Unclaimed funds letter misleading

The Better Business Bureau reports that 40 calls have been received in their Midland office concerning the recently circulated letters from Federal Information Services, Unclaimed Property Division.

The letters, which give a 900-number to call, are offering to sell information to consumers that may be obtained free from the state Treasurer in Austin, the BBB said. The call costs $15.

John Schmidt, of the BBB, said, "People can do this for no charge at all. We warn people that although the letter looks like official correspondence, it's not official. These things are misleading."

The BBB said calls have been received from all over the West Texas area, and the Dallas Better Business Bureau opened a file on the company in November 1989.

Christmas queen contest extended

The deadline for entering the Miss Merry Christmas contest has been extended to Wednesday, Nov. 14. Any junior or senior high school girl who maintains a "B" average may enter the contest and reign as queen of the Christmas Parade, according to Gail Earls, co-chairperson for the contest.

The girl chosen as queen will receive a $250 scholarship from Howard College, plus other prizes including a tiara. All contestants will receive T-shirts.

Each contestant is required to write a 200-word essay on "My Imaginary Christmas of Yesteryear (1890)." The sponsors are looking for an antique car for the queen and her court to use during the parade in keeping with the theme of the essay.

Judging will be on Nov. 19 at the United Way office, 406 Runnels, at 5 p.m. Five judges will question each contestant. The Blue Blazers, Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce, sponsors the event. For further information, contact Sherrie Bordsfokske at 267-5201 or 263-3793, or Gail Earls at 267-6671.

VA plans employee chili cook-off

The VA Employees Association will host a Thanksgiving dinner Nov. 14 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the VA Medical Center, according to Conrad Alexander, director.

The theme of the dinner will be "Texas Thanksgiving" and will consist of a chili cook-off with members of the Employees Association cooking pots of chili at home and bringing them in for all employees to share.

Employees will be encouraged to wear western outfits to work that day.

Part of the admission to the chili cook-off will be the donation of a canned food item.

Analysts attempt to find meaning in election results

WASHINGTON (AP)—Spin control is the order of the day, as partisan analysts massage the 1990 election returns to suit their conflicting political prisms.

Democratic Party chairman Ronald H. Brown and Republican Party spokesman Charles Black raced from one joint appearance to another Wednesday. Brown declared the 1990 outcome "a no-confidence vote" on President Bush, while Black found in the results "a good day for the Republican Party."

The conflicting views mean little to citizens of Arizona who are headed for a runoff vote perhaps months away to determine the identity of their next governor.

Republican Fife Symington held a lead of fewer than 5,000 votes over Democrat Terry Goddard in the race to succeed Rose Mofford as governor of Arizona. About 10,000 votes went to other candidates and the state constitution requires that if no candidate gets 50 percent of the votes, the top two meet again in a runoff.

Until the race is settled, Mofford will remain governor. Also undecided are two House races in California, two of them involving Democratic incumbents, Doug Bosco and Jim Bates.

With all other races decided the 1990 outcome was this:

• Democrats gained one Senate seat to increase their majority to 56-44. All Democratic incumbents won; only one Republican lost. College professor Paul Wellstone unseated Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.

• The Democrats also picked up nine House seats to pad their majority to 268-167, assuming the two unsettled California races go to the Republican candidates who now are leading.

• Governors provided the most excitement. The Republicans retained California, but the Democrats captured statehouses in Florida and Texas from the GOP. When the dust had settled the Democrats held 28 governorships and the Republicans 19. Two were won by independents — Lowell

Overall, Democrats emerged from Tuesday's vote with redistricting monopolies in 17 states. Republicans control the process outright in just three states, ... none of them redistricting battlegrounds.

Weicker in Connecticut and Walter Hickel in Alaska.

Those are the numbers. Defining them was the job of the Browns and Blacks.

"Americans read George Bush's lips yesterday, and they made it clear they didn't like his message," said Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., chairman of the House Democratic campaign committee.

The outcome "wasn't due to any kind of national trend, I don't think, or issue, so much as it was something about (each) individual member," said House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill.

Control of congressional and legislative reapportionment was a special goal of both the 1990 campaign. In this area the Democrats looked like clear winners.

Overall, Democrats emerged from Tuesday's vote with redistricting monopolies in 17 states. Republicans control the process outright in just three states, New Hampshire, Utah and Vermont, none of them redistricting battlegrounds.

The victories of Lawton Chiles over Republican Gov. Bob Martinez in Florida and Ann Richards over GOP businessman Clayton Williams in the Texas governor's race gave the Democrats the monopoly of the redistricting process in those two key states that will gain seven House seats between them.

Other incumbent governors who lost were Republicans Kay Orr of Nebraska, Mike Hayden of Kansas and Edward DiPrete of Rhode Island.

Baker seeking support for military strike against Iraq

(AP) Secretary of State James A. Baker III today sought Soviet support for a U.N. resolution authorizing military action against Iraq. Baghdad said it would strike back at all U.S.-allied forces on Saudi soil if the Americans attack.

At the United Nations, diplomats said on Wednesday that the United States has readied a Security Council resolution that would authorize the use of military force to drive Iraq from Kuwait.

If such a measure were adopted, it would be the first time the U.N. authorized a joint military command. During the Korean War, it authorized the United States to command the U.N. forces repelling North Korea's invasion.

The text has not yet been circulated because Baker is trying to line up support for it, said the diplomats, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In Moscow, Baker was to meet today with President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said it would be undesirable to use force to liberate Kuwait, which Iraq seized on Aug. 2 and later annexed.

But Shevardnadze did not rule out the use of force. The Soviets have said they would want U.N. endorsement of any military move against Iraq.

The U.N.-ordered embargo on trade with Iraq has failed to pressure Saddam into relinquishing the emirate, and the patience of U.S. and British officials appears to be running short.

On Wednesday, in her strongest statement yet, Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said

"time is running out" for a peaceful solution.

But Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak said in an interview with The New York Times today that the multinational force massed in Saudi Arabia to counter Iraq should give the U.N. sanctions "at least two to three more months." About 14,000 Egyptians are in the multinational force.

Baghdad's information minister, Latif Nassayif Jassim, said today that Iraq will target all the multinational forces in Saudi Arabia if U.S. troops initiate an attack from Saudi soil, the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

Jassim, reacting to new Saudi-U.S. agreement on commanding the joint military forces, said: "We will retaliate on any American aggression against

Boy Scouts ask residents of area towns to use food bags

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

Big Spring, Coahoma and Stanton Boy Scouts are planning a Good Turn Food Drive for the needy to help two local relief agencies.

Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts and Explorers of the Buffalo Trail Council are asking area residents to fill bags with canned goods and other non-perishable food items. The bags will be available in copies of Sunday's Big Spring Herald.

The Scouts will pick up filled bags Saturday, Nov. 17, national Good Turn Day. For one week beginning this Saturday, donors can also leave food items in boxes at local grocery stores. Any bag, box or container can be used to hold donations.

The food collected in Big Spring and Coahoma will be divided between the Northside Community Center and the Salvation Army, especially for holiday aid programs. All Howard County residents are eligible for aid through these local agencies.

Stanton's donations will benefit the Permian Basin Food Bank. Scouting official Clem Jones said the food will meet a real need in the area.

"There's more of a need than we may realize," he said. "You go to any one of the (relief agencies) and you will realize just how much of a need there is."

He added that both agencies will be working to provide as much food as possible for the needy during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

"During the holidays they have an extra demand on their resources and on them," Jones said.

Food bags, which will be delivered with Sunday's Herald, can be filled with food and hung on the door for pickup by Boy Scouts Oct. 17.

Donors who want their filled bags picked up should leave them on the front porch Saturday, Nov. 17 by 9:30 a.m., Jones said. Scouts and adult volunteers will come by to pick them up.

Donations can also be taken to the central headquarters in Big Spring at the Box parking lot in the 2300 block of Grogg Street that day, Jones added.

Warren Wallace, district executive for the council said pickups will continue until about 3 p.m. Donors whose bags are not picked up can call 263-3752, give their address, and the bag will be picked up.

Residents of areas not within the city limits can bring their donations into town, as Scouts will only cover city streets, Wallace said.

Jones said the project, part of the national Good Turn project, is beneficial to the youth members of the council.

"It helps Scouts to realize that there are people less fortunate than they are," he said, adding that they do a variety of social service, most on an individual basis, throughout the year.

Approximately 300 Scouts are expected to participate.

Studies cited by Boy Scouts of America claim that there are more hungry people in the United States now than at any time in the past 25 years. More than 20 million Americans, including 4 million children, go hungry at some time every month, according to the fact sheet supplied to troops.

"Hunger is a problem we can do something about by working together," Scout troops were told.

The project, in its third year, will probably be continued as it has been successful, Jones said. The number of food items donated has increased each year, he said.

"We're hoping for an increase this year," he said. "I want to encourage everyone to put as much as they can in those bags."

He said donors can hang the bag on a doorknob or leave it on the porch. He emphasized that bags should be out by 9:30 a.m. on pickup day.

Christmas dolls

Big Spring High School Future Homemakers of America members have gotten the Christmas spirit early. The group dressed several dolls for the Salvation Army's doll sale later this month. Danene Moore places a doll in the library display case, where they will be displayed until next week, as Leticia Hilario watches.

Family files suit against police

AUSTIN (AP) — The family of an Austin teenager who was shot to death after police said he pointed a pistol at an officer has filed a lawsuit against the city and the officer who did the shooting.

The lawsuit, filed Wednesday by civil rights attorney Jim Harrington for the family of 17-year-old Arthur Martinez, asks for unspecified monetary damages.

Martinez was shot in the left side of the head and chest Oct. 30 as police dispersed a group of teen-agers who were using a .45-caliber pistol for target practice in a drainage ditch near a park.

Investigators said officer Tobias Santiago fired the two shots at Martinez after the youth pointed a gun at Santiago.

Martinez' family contends that the teen-ager did not have a weapon when he was shot.

Two killed in apartment fire

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Two men were killed and seven people injured early today in an apartment fire near the Galveston-Bolivar ferry.

Bess Beliveau of the Galveston County Medical Examiner's office said the dead men had not been positively identified this morning, but both were believed to be young adults who died of burns.

"We have a tentative identification on one and nothing on the other one," Ms. Beliveau said. "I've only been back from the fire a short while and haven't even begun to sort through all the information here."

Authorities believe the fire may have started between 12:30 and 1:30 a.m. in the upstairs kitchen of one unit of the Rod and Gun Apartment complex after a man burned a late-night dinner.

Two women guilty in man's death

PAULS VALLEY, Okla. (AP) — Two women face sentencing Dec. 11 after pleading guilty in the death of a Texas man and the stabbing of another, officials say.

Lisa Adams, 27 of Lindsay, and Shane Williams Beauchamp, 28, of Chickasha, pleaded guilty Wednesday before District Judge J. Kenneth Love on counts of first-degree murder, conspiracy to commit a felony and assault and battery with a deadly weapon, officials said.

Authorities allege the women conspired with Donald Ray Wilson, 45, of Dibble, and Joe Hackney, 42, of Blanchard in the May 12 shotgun slaying of William Gentry, 23, of Arlington, Texas, and the stabbing of Steve Northington, 45.

The Texas men allegedly were assaulted, bound with duct tape and dropped from a bridge into Rush Creek after an apparent robbery attempt, investigators claimed.

State FFA may bolt from group

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Texas Future Farmers of America is threatening to pull its 52,000 members from the National FFA Organization because of a squabble over representation at the group's convention here.

The Texas group wants the number of delegates increased to 475 from 276. The official 63rd National FFA Convention runs from Thursday to Saturday. Texas' proposal came up in a business session Wednesday.

The delegates tabled the discussion and are expected to bring it up again Friday. Rebecca McClinton, executive secretary for the Texas FFA, said Texans would not collect national dues if the change is not approved.

Texas

State government getting mostly new look

AUSTIN (AP) — When the new state government takes over in January, some of the names will be the same, some will be new and more of the top officeholders will be Republicans.

Only one Democrat was returned to the same statewide office he held before Tuesday's elections.

That was Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, easily re-elected to a third term. He credited his environmentalist platform and record, saying, "The people of Texas responded to it."

Democrats held control of both houses of the Legislature, and House Speaker Gib Lewis won reelection to his seat. That means Democrats are well-positioned when it comes to one of the 1991 Legislature's biggest jobs, reapportionment.

Here's a who's who in the new government:

Lieutenant Governor
For the first time since 1973, Democrat Bill Hobby won't be on the podium presiding over the Texas Senate.

That job will belong to Democrat Bob Bullock, moving up after serving four terms as state comptroller.

Bullock, 61, is a Hillsboro native who's spent much of his life in Texas politics. He served in the Texas House from 1957-60, was an assistant attorney general in 1967, worked on the staff of Gov. Preston Smith in 1969, was secretary of state in 1971-72 and won election as comptroller in 1975.

He defeated Houston businessman Rob Mosebacher on Tuesday.

Attorney General
Dan Morales, a Democratic state representative from San Antonio, won his first bid for statewide office and becomes the second Hispanic to hold one behind Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez, first elected in 1986.

Morales, 34, is a Harvard Law School graduate and former prosecutor who rose quickly during his short tenure in the Texas House. He chaired the Criminal Jurisprudence Committee and played a key role two years ago on the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.

Morales defeated GOP state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown of Lake

Jackson.

Treasurer
This is a big win for Texas Republicans: GOP candidate Kay Bailey Hutchison defeated Democrat Nikki Van Hightower, the Harris County treasurer, to succeed Richards.

Mrs. Hutchison, 47, is a lawyer and businesswoman from Dallas. A former television reporter and one-time state legislator, she returned to politics this year after an eight-year absence. In 1982, she lost the GOP nomination in the 3rd Congressional District.

Comptroller
The state's next tax collector is John Sharp, a Democrat who currently regulates the oil and gas industry as one of three members of the Texas Railroad Commission.

Sharp, a Texas A&M graduate, has spent more than a decade in politics. He first was elected to the Texas House from Victoria in 1979, won election to the Senate in 1982 and has been a railroad commissioner since winning the job in 1986. To succeed Bullock as comptroller, he defeated Republican Warren G. Harding Jr. of Dallas.

Agriculture Commissioner
A shock for Democrats, Republican state Rep. Rick Perry defeated two-term incumbent Jim Hightower.

Perry, 40, is a farmer and rancher from Haskell who changed parties last year. A Texas A&M graduate, he is a three-term veteran of the Texas House where he served on the appropriations, calendars and energy committees.

Perry campaigned against what he said was Hightower's politicization of the office.

Land Commissioner
Mauro, 43, first was elected in 1982. The Texas A&M graduate has made environmental issues, such as beach cleanup, a cornerstone of his efforts. Mauro played a leading role in advocating the use of oil-eating microbes to clean up oil spills along the Gulf Coast.

He defeated Republican Wes Gilbreath of Houston.

Railroad Commissioner
Democrat Bob Krueger captured this seat, which is being vacated by Republican Kent Hance, who lost his party's bid for governor. Krueger, 55, of New Braunfels, is a former congressman and defeated former GOP Congressman Beau Boulter of Amarillo for the job.

