Nervous candidates eye voter turnout

Republicans, admitting that a low turnout would be bad news for their candidates in most states, had spent the closing days of the campaign exhorting their partisans to go to the polls. Democrats counted on uneasiness over the economy to induce their followers to vote.

(AP) Nervous politicians put aside opinion polls and campaign strategies and watched voter turnout across the nation today for signs of winners and losers in the first midterm election of the 1990s. In North Carolina, where voters were deciding a bitterly contested Senate contest, officials reported long lines at polling places.

President Bush and his wife, Barbara, stood in line for 10 minutes at a polling place in a Houston nursing home. They waved off reporters' questions and, after voting, went to the airport for a flight back to Washington.

Republicans, admitting that a low turnout would be bad news for their candidates in most states, had spent the closing days of the campaign exhorting their partisans to go to the polls. Democrats counted on uneasiness over the economy to induce their followers to vote.

The Senate contest between conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and his black challenger, Harvey Gantt, appeared to generate a heavy turnout in North Carolina.

"Most precincts say they have more people voting than they do in presidential elections," said Mecklenburg County election supervisor Bill Culp.

"When you see long lines like this — more than 300 voters were here before 8:30 — you know you're going to have a nice day," Gantt said. "It's a good sign for us."

In northern Michigan, highway crews had to dig out the snowed-in clerk of Wellington Township so he could open the polls.

Snow also was reported in Iowa, but election officials said early turnout was "heavier than a normal off-year election."

Voters were choosing 36 governors, 34 senators and the entire 435-member U.S. House as well as more than 6,000 state legislators. Normally obscure legislative races have gotten national attention from party officials battling for control of the once-in-a-decade redrawing of political boundary lines to conform to new census figures.

The stakes are highest in races for governor in the nation's fastest-growing states — California, Florida and Texas. When House seats are redistributed to follow population shifts to the Sun Belt, those three states will pick up a total of 14.

Edward J. Rollins, co-chairman of the House Republican campaign committee, said the recent debate over the federal budget "created a lot of disarray among Republicans and, obviously, if we don't do well, it'll be because Republicans don't participate in the process. Hopefully, they'll get angry at Democrats and turn out."

Chamber sponsors luncheon

The Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce will sponsor its community luncheon tomorrow at 11:45 a.m. at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Highlights of the program will include the introduction of recent chamber members and remarks by Adolph Janca, new executive vice president of the chamber.

For reservations, call the chamber at 263-7641.

Unauthorized cars will be ticketed

Big Spring Police are receiving numerous complaints about persons parking their vehicles in handicapped spaces when not so authorized.

The department would like to remind citizens that peace officers can issue citations to persons not equipped with a handicapped license plate or sticker who park in the reserved spaces. Officers are seeking public compliance, but citations will be issued.

Construction to begin on memorial

The West Texas Vietnam Memorial ground-breaking ceremony scheduled Sunday at 2 p.m. culminates three years of hard work and community support. Construction at the site, including the plaza, sidewalk and planters for trees dedicated to the 31 Howard County people killed in action, begins Nov. 19.

Construction is underway on the black granite obelisk in Marble Falls, and the dedication is scheduled for Memorial Day, May 27, 1991.

The obelisk will be engraved with an authentic map of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, including the original names and locations of villages and towns in 1965. The back of the obelisk will be engraved with an MIA-POW flag, and the two sides will be blank. The statue will have dimensions of 9½ feet tall, 6 feet square at the bottom and 4 feet square at the top.

The cost of the monument is in excess of $40,000, according to committee member Charley Lewis. The money has come from three air shows and donations. Lewis credits "everybody in town" with making the Memorial possible. The site of the Memorial is due east of the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

CrimeStoppers is seeking information about two vehicle thefts.

On Oct. 22, a maroon 1976 Oldsmobile Delta 88 was reported stolen from the 3200 block of Auburn. On Nov. 3, a white 1979 Buick Regal two-door was reported taken from the 2500 block of Ann Street.

If you have information about either of the thefts, call 263-TIPS.

BSISD considers advisory panel

The Big Spring Independent School District is entering another phase of its "new building proposal," a plan that could include construction of two new schools. At the board meeting Thursday, trustees will discuss appointing a citizens' committee to advise them on the project.

Citizens' input is going to become an important part of the process, McQueary said. The project would probably be financed through a bond issue.

"I expect that the board will listen very closely to what the committee recommends," he said, "whatever that may be. If the committee has some problems, some adversity to this, then the community does, and that's what we need to know."

Though the process for choosing committee members has yet to be determined, McQueary said he will propose that each member of the board make a number of appointments, attempting to include a cross-section of the community.

He added, "A person with a strong opinion about this already is not the type of person we want on the committee. There's no way to form an opinion right now, (because) you don't have the facts."

Those on the committee should be "objective, and willing to serve," he said.

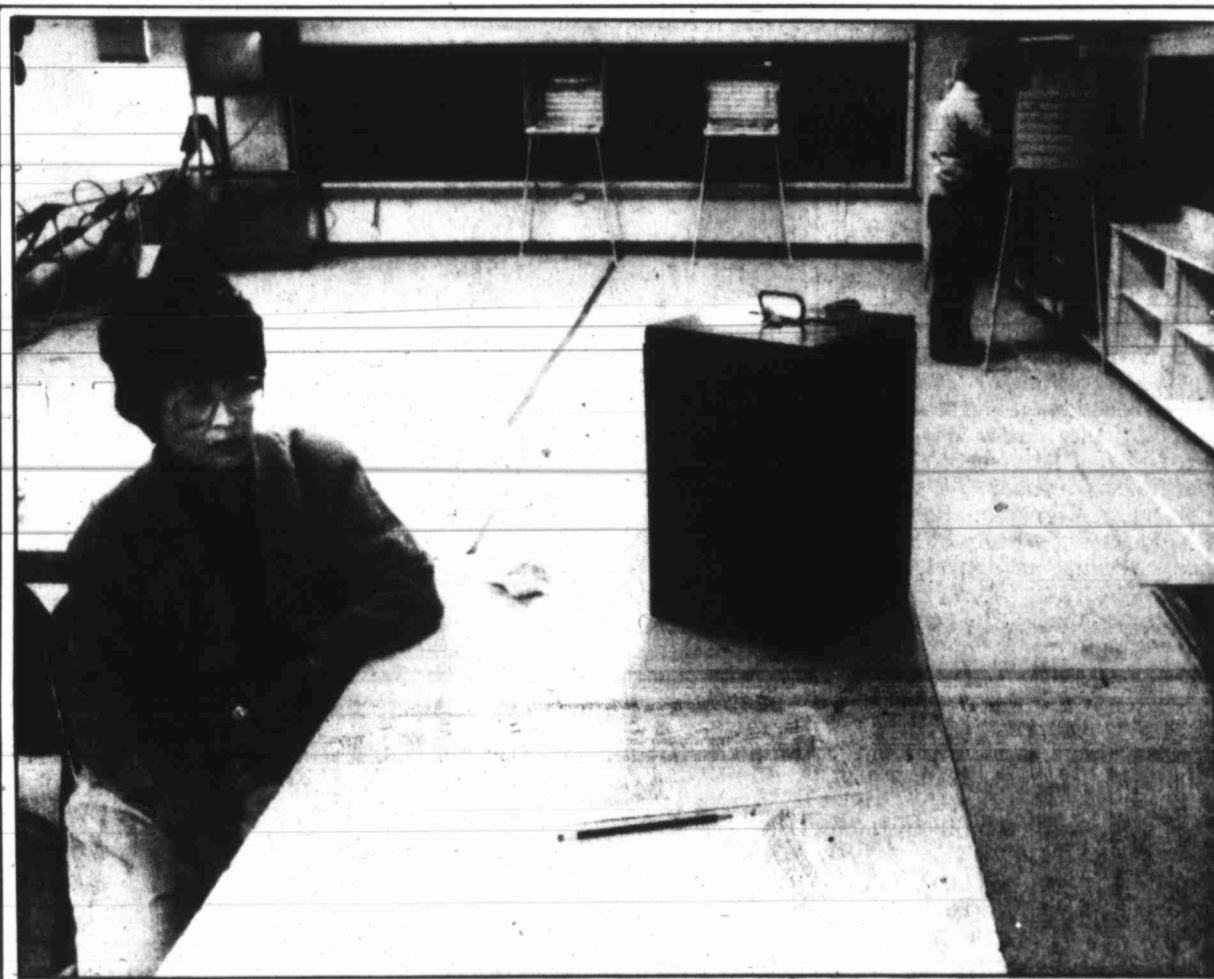

McQueary said there will come a time when further public input will be sought, possibly through public forums.

Trustees began looking at the new building project in August. McQueary told them he wanted to investigate construction of two new campuses, a junior high school and an elementary school.

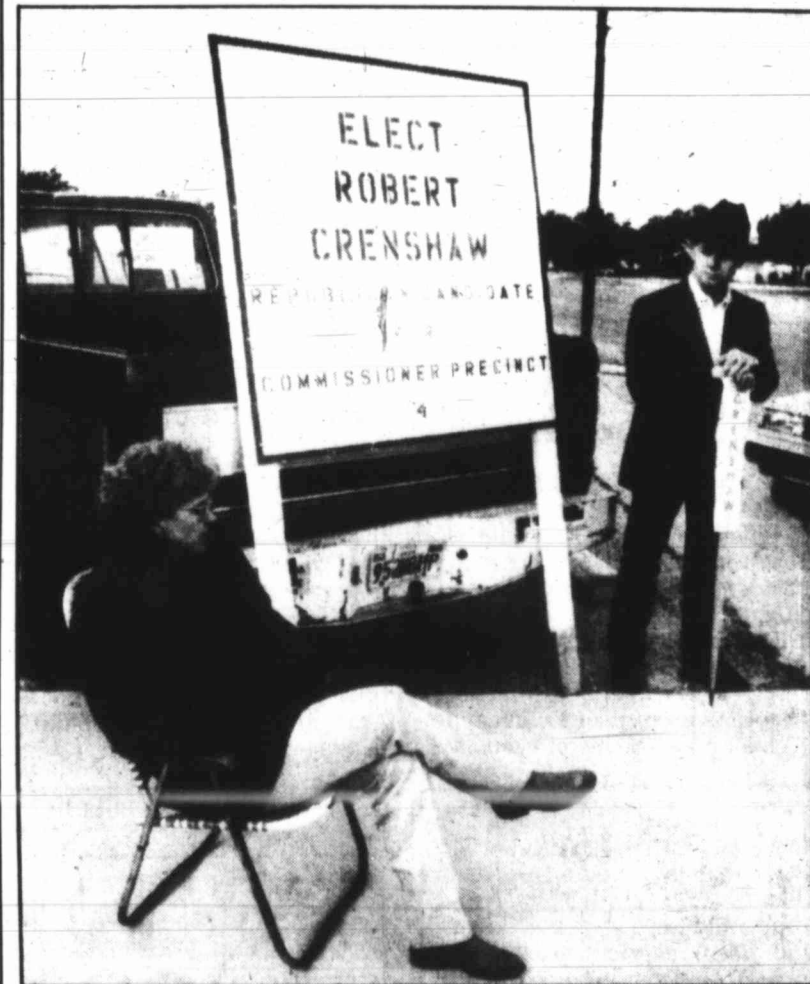

McQueary noted that Rannels Junior High School was built in 1916, and College Heights Elementary in 1930. An additional campus in the College Heights area is thought to be one way to solve the district's overcrowding problems in the lower grades.

Tommie J. Huckabee of Huckabee and Donham, selected to advise the district, began his preliminary work on the project last week. Accompanied by two structural engineers from his staff, the architect completed an in-

Early election turnout good

As of 9:30 a.m., 7.5 of the registered voters in the county's largest precincts had voted and an informal survey taken at one precinct shows that Republican gubernatorial hopeful Clayton Williams may have an edge on Democrat Ann Richards.

"I think that's pretty good for early in the morning," said Howard County Clerk Margaret Ray of the turnout. "Early morning voting is not the heaviest voting time. Usually around noon and after five is the heaviest time."

Of 8,709 registered voters in the six largest precincts in Big Spring and the precinct in Coahoma, 658 had voted at the polls by the time election judges posted the first voting attendance figures this morning.

With 17 percent of the county's 15,190 registered voters casting absentee ballots, that means about a quarter of those eligible

Iraq to free more hostages

(AP) Iraqi President Saddam Hussein today ordered the release of 106 foreigners, including some who were held as "human shields" at key installations, Iraq's official news agency said.

The report said those to be freed are 77 Japanese, 20 Italians, five Swedes, two Germans and two Portuguese.

The Iraqi News Agency said the move to free more hostages was in response to appeals made by various visiting delegations. It had already said the Japanese nationals were being freed in response to an appeal by former Japanese Prime Minister Nakasone.

Former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt was also in the region in an effort to win the freedom of captive foreigners. Today's news of the planned releases came one day after European countries denounced individual attempts to gain the freedom of hostages.

On Monday, Baker and Saudi King Fahd agreed that the United States will not attack Iraq without Saudi approval, but that American troops would be under U.S. command once they go to battle.

Under the accord, the Saudis will share command of U.S. troops as long as the Americans are defending Saudi Arabia, a Bush administration official said on condition of anonymity.

Saudi Arabia's foreign minister pointedly reminded Iraq today that the United Nations has not ruled out the use of military force to liberate Kuwait.

"We would like a peaceful settlement, but that option is in the hands of the Iraqis," said the minister, Prince Saud.

Baker also met in Cairo with China's foreign minister, Qian Qichen. China is a permanent member of the U.N. Security Council, and its support would be needed for a U.N.-sanctioned military strike against Saddam.

Qian was asked whether his government would support such military action.

"All the armed forces have two roles to play," the Chinese official said. "One is to fight a war, and the other is to seek peace."

A poll released Monday, meanwhile, said 56 percent of Americans would support an attack on Iraq if U.S. hostages are mistreated. Fifty-one percent said they would back an attack if Iraq refuses to quit Kuwait.

Nearly seven in 10 of those responding to the ABC News survey said they expected the United States to go to war.

Martinez crowned college Homecoming Queen

By DEBBIE LINCECUM

Anna Maria Martinez was crowned Homecoming Queen at Howard College Monday night. Lady Hawks coach Royce Chadwick was also honored — for his "sexy legs."

"I was really excited," Martinez, a sophomore, said today. "I didn't expect it at all." She was crowned at half-time of the Hawks' opening game Monday, and was given a Howard College sweatshirt.

She is captain of the cheerleading squad this year as well as parliamentarian of the student government.

Now studying business, Martinez said she would like to eventually go to law school, and plans to continue her education at the University of Texas next year.

The daughter of Frank and Grace Martinez of Big Spring, she has lived here for 16 years. She is beginning her second reign as queen, having been elected to the honor at Big Spring High School in 1988.

Student activities director Amy Burchett said the new queen's duties may include appearances at community events.

