Iraq sets conditions for proposed summit

(AP) Iraq says it might attend a proposed Arab summit aimed at avoiding war in the Persian Gulf, but only if the meeting also deals with the Arab-Israeli dispute.

King Hassan of Morocco proposed the emergency summit on Sunday as a "last chance" for peace.

Iraq's ruling Revolutionary Command Council — led by Saddam Hussein — went into emergency session to discuss Hassan's call, Iraqi state television said.

The council said Iraq would be willing to attend the summit under three conditions: that Baghdad be consulted in advance on the agenda, that the timing and location be chosen so Saddam could attend, and that the agenda include not just the gulf crisis but all Middle East issues — including the Palestinian question.

The council also suggested it would not allow certain topics to be discussed. It did not specify which ones.

"The proposed summit should not be part of efforts to prepare the political theater as a cover for American aggression against Iraq and the Arab nation," the statement said.

In Tunis, the Palestine Liberation Organization issued a statement saying it agreed with King Hassan's initiative.

Saddam has long demanded that a solution to the crisis be linked to the Palestinian issue. He made the offer shortly after the invasion of Kuwait.

In a television interview taped a day before Hassan's call for the summit, the Iraqi president repeated his call for dialogue on the gulf crisis.

"If all parties concerned sat around one table we are confident that these parties will reach serious and deep solutions to all the issues, in the forefront of which will be the Palestinian issue," Saddam told British television.

King Hassan suggested that the summit be held in Rabat, the Moroccan capital, in a week. But he said he would attend a summit wherever it might be held.

In proposing the emergency

Arab summit, King Hassan said conflict in the region would "penetrate every household from the gulf to the Atlantic."

"Let us gather together and see what decisions we can make ... to give to all what they deserve so that Kuwait returns to what it used to be and that Iraq is a satisfied and satisfying member at the heart of our Arab family," the king said on Moroccan state radio and TV.

Morocco, outspoken among Arab nations in condemning the Iraqi invasion, has committed more than 1,200 soldiers to the U.S.-led multinational force based in Saudi Arabia.

In his television interview, Saddam also said he does not believe the world is united against him.

The major powers and "a number of countries" are lined up against Baghdad, Saddam acknowledged. "But to say that the world is unified against Iraq is indeed not a correct thing to say."

"In the statements of the U.S. and Britain, they themselves are voicing their concern that the unity — so-called unity against Iraq — is perhaps ... suffering from a split," Saddam said.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III received assurances from key allies last week that they will accept nothing short of an unconditional Iraqi pullout. However, officials said China, France and

Justice Department to review complaint

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A sexual discrimination complaint stemming from a June 1988 jailguard hiring has led to a review by the U.S. Justice Department, said Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard, who this morning asked Commissioners Court for legal assistance.

The incident involving Wilma Arbuckle was reviewed last year by the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission in El Paso and it was determined there was no discrimination, Standard said. Outside legal assistance for that cost $5,000.

Arbuckle, a former corrections supervisor with the Big Spring Correctional Center, charged in her August 1988 complaint to EEOC that she was discriminated against by Standard, saying that she was denied a position as a jailer over two men who were not certified as jailers while she was. She could not be reached this morning.

Arbuckle, who was with the correctional center until Feb. 26, admitted failing the physical strength test when applying as a county jailguard, but said it was unfair because other jailers had not been required to take the test before. She also said the written test was illegal because it asked about legal action taken against previous employers.

Justice department officials may be in Big Spring this week to conduct interviews and look over records, said Standard, who received authorization to again bring in outside legal help.

"They're making an independent check into this to see if a violation has occurred," he said afterwards. "Perhaps this will resolve it all." He said there has been no suit filed in federal court, an alternative that Arbuckle could take.

"We settled our part with EEOC over this but she did not like it," he said. "We agreed that there were no discriminations involved."

Standard said he wants to use the same Abilene lawyer who assisted them during the EEOC review.

Meanwhile, information on why Arbuckle left her job as a corrections supervisor could not be released, said the city personnel director. Records show she was employed as a jailer for the city on June 30, 1986. In May 1989 she transferred to the correctional center.

SS recipients to get increase

The Big Spring Social Security Administration has announced that people receiving Social Security and Supplemental Security Income will be getting an increase in their benefits.

The automatic cost-of-living adjustment is made annually. This year the increase will be 5.4 percent, beginning January 1 for Social Security beneficiaries and Dec. 31 for SSI recipients.

For more information concerning the increase call 915-267-5227.

State Hospital to have craft sale

The public is invited to a patient Arts & Crafts Fair Tuesday at the Tollett All-Faith Chapel at Big Spring State Hospital.

The event will be from noon to 5:30 p.m. Craft items made by patients will be offered for sale.

Fina schedules blood drive

Fina Oil and Chemical is sponsoring a blood drive for the general public Tuesday, Nov. 13, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. This is the fourth blood drive at Fina this year, and the goal is 50 pints of blood, according to Troy McClendon, the blood drive coordinator for Fina.

"We need all we can get. Last time we raised about 50 (pints) and the other two times it's been about 40 (each). I believe very strongly in this. Fina got involved years ago," McClendon said.

United Blood Services, a San Angelo blood bank, will be accepting donations in the credit union conference room at Fina.

Scouts to collect food Saturday

The Boy Scouts will be picking up donated food on Saturday. They ask that all canned goods and non-perishable food donations be ready for pickup by 9:30 a.m. Place all goods in a box or plastic bag and leave on the front porch. The Boy Scouts will collect from homes in Big Spring, Stanton and Coahoma. For more information, call 263-3752.

Mayor recognizes community youth

Big Spring Mayor Max Green has issued a proclamation naming the second week in November as Youth Appreciation Week. Optimist International has recognized youth in American in observance of this week, and Mayor Green joins with them and the citizens of Big Spring to salute the youth in our community.

"By this action, let it be known that we have faith in the ability of today's youth as they assume responsible roles in the future of mankind," Green said.

Deer hunters can contribute meat to feed poor

ODESSA (AP) — Deer hunters across the state can donate their game to agencies that give the food to the needy under a program called Hunters for the Hungry.

Permian Basin Food Bank executive director Dolly Neff had no idea how her agency could use cases of donated chili mix. Canned tuna and chicken constitute the meat supply for the food bank, which feeds the hungry in 17 counties.

But ground deer meat donated by charitable hunters may replace some of the food bank's canned meat, Ms. Neff said.

"It's like God planned it," Ms. Neff said of the donated chili mix and deer meat.

Hunters for the Hungry is overseen by Texas' departments of Agriculture, Health and Parks and Wildlife and is sponsored by several groups, including the Texas Association of Meat Processors, Sportsmen Conservationists of Texas and Texas Association of Second Harvest Food Banks.

Under the program, which went into effect this year, hunters can donate the meat from the deer they kill if it is processed at state-approved packing plants.

State agencies took three years to work out the details of the program. Officials wanted to assure the hunters would donate meat that was safe to eat. The meat could become contaminated if hunters improperly field dressed the meat after it was killed.

At one time, Health Department officials thought they would have to go with hunters into the field to assure the deer was treated properly after it was killed, Ms. Neff said.

Instead, they decided they could inspect the deer meat at processing plants.

Although the food bank spent three years working to get the program approved, Ms. Neff said it was time well spent.

"It paid off because we placed a lot of calls to legislators last year. They did not drop the ball," she said. "It's a godsend. Red meat is scarce at the food bank."

Deer season began last week in most of West Texas, and Ms. Neff said she hopes to receive donated deer meat soon. The season runs through the first week in January.

Tommy Hubbard, owner of Hubbard Packing Co. in Big Spring, said he's state approved for the program, and he's agreed to prepare the deer meat for the food bank at a reduced processing fee of $15. But hunters are refusing to pay the fee, he said.

"The hunters don't mind giving the deer, but they don't want to pay the processing fee. I guess you could say the hunters are backing out on me. They think if they donate the deer, that's enough. So many people kill deer but don't want the deer, they just do it for the sport," Hubbard said.

Hubbard added that the $15 fee is • HUNTERS page 8-A

Open house

Approximately 300 people attended the Big Spring Post Office open house Sunday, including two Daisy Troops. Visitors were given a guided tour of the post office facilities, accompanied by an explanation of how the mail was processed. The Big Spring Post Office received two trophies for being the only post office in the El Paso region to achieve all of its goals for the year.

Council to consider corporation bylaws

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council will examine the bylaws for the Moore Development for Big Spring Inc. board of directors at the Council meeting Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. at the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark Office.

The by-laws were developed by the directors themselves over a period of time. They were assisted by "model" bylaws from similar groups in other cities.

In other business, the council will:

- Consider "charging off" over $40,000 in utility accounts deemed uncollectable.

- Establish guidelines for selection of a Municipal Court Judge, to replace Gwen Fair who has submitted her resignation.

- Consider closing Main Street between Third and Fourth streets for a Christmas sing-a-long.
- Hear a request for a temporary mobile home permit for 1700 Virginia.

- Hear a complaint from local residents about an alleged "nuisance" caused by the Howard County Humane Society.

The council will consider, on second reading, whether to support a group of proposed amendments to the Texas Local Government Code. Councilmembers, who voted 4-3 to support the amendments at the Oct. 9 meeting, received letters last week from Big Spring firefighters asking them to vote against the support measure.

The council will consider whether to authorize Parkhill, Smith and Cooper to accomplish the engineering for airport taxiway improvements, various street seal projects and street and parking lot improvements at the Big Spring Correction Center II.

Resolutions to be considered on first reading include:

- Authorization of Lake Fest 1991, including waiving the "no wake" requirements and allowing boats without mufflers.

- An agreement with American Medical Transport for ambulance service. At the last meeting, councilmembers approved a three-year contract with the company.

- A purchase agreement with Aprotex Corporation for equipment for the Big Spring Correctional • COUNCIL page 8-A

Support grows for Vietnam center

LUBBOCK (AP) — The unique nature of a West Texas center that studies the only war the United States didn't win is drawing support, center officials said.