In addition to his time in the U.S. House, Krueger has been U.S. ambassador-at-large to Mexico.

The Courts
Republican Tom Phillips held on to his seat as chief justice, first won in 1988 after his appointment by Gov. Clements in 1987. The Harvard-educated lawyer had emphasized campaign finance reform. He defeated Democratic Justice Oscar Mauzy, who remains on the bench.

Madam takes stand in Dixon's S&L trial

DALLAS (AP) — A convicted San Diego madam says she provided high-priced call girls who entertained about 20 directors of Vernon Savings Association at two California parties.

Karen Wilkening, known in Southern California as "The Rolodex Madam" because of her exclusive client list, gave the testimony Wednesday in the federal bank fraud trial of former Vernon owner Don R. Dixon.

The prostitutes' services at the parties in 1984 and 1985 cost the thrift about $9,200, prosecutors said.

One of the 38 charges Dixon is being tried on alleges that he used thrift money to pay for prostitutes. Other charges accuse him of allowing Vernon money to be used for illegal political contributions and for the maintenance of a house in Solana Beach, Calif.

Ms. Wilkening, who described her escort business as "private" and "by referral only," said she first came in contact with Vernon and Dixon in spring 1984.

"I was approached to cater a very first-class party in San Diego," she said. "It was a board of directors party for a financial institution in Texas. They needed girls to work as cocktail hostesses."

Six of her call girls worked at the party, in June 1984 at Vernon's house in Solana Beach, Ms. Wilkening said. The rate was about $400 per woman, and the madam was paid in cash.

"I recall about 20 gentlemen that had Southern accents," she testified. "The house was large... I observed several couples going in different directions, and some of the directions included the bedrooms."

She said she was told before the party that Dixon and officers of the thrift "expected the girls to look very classy and to spend some time with the clients if they wanted them to."

Vernon contracted with Ms. Wilkening again the next year for its board of directors party, she said. This time, nine call girls worked two nights: the first at a beach house party and the second on a yacht cruise, the madam said.

The charge for the second party was $6,400 and included sex at the party, Ms. Wilkening said. She also testified that she charged an extra $500 because one man left the party with a prostitute and spent the night with her. Vernon employee Ernest Osuna testified earlier that the customer who incurred the extra charges was Dixon.

Osuna described the 1985 parties as rather wild affairs in which directors hopped into hot tubs with women and lined up to get into bedrooms, where bedsheets were destroyed.

Defense lawyer Billy Ravkind repeatedly played down the gatherings, calling them "stag parties." At one point he asked Ms. Wilkening whether her employees were "paid for an orgy."

"No, sir," she replied.

Man indicted in letter bombings

ATLANTA (AP) — Civil rights leaders breathed easier with the indictment of a Georgia man in a series of mail bombings that killed a federal judge and an NAACP lawyer and put the South on edge just before Christmas last year.

The indictment, unsealed Wednesday, also accuses Walter Leroy Moody Jr., a 56-year-old self-employed editor, of sending racist, threatening letters.

He was to be arraigned in federal court today.

The bombings and threats spread a wave of pre-Christmas terror that had lawyers, judges and civil rights officials contacting authorities when they received unexpected packages.

"We are relieved that federal authorities believe that a suspected perpetrator has been identified, and cautious that no other persons are or may be implicated," said Earl Shihoster, Southeast director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

He said the bombings "created a climate of uneasy apprehension for many of us in the civil rights community that will not be easily abated even with the indictments."

The nail-packed bombs bore marked similarities to one that Moody was convicted of possessing in 1972, federal authorities said.

Scientists say comet brought life

NEW YORK (AP) — The chemical building blocks for life on Earth may have arrived aboard comet dust, two scientists say.

The NASA scientists examined a discovery made in Denmark last year to develop the hypothesis reported in today's issue of the British journal Nature.

Kevin Zahnle and David Grinspoon of NASA's Ames Research Center at Moffett Field in California tried to explain the discovery of ancient soil that contained concentrations of amino acids believed to have come from outer space.

Amino acids are vital to life.

combining to form proteins and other organic structures.

The buried amino acids in Denmark appeared in strata above and below a layer of the element iridium, which some scientist say marks the impact of a huge meteorite that killed off the dinosaurs 65 million years ago.

The scientists who found the amino acids suggested that they had arrived on the meteorite.

Zahnle and Grinspoon suggested instead that the meteorite was only a chunk of a large comet that created a dust cloud rich in organic molecules.

Dust from this cloud deposited the amino acids in the soil before and after the meteorite struck.

Members of violent sect arrested

MIAMI (AP) — A black sect that won civic honors for renovating inner-city buildings, fighting drugs and operating businesses under its charismatic leader built its empire on extortion, firebombings and murder, prosecutors charged.

A federal grand jury accused the group's leader, Yahweh ben Yahweh, and 16 followers of involvement in the slayings of 14 people, including so-called "white devils" who were killed to gain entrance to the sect's inner circle.

Some victims were decapitated. Others' ears were cut off, U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen said.

Yahweh and seven other members of the sect were arrested in early morning raids Wednesday.

Town square destroyed

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. — The town square area of the Universal Studios backlot in Universal City, Calif. is leveled after a fire swept through the area Tuesday night. To the right stands the courthouse used in the original "Back to the Future." A security guard has been arrested for allegedly torching the backlot, causing millions of dollars in damage.

Hirohito said he went to war to prevent coup

TOKYO (AP) — The late Emperor Hirohito said shortly after World War II that he had not opposed attacking the United States because he feared civil war might otherwise break out in Japan, newly released documents indicate.

In an eight-hour conversation with aides about his role before and during the war, Hirohito also rejected the Japanese tradition that reveres the emperor as a living god, Japanese media reported on Wednesday, citing the transcript.

The conversation was held in spring 1946, when Allied occupation forces were considering whether to charge the emperor with war crimes. The discussions appear to have been part of preparations by aides for a possible trial.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. said the transcripts were recorded by Hirenari Terasaki, a former diplomat. Terasaki also translated for the emperor in some of his meetings with Douglas MacArthur, supreme commander of the Allies during the postwar occupation of Japan.

The broadcasting corporation said that when Terasaki died, the transcripts of the conversation were given to his daughter, Mariko Terasaki Miller, who lives in the United States and recently rediscovered the documents.

"If I had tried to veto the beginning of the Pacific War, a coup d'etat would have occurred, and my trusted aides would have been killed. My life also could not have been guaranteed," Hirohito said. He was referring to fears of an uprising in Japan's powerful military.

"Even if that were acceptable, a violent civil war would have occurred, resulting in a tragedy several times worse than (World War II), and leading to circumstances that the war would not have ended. I believe that Japan would have been destroyed," Kyodo News Service quoted the transcripts as saying.

He appeared to be referring to the possibility of a civil conflict between those Japanese who favored going to war and those who did not.

Japanese officials met and decided to attack the United States shortly before the bombing of Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

The radio network quoted Hirohito as saying he did not halt the war later because he feared the public might believe the government had given in to the United States, despite Japan's strong army and navy.

Before he died in January 1989, Hirohito made few public statements about his role during the war. However, he had consistently said he did not intervene in the war plans because he could not, as a constitutional monarch, interfere in decisions made by the government.

The transcript quoted Hirohito as telling the five aides that it was "troubling" for him to be referred to as a living god.

"Biologically, I have the same body as ordinary people, so I am not a god," Kyodo quoted the transcripts as saying.

Marcos offers settlement in suit

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Imelda Marcos has agreed to give the Philippines 60 percent of the money she has in five Hong Kong banks if the government drops a lawsuit against the former first lady in California, an official said today.

David Castro, chairman of the Presidential Commission on Good Government, said President Corason Aquino's administration will drop the $5 billion suit if its share of the Hong Kong money exceeds $200 million.

Mrs. Marcos would admit no guilt to charges of embezzlement. If the agreement is carried out, it would be the first known settlement between the government and the Marcoses.

Castro's agency has had little success recovering the billions the government claims Mrs. Marcos and her late husband, former President Ferdinand Marcos, stole during his 20-year administration.

Castro told reporters he would leave later in the day for Los Angeles, where he is to appear in federal court Friday to explain the planned settlement.

Mrs. Marcos's lawyer, James P. Linn, spoke of the arrangement in Los Angeles on Monday. Linn and the government's attorneys said they did not know how much money is in the Hong Kong accounts.

Border meeting stresses peace

FRANKFURT AN DER ODER, Germany (AP) — Treaties guaranteeing Poland's border with Germany and protecting ethnic Germans in Poland were on the agenda as the countries' leaders met today.

Before the meeting began, Germany forgave nearly a half billion dollars in loan payments to Poland.

German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, in their first meeting since German unification on Oct. 3, were to confer on both sides of the Oder River.

The river border is a symbol of the thorny relations between the two largest states in central Europe.

Polish government spokeswoman Malgorzata Niezabitowska noted that one year ago a visit by Kohl to Poland was interrupted by the breaching of the Berlin Wall last Nov. 9 amid democratic upheaval in East Germany.

For Poland, German unification meant a new direct border with the European Community, promising economic advantages. However it also inevitably raised old fears of a resurgent, powerful Germany.

Kohl greeted Mazowiecki at the picturesque, centuries-old city hall of Frankfurt an der Oder.

Gandhi asked to form government

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — President Ramaswamy Venkataraman asked former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi today if he could form a new government, but Gandhi said he was reluctant.

Gandhi said he prefers to support Chandra Shekhar, the leader of the dissident faction in the party headed by V.P. Singh.

Singh was ousted as prime minister Wednesday by a 346-142 no-confidence vote in Parliament, his government having collapsed under a wave of religious and caste violence.

"We would not like to form the government. But if the situation forces us to we will have to rethink that," Gandhi told reporters after meeting with Venkataraman.

Gas.

It's A Natural For Reliability.

America's reserves of natural gas are vast. Unlike oil, which increasingly comes from foreign sources, virtually all of our natural gas is produced right here in North America.

From an environmental standpoint, gas is the cleanest burning of all fossil fuels. Increased use of gas can help reduce atmospheric pollution such as acid rain. So, gas can be relied upon to help clean up the environment.

What's more, gas is a reliable way to save money on heating your home and providing other forms of household energy. For example, over five years a gas water heater saves on average, hundreds of dollars in energy costs. In addition, natural gas heats water faster than electricity.

Finally, gas is always readily available. Think about it. When is the last time your natural gas went off?

Gas. For cleanliness and cost-efficiency, it's a natural for reliability.

Gas. It's a natural.

Power plant is smog-maker

A recent report from the National Academy of Sciences affirms what many experts have long assumed and two previous national studies have already declared: that the coal-fired, 2,250-megawatt power plant that's 16 miles from Grand Canyon National Park is responsible for a large part of the park's smog problems.

The owners of the Navajo Generating Station (which include the city of Los Angeles, the federal Bureau of Reclamation and utility companies in Arizona and Nevada) have been fighting for eight years to avoid having to face up to that problem. But now that the evidence can no longer be denied, they need to come up with a real plan to clear the air over this national landmark.

Prior studies by the National Park Service and the Environmental Protection Agency concluded that the plant was responsible for 40 percent to 70 percent of the haze over the park. The national academy's findings are more precise. Depending on weather conditions, the new report concludes, the effects of sulfur dioxide emissions from Navajo may be negligible in the summer months; but during the winter, the plant is often entirely to blame for the gray muck that settles so thickly into the canyon that it's impossible to see from one side to the other.

Nobody suggests that smog in the canyon poses a threat to public health. But it is spoiling the enjoyment of the park. Amendments to the Clean Air Act in 1977 gave the park service the authority to combat this kind of pollution. Strengthening those provisions was reportedly the next item on the agenda when the House-Senate conference committee on the new clean-air bill decided to end its negotiations and bring the legislation up for a vote. But even without any changes in existing law, the park service has all the power it needs to force Navajo's owners to clean up their act.

The owners raise some legitimate questions about the best way of reducing the plant's emissions. Installing industrial scrubbers in the plant's three 775-foot smoke stacks, they say, would cost their customers in the Southwest $1.78 billion or more. But if the academy's research results are correct, Los Angeles officials say, it might be simpler and a lot cheaper for the plant to reduce production or shut down altogether on those days when the park might be affected. Coming up with a new operating schedule will require a lot of cooperation on all sides. But in light of the academy's report, the question for the future isn't whether to clamp down on Navajo's air pollution but how.

Timing is critical in a war with Iraq

WASHINGTON — If the United States goes to war with Iraq, President Bush believes it must happen in a three-month window between mid-November and mid-February, according to high-level administration sources.

While there are many reasons not to go to war at all, one big reason it has not happened yet is that the timing is not right. Bush wants to wait as long as he can to see if his sanctions will pinch Iraq into submission. The Central Intelligence Agency is working up an estimate of the effect of those sanctions and will finish by mid-November. So far, the Iraqis on the street are feeling the pinch, but the military is not.

Bush also needs more time to complete the troop deployment, which has taken a month longer than originally planned. The troops will be in place when the window of opportunity opens. White House sources explained to us why that three months is as ideal as Bush will get in the Persian Gulf.

The weather in the region is best between now and mid-February. After then comes "khashin," which means 50 — the 50 days or so of blinding sandstorms, day-after-day. Visibility is poor and even spy satellites are stymied. (If the United States begins the war, it will most likely happen on a moonless night when U.S. military strategists say their night-vision equipment will give them their best advantage.)

Any war must be over by March, which begins the month-long Moslem observance of Ramadan. The holy days celebrate Mohammed's receipt of the first revelation of the Koran. Moslems spend the days praying and reading the Koran.

If Ramadan comes and goes with U.S. troops (i.e. "infidels") still in Saudi Arabia, the Saudis will definitely want the foreigners out by June. That is the time of the "hadj" or the holy pilgrimage to Mecca. Every Moslem must come at least once in a lifetime, and every year hundreds of thousands of them travel to Saudi Arabia. No non-believers are allowed near Mecca. Although most of the U.S. troops are far away, there is an Air Force wing using a field in nearby Taif. The hadj would be no time for

Jack Anderson

Americans to disrupt the sacred rites of the Moslems. In 1979, the mere rumor that Americans instigated riots during the hadj caused a mob to set fire to the U.S. Embassy in Pakistan. Two people died in the fire.

The longer Bush waits, the stronger Iraqi defensive positions become. More than 2,000 Iraqi tanks are already dug in behind sand barriers, barbed wire, land mines and even napalm mines. The Iraqis hope their fortifications will cause so many quick U.S. casualties that the American people will demand withdrawal.

And the longer Bush waits, the more Kuwait is pillaged and decimated by Iraqi troops. Some intelligence estimates indicate that already as many as two-thirds of the Kuwaitis have been moved to Iraq. They are being replaced by a migration of thousands of Iraqis looking for a higher standard of living.

The morale of U.S. troops erodes every day that they spend waiting. Pentagon reports say they are already losing their fighting edge.

The world alliance against Saddam Hussein is also eroding. Bush knows that the longer he waits, the more likely it is that some of those allies will wash their hands of the whole mess.

