the first time since 1980 as Nate Lewis returned a punt 63 yards for a touchdown and Les Miller fell on Dave Krieg's fumble in the end zone in a 17-point third

San Diego (4-5) lost eight consecutive games in Seattle after winning there 34-13 on Sept. 7, 1980 The Seahawks (3-5) had won 10 of 11 against the Chargers.

ing two interceptions and being sacked three times. "But I'm not pleased with it today. We have to get points on the board when we move the ball." Added rookie Emmitt Smith, who rushed for 55 yards but had a touchdown called back by a motion penalty early in the fourth quarter:

"There's no excuse to be down there so often and come away with only three points." Leading 10-9, the Jets finally got moving with the ball. Helped by a pair of roughing-the-passer penalties, New York had drives of 65 yards in 13 plays and 48 in seven in the final period.

A personal foul on James Washington aided the first drive, which culminated in Brad Baxter's 2-yard touchdown run. Jim Jeffcoat got the other roughing penalty, forcing Ken

O'Brien from the game for one play, and Baxter's runs of 19 and 13 yards set up Freeman McNeil's 1-yard TD. "I thought I had two steps," Washington said of his penalty. "His arm was up. It wasn't like he was sitting there and I came out of nowhere. This is tackle football, not touch.

Baxter said Mathis' return served as inspiration, and the treatment of O'Brien only enhanced New York's determination. "If they want to beat up on our quarterback," the fullback said, 'then I'm going to beat up on their cornerback. The TD was a payback."

The Jets (4-5) have won two straight for the first time this season."It's something to build on," said Dennis Byrd, who had 11/2 sacks. "We've found ways to eliminate mistakes the last two weeks. We've found people to make the big plays.'

CINCINNATI (AP) -Boomer Esiason can't believe this is happening

For the last four weeks, he's bounced passes in front of receivers, sailed the ball over their heads and made hasty decisions while scrambling away from the rush. The NFL's MVP two years ago has become the Cincinnati Bengals' most mysterious player of 1990. And he knows it.

"I don't think I've ever felt as low as a professional athlete, Esiason said. "Right now I feel lower than low. I feel worse than I've ever felt as a pro.

The Bengals are 5-4, and Esiason accepts a large share of blame for the club's offensive inconsistency. Look at his passing yards this season: 202, 250, 271, 128, 490, 130, 85, 199 and 138. He's thrown 13 interceptions with his 14 touchdowns.

Sunday was perhaps his worst day. The Bengals returned home from a five-game road trip, a crowd of 60,067 was ready to cheer, and Esiason left them booing.

He missed four of his first five passes. He completed just 10 of his first 26. He finished with 15 completions in 32 attempts as the Bengals lost to New Orleans 21-7

Eight of the 17 incompletions were the result of poorly thrown balls. He routinely overthrew. underthrew or led receivers too far. Once, he dumped the ball into the turf in front of an open receiver just a few yards

"We've got guys open and I'm not hitting them," Esiason said. "Usually those are routine plays, and I just didn't make them. No excuses

"It's a slump right now. I'm as disappointed as anybody else: I'll fight through it and be back.

This Shawn shines

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) - Maybe now they'll stop calling him "the other Shawn.

Georgia Tech sophomore quarterback Shawn Jones was relegated to second billing all season in the Atlantic Coast Conference while the spotlight was trained on his counterpart at Virginia, senior Shawn Moore,

But with a national television audience, bowl scouts and a record Scott Stadium crowd watching Saturday, Jones methodically rallied the Yellow Jackets to a 41-38 victory over No. 1 Virginia.

"We got a super job from Shawn Jones. He was unbelievable, coach Bobby Ross said. "You know, our Shawn is a great quarterback, too.

By leading 16th-ranked Georgia Tech back from a 14-point halftime deficit, Jones helped the Yellow Jackets quickly change their prospects for the remainder of the season Instead of being stuck in second place in the ACC race behind undefeated Virginia and relegated to one of the less glamorous bowls, Georgia Tech (7-0-1) now is alone atop the conference standings at 5-0-1 The Yellow Jackets also have the inside track on the league's ticket to the Citrus Bowl on New Year's Day. Georgia Tech's lone remaining ACC game is Nov. 17 at Wake Forest, which is 0-6 in conference "We never stopped believing,"

Jones said, "and it paid off." Virginia's players believed they were heading toward an undefeated season and a possible national championship showdown. But now it's the Cavaliers (7-1, 4-1) who are in second place in the league and hoping to attract the attention of some of the second-tier bowls.

"We can still have a good season. Percentage-wise, we can do better than we did last year," said coach George Welsh, who last year led the Cavaliers to their first-ever 10-victory season and a share of the school's first ACC crown.