The Center for the Study of the Vietnam Conflict at Texas Tech University, which opened nearly a year ago, promotes research and conduct conferences focusing on the Vietnam War.

The center's mission is expanding, its director said.

Retired Navy Lt. Cmdr. James R. Reckner, an assistant professor of history and a Vietnam veteran, said the center will unite experts on the war.

In October, Reckner attended the 14th Military History Symposium of the U.S. Air Force Academy, which focused on "Vietnam, 1964-1973: An American Dilemma."

"I learned that there is nothing between the east coast and the west coast dealing with Vietnam," Reckner said.

The beginnings of a collection of oral histories of veterans from the South Plains who served in Vietnam is archived. Last spring, 18 oral histories, which also have been transcribed, were solicited by Vietnam history students under Reckner's direction.

Jealous wife shot by homeowner

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who tracked her husband to a rendezvous with an alleged paramour was slain when she broke into the wrong house, officials said.

Priscilla Brayboy was shot to death by a homeowner early Sunday when she forced her way into a house where she believed her husband was having an affair, said Harris County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Bruce Williams.

Williams said Mrs. Brayboy, 32, and a friend drove down a northern Harris County street looking for her husband, Joe Brayboy. When the women spotted a gray Volvo parked in a driveway on the street, Mrs. Brayboy thought it belonged to her husband.

When Mrs. Brayboy knocked on the door, a woman answered, Williams said. Mrs. Brayboy, believing her husband was inside, began to force her way into the house.

A man inside the home heard the commotion and armed himself with a shotgun, Williams said. As Mrs. Brayboy lunged through the door, the man shot her, the officer said.

Baptists brace for fireworks

HOUSTON (AP) — Fundamentalists and moderates are bracing for a squabble when the Baptist General Convention of Texas convenes here, despite a theme of "Celebrating the Family."

Baylor University's new relationship with the convention will probably dominate discussions Tuesday and Wednesday at the George R. Brown Convention Center here, officials said.

Herbert H. Reynolds, president of the nation's largest Baptist-supported university, was scheduled to hold a news conference on Baylor's role with Texas Baptists at 2 p.m. today.

Reynolds and other Baylor representatives will attend the Baptist convention's 105th annual session.

The Baylor president had warned in early September that fundamentalists planned to seek control of the school's board during the Houston convention.

"Whenever you get a group of Baptists together, you never know what's going to happen," said Dallas lay leader Alvin Burns, who chairs the subcommittee that will recommend trustees for Baylor.

One-third of Baylor's 48-member board of trustees is either re-elected or replaced at each convention.

Last summer, Baylor changed its charter, placing it under control of a 24-member, self-perpetuating board of regents instead of 48 convention-appointed trustees. Under the change, the trustees will appoint only six of the regents.

The Conservative Texas Baptist Report, a publication from San Antonio, has urged fundamentalists to oust the entire board.

Many mourn death of 13-year-old Stormie Jones

WHITE SETTLEMENT (AP) — Like most teen-agers, Stormie Jones shopped at the local mall, spent nights at her best friend's house and cruised the local drag.

But Stormie was not like most teen-agers. A congenital birth defect had seen to that, forcing her before a national media spotlight at the age of 6 when she received the world's first heart-liver transplant.

"She wanted to be a normal teenager so badly," said Fay Presswood, a teacher who taught Stormie at home for the last three years.

"She wished everybody would treat her normal instead of like she had an operation, because she didn't like everybody asking her how she felt or if she was feeling OK," said Stormie's best friend, Crystal Millikan.

Stormie's fight ended Sunday when the 13-year-old died in a Pittsburgh hospital. She had been flown there Saturday after complaining of flu-like symptoms.

"Nobody in the world was as sweet or kind as her. There'll be nobody like her," Crystal said Sunday, tears welling in her eyes.

Stormie made medical history on Valentine's Day 1984 when she received the world's first heart-liver transplant. The operation was necessary because she was born with a condition that left her cholesterol levels 10 times higher than normal.

Before the first transplant, Stormie suffered two heart attacks and underwent two triple coronary bypass operations.

She had no serious complications from the first transplant until October 1988, when doctors at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh removed a bile duct obstruction.

Stormie's last year had been a trying one.

Hepatitis damaged the first donor liver, forcing her to undergo a second liver transplant on Feb. 20. She was hospitalized again at Children's in May when it appeared her body was rejecting the new liver.

In July, she was again treated for hepatitis, which damaged the second transplanted liver.

Although her liver gave her the most problems, it apparently was Stormie's heart that failed, going into cardiac arrest. A preliminary autopsy performed Sunday was inconclusive, hospital officials said.

"There's a lot of sorrow and a lot of upset but the pain for her is over," said her stepfather, Alan Purcell.

"She went through a lot of pain, you know, as a guinea pig and as a necessity. The pain is over with... She doesn't hurt any more," Purcell said at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport before flying to Pittsburgh.

Ms. Presswood said Stormie may have known her illness Friday was more than just a flu.

"Stormie was very philosophical, and many times she said she wasn't afraid to die, but Friday I got the feeling that she was scared about something," Ms. Presswood said. "I think she knew things we didn't know."

Doctors, family and friends often marveled over Stormie's determination to recover from each of the setbacks caused by liver rejection, medication changes and a host of other illnesses.

"I guess it's just hope. There's a thing in the back of your head that says, 'Get up,'" Stormie once told reporters.

STORMIE JONES

family and Stormie's lived in this suburb of Fort Worth.

Friends shielded Stormie's sister, Misty, from the media Sunday.

Stormie had wanted to return to school this year. She spent three weeks in the seventh grade at Brewer Middle School before being forced home by fatigue.

Stormie, who turned 13 in May, had hoped to write an autobiography titled "In The Darkness" to reflect what she thought about when she fell asleep.

The Millikans said they did not know if Stormie had started work on the book.

Parishioners at St. Peter's Catholic Church, who held bake sales and other fund raisers for Stormie over the years, mourned her death.

"She was a real fighter. I don't guess anyone could have put up a greater battle than she has," said church member Jack Abernathy.

"She stole the hearts of the people here at St. Peter's," said Father Publius Xureb.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

Exhumation by machine 'insensitive'

DALLAS (AP) — Using a front-end loader to unearth over 1,150 graves belonging to former slaves is insensitive, say area black community leaders.

State highway officials want to use excavation machinery to move the Freedmen's Memorial Park graves, which were uncovered recently during a freeway expansion project.

But black community leaders prefer manual excavation, said Mamie McKnight, president of Black Dallas Remembered. That would allow archaeologists to open the graves, catalog the contents and rebury the remains in wooden boxes, she said.

"We're taking a definite stand," Ms. McKnight said. "Any other method than (individual handling) is insensitive. We're going to push for it."

Another problem with the graves, located in a cemetery near downtown Dallas thought to have been used by black Dallas pioneers from the 1860s to 1925, is finding a reburial site.

"The further archaeologists go searching for 'empty' land, the further (the graves) go," Emrich said.

Lawsuits target community activists

FORT WORTH (AP) — The price of free speech is rising thanks to a new brand of lawsuits designed to muzzle community activists, some experts say.

Just ask Dale Reed of Saginaw, and she'll tell you that the price tag on her free speech came in at $26 million.

For Irene Mansfield of Pearland, just south of Houston, the cost of her civic involvement was set at $5 million.

The so-called SLAPP lawsuits often are directed at community leaders who oppose controversial landfills, incinerators or other business projects, officials say. The lawsuits are dubbed SLAPP for strategic lawsuits against public participation.

But unlike most lawsuits, SLAPP lawsuits are employed to make defendants shut up, not pay up, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Typically, a large corporation sues an outspoken homeowner for millions of dollars, forcing the activist to choose between the uncertainty of a high-stakes legal fight and a quiet retreat.

"That's too big a price for 99.9 percent of Americans to pay, and they back off," said University of Denver law professor George Pring, who coined the acronym SLAPP.

Pring and his research partner, University of Denver sociologist Penelope Canan, told the newspaper that the trend is discouraging public involvement in controversial issues.

"What we're really talking about is a phenomenon that has gotten thousands and thousands of Americans sued. No one will ever know how many SLAPPs are filed," said Pring, who has documented at least 400 cases nationwide.

In most cases, the lawsuit accuses an individual or private organization of defamation or damage to the plaintiff's business interests.

"It's the big businesses' way of shutting up citizens and taking away their civil rights," said Ms. Mansfield, who was sued in 1986 for trying to block a Pearland landfill.

Although Ms. Mansfield persisted, the lawsuit was partially successful in silencing landfill critics. Ms. Mansfield said three officers in the neighborhood group resigned their seats in fear.

The landfill company dropped its lawsuit last year after winning a state permit for the project.

In Ms. Reed's case, a lawyer for Insulation Materials Corp. of America delivered the lawsuit at a residents' meeting on the company's plan to open a plant in Saginaw.

"The whole value of the lawsuit to them is the shock factor," said Bill Burdock, Ms. Reed's lawyer. "The only purpose in some grandstand, small-town play like that is to intimidate someone."

About 80 percent of all SLAPPs will likely fail if the target doesn't panic, Pring said.

Pring said the success of counterlawsuits may offer the best solution to the trend toward SLAPPs.

"SLAPP-backs have been very effective," he said. "They are definitely a go-go industry right now."

Hunter dies in shooting accident

PALESTINE (AP) — A weekend hunting accident claimed the life of a Mansfield man, a sheriff's deputy said.

The victim was Robert Shiftlet, 29.

Anderson County Chief Sheriff's Deputy Richard Fulford said Shiftlet was hunting with another man on Saturday and was shot as his partner was unloading his gun.

The shooting happened around 6 p.m. Saturday, in southeast Anderson County, the deputy said.

Ponytailed lawyers defend Moody

ATLANTA (AP) — The legal showdown in the Southeastern mail bombs case will pit the man who prosecuted New York's "Pizza Connection" drug case against a pair of ponytailed lawyers known for defending controversial clients.