Finally, American support for war is diminishing, and along with it, Bush's popularity. The longer he waits to attack, the less support he will have for that attack when — and if — it happens.

TRACKING SMUGGLERS — A U.S. task force is looking for smugglers who have tried to break the blockade against Iraq. The task force has access to U.S. intelligence technology and can monitor banking transactions. Several black-market operators, including some legitimate companies, have tried to make under-the-table deals with Iraq. They have been reported to their respective governments.

When a journalist nails brackets

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Random notes while trying to defrost myself:

Being a homeowner has been almost everything I thought it would be. There's something very special about closing the front door behind you and knowing that this, by golly, is your home — well, yours and the finance company's.

Aside from having mortgaged my wife's and my future, however, there are very few things that I wouldn't say in favor of owning a home.

About the nicest thing of all is being able to do improvements without having to call the landlord for permission. If, for example, I want to install a swimming pool in the back yard, I can go right ahead and install a swimming pool in my back yard.

Of course, advantages can also be disadvantages. If the home does need improvements, it is incumbent upon yours truly to make said improvements — either that, or go broke paying repairmen.

And, if the average homeowner is as skilled (or unskilled) in home repair as I am, there's no telling how many adventures await the unsuspecting novice repairman.

Have I ever told you how silly I look with a hammer in my hand? No? Well, sit back, dear reader, and let me tell you how Mr. Fixit helped his wife hang some curtains.

Geri and I were very fortunate to have bought a house that needed almost no repairs. My wife decided, however, that something had to be done with the tacky curtains in the master bedroom — as in take the darned things down, burn them to cinders and replace them with curtains a bit more appealing.

Beyond the realm

My wife knows how lost I am when it comes to fixing or repairing things and would have done the job herself, except for one tiny detail: she has a broken foot.

Now, I have been accused of being a bit sexist and insensitive at times, but not even I would expect my wife to try to hang curtains with only one good foot to stand on.

Hey, even male chauvinist pigs have their limits.

Anyway, I took hammer and nails in hand a few days ago and set out to hang some curtains. After reading the following, I hope that you remember that at least my intentions were good.

Things were OK at first. After careful measurement, I nailed the brackets at the exact spot my wife had indicated.

She thanked me, stepped back, looked the situation over and told me that I needed to move the brackets a teensy bit.

I didn't say anything.

After nailing the brackets in — again — I went to the next window while Geri hung the curtains. Just when I was almost finished with the second set of brackets, my dear wife informed me that, darn, Honey, it just wasn't quite right, and would I mind very much resetting the brackets just this one more time?

I still didn't say anything, but facing the task of redoing a job for the second time made me think an awful lot of things, hardly any complimentary to my wife.

When I think those things, I invariably use The Look (pursed lips, furrowed brow, frown) to let my wife know that her husband, that man of unlimited patience, is starting to get ticked.

Geri saw The Look and reacted in a way I suppose many wives do when their husbands frown at them: she started giggling.

So much for intimidating glances.

To make a long story short, after what seemed an eternity of refitted brackets, dropped nails and banged thumbs, the brackets — hallelujah! — were in their proper place, the curtains were hung and peace was restored.

I'm sure in the next few years I'll have plenty of opportunities to perfect The Look. After all, my wife has no shortage of ideas for fixing up our home.

If she giggles one more time, though, she can hammer the darned things in herself — and to heck with her foot.

Hmmm... maybe I am a male chauvinist pig.

Georgia football on my mind

I suppose I could just go run under a log and hide and allow this Georgia Tech football thing to cool down, but, unlike my Yellow Jacket friends think, I am a man of principle.

Here I am in the midst of the worst Georgia football season since George and Barbara were just dating, but I can't allow that to interfere with my duty to congratulate Tech for its astounding victory over top-ranked Virginia last Saturday.

What a game!

The Jackets came back and likely will win their first conference title of any kind (I read this in another paper) since 1952.

I hope Georgia's high priests of academia, who think a successful football season is based on how many players flunk out of school, saw the game.

Virginia and Georgia Tech, two institutions with pristine academic images, didn't get on national television playing the Game of the Day without a little help from their administrations.

There is absolutely nothing wrong, in my mind, in recruiting young athletes, and if they can't all be rocket scientists, then find something they can handle.

General Studies. American Studies. Sports Management. Rhetoric. Mechanics and Tow Truck Engineering. It doesn't matter.

Until every school agrees all athletes must make 1200 on their SAT and be able to understand Goethe, schools which don't bend here and there are destined to 4-7 records and no chance at the glory.

Perhaps empty seats and dwindling alumni contributions will strike a chord, even if these words won't.

Tech's team is big, strong and fast. Would any Tech fan alive Saturday give up the precious victory over Virginia because the school will give a kid who didn't exactly tear up his college boards a chance to play and stay in school?

That is to be commended, not condemned. This should not be an elitist society. To deny the average student at an institution supported by public funds is an elitist idea.

(Forgive my preaching, but when you're 4-4 and facing Florida, Auburn and Tech and no bowl, it's enough to make a man take to the pulpit to speak of Doomsday.)

Georgia may have about a one-in-a-hundred chance of upsetting one of its last three opponents. I asked fellow Dawgs which one they would pick if they could have that one.

It's sort of half-and-half between Auburn and Tech.

"We've beaten Florida so much," one said.

I'd take Tech. No doubt the Yellow Jackets will come to Athens 9-0-1, bound for a New Year's Day bowl. How sweet it would be to spoil that trip.

I hope that says to Tech fans how much I respect their team. The tables have turned. It's been Tech wanting to spoil Georgia trips for so many years.

Make no mistake, Georgia will be back. If we have to storm the palace, we will; but we'll be back.

In the meantime Georgia Tech will hog the headlines. The Ramblin' Wreck, what a helluva shape it was in, but no more.

Now, that's about all the goodwill for the event I can stand out of myself for one day.

See you in Athens.

Eighteen named Carnegie Heroes

Kenneth L. Yant, Jr., 33, of Plainfield, Ind., was among those who died as a result of their heroics. Yant died Aug. 26, 1989 while trying to rescue an 11-year-old boy from drowning in Martinsville, Ind.

Guillen, 32, who was fatally shot Dec. 1, 1989 when he intervened on behalf of a 13-year-old boy being robbed of his bike in Bell, Calif.

Other winners were:
 • Daniel D. Sanders, 30, of Washington, Pa., who jumped into a creek and saved a fisherman from drowning Oct. 18, 1989, in Burt, N.Y.

• Curtis C. Dennison, 35, of Irwin, Pa., who carried a woman from a car moments before leaking gas ignited, engulfing the car in flames on Oct. 28, 1989, in Lewisville, Ohio.

• Gerald Heinen, 48, of Loves Park, Ill., who tried to save a 79-year-old woman from a burning car in Ridott, Ill., on Aug. 29, 1989. The off-duty firefighter crawled through the woman's car window and pulled her out. She later died.

• Don W. Rocap, 67, of Lubbock, Texas, who saved two men from a burning car after a crash.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A Massachusetts gravel plant foreman who saved a co-worker from grinding machinery and two Canadian women who confronted a knife-wielding intruder after he slashed their elderly neighbor were among 18 people recognized by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

The annual awards honor people who risked their lives in efforts to save others. Three of those named last week died in their attempts.

The commission founded by Pittsburgh industrialist Andrew Carnegie in 1904 has recognized 7,495 Americans and Canadians over the years. More than $18.8 million has been awarded. Winners, or their survivors, get $2,500.

Twenty-four-year-old Michael Radwicz of Hinsdale, Mass., said he had little time to think when co-worker Scott Pierce became entangled in a gravel sorter he was repairing on Oct. 18, 1989. "He was leaning in to see how it was working," Radwicz said. "I could see him getting wrapped up in the shaft, getting dragged up."

"I grabbed for him and yanked him out. He fell back on the deck and I could see his arm was almost off," he said.

Pierce's left arm and Radwicz's left thumb were nearly severed and had to be reattached.

Also honored were Grace Nolan, 50, of Whitby, Ontario, and Irene Beaton, 67, of Lindsay, Ontario, who challenged a man who broke into the home of a neighbor, Dorothy Blackhall, 72, and slashed her face.

Mrs. Blackhall survived and the attacker was placed in a mental institution, Mrs. Nolan said.

Kenneth L. Yant, Jr., 33, of Plainfield, Ind., was among those who died as a result of their heroics. Yant died Aug. 26, 1989 while trying to rescue an 11-year-old boy from drowning in Martinsville, Ind.

Another award winner who died was John E. Dedon, 42, of Jackson, La., who died trying to save an 8-year-old boy from drowning Aug. 6, 1989. The third was David A.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Linda Hooper, the Annie Oakley of the FBI aims a 9mm submachine gun at FBI headquarters Wednesday. She is in charge of the indoor shooting range at FBI headquarters where she demonstrates her firearm skills for the half-million annual visitors to the building.

FBI's Annie Oakley runs shooting range

WASHINGTON (AP) — If there are any male chauvinist pigs still on the prowl, they'd better steer clear of Linda Hooper, the Annie Oakley of the FBI.

She looks every inch the all-American woman until she opens her glen plaid jacket to reveal a black .38-caliber Smith & Wesson five-shot revolver tucked demurely in her skirt waist.

It would be just the thing for silencing the jeers of hard hats perched in the arbor of subway mashers.

But Mrs. Hooper, who is 39 and married to another FBI special agent, says macho men never bother her. Besides, she says, agents never play around with guns.

"We only shoot when our life or someone else's life is in danger," says the Orange County, Calif., native who grew up plinking tin cans with her grandfather's .22-caliber squirrel rifle.

In her six years with the FBI, Mrs. Hooper has never fired her gun, even while chasing bank robbers, drug pushers, kidnapers and plane hijackers during her first assignment in Portland, Ore.

"But I've been in situations where I've pulled it and pointed it," she says, "and I will use it if I have to."

A member of an elite club of sharpshooters among the FBI's 982 female agents, Mrs. Hooper is in charge of the indoor shooting range at FBI headquarters. There she demonstrates her firearm skills for the half-million visitors who tramp through the building annually on the most popular guided tour in Washington.

Crouching with feet wide apart, Mrs. Hooper shreds the torso of a silhouette target with noisy bursts from such FBI weapons as the Sig Sauer P-226 9mm semiautomatic pistol and the lightweight Heckler & Koch MP-5 fully automatic sub-machine gun.

Interviewed next to a glass case containing the straw hat, eyeglasses and cigar found on gangster John Dillinger's body the night he was gunned down in Chicago in 1934, Mrs. Hooper said her sex has helped rather than hindered her work as an FBI agent.

"I like it the way it is because I consider being a woman as my cover," she said.

"When I go up to your door, you'll think I'm selling Avon or Tupperware. You won't think I'm an FBI agent," she said.

Mrs. Hooper is no trigger-happy TV cop but a proud, no-nonsense professional who hopes the visiting school children who watch her firearms display won't get the wrong idea.

"We're not trying to glamorize guns in any way, but they're part of what our job is all about," she said.

"I always tell the kids that if they find a gun at a friend's house or on the street, don't touch it. Guns are very dangerous."

The 110 million non-voters have a variety of reasons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Enough on the election. Now for a word or two from the silent majority — the 110 million Americans who didn't vote.

"I never took the time," said Melissa Withers, 20, of Mabelville, Ark., on her way to a babysitting job. "I'm always, well, usually, mad when it turns out the way it does. But I've just never taken the time to go down and register."

"It's just sleazeball A or sleazeball B," said civil engineer Jim Allerton of Seattle, explaining why he didn't vote.

"I don't believe in Santa Claus," said college student Jennifer Toledo in Rhode Island. "I don't believe in the tooth fairy. I don't believe in politicians."

They worry the experts, these non-voters. Proportionately, there are more of them in America than any other democracy in the world. There are more in this century than in the last century. There are more in the 1990s than there were in the 1950s.

About 64 percent of voting-age Americans didn't vote Tuesday, according to Curtis Gans, who gathers turnout statistics.

ABC News surveyed 1,028 likely non-voters. It found their political views were pretty much like those of everyone else.

They are concerned about the crisis in the Persian Gulf. They worry about the economy, drugs, the deficit, taxes.

Sixty-four percent say they trust the government to do what is right "only some of the time." Sixty percent say local elected officials care more about serving special interests than helping people.

Gans has been studying them for 15 years as director of the non-partisan Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

He said people voted in heavier numbers on Tuesday in places "where there was something important to decide." But in places where the public only saw messages framed by political consultants and sensed that nothing real was at stake, turnout was down, he said.

Gans' conclusion: when serious candidates discuss important issues, people respond.

Bruce Buchanan, a University of Texas political scientist, said only some of the non-voters are the disenchanted — turned off, feeling impotent, convinced their vote wouldn't make a difference.

Others are kept away by procedural barriers — difficulty in registering or in getting to the polls. Others, especially the young, simply feel government has no relevance.

"Most people in America come close to regarding politics as very distant from their lives," he said. "It's just not an urgent matter."

The Washington Post commissioned a study of people who haven't registered and put them into three groups: too busy (young, educated, somewhat more affluent than the others); too-cynical (middle age and middle class); or physically impaired or illiterate (older).

Associated Press reporters across the country talked to non-voters Tuesday and Wednesday. They fell into all the categories.

Turned off was Skyp Krantz, 43, of Dayton, Ohio, a $9,000-a-year clerk in a record store. "Why bother?" he asked. "No matter who is voted in, once they are elected they do what they want or worse, what somebody with a lot of money wants."

Unregistered was Jim Madzinski, 28, manager of a Tulsa, Okla., food service company. "Honestly, I'm not registered in Oklahoma," he said. "The last thing I want to do is get pulled in for jury duty."

Untouched by it all was college student Kevin Moore, 25, in Madison, Wis. "I'm just not interested," he said while waiting to cross a street on his bicycle. "I don't think anyone running for office can do anything for me."

Hostile was Bert Heacock, 39, a building services manager and part-time night watchman in Boston. "They're all backstabbers," he said. "They need to clean up politics. It's all mudslinging and cutting each other down."

Heacock intends to vote with his feet. He said he's saving his money for a move to Nova Scotia, Canada.

"I don't believe in Santa Claus. I don't believe in the tooth fairy. I don't believe in politicians."

Rural, non-farm census growing

WASHINGTON (TNN) — Suburbia's steady creep into the heartland has helped boost the nation's official rural population 11.3 percent in the last decade, a rate of growth almost twice as fast as in urban areas, the government says.

At the same time, the number of people on American farms continued its steady decline, slipping from 6 million to 4.8 million during the 1980s and last year dropping for the first time below 2 percent of the nation's total population, the Census Bureau and Department of Agriculture said in a joint study released Wednesday.

The South has the highest overall rural population with 44 percent of the national total and one-third of the region's people living in rural areas.

In the middle of this decade the Midwest for the first time became home to more than half the farm population, while the South's share slipped below 30 percent. This is almost an exact reversal of the situation of 1950. The report said this was because of "an exceptionally large decline in Southern farm residents" — the region's farm population is one-tenth the size it was two generations ago.