Georgia Tech has never won the league title, and the Yellow Jackets have not been to a New Year's bowl since 1967. More important for the current group of players, the Yellow Jackets are continuing a resurgence in which they are 14-1-1 after losing 16 consecutive ACC games.

"It's a great feeling to turn it around," senior offensive tackle Darryl Jenkins said. "The first two years were tough for us. We were everybody's whipping boy.' In the first half Saturday, the Yellow Jackets looked as if they were headed for that role again. Moore completed 9 of 11 passes and ran for three touchdowns as Virginia built a 28-14 lead. But on Virginia's opening play from scrimmage in the third quarter, a lineman diving to open a hole for Moore inadvertently kicked the ball out of the quarterback's hands. The recovery by Georgia Tech's Cavlin Tiggle on the Virginia 28-yard line set the stage for the Yellow Jackets' comeback Jones, who completed 10 of 14 passes in the second half for 157 yards, hit Emmett Merchant on a 26-yard pass with 4:34 left in the third quarter to make it 28-28. Virginia took an apparent 41-38 lead late in the game on Moore's 6-yard pass to Aaron Mundy, but the play was called back because the Cavaliers didn't have enough men on the line.

That eventually left Virginia facing a fourth-and-goal from the 6, and Welsh opted for a field goal that made it 38-38 with 2:34 left.

Waitz, 37, stayed with Panfil and the other leaders for nine miles, before fading and finishing fourth in 2:34:34, her slowest time in 10 New York City marathon finishes.

"I decided not to go with them because I thought I would pay for it later," she said.

"It was so much more important to finish, because of all the circumstances with this race.' She referred to her two years of marathon inactivity and the fact she was running the race as a tribute to marathon director Fred Lebow, who was diagnosed with brain cancer this year. Although failing to win again, Waitz was not completely disappointed.

"I knew it was going to be hard," she said. "But it shows I can be competitive again. "To be competitive at this level of marathoning, however,

I need more than three months of training." Waitz discounted any talk of retirement, saying she probably would run the Los Angeles Marathon in March, then would like to run New York again next November. Germany's Katrin Dorre, the 1988 Olympic bronze medalist, also was running her first marathon in two years. Dorre, who took off last year to have a

"Up to 20 miles, I was not running so hard. I was just relaxing.' The other frontrunners were not relaxed, he felt.

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - John F. Kennedy Jr. can breathe a little

Kennedy, who twice failed the New York bar exam, has passed the Connecticut version, letting him practice law in the state.

Kennedy, 29, a graduate of New York University Law School, took the Connecticut test during the summer. The results were announced Friday.

He also took the New York bar for a third time this summer. If he failed again, he would lose his job as a prosecutor in Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau's office. Results of that test are to be announced next week

Liberation plea voiced by Kuwait

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) Secretary of State James Baker III met today with the emir of Kuwait and that exiled leader said he would like to see his country liberated "today and before tomorrow.

'What I would like to see is the liberation of Kuwait as soon as possible, whether through the (U.N.) Security Council or not," the robed monarch said in measured tones.

Baker visited him in Taif, the mountain resort of Saudi Arabia, on the second leg of a 7-country trip designed to test support among Arabs, Europeans and the Soviets for military action against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

SHS Band named as alternate

The Stanton High School Buffalo band failed to advance to state competition placing third and received a first alternate placing against a tough field of competitors.

A gusty northern wind hit just minutes before the Buff band was scheduled to appear. In the Class prior to the Buffalo band, Rankin and Jayton advanced.

Stanton performed first in Class 2-A. In Class 2-A, Iraan placed first, as Sundown edged out the Buffalo band.

'We placed alternate in the standings, but our kids played extremely well considering the northern winds. When a small band like ours and others there at contest has to fight the wind, the bigger brassier bands can excel better than our small group. Not taking anything from Iraan and Sundown their show was excellent, but we felt if we could have performed like we did last weekend we could have maybe pulled it out," said SHS Band Director Kirke McKenzie

He added, "I really wanted to go to Austin because these kids have worked so hard and they we determined to win, but we're still a young band and we learned that we can compete with the big bands. Maybe not this year, but next year were looking to make the difference."

Other winners to represent the region are: Class 3A, Denver City and Brownfield, Class 4A, Pecos and Monahans, Class 5A, Midland Lee and Odessa Permian.

Intersection selected for new 4-way stop

In response to citizen concern, the City of Stanton added took steps to ease the traffic congestion that develops at the intersection of St. Mary and St.