Added to that mix is outspoken U.S. District Judge Richard Freeman and a crime that has held the Southeast's attention for nearly a year.

Walter Leroy Moody Jr., of Rex, Ga., is accused of mailing bombs to a federal judge and a civil rights lawyer last December, killing both.

Defending him are Atlanta lawyers Bruce Harvey and Michael Hauptman, both associated with the American Civil Liberties Union but acting in this case as court-appointed attorneys.

Each wears a diamond earring and graying hair pulled back in a ponytail.

If convicted on all 70 counts, Moody could be sentenced to seven life terms plus 385 years in prison and fines of $16.9 million.

TWA interested in buying Pan Am

NEW YORK (AP) — Trans World Airlines Inc. has offered to buy Pan Am Corp. if Pan Am's deal to sell key New York-to-London routes to United Airlines' parent falls through.

TWA chairman Carl Icahn said late Sunday he had proposed offering about $150 million in cash plus securities with a face value of $300 million for struggling Pan Am.

Icahn said in a telephone interview that Pan Am Chairman Thomas Plaskett had asked him to make an offer in case Pan Am's talks with UAL Corp. fail. Pan Am has proposed selling UAL important routes between New York and London as part of a $400 million deal.

Although TWA is considered healthier than Pan Am, both have been hurt by rising fuel prices since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and fewer passengers since the economy started weakening.

If TWA buys Pan Am, duplicated routes like those to London's Heathrow airport would be sold, Pan Am said. TWA and Pan Am are the only two U.S. airlines flying into Heathrow.

Icahn's proposal, contained in a letter delivered to Plaskett late Friday, proposed Pan Am shareholders receive $1 per share in cash and securities with a face value of $2 per share. The securities, either preferred stock or promissory notes, could bring different market prices.

Pan Am's stock closed at $1.62 1/2 Friday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Pan Am said in a statement it was still working on the route sale to United, but the deal could be called off.

TOKYO — Emperor Akihito waves and Empress Michiko smiles as they begin an open car parade from the palace today in Tokyo. The emperor was formally ascended to the Chrysanthemum Throne earlier in the day.

Emperor enthroned as a symbol, not as a god

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Akihito ascended to the world's oldest hereditary monarchy today, the first in a legendary 2,600-year-old line of emperors to be enthroned as a national symbol rather than a living god.

Leftist extremists, who consider the institution of emperor an unconstitutional relic of Japan's militarist past, attacked military bases, train stations and Shinto shrines in protest.

Police counted at least 34 guerrilla attacks timed to coincide with the coronation of the late Emperor Hirohito's 56-year-old son. None appeared to cause any injuries.

A record 37,000 police had been mobilized to guard the ceremonies as well as the attending dignitaries from 158 countries, including Vice President Dan Quayle and Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

For his coronation, Akihito wore a red-brown silk kimono and hat of ancient design and sat on an elaborate lacquered throne in front of an Imperial Palace courtyard filled with attendants carrying bows and swords.

He vowed to "discharge my duties as symbol of the state and of the unity of the people" under Japan's postwar constitution, which fundamentally restructured the monarchy.

Hirohito had renounced his divine status after the war, but Akihito becomes the first of Japan's 125 emperors, including those listed only in legend, to take the throne as a mere mortal and not a priest-king.

He said he would perform his role in the same spirit as his father, who "shared joys and sorrows with the people at all times" during a 62-year reign that encompassed both the devastation of World War II and Japan's dramatic recovery.

Empress Michiko, dressed in a multicolored gown, her face painted white, sat motionless on her own throne at Akihito's side throughout the 30-minute ceremony.

The ancient, mystical enthronement rites are said to date back to 660 B.C.

Akihito and Empress Michiko later left the palace grounds in an open Rolls Royce, ringed by dozens of police motorcycles and waving and smiling to cheering crowds. They had changed to formal Western clothes.

Many of the estimated 110,000 people along the three-mile parade route to Akasaka Palace, the couple's home, yelled "Banzai" and waved national flags as the 44-car parade passed. Nearly 10,000 police lined the route.

Akihito became emperor immediately after the death of Hirohito in January 1989, but his enthronement was delayed until after a period of mourning.

Israel agrees to accept U.N. envoy

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli leaders have agreed to hold talks with a U.N. envoy as a compromise with a Security Council demand for an investigation into last month's Temple Mount killings, Israel radio said today.

The radio quoted Foreign Minister David Levy as announcing the decision during a closed-door session of Parliament's Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee.

Ministry officials declined immediate comment on the report.

The proposed compromise was aimed at responding to severe criticism of Israel over its refusal to allow a U.N. team to investigate the Oct. 8 killings at the Temple Mount in Jerusalem.

Twenty Palestinians were killed and more than 140 wounded when police opened fire on Arab stone-throwers at the site, which is holy to both Moslems and Jews.

The United States, which refused to use its veto to block a resolution condemning Israel for the shootings, has been pushing Israel to accept a U.N. investigation into the slayings.

Yeltsin opposes central control

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin, the outspoken president of the Russian Federation, today accused rival Mikhail S. Gorbachev of trying to pressure his republic into ceding some economic powers to the central government.

"But we couldn't and will not go for that," Yeltsin told a legislative committee.

Yeltsin and Gorbachev, the two most powerful Soviet politicians and frequent critics of each other's policies, met in the Kremlin on Sunday for four hours of what were intended as peacemaking talks.

But Yeltsin came out with more criticism of Soviet authorities, especially over negotiations on a new treaty to group the 15 splintering Soviet republics.

"They pressed us yesterday and earlier to first sign a union treaty and then resolve remaining issues, in the meantime transferring everything to the authority of the center," Yeltsin told the Russian Federation's constitutional commission. His remarks were carried by the independent Interfax news agency.

Yeltsin did not use Gorbachev's name, but the Soviet president appeared to be his target. In the end, an agreement was reached to resolve differences this year, before the treaty is signed, Yeltsin told the commission.

Soviet authorities and Russian authorities will form parallel groups to work on issues. Interfax said, included banking, property and the money supply.

Yeltsin also listed disputes over control of oil, gas, gold and other precious metals as among the issues the committees would try to resolve.

Conservative takes lead in election

JORGE SERRANO ELIAS

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — A conservative, born-again Christian claimed a strong lead today in presidential elections in this country with a troubled, violent past that has until recently been run by the military.

Jorge Serrano Elias' resume ranges from close collaboration with one of Guatemala's last dictators to a stint on a national commission promoting democracy and peace talks with leftist rebels.

If the winner of Sunday's contest and an anticipated runoff takes office, it would be the first time in Guatemala's history that one elected civilian has taken office from another.

Floodwaters recede in Washington

MOUNT VERNON, Wash. (AP) — A day of sunshine eased flooding that caused millions of dollars in damage. Many people returned to their homes, but two islands remained evacuated today.

After heavy rain Friday and Saturday, warm, sunny weather on Sunday lowered flood waters enough that Interstate 5 in Skagit County and some smaller roads could reopen, said Michael Stewart, spokesman for the state Division of Emergency Management.

"It is receding, but it isn't gone away," Stewart said.

Several roads, including some highways, remained closed. No injuries were reported and most dikes and levees held.

Election process should be improved, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the heels of the lowest election turnout in 50 years comes a study that says it's wrong to blame voter alienation. Make the process easier, says the report, and more Americans will cast ballots.

"Election procedures in the United States make voting cumbersome," the General Accounting Office tells Congress.

Its remedies: Set registration deadlines to fall on or close to Election Day; establish toll-free numbers for absentee ballot requests; allow voting by mail.

Last Tuesday's turnout is estimated to have matched that of 1986, which was the lowest in nearly half a century.

In another report, not connected with the pre-election GAO study, analyst Curtis Gans said 26 states and the District of Columbia had increased voter participation but that only 36.4 percent of those eligible to vote nationwide actually did.

The United States ranks 20th among 21 democracies in turnout for national elections, with only Switzerland doing worse.

Italy led the pack with a 94 percent turnout, followed by Austria with 89.3 percent and Belgium with 89.7 percent.

In the 1980 general election in the United States, only 52.6 percent voted.

There seems to be no connection between voter turnout and trust in government.

Only 14 percent of Italians trust their government, the report says, but their voter turnout is the highest. The American level of trust in government is 34 percent.

Who's in charge?

The War Powers Act is back in the news as the possibility of shooting in the Mideast intensifies. Our nation got along without it for nearly 200 years, a couple of world wars, a civil war and other conflicts; but now we must have it, or so we're told. It would require the president to get congressional approval of military decisions while in the midst of hostilities, or even before they begin.

The War Powers Act was inspired by the Vietnam War, in which many people felt that President Johnson acted irresponsibly or didn't report the situation honestly. All successful armies have a single commander at the top.

So the president is designated constitutionally as the commander-in-chief of armed forces. You don't hear much about that during election campaigns, but we suspect a lot of rank-and-file voters give careful thought to this role in their choice as president.

The fundamental premise of the War Powers Act is that you can't trust the president. Proponents point to Vietnam as an example. But that is one narrow point in history. Their real trouble is they don't trust the voters to choose the "right" commander-in-chief.

Congressional leaders say as a matter of checks and balances they should shoulder some of the responsibility for military decisions. Now there's the key word: responsibility. How exactly has Congress earned the right to additional responsibility? They handle what they've got pretty poorly.

One thing that's certain is that decisions have to be made firmly and quickly, and without tipping our hand to the enemy. We cannot let our adversaries get the upper hand while some congressional committees sits around debating the finer points and leaking half their deliberations to the press.

Essentially the War Powers Act is about political jealousy and the desire of some pacifists to override the peoples' choice by obstructing all military actions. Congress would not have approved the military actions in Grenada, Libya or Panama, at least not without a long, drawn-out debate while the opportunity slipped by.

Certainly, military decisions deserve scrutiny and criticism. But we have to pick a commander and we have to give him the power to act when necessary, not cripple him with political impediments.