Burchett was complimentary of Martinez, saying she "shows a lot of responsibility, and you can always count on her."

Chadwick said when he found out Sunday night that he had been nominated for the sexy legs competition, he knew he needed a strategy.

"I knew I didn't have a chance if we compared leg-to-leg," he said. At the contest, he wore a trench coat and pants cut out so that only the bottom portion of the legs remained, held up with rubber bands. Under the coat, he wore a pair of Howard College boxer shorts.

When he opened the coat, Chadwick said, "I don't think anybody was really looking at my legs." He was chosen by the applause of the audience, and received a pair of shorts as a prize.

Pecos gives up state band berth

AUSTIN (AP) — Pecos High School voluntarily relinquished a place in the Class 4A state marching band contest, after being incorrectly declared a winner in regional competition, the University Interscholastic League said.

UIL director Bailey Marshall said Monday that judges had mistakenly broken a tie between Pecos and Hereford in favor of Pecos.

The mistake at the regional meet in Odessa was not discovered until after the results had been verified, and Pecos was not obligated to relinquish its spot in the state finals to Hereford, UIL officials said.

Letter delivered after 19 years

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas woman says she was thrown for a loop when a letter complaining about slow postal service was delivered to her home nearly 20 years late.

Ellen Wallace said Monday she got dizzy when she recognized the handwriting on the air mail envelope delivered Nov. 1.

"I was sick at my stomach," she told WBAP Radio. "When I finally got my chair and sat down and turned it around, I realized that it was a letter from my parents."

Mrs. Wallace, 62, is a native of Breslau, Germany; now Wrocław, Poland. Her father, Karl Leowski, died in 1976 and her mother, Marha Leowski, died in 1982.

The letter had been mailed from Magdeburg, Germany on Jan. 30, 1971.

In the missive, Mrs. Wallace's mother complained about how long the mail was taking to arrive.

"She was really worried because it had taken so long for mail to get back and forth," Mrs. Wallace said. "At the time it took nearly 6 weeks for a letter."

The postmaster at the White Rock post office can't explain the delay in delivery, but Mrs. Wallace was pleased the letter finally found her. It's the only one she has in her mother's handwriting.

"For this letter to find me after 20 years, practically, is a miracle in a way," she said. "And yet it's heartbreaking because the people are not living anymore. It hurt."

Poor school districts ask court for ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — Poor school districts are asking the Texas Supreme Court to again declare the state's public education finance system unconstitutional. And some want the court to devise its own finance plan.

"This court has given the state one bite at the apple, and the state failed," said school districts represented by Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

The Supreme Court has scheduled arguments in the case for Nov. 28. The poor school districts filed legal briefs Monday.

Assistant Attorney General Toni Hunter, representing the state, had no comment on the school districts' briefs.

The state, which has defended the school finance system as constitutional, must file its own brief with the court by Nov. 15.

State District Judge Scott McCown ruled the system unconstitutional in September, although lawmakers passed a law meant to reform it this summer.

The law, which gave an additional $528 million to schools for 1990-91, came after the Supreme Court last year scrapped the system on a 9-0 vote.

"Only an early, clear, unambiguous and strong judgment accompanied by a clear alternative to be implemented by the state will be sufficient to guarantee these plaintiffs an efficient system of education ..." said the MALDEF school districts.

The plan also must provide immediate state funding for school facilities, said the school districts.

As a less-favored option, the MALDEF school districts recommended that the court return the matter to the state district court for work on an alternative plan.

Other poor school districts involved in the case asked only that the Supreme Court affirm Judge McCown's ruling.

The Legislature meets in regular session beginning in January.

The MALDEF school districts also suggested other alternatives, such as having the court issue guidelines for any school finance plan. The suggested guidelines would require consolidation of school districts, or tax bases of the districts, if they have property wealth per student of $500,000 or more.

They said in briefs filed by lawyers Rick Gray and David Richards that "it is extremely important that the court resolve the issue quickly so as to give the Legislature a strong and clear signal that the court meant what it originally said, and that the system must be fixed, and fixed now."

The Supreme Court is hearing the case after the MALDEF school districts appealed McCown's decision not to put an immediate stop to the current school finance system.

In his ruling, McCown said the $14 billion-a-year system is unconstitutional because it doesn't give all schools "substantially equal" access to funds for a similar tax effort.

He gave lawmakers until next September to change the system, which relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

UPS vehicles seized

HOUSTON (AP) — Wreckers hauled away more than 20 United Parcel Service trucks and vans as lawyers for a man who won a $6.4 million judgement in a discrimination suit attempted to collect the money.

Lawyer Michael Pohl, who represents Gerry D. Dickens, said Monday that lawyers are just beginning to seize property of the parcel service.

"They have refused to pay the judgment, so we are now in the process of trying to seize trucks, airplanes and other items until we collect $6.4 million worth of their assets," Pohl told the Houston Post.

Dickens won a $6.4 million award from United Parcel Service Inc. after suing for discrimination in 1986.

Constables impounded the trucks and vans and also seized two UPS airplanes at Ellington Field, but later released the plane after learning that they were owned by United Parcel Service Co. Inc., a separate corporation.

Company spokesman Bob Kenney said UPS tried to post a bond Friday pending an appeal of the case to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, but the district court failed to act on it.

"We're continuing to operate without the vehicles, but we would like to have them back, naturally," Kenney said.

However, William T. Powell, another lawyer for Dickens, said UPS didn't post its $6 million bond until Monday at 11 a.m.

"Right now they're figuring out a way to get their trucks back. They can go down to the sheriff's sale and buy them," Powell said.

Dickens was a manual laborer when he was fired in November by UPS after company officials said they were experiencing large losses at the Westpark facility where Dickens worked.

UPS claimed Dickens dropped a package of jewelry he was seen taking and fled to a waiting car as security personnel approached to question him about the matter. He was fired, arrested and later indicted on a charge of felony theft.

After a state district court jury acquitted him, Dickens sued Greenwich, Conn.-based UPS; John Maldonado, a UPS loss prevention officer; and C.E. Roarke, an off-duty police officer working as a UPS security guard when Dickens was fired.

The first trial in federal court ended with a 5-1 hung jury.

A second jury in June determined that the defendants violated Dickens' civil rights and were guilty of false arrest, malicious prosecution and outrageous behavior in the incident. The three were ordered to pay $6.4 million.

Higher oil prices still not enough for 'clean energy'

TOKYO (AP) — Higher oil prices caused by the Persian Gulf crisis are giving alternative energy sources another day in the sun, but they still are too expensive to generate much enthusiasm.

Officials and commentators in the United States and Japan, the countries with the greatest appetites for imported oil, are urging greater use of alternative energy.

Price Minister Toshiki Kaifu recently told Parliament the government was "making a vigorous effort to ensure stable energy supplies by securing petroleum sources and promoting the development and use of alternative energy sources."

Most alternatives still are too costly or technologically troublesome for large-scale use, however, despite the increase in oil prices since Iraq seized Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Nuclear, coal and natural gas are competitive to oil, "but when it comes to new energy, it will take a long time because of technical problems and problems of economy," said Toyoaki Ikuta, president of the Institute of Energy Economics.

Some of the biggest names in Japanese industry, including Mitsubishi, Sumitomo, Yamaha and Toshiba, are developing wind turbines, fuel cells and "photovoltaic" solar energy converters, which use sunlight to convert protons into electrons to produce electricity.

"The problems of economy might be solved by higher prices, but the technical problems can't be solved" as quickly, he said.

Japan's need for new sources first became clear with the 1973 Arab oil embargo, which quadrupled prices. The government began the Sunshine Project, a research program on such technologies as solar energy and coal liquefaction.

Four years later, the government followed with the Moonlight Project, for technologies like fuel cells, a process to produce electricity from a chemical reaction.

Annual budgets of the projects total about $400 million.

Some of the biggest names in Japanese industry, including Mitsubishi, Sumitomo, Yamaha and Toshiba, are developing wind turbines, fuel cells and "photovoltaic" solar energy converters, which use sunlight to convert protons into electrons to produce electricity.

Price is a constant obstacle. Wind power is competitive at current oil prices, but solar and fuel cells are not expected to be competitive until the 21st century, said Hidetatsu Inaba of the New Energy Foundation, which is linked to the government.

Oil prices of $50 to $60 a barrel might begin to make solar power more attractive, said Yoshizo Yasuda, a senior managing director at Kyocera Corp.

Economical spaceships studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private study says a spacecraft that can climb into orbit by firing a single group of reusable rockets could cut the cost of flying in space dramatically.

The study advocates an "aircraft-type operation" capable of putting a ship into orbit every two days.

The Pentagon's Star Wars organization has four aerospace firms under contract to design a single-stage-to-orbit spacecraft, choosing from among ships that take off and land vertically, those that take off and land like a conventional airplane, and those that are launched vertically and land on a runway.

The organization High Frontier studied a concept in which a cone-shaped vehicle, named SSX for Spaceship Experimental, would launch and land vertically.

Operating a fleet of four such vehicles, the study says, would bring down the cost of putting a satellite into low Earth orbit from $10,803 a pound to $440.

Error produces million dollar cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A technical error in bill-drafting is accomplishing what pitched battles on the floor of Congress sometimes fail to produce: a cut in U.S. foreign affairs spending, to the tune of $395 million.

Lawmakers plan to restore the lost money when the 102nd Congress convenes in January. In the meantime, the cut is small enough — 1.9 percent of a $20 billion foreign operations budget — that bureaucrats will be able to minimize the effects by juggling other funds, officials said.

But the slip-up is an embarrassing one, coming on the heels of a year-long budget war between President Bush and congressional Democrats that polls say added to the public's lack of faith in government officials.

Administration and congress-sional aides, who discussed the blunder on condition of anonymity, agreed that the mistake was made late last month during Congress' dash to finish its business and adjourn for the year.

"It's too bad we couldn't change it," said one congressional official. "But everyone was gone by the time we figured it out."

But once committed, the error forces across-the-board cuts under new budget procedures Congress also enacted in the hours before its departure.

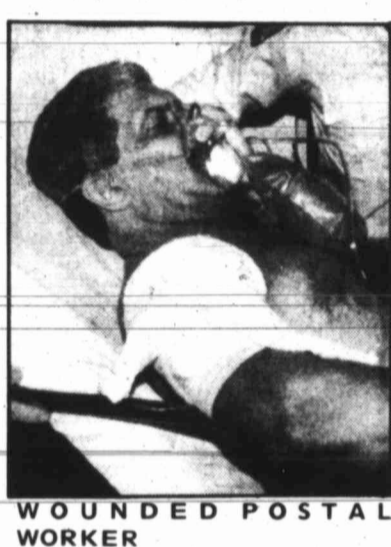

All foreign operations spending will be reduced by 1.9 percent until the money is restored — including foreign aid, operations of the State Department and its embassies, and U.S. contributions to the United Nations and other international organizations.

Jewish extremist assassinated

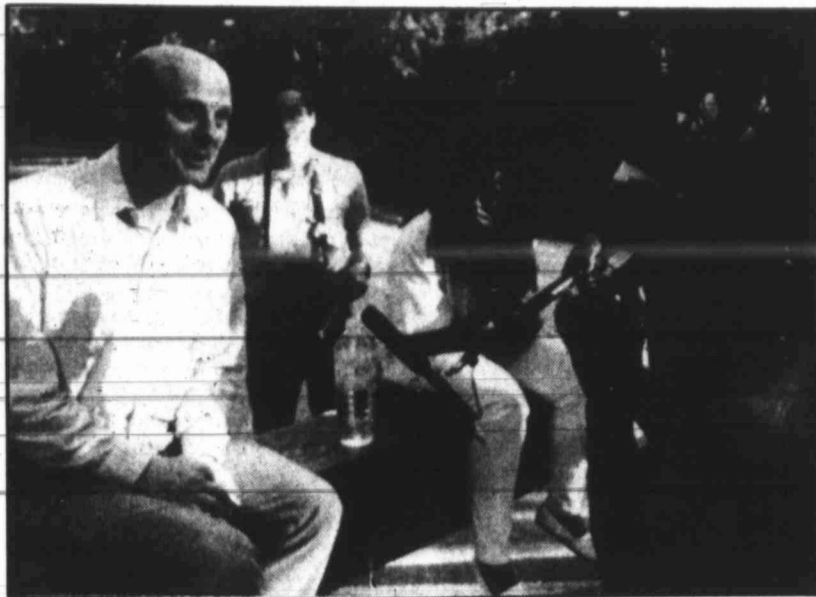

NEW YORK (AP) — A gunman believed to be of Arab descent assassinated Rabbi Meir Kahane after a speech at a hotel by the Brooklyn-born extremist who demanded the ouster of all Arabs from Israel, authorities said today.

Kahane, 58, was shot to death Monday night in midtown Manhattan after addressing a Zionist group. The gunman, El Sayyid A. Nosair, 35, was shot in the chin by a postal police officer as he fled and was hospitalized, police said.

Police said only that the gunman was believed to be of Middle Eastern origin but that his exact nationality was not known.

WOUNDED POSTAL WORKER

GREAT FALLS, Md. — Felix Bloch jokes with reporters and cameramen at a park in Great Falls, Md., in August 1989. Bloch, a career diplomat suspected of espionage, was fired Monday because of "deliberate false statements," the State Department announced.

Spy suspect fired after long diplomatic career

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 30-year diplomatic career of Felix Bloch, suspected of selling secrets to the Soviet Union, ended with his firing on grounds he lied to FBI investigators.

Bloch 55, had been under investigation since early 1989, but no charges have been brought because of the FBI's inability to put together an ironclad case against him. The investigation remains open, however.

Bloch's dismissal from the State Department took effect at the close of business Monday.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III found that Bloch's removal from the foreign service "was necessary because of his deliberate false statements or misrepresentations to the FBI in the course of a national security investigation," a department statement said.

Bloch's dismissal also was based on his "behavior, activities and associations," the statement said. Efforts to contact Bloch for comment were unsuccessful.

The State Department did not elaborate on its allegations against Bloch because of the national security aspects of the case and his privacy rights. His pension rights are still being reviewed.

Bloch submitted his resignation on July 5 and withdrew a request for a hearing on the department's attempt to fire him. But officials had said they would not act upon his resignation until Baker ruled on whether to remove him on security grounds.

Last Feb. 8, the State Department suspended Bloch from his $80,700-a-year job in the European Affairs Bureau and said it would seek to fire him.

During the summer of 1989, Bloch was the subject of extensive FBI surveillance that was widely covered by news media. He led processions of FBI agents, reporters and cameramen on walks around the Washington area, and up to the New York City suburbs to visit relatives.

The surveillance ended late last year after the FBI decided it was unlikely it could prove a case in court. But in U.S. District Court here in May, the State Department won the right to use evidence gathered from secret FBI electronic surveillance of Bloch in the dismissal case against him.

Investigators suspected Bloch was recruited to spy for the Soviets in 1974 while he was serving as economic counselor in the newly opened U.S. Embassy in East Berlin.