The council voted to make the intersection a four-way stop, after numerous citizens voiced their concern that the intersection was a dangerous place, according to City administrator Paul Lively

"We had citizens approach us and requested that we do something about the area around Bill's IGA and White Motor Company. The council looked at the possiblity of adding another traffic light, like the one at the intersection of St. Peter and St. Anna, but decided to go with the addition of two more stop signs," Lively said.

According to Lively, "the cost of a new traffic light would have cost the city approximately $5000, because of the cost of new poles for the electricity and the labor involved in this kind of construction. With labor and cost of the stop signs the city spent $200, and we feel that it serves the purpose in controlling the traffic flow.

"After being confronted with the problem about two months ago, we decided to look at both alternatives and decided to go with this type of traffice control," said Lively.

Martin County Chamber of Commerce secretary, Dorothy Deavenport, a Stanton resident all her life, cannot remember the when the stop signs went up on the St. Mary.

City of Stanton employees Raymond Marquez, left, and Favian Hinojosa make final preparations at the intersection of St. Anna and St. Mary streets. The new four-way stop was voted on by the city council after numerous complaints that the intersection was a danger area, according to city manager Paul Lively.

Owner wants rock rent

HOMER, Alaska (AP) - The owner of a car wash says a 35-ton boulder sitting on his property is bad for business and wants the city to pay more than $3,000 in rent for the space the unwanted rock takes

The city put the boulder on the car wash site during street improvements, Pioneer Carwash owner Malcolm MacIntosh said. The rock was there when he bought the business.

MacIntosh said he began asking the city to get rid of the rock soon after he took over the business about two years ago. He offered it as a gift for use as a landscaping ornament in a park, but the city didn't budge on the offer.

"All I ever wanted them to do is move it so I can use the land,' MacIntosh said. "It's costing me money because if I have a car here washing and a car here vacuuming, no one can get around.'

His lawsuit in Small Claims Court seeks two years' rent at $120 a month plus interest for payments he says are overdue, for a total of $3,085.22.

City Manager C.E. Swackhammer said he is researching MacIntosh's claim but hasn't found any documents on the rock in city files. He said he also is trying to find past owners of the car wash

MacIntosh said he began billing the city for back rent in June. He said he arrived at the amount by comparing rates at local storage yards for an item of that size. He added a bit for the inconvenience to his business.

Annual plant meeting causes sniffing and scratching

MARATHON, Texas (AP) -About 80 people spent a recent morning bending, scratching, pinching and sniffing.

The hardy group wore hiking boots and hats and carried notepads and plant indentification books. They were at the Miriam Blakemore Memorial Arboretum on Iron Mountain Ranch north of Marathon for the annual meeting of the Southwestern Region of the Native Plant Society of Texas.

Three botanical experts were on hand to answer questions: Barton Warnock, Benny Simpson and John Carpenter.

Warnock, director of the arboretum, said ranch owner William B. Blakemore of Midland had first asked him to document the native grasses and plants on the ranch

"Then he gave me 10 acres for a garden. I told him he'd have to put up a six-foot-tall fence to keep the deer out. These black tail out here can really jump," said

Warnock explained that this the people were welcome to eat the fruit and to gather and take the seeds, "But, if I catch anyone with a shovel ..." his voice trailed off with a twinkle in his eye.

Warnock is a West Texas native. He was born at Christoval near San Angelo and attended Sul Ross State University where he majored in botany. With a doctorate earned in Iowa, he returned to Sul Ross to spend a lifetime teaching and crusading for native plant preservation.

The Alpine resident has named and written the descriptions for many of the native West Texas plants.

His former students are now working botanists who have named newly discovered native plants for their professor.

"About 12 or 13 plants are named after me," said the soon-to-be octagenarian modestly. "My age and my name are not important. The only thing that matters is what I'm doing. It's my work that's important, not me.

Warnock considers his specialty to be plant and wildflower identification. He has written three books that contain ample color photographs and description. I'll write another one as soon as I find a benefactor," he said, explaining that a book with all the necessary color photography would cost about $12,000 to Warnock told listeners that proper plant photography is close-up, but be sure to include plants and stems. That's necessary for indentification. People get so carried away photographing the pretty flowers that they don't realize that they need leaves and other parts of the plant to tell what it is. A lot of the flowers look alike at some point in their development."

"I've learned more just talking to Dr. Warnock in the post office than most people ever learn the Fort Stockton anywhere," resident said. "He was a fabulous teacher, and he still is the fatherfigure to all of us.

Carpenter explained the laborious process of documenting and naming new plants. All parts of the plant must be sketched, a description written and then translated into Latin.

Carpenter is converting the half-acre around his house in Fort Stockton to a native landscape. He practices xeriscaping. Pronounced "zero-scaping," term is Greek for dry landscaping.