Wean farmers off subsidies

There is no more bedeviling piece of federal legislation than the 1990 Farm Bill. It is a complex tangle of economic, political, social and even philosophical issues, served up as a House-Senate compromise covering national agricultural policy for the next five years.

In general, the $41 billion bill seems headed in the right direction.

First, it cuts more than $13 billion in subsidies for agricultural products.

Second, it contains economic, scientific and environmental strictures designed to reduce federal costs and to do less damage to the environment, according to those who put the bill together.

Obviously, a bill so complex won't please everyone. Our long-term hope is that U.S. agriculture be weaned off federal assistance as soon as possible and to as great an extent as possible.

That is no easy task. Phasing out subsidies and supports has a serious impact on every segment of the huge agri-business industry. And there is an impact on the nation itself.

Food production is part of the nation's muscle. It can be used as a bargaining chip or a weapon.

Setting policies that will safeguard production and encourage innovation without favoring corporations at the expense of family farms is as tough a legislative job as there is.

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who chaired the House-Senate conference committee that shaped the measure, said the 1990 bill offers farmers greater choices than earlier legislation.

The major choice for many farmers is in deciding whether or not to drop out of support programs to take their chances on the vagaries of the market.

A package that encourages, or even allows, such choices seems to us an improvement over policies of the past.

Clean air and flatulent cows

WASHINGTON — Sensible people, meaning those people who live beyond the Washington Beltway, often ask a sensible question: How in the world, they wonder, can Congress run up a deficit of $200 billion in a single year? An answer of sorts may be found in the tale of the flatulent cows.

James J. Kilpatrick

It is a mystery story. It qualifies, indeed, as an old-fashioned whodunit, but it is not fiction. At high noon on Saturday, Oct. 27, the last day of the 101st Congress, the Senate completed passage of the Clean Air Act. By a vote of 89-10, this well-intentioned and fearfully expensive legislation went to the president.

Buried deep inside the bill was a remarkable provision. The bill authorizes a three-year study of the methane emissions from the flatulence of cows and other ruminant animals. The study is estimated to cost $19 million.

Now, methane is no joking matter. Considerable evidence suggests that methane emissions contribute to global warming. Most of these emissions come from natural sources, such as swamps, marshes and coal deposits, but large amounts also originate in paddies and feedlots.

During debate on the Clean Air Act, the Senate was told of nine recent studies of global methane, including methane emissions from cattle. At least a dozen federal agencies are studying methane in one way or another. The new farm bill directs the Department of Agriculture to coordinate these disparate efforts.

The specific $19-million, three-year study of ruminant flatulence first appeared when the Senate's version of a Clean Air Act was being debated last spring. Who sponsored the provision? No one seems to know. At least no one will say. Manifestly some senator requested it, or some staffer typed it up. In any event, Idaho's Sen. Steve Symms found out about it. He offered an amendment to strike the provision from the clean air bill, and out it went.

That was not the end of the matter. The farm bill came along in midsummer, containing a section on global warming, and behold! There again was a provision for studying the flatulence of cattle. Symms again tried to eliminate the provision. He failed, but the bill went to conference with the House and the provision was abandoned there. Pat Leahy of Vermont, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said that if everyone continued to treat the authorization as a joke, it wasn't worth fighting over.

The study of ruminant methane now had been killed twice. Some things refuse to die. On Oct. 27 the Senate took up the conference report on the Clean Air Act. Behold! There it was! Symms was aghast. The Senate had voted unanimously to kill the proposal. The House never had considered it at all.

"I do not know how these things happen," said Symms, "but it is here. It is in here, Mr. President. It just amazes me. I see that some extraordinary, tenacious person has once again inserted the study of 'an inventory of methane emissions associated with livestock production.' How did it get in there? It is an outrage and all senators should be outraged about it."

Alas, no other senators appeared the least bit outraged. Max Baucus of Montana responded briefly that House conferees had insisted on the study, and "we felt it made sense to finally acquiesce."

The debate went off on acid rain, clean coal and ozone protection. Senators made gassy speeches praising the leadership of other senators. Not another word was said about the flatulence of cows.

Symms managed to insert in the Congressional Record a letter from M.A.K. Khalil, a professor of environmental science and atmospheric studies at the Oregon Graduate Institute of Science and Technology in Beaverton. The letter was dated Aug. 28. He had heard that Congress was considering spending large amounts of money to study methane production by cattle as this relates to global warming.

"In my opinion," said the professor, "such money will be completely wasted. Even if the emissions from cattle could be controlled, it would have no practical or perceptible effect on global warming."

There it stands. How does Congress manage to roll up such monstrous deficits? This is how. The deficits result from an attitude — from a kind of sublime contempt for the taxpayers whose money the members are spending. Until that attitude changes, the deficits will mount. Tuesday's elections will not affect the attitude at all.

Teeny Weeny Things

No glimmer of compromise

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Like most wars, this war, not yet started, is proving easier to get into than out of.

Diplomacy isn't doing anything. Saddam Hussein isn't budging. With 430,000 troops in southern Iraq and Kuwait, dug in, he seems formidable. He beat Iran in a defensive war that took eight years and a million lives. Then he gave back everything to free his forces to face the Americans in the south.

Saddam holds the initiative. Congressmen, visiting Bush last week, left the message: give diplomacy and sanctions more time; avoid war. "If there is additional provocation," said Rep. Dante Fascell, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, "it better be real and able to stand up to press scrutiny."

No one can say if the war of nerves will turn into a battlefield war, but for these two adversaries — Bush and Saddam — retreat seems implausible. If Saddam isn't budging, neither is Bush. He compares Saddam to Adolf Hitler and says, in some ways, even Hitler was more respectful of human life.

Three months ago, the war of nerves started. On Aug. 2, the day Iraq invaded Kuwait, Bush, asked if he would respond militarily, said no. (His ambassador, following a script written in Washington, had told Saddam the United States had no interest in Arab-Arab quarrels.)

That afternoon, Bush met Margaret Thatcher, Britain's prime minister, in Vail, Colo. and said he wasn't ruling anything in or anything out. Then he froze the assets of both Iraq and conquered Kuwait, and sent troops to Saudi Arabia.

From the first moments after Saddam's army rolled, there has been an ad hoc quality to George Bush's response. One day he is willing to give the embargo a chance; another day he has had it with Saddam's treatment of American hostages. It was the perceived threat to American lives that caused Bush to invade Panama little more than a year ago.

Bush has won high marks for forging a world consensus against Saddam Hussein and an allied force unlike any assembled since World War II.

His diplomacy gave the United Nations a degree of authority absent almost from its creation. The Cold War having just ended, Bush linked arms with Mikhail Gorbachev in a superpower partnership that no one would have anticipated and that gives world politics a powerful new entity.

And yet in Saddam he found a crafty adversary, willing, like himself, to move toward the brink.

Saddam has made callous use of hostages and prisoners of diplomats. He caused the price of oil to double, raised the specter of worldwide recession, crippled East Europe's self-liberation from 45 years of communist domination.

He threatens to ignite revolution in Jordan and Egypt, whose leaders oppose him but whose masses shout his name in the streets. He has shaken the alliance between Israel and the United States.

If he is forced to retreat, say experts on the Islamic world, he is dead meat, bound to be overthrown.

Yet retreat, full and unrewarded, is Bush's minimum demand. Efforts by the king of Jordan, the secretary general of the United Nations, the Arab nations, and the emissary of the Soviet Union have found no middle ground that will save face for Saddam — or Bush.

So the war of nerves becomes a race between the impatience of Americans — "get in or get out," that Vietnam rallying cry, is heard again — and the isolation of Iraq, squeezed in the vise of an international embargo.

Saddam does not have to heed to the will of his people. His is a system of government in which new leaders emerge by murdering their predecessors. He has survived numerous assassination attempts. Early on, when three former directors of the Central Intelligence Agency were asked about the prospect of ending the crisis by killing its instigator, all three pointed out how difficult that course would be.

So Saddam can fire a minister who orders gasoline rationing, can starve Kuwaitis and loot their country while hoarding food for his army. He can play cat-and-mouse with his "foreign guests," posting them as human shields at military targets, dangling the prospect of holiday visits by families.

Bush, the responsive leader of a democracy, has less freedom of movement. Learning from Jimmy Carter's mistakes in the Iranian hostage crisis of 1979-80, he has managed, so far, to keep the fate of 1,300 American hostages from tying his hands.

But in the long run and the short run he must keep popular support.

That's a lesson from Vietnam. Americans are tolerant of quick, limited and successful engagements — Grenada and Panama — but skeptical of getting painfully involved when the nation's own security is not clearly at stake — Vietnam and Nicaragua.

From the start, Bush has enunciated four goals in the gulf: Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait; the restoration of Kuwait's royal government, regional stability, the protection of American lives.

To the questions about who or what would police an Iraq that did pull back, the Bush administration offers vague talk of new Persian Gulf security mechanisms and a "New World Order."

But would it be enough to merely chase Saddam back across his border, leaving his nuclear and chemical war-making powers intact? The administration offers no clear answers there, either.

CIA Director William Webster says the Middle East will not be secure until Saddam is "disassociated" from his weapons of mass destruction. Bush limits himself ambiguously to saying he wants the security of the region ensured "and that obviously is affected by the possession of these chemical and biological weapons and things of that nature."

In the first days, Bush talked about the danger to the West of an Iraq in control of Saudi Arabia — and 45 percent of the world's oil reserves. That was enough to cause critics to charge that Bush was preparing to spill American blood "for cheap oil."

Christmas is coming. The soldiers are asking why they're there.

Support for Bush's policy had slipped to 64 percent, from 78 percent in September. Sen. Bob Kerry, D-Neb., wounded in Vietnam, accuses the president of over-selling his policy "on the false assertions that Saddam Hussein is Adolf Hitler, that our way of life is at clear and present danger."

The stakes, if anything, have increased in three months and no way out — not a glimmer — presents itself.