Rural America remains overwhelmingly white, the report concluded. Blacks account for 6.3 percent and Hispanics for 1.7 percent of the countryside's residents, far below their share of the national population.

This annual government study has nothing to do with the extensive national census of last spring. It takes special note annually of population changes on farms and in rural areas, which include open countryside and towns with fewer than 2,500 residents that are apart from urbanized areas with more than 50,000 people. Since 1980 the rural population has grown by 6.7 million people to 66.2 million, or 27 percent of the population.

That is 1 percent more than rural America's share of citizens at the outset of the decade. At the same time, the urban population has grown to 177.3 million.

"Some of the rural increase since 1980 is no doubt accounted for by the spread of suburban residential development into areas that were rural as of the 1980 census," the last time the government defined all of country into rural or urban precincts, the report said.

"That means to some extent our conclusion showing this big rural growth is misleading," said one of the study's authors, Felicia LeClere of USDA.

GOP still in redistricting battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans may not have won many redistricting skirmishes, but they feel lucky to merely have survived Democratic efforts to shut them out of the process in several key states.

"They'd have killed us into the end of the next century," said Bill Stevens, a spokesman for the New York state Senate Republicans. The GOP repelled Democrats' attempts to take the chamber in Tuesday's elections.

"It's not a game in which gentlemen draw district lines... There's no Marquess of Queensberry rules," Stevens said. "That's not the way it's done."

The game was to gain control of the state governments that will reassign U.S. House seats based on population shifts — a process that can reshape congressional delegations and legislatures for the coming decade.

Democrats racked up big redistricting victories, taking the governorships in Florida and Texas, which together will gain seven U.S. House seats, and adding Rhode Island, New Mexico and Oklahoma to the list of states where they hold a lock on recharting political lines.

The GOP won a round by taking the California governor's race, but that only ensures Republicans negotiating power there because the state's Legislature is controlled by Democrats.

Because New York has a Democratic governor and Democratic state Assembly, the GOP had to have the state Senate to maintain any bargaining power. Population shifts will cost the state three U.S. House seats.

A similar breakdown was at stake in Pennsylvania, which will lose two House seats, and where the GOP hung onto control of the state Senate.

"If we hadn't held on... we would have been subject to a reapportionment steamroller pencil that would have drawn the lines in a highly partisan manner," said Senate President Robert Jubelirer.

In Florida, Democrats hold all the power because they retained slim majorities in the state Senate and House and snatched the governor's seat as well.

Florida will gain four U.S. House seats. Allen Stonecipher, executive director of the Florida Democratic Party, said the party's monopoly will help Democrats regain the ground they lost in the 1980s.

A real trooper

Country music pioneer Hank Snow, who performed for American soldiers in Korea and Vietnam, says he'd gladly entertain U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf. "Sure," Snow said, "if I was 20 years younger."

Tickets available now for symphony

It's not too late to get tickets for the Big Spring Symphony's opening concert. The "natives" concert will feature the music of the Big Bands to local favorite "Big Balls in Cowtown." Special guest Jody Nix and his band The Texas Cowboys will entertain the symphony crowd, and a dance will follow the performance. The event begins at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Tickets are available at several local businesses, the Chamber of Commerce and at the door.

There will be no smoking or beverages allowed in the coliseum. Assistance will be available for the handicapped, and space for wheelchairs will be provided.

Sands artisans to have exhibition

The Sands Art Association will sponsor its 1990 Arts and Crafts Show this weekend at the Ward County Coliseum.

The work of local artists and artisans will be on display and judged at the event. The gate opens to the public at 10 a.m. Friday and Saturday, and at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Work to be shown will include paintings, drawings, photographs, sculpture, leather goods, ceramics, wood items and handmade and decorated clothing.

The coliseum is located on Highway 18 South, two miles south of I-20.

Midland Theatre performs 'Runner'

Midland Community Theatre's production of "The Runner Stumbles" continues Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Single tickets are available. Call 682-4111 for information.

Midland Symphony to perform classics

The Midland-Odessa Symphony, under the direction of Don Jaegar, will perform a Classical Series concert Tuesday at Lee High School in Midland. William Preucil, first violinist of the prestigious Cleveland Quartet, will be featured soloist. Call 563-5269 for information.

'Sesame Street' to air new shows

NEW YORK (AP) — Next Monday, Big Bird, Ernie, Oscar the Grouch and others will start their 22nd season wandering along that public television path that kids of all ages know as "Sesame Street."

There'll be a few changes. Two teen-agers are joining the cast. So is a Claymation creature, Cecille Ball. Oscar's mother will come to visit. Whoopi Goldberg and Robin Williams each will be in two "Sesame" shows.

And the new "Street" season will concern race relations. It will try to show pre-schoolers that it's the heart and mind, not skin color, that matters — even though, as Kermit the Frog so eloquently sang it once, it's not easy being green.

Next Monday also will be a special occasion for Joan Ganz Cooney. It'll be her first season as the ex-chairman of the show's producer, Children's Television Workshop. She turned the reins over last month to David Britt, a veteran CTW executive who has been with the production company for 18 years.

But she's staying with CTW, and especially with "Street," she says, because "I want to work entirely on the creative side and the strategic planning side."

Her renewed involvement with "Sesame Street" is due "in some degree" to the death last May of Muppet-master Jim Henson, who created a number of characters for the show, including Kermit.

Although the series has an extensive tape library of Henson's characters, "I want to make sure that the relationship with the Muppets continues very strong, and that we create, maybe, new characters," she says.

It is that, having gone from four to five basic educational goals its first year to a teach-while-entertaining "curriculum" for pre-schoolers that Cooney estimates has covered 200 topics.

They include sibling rivalry, pre-ence, death, adoption and, of course, love.

Last season, the series, which is seen in 80 countries and still is aimed at children 2 to 5 years old, began segments set in a home day-care center for tykes.

Increasing numbers of kids wind up in day-care centers or after-school programs because their parents, whether divorced or still married, must work to make ends meet.

"Children are much more in day care and after-school programs now," says Cooney, who because of that has two projects afoot, neither intended for TV.

One is to develop after-school "packages" using CTW's other educational shows, "Square One" and "3-2-1 Contact," "to tutor kids in math and science, kids staying after school because their parents work," she says.

The other is a planned pilot program in which "Sesame Street" materials and books would be used for children's activities in Dallas day-care centers.

Also afoot for next season, but on PBS, is an as-yet untitled literacy series to teach reading and writing skills to children 7 to 12 years old, she says.

As with the major networks, cable, independent stations and videocassette players have bitten into PBS' audience, and "Sesame Street" has been among the shows affected.

Happy Minnie

Humorist Minnie Pearl, known for her trademark gingham dress and straw hat with dangling price tag, shows her delight as she is greeted by the crowd celebrating her 50th anniversary on the Grand Ole Opry last week. She is pictured in front of 50 dozen roses, a gift in honor of the occasion.

Cheers for 'Cheers'

The cast of NBC comedy "Cheers" gathered on the set for this photo before taping a one-hour special celebrating the series' 200th episode. The show will air tonight. Castmembers are, back row from left: John Ratzenberger, Rhea Perlman, Roger Rees, Kirstie Alley, Ted Danson, Woody Harrelson, Shelley Long, George Wendt. Front row: Kelsey Grammer, left, Bebe Neuwirth.

'Frankenstein' is fresh look at horror classic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Academy Award voters aren't likely to give it a second look, but those who love horror Hollywood style are in for a rare treat. Roger Corman is back.

For the first time in nearly 20 years, the director of such B movies as "Attack of the Crab Monsters," "Wasp Woman," "Teen-age Caveman" and "She-Gods of Shark Reef" returned to the movie-set hot seat.

"Frankenstein Unbound," Corman's fresh look at the classic Mary Shelley novel, opened Friday. Unlike Corman's earlier low-budget films, which featured little-known actors, "Frankenstein Unbound" boasts the marquee names of John Hurt, Raul Julia and Bridget Fonda.

Corman, 64, last directed a film, the World War I drama "Von Richthofen and Brown," in 1971.

"About halfway through filming it, I just realized I was getting tired," Corman said in an interview. "I had directed more than 50 films in something like 15 or 16 years."

Widower seeks proper way to handle wife's property

DEAR ABBY: My wife died last year, leaving some very nice jewelry and good clothing — including two fur coats. My three daughters-in-law are all too small to use the clothing except for purses and maybe some coats. I am going to get married again, and my new wife could use it all. She comes from a very poor background and has never had anything nice. Would it be in bad taste to offer these things to her (after marriage)? What would my daughters-in-law think?

I cannot afford to buy such nice things for my new wife right now. I am told there's a very high-class

Dear Abby

As for your bride-to-be, the choice should be hers. Perhaps she would enjoy your wife's things — but on the chance that she might feel uncomfortable trying to literally fill her shoes (etc.), sell them and use the proceeds to buy her some lovely new things of her own.

DEAR ABBY: My very dear friend and I are both in our 60s. We have been seeing each other socially for eight years, with no plans to marry.

He drinks beer constantly, usually starting at noon. He doesn't "chug-a-lug" it, but nurses it along. However, when he gets up to throw the empty can in the recycler, he immediately goes to the refrigerator for another beer, and the process continues until bedtime.

In one day, he can easily consume a dozen beers! I have talked to him as gently as possible about this, but he just laughs and says he can handle it — he's been doing it for years.

I have driven him home many times. Abby, this is getting to me. I'm beginning not to want to be around him anymore. Between the beer drinking and the cigar smoke, frankly, he stinks!

We do not live together, so I could ease out of the relationship, but I hate to end a longtime friendship. He insists that he's a beer drinker, not an alcoholic. What are the facts? — PATIENCE STRAINED

DEAR STRAINED: There is as much alcohol in a can of beer as there is in a shot of whiskey served in a bar (1½ ounces). So, if your friend drinks one beer after another every day from noon until bedtime, regardless of what he calls himself he drinks like an alcoholic.

DEAR READERS: How times have changed. The following order was issued in Ethiopia in 1935 by the then-emperor, Haile Selassie:

- (1) All men and boys able to carry a spear go to Addis Ababa.
- (2) Every married man will bring his wife to cook and wash for him.
- (3) Every unmarried man will bring any unmarried woman he can find to cook and wash for him.
- (4) Women with babies, the blind, and those too aged to carry a spear are excused.
- (5) Anyone who qualifies for battle and is found at home will be hanged!

Treatment of viral encephalitis

(AP) — Recently developed drugs and refined diagnostic tests have markedly improved the treatment and diagnosis of viral encephalitis.

Each year in the United States, there are about 20,000 cases of viral encephalitis, an inflammation of the brain caused by the direct invasion of a virus. The disease may also occur as a complication of common viral infections.

"The U.S. Food and Drug Administration's approval in 1987 of the antiviral agent acyclovir for the treatment of herpes encephalitis represented a breakthrough in treating this major type of viral encephalitis," says Dr. Eddie Louie, a specialist in infectious diseases at New York University Medical Center.

"A new and potent antiviral agent, gancyclovir, is being studied for the treatment of another form of viral encephalitis," he says.

Immunization against the viruses that cause polio, measles, and mumps have been instrumental in controlling the number of encephalitis cases by preventing those viral infections, Louie says.

Also important is the vaccine against rabies, a viral infection transmitted by infected animals. Not infrequently, encephalitis results as a consequence of rabies.

In most instances, viral encephalitis is mild, and the infection clears without treatment.

About half of the more serious cases can be successfully resolved if symptoms are recognized early and medical help is sought at once. "Even very seriously ill people may recover completely," Louie says. "Permanent damage is more likely to occur in older people and the very young."

Viral encephalitis can be caused by a number of viruses. "Some 10 percent of all cases in the United States are caused by herpes simplex, the common virus that causes cold sores," the NYU physician says. Varicella zoster and coxsackie virus may also be responsible.

From time to time, encephalitis epidemics occur. "A sudden rise in the rate of encephalitis is often seasonal," Louie says. Some types of viral encephalitis are transmitted by mosquitoes. Outbreaks occur in damp climates during the summer, especially in coastal areas, including New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Florida, and Texas.

Club travels to Lubbock

The "53" Hyperion Club traveled to Lubbock for a field trip. Fifteen members toured the museum. Alvin Daves, manager and executive vice president, led the guided tour through the historically landscaped settings of more than 30 historic ranching structures, which have been relocated and restored as closely as possible to their original conditions.

These structures are there for the "greenbarn" to see how life really was, for the serious scholar to study or for the rancher to view and reminisce.

The group posed for a picture in front of the Victorian-style Barton House that was built in 1909 near Abernathy.

After the tour the group had lunch at the Lubbock Club, which is located on 14th floor of the First National Bank building.

The group also visited the Teysha Winery, which is owned by the Plain National Bank, for a guided tour of the modern West Texas Facility, which is the newest winery in West Texas.

Hostesses were Mrs. Harry Middleton, Mrs. Arlis Ratliff and Mrs. Louis Stallings.

The club meets the first Wednesday of each month.

Thimble history

Caroline Reed discussed the origins, use and history of thimbles at the Oct. 26 meeting of the City Extension Club.

Fine thimbles can be viewed in museums across the world. A golden thimble made by Paul Revere for his daughter is in the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and one used by Brigham Young to repair tents is in the Church of Latter-day Saints in Salt Lake City, Utah. A silver finger guard used to tap the first message sent 3,700 miles through the Atlantic cable from Ireland to Newfoundland in 1886 is in the London Science Museum. Thimbles made of gold, silver, and porcelain have been most treasured by collectors, but are made of other materials such as stone, copper, plated steel, wood, ivory, glass, jade, bronze, pigskin, and gutta-percha. Present day thimbles are also made of aluminum and plastic.

Opal Wooten displayed a collection acquired through her years as a homemaker, and other members told of their collections.

Ila Reese and Dolores Norred were guests. The next meeting will be a Thanksgiving dinner Nov. 23 at the home of Jamie Bennett. At this meeting, members are to bring gifts for the Big Spring State Hospital Christmas donation.

U.S. offensive likely to begin by air

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American-led offensive to drive Iraq out of Kuwait probably would begin with nighttime air strikes inside Iraq to sever Saddam Hussein's links to his huge occupying army, military planners and private analysts say.

Such a campaign, launched with the allied forces now arrayed against Iraq, would seek to exploit Iraq's weaknesses in air power and its apparent vulnerability in Kuwait to a seaborne assault and to naval bombardment from the Persian Gulf.

President Bush has said repeatedly in recent days that he is growing impatient with Saddam's continuing occupation of Kuwait, though he has not decided to resort to military force. He has stressed, however, that force remains an active option and that he will not permit the Iraqi army to stay indefinitely in Kuwait.

U.S. military officials won't discuss specific war plans, and they stress that Bush, for now at least, has not changed their mission: It remains the defense of Saudi Arabia and enforcement of United Nations economic sanctions against Iraq.

"Our training patterns have not changed in any manner" to suggest preparations for an offensive campaign, an Army official said Friday. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Military officials' recent comments make it clear they are not enthusiastic about taking the offensive against Iraq any time soon.