Leaders ask for limit on emissions

GENEVA (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain said today there is a "clear case" for immediate worldwide action against global warming and said foot-dragging could spell disaster.

More research is needed on a potential climate upheaval next century, but that "should not be an excuse" for delay, Mrs. Thatcher said in a keynote speech to ministers meeting on the issue.

"We will not succeed if we are too inflexible," Mrs. Thatcher said. "And succeed we must for the sake of this and future generations."

French Prime Minister Michel

Rocard told the officials from about 120 countries they face a "race against time" to save our planet.

In an appeal believed aimed largely at the United States and the Soviet Union, Mrs. Thatcher demanded all countries begin work on binding commitments to limit emissions of so-called greenhouse gases.

The commitments would be part of a global treaty on climate change, to be completed in 1992.

Washington and Moscow are resisting the setting of targets now. They argue more study is needed to justify huge expenditures on emission controls.

Arson suspected in shrine burning

TOKYO (AP) — A Shinto shrine in southern Japan built to honor a legendary emperor caught fire early today, and police said they suspected arson by radicals opposed to next week's coronation of Emperor Akihito.

The roof of a wooden gate leading to the Kibaru Hachiman-sha shrine on the southern island of Kyushu and a nearby barn were damaged in the fire, police said. The blaze, which broke out shortly after midnight, was quickly extinguished and there were no injuries.

Shinto, Japan's indigenous religion, is closely associated with the monarchy and radical groups that link the monarch to Japan's militarist past have vowed to "destroy" Monday's coronation.

Authorities believe radicals were also behind a fire at a Shinto shrine on Okinawa Island on Monday and a bombing attack on a police dormitory in Tokyo that killed one policeman and injured six people on Thursday.

Meanwhile, police said that they today raided 20 sites in northern Tokyo used by the left-wing radical group Kakurokyo, or Revolutionary Workers Association.

The attacks have heightened fears that police efforts to guard the coronation may not prevent trouble.

Prime minister sworn in today

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Nawaz Sharif, a conservative industrialist and Benazir Bhutto's chief rival, was sworn in today as prime minister of Pakistan's fifth freely-elected government in 43 years.

President Ghulam Ishaq Khan administered the oath of office to the 41-year-old Sharif in a 10-minute ceremony attended by 600 guests, including politicians, military leaders and bureaucrats.

Earlier today, the National Assembly elected Sharif prime minister after a brief walkout by supporters of ousted Prime Minister Bhutto.

Quebec studies its future role in Canada

TORONTO (AP) — The French-speaking province of Quebec, determined to take charge of its political destiny, has begun a serious self-examination to decide what its future relationship with the rest of Canada will be.

The failure of the Meech Lake accord four months ago, which would have recognized Quebec as a "distinct society" within the Canadian federation, was seen by many in the province as a rejection by English Canada.

Beginning today, a newly formed Commission on the Political and Constitutional Future of Quebec takes up the question of the province's fate. The creation of the 35-member commission is seen by many Quebecois as a watershed in the province's history. Relations with English Canada will never be the same.

"If the status quo were acceptable, there would be no commission — that's the starting point," said Michel Belanger, one of its chairmen. His report is due at the end of March.

Clearly, it is now no longer a matter of working out constitutional changes acceptable to Quebec and the rest of Canada, as Meech Lake tried to do.

What is important now is deciding just how far down the road to independence Quebec is prepared to go.

The Meech Lake agreement, drawn up in 1987, was the culmination of a long effort to win Quebec's signature on the 1982 Canadian constitution. Its purpose was to draw the ever-wary Quebecois into the Canadian family, solidly unifying a country frequently beset by problems of regionalism.

Quebec's five basic demands were recognition as a distinct society, a new constitutional amending formula that would give it a veto, some powers over immigration, a limit on federal spending authority and a voice in appointing Supreme Court justices. Those were considered minimum demands.

But Meech Lake died when the legislatures of Manitoba and Newfoundland failed to ratify it.

Now the attitude in Quebec is to heck with the rest of Canada. Polls show that more than 60 percent of the 6.7 million Quebecois favor a change toward a form of sovereignty. Opinions range from increased autonomy to independence.

"History will record that, while Meech Lake would not have resolved all of Canada's constitutional difficulties, it could have provided a reasonable stepping stone in that direction," wrote University of Toronto Professor John Crispo. "Instead we now have less than nothing upon which to build a new confederation."

The problem is rooted in the English victory over the French on the Plains of Abraham in 1759. Since then, in one way or another, French Canadians have felt less than full citizens, their language and culture under attack.

Many English Canadians are sick of the constitutional bickering and weary of the non-stop talk about "whither Canada." Others, particularly in the west, are fed up with what they see as Quebec's constant crying.

Nonetheless, leaders on both the right and left of the political spectrum know the problem must be resolved.

"Canada must tackle the Quebec problem, because it is rotting everything else, slowly and systematically destroying the country," wrote Christian Dufour of the Institute for Research Policy.

The provinces of Ontario, Alberta, New Brunswick and Manitoba have set up or are reported to be preparing to set up committees to study the future of the Canadian federation and its 25.6 million people.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney announced on Thursday the establishment of a 12-member Citizen's Forum on Canada's Future. Its members will travel the country to see what people want Canada to be.

Cold fusion is beyond belief

In March 1989, two eminent physicists working in Utah astonished their colleagues and much of the rest of the world by announcing that they had created energy by fusing atoms together at room temperature in a tabletop experiment. It seemed too good to be true — and apparently was exactly that.

Nuclear fusion is the process that makes the sun shine. When atoms are fused, enormous amounts of energy are released, and if the Utah result had been genuine, the world's search for abundant energy would have taken a giant stride. The problem was — and remains — that fusion is known to take place not at room temperature, but at extremely high ones.

Scientists complain that the two Utah researchers, Stanley Pons and Martin Fleischmann, have failed to disclose all of their data, and other experiments have proved unable to duplicate their work. One congressman complained that the Pons-Fleischmann research had produced "more confusion than cold fusion." Now, the State of Utah has asked a panel of experts to review their data.

A final verdict can't be reached yet, but a tentative one can be: Cold fusion remains a dream, not a reality. A lesson can be learned, too: When even eminent scientists make extraordinary and controversial claims, it is best to see their data before cheering.

Gauging the impact of today's elections

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In mid-term elections that will deliver two more years of divided government, President Bush can't win as much as he has at risk.

And his Republican Party needs against-the-odds gains in the Senate, plus added strength in the statehouses to have a chance of cracking Democratic control of Congress later in the decade.

The danger for Democrats is that voters really are frustrated, angry enough to punish incumbents in Congress, the way GOP campaigners have been urging. Since Republicans are outnumbered in the House, they'd stand to gain, even if some of their own veterans are ousted.

But there's been no advance sign of a tide that would swamp many congressional incumbents, most of them heavily bankrolled and heavily favored.

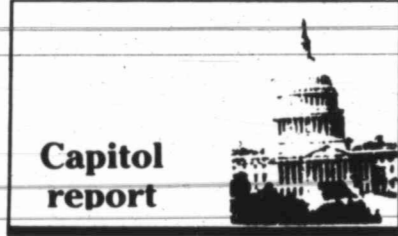

Short of a change in congressional control, which is not in view this time, there is no simple test of national impact in off-year elections.

But today's balloting could affect Bush's negotiating strength in dealing with the Democratic Congress for the rest of his term and Republican chances of gaining House control for the rest of the century.

Among the checkpoints:
• Bush's power to veto legislation and make it stick, key to his bargaining power with Congress. Should the Democrats gain 10 to 12 House seats or a handful in the Senate, that power would be at risk.

• Republican strength in congressional redistricting by the state legislatures and governors next year. These elections will determine which party controls that process in the big states that are gaining and losing House seats because of population shifts reported in the 1990 Census.

• Positioning for the 1992 elections, which are more likely to produce a congressional shakeup. Redistricting is one reason. Another is the law that entitles veteran House members who retire after this election to convert leftover campaign funds to personal use. Republicans look to those changes to help them whittle the Democratic majority. In the Senate, the GOP hopes to move within range of control next time, when 20 Democratic seats will be at stake and only 11 of its own. Those longer-term Republican aims could be put out of reach by Democratic gains this time.

While the president is not on any ballot, his performance is among the issues — and Bush's autumn slump has been a drag on the GOP.

Still, off-year campaigns are not a referendum on a president, even when he says otherwise, as Ronald Reagan did in 1986 when he asked people to vote for him one last time. It didn't work — Republicans lost control of the Senate that year. They had won control with a 12-seat gain when Reagan was elected in 1980.

This time, neither party anticipates so clear a verdict. Republicans concede that the Senate is beyond their reach — John Sununu, the White House chief of staff, forecasts a standoff or close to it, in competition for 34 seats today. The lineup now is 55 Democrats, 45 Republicans.

The House is more heavily Democratic than it has been at the mid-term of any Republican president in this century. The Democrats have 259 seats and their strategists expect gains of 10 or so in today's balloting.

The off-year average is 25 seats lost by the White House party. Sununu cites that benchmark and says the GOP goal is to hold losses to fewer than half the average.

But losses in that range would jeopardize the Bush veto margin, and with it his strategy for dealing with the Democratic Congress. Bush has used 16 vetoes, and the threat of others, to bargain for his position on issues from abortion to the minimum wage to crime legislation to the budget.

He's never been overridden, which takes two-thirds votes in both branches of Congress, but it's sometimes been close. The last House override attempt, on a textile quota bill, fell 10 votes short. The Senate came within a vote of overriding his civil rights bill veto.

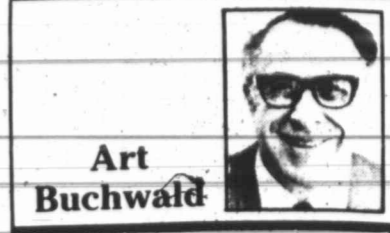

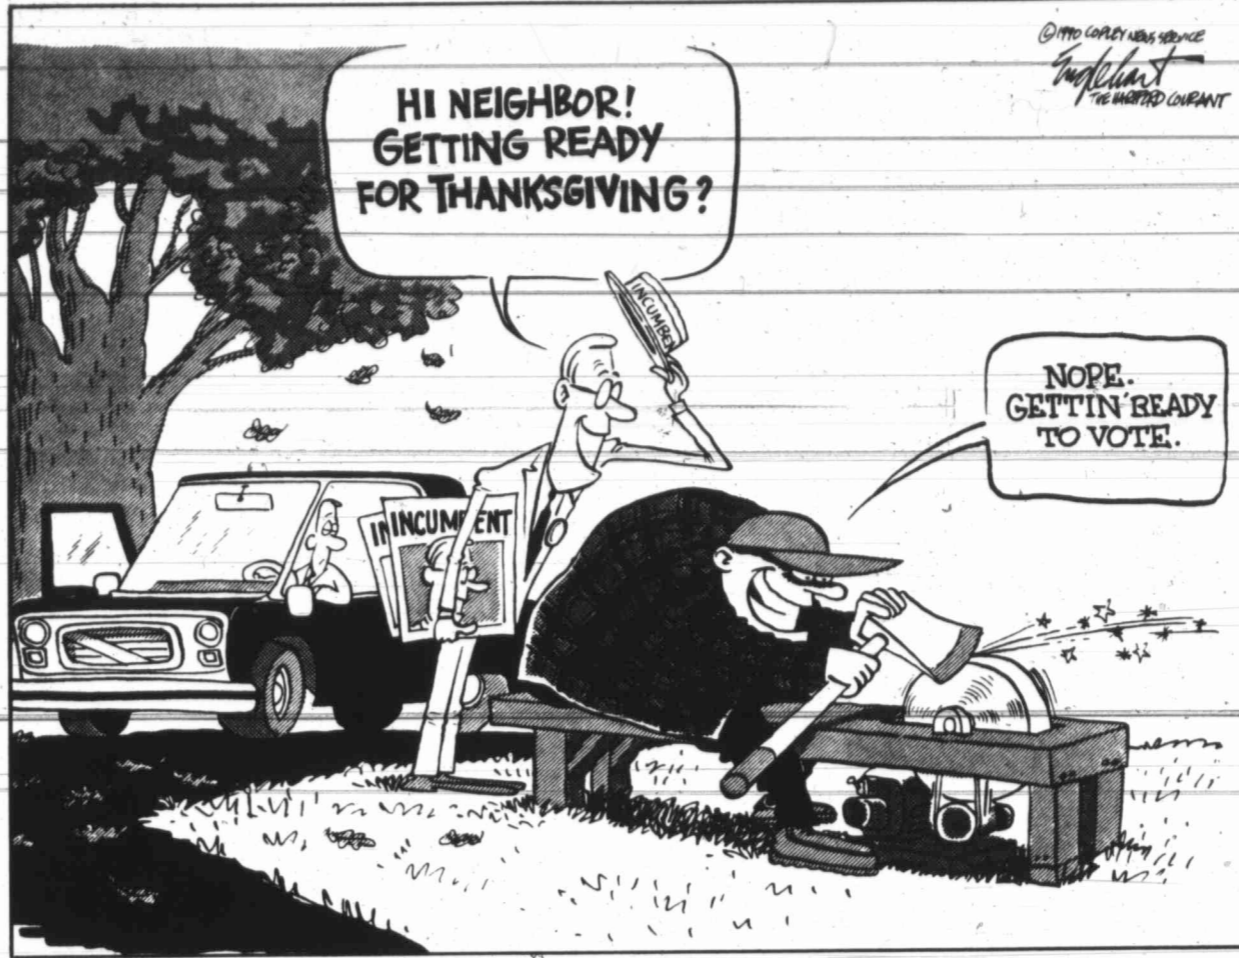

And the enforceable veto is likely to become increasingly important in the next Congress, as Bush and the Democrats head toward the 1992 campaign for the White House.

Letters

Letters to the editor on issues of general interest always are welcomed by the Big Spring Herald and always are printed if these guidelines are followed: Letters should be 350 words or less, typewritten if possible, and double-spaced. If not, the handwriting must be legible to reduce chances for mistakes.

They are subject to editing, but the essence of the writer's message will not be altered. Letters exceeding the 350-word limit will be cut. They must be signed, free of libelous statements and in good taste. Political endorsements won't be accepted during a campaign; candidates are allowed a single letter during a campaign. Letters listing numerous donors to projects are not published. Address letters "To the editor," Big Spring Herald, Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720.

We need recession prevention

By ART BUCHWALD
I read a story on the front page of The New York Times the other day that made me whoop up. Apparently, healthy companies are laying off employees to prevent a recession. This raises the question: By firing people is it possible to cause the very recession you're trying to prevent?

Take the case of the Extra Creamie Yogurt Company.

The powers that be at Extra Creamie met to discuss how to avoid a predicted drop in sales.

"Gentlemen, we must try and steer clear of this business downturn. As a stop-gap measure I propose that we terminate 1,000 employees. This will give us some leverage if the good times don't roll by."