Homemakers host session

Howard County Extension Homemakers recently conducted its annual State Meeting report session before a covered dish luncheon, according to a club report.

Zula Rhodes, Frances Zant, Nadine Hodnett and Jowili Etchison gave their report of the state meeting.

Hodnett gave the devotion and read a poem, titled, "Thank You God For Saying No."

The committees for 1991 worked on their recommendations so they were ready to present for adoption. There was an exhibit of dressed dolls. Elbow Club made 26 doll clothes for the Salvation Army. Dot Blackwell displayed a Virgin Mary and baby cloth sculpture that she had made.

There were eight present for Council and three clubs gave monthly reports. The agent has sent letters to prospective members who signed up at the fair. The Christmas party will be at the regular council meeting place on Dec. 3 at 11:30 a.m. It will be a covered dish luncheon and a "Make It, Bake It or Grow It" gift exchange. All members and guests are invited. After lunch, Naomi Hunt will give a slide presentation of her recent trip to Australia.

Teen mom wishes she'd waited

DEAR ABBY: On Jan. 31, I gave birth to a beautiful, healthy daughter. On May 24, I graduated from high school. I love my child dearly, but I really wish I were older, finished with college and married. (I am none of these, and won't be for a long time.)

All things considered, though, I am one of the lucky ones. I have two wonderful, supportive parents, my baby was born healthy, and I have persevered and finished high school. Even with all of this on my side, I still wish I had waited, and I hope that by writing this letter, I can influence just one couple to wait until they're married to have sex.

I knew the facts of life, but it never occurred to me that I could get pregnant. I always figured it would happen to someone else. Now I am everyone else's "someone else."

I literally get sick to my stomach when I hear my friends telling me how much they'd like to have a baby, and how they wouldn't mind getting pregnant now. All they think of is how much fun it would be to dress the baby up and show it off. The truth of the matter is, once you have a baby, you don't feel like going out anymore. You don't think of the incessant crying, getting up in the middle of the night for feedings, the dirty diapers, the spitting up, the constant washing of clothes and bottles, and, most important, the expense.

I spent $600 alone in baby-sitting costs between March and May just so I could go to school and graduate

Dear Abby

$600 that I didn't have. That meant I had to get a job, which meant more baby-sitting costs.

I was not, and still am not, emotionally prepared to be a mother. The stress is incredible! For the rest of my life I am going to be a mother. There is no way around it. If I don't feel like being a mother at some point in time and want to just go out and be an 18-year-old — a typical teen-ager having fun — that's too bad, because I will always be a mother first. Even if I do go out, my daughter is always on my mind.

My plea to anyone out there who is not ready to have a baby and is either having sex or thinking about having sex, don't do it! If you do it, you should use two methods of contraception — preferably the pill and a condom.

Babies are wonderful gifts from God, but I believe that they are meant for people who are emotionally and financially ready for them.

Thank you, Abby. I hope I have prevented one teen-age pregnancy with this letter. — LINDA SCHRAVEN, PHOENIX

DEAR LINDA: So do I. Thank you for an honest account of motherhood as experienced by at least 1 million teen-age girls per year. According to Joan Griggs Babbott, executive director of Planned Parenthood of Los Angeles, one in 10 teen-age girls becomes pregnant each year — nearly 30,000 of whom are under the age of 15. And for every teen who chooses to have the baby, almost an equal number choose to have an abortion.

DEAR ABBY: Have other readers complained that letters they have sent out have come back marked "Returned For Postage"? This has happened to me half a dozen times in the past year. Maybe I failed to affix the postage once — but never six times!

I think they are using inferior glue. What does the Postal Service recommend? Should I reinforce the stamps by using my own glue pot? Or must I staple the postage stamps onto the envelopes? Maybe I should write across the envelope, "Postmaster: This letter bore postage when I mailed it." — MAD AT THE MAIL

DEAR MAD: Move over. I'm mad, too. I, too, have noticed recently that I am stuck with stamps that don't stick. As you can well imagine, I don't have a lot of space to spare on my desk, but I had to make room for a glue pot.

So — CONFIDENTIAL TO POSTMASTER ANTHONY M. FRANK: If you are economizing by using inferior glue — people are starting to notice!

Deadline for song contest is Nov. 30

As this year's deadline for contest entries in the Third Annual Billboard Song Contest Presented by Kentucky Fried Chicken draws near, aspiring songwriters should remember that many of today's biggest hits were written by once-unknown writers.

"A good example is the case of two New Jersey housewives, Andrea LaRusso and Peggy Stanzale, who wrote one of Madonna's biggest hits, "Dress You Up," says Lee Zhitto, vice president and executive director of Billboard magazine and co-creator of the Billboard Song Contest Presented by Kentucky Fried Chicken. Other examples of hit songs written by unknowns include "Jump (For My Love)," a Pointer Sisters hit co-written by swim teacher Marti Sharon-Humak, Gary Paul Skardino and Stephen C. Mitchell and Cher's "If I Could Turn Back Time," written by Diane Warren. Another classic case is Otis Blackwell who was working as a presser in a dress factory when he wrote, "Fever," the multi-million Peggy Lee and Little Willie John seller. Songwriters hoping for the chance at similar success must enter their original songs in the contest by Nov. 30.

The Billboard Song Contest offers the opportunity of a lifetime for songwriters hoping for discovery. In addition to $100,000 in cash and prizes, amateur songwriters who enter the contest will have the opportunity not only to have their work heard by industry executives, but also to have their songs considered for recording by professional artists on Capitol Records.

The grand prize includes $25,000 cash, a trip on American Airlines to the Montreux International Festival (Montreux, Switzerland) where the grand prize winning song will be performed, a signed Gibson Les Paul reissue gold top guitar and a Dean Markley k150 amplifier. Six first place winners receive $5,000 cash (one in each category except the grand prize category). Capitol Records will submit the winning song in each category except Pop, Rock and Gospel to its artists for recording consideration. Signed Gibson Les Paul standard guitars will be awarded to seven second place winners (one in each category), Gibson Les Paul Epiphone guitars will go to 14 third place winners (two in each category) and Gibson Epiphone acoustic guitars will be awarded to 21 fourth place winners (Three in each category).

Certificates of Achievement signed by the publisher of Billboard magazine will be awarded to 2,500 Honorable Mention recipients. In addition to Gibson Guitar and Dean Markley, American Airlines and BluBlock have also been added as sponsors of the 1990 contest.

The contest is judged through a multi-tiered screening process. As entries continue through the process, the judges become more prominent in their respective categories. The grand prize and first place winners are selected by a Blue Ribbon Panel consisting of 22 world-renowned artists. The judges include Peter Cetera, David Foster, Carole Bayer Sager (Pop), Roy Clark, Waylon Jennings, Dwight Yoakam (Country), Iron Maiden, Heart, Frank Zappa (Rock), Doc Severinsen, Lou Rawls, Branford Marsalis (Jazz), Andrae Crouch, Sandi Patti, Amy Grant (Gospel), Julio Iglesias, Jose Feliciano, Jose Jose, Vikki Carr (Latin), L.L. Cool J, The Afros and Deneice Williams (Black/Rap).

Contest entries must be received by November 30, 1990. To enter, submit a completed entry form, a cassette recording of an original song no longer than five minutes, a written version of the song's lyrics and a check or money order in the amount of $15 for each entry submitted. To receive entry forms, write to: Third Annual Billboard Song Contest Presented by Kentucky Fried Chicken, P.O. Box 35346, Tulsa, Okla., 74153-0346.

Jackson leaves today for Peace Corps

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

Former Big Spring resident Stacy Jackson flies out of Midland-Odessa Airport today, bound for Chicago and four days of Peace Corps training.

After Chicago, she will travel to Kanye, Botswana in southern Africa, where she will receive further training to begin her two-year tour as a Peace Corps volunteer.

"The object of the Peace Corps is to do yourself out of a job. America has got to be represented, other than what the government does. We've got to help educate people in Third World countries, to show them how. I want to help them do that," Jackson said.

Jackson will teach English in the politically stable country of Botswana. She received her bachelor's degree in English and French from San Angelo State University in 1987. English is the official language of Botswana, and the government began building schools 10 years ago, she said.

Botswana has the highest literacy rate of any Third World country. Now there are 161 secondary schools, but no teachers for all these schools. There are 250 volunteers in the country, and I'd say 90 percent of them are teachers," Jackson said.

Jackson, 24, became interested in overseas traveling when she participated in the Student Foreign Exchange program at Big Spring High School. She traveled to France and established friendships that she continues today.

"I love to travel. I love meeting people, seeing other places. With my friend in France I've learned people are the same everywhere, they all want good things for their family and success. I like seeing the different cultures. That's such a mystery, a completely different culture. This is something I've wanted to do. You can always talk about 'those people over there,' but this gives me a chance to say, 'I know those people over there,'" she said.

Jackson said life in Botswana may not be as underprivileged as one would think. She explained that during the good weather season, the people live on the farms, and during bad weather, most of the people move into the cities. But that's changed, she said, because most of the people are choosing to stay with their land year round.

"Economically they're doing very well, as compared with other third world countries. Botswana is the main exporter of diamonds in the world, and they also export copper. You've got to give the government credit. It's been stable politically its entire history. They don't approve of the apartheid in South Africa, but Botswana is dependent on them for their ports, it's a completely landlocked country. There's a fine line there that they've managed to work out," she said.

She explained that through her research into the history of this African nation, she discovered that the British protectorate began in Botswana in the 1800s, and that the country became independent in 1966. The president selected had been educated in England in preparation for running the country, and he served until his death. His vice president is now president, so the government rulership appears stable and productive.

"This is a good place to be assigned. There's not a lot of malaria because there's not a lot of water. Sixteen percent of it is game preserves, so it's very pretty. The government decides where everyone goes. I might be at any little village," said Jackson, adding that she might also be assigned to a school in one of the cities, like Gaborone, the capital, or Zimbawa.