"You can do an offensive and you can win, but it won't be cheap."

Joshua Epstein, defense analyst

They would prefer to wait until more American and allied ground forces are in place in Saudi Arabia and more effort is made to find a peaceful solution.

A major reason for the reluctance is Iraq's apparent success in fortifying its defensive positions in Kuwait, where at least 200,000 Iraqi troops are dug in. They are supported by an estimated 150,000 elite Republican Guard troops along key resupply lines between Kuwait's northeastern border and the Iraqi city of Basra.

Iraq's defensive position in Kuwait is described by military officials as elaborate. It includes multiple layers of infantry and barriers such as mine fields, earthen mounds and anti-tank ditches. Behind these are mechanized units that can quickly reinforce the front-line infantry and cover its flanks. And behind these are mobile "ready reserve" units capable of counterattacking or blocking a move by Saudi-based ground forces to go around Kuwait.

Iraq also has an estimated 50,000 troops along its southern border west of Kuwait. The Pentagon disclosed Friday that "significant" Iraqi forces also are deployed on the border with Turkey, but that no buildup has been detected on the Syrian border.

If Bush ordered an attack any time soon, U.S. commanders in the field would have a wide array of firepower on which to draw, in combination with a variety of air, ground and naval forces deployed by Britain, France and about 20 other nations.

About 240,000 U.S. forces are now in the Persian Gulf area, and allied forces total more than 100,000. The Pentagon said it plans to send as many as 100,000 more troops, but it would be several weeks before they get there and get ready.

Joshua Epstein, a defense analyst at the Brookings Institution, a Washington think tank, said there is little doubt that American forces now in Saudi Arabia could win a fight for Kuwait. The only doubt is whether the cost would be acceptable.

"You can do an offensive and you can win, but it won't be cheap," Epstein said, adding that estimates of probable American deaths range beyond 10,000.

In the opening phase of a U.S.-led attack, the U.S. Air Force's radar-evading F-117 Stealth fighter bombers would play a key role, carrying out simultaneous attacks on important military targets inside Iraq. These targets probably would include command and communications centers that are vital to Iraq's ability to respond quickly and to coordinate a counteroffensive.

In combination with air attacks, U.S. Marines would be expected to attempt a seaborne assault on Kuwait City. A contingent of about 11,000 Marines afloat in the gulf are specially trained in amphibious landings, forced entry and urban warfare. They currently are taking part in an amphibious landing exercise on a beach in Oman.

About another 33,000 Marines are defending coastal routes in northeastern Saudi Arabia.

Jack Merritt, a retired Army general and now president of the private Association of the U.S. Army, said a key to routing the Iraqis from Kuwait would be cutting them off from resupplies and from the Iraqi leadership in Baghdad.

"Psychology is on our side in this," he said, adding that "The moment they feel they really have been cut off" the Iraqi troops in Kuwait lose their resolve.

In an actual invasion, the Marine amphibious assault force would reach the beaches at Kuwait City by landing craft, small boat or helicopter under the cover of an aerial assault from Harrier jump jet fighters and a naval barrage. Among the U.S. warships in the gulf is the USS Wisconsin armed with 16-guns and Tomahawk cruise missiles.

Perhaps the costliest phase of a U.S.-led attack on Kuwait would be the Army's effort to oust the Iraqis from their hardened positions.

Heart surgery fund established

A fund has been established for 3-year-old Seth Williamson at the Bank of the West in San Angelo to help cover the cost of Seth's open heart surgery, scheduled for December 11. Amy Williamson, Seth's aunt, said the surgery will cost the family at least $24,000, and due to further complications, there may be more heart surgeries necessary for Seth. He suffers from atrial septum disorder, and the physicians at the University Health Science Center in San Antonio have also discovered heart valve malformations that must be corrected surgically.

SETH WILLIAMSON

Seth was born in Big Spring, and his aunt said the family home is still here. Seth is the great-grandson of Hattie Williamson of Big Spring.

"Seth is very bright and vibrant, just like any other little boy, except he gets very tired. He goes out to play, and then comes in and takes a three-hour nap," she said.

Donations can be made to Seth Williamson Fund, Bank of the West, P.O. Box 3388, San Angelo, Texas, 76902. The family can be contacted at 915-944-0865.

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incidents:

• Two rifles and a shotgun were stolen from a guncase in the bedroom of a residence on Hilltop Road sometime during the past two weeks, it was reported. There was no known felony. The crime is a third degree felony.

• Vernon Jackson Rowe, 49, Hillside Trailer Park, was arrested on a warrant for revocation of a driving while intoxicated probation. He was released on a $1,000 bond.

Janca says progress will be worth the pain

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
 Staff Writer

Progress for the city of Big Spring, though painful, will be rewarding, Chamber-of-Commerce Executive Vice President Adolph Janca told members and guests at a community luncheon Thursday.

Janca used a story about artist Claude Monet to illustrate the point. Before his death, Monet apparently suffered a great deal of pain, and painting was very difficult for him. Someone asked him why, if working hurt him, he continued to do it.

"After the pain subsides, the beauty remains," Monet is said to have answered. Janca said the same will be true for development in Big Spring.

"It may hurt us, but in the end we're all going to benefit," he said. "The beauty will remain."

Janca said we as citizens need to be "positive about the way we listen, instead of positive about what we say."

The luncheon also featured the recognition of area citizens for their contributions.

Marie Hall, Myra Robinson and Dorothy Garrett were honored for their volunteer work with the United Way. The three were chosen "Volunteers of the Quarter" by agency directors.

Mel Prather was chosen "Man of the Year" by the Cultural Affairs Committee of the Chamber. Adolph Labbe, representing the committee, said Prather was honored for his work as founder of the Arts and Crafts Show in Big Spring.

Prather said the show has grown since it was created 14 years ago locally. Since then, it has sold out every year, he said.

"I want to add that the show wouldn't have grown if it weren't for the people of Big Spring," he said. "If we didn't have the support we wouldn't have the show."

Also recognized at the meeting were new members of the Chamber. During a brief membership drive recently, 40 local businesses joined the group.

Cliff Attaway, chairman of the Chamber's Business Committee, outlined a series of workshops to be offered for local business owners. The courses were developed as a result of the recent public forum "Not Shopping Big Spring? Tell Us Why."

The luncheon program ended with entertainment by local favorite Jody Nix, who will be guest artist with the Big Spring Symphony Saturday. He "fiddled" a portion of "Orange Blossom Special" for the appreciative crowd.

Preparing for poppy sale

Helen Hill, right, hospital representative for the American Legion Auxiliary at the Veteran's Administration Hospital, and Jean Graham, left, poppy chairperson, prepare for the annual American Legion Poppy Sales, scheduled for all day Saturday, Nov. 10. Sites for donations will be Walmart, the post office, Newsom's IGA, the Big Spring Mall and Highland Mall. "We say there's no charge for the poppies, just whatever you want to donate," explained Hill. Donations for the crepe paper poppies, made by disabled veterans, benefit veterans in the hospital.

Philosopher wants law to define beginning of life

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — A philosopher grappling with the morality of abortion says the beginning of protected human life should be defined in terms similar to those used in declaring a person brain-dead.

The concept is not entirely new, but making it law would be, Hans-Martin Sass of the Kennedy Institute of Ethics in Washington told colleagues at a conference here this week.

His so-called Uniform Determination of Life Protection Act would permit abortion until the 70th day after conception, when some normal brain functions begin, Sass said. After the 70th day the fetus would be a protected human life.

Brain-death is the legally recognized termination of human life, defined by cessation of brain activity. Establishing the 10-week timetable for fetuses would mark the earliest onset of fetal brain development, or brain-life, Sass said.

"The absence of brain-specific cells in early embryonal development could be understood as the absence of brain-life," Sass said. Under those conditions, "abortion of inanimate life must be legally protected."

Sass is a senior research fellow at the Kennedy Institute and professor of philosophy at Georgetown University. He also is co-director of the Center for Medical Ethics in Bocuim, Germany.

He proposed the act at a University of Iowa symposium that ended Wednesday. About 60 medical, ethics and legal experts from 15 countries attended the four-day symposium examining the question of when life actually begins.

"In strong contrast to the consensus regarding the end of life, we do not have a uniform understanding regarding the beginning of human life, which has to be morally recognized and legally protected," Sass said.

"For strong moral, as well as cultural, legal and political reasons, I argue for a Uniform Determination of Life Protection Act."

People would be free to use contraception or have an abortion within the 70-day timeframe. Abortions are now legal in the United States through the sixth month of pregnancy, or later if the woman's health is threatened.

Police beat

The Big Spring Police Department reported the following incidents:

• The theft of a flatbed trailer was reported in the 900 block of North Lamesa.

• An injury accident occurred at the intersection of North Owens and NE 12th streets. Tina Holmes Flentge, 32, 1614 Settles Street, was transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center by private vehicle after her car was struck by that of Lyn Mason Ray, 48, Route 2 Box 84A. Flentge was cited for failure to yield right of way.

• A stereo was reported stolen from a home in the 1600 block of Gregg Street. Its value is reportedly $500.

• Graffiti on the wall of a business in the 200 block of South

Johnson Street caused an estimated $100 worth of damage.

• Michael Anderson, 29, 3708 Hamilton Avenue, was arrested on a class A assault warrant.

• Bomb threats were reported at two businesses in Highland Mall.

• Daphne Crane, 26, 1408 Mesquite Street, and a passenger were hospitalized briefly Wednesday evening after their vehicle was struck by that of Lila Ann Harrison, 17, 1308 Baylor Boulevard, at the intersection of FM 700 and Wasson Road. Harrison was cited for failure to yield right of way.

• Kenneth Albert Harris, 23, address refused, was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated, fleeing from a peace officer and failure to display driver's license.

• Henry Trevino Franco, 26, 1500 Mesa Avenue, arrested Tuesday for driving while license suspended, was released with no charges against him.

Bennett resigns from anti-drug post

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Bennett, stepping down today as President Bush's anti-drug abuse chief, said his job was made harder because Mayor Marion Barry was a crack cocaine user.

Bennett said that as head of the Office of National Drug Control Strategy, he devoted special attention and resources to the District of Columbia not to make it a showcase, but because it was "a basket case."

Bennett was asked how Barry's cocaine problems — which resulted in a conviction for cocaine possession and a six-month prison sentence — affected the Bush administration's efforts on drugs.

"Did the fact that the mayor used cocaine and crack make it easier or harder? It made it harder," he said. "You got a real serious problem when the chief executive officer of the city that has a drug problem is taking crack. . . I didn't know it at the time. But I suspected that his interest in the topic was different from mine, and we were going to get less than 100 percent cooperation."

He said, however, he did not "find any hard evidence that would have held up in a court of law" about Barry's drug use.

"I did not think he was part of the solution. He's part of the problem," said Bennett, who was criticized in some quarters for bringing the federal anti-drug effort into Washington, D.C., without much consultation of city officials.

Bennett gave a vote of confidence to the city's mayor elect, Sharon Pratt Dixon, a Democrat who beat the Republican Bush supporter, Maurice Turner.

WILLIAM BENNETT

Bennett also said that a frequent critic of his drug policy, Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, "is a gas bag. He has nothing to do with drug policy."

President Bush, accepting Bennett's resignation, saying he had done a "superb job for this country" in fighting the war against drugs.

Asked if he had anyone in mind to replace Bennett or Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole, who resigned two weeks ago, Bush said, "Not yet. I haven't even begun to sit down seriously with lists."

Bennett said that he is leaving government to become a fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank.

As to speculation he might seek public office, the outspoken conservative said, "Not any time soon." With his trademark feistiness, Bennett said he wanted to dispel rumors he was leaving out of unhappiness.

"So far I have read that I am bored, restive, restless, tired, unhappy, moping about lack of media attention, sulking about not being in the Cabinet, in a snit with John Sununu, all sorts of things . . . and being stampeded out of town."

Bennett said that "there are people who don't like me," but that "I'm not the stampeded out of town type."

Bennett was asked about reports of threats against his life during the time he headed the government's efforts against drug kingpins.

"There's threats. They have been there since the beginning of this job," he said. But he brushed off that aspect as a factor in his decision to leave.

He said that when he traveled to Alaska on an anti-drug mission, he received "some anonymous threats . . . from some pot heads that they were going to blow me up." But the effort misfired, he said, because "one of the notices from the pothead societies said come confront Bennett," but it was distributed after he already had left the state.

Bennett plans to complete a book contract that he had agreed to before he took the anti-drug job, friends said. The book deal was to focus on his experiences as education secretary under President Reagan, but Bennett also is interested in writing about the drug war, one source said.

He is expected also to speak on the lecture circuit.

Iraq, and all the allies of the American forces in Saudi Arabia will be our target."

Also today, Iraq's army newspaper and U.S. officials said, Saddam Hussein has replaced his military chief of staff with the head of the elite Republican Guards. Western analysts said the move could indicate dissension within the military over Saddam's decision to invade Kuwait and annex it despite condemnation by the West and the deployment of the multinational force.

It was the second replacement of a high-level Iraqi official in two weeks and also pointed to a tightening of Saddam's inner circle.

Iraq's army newspaper Al-Qadisiya today disclosed in an article about a graduation ceremony that Gen. Hussein Rashid, head of the Revolutionary Guards, is the new chief of staff. It did not say when he was named, or what happened to Gen. Nizar Al-Khazraji, chief of staff since 1985. The change of personnel was confirmed by officials in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Saddam regularly purges those he perceives as a threat, and the Republican Guards are considered Saddam's best troops.

But one London-based analyst called the firing, "very ominous."

"Khazraji's dismissal now is indicative of some opposition to Saddam within the military, who after all may have to take on the multinational force," said the analyst, Hans-Heino Kopietz. He works with Control Risks, an international security firm.

The U.S. officials who confirmed Khazraji's dismissal said he was replaced because he had objected to Saddam's decision to invade Kuwait on Aug. 2. Khazraji has been made a special military adviser to Saddam.

In Washington, a Pentagon source said late Wednesday that the Bush administration has decided to send additional armored divisions to Saudi Arabia soon.

Steers seeking district crown

Super Bowl play Saturday

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

It's that time of the season. The best teams in the Crossroads Little Football League will get together for Super Bowl Saturday at Bulldog Stadium in Coahoma.

There will be four games played, two each in Division I and Division II.

Division I is for third and fourth graders, and Division II is for fifth and sixth graders.

Squaring off at a high noon in the Division I consolation game will be the Steers against the Oilers. This will be followed by the Division II consolation game between the Buffaloes and Cowboys, starting at 2 p.m.

The game for all the marbles follow.

At 4 p.m., the Division I championship game pits the undefeated Buffaloes against the Bears. In the semifinals the Buffaloes barely pulled one out, nipping the Steers 30-28. In their only meeting against the Bears, the Buffs won 8-6.

The 6 p.m. Division II championship game pits the Bulldogs against the Longhorns. The two teams have played twice, and the unbeaten Bulldogs pulled off narrow wins.

The Big Spring Steers will try to be King of the Mountain again when they travel to Andrews Friday to take on the Mustangs at Mustang Bowl.