"An excellent idea. We've been overstuffed for years, and it's about time we took the bull by the horns and chopped off some heads below the knees."

"Objection. If we get rid of 1,000 people we would be contributing to the disaster we want to prevent."

"That's ridiculous. All we're trying to do is protect our bottom line. I say we lay off 1,500 workers every Thursday. In that way we'll scare those who are left behind and they will produce twice as much yogurt as they did before."

"Gentlemen, let us suppose that every company fires a percentage of its staff. The purchasing power of the whole country could be put on hold and people will have a serious cash-flow problem — so serious that no one will ever buy a cup of Extra Creamie Yogurt again."

"You can't have a recession that serious. Consumers have killed to buy our yogurt."

"These are tougher times. It appears that the United States has talked itself into a recession and everyone is pushing the panic button. The newspapers scream recession — the TV stations feature stories on it. Economists are starting to ask each other, 'Which came first, the chicken or the egg or the recession?'"

"I have been in stormy seas before. They can get very ugly if you don't reduce the size of the payroll. Our actions today will long be remembered by our stockholders when they talk about the great plop of 1990."

"What is a recession? It's nothing more than a lack of customers in a store. It's empty seats at McDonald's. It's a showroom full of new, unsold cars. It has nothing to do with yogurt."

"Gentlemen, I say we keep all our help and fight the recession from within."

"No way. Lop off their heads. Someone read the list of the condemned."

"George Carricola."
"That's me. You can't fire me — I'm management."
"Companies always save money during a preventive recession by dumping managers."

"I demand an appeal."
"George, you can use a pistol or the gas oven — whichever you feel more comfortable with. In the meantime please accept this quart of Extra Creamie Yogurt as your severance pay. Preventive recession is a dirty business but somebody has to do it."

Wives deserve appreciation

To the editor:
As I watch and read the news about the crisis in the Middle East and the soldiers, airmen, sailors and marines who are out there, I feel we are forgetting a very important and key individual in this time of stress: The wife and children of those fighting men left behind.

I know because I kept "deserting" my wife and children every three or four years over a period of 30 years and it took a toll on her.

Usually the first time the wife is no more than a teenager herself, married for a year or two, already the mother of one child and another on the way, never left alone before.

The husband, who has been the manager of the household now drops the checkbook, credit cards and bills on the table and says: "Here it is honey, bye" and off he goes to war, leaving her to worry about food, clothing, doctor bills, doctors, broken down cars, plugged sewer lines, etc.

Can you imagine the feeling that teenage wife and mother must have. Why don't we ask some retirees' wives — I'll bet they can give us an earful.

Let's see some addresses to them in the paper also. I know they would appreciate some letters of encouragement, especially from those friends who they grew up with just a few short years ago.

I say thanks to the wives who are left with that "single parent status" who will again do a real "bang up job" so that fighting husband doesn't have to worry about that and can come back home and take over again. Thanks again ladies.

Paper censors Mapplethorpe

To the editor:
Your hypocrisy skirt is beginning to show. The evidence is clearly seen from the editorial printed in the Oct. 24 edition.

The very arguments you present to justify not printing the Mapplethorpe's pictures when challenged by Garry Trudeau to do so, are used by proponents of censorship.

Case in point; your arguments against printing the photos: 1). Accidental viewing by adolescents and 2). offering "a product with the broadest appeal to our market."

One can easily argue that 1). if allowed to proliferate, the scenario where an innocent family wanders into a gallery open to the public that is exhibiting this trash is very probable and 2). the "art" being produced is not reflective of the norms of mainstream America who subsidizes it.

Hmmmm. They sound fundamentally the same, don't they? After all, "If they don't want to be exposed to Mapplethorpe's works, they can elect . . ." not to buy the newspaper.

The driving force of your decision is obviously the prevention of a subscribers' backlash. It is interesting (discouraging?) how the self-proclaimed champions of the

Why do we have to pay for photos?

To the editor:
Regarding, No We Won't Show The Photos editorial in the Wednesday, Oct. 24 Big Spring Herald:

It is true that we viewers can refuse to view photos that we find objectional. These photos must really be loathsome if our paper cannot show them:

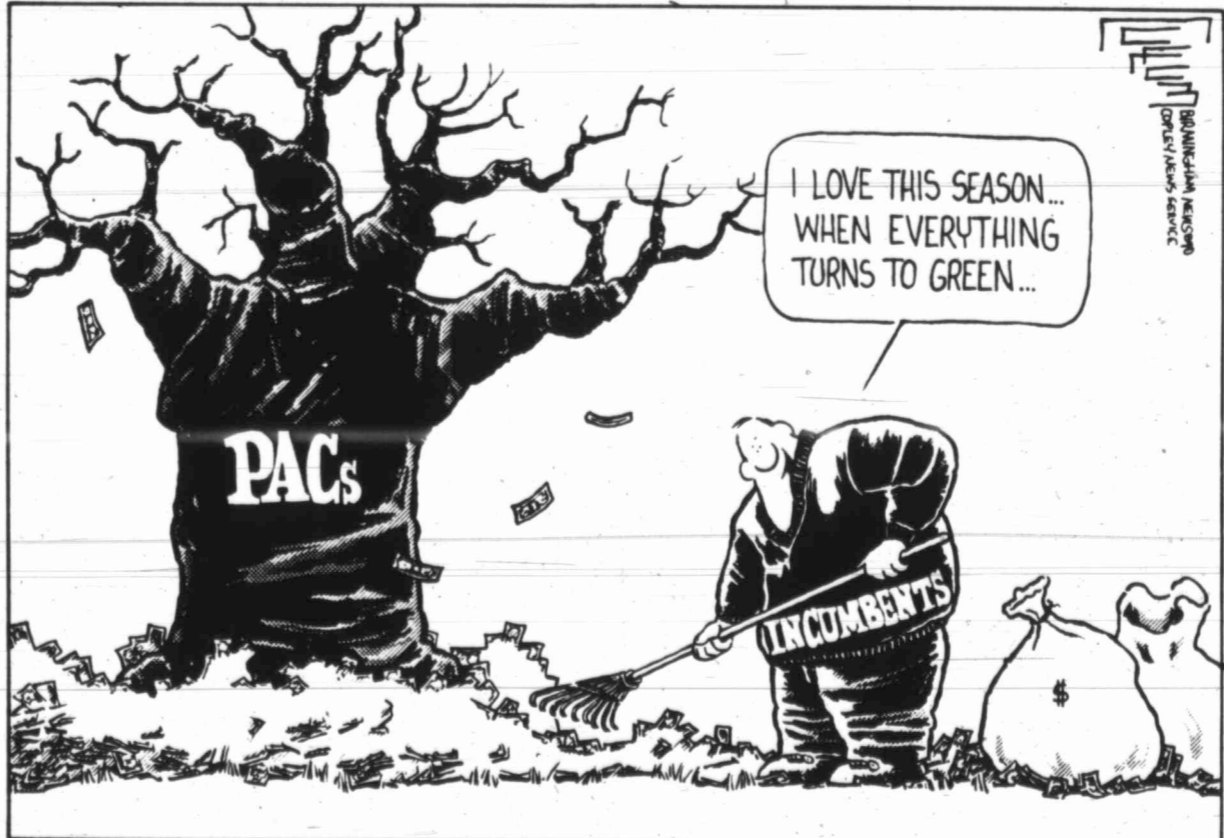

An artist can portray anything he wants to portray, questionable or unquestionable — this is his freedom. He can add to the garbage that is already here! I can refuse to view and digest this garbage. This is my freedom:

My question is however: Why am I forced to pay, with my tax dollars, for these foul, obscene works that I consider highly questionable?

I am forced to pay with my tax dollars for photos that you cannot even print in the Big Spring Herald.

If our government, with its great deficit, cannot control the NEA's choice of what they fund with our tax dollars, I say, do away with the funding.

Budget policies could widen Baptist split

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Thousands of Southern Baptists nationwide are considering state budgets that could deepen the decade-old split between conservatives and moderates in the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Moderates in Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina are pushing for spending plans that would withhold contributions from some of the church's national programs in which the conservatives, or fundamentalists, hold sway. Such contributions support missionary, educational and benevolent work.

If the spending plans are approved, they could wreck the national budget adopted in June for the 14.9 million Southern Baptists.

"We are going to have churches torn apart, families torn apart, ministers torn apart," said Neil Jones, a moderate pastor of Columbia Baptist Church in Falls Church.

"Some of my good friends are preachers on the other side." "The most damaging thing it will result in is a weakening of missions and fewer souls being saved, and more souls going to hell for eternity," said T.C. Pinckney, a conservative member of Alexandria Good New Baptist Church.

Conservatives believe in the literal truth of the Bible. Moderates say the Bible is open to individual interpretation.

The conservatives dominate the Southern Baptists. In the past 12 years they have gained control over many seminaries and national boards and forced out leaders who disagree with them.

Representatives from churches in 21 states will hold separate meetings Nov. 12-14 to approve their spending plans. The denomination is based in Nashville, Tenn.

The moderates' plans would restrict or cut off money for such programs as the church's executive committee, the Southeastern Baptist Seminary in Lake Forest, N.C., and the Christian Life Commission. The commission determines the Southern Baptists' position on social and ethical issues.

Less money also would be sent to the Southern Baptist Convention's Cooperative Program, the denomination's major funding program.

Pinckney said the spending dispute, while keeping the denomination together, "diverts our attention and resources away from winning souls."

Reserves face longer duty in Saudi Arabia

By PETER ROPER
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Before adjourning last month, Congress quietly moved 200,000 Army, Navy and Air Force combat reservists a large step closer to the front lines in Saudi Arabia by doubling their potential active-duty time to 360 days.

The legislation giving President Bush special authority to activate the nation's combat reserves for a full year instead of six months was a last-minute addition to a 1991 defense spending bill inserted by Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., at the request of Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. The extension was in neither the House-passed version of the defense bill nor the Senate version.

The provision was opposed by Senate Armed Services Committee chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, chairman of the panel's personnel subcommittee.

The call-up extension allows President Bush to deny Congress a role in reviewing the U.S. military commitment to the Persian Gulf, Glenn complained Monday. Under the old law, extending the call-up periods of reservists would require congressional approval.

Pentagon officials said one reason for doubling the active-duty time to a year is the need for adequate training before sending the troops overseas. The combat reserve units would first be sent to the Fort Irwin in the Mojave Desert of California for desert and chemical warfare training.

"By the time you run these reserve units through refresher training at Fort Irwin and get them overseas, two months have gone by and you've only got them for four more," said Clemenson. "Doubling the active-duty time means these forces can be of real use in Saudi Arabia."

Army Sgt. Jaime Cavazos, public affairs specialist at Fort Irwin, said the desert training program has traditionally taken 20 days. The training units fight mock tank and infantry battles in the desert against the 177th Armored Brigade

"The few calls we've had have been positive. These reserve guys are pretty gung-ho. They want to get in on the action."
— Brad Clemenson

that is stationed there. "It takes a couple of days for a unit's equipment to arrive by rail, but then they go out for 14 straight days of desert maneuvers," he said. During that time, troops are also outfitted with chemical warfare equipment, he said.

Word that they could be heading for Saudi Arabia for a full year instead of 180 days was just beginning to reach the reserve troops this week.

"The few calls we've had have been positive," said Brad Clemenson, Murtha's spokesman in Johnstown, Pa. That state is home to the National Guard's 28th Infantry Division. "These reserve guys are pretty gung-ho," Clemenson said. "They want to get in on the action."

The Kansas National Guard's 35th Mechanized Infantry Division in Leavenworth is also one of the reserve combat units that could be called on if the Bush administration goes forward with its plans to send 100,000 more troops to the Persian Gulf.

Col. Joe Guerrein of the 35th was calm about it all. "Nobody has said anything to us yet about being mobilized, so we're just going ahead and doing our jobs," he said. Asked if he was concerned that Congress had doubled the unit's potential active duty time, he said: "Nobody's complained so far."

The bulk of any call-up would focus on the 10 Army reserve divisions (either National Guard or Army Reserve) that are spread across the nation. Until now, Pentagon strategists have only called up 34,000 reserves in support groups, such as field hospitals and air transport units, to bolster the active-duty forces in Saudi Arabia.

Elementary students conduct anti-drug rally

By JULIE MCKINNON
Garden City Elementary School students conducted a drug rally Oct. 24. The high school cheerleaders led the group in anti-drug cheers.
Guest speaker Jack Howard told the students about the dangers of drugs. He warned the students about taking candy from strangers and taking LSD stamps, which have feature characters such as Superman, clowns, butterflies, and Disney characters.
Howard warned the kids to stay away from people who take drugs, because they become violent, and they might even have hepatitis or

AIDS. The sixth grade students presented Mr. Stringer a banner that read, "Just say no to drugs."

Man has two wives too many

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an American, but I was born in the Philippines. Wilbur is 51 and I am 36. We've been married for eight years, and he adopted my two children. (I was a widow.)
Yesterday I got a telephone call from a woman who said, "Hello, my name is Mary Elizabeth ()," and her last name was the same as mine, so I said, "Oh, you must be related to Wilbur." She said, "Yes, he's my husband."
I was so shocked I could hardly speak, then I told her that Wilbur was also my husband. She was very surprised and said she hadn't seen him in many years, but she wanted a divorce so she could marry someone else.
Abby, Wilbur never mentioned that he was married before. Anyway, I took her number to give to Wilbur. When he came home, I told him about Mary Elizabeth, and he just laughed and said he had not thought of her for a long time. Then I said, "Maybe you have yet another wife who would like a divorce?" To my surprise, he said, "Yes, I have. Last I heard she was in San Antonio, Texas, but if she doesn't bother me, I won't bother her."
I asked if he had any children. He said, "No, my first wife gave me a vasectomy for a wedding present."
Abby, now I worry about whether our marriage is legal. He's a kind and decent man, owns his own business and has been a fine father to my children. We were married by a Navy chaplain. But are we really married? Please tell me what to do. — VERY WORRIED
DEAR WORRIED: Your husband should see a lawyer. He has at least two marriages that need to be dissolved before he is free to marry you.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a family argument. My husband thought "Traci," our 14-year-old daughter, was spending too much time on the telephone, so he gave her a five-minute limit on all telephone calls. I think this is unfair.
I equate Traci's telephone calls with "hanging out," as we did on street corners before we had telephones and lived near enough to walk to our friends' houses. Therefore, my heart is not really into enforcing Dad's five-minute rule — especially since we have "call waiting." Your opinion, please. — TRACI'S MOM

Dear Abby

DEAR MOM: First, some pertinent unanswered questions: How are Traci's grades? Has she been neglecting anything of importance in order to "hang out" on the telephone?
The telephone to some teen-agers is a lifeline, so since you have "call waiting" — and if Traci hasn't been neglecting her homework and chores — imposing a five-minute limit borders on cruel and unusual punishment. I think Dad should lighten up.