Jackson, who graduated from BSHS in 1984, said she's anxious to go, but that she will miss her family and friends until she returns home in December 1992. Jackson is the daughter of Donna Jackson, library director at the Howard County Library.

"In Chicago, I'll get my shots, and I guess I'll eat my last pizza for a while," Jackson said.

Deck the halls

(AP) — Traditional family holiday house and tree decorations have always seemed to be a mix of favorite baubles kept from one year to the next and new homemade ornaments, often made by the children.

Kids can make sculptured ornaments with glue dough, using cookie or canape cutters or dull knives to cut out holidays shapes like stars, bells, Santas, and so on.

The clay recipe calls for 1/4 cup each of flour, cornstarch and Elmer's Glue-All. Roll out the dough on a floured board to a 1/8-inch thickness, then cut the shapes, adding a hole in each (use a piece of plastic straw, leaving it in for an hour or so). Allow the ornaments to dry for 12 to 14 hours, turning them occasionally. Then color them with a glue paint made from the glue and food coloring or cake decorating gels. Apply right from the glue bottle, or use toothpicks. Beads, glitter, ribbons and other trims can be pressed directly onto fresh glue paint. Once the paint is dry, details can be added with a fine-tipped marker.

In this media age, nostalgia may be an old advertising campaign, and if you're over 50, you may remember one of the most common images of Santa Claus was the one in the Coca-Cola ads. With that in mind, Communicorp of Atlanta has created ornaments based on Coke Christmas art originally painted by Swedish artist Haddon Sundblom during the 1930s and 1940s. The ornaments, in three-dimensional interpretations or tins with lithographed reproductions, include Santa swigging Coke and the bottle cap sprite.

NEH leader critical of U.S. educational programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teacher training, student testing and textbook selection programs are often so flawed that they hinder efforts to improve learning, a report says.

In a mandated congressional report, the chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities sternly condemned basic U.S. educational practices.

Lynne V. Cheney said the nation's teaching methods are "tyrannical machines," a phrase coined by philosopher William James to describe procedures that become both counterproductive and resistant to change once established on a large scale.

In addition, Cheney denounced school textbook selection committees that choose material without reading them, college education programs in which potential teachers spend little time studying what they eventually will teach and university systems that value research more than teaching.

"Tyrannical machines dominate American education and have contributed to its failures," Cheney said in the report. "The most effective course for dealing with tyrannical machines is to provide alternative systems and to ensure that people can choose — and choose wisely — among them."

Because of that, Cheney said, allowing students and parents to decide where to attend school is "one of the most promising ways of dismantling tyrannical machines and revitalizing the schools."

"When there are alternative ways to become a teacher or to choose textbooks or to assess students — and when people know about them — it is more difficult for outmoded and unsatisfactory methods to dominate. Healthy competition is anathema to tyrannical machines," she said.

The report won accolades from Deputy Education Secretary Ted Sanders, who said, "We need a revolution in teaching and learning."

But Rod Kelchner, president of Mansfield University in Mansfield,

Pa., said that "while Cheney makes some valid points, they are overridden by generalizing and bashing to the point of absurdity."

The Scholastic Aptitude Test, described in the report as the centerpiece of our educational system, filled an important need when first devised in the 1920s when officials wanted to detach college entrance examinations from the high school curriculum.

Now, Cheney said the SAT tries to avoid testing what students have learned about subjects such as history and literature.

In the past 10 years, the test has been attacked repeatedly yet it continues to thrive and to exercise considerable power. She said, "not only do institutions of higher education rank students by their SATs, they in turn are ranked by them, their status going up or down depending on the average scores of the incoming class."

"Secondary schools are judged by SATs: Local housing prices rise and fall; principals and superintendents are hired and fired; and the entire nation reaches conclusions about the state of American education."

College Board President Donald Stewart took issue with Cheney's assessment of the SAT, saying she "makes some thought-provoking and some extremely questionable statements."

"In a nation with over 26,000 secondary schools — with varying curriculums and teaching and grading standards — the SAT provides an independent, objective verification of a student's mathematical and verbal reasoning abilities, skills that are important to academic success in college," he said.

How's that?

Q. When should a person file for social security benefits and what paperwork should you have with you?

A. According to the Social Security Administration, you should file for monthly social security benefits no more than three months before you want benefits to start. Most people need to have their birth record or other evidence of age, proof of the last year's earnings, an estimate of what you will make in the current year, and in the upcoming year. To find out if other information is necessary in your particular case, and to make an appointment for convenience, call toll-free — 1-800-234-5772.

Calendar

- TODAY
- The B.S.H.S. Quarterback Club will meet at 7 p.m. in the B.S.H.S. library. The business meeting will be followed by Coach Thompson's presentation of last week's Steer game.
 - The Howard County Chapter of the NAACP will meet at 7 p.m. at the Chamber of Commerce conference room.
- TUESDAY
- The Big Spring State Hospital will sponsor an Arts and Crafts Fair from noon to 5:30 p.m. in the Tollett Chapel. For sale will be baked goods, wood craft, toys, etc. made by the patients and staff.
 - The American Legion Auxiliary will meet at 6 p.m. followed by an American Legion meeting at 7 p.m.

Colorado City ISD to meet tonight

The Colorado City Independent School Board of Trustees will have its regular meeting tonight at 7 p.m. The agenda includes opening and awarding bids for heating the gym, selling a van and purchasing a school bus. Also to be presented to the board for consideration will be a report from Whittle Communication concerning Channel 1 and its acceptance into the CISD secondary school.

The board will approve the textbook committee, consider changes in the Brownfield Trust and adopt a resolution concerning the senior's foreign exchange and graduation exercise, among other business.

The meeting will be held in the Administrative Curriculum Center board room, 534 E. 11th St., Colorado City.

- A vent window to a vehicle was broken and a purse and contents worth $75, plus a signed check for $350, were stolen on the 2600 block of S. Gregg Street, it was reported.
- Johnny Talamantez, 36, 108 E. 11th Street, was arrested Sunday and charged with DWI.

Electoral votes are shifting to the Sun Belt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The next time the nation picks a president, the "big enchilada" of politics — California — will be even bigger.

Florida and Texas are gaining more stature too, as U.S. House seats shift to the Sun Belt and bring with them more of the electoral votes that decide who wins the White House.

The seats will shift when new congressional districts are drawn next year to reflect the population shifts detected in the 1990 Census.

In 1992, California, Florida and Texas will carry a combined 111 electoral votes — 14 more than they did in 1988. That's 41 percent of the 270 needed to win the presidency.

California alone will have gained seven electoral votes, giving it 54 — 20 percent of the victory threshold.

"It's pretty hard to see how you're going to win if you don't carry California," said GOP consultant John Sears, a top official in the 1976 and 1980 presidential campaigns of Ronald Reagan. "It's as close as you can be to a situation where you've just got to have it now. We've never had anything this big to contend with."

The new math of the Electoral College means that the 1992 candidates will be spending more time and money in California. And with Florida and Texas also drawing more interest, smaller states not vital to a candidate's electoral puzzle likely will get far less attention.

"Obviously it skews it even more from what it used to be, and a result will be ignoring more states," said Lyn Nofziger, who

"It's pretty hard to see how you're going to win if you don't carry California. . . . We've never had anything this big to contend with."

GOP consultant John Sears

ran the White House political operation for Reagan. "You're going to have to focus heavily on those three states."

President Bush won all three in 1988, as did Reagan in both of his winning campaigns. So the shift bodes well for Republicans, even more so because the electoral votes going to areas of GOP strength are coming from the Northeast and Midwest, the Democratic Party's traditional base.

New York, for example, was the biggest prize with 45 electoral votes when John F. Kennedy was elected in 1960; 41 when Jimmy Carter won in 1976. It was down to 36 for the 1984 and 1988 elections and will drop again to 33 in 1992.

The 1992 shifts will transfer 19 electoral votes in all, mostly from the Northeast and Midwest to the Sun Belt. California is expected to get seven, Florida four and Texas three. New York will lose three; Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois will each lose two.

"This continuing trend is one of the big reasons Republicans have been strong at the presidential level," said Sears.

Democratic victories in the Florida and Texas gubernatorial races and a gain of two House seats in the South in last week's elections had the party boasting that it had blunted the so-called Republican realignment in the South.

"Realignment is a myth," said Rep. Beryl Anthony of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. "Realignment is dead."

But the Democratic wins in Florida and Texas had at least as much to do with the shortcomings of the Republican candidates as with the popularity of the winners, and don't automatically translate into a boost for the Democratic presidential nominee in two years, analysts say.

Phillips said Texas and Florida would prove difficult for a Democratic nominee to win, "assuming of course a northern liberal nominee." California, on the other hand, "is probably a shade more liberal than the rest of the country," he said, so it could be an easier trophy for a Democrat to win.

Filipinos are lining up at the fuel pumps

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Huge lines formed at gasoline stations throughout the city today as a government plan went into effect to limit sales and save fuel in the wake of the Persian Gulf crisis.

Industry officials warned that the panic-buying was dangerously depleting gasoline supplies.

Industry and congressional sources criticized the government plan and complained that President Corason Aquino's administration had failed to consult the private sector. They also criticized the government for failing to inform the public on details of the fuel-saving plan.

The Philippines imports all its oil, and about 85 percent comes from the Middle East.

Station owners said panic-buying began Sunday, one day before the start of government restrictions on hours of operation. Many stations closed early Sunday, claiming they had run out of supplies.

Others limited customers to purchases of $4.50, enough for a quarter tank in mid-sized cars.

Last week, the Energy Regulatory Board ordered stations to operate only between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. during work days and to close at 5 p.m. on Sundays.

On Friday, Mrs. Aquino also ordered the three national oil companies to curb sales by 10 percent as part of the conservation plan. Under the order, service stations will only receive supplies every 10 days.

Pedro Lobos, vice president of the Philippine Petroleum Dealers Association, said that if panic-buying continues, the 10-day supplies will be gone in two or three days.

Lobos urged the government to suspend the 10 percent reduction order to allow time to devise a workable conservation plan.