Steers coach David Thompson is calling it the biggest game of the season — and rightly so. If the Steers win they will garner their second consecutive district crown. If they lose, they could very well be locked in a three-way tie with Andrews and Sweetwater. All would have one district loss.

Big Spring and Andrews have one game left after this one. Sweetwater finishes its season Friday against Fort Stockton.

The teams have taken different routes to get to this game. Big Spring has dominated all of its district opponents, not allowing a team 100 yards of offense. Andrews lost to Sweetwater 21-17, beat Fort

DAVID RISNER

Stockton 15-2, Pecos 26-25 and Monahans 34-26.

So far this season the Mustangs have depended on a big offensive line that averages 217 pounds per man. Their Wishbone offense is led by senior quarterback Kevin Nichols (5-6, 145). Nichols took over for starting quarterback Mike Gonzales, who suffered ligament damage in his knee early in the season. Gonzales did play a little against Monahans last week.

Another strong point for the Mustangs have been their kicking game. For instance, in the win over Pecos, they got a 57-yard field goal from Eric Perucca and a 58-yard kickoff return by Zach Miller.

Last week against Monahans, the Mustangs blocked two punts and got an 88-yard punt return from Oscar Bueno.

"The play of our kicking game is what has won the last two games for us," said Andrews coach W.T.

Stapler. "Last week against Monahans we jumped out to a 34-13 lead, and then we turned it over twice, and they scored. We just kind of hung on in that one."

Steers coach David Thompson is said he is impressed with this Andrews team. "They've got a good football team. They're big and physical and they've got a good kicking game," said Thompson.

"They run a 4-3 defense; they create a lot of static in the middle and let the linebackers run the gaps and make the play. We have to work real hard on our punting game. Half the time they (Andrews) go for the block."

The Andrews offense is strictly run-oriented. The Mustangs average six passes a game; last week they didn't attempt a pass against Monahans, prompting Steers defensive coordinator Dwight Butler to focus most of his

Dodgers make Strawberry richer

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets have the rest of the winter to figure out how Darryl Strawberry got away.

Frank Cashen and Al Harazin also have to decide how to replace the premier left-handed power hitter in baseball and the Mets' star attraction at home and on the road.

Strawberry's escape to the West Coast actually started in mid July, a couple of days after he played right field for the National League in the All-Star game at Wrigley Field.

The Mets broke off contract talks with Strawberry in Cincinnati, and when they started again after the season was over, it was just too late. Strawberry was already looking at new schools in LA for his children and Dodgers owner Peter O'Malley had already checked his savings account.

Strawberry will now be wearing Dodger Blue, thanks to plenty of Dodger green.

According to Strawberry's agent, Eric Goldschmidt, the outfielder is now the second highest paid player in baseball. He reportedly will receive $4 million a year. The highest is Oakland's Jose Canseco, who signed a $23.5 million five-year deal during the summer, including one year for $5 million.

The break with the Mets started when Strawberry said he was insulted when Cashen said the outfielder wasn't a $5 million player. The Mets offered $9.2 million for 3 years.

Coming into the season, the Mets knew Strawberry was eligible for free agency after the season. They could have had him for less than $4 million a year before the start of the year or in early May.

But Cashen asked Strawberry to go out and prove he was a "$3 million player."

Strawberry went out and had the best season of his career, hitting .277 with 37 home runs and a club-record 108 RBIs.

"There were many times during the season the Mets had a chance to sign Darryl Strawberry," Goldschmidt said early this morn-

NEW YORK — Former New York Mets outfielder Darryl Strawberry fulfilled a "lifelong dream" by agreeing to a five year contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers late Wednesday.

ing. "I can look back at several times that he would have signed."

Now, Cashen will be remembered as the general manager who let Tom Seaver and Darryl Strawberry get away from the Shea Stadium. He and Strawberry parted on a sour note after bringing the Mets a World Series title in 1986.

In his eight years with the Mets, Strawberry hit 252 homers and drove in 733 runs. Despite some runs-ins with management and teammates now and then, he was the Straw that stirred the Mets on and off the field.

"Darryl Strawberry is a rare commodity," his agent said. "After so many years in New York, he wanted to give them a chance. But he wanted what he deserved."

The Mets weren't sure what Strawberry deserved and the offer presented by Harazin last week just wasn't good enough.

"I didn't talk to Frank Cashen in the latest negotiations," Goldschmidt said. "I met with Al last week and that was the last time we talked."

The Mets have stayed away from the free agent market, but may now have to change their strategy. Trouble is, there's nobody out there to replace Darryl Strawberry.

Toronto's George Bell is available, but he doesn't figure into Cashen's idea of a team player.

"We're trying to give our fans a championship team," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said. "Having a player of Darryl Strawberry's ability will help us to do that."

Strawberry, a Los Angeles native, made it known before the start of the 1988 playoffs that he wanted to return home someday. Today, he got his wish.

On Monday night, Strawberry got into the LA scene by attending the game between the Portland Trail Blazers and Los Angeles Lakers. It was just a little warmup for the big Hollywood production that was to come.

Oddly, Strawberry has never hit well at Dodger Stadium. He has only five home runs and 21 RBIs lifetime in his hometown.

Alomar American League's best rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — A lot of big things were predicted for Sandy Alomar Jr. long before he was in the big leagues.

After all, Alomar was a two-time minor league player of the year. His father and brother were major leaguers. He had been traded for one of baseball's top stars. And, he was breaking in as a catcher, the toughest position for a rookie.

But if Alomar felt any pressure, it didn't show. Instead, all he showed was production for the Cleveland Indians.

For turning promise into prosperity, Alomar was the unanimous choice Wednesday as the American League rookie of the year. He joined Mark McGwire (1987) and Carlton Fisk (1972) as the only major leaguers to be unanimous selections since the rookie award was first presented in 1947.

"You only get one chance to get this. To get it unanimously is much better," Alomar said from Japan, where a major league all-star team is traveling.

Alomar, 24, hit .290 with 26 doubles, nine home runs and 66 RBIs in 132 games. Along the way, he became the first rookie catcher to start an All-Star game.

Thurman Munson, Fisk and Alomar are the lone catchers to win the AL rookie award. Alomar was the fourth Indian to receive the honor, along with Herb Score, Chris Chambliss and Joe Charbonneau.

Alomar got all 28 first-place

SANDY ALOMAR JR. votes for a total of 140 points. Two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in each AL city voted.

Kevin Maas, who hit 21 home runs for the New York Yankees, received 14 second-place votes and had 47 points and Kansas City pitcher Kevin Appier was third with 31 points.

On opening day, it was expected to be a big year for two rookie catchers — Alomar and Todd Zeile.

While Alomar succeeded, Zeile succumbed to the trouble that befalls many first-year major leaguers and wound up batting only .244 and playing third base for St. Louis.

That Alomar did so well did not surprise a lot of people in baseball. A lot of them, including Alomar, just wondered when he would get a chance to play.

Despite his accomplishments in the minors, Alomar was backed up in San Diego's system because the Padres already had All-Star catcher Benito Santiago. After more than a year of trade rumors, San Diego finally made a deal last December, sending Alomar, Carlos Baerga and Chris James to Cleveland for Joe Carter.

Carter was the Indians' best player and had averaged 31 home runs and 108 RBIs for four seasons. But he was eligible for free agency at the end of the 1990 season and had said he would not return to Cleveland. So Alomar was separated from his brother Roberto, San Diego's second baseman, and his father Sandy Jr., a coach for the Padres.

"Everybody had their eye on me," Alomar said. "I was traded for Joe Carter, so everything was going to be a bit harder."

Alomar, however, was ready. "I felt more prepared this year," he said. "I didn't want to go back. I wanted to go forward."

Alomar had played a total of eight games for the Padres in late-season callups the last two years.

Landry won't go into Ring of Honor just yet

IRVING (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry says he will be unable to accept Cowboys owner Jerry Jones' invitation to be inducted into the Ring of Honor this season because he's going to be out of town during the four remaining home games for the National Football League team.

"I wouldn't have a chance this year with my schedule," Landry said Wednesday. He said he has commitments that will keep him out of town until the remaining four games have been played.

Landry said he did not know whether he would accept future invitations.

After learning of Landry's comments, the man who fired Landry after he bought the Cowboys in 1989, said the invitation was intended this season ohnly and he "hadn't thought" about an invitation next year.

"In regard to this year, I wish the schedule would have allowed him for our fans to honor him, not only for the Ring of Honor, but for his great honor in the (Pro Football) Hall of Fame," Jones said. "If he is still contemplating in the future, we'll just have to address that next year. I haven't thought about next year."

Jones wrote Landry on Oct. 3, asking him to join the Ring of Honor. Landry has never responded to the letter, Jones said.

The Ring of Honor contains the names of some of the team's greatest players. Players who have been honored have their names written in a special area along the lower portion of the upper deck at Texas Stadium.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys activated offensive lineman Jeff Zimmerman from injured reserve and placed fullback Alonzo Highsmith on injured reserve at his request.

Also Wednesday, the team released defensive tackle Mitch Willis.

Highsmith, who joined the team in a trade with Houston the first week of the season, underwent arthroscopic knee surgery three times in the off-season and does not feel he has fully recovered, the team said.

He is expected to return for the final three games.

Zimmerman spend nine weeks on injured reserve recovering from a knee injury suffered in preseason. He's been practicing with the team since Oct. 1.

In other moves, the Cowboys added defensive back Michael Brooks and tight end Rich Gicewicz to their practice squad.

Lady Wolves ousted from playoffs

SAN ANGELO — The Colorado City Lady Wolves made a quick exit from the state volleyball playoffs, losing to Lake Travis here in bi-district volleyball action.

Lake Travis won the match 15-11, 15-6. Jennifer Munoz was top scorer for Colorado City, winner of District 6-3A. Colorado City finishes the season with a 10-8 record.

Phoenix could lose 1993 Super Bowl

NEW YORK (AP) — NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue recommended that the 1993 Super Bowl be moved out of Phoenix after Arizona voters rejected a proposal to make a holiday of Martin Luther King's birthday.

"I do not believe that playing Super Bowl XXVII in Arizona is in the best interests of the National Football League," Tagliabue said after the Arizona electorate rejected by 15,000 votes of nearly 1 million cast a proposal to make a holiday of the slain civil rights leader's birthday.

While Tagliabue's statement doesn't make the move official, it's expected that most if not all of the 28 NFL teams will go along with his recommendation. A total of 21 votes are necessary to move the game, which will probably go to San Diego, Los Angeles or San Francisco, the other cities that bid for it.

Peoples leads Kapalua by one

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — David Peoples shot an 8-under-par 63 to take a one-stroke lead over Ben Crenshaw after the first round of the Kapalua International on the island of Maui.

Bob Gilder and Jim Gallagher were two back after rounds of 65 on the 6,351-yard, par-71 Resort's Bay Course. Bill Glasson and Ted Schulz were at 66.

Younger McEnroe moves to quarter

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — Seventh-seeded Jakob Hlasek defeated Gary Muller 7-5, 7-5 and Patrick McEnroe beat eighth-seeded Scott Davis 7-5, 3-6, 6-4 to advance to the quarterfinals of the Wembley indoor tournament.

Ex-Syracuse player has to do time

CINCINNATI (AP) — Former Syracuse basketball player Derek Brower was ordered to spend six months in federal prison for admitting he traveled interstate to promote the distribution of cocaine.

U.S. District Judge Herman Weber ordered Brower to report to a designated prison by noon Nov. 28.

Brower was sentenced to 2-to-3 years of supervised release to be served after his prison term. The judge also ordered Brower to submit to random urine tests to ensure that he is not using drugs, ordered him to perform 500 hours of community service and said he may never possess a firearm again as a convicted federal felon.

Baby-face B.J. sparks Bulls to victory

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

With Michael Jordan flu-ridden, the Chicago Bulls didn't figure to get over an early-season illness of their own. Then along came B.J. Armstrong, and they got well in a hurry.

Armstrong came off the bench to score 10 of his 14 points during a decisive 18-8 second-half surge Wednesday night, enabling the Bulls to avoid their first 0-4 start in 23 years with a 96-91 victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

"I get a lot of flak from the guys," said Armstrong, whose slight build and boyish face belie his status as a second-year pro. "They're always teasing me."

"When I go out to a bar, I always get carded. I guess that when I'm 40 I'll appreciate looking young."

The Bulls appreciated his performance, badly needed on a night when Jordan scored just 17 points — about half his career average.

"He came through," Jordan said. "We needed that. We needed to win just to stop the bleeding."

After losing their opener by eight points, the Bulls lost their next two games by one and two. They won Wednesday night by getting solid production from Jordan's supporting cast and by adjusting well to the Timberwolves' slower pace.

The Bulls, who got 17 points and 10 rebounds from Horace Grant, also took care of the boards, outrebounding Minnesota 41-29.

But it was the play of Armstrong that made the big difference and brought a feeling of relief to Jackson.

Armstrong made two free throws with four-tenths of a second to go in the third period to put the Bulls ahead for good. He then opened the fourth quarter with a 20-foot jumper and later added two free throws, a 15-footer and a 20-footer as Chicago took an 86-77 lead.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Minnesota Timberwolves Sam Mitchell (42) tries to take the ball away from Chicago Bulls Cliff Levingston during second quarter action of the NBA game Wednesday night. Minnesota's Tony Campbell moves in to get into the play.

Tony Campbell led the Timberwolves with 26 points.

Mavericks 104, 76ers 101

Roy Tarpley scored 26 points and reserve forwards Herb Williams and Alex English combined for 18 in the fourth period for Dallas.

Two free throws by Derek Harper gave the Mavericks a 104-99 lead with 12 seconds left, but Johnny Dawkins made a layup with three seconds remaining.

Charles Barkley intercepted the inbound pass deep in the corner, but his 3-point shot at the buzzer bounced off the rim as the 76ers lost for the first time in three games this season.

Williams had 19 points, while English and Harper added 18 each for Dallas. Williams and English had nine points each in the final quarter. Dawkins finished with 25 points and Barkley 23 for Philadelphia.

Cavaliers 100, Hornets 89

Larry Nance scored eight of his 21 points in the fourth quarter and Cleveland held off a late rally by Charlotte.

The Hornets shot 71 percent from the floor in the first quarter and led by as many as 12 points early in the second before missing 13 straight shots, letting Cleveland back in it. The Cavaliers ran off 15 consecutive points, capped by Craig Ehlo's 3-pointer, for a 42-39 advantage, and they led 46-45 at the half.

Cleveland took control with a 10-point run in the third period, including four each from Brad Daugherty and Gerald Paddio, and eventually expanded the lead to 82-62 on Daugherty's layup early in the fourth.

Daugherty finished with 21 points and Mark Price had 17 for Cleveland. Rex Chapman scored 17 points and Armon Gilliam had 15 for Charlotte.

Spurs 161, Nuggets 153

David Robinson scored a career-high 43 points and Terry Cummings added 31 as hot-shooting San Antonio beat defenseless Denver.