DEAR ABBY: I am a bandleader who frequently gets requests to play a song in honor of a wedding anniversary. I always get a laugh when on the occasion of the first anniversary I play "Night and Day."
For the fifth anniversary, I play "Saturday Night."
For the 10th anniversary, I play "Once in a While."
For the 25th anniversary, I play "Now and Then."
For the 50th anniversary, I play "Thanks for the Memories."
Any suggestions for anniversaries over 50? — OPEN TO SUGGESTIONS
DEAR OPEN: How about, "We Did It Before and We Can Do It Again"? Or, "Never in a Million Years"?

DEAR ABBY: Several overweight women wrote to tell you of the abuse they took from strangers because they were fat. I, on the other hand, have had my share of humiliation because I am tall — nearly 6 feet without heels, but I'm well-proportioned.

Once when I was wearing a green outfit, I was called The Jolly Green Giant. Another time, I walked into a dress shop and the salesperson looked me up and down and said, "We don't have anything in here to fit you." I was crushed at her tone and left — almost in tears.
I seem to tower over other women who don't even want to stand next to me because, as one said, "You make me feel so short and dumpy." Also, I believe my height intimidates them. I order most of my clothes and shoes from catalogs. I dress in a feminine manner and wear makeup and conspicuous jewelry so as not to look like a man.
My husband is not the most companionable person, and I'd like to have a good female friend to go to lunch, shopping or to the movies with occasionally. Life is lonely at times when one is not average. — TOO TALL
DEAR TALL: Surely you must have heard of Tall Clubs International. They are a wonderful group of people who are proud to be tall.
There are 54 chapters of Tall Clubs International in the United States and Canada, with more than 4,000 members, and 32 chapters in Europe. The minimum height for women is 5 foot 10, and the minimum for men is 6 foot 2.
For more information, call the toll-free number: (800) 521-2512. And may your friendships reach new heights!

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Treating septic shock

By NYU SCHOOL OF MEDICINE For AP Newsfeatures
The importance of early treatment of common infections has been underscored by the recent death of Muppet creator Jim Henson from blood poisoning and septic shock.
"Early and aggressive treatment of an infection before it releases toxins into the bloodstream is needed to prevent septic shock," said Dr. Alexander McMeeking, a specialist in infectious disease at New York University Medical Center.
"An infected wound or burn, a urinary tract infection, or symptoms of a possible internal infection, such as general weakness and fever, especially if accompanied by coughing, require prompt attention," McMeeking advised.
The incidence of septic shock has more than doubled in the past decade. Ironically, a significant percentage of that increase is attributed to medical advances against other diseases.
Chemotherapy for cancer and immunosuppressant drugs to prevent the rejection of organ transplants weaken the body's defenses against the bacteria, fungi and viruses that cause infections and are present everywhere in the environment, McMeeking explained.

"A growing body of evidence indicates certain common infectious agents, such as the streptococcal bacteria that killed Mr. Henson, are mutating into more deadly strains," he added.
While the prospect of someday being able to treat septic shock directly is encouraging, physicians can prevent most cases of septic shock through early recognition and appropriate treatment of infection.
Once in the bloodstream, the infectious agents release poisonous byproducts called pyrogenic toxins. In response, the body's defense mechanisms produce inflammatory agents which can damage blood vessels throughout the body.
As a result, less oxygen-rich blood reaches the body's organs, which begin to fail. This condition is known as septicemia or sepsis syndrome, which can lead to septic shock.

Republicans outspend Democrats in local races

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
 Staff Writer

Republicans in the four contested Howard County races continued as a whole to outcollect and outspend their Democratic counterparts during the last campaign finance reporting period Sept. 28 through Oct. 27.

During that time, Republicans running for county judge, commissioners for precincts 2 and 4 and district clerk collected 21 percent more in contributions and spent 39 percent more than Democrats, according to reports filed with the county clerk last week.

Also, eight contributions over $50 to Republicans averaged $150 each compared to three $100 contributions going to the only Democrat, District Clerk Glenda Brasel. No contributions were over $250. Only one was from out of Big Spring, with the Texas Republican Party in Austin giving $250 to precinct 2 commissioner candidate Jerry Kilgore.

Through the primaries up to Sept. 28, Republicans had collected $7,769.55 and spent $7,119.10 while Democrats collected $2,960 and spent $6,670.51. Republicans had four times as many contributors giving over $50 but Democrats averaged slightly higher contributions over $50, at $173.51 each. The highest contributor was Mrs. John Coffee to her son, County Judge John Coffee, Republican nominee for re-election.

In the latest reporting period, Republicans collected $1,887 and spent $6,664.70 while Democrats collected $1,555 and spent $4,785.18, reports filed last week show.

Brasel has more contributions, more contributors giving more than $50 and more expenditures than her Republican opponent, and Democratic county judge candidate Ben Lockhart has more contributions than Coffee; but otherwise the Republicans have higher figures in each category than their Democratic counterparts.

The most expensive race remains the one for county judge, with $4,683.86 being spent during the last reporting period.

Coffee spent $2,995.97 and brought in $707 in contributions while Lockhart spent $1,687.89 and had $1,095 in contributions. The only contribution over $50 was one for $250 to Coffee.

The race for Precinct 4 commissioner remains the least expensive one with $959.20 being spent in the past month.

Republican nominee Robert Crenshaw spent $515.67 while collecting $470 and Democrat Bobby C. Cathey spent $443.53 while collecting $70. Crenshaw had three contributions over $50 for a total of $400.

In the Precinct 2 commissioner race Kilgore spent $875.30 and collected $475 while Democrat John R. Stanley spent $250.16 and collected $20. Kilgore had three contributions over $50 for a total of $450.

In the district clerk's race, Brasel spent $2,403.60 and collected $370 while Republican nominee Judi Atkins spent $2,277.76 and collected $235. Brasel had three contributions over $50 for a total of $300 and Atkins had one contribution for $100.

Teachers, he added, are completing surveys now, and their input will be considered as well. He said he expects to complete the report sometime in the next two weeks.

The results will be presented to the board at their December meeting. Included in the package will be plans for two additional schools, to be used for comparison purposes, Huckabee said.

McQueary said the analysis will include information such as, "what it would cost to renovate, restructure, whatever is needed to keep the buildings in use. The board then will begin to (attempt to determine) is that in fact financially feasible."

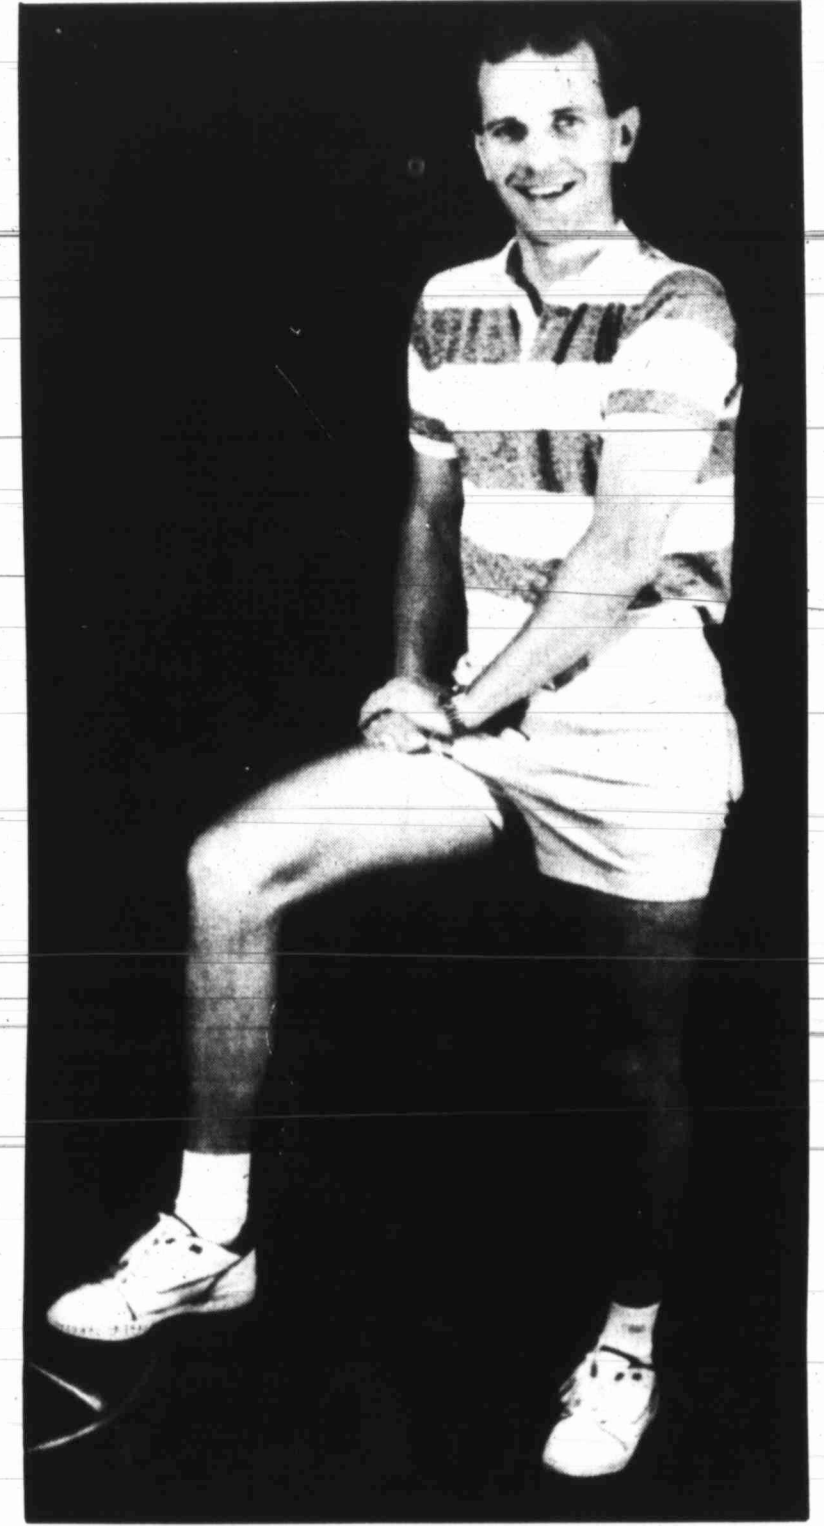

The issue then becomes whether it is more cost-efficient to implement full-scale renovations of existing structures, or to build new ones, Huckabee said.

"The board will decide what is the most reasonable thing to do," McQueary said. "The architect is planning to be able to come to the (Dec. 13) meeting... to give his figures." All of the reporting will be done in open session, he said.

A concern throughout the community since the project was first announced has been the fate of the Runnels Junior High School building, considered a landmark in the area.

"We're definitely going to utilize it," McQueary said, adding that several proposals are under consideration, including use of the building for an addition to the high school's museum. The gymnasium will probably continue to be used by various sports teams and student activities, he said.

"As far as utilizing all the rooms and floors... We'll just have to wait and see for that."

Ray predicts that 7,000 people will vote in Howard County before polls close at 7 p.m. A spokesman with the Secretary of State's office expects more than 3.2 million of the state's 7.7 million voters to vote, according to Associated Press wire reports.

Meanwhile, of a dozen people surveyed by the Big Spring Herald outside Precinct 203 at Goliad Middle School, seven said they voted for Williams, four voted for Richards and one did not want to comment.

Five voted straight tickets, with two men voting Republican and two men and one woman voting Democrat. Of the others, four men and one woman voted for Williams and one woman for Richards. All of those questioned were 54-years-old or older. One woman did not want to comment. "He's the lesser of two evils," said a 66-year-old man who voted for Williams on a split ticket. He said he voted for Democrat Bob Bullock for Lt. governor and for Republican Tom Phillips for chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court.

Most comments reflected party stances and not any particular race.

"I think the parties got the best idea of what's best for our country," said a 87-year-old man who voted a straight Republican ticket. "I'm not a party man. I usually vote for the man who is best qualified."

A 61-year-old man said, "I'll tell you something. I getting tired of this Republican (expletive), if you can understand those plain words." He said he voted for Governor Bill Clements in 1988.

A 60-year old man said he voted a straight Democratic ticket despite some differences lately with the party. "I was raised during the depression so I'm a pretty much dyed-in-the-wool Democrat. They're not the same as they were but I'm still hanging in there," he said. The last Republican he voted for was President Dwight Eisenhower, he said.

Ray said the precinct where the survey was taken represents a good party cross-section of voters. "We have both Democrats and Republicans there," she said. "In past history it's been pretty well equal. It's an average turnout too." This morning 60 of 1,148 voters cast votes.

In the 1988 District 69 state representative race between Republican Troy Fraser and Democrat Johnnie Lou Avery, Fraser got 60 percent of the votes in that district compared to 53 percent countywide, records show.

American Electorate, predicted that about 36 percent of eligible Americans would go to the polls, about the same as in 1986 when turnout was the lowest in more than 40 years.

But Gans said participation would be higher in states with hot races.

After weeks of barnstorming on behalf of GOP candidates from Maine to Hawaii, Bush concentrated on helping the faltering campaign of Clayton Williams for governor of Texas. Once far ahead in the polls, oilman Williams was struggling to outlast Democratic state Treasurer Ann Richards.

"I urge all Texans... to get out there and vote and do not take democracy for granted. You have a chance to make a difference," Bush said Monday, campaigning with Williams at his side.

Pollsters agreed that voters were in a sour mood, unhappy with the president and Congress alike on their handling of the economy.

An ABC News poll said 61 percent of the people disapprove of how Bush is handling the economy and the same percentage also is unhappy with how Congress has handled the same issue.

On the question, "Do you think the economy is getting better, getting worse or staying the same?" 77 percent said getting worse, while only 4 percent said getting better.

The figures came from a survey of 1,015 people who were questioned between Oct. 23 and 25. The margin of error was plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

"Americans are very dissatisfied with the way things are going in this country" and mention economic concerns more than any other, said Frank Newport, editor-in-chief of the Gallup Poll.

Pollster Louis Harris was forecasting a big victory for the Democrats.

"This is a very Democratic mood out there," Harris said. "There's no sign of the late Republican surge some have talked about."

Crossroads Chalk Talk

It seems Crossroads Country football teams keep getting better and better as the season winds down.

Last week area teams battled .750, winning six of eight games. In fact, the only two teams to lose, their losses came to other area teams. The Stanton Buffalos won their first game of the season, downing the Forsan Buffaloes 27-13, and in a battle for first place in 5A, Six-Man, Sands downed Grady 38-14.

In other action, it was Big Spring 25, Pecos 15; Coahoma 47, McCamey 6; Garden City 62, Robert Lee 0; Borden County 40, Loraine 18; Colorado City 17, Reagan County 14; Klondike 44, Dawson 0.

Here is what area coaches had to say about those games, and this Friday's encounters.