He recommended a Museum of

New Mexico publication, "Southwestern Landscaping with Native Plants," by Judith Phillips. "It tells both heat and cold tolerance of plants plus salt tolerance. So much of our soil and water is salty, and some plants really can tolerate it."

"Native Texas Plants," by Sally and Andy Wasowski provides information about landscaping by region, he said.

Benny Simpson, a tree specialist, is a research horticulturist with Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center at Dallas. As the author of "A Field Guide to Texas Trees," he also talks about water conservation.

"We're using it up and they're not making any more," he said, encouraging people to plant trees such as Desert Willows. "Ornamental imported trees use too much water. They can even dry up river beds.'

He also called Bermuda grass a "scourge. "But it (Bermuda) is hard to get rid of if you want to change your lawn to a native grass such Simpson graduated from Texas A&M with a degree in agronomy and a plan to take over the family farm "just in time for the drought of the 1950s. Since the farm couldn't support us, I had to find something else. That was a terrible drought. We are still losing trees that were stressed back then.'

He said that learning to conserve water is the single most important thing for Texans to do. Although there is ample water in the northern states, he said, California, Arizona and Texas consume more than they have.

"The only way those northerners will give us Texans water is in a 12-ounce can, he

"I said I'd veto an income tax if it comes to my desk," Williams said. Richards "won't say if she will." Richards has said on several occasions that she opposes a state in-

Richards, the state treasurer, said her campaign had gained momentum largely because of Williams' income tax admission and a gaffe last week in which Williams acknowledged that he was unfamiliar with a ballot proposition dealing with gubernatorial appointments.

Pilot program staff to prove its mettle

LUBBOCK - A pilot project to improve loan service to cotton producers, the Regional Cotton Loan Center in Lubbock, is staffed and anxious to "prove its mettle" as the area harvest accelerates, says Center Director Susan Hughes.

The Center is equipped to handle much of the data processing required in recording warehouse receipts and class card information needed to cotton price support loans, it also will provide a centralized data base to make cotton loan collateral information readily accessible to buyers

The service, instituted for the first time this year by USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Coriservation Service (ASCS), is designed to benefit producers by shortening the time between loan application and receipt of proceeds. In addition, it's intended that a centralized loan collateral data base available to buyers will facilitate producers marketing operations

The elapsed time form loan applications at the county ASCS office to a check in the producer's hand, ASCS officials say, will be cut to 48 hours. And producers who make loan applications at the Lubbock center can expect a check within 24 hours. Otherwise the wait is a minimum three days.

Testing the new method of handling cotton loans will involve cotton schedules users may call Ms. from 42 county ASCS offices in Hughes or Chief Program Assisroughly a 100 mile radius of Lub-tant Lana Overland at (806) bock. The regional facility will pro- 743-7614.

vide a service center for entering and processing loan data electronically, plus physical storage of receipts and class cards. Participating counties will continue to be fully responsible for administering the loan program and county offices will be the only disbursal point for loan payments.

It's emphasized that producers are not required to use the regional center. They still can apply for and redeem loans at their individual county offices, but with the new system producers from all 42 counties will have the additional option of conducting loan transactions at the Lubbock site.

Producers and buyers using the center will find six terminals set up for their use. They'll be able to access the most current collection of information on loan cotton, but will have access to no data other than that which is currently and legally available in county offices. The advantage lies in the speed of the operation and in the availablity in a single location of data from all 42

Some familiarity with the computer system and its reporting methods obviously will help users get the most out of the information collection. And Ms. Hughes and her staff are offering to arrange demonstrations and informal training sessions on request. The center is located at 4601 West Loop 289, Lubbock. Champion retriever catching up with age

SUFFIELD, Conn. (AP) -Casey, the two-time world Frisbeecatching champion, is getting too old to be jumping after flying disks.

The 7-year-old Irish setter-Labrador retriever, who has performed at football halftime shows and appeared in the Disney movie "Flight of the Navigator," has retired from competition, said the dog's owner, Jeff Gabel.

Gabel and Casey placed fourth in the 16th annual Ashley Whippet Invitational Tournament on Saturday in Washington. They won the tournament in 1987 and 1988 and finished second last year

"We can't compete at that level well but the others were younger and were doing different tricks than in our heyday.

Casey will continue to perform for children, at charity events and paid performances. And although the thought of no longer competing saddens Gabel, the tournament was not all that disappointing. He and Casey were presented with the Ashley Whippet Hall of Fame Award for outstanding performance and exemplary devotion to the sport of canine disk catching. During the past 16 years, the award iven to only six dogs

"When they give us this award I anymore," Gabel said. "He did cried like a baby," Gabel said.