Sean Elliott also had a career-best 29 points and Reggie Williams 22 for the Spurs (2-0), who shot 63 percent from the field. Denver shot 57 percent.

Denver (0-4), which set an NBA record with 90 first-half points, was led by Orlando Woolridge with 37 points. Walter Davis added 32 points and Todd Lichti 29.

No time to waste; bowl rush has begun

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The college football bowls, which traditionally fill their holiday stockings well in advance of the official NCAA deadline, have done their 1990 Christmas shopping earlier than usual.

More than two weeks before the Nov. 24 invitation date, most of the bowls apparently have their teams signed, sealed and all but delivered — pending the outcome of some key remaining games.

"It's the earliest it's ever been done," said Jim Brock, executive vice president of the Cotton Bowl. "I'm a little disappointed that people are panicking and I'm really disappointed that people are calling press conferences."

Brock apparently was referring to the John Hancock Bowl's disclosure earlier this week that it had lined up Southern California and Michigan State.

"You snooze, you lose," was the retort from a Hancock Bowl official, who laid some of the blame for early invitations on the conferences.

"The conferences have gotten to where they determine the bowls they want to go to, get the bowls together and close a three-way deal," he said. "It makes it tough when you're fighting a league that wants this bowl, this bowl and this bowl. Before, you used to deal with the school and do your own deal."

The earliest permissible invitation date for years has been the Saturday after the third Tuesday in November, this year Nov. 24. An NCAA subcommittee has recommended doing away with the invitation date altogether next year.

"Open warfare," one bowl official called that idea.

The current scenario has No. 1 Notre Dame bound for the Orange Bowl if it beats No. 9 Tennessee on Saturday.

Missouri hoop program punished

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP)

Missouri was handed a two-year basketball probation today, banned from the NCAA tournament this season and given several recruiting and scholarship sanctions.

In its announcement, the NCAA said Missouri was guilty of "major violations" between 1985 and 1989 in regard to recruiting, benefits for athletes and academic irregularities.

In addition to the postseason ban for the 1990-91 season, Missouri cannot provide expense-paid recruiting visits during 1991; only one member of the coaching staff can engage in off-campus recruiting and evaluation for 1991, and the school can give only one basketball scholarship during the 1991-92 academic year and no more than two in 1992-93.

Chuck Smrt, NCAA director of enforcement, said the penalties were lightened because Missouri had no history of NCAA violations and accepted responsibility for violations that were uncovered.

"As a result of these mitigating circumstances, the committee waived certain penalties it was considering, including prohibiting the team from live television appearances and keeping all members of the coaching staff out of recruiting next year," Smrt said at a news conference at the NCAA headquarters.

The probe began almost two years ago into the basketball program of Norm Stewart, who has a 552-273 collegiate record in 29 years and 455-231 record in 23 seasons at Missouri. He is the winningest Big Eight Conference basketball coach with 197 victories.

The investigation began in February 1989 after a tape recorded conversation became public between Sundvold and the mother of former Missouri player P.J. Mays.

The next day, Stewart collapsed on the team plane en route to Oklahoma for a Big Eight Conference game. He missed the rest of the season while undergoing treatment for ulcers and colon cancer and Daly took over the team, directing it to victories in the first two rounds of the NCAA tournament.

Sundvold was suspended for three months with pay in February 1989.

Missouri, ranked No. 1 for four weeks last season, had never been in trouble with the NCAA.

The NCAA said the most serious violations involved admitting and giving scholarship aid to an athlete who did not meet all academic requirements.

"Even when notified by letter that the student-athlete was ineligible by university rules, the men's basketball staff ignored the letter and permitted him to practice until once again being directly confronted with his ineligibility," the NCAA said.

Steers

allowing opponents 128 yards per game, and Andrews is allowing the opposition 206 yards per game.

Stapler said that left tackle Perucca has been his most consistent player.

Last week against Pecos, tailback Jermiane Miller had his second 200-yard game of the season. Behind the fine blocking of left tackle David Risner and right guard Santos Martinez, the big senior lugged the ball 39 times for 200 yards. Miller needs 73 yards to go reach 1,000. Leading the way on defense was end Frank Garza, and linebackers Felipe Saiz and Richard Krissen.

Stapler says he's thoroughly impressed with the Steers. "Just looking at the stats, there's no doubt Big Spring is definitely the best team in the district," he said.

"They've got a defense that allowing teams about 73 yards in district, and offensively, they've got Mayfield and Miller, and their quarterback (Gerald Cobos) does a good job. The middle linebacker (Saiz) is one of the best I've seen since I've been in this district.

"We don't throw the ball much, but I feel we've got to throw it against them and play just about a perfect game to win."

Thompson and Butler think it's going to match Andrews' running power against Big Spring's defensive power.

"I think they're going to try to run over us; send those little backs behind those big linemen," said Thompson.

Does Butler feel good about facing a running team, when stopping the run has been his defense's strong point? "If they weren't so powerful I'd feel better," he said. "This one's going to be David against Goliath, and we're definitely not Goliath."

tract talks in July, Strawberry slumped and later said he was insulted by the Mets' offer and hurt by Cashen.

"They played with Darryl's head," infielder Howard Johnson said. "He was carrying us to the playoffs and they hurt him."

Names in the news

2 Live Crew
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Luther Campbell of the rap group 2 Live Crew says people should spend more time worrying about homelessness and hunger and less time trying to prove the lyrics to his songs are obscene.
 "We have an outrageous amount of people sleeping in the streets and without anything to eat, but we find rappers more important," Campbell wrote in an essay in Monday's Los Angeles Times.
 Campbell and fellow 2 Live Crew members Mark "Brother Marcus" Ross and Chris "Fresh Kid Ice" Wongwon were acquitted in CAMPBELL Florida last month of obscenity for performing songs from their "As Nasty as They Wanna Be" album. They could have been jailed for up to a year.

WINFREY "Our environment is slowly being pulled apart, and we put people in jail for a bunch of words."

Campbell wrote, "Sometimes I wonder what starving people in Ethiopia would think about the money we've wasted on taking this to court."

Battle of the bulge
 CHICAGO (AP) — Oprah Winfrey has put back on quite a few of the 67 pounds she shed during a crash diet two years ago, but she has no plans to starve herself thin again.
 "I'll never diet again," the talk show host told her audience Monday. "I certainly will never fast again."

DENNIS THE MENACE

"Boy, this is a scary one, Joey!... JOEY... JOEY?"

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"Pelicans could learn a lot from Greg Louganis."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Building up a partnership is the key to success. Next month is a wonderful time for cementing exciting new relationships. Recent investments begin paying off in early 1991. Sign important contracts next April. A class reunion in June could lead to happy romance. Large-scale business projects have the best chance of success early next fall. By November 1991, you should be sitting pretty.
CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: astronomer Carl Sagan, actor Lou Ferrigno, baseball pro Bob Gibson, golfer Tom Weiskopf.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): A sibling's or close friend's marital problems may occupy your thoughts. Avoid offering too much advice. You hear fascinating news about a former lover. Take things nice and easy.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A relative who drops in unexpectedly could be doing a bit of snooping for others. You are quite right to feel suspicious. Do not reveal anything if you can help it.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1990

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your sometimes astonishing creative abilities come to the fore. You may begin a novel, a painting or a poem — or just decorate your home with style. Put romance on hold for a while.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be careful when around strangers — especially older men. Teamwork is essential for rapid progress in business. What appears to be a disaster is a blessing in disguise! Take another look at your options.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone's jealousy could complicate things today. There is a chance that you could find yourself involved in a rather tricky triangle. Spend the evening with a good friend.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A small gamble may lead to a big return today. Be careful, however, not to risk money you cannot afford to lose. A burst of energy lets you accomplish a great deal this afternoon.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take time out to help a friend who is feeling confused or depressed. Put your own interests aside. Your strength and imagination are needed. A child's actions will delight you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Previous disappointments could lead you to ignore the virtues of someone who really cares for you. Be willing to listen. The past can be forgotten if you will only try. Open your heart.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Forming a partnership with an older person could be in your best interests. Discuss finances before launching a major venture. Immerse yourself in creative projects. Be affectionate.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you feel somewhat restless, see if you can start your weekend a little early. A shopping trip will pick up your spirits, and so will a weekend away. Visit old friends.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will do just fine in any kind of social situation today. Welcome a golden opportunity to mingle with new people. You could meet someone who reawakens your interest in romance.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The spotlight is on partnership and your ability to work well with others. You will not accomplish nearly as much on your own. Suggest a compromise if tempers flare. A good evening to relax at home.

FFA selling holiday fruit

Stanton High School FFA will be selling fruit for the holidays door-to-door around the community until Nov. 14, according to FFA member Wesley Hardin.

Future Farmers of America members will have oranges, apples and grapefruits available for anyone wanting to make holiday baskets for the Thanksgiving or Christmas holidays, according to Hardin.

Anyone wanting to purchase fruit for the upcoming holidays may contact any FFA member or leave a message at the high school office, 756-3326.

GHS selling poinsettias

LENORAH — Grady High School began selling poinsettias for the Christmas holidays Nov. 2 through Nov. 29.

The poinsettias will be selling for $10 each and will be delivered Dec. 3.

For more information contact 459-2445.

Chili and frito supper Friday

LENORAH — The Grady High School freshman class will sponsor a chili and frito pie supper before the Wellman-Grady football game Friday.

The supper will last from 5 p.m. until game time and continue after the contest.

Cost of the supper will be $3.50 per plate, with a 50 cent charge for dessert.

For more information call 459-2445.

McMorries talks at steer seminar

Tracy Himes, Agricultural teacher at Parkland Heights in Dallas announced that PHS sponsored a presentation on how to produce a champion steer.

Four project speakers from around the state presented a small theme on how to make a champion. All speakers spoke about how a steer should be raised, except one. Neal McMorries, a Tarzan resident and speaker at the project chose to use the theme and get his point across, according to Himes.

Mr. McMorries presented his talk on 'Champions don't look at the wrong end of the halter,' and kept the audience and the kids involved in the program at their seat. Neal got the point across that it's not how one raises the steer, but how one raises the youngster that will eventually raise the animal," Himes said.

He added, "His keynote made the difference in most of the parents mind in the audience and his delivery was very impressive."

Bufs, Wildcats end season

Gamebreakers

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
Staff Writer

The regular season ends Friday for both Martin County high school football teams, as the Stanton Buffalos host the Eldorado Eagles and the Grady Wildcats are at home against the Wellman Wildcats.

Game time for the Stanton-Eldorado game is 8 p.m., while the "Battle of the Wildcats" kicks off at 7:30 p.m.

Stanton

"We will have to play a super game if we want to beat Eldorado this Friday. They are big and powerful," Stanton head coach Dale Ruth said. "Their offensive line averages about 190 pounds per player. They have a lineman going about 270."

Rebuilding from last year's loss of talent, the 1-8 Bufs have had to rely on young players to finish out the season, according to Ruth.

"We moved up some players on the junior varsity squad because of the dwindling numbers that we had this year on our varsity team. Some of these players had to start playing without having any varsity experience, and we had numerous injuries," Ruth said.

Eldorado began the season with a 3-0 mark before the district race began. Its only win since then has come against Forsan, 23-15. Stanton also defeated Forsan last Friday 27-13, led by running back Garry Don Thompson, who rushed for 197 yards.

"We will have to play better than last week, even though we won," Ruth said. "They usually run a wing-T or split their back and move to the multiple-I formation on offense. On defense they come out with a split six. It will be a nip-and-tuck ballgame."

"The determining factor will be

Stanton High School junior wingback Jim Bob Kelly (42) is shown looking for running room in the Bufs' game against Wall earlier this season. Kelly and the rest of the Buffalos will end their season Friday when they host the Eldorado Eagles at 8 p.m. in Buffalo Stadium.

if we want to play football. We have the players to beat Eldorado; it will depend on whether we want it worse than they do."

Stanton's junior varsity will travel to Eldorado to take on the Eagles in its last game of the season. The JVs also have found the going tough this season, and are winless. Coach Rob Young had injuries that crippled his team early in the season.

Stanton Junior High will entertain Crane's seventh and eighth grade in Buffalo Stadium tonight. The seventh-grade game will start at 5 p.m., and the eighth grade will begin at 6:30 p.m.

SHS will hold an assembly today in the high school gymnasium and will feature basketball sensation Tanya Crevier. Crevier has travelled around the world with a message to students on thinking positive, while getting their attention with her basketball wizardry.

Grady

Going into Friday night's game against Wellman, Grady head coach Leandro Gonzales hopes that his team will avoid injuries, as the Wildcats are in great position to make the playoffs.

The second place Wildcats lost last week to Sands 38-14 and do not plan to take Wellman lightly.

"Wellman blocks extremely well. They have some good running backs and we better be mentally ready," Gonzales said.

If Grady wins — and Sands loses to Klondike — those three teams will be tied for first and a coin toss will decide the district's playoff representatives. If all things go as expected, Sands will be the champion of District 5-A, six man, while Grady will enter the playoffs as the second place team.

Tonight's junior varsity game has been cancelled, while Grady Junior High will travel to Wellman to take on the Wildcats.

Scouts begin food drive

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

Big Spring and Stanton Boy Scouts are planning a Good Turn Food Drive for the needy to help two local relief agencies.

Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts and Explorers of the Buffalo Trail Council are asking area residents to fill bags with canned goods and other non-perishable food items. The bags will be available in copies of Sunday's Big Spring Herald.

The Scouts will pick up filled bags Saturday, Nov. 17, national Good Turn Day. For one week beginning this Saturday, donors can also leave food items in boxes at local grocery stores. Any bag, box or container can be used to hold donations.

The food collected in Big Spring will be divided between the Northside Community Center and the Salvation Army, especially for holiday aid programs. Stanton's donations will benefit the Permian Basin Food Bank.

Scouting official Clem Jones said the food will meet a real need in the area.

"There's more of a need than we may realize," he said. "You go to any one of the (relief agencies) and you will realize just how much of a need there is."

He added that both agencies will be working to provide as much food as possible for the needy during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

"During the holidays they have an extra demand on their resources and on them," Jones said.

Donors who want their filled bags picked up should leave them on the front porch Saturday, Nov. 17 by 9:30 a.m., Jones said. Scouts and adult volunteers will come by to collect them.

Donations can also be taken to the central headquarters in Big Spring at The Box parking lot in the 2300 block of Gregg Street that day, Jones added.

Warren Wallace, district executive of the council, said

Putting 'spin control' on election results

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spin control is the order of the day, as partisan analysts massage the 1990 election returns to suit their conflicting political prisms.

Democratic Party chairman Ronald H. Brown and Republican Party spokesman Charles Black raced from one joint appearance to another Wednesday. Brown declared the 1990 outcome "a no-confidence vote" on President Bush, while Black found in the results "a good day for the Republican Party."

Control of congressional and legislative reapportionment was a special goal of both the 1990 campaign. In this area the Democrats looked like clear winners.

The conflicting views mean little to citizens of Arizona who are headed for a runoff vote perhaps months away to determine the identity of their next governor.