Sam Scott, Garden City, on the win over Robert Lee, and this week's encounter with Roby. — "We saw some good things we did and we saw some bad things we did. In the first quarter we moved twice inside their 10, and fumbled. We've got to eliminate those kind of mistakes.

"The number one things is we keep our intensity up, keep our concentration and don't get complacent. We have to finish up on a positive note.

"The Roby Lions have a pretty good football team. They've got a good set of backs, and up front, they average about 200 pounds. The mix the run and pass fairly well, about 30 percent pass and 70 percent run."

Bobby Avery, Borden County, on the win over Loraine, and this week's game with Highland. — "We had a real good first half; we let our younger kids play in the second half, and they did a real good job.

We just kept the ball on the ground, we didn't have to pass much. We consistently played good, run, block and tackle football.

"I'm sure we'll be a little flat against Highland. We were a little flat last week after the big game with Trent. We just have to play good football."

Leandro Gonzales, Grady, on the loss to Sands, and this week's game with Wellman. — "The turning point was when Eric Herm (Sands RB) ran the kickoff back on us. That was the pivotal point for Sands. They took advantage of that.

"We can't take Wellman lightly. We're going into it with the same attitude we had for the Sands game — we've got to win it. Wellman has a large line, three kids that weight about 185. They block extremely well. They have some good running backs. We must be mentally prepared."

Dale Ruth, Stanton, on the win over Forsan, and the season finale against Eldorado. — "It sure felt good, it was a long time coming. It's been a long year and our kids were real happy to win this one.

"We didn't play well the first half; we didn't execute. We made some adjustments at halftime, and it helped us out.

"We really need to win this last game against Eldorado, just to finish on a winning note. Eldorado is big, they're not real quick. They've got some big running backs who weigh about 175 to 185 pounds."

Tom Ham, Klondike, on the win over Dawson, and this Friday's game against Sands. — "We played well, especially in the second half; we played a lot better. We didn't do anything different; we just played football. In all fairness to Dawson, they've got some kids hurt, and it hurt them.

"I'm not sure what to think about Sands. I think everybody has written us off except ourselves. We'll just go out there and play the best ballgame we can play."

Randy Roemisch, Sands, on the win over Grady, and this week's game with Klondike. — "We started out slow; they have a good ballclub though. I think they had us 8-6 at halftime. Then they scored and it was 14-6. At that point I didn't know if we had the mental toughness to come back, because we've had all those games where we were way ahead.

After Eric (Herm) ran the kickoff back, it was a different ballgame; it's like the lights came on, and we end up winning by 24. I feel good about the kids. They came back and played a very strong quarter-and-a-half, against a good ballclub.

"Klondike has a good ballclub. They'll probably have something different planned, but not a lot. They run the spread and tight set; they use two quarterbacks, one for running and the other for passing."

Howard romps in opener

All of Lady Hawks get into Ranger rout

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Opening night was a smashing success.

The Howard College Lady Hawks unveiled a new-look team with a new-look game plan in their season opener. The show was definitely a homecoming crowd-pleaser, as the Lady Hawks whipped the Ranger Lady Rangers 89-46 at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Coach Royce Chadwick lost four starters from last year's nationally-ranked team. With the loss of those starters he installed a new attack; one that features pressing defense and fast breaks.

Not only did the Lady Hawks work that game-plan to near-perfection; they also showed signs of last year's team, utilizing a strong inside halfcourt game.

The Lady Hawks came out like gangbusters — the Lady Rangers never knew what hit them. Howard's press, keyed by point guard Kim Robinson, forward Kathy Mangram and post player Mulu Tosi, forced Ranger into several early turnovers. Just as aggressive was the play of fellow starters Lisa Moore and Cindy Williams.

And top top it all off, all had hot shooting hands, which really made it a long night for the Lady Rangers.

Ranger's Julia Jowers scored the first points of the game, then Howard reeled of the next 13 points. It started with Robinson dishing off inside to Tosi for a basket against the Ranger zone, followed by an assist from Williams to Moore, who scored inside, followed by outside jumpers from Williams and Mangram.

The Lady Hawks went on to hit nine of their first 11 shots, and in a short time, HC led 19-6 with 14:10 left in the first half.

About that time Chadwick started substituting freely. He went on to empty his bench by the half, and his reserves played extremely well. Coahoma-ex Kelly Williams made her first career points for Howard when she sunk two foul shots with 3:35 left in the first half. Howard led 42-15 at the time.

Former Lady Steers point guard Peggy Smith also chalked up her first career points as a Lady Hawk when she took a pass from Kelly Williams and scored underneath with 8:58 left in the game. Howard's lead was then 68-32.

Tosi had an outstanding game, shooting nine-of-nine from the field. The 6-foot-2 sophomore led a balanced scoring attack with 18 points; she was the only Lady Hawk to score in double figures. She, Robinson and freshmen Desiree Wallace and Yolanda Wells led Howard to a 37-24 advantage in rebounding.

Speedy Hawks outrun RJC in this track meet

Steve Green unveiled his 1990-91 version of the Howard College Flying Circus here Monday night to rave reviews.

The Howard Hawks left a large homecoming crowd happy by blitzing the Ranger Junior College Rangers, 137-104, in the season opener for both teams at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Post player Vernon Broughton, a sophomore transfer from Huger, S.C., led the Hawks with 22 points, followed by Harvey Petty with 16, Johnny McDowell with 15, Ritchie Campbell with 13 and Antonio Valiengo with 10.

The Rangers were led by Randy Davis, who pumped in 28 points from his post position, and Darrick Sublet and T.C. Shields, who added 23 and 18 points, respectively.

Both teams seemed only to happy to run-and-gun during the game, but the Hawks, employing a 10-man rotation, finally wore the Rangers down.

"I think we've got 12 guys who can play," HC coach Steve Green said after the contest. "I told the guys before the game that our strength was in numbers. I thought we'd eventually wear them down."

The Hawks, employing the inside game of Broughton and McDowell, along with a couple of three-pointers from point guard Campbell, jumped out to a 21-10 lead, and the game looked as if it would be an early blowout.

But foul trouble on Howard's part helped bring Ranger back into the game. The Hawks were whistled for 35 fouls during the contest, and the Rangers responded by canning 39 of 54 charity tosses.

Sublet was the main spark for Ranger, scoring 20 of his points during the last 13:26 of the first half, and the Rangers rallied to take a slim 32-31 lead midway through the half.

The Hawks responded, however, behind the inside play of Broughton, McDowell and Cecil Pittman to take a 66-62 lead into intermission.

The Rangers were able to stay close during the first few minutes of the second half, but Petty's hot shooting from outside and a change in defensive strategy by the Hawks turned the game solidly in their favor.

"We backed off the defensive pressure a bit," Green said. "We wanted them to attack a half-court defense — and we wanted to keep them off the free-throw line."

With the Hawks leading, 80-66, Petty and Valiengo began hitting from three-point range. Petty canned three of the rain-

Giants keep mark perfect at 8-0

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The New York Giants retained their perfect record and have a newfound respect for a strong-arm rookie foe.

Sparked by the passing of Phil Simms, the Giants defeated the Indianapolis Colts 24-7 Monday night to join the San Francisco 49ers at 8-0, the first time in 56 years that two NFL teams have been unbeaten this deep into the season.

But, when the game was over, the Giants talked about Colts quarterback Jeff George, who returned after a six-week absence and lost his fourth game.

"George is one of the few pure passers," said Dave Duerson, who returned George's fumble 31 yards for the game's final score. "He has a similar release to Dan Marino. He can get the ball to a receiver in a hurry. He doesn't play like a rookie, he shows a lot of poise, and I told him that after the game."

"The guy has a rifle," said New York linebacker Pepper Johnson, whose jarring tackle knocked the ball loose and cooled the Colts' comeback hopes. "He has a strong arm. I think when he gets his confidence, gets together with his receivers and his offensive line and he starts going downfield more, he's going to be dangerous. "One time he shot a ball past me and I heard it go swish. With a quick release like that, he's going to go a lot of places."

The Colts (2-6) hope that starts Sunday when they take on the New England Patriots, seeking to snap a three-game losing streak. The Giants, meanwhile, will try to extend their longest regular-season winning streak to 12 games on Sunday when they visit the Los Angeles Rams.

The Giants overwhelmed Indianapolis in the first half, scoring on their first three possessions to lead 17-0 at halftime. Blending a running game featuring Otis Anderson, who scored twice in the first half, with the precise passing of Simms, New York recorded a 206-45 total yardage advantage in the first two periods and had the ball for nearly 21 of the half's 30 minutes.

Simms completed 11 of 14 passes for 131 yards in the first half and was 17 of 21 for 172 yards on the night.

The last time two teams were 8-0 was in 1934, when Chicago and Detroit both started 10-0. New York and San Francisco would be 11-0 if they remain undefeated until their meeting.

George, making his first start since Sept. 23 when he was sidelined by an abdominal strain, withstood heavy pressure from a Giants' defense that went into the game as the league's second-best to complete 23 of 37 passes for 160 yards.

"I'm sore. It's something that'll be with me all year, but I came out OK, so I feel pretty good," said George, who had to leave in two of his previous starts with injuries.

George moved the Colts 80 yards in 14 plays, holding the ball for 7:18, to score on Albert Bentley's 1-yard run following the second half kickoff.

"It was difficult to get in rhythm. You just have to give credit to them: They're one of the better teams in the league, and they proved that," George said. "They came up with big plays when they had to. That's what it takes."

"I thought we played very well in the first half," Giants coach Bill Parcells said. "We didn't play so well in the second half, but I'll take it."

"It's a Monday night road win. Those are hard to come by. I'm just glad to get out of the first half of the season."

Colts running back Eric Dickerson was no factor, carrying nine times for 26 yards, leaving him 19 yards from passing John Riggins to claim the fifth spot on the league's all-time rushing list.

Sidelines

Pokes OT will miss four weeks,

IRVING (AP) — Dallas offensive tackle Mark Tuinei, injured in Sunday's 25-9 loss to the New York Jets, will miss a minimum of four weeks, coach Jimmy Johnson said on Monday.

Johnson said the preliminary diagnosis was a sprained right knee.

"Doctors will determine on Tuesday whether surgery is required," Johnson said. "They do not anticipate surgery."

"In all probability he will be on injured reserve," Johnson said.

Kevin Gogan was expected to start at Tuinei's left tackle spot.

Johnson also said Michael Irvin will start at the flanker position in place of Dennis McKinnon against the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday night.

"Right now Michael Irvin is making the plays," Johnson said. "We feel good about Michael. He's had two good weeks of work. Michael has come on strong."

The Cowboys also activated injured Dean Hamel and released defensive lineman Lester Brinkley.

Two record holders get suspended

LONDON (AP) — Former Texas A&M track star Randy Barnes denied today that he had ever used steroids, joining another U.S. world record-holder, Butch Reynolds, in discrediting positive drug tests that could keep them out of the 1992 Olympics.

Reynolds set the 400-meter record of 43.29 seconds in Zurich, Switzerland, two years ago and Barnes set the shot put mark of 75 feet, 10 1/4 inches last May 20 in Los Angeles.

"There's no way that sample is mine," Barnes told the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail. "I don't take steroids. I didn't take them, I've never taken them."

Barnes, world record-holder in the shot put, and world 400-meter record-holder Reynolds were suspended Monday by the International Amateur Athletic Federation for testing positive for steroids.

Barnes performed for Texas A&M in 1986 and 1987.

Japanese pound American pitching

TOKYO (AP) — Makoto Sasaki of the Daiichi Hawks had five hits in six at-bats to highlight a 20-hit outburst as a team of Japanese all-stars defeated a touring team of major leaguers 11-6 to take a 4-0 lead in the eight-game series.

The Japanese have tied, but never won a series against major league competition.

The major leaguers committed four errors and allowed five stolen bases in the game at Heiwadai Stadium in Fukuoka, on the southern island of Kyushu.

After the Japanese took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, New York Yankees outfielder Jesse Barfield tied the game in the second with a homer.

Koji Akiyama's two-run single in the fourth gave the Japanese a 3-1 lead. The Japanese then added three runs in the fifth on four hits and one walk against starter Dave Stieb of the Toronto Blue Jays.

Jeff Montgomery of the Kansas City Royals relieved Stieb in the sixth, but the Japanese scored three more runs on three hits, including a homer by Hiroo Ishii of the Kintetsu Buffaloes.

The Japanese added two runs in the seventh on five hits against Montgomery.

Dennis Boyd of the Montreal Expos and Bobby Thippen of the Chicago White Sox held the Japanese scoreless on two hits in the final two innings.

The major leaguers scored their second run in the fifth on Ken Griffey Sr.'s sacrifice fly. San Diego's Roberto Alomar and the Chicago Cubs' Shawn Dunston each drove in a run in the sixth.

FUKUOKA, Japan — Yascuo Fujii (10) of Japan's Orin Braves lloks back after reaching base when American first baseman Glenn Davis of the Houston Astros can't field a wild throw from shortstop Roberto Alomar of the San Diego Padres during the top of the first inning Tuesday. Japan won the game 11-6, taking a 4-0 lead in the eight game series.

Fighting Irish back on top

SEATTLE (AP) — The No. 2 Washington Huskies think they're going to be playing Iowa in the Rose Bowl in a rematch of two teams that played at the end of the 1981 season.

They also think they have a strong chance of overhauling No. 1 Notre Dame and winning their first national championship.

"I think it would be great for the school and the team," Washington coach Don James said Monday when asked about a possible national title.

"It would mean a lot. I'd like to see it happen for this institution."

The Huskies (8-1) moved up from No. 7 in this week's Top 25 after they beat Arizona 54-10 last Saturday in Seattle. Washington finished second to Brigham Young for the national championship in the 1984 season.

Washington will play UCLA on Saturday at Husky Stadium and wind up its regular season Nov. 17 at Washington State. Notre Dame has three games left on its regular schedule.

Notre Dame (7-1), which beat Navy 52-31 Saturday, received 37 first-place votes and 1,456 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. Washington was second with 13 first-place votes and 1,403 points, and Houston (8-0), the only unbeaten, untied team in Division I-A, was third with five first-place votes and 1,337 points.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz was unhappy with his team's performance against Navy. He said the Irish don't deserve the No. 1 ranking.

Holtz is known for poor-mouthing his team, but this time he may have a point. With games remaining against No. 9 Tennessee, No. 21 Penn State and No. 23 Southern Cal, the Irish may not hold onto the top spot for long.

Washington was one spot below Houston at No. 7 in last week's poll, but the Huskies moved ahead of the Cougars after routing Arizona. Houston, which is eligible for the national championship despite being on probation, beat Texas Christian 56-35.

Colorado (8-1-1) moved up five places to fourth after handing Nebraska its first loss, 27-12. The Buffaloes got five first-place votes and 1,310 points.

Miami was fifth, followed by Iowa, Georgia Tech, Brigham Young, Tennessee, Florida, Virginia, Florida State, Nebraska, Texas and Auburn. Rounding out the Top 25 are Mississippi, Illinois, Clemson, Michigan, Oregon, Penn State, Louisville, Southern Cal, Michigan State and Wyoming.