Long lines extended from the stations out into major streets, clogging traffic during the morning rush hour.

Presidential Executive Secretary Catalino Macaraig said there was no cause for panic-buying.

"I don't know about it, but I will look into it," he said. "Maybe this was brought about by the price increase being predicted in the media."

Mrs. Aquino was out of the country today. She had left Sunday for Japan to attend the enthronement of Emperor Akihito despite a self-imposed ban on foreign travel because of the country's economic and political problems.

Before leaving, she ordered the Cabinet Security Committee to meet today to discuss contingency plans for saving fuel.

"If we don't discipline ourselves, then we cannot prolong our present inventory of oil," said the committee's chairman, Justice Secretary Franklin Drilon.

The country's fuel crisis was brought about by the steep decline in dollar reserves.

Earthquake kits are in demand in Midwest

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Midwest is thinking about earthquakes. Survival kits are popping up on store shelves and companies are hawkking everything from anti-shatter window film to portable chemical toilets.

"It's incredible, the response we're getting," said Henry Lawson, vice president of CEPP Corp. of Los Angeles, the nation's largest emergency preparedness firm. "We're shipping thousands of kits. We're getting lots of orders."

The sudden upswing in business stems from a projection by New Mexico climatologist Iben Browning. He says there's a 50 percent chance of a major earthquake occurring Dec. 3 on the New Madrid Fault.

The fault zone runs from Marked Tree, Ark., north to Cairo, Ill., and touches portions of Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee, Illinois and Kentucky.

On Thursday night, a minor earthquake near New Madrid, Mo., shook some homes and heightened worry. The tremor was felt in at least three states, but there were no reports of damage or injuries.

Browning's projection has been roundly criticized by earthquake experts and geologists as nothing more than a random guess, but that hasn't prevented schools, businesses and residents from preparing for the big one.

And companies that specialize in earthquake preparedness are getting ready for a big surge in business this week because they expect a two-part NBC mini-series about a tremor in Los Angeles will stir up more concern. Scientists and emergency officials have criticized that series, which ends tonight, for exaggerating the death and devastation a big quake would cause.

CEPP Corp. is one of at least a dozen companies or groups selling various emergency kits that range in cost from $15 to $150 and include such items as thermal blankets, pouches of water and food guaranteed to last five years, flashlights and first-aid supplies.

Another California company, The Emergency Lifeline of Santa Ana, is conducting 16 emergency preparedness seminars in the region at $50 a person and has mailed 10,000 catalogs to schools and businesses here.

The catalog includes such items as:

- "QuakeBrace," which uses industrial-strength Velcro to fasten computer equipment or other expensive items to walls or desktops.
- A combination radio and flashlight powered by a hand-cranked generator.
- Shatter-resistant window film that can prevent flying or falling glass.
- A portable chemical toilet.

"I'm sure all of the companies in the emergency preparedness business have their eyes on the Midwest," said Kathy Gannon, a native Missourian who founded the Santa Ana company five years ago. "There's already getting to be a glut of kits on the market."

These products are familiar to Californians, rattled by many quakes over the years. The emergency preparedness industry has been growing quickly there since the mid-1980s, but the Midwest is really the first new market.

tax deductible for the hunters. He said that his usual fee for deer processing is $35, and that some hunters are choosing to take the processed deer home, instead of donating it to the food bank.

"I hate to see them do that, a lot of people need the meat," he said.

State-approved processing plants also are located in Midland, Fort Stockton, Barnhart and Odessa.

Hunters pay the processing plants a $15 fee, which pays for the cost of materials, Miles said. The processing plants will then grind the meat into hamburger, put it in 2-pound packages and send them to the food banks, he said.

A 50-pound deer can produce about 35 pounds of ground meat.

As an incentive for hunters to donate their game, Miles said he would waive the $15 fee and process the first 25 deer for free.

"We'll probably have one for the needy pretty soon," he said.

Mideast

the Soviet Union expressed concern that Washington might attack Iraqi forces without giving the U.N.-ordered trade embargo enough of a chance.

In another sign of a possible crack in the alliance, Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak was quoted today as saying that Egyptian soldiers will not enter Iraq even if U.S. and other troops should attack, but that they could enter Kuwait as a peacekeeping force.

When Baker visited Cairo last week, a senior U.S. official said the United States is confident that Egypt would fight alongside U.S. forces if war broke out.

Asked by his party's newspaper, Mayo, whether Egypt would send troops to Iraq following a U.S.-led attack, Mubarak said:

"No, we have nothing to do with Iraq." But if the anti-Iraq allies invaded Kuwait, he said, "We do not mind at all entering Kuwait as peacekeeping forces . . . although I do not hope for this day at all."

In other developments Sunday: Foreign Minister Qian Qichen of China arrived in Baghdad. A Chinese diplomat said Qian would inform Saddam that China would not veto a U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force against Iraq.

Such a measure has been drafted by the United States but has not yet been circulated in the U.N. Security Council, where the Soviet Union, China, Britain, France and the United States have veto power as permanent members.

Iraq reportedly had hoped for a Chinese veto.

The Baghdad government denounced food hoarders and said the price of rice would increase. It did not specify by how much.

Before it overran Kuwait on Aug. 2 and was hit by the global embargo, Iraq imported about 70 percent of its food. In September, it began rationing essential foodstuffs including rice, wheat, milk, sugar and cooking oil.

Howard hoopsters in action tonight

Both the Howard College Hawks and Lady Hawks will be in action tonight. The 4-0 Lady Hawks, ranked No. 16 in the nation, will be on the road in Abilene against Hardin-Simmons University at 7:30.

Big Spring cagers start Tuesday

The Big Spring Steers and Lady Steers will officially begin their seasons Tuesday when they play in front of the home folks. The Lady Steers will play Wall at Steer Gym. The Steers will play Odessa High at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Fiesta Bowl will stay at home

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Fiesta Bowl has settled the question of where to stage its New Year's Day production by electing to stay at home. Now the search is on for two teams willing to ignore the backlash against Arizona voters who refused to enact a Martin Luther King Jr. holiday in Tuesday's general election.

Graf favorite in indoor finale

NEW YORK (AP) — Gone is the over-30 crowd — to retirement and injury. This year's Virginia Slims Championships is all about women's tennis of today — and the future. Defending champion Steffi Graf is ranked No. 1 in the world at the age of 21. And she's one of the "old-timers" who will be in the season-ending $3 million tournament that gets underway tonight at Madison Square Garden.

Montana, Rice too much for Pokes

IRVING (AP) — Joe Montana beat Dallas for the fifth time in five tries, and an acrobatic touchdown catch by Jerry Rice brought back images of 1982 and "The Catch" by Dwight Clark that signaled the fall of the Cowboys and the rise of the San Francisco 49ers.

IRVING — San Francisco 49ers running back Roger Craig (33) is tackled by Dallas Cowboys linebacker Ken Norton (51) after a four-yard gain and a first down in first quarter action Sunday night at Texas Stadium.

Rice caught 12 passes for 147 yards in the 49ers' 24-6 romp over the punchless Cowboys Sunday night. The 49ers (9-0) are off to their best start since 1948, when they began the year 10-0.

The only other unbeaten team in the NFL is the New York Giants, who crushed the Los Angeles Rams 31-7 in Anaheim, Calif., Sunday.

The Giants and 49ers face each other Dec. 3 at Candlestick Park for a matchup on Monday Night Football.

Rice's biggest catch Sunday was a 7-yard touchdown grab that gave the 49ers a 14-3 lead in the second quarter.

He outjumped defender Kenneth Gant for the high toss, caught the ball in his left hand and cradled it to his stomach before stutter-stepping in the end zone.

"He's got to be the only guy in the world who could have caught that ball," Montana said.

"I really didn't think he had a chance to catch it," said Gant, shaking his head. "Rice, he's great. Everybody knows that. And Montana, he knows exactly where to throw the ball — even if nobody else but Rice could catch it."

It was reminiscent of Clark's leaping, last-minute catch on Jan. 10, 1982, in the NFC Championship game against Dallas that started the 49ers on their trek to four Super Bowls.

"Jerry is amazing the way he can get open," Montana said. "He has the ability to find the holes and improvise. He's the kind of player who wants the ball."

Dallas dropped to 3-7, losing to the 49ers for the sixth straight time. The Cowboys managed just two Ken Willis field goals, a 23-yarder in the first period and a 37-yarder just before the half.

Montana, playing his first game in Texas Stadium, completed 27 of 37 passes for 290 yards, capping his performance by scoring on a 4-yard run with 3:12 to play.

Cowboys linebacker Jack Del

Rio said Montana "is everything he has been the last few years and more. He's at his best on third down. That's when he wins the game. That's when he kills you."

"This defense gave it all," Del Rio said. "And still, Joe does it. If we only score six, then we've got to hold them to three, and with Joe, you just can't do that."

San Francisco won its 17th consecutive game, including playoffs, second-longest in NFL history, and extended its NFL regular-season record of 15 consecutive road victories.

The 49ers spotted Dallas a 3-0 first period lead on Willis' 23-yard field goal, but score 17 points in the second quarter for a 17-6 halftime lead.

Rice fumbled at the end of a 37-yard pass from Montana but, referee Gene Barth said a whistle had stopped the play at the Dallas 5.

A face mask penalty on the play by defensive back Issiac Holt gave the 49ers the ball at the Dallas 2. It took San Francisco four plays to score, with Tom Rathman plunging across from inches away.

Linebacker Matt Millen positioned San Francisco for its second touchdown when he intercepted Troy Aikman's pass at the Dallas 22. Aikman was bumped by Dallas fullback Tommie Agee on the wayward throw.

Six plays later Rice made his acrobatic catch on third-and-5.

"Joe and Jerry did the same thing they've been doing for six years. They just go out and do it," said Holt, who guarded Rice most of the night.

Willis had a 37-yard field goal for Dallas with 32 seconds remaining in the half. But a 27-yard Montana-to-Rice sideline pass set up San Francisco for Mike Cofer's 42-yard field goal at the gun.