Republican Fife Symington held a lead of fewer than 5,000 votes over Democrat Terry Goddard in the race to succeed Rose Mofford as governor of Arizona. About 10,000 votes went to other candidates and the state constitution requires that if no candidate gets 50 percent of the votes, the top two meet again in a runoff.

Until the race is settled, Mofford will remain governor.

Also undecided are two House races in California, two of them involving Democratic incumbents, Doug Bosco and Jim Bates.

With all other races decided the 1990 outcome was this:

• Democrats gained one Senate seat to increase their majority to 56-44. All Democratic incumbents won; only one Republican lost. College professor Paul Wellstone unseated Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.

Baker seeks support for military strike against Iraq

(AP) Secretary of State James A. Baker III today sought Soviet support for a U.N. resolution authorizing military action against Iraq. Baghdad said it would strike back at all U.S.-allied forces on Saudi soil if the Americans attack.

Also today, Iraq's army newspaper and U.S. officials said Saddam Hussein has replaced his military chief of staff with the head of the elite Republican Guards. Western analysts said the move could indicate dissension within the military over Saddam's decision to invade Kuwait and annex it despite condemnation by the West and the deployment of the multinational force.

It was the second replacement of a high-level Iraqi official in two weeks and also pointed to a tightening of Saddam's inner circle.

At the United Nations, diplomats said on Wednesday that the United States has readied a Security Council resolution that would authorize the use of military force to drive Iraq from Kuwait.

If such a measure were adopted, it would be the first time the U.N. authorized a joint military command. During the Korean War, it authorized the United States to command the U.N. forces repelling North Korea's invasion.

The text has not yet been circulated because Baker is trying to line up support for it, said the diplomats, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In Moscow, Baker was to meet today with President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said it would be undesirable to use force to liberate Kuwait, which Iraq seized on Aug. 2 and later annexed.

But Shevardnadze did not rule out the use of force. The Soviets have said they would want U.N. endorsement of any military move against Iraq.

The U.N.-ordered embargo on trade with Iraq has failed to pressure Saddam into relinquishing the emirate, and the patience of U.S. and British officials appears to be running short.

On Wednesday, in her strongest statement yet, Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said "time is running out" for a peaceful solution.

But Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak said in an interview with The New York Times today that the multinational force massed in Saudi Arabia to counter Iraq should give the U.N. sanctions "at least two to three more months." About 14,000 Egyptians are in the multinational force.

Baghdad's information minister, Latif Nassayif Jassim, said today that Iraq will target all the multinational forces in Saudi Arabia if U.S. troops initiate an attack from Saudi soil, the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

Jassim, reacting to new Saudi-U.S. agreement on commanding the joint military forces, said: "We will retaliate on any American aggression against Iraq, and all the allies of the American forces in Saudi Arabia will be our target."

Iraq's army newspaper Al-Qadisiya today disclosed in an article about a graduation ceremony that Gen. Hussein Rashid, head of the Revolutionary Guards, is the new chief of staff. It did not say when he was named, or what happened to Gen. Nizar Al-Khazraji, chief of staff since 1985. The change of personnel was confirmed by officials in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Saddam regularly purges those he perceives as a threat, and the Republican Guards are considered Saddam's best troops.

But one London-based analyst called the firing, "very ominous."

pick-ups will continue until about 3 p.m. Donors whose bags are not collected can call 263-3752, give their address, and the bag will be picked up.

Residents of areas not within the city limits can bring their donations into town, as Scouts will only cover city streets, Wallace said.

Jones said the project, part of the national Good Turn project, is beneficial to the youth members of the council.

"It helps Scouts realize that there are people less fortunate that they are," he said, adding that they do a variety of social service, most on an individual basis, throughout the year.

The project, in its third year, will probably be continued as it has been successful, Jones said. The number of food items donated has increased each year, he said.

"We're hoping for an increase this year," he said. "I want to encourage everyone to put as much as they can in those bags."

He said donors can hang the bag on a doorknob or leave it on the porch. He emphasized that bags should be out by 9:30 a.m. on pick-up day.

Siblings fare well at county 4-H food show

By KATHRYN BURCH
For the Herald

The Martin County 4-H Food Show was held Saturday at Cap Rock Auditorium, and many of this year's winners came in sibling pairs: Belinda and Amanda Riley, Shanna and Sherra Wells, David and Shauna Butler.

Other first place winners were Stephanie Wood, Jody Brooks, and Tarah Schuelke. These 4-Hers will go on to district competition Dec. 1 in McCamey.

Competition included a personal interview, preparation of a nutritious dish, a day's menu selection, and a project record which records learning experiences, leadership and community service projects.

Shauna Butler won first place in Senior Main Dish. She made Chicken Spaghetti. It provides an excellent source of protein and niacin. Shauna is the granddaughter of Charles and Betty Butler.

In the Intermediate division, for youths 6th grade through 13 years of age, there were four winners. Stephanie Wood was a first place winner in the Breads and Cereals division. She made Poppy Seed Bread which is a good source of thiamin. She is the 6th grade daughter of Pat and Carla Allen.

Second place in this division went to Jan Holland, who made Pumpkin Bread. Michelle DeLeon, who made Banana Nut Bread, received a blue ribbon.

Jody Brooks was the top contender in Fruits and Vegetables. Her entry was a beautiful Broccoli Salad served beautifully around a purple veined cabbage. She is the daughter of Carla and Roger Brooks.

Tarah Schuelke really got involved in preparing her first place-winning recipe of Minestrone Soup. She shot the deer and made the deer sausage she put in her soup. She is the daughter of Kenneth and Patty Schuelke.

Robyna Dean and Amanda Riley battled it out in Nutritious Snacks and Desserts. Both girls have been to district numerous times. Amanda placed first with Miss Ruth's Cookies. The recipe is delicious and makes a whopping 12 dozen large cookies. She is the daughter of Rebecca and Tom Riley.

Robyna took second place. Her entry was Economy Gelatin Punch. Just one six-ounce serving gives you 184 percent of your daily Vitamin C needs. She is the daughter of Carl and Judy Dean.

In the Junior division (for youths in grades 3-5), Belinda Riley won the Breads and Cereals division. She prepared Spicy Pumpkin Muffins, which are an excellent source of Vitamin A. She is the daughter of Tom and Rebecca Riley.

Second place went to Jessica Holloway. Her entry was Whole Grain Bread, a delicious black bread that would be great for the holidays. She is the daughter of Jerry and Tahita Holloway.

Other blue ribbon winners in this group were Bailie Greenhaw and Summer Smith, both of whom made Pumpkin Bread.

Fruits and Vegetables hailed Shanna Wells as first place. Her entry was fresh green beans and water chestnuts. This recipe would add crunch and color to any meal. Shanna is the daughter of Theodor and Vicki Wells.

Justin Burch won second place with Apple Chips, a dieter's delight. A chip with few calories. He is the son of Roger and Kathryn Burch. Shelia Butler won a blue ribbon on Swiss Vegetables Medley.

Sherra Wells took top honors in the Junior Main Dish Division. Her Bean and Ham Soup is an excellent source of fiber and iron. She is the daughter of Theodor and Vicki Wells. Second place went to Cassie Huckaby who made Chicken Fajita Salad. Marti Ray Mims won a blue ribbon with Cowboy Beans.

Nutritious Snacks and Desserts are everyone's favorite and David Butler certainly had a winner — Ham/Spinach/Cheese Roll-Ups. David is the grandson of Charles and Betty Butler.

Jeffery Burch placed second with Frontier Jerky. Brady Cook won a blue ribbon with Apricot Candy and Meagan Mims won a blue ribbon with Banana Pudding.

Our future 4-Hers, the Cloverbuds, are second graders. They did a fantastic job. Clint Schuelke made Citrus Delight, Hali Tubb made Easy Fruit Salad, Brandi Hale made Macaroni and Cheese.

Also, Joshua Tunnell made Banana Bread. Zackary Huckaby made Vegetable Dip. Winston Holloway made Winston's Carmel Apples.

A grand applause go to those who served as project leaders: Carla Brooks, Tricia Cook, Judy Dean, Vickie Greenhaw, Doris Holland, Tahita Holloway, Stacie Redder, Patty Schuelke, Pasty Simer, Ginger Tunnell, and Vicki Wells.

For this year's awards presentations Jody Brooks and Shauna Butler served as masters of ceremonies. Robyna Dean led the motto and pledge. Amanda Riley introduced the judges and Jody Brooks and Michelle DeLeon recognized the judges by giving them Convent Cookbooks.

Stephanie Wood and Jan Holland assisted in presenting the awards. Each 4-H'er received a free milk shake coupon from Stanton Drug. First place winners received engraved recipe boxes. These were furnished by Martin Co. Extension Homemakers. Second place winners received 4-H cookie cutters.

The 4-H food projects involves some 60 youths from Stanton and Grady in learning experiences related to health, safety, food preparation, nutrition, exercise, leadership and career choices.

Texan to reunite with mother

By RHONDA DUEY
The Odessa American

ODESSA — Glenn Bergman's search for his natural mother spanned an ocean, but the result was the realization of a dream.

"My search for you has finally made my dreams come true," he wrote to the woman he only dimly remembered. He plans to visit her in Germany next month.

Born in Germany in 1961, Bergman was adopted four years later by Col. and Mrs. H.A. Bergman, stationed at Hahn Air Force Base. He became a U.S. citizen, grew up all over the United States and is now a counselor for Mariah Flats, a group home for the retarded in Odessa.

His parents never hid the fact of his adoption, and recently Bergman became curious about his German mother.

"You always in your mind would like to know what your mother and dad look like, and what kind of characteristics you have in common," he said. "It's been a recent goal of mine to track her down."

Despite the confusion of working between countries and the language barrier (Bergman no longer remembers any German), his search took only eight months.

"That to me is not a long time, especially being in another country," he said.

There is more openness about adoption records in Germany, Bergman said. He had only a few incomplete records to start with, including a certificate that listed his original name as Jurgen Sondro instead of Jurgen Sondro Klein. But he persisted in writing, and the U.S. Department of Immigration and Naturalization had a record of his naturalization which included his full name.

"You always in your mind would like to know what your mother and dad look like, and what kind of characteristics you have in common. It's been a recent goal of mine to track her down."

From that he was able to obtain his original German birth certificate, which listed the town of his origin as Hanau, not Frankfurt as he had believed.

With the help of German authorities, Bergman obtained the name of his birth mother, and a German agency even contacted her before giving out her address. The rest was up to Bergman.

His first letter was tentative, since he wasn't sure how she would respond after all these years. But his fears were laid to rest a few weeks later when an airmail envelope arrived.

"I was so excited I couldn't open the letter," Bergman said. "I was in shock for several days."

"It's kind of funny, because I was naturalized as an American citizen on July 5, 1968, and the first letter I ever got from my mother came on July 5, 1990," he said.

The letter had been translated by a friend, because Bergman's birth mother, Hildegard Weber, doesn't speak much English. But the emotion of the moment is clear enough. After talking about the family and the dog, the letter suddenly says: "Please excuse me, but I can't find the right words at the moment."

Later the words came more easily. Bergman now has several letters, and has spoken twice on the telephone with his mother.

He is planning a 10-day trip to Germany in December to visit her. His adoptive parents are helping finance the journey.

"They've been real supportive," he said. "My dad was also adopted, and he found his birth mother not too long ago, so he's real sympathetic."

"I was a little reluctant to tell them at first. I was afraid that they'd think that now that I've found my real family it's goodbye to them. But they didn't react that way at all."

He plans to ask more about the adoption, and about his birth father. But he won't question the decision.

"Whatever transpired is fine with me," he said. "I'm not holding any hard feelings. But I might question on a few little issues."

He has learned that his natural father is in Italy, and Bergman admits that the thought of searching for him also has crossed his mind. "That'd be another goal of mine, if it doesn't insult my mother," he said.

He encourages other adoptees to begin the search for their natural parents if they're interested.

"I believe in divine intervention," he said. "If people just will have a little faith, a lot can be done."

Election

● The Democrats also picked up nine House seats to pad their majority to 268-167, assuming the two unsettled California races go to the Republican candidates who now are leading.

● Governors provided the most excitement. The Republicans retained California, but the Democrats captured statehouses in Florida and Texas from the GOP. When the dust had settled the Democrats held 28 governorships and the Republicans 19. Two were won by independents — Lowell Weicker in Connecticut and Walter Hickel in Alaska.

Those are the numbers. Defining them was the job of the Browns and Blacks.

"Americans read George Bush's letters yesterday, and they made it clear they didn't like his message," said Rep. Teryl Anthony, D-Ark., chairman of the House Democratic campaign committee.

The outcome "wasn't due to any kind of national trend, I don't think, or issue—so much as it was something about (each) individual member," said House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ind.

Control of congressional and legislative reapportionment was a special goal of both the 1990 campaign. In this area the Democrats looked like clear winners.

Overall, Democrats emerged from Tuesday's vote with redistricting monopolies in 17 states. Republicans control the process outright in just three states, New Hampshire, Utah and Vermont, none of them redistricting battlegrounds.

The victories of Lawton Chiles over Republican Gov. Bob Martinez in Florida and Ann Richards over GOP businessman Clayton Williams in the Texas governor's race gave the Democrats the monopoly of the redistricting process in those two key states that will gain seven House seats between them.

Black insisted that "our party is very well-positioned not only for 1992 but for the rest of this decade."

That assessment was based on the GOP's having a voice in redistricting for 231 of the 435 congressional districts, roughly 65 more than 10 years ago.

One of the biggest surprises in the results was the defeat of Democratic Gov. Jim Blanchard of Michigan by Republican John Engler. "This is simply an overpowering moment," said Engler, who a week ago looked to be far behind in the polls.

Other incumbent governors who lost were Republicans Kay Orr of Nebraska, Mike Hayden of Kansas and Edward DiPrete of Rhode Island.

Why were governors hit harder than members of Congress?

Larry Sabato, a political analyst at the University of Virginia, traced their vulnerability to the policies of the Reagan administration.

"Reagan transferred the authority and the responsibility, and the fiscal burdens to the states, and the governors were forced to raise taxes," he said.

NASA to cut costs of station program

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA is literally going back to the drawing board to live within its budget and still find a way to build a space station to put Americans into space permanently.

"We have $6 billion more program planned than we have money for," William B. Lenoir, the head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's space flight program, said Wednesday. Congress gave the agency three months to revamp a space station design that was six years in the making.

"It is our intention to come back in 90 days with the answers to what we can do, what makes sense, and still have a useful, affordable program," Lenoir told reporters. "If we cannot come up with what we consider a reasonable program then we would have to readdress whether we should even go forward with the space station."

The Bush administration had asked Congress to spend $2.51 billion in 1991 to propel the $37 billion space station into the hardware-building stage. The lawmakers allotted $1.9 billion instead and told NASA to build the station in smaller steps, each independent of the other.

They also squashed NASA plans to increase yearly spending for the station to $4 billion in 1996, telling the agency it could count on no more than $2.5 billion to $2.6 billion in any one year.

NASA had long planned to hold a comprehensive design review during the last two months of this year.