Virginia and three other teams in last week's Top 5 — Nebraska, Auburn and Illinois — plunged in the poll after losing on Saturday. The Cavaliers (7-1) dropped to 11th after holding the No. 1 spot for three weeks.

Nebraska (8-1) fell from third to 13th, Auburn from fourth to 15th after getting clobbered by Florida 48-7 and Illinois from fifth to 17th following a 54-28 loss to Iowa.

Miami (8-2) moved up three places after beating Pittsburgh 45-0, and Iowa and Georgia Tech made even bigger jumps. The Hawkeyes (7-1) rose seven spots and the Yellow Jackets (7-0-1) moved up nine notches.

Arizona, No. 23 last week, dropped out of the Top 25 and was replaced by Michigan State, which beat Indiana 45-20.

James said the Huskies could win the national championship by winning their last three games and having Notre Dame lose once. He admitted it would be hard to dislodge the Irish from No. 1.

bows, Valiengo added another, and when Dexter Abrams jammed in a feed from Ted Barry with 10 minutes remaining, the Hawks had firm command of the game, 101-79.

Personally, I think everybody went out and played hard and contributed," Green said. "Ritchie Campbell got us off to a good start, and Vernon and Johnny played exceptionally well. (Davis) is good, but he's not as good as four of our players (combined)."

The Hawks will return to action at 5 p.m. Thursday when they play the Angelina Roadrunners in the first round of the Chap Classic at the Chapperal Center on the Midland College campus.

It all left coach Chadwick with a smile on his face. "I thought we were ready to play; we had good intensity throughout the game," said Chadwick. "The game was good for the team; whenever everyone gets to play, it's good for the team."

"I don't think anybody played badly. We've got some really good post players when we take the time to look inside. Overall, we could've stayed with the fullcourt press, but we wanted to get everybody some experience."

The Lady Hawks put on a remarkable shooting exhibition, finishing the contest shooting 62 percent from the floor. They also put on a sparkling defensive exhibition, causing 28 Ranger turnovers. To show Howard's dominance and versatility — in the first half four Lady Rangers scored. Meanwhile in the first half, five Howard players had scored at least three baskets each.

Ranger was led by guard Madelin Carter, who scored 18 points; Robinson, Cindy Williams, Julie Lempea, Wells, Wallace and Kelly Williams all scored eight points each for Howard.

College hoopster dead at 23

BARBOURVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Union College basketball player Michael Godfrey, a transfer from San Antonio, died Monday night after collapsing in the school's weight room, officials said.

Godfrey, 23, was taken to Knox County General Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at about 9:05 p.m. EST. Dr. Keith Clifton said.

Clifton said he believed Godfrey had suffered either cardiac arrest or an aneurysm. An autopsy was scheduled today in Frankfort.

The 6-foot-10 player had been lifting weights when he stopped, grabbed his chest and fell to the floor, Clifton said. People in the weight room gave him cardiopulmonary resuscitation and called an ambulance, said Clifton, the hospital's emergency room physician.

"By the time he got to the ER, he had no pulse or respiration," Clifton said.

He said hospital workers tried for about 30 minutes to revive Godfrey before Knox County Coroner Jerry Garland pronounced him dead.

Clifton said Godfrey's wife reported he had been complaining of headaches for a couple of days, and he said that could have signaled an aneurysm. He also speculated that lifting weights could have worsened the condition.

"It's possible that straining could have caused the aneurysm to rupture," Clifton said. "I don't really suspect drugs. His wife said he didn't take anything or drink or anything."

Godfrey was not going to be eligible until the second semester because of his transfer.

Union College athletics officials could not be reached Monday night for comment.

HAMTRAMCK, Mich. (AP)—MTV video jockey "Downtown" Julie Brown pranced, prowled and even pillered her way through the Cadillac enclave while filming segments for her cable TV music show.

Cheered on like a USO entertainer visiting battle-weary troops, Brown and her camera crews had the run of the General Motors Corp. facility Friday.

She chatted with workers and test-drove several Cadillac models.

"Too bad I don't know how to drive," she said while rolling off the line in a midnight blue Seville. "But they've got lots of these suckers back there so they don't care."

Brown, 28, even found wardrobe accessories in the plant. But the LOU GOSSETT JR. 'DOWNTOWN' JULIE cache of parts she stashed in her jumpsuit were confiscated when she was frisked by a security guard.

"I was going to make earrings out of them," Brown said of the foiled theft.

Jr. says he grew up in an integrated New York City neighborhood where black families were as proud of their heritage as Italian, Irish and Jewish families.

Now, he says black people need to continue celebrating their heritage.

Gossett was the guest speaker Friday at Huston-Tillotson College's 38th annual charter day anniversary. The day commemorates the merging of Huston and Tillotson, two predominately black schools.

"It is vitally necessary to celebrate our heritage in the United States today," Gossett told students.

He also urged the audience to help America's poor and homeless. Gossett grew up in New York's Brooklyn borough.

Bush returns home to vote, signs budget

President George Bush drops his ballot into the collection box Monday in Houston. Bush voted in the state election before returning to the White House.

HOUSTON (AP) — President Bush, coming home to vote as he wraps up his pre-election politicking, signed a $492 billion tax-raising budget bill that was a campaign albatross for many fellow Republicans.

The president signed the budget package Monday night at his Houston home. The late hour guaranteed that the news would not make prime-time news broadcasts and would miss the deadlines for many newspapers voters would be reading on Election Day today.

In a statement, Bush called the hard-fought budget compromise "the centerpiece of the largest deficit reduction package in history and an important measure for ensuring America's long-term economic growth."

He said that in the agreement, "No one got everything he or she wanted, but the end product is a compromise that merits enactment." The president and his wife Barbara were voting today in their adoptive home state, before returning to Washington to watch tonight's election returns from the White House.

Bush spent the home stretch of the campaign trekking to eight states and urging voters to go to the polls and prove wrong the pundits who say the electorate is depressed and disgusted.

On Monday, Bush made a day-long swing around Texas with GOP gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams.

The deficit-reduction plan approved by Congress last week includes $140 billion in new taxes Bush agreed to, but that election-conscious Republicans found hard to swallow. The plan also included a number of government spending cuts.

The president continued on Monday to emphasize upbeat themes at the urging of some advisers that he try to look more "presidential."

His election-eve speech to a ballroom full of Republican loyalists was interrupted by about four anti-war protesters who chanted, "No war for oil." The audience shouted them down and they were quickly ushered from the room.

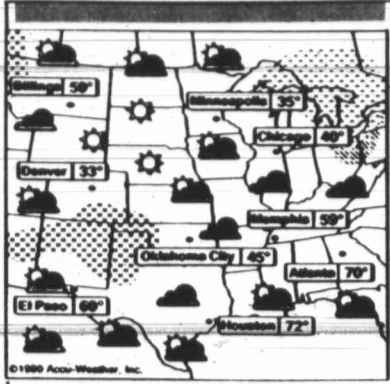

The outburst gave Bush an opportunity to repeat his rationale for sending more than 200,000 U.S. troops to the Persian Gulf region.

"They got it wrong," he said, referring to the protesters. "What we're doing is not anything about war for oil. What we're doing is standing up against naked aggression."

Bush's appearances have increasingly attracted anti-war protesters around the country.

attend fall banquet

Members of Eta Master attended the Fall Banquet at the Woman's Club in Midland Oct. 29. Laureate Beta Phi sponsored the event.

The hall was decorated in the sorority's 60's Anniversary theme, "Celebrate the Magic."

After a delicious meal, Flora Dee Wilson, toastmistress, presented the program. Pledges from each chapter were introduced and Jean Koonce introduced the speaker, Rev. Will Cotton of Odessa. He presented a thought provoking talk, on things that tend to hinder us.

dinner planned

Eta Master Chapter met in the home of June Reid, Nov. 1. The hostess served cake and ice cream. Sammye Laws conducted the business meeting.

Ways and Means chairperson, Mamie Roten handed out feet decorations and sequins so members could begin work on a table cloth and runners to be given away. Announcements were made of Achievement Day and other planned events.

Helen Ruth Louder reported on the executive meeting. A Thanksgiving Dinner is planned at Mamie Roten's home Nov. 15. Program chairperson introduced June Reid, who presented a program entitled, "Texas Tapestry," written by a group of Odessa women, depicting events of West Texas.

She related several events, including the beginning of Red Barn Door restaurant in Odessa and Camp Bloy in Fort Davis. All but one member were present.

Stanton teams

scrimmage Midland

"We were nervous in the first quarter, but we settled down and played some good ball," said Rob Young, Stanton High School girls varsity basketball coach.

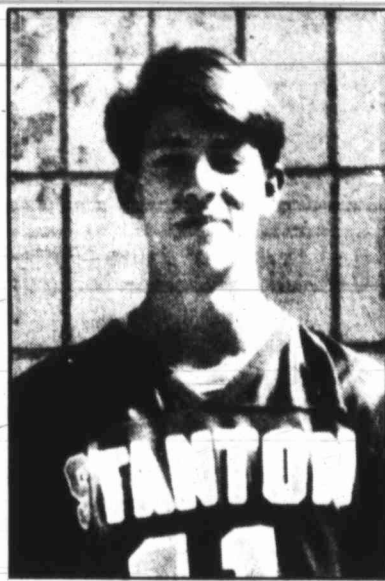

This was the SHS girls first scrimmage. The team played very smart and quick according to Young. "They were bigger than our team, but we seemed to play smarter. Brandi Burdas and Melissa Scurlark played very well, but we still have a long way to go," Young said.

The SHS posters that were handed out when school started have the wrong basketball schedules, according to Young.

The schedule for November is: Nov. 10 - varsity and JV girls, here, with times to be announced. Nov. 13 - at Rankin, varsity and JV girls, starting at 6 p.m. Nov. 16 - Here; full schedule for both varsity and JV boys and girls starting at 5 p.m. Nov. 19 - Rankin; here varsity and JV girls at 6:30 p.m.

Stanton sophomore trackster qualifies to compete at state

JEREMY STALLINGS

Jeremy says he plans to take one step at a time, since he is only a sophomore.

He added, "I would like to run track, probably for the University of Arkansas because of the track program that they have there, and major in physical therapy or even become a coach. Right now, I'm just going to enjoy school and finish one year at a time."

"I feel that the more letters that I get from colleges will help me make up my mind when the time comes to choose where I would like to run track or finish my studies."

Even though he participates in many events and programs, Stallings' first love is track and dreams of one day competing in the Olympics.

"I like to run track, because I can control my own destiny and I've always wanted to compete in track. If I make a mistake, I only hurt myself and I have to live with that. Whereas in football, if I or one of my teammates make a mistake, it hurts the whole team. But, in football one learns how to play as a team and it teaches you to be alert and ready at all times. And one day I would like to run in the Olympics. That's a dream of everyone that runs track and field events. I would like to make it a goal of mine. Maybe I can be the first to compete in the Olympics from Stanton," said Stallings smiling.

"This year football has been fun and good experience for many of us underclassmen. We have to get the experience before we can play out there against teams like Wall, Coahoma and Iraan. It's bad for the seniors on our team, but sometimes a team has to go to the transition of teaching a young team like ours to learn how to play our positions and the seniors help is always needed," Stallings said.

At present, Jeremy is waiting for next spring so he can compete in the 800 meter and 1500 meter events for the Buffalo track team. He would rather be running in the 800 meter, because he feels that he is a sprint runner rather than a distance runner.

"I rather be running a mid-distance race, because I don't like to run long distance, but I will."

Stallings said when he has a choice to watching something particular on television, he would rather watch international competition that has track events.

He credits his family for helping him win and compete.

"My family supports me in everything I do. They follow me in track, band and everything else. My dad helps me mentally, wise, and mom is always there."

Even Jerrod, Stallings' little brother goes and watches. He too is now becoming involved in sports.

Voter turnout watched carefully by politicians

(AP) Nervous politicians put aside opinion polls and campaign strategies and watched voter turnout across the nation today for signs of winners and losers in the first midterm election of the 1990s. In North Carolina, where voters were deciding a bitterly contested Senate contest, officials reported long lines at polling places.

President Bush and his wife, Barbara, stood in line for 10 minutes at a polling place in a Houston nursing home. They waved off reporters' questions and, after voting, went to the airport for a flight back to Washington.

Republicans, admitting that a low turnout would be bad news for their candidates in most states, had spent the closing days of the campaign exhorting their partisans to go to the polls. Democrats counted on uneasiness over the economy to induce their followers to vote.

The Senate contest between conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and his black challenger, Harvey Gantt, appeared to generate a heavy turnout in North Carolina.

"Most precincts say they have more people voting than they do in presidential elections," said Mecklenburg County election supervisor Bill Culp.

"When you see long lines like this more than 300 voters were here before 8:30 — you know you're going to have a nice day," Gantt said. "It's a good sign for us."

In northern Michigan, highway crews had to dig out the snowed-in clerk of Wellington Township so he could open the polls.

Snow also was reported in Iowa, but election officials said early turnout was "heavier than a normal off-year election."

Voters were choosing 36 governors, 34 senators and the entire 435-member U.S. House as well as more than 6,000 state legislators. Normally obscure legislative races have gotten national attention from party officials battling for control of the once-in-a-decade redrawing of political boundary lines to conform to new census figures.

The stakes are highest in races for governor in the nation's fastest-growing states — California, Florida and Texas. When House seats are redistributed to follow population shifts to the Sun Belt, those three states will pick up a total of 14.

Edward J. Rolins, co-chairman of the House Republican campaign committee, said the recent debate over the federal budget "created a lot of disarray among Republicans and, obviously, if we don't do well, it'll be because Republicans don't participate in the process. Hopefully, they'll get angry at Democrats and turn out."

Curtis Gans, director of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate, predicted that about 36 percent of eligible Americans would go to the polls, about the same as in 1986 when turnout was the lowest in more than 40 years.

But Gans said participation would be higher in states with hot races.

After weeks of barnstorming on behalf of GOP candidates from Maine to Hawaii, Bush concentrated on helping the faltering campaign of Clayton Williams for governor of Texas. Once far ahead in the polls, oilman Williams was struggling to outlast Democratic state Treasurer Ann Richards.

"I urge all Texans ... to get out there and vote and do not take democracy for granted. You have a chance to make a difference," Bush said Monday, campaigning with Williams at his side.

Pollsters agreed that voters were in a sour mood, unhappy with the president and Congress alike on their handling of the economy.

An ABC News poll said 61 percent of the people disapprove of how Bush is handling the economy and the same percentage also is unhappy with how Congress has handled the same issue.

On the question, "Do you think the economy is getting better, getting worse or staying the same?" 77 percent said getting worse, while only 4 percent said getting better.

The figures came from a survey of 1,015 people who were questioned between Oct. 23 and 25. The margin of error was plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

"Americans are very dissatisfied with the way things are going in this country" and mention economic concerns more than any other, said Frank Newport, editor-in-chief of the Gallup Poll.

Pollster Louis Harris was forecasting a big victory for the Democrats.

"This is a very Democratic mood out there," Harris said. "There's no sign of the late Republican surge some have talked about."

Congressional races wind down

DALLAS (AP) — For the past nine days, 13 Texas congressmen have given political meaning to football's hurry-up offense.

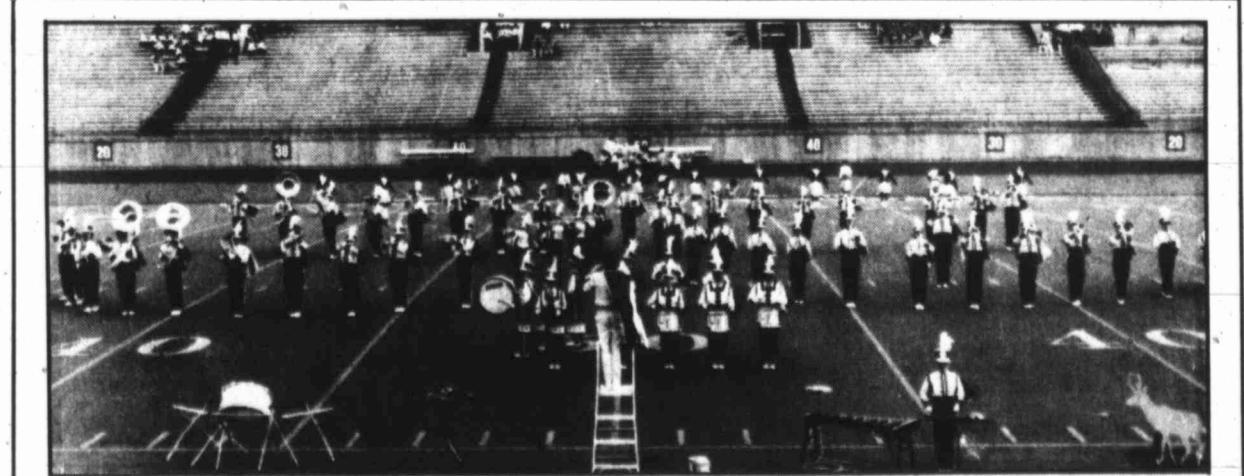

"It has just been an absolute blur," Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, said of the camaign that was shortened by Congress' extended session.

"Many, many events we kept backing up and backing up were all stacked up when we got home," Chapman said.

The protracted budget battle and difficulties in resolving other legislation created the shortest campaign season for members of Congress since World War II. Congress adjourned a week ago Sunday.

 Tunes performed included: "Ghost Riders in the Sky"; "Winds of Sonora"; "Louie, Louie"; "Home on the Range"; and last but not least, the "Star Spangled Banner."
 "It was very educational for the kids to attend and see what goes on at a political rally," band director Kirke McKenzie said.
 McKenzie said he was honored when he was contacted by Sen. Phil Gramm's campaign headquarters in Lubbock.
 "The whole band should feel honored, after all, he is our U.S. Senator," band member Angelica Hinojosa said.

Bush signs

 paign, the president's senior advisers have been divided on how Bush should conduct himself, with some recommending that he take off the gloves and bash congressional Democrats, as he did in Oklahoma City 10 days ago.
 Sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that approach, favored by White House chief of staff John Sununu and some high Republican Party officials, appeared to backfire. They concluded that Democrat-bashing was not helping Bush's popularity, which has floundered with his wavering positions on the budget issues coupled with the slumping economy.

The sources said Bush's former pollster, Robert Teeter, and his 1988 media consultant, Roger Ailes, persuaded the president to be more positive.

Marines face elaborate fortifications in Kuwait

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraq's elaborate fortifications in Kuwait, including trenches filled with flammable oil products, are complicating American military planning, a senior Marine Corps officer says.
 Gen. John R. Dailey, the deputy commandant of the Marines, said Monday that U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf region are capable of overcoming any Iraqi defense, although he stressed that President Bush has given no order to conduct an offensive against Iraq.
 Dailey also said in an interview that the Marines have not been told to expand the size of their 45,000-troop force in the gulf area. He said adding troops remained a possibility, and that about 55,000 Marines in the United States have been readied for possible deployment.

The general said the prospect of Iraq raising an oil-fed wall of fire around its defensive positions on Kuwait's southern border with Saudi Arabia and along its eastern gulf shoreline added a new twist to U.S. contingency planning.

"With the dust and smoke mixed it's going to be hard to see targets ahead, and that will impact on the tactical air (support) and the artillery and the naval gunfire," he said. "So all the supporting arms are degraded to some extent."
 Even so, Dailey said, the Marines are trained to handle unusual obstacles.
 "One of the ways we would get through these tank traps is to fill them in ... with bulldozers that would come in and push sand down the side, which would tend to put the fires out," he said.

"For all the things he's doing we have techniques to breach," Dailey said. "A firewall we could drive through in any of the equipment we have, unless it was so wide that it would burn all of the oxygen and the engines wouldn't run."
 The general said fires, even if they included oil-fed blazes offshore from Kuwait City, would not stop a successful amphibious landing. He said troops could be taken ashore in their amphibious assault vehicles, which are routinely tested against fire damage. Heavy equipment such as tanks would hit the beaches aboard landing craft that move across water and ground on an air cushion.

 Helicopters could simply fly beyond the fire obstacles, and airplanes such as the Marines' AV-8B Harrier jump jets could help clear the way for ground forces, Dailey said.
 An amphibious assault force of about 11,000 Marines has been afloat in the gulf since early in the crisis. It is practicing amphibious landings in the northern Arabian Sea.

The general said that while an amphibious assault on Kuwait's coastline might not be the main thrust of a possible U.S. attack, it could at least divert the Iraqi army's attention away from a larger-scale offensive elsewhere.
 "The thing he wouldn't know is where we'd come from if we decided to move against him," he said.

The Pentagon estimates that 430,000 Iraqi troops are in and around Kuwait. The U.S. force in the area is nearly 240,000, and more than 100,000 other foreign forces are there, too.

Poll shows Americans support idea of Iraq attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost seven in 10 Americans responding to a survey expect the United States to become involved in a war with Iraq, and most respondents say America should attack if Iraq mistreats U.S. hostages.

The poll, conducted by ABC News and released Monday, also said 65 percent of those surveyed approve of President Bush's handling of the crisis in the Persian Gulf. That figure is about the same as a poll last month.

Bush's approval rate overall was 59 percent, up from 51 percent last week when the president's ratings dropped apparently because of criticism of his approach to budget negotiations with Congress.

About 61 percent disapproved of Bush's handling of the nation's economy, the same number that disapproved of the way the Democrats are dealing with economic matters. About 69 percent did not favor the approach of Republicans in Congress to the issue.

On the economy, 77 percent of Americans said the nation's economy is getting worse, which represents no change from a month earlier.

Bush's approval rating for a president heading into midterm elections was second only to John F. Kennedy's 61 percent in October 1962.

The telephone poll was conducted Nov. 2-4 among a random sampling of 1,093 voters. It has an error rate of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

The survey suggested that Americans are hardening their views on Iraq. For instance:
 • 56 percent said the United States should attack Iraq if it mistreats American hostages, and 41 percent favored such an attack even if it costs hostages' lives.
 • 51 percent favor an attack if the international economic embargo does not succeed in driving Iraqi troops out of Kuwait.

• Nearly seven in 10 expect the United States will become involved in a war with Iraq.

• Two-thirds approve of the United States stationing troops in Saudi Arabia, while 31 percent believe American forces should have stayed out of the gulf.

• A majority — seven in 10 — want Bush to gain permission from Congress before going to war with Iraq.

The poll also indicated that the anti-incumbent fever may be moderating among voters.

Some 50 percent said they are inclined to look around for someone other than the incumbent, but that number is down from 57 percent last month.

And while 54 percent said they still disapprove of Congress, about 72 percent said they approve of their own representative.

Calculations indicate rise in average price

Cotton talk

By Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.
LUBBOCK — The weighted average farm price for U.S. cotton through September of this year is 63.2 cents per pound, reports Plains Cotton Growers Inc., Lubbock.
 PCG calculated the year-to-date average from revised price and sales volume figures for the seven-months through July and preliminary figures for August and September, as released by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service. The calculation included the use of 866,000 bales instead of the 166,000 bales PCG erroneously reported previously as marketings for the month of August.

Under the 1985 farm act, each year's deficiency payment rate equals the difference between the target price (72.9 cents per pound for 1990) and the calendar-year average farm price. Thus, for example, in the unlikely event the 12-month average price through December should equal the 62.3-cent September average, the payment rate would be 9.7 cents per pound. PCG, in fact, mindful of prices and heavy sales volume expected for the final three months of the year, projects a rate below that figure.

The dollar amount of each producer's payment is determined by multiplying the payment rate times planted acres times his farm's established payment yield.

NASS publishes preliminary average prices and sale volumes at the end of each month, then revises those figures in October for the first seven months. Revisions are necessary to reflect data received after the release of monthly reports, plus follow-up payments to producer members of marketing cooperatives. Preliminary numbers for August-December will be revised before the late January or early February announcement of the final payment rate.

 For September, the preliminary NASS report shows a 65-cent average price on 928,000 bales, compared to 64.6 cents on 866,000 bales for August. Figures for both months are up substantially from July's 63.9-cent price and 236,000 bales. Although mid-month prices can be misleading, PCG notes that the mid-month price for October was announced at 66.9 cents, the highest monthly price level reported for any month in the previous four years of the current program.

Cumulative marketings through September come up to 6.024 million. Marketings for the full year are projected at roughly 13 million, meaning prices and sales volume for the remaining three months are expected to outweigh combined numbers for the other nine months in the full year average price calculation.

Using the 13 million bale total volume figure, PCG estimates if the price for the final three months averages 66 cents, the year's average would be 64.7 cents. (At a 67-cent three-month average the 12-month average would be 65.2 cents, and a 68-cent three-month average would yield a year-long price of 65.7 cents. That would leave a total deficiency payment rate somewhere between 7.2 and 8.2 cents. Any significant error in the assumed total marketing volume or monthly prices for the final three months, PCG cautions, would invalidate the whole exercise.)

Producers requesting advances, on this year's deficiency payment at sign-up, received 3.63 cents per pound out of an "official" advance of 4.2 cents. The difference is accounted for by reductions to comply with the 1989 Budget Reconciliation Act and the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Sequestration Order.

The 4.2 cent official advance will be deducted from final deficiency payments in February, along with another 1.4 percent for GRH.

Revised marketings and cents-per-pound prices for January through July and preliminary figures for August and September appear in the chart below.

	Marketings (1000 bales)		Prices (cents per lb.)

Only 13 of Texas 27 congressmen face challengers today and there is an open seat created by the retirement of Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Waco. Three of the contests, including the one for the open seat, are considered tossups.

Challengers said Monday that Congress' performance in October will cause voters to send new faces to Washington. But the incumbents said they have been warmly greeted at home during the past nine days.

"We have not seen anti-incumbent trend here," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont and dean of the Texas delegation. Brooks is facing his toughest opponent in years, former Beaumont mayor Maury Meyers, as he goes for a 20th term.

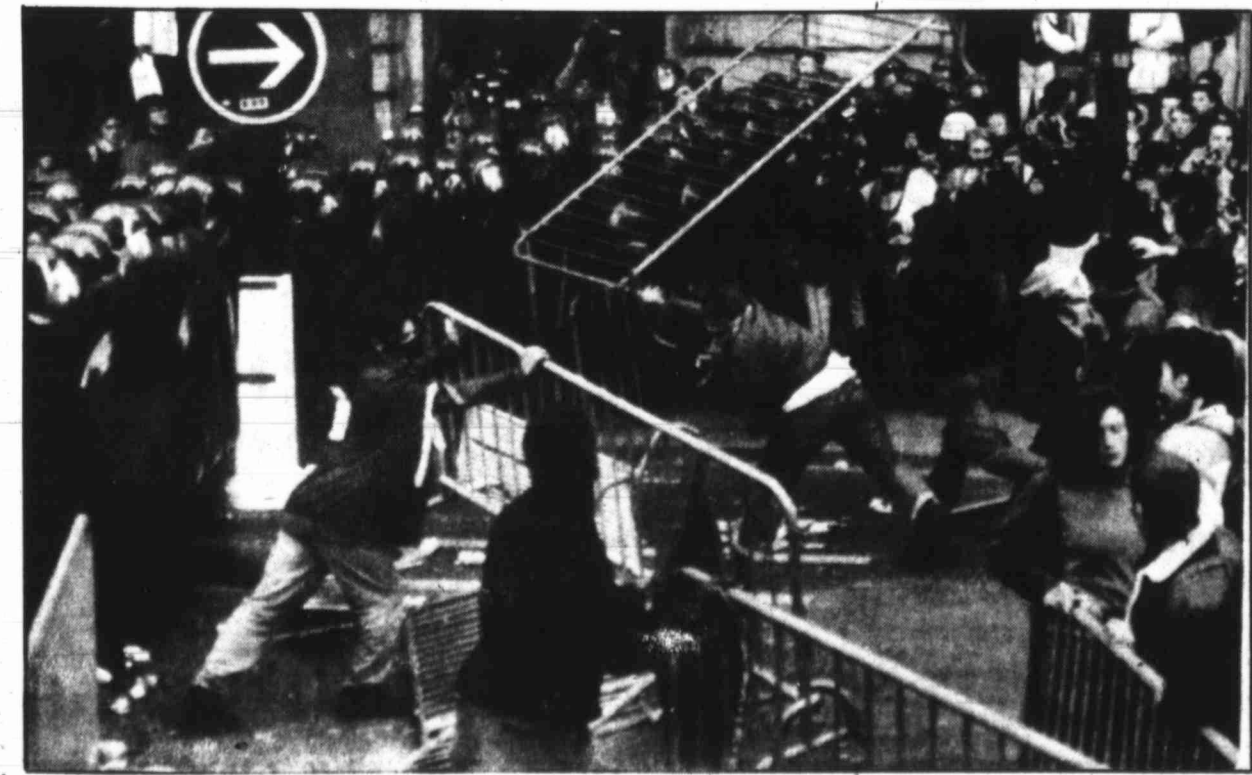

Meyers, who has campaigned for term limits and a balanced budget, said the budget battle fueled anti-incumbent sentiment.

"The length of the session was meaningless," Meyers said. "The reason for it validated everything I've been speaking to for the last 12 months."

 But Brooks said the budget battle solidified for voters that Democrats treat taxpayers more fairly than Republicans.

"The thing is, most of the affluent were perfectly willing to pay 1 or 2 percent more with everyone else," Brooks said. "Yet the president was just determined to see they didn't pay anything more. It was kind of weird."

Under the budget plan that was ultimately passed, taxes on families earning more than $200,000 annually jumped 6.4 percent.