Holt said he was proud of the Cowboys' defense, especially because the 49ers held a 40-39-19-21 advantage on time-of-possession.

"We're keeping ourselves in the games," he said, "even against the Super Bowl champions. We were in it."

But Holt said he was frustrated that the Cowboys' offense wasn't producing.

"Yah, that starts to hit you," he said.

"What's wrong with our offense?" asked Aikman, who completed nine of 21 passes for 96 yards. "That's the No. 1 question of the night. I wish I had the answer."

Kansas City linebacker goes sack crazy, but one that got away seals Chiefs' doom

By The Associated Press Linebacker Derrick Thomas had a memorable day for the Kansas City Chiefs with a record seven sacks. What he will never forget, however, is the eighth sack that got away.

Thomas barely missed sacking Dave Krieg on the final play of the game Sunday, but the Seattle quarterback ducked away and passed to Paul Skansi among a crowd of players for a 25-yard touchdown. Norm Johnson's extra point gave the Seahawks a 17-16 victory, Seattle's first win in Kansas City since 1980.

"I thought I had him," Thomas said. "That last sack I didn't get is the one I'm going to remember."

"I'm glad they didn't call in-the-grasp," Krieg said. "He had his hands around my hips. I just shook away from him, fortunately."

Skansi said Krieg's scrambling was responsible for the success of the play because his receivers needed time to reach the end zone since there was only time for one play.

"That's Dave Krieg," Skansi said. "He's the most serious competitor I know. He can be down but he just doesn't give up."

But despite the Chiefs' loss, it was Thomas who was the outstanding performer of the game.

"He has outstanding quickness," said Seattle tackle Andy Heck, who tried to block Thomas. "If he gets an edge on you, he's going to blow right past you."

In other NFL games, it was Chicago 30, Atlanta 24; Indianapolis 13, New England 10; Miami 17, the New York Jets 3; Minnesota 17, Detroit 7; Buffalo 45, Phoenix 14; New Orleans 35, Tampa Bay 7; San Diego 19, Denver 7; Green Bay 29, the Los Angeles Raiders 16; the New York Giants 31, the Los Angeles Rams 7; and San Francisco 24, Dallas 6.

The four AFC Central teams — Cleveland, Cincinnati, Houston and Pittsburgh — had the week off. Washington is at Philadelphia in tonight's game.

The Seahawks (4-5) moved 66 yards in four plays in their final drive, helped by Krieg's 25-yard pass to Tommy Kane. Nick Lowery kicked three field goals for the Chiefs (5-4) and Dan Saleaumua recovered a fumble in the end zone for Kansas City's only touchdown in three weeks.

Thomas, the AFC's defensive rookie of the year last season, broke the NFL sack record of six set by San Francisco's Fred Dean against New Orleans in 1983.

Giants 31, Rams 7 Phil Simms completed 19 of 26 passes for 213 yards and one touchdown as New York joined the 49ers at 9-0.

The visiting Giants also stopped a three-game losing streak against the Rams, including an overtime loss in last season's playoffs, and won their 12th straight regular-season game.

The Giants led just 10-7 early in the third quarter, but the Giants bounced back with an 83-yard scoring drive capped by Rodney Hampton's 19-yard run.

Ottis Anderson and Lewis Tillman added short touchdown runs, and the Giants held Rams quarterback Jim Everett to 17 completions in 36 attempts for 186 yards and three interceptions.

Bills 45, Cardinals 14 Jim Kelly threw four touchdown passes despite snow, wind and rain in Buffalo, plus the loss of leading receiver Andre Reed with an ankle injury.

Kelly completed 11 of 16 passes for 165 yards and touchdowns to Keith McKeller, Butch Rolle, Steve Tasker and Don Beebe. All of the game's scoring came while the teams moved with a 29-mph wind behind them.

The Bills (8-1) won their seventh straight game, while the Cardinals fell to 2-7.

Dolphins 17, Jets 3 Miami won its sixth straight game, helped by James Hasty's muffed punt and an "inadvertent whistle" call that negated a fumble recovery by New York.

The two breaks set up both Dolphins touchdowns and their defense didn't allow a touchdown for the fourth straight game, keeping Miami (8-1) even with Buffalo atop the AFC East.

The visiting Dolphins sacked Ken O'Brien four times, intercepted him twice and let the Jets (4-6) inside the 32 only twice.

Vikings 17, Lions 7 Heisman Trophy winner Andre

KANSAS CITY — Seattle Seahawks quarterback Dave Krieg (17) lays beneath Kansas City Chiefs linebacker Derrick Thomas after being sacked for a 14-yard loss Sunday afternoon.

Ware was ineffective in his first NFL start, and his second-half relief, Bob Gagliano, fared no better for Detroit against Minnesota.

The Vikings had four interceptions — two each of Gagliano and Ware — and recovered a fumble, and scored all of their points after Lions' turnovers, including Al Noga's 26-yard interception return for a touchdown. Ware was exciting at times, but did not direct Detroit to any points. He completed 5 of 11 passes for 48 yards and ran six times for 34 yards.

Ware started in place of Rodney Peete, who has a pulled hamstring and wasn't in uniform.

Runnin' Rebs start season as number one

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS UNLV starts the college basketball season where it can't end it — as No. 1.

The Runnin' Rebels, who won the national championship after being the preseason No. 1 last season, were banned from this year's NCAA tournament and won't be able to defend their title. But that didn't stop the poll voters from making them No. 1 today.

All but 15 of the 60 voters on the national board of writers and broadcasters had UNLV first on their ballots. The Runnin' Rebels had 1,601 points, well ahead of Arkansas, 1,506, and Arizona, 1,488, which each received five first-place votes. Michigan State was fourth with one first-place vote and 1,302 points and was followed in the Top Ten by North Carolina, Duke, Alabama, Indiana, Georgetown and Ohio State.

UNLV has four starters back from the team which beat Duke 103-73 in the most lopsided championship game ever played. All-American Larry Johnson and defensive star Stacey Augmon both opted to return to the Runnin' Rebels rather than go to the NBA, only to find out in July they could not defend their title.

Coach Jerry Tarkanian, the center of the 14-year-old allegations, and the school offered several alternative punishments to the NCAA's Infractions Committee last month and it is possible the postseason ban for 1991 may yet be overturned.

North Carolina, the highest team in the poll not ranked in last season's final balloting, had 1,282 points, 120 more than Duke, which received two first-place votes. Alabama had 1,110 points to edge Indiana by 21. Georgetown had the final two first-place votes and 1,054 points, while Ohio State's 887 points made the Buckeyes the third Big Ten team in the Top Ten with Michigan State and Indiana.

North Carolina, which in 1982 was the last team to start and finish No. 1 before UNLV, and Indiana both have freshmen to thank for their lofty rankings. The Tar Heels have the nation's top recruiting class with five players led by 7-foot Eric Montross, while Indiana's young team will be augmented by guard Damon Bailey.

UCLA started the Second Ten and was followed by Pittsburgh, Syracuse, LSU, Oklahoma, the No. 1 team in last season's final poll, Georgia Tech, Connecticut, Virginia, Temple and Missouri, which was just socked with a two-year probation which includes a ban from this year's NCAA tournament.

The final five berths went to Georgia, Texas, Louisville, Southern Mississippi and St. John's.

In addition to North Carolina, 10 schools weren't ranked in last season's final poll, with Pittsburgh (12-17) the only team in the preseason Top 25 with a sub-.500 record last season. The Panthers return four starters from last season and will be helped greatly by the return of point guard Sean Miller, who missed last season after undergoing surgery on his ankle.

Pitt is one of five Big East teams in the rankings — along with Georgetown, Syracuse, Connecticut and St. John's — while the Atlantic Coast Conference has four — North Carolina, Duke, Georgia Tech and Virginia — and the Big Ten and Southeastern Conference — Alabama, LSU and Georgia — three each.

Buffaloes move into second

The Orange Bowl may pack a powerful 1-2 punch on New Year's Day.

Notre Dame retained its No. 1 ranking and Colorado moved up from fourth to second in today's Associated Press poll. If they hold their positions until Jan. 1, the Orange Bowl will feature a winner-take-all clash for the national championship.

The Fighting Irish (8-1) were a near unanimous pick as the top team after beating Tennessee 34-29 Saturday. They received 55 of 60 first-place votes and 1,495 of a possible 1,500 points from a nationwide panel of writers and broadcasters.

Colorado (9-1-1), which beat Oklahoma State 41-22, got the other five first-place votes and 1,419 points. Losses by No. 2 Washington and No. 3 Houston helped the Buffaloes gain their highest ranking of the season.

Miami (6-2), which did not play Saturday, rose two spots to third with 1,349 points. The Hurricanes will meet the Southwest Conference champion in the Cotton Bowl.

Georgia Tech (8-0-1), the only Division I-A team without a loss, jumped from seventh to fourth after edging Virginia Tech 6-3.

Brigham Young (8-1) went from eighth to fifth after beating Wyoming 45-14. Florida (8-1), which can't play in a bowl because of NCAA probation, moved up four notches to sixth following a 38-7 victory over Georgia.

Texas (7-1) shot up seven spots to No. 7 after handing Houston its first loss, 45-24.

Fangio wins grand prix event

DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — Juan Manuel Fangio II, nephew of the famed Formula One driver, captured the Camel Grand Prix of Southern California sports car race Sunday as Geoff Brabham drove to a conservative fourth-place finish and his third consecutive IMSA GT Prototype sports car title.

Fangio's Toyota Eagle led for the final 12 minutes of the one-hour, 45-minute race on the 1.60-mile, 10-turn Del Mar Fairgrounds temporary circuit. He took the lead when John Paul Jr., driving a Nissan GTP, gave up the top spot to make a brief fuel stop.

Fangio, who made his fuel stop early in the race during a caution period, earned his fourth GTP victory of the season.

Brabham needed only to finish in the top 10 to wrap up the $150,000 championship.

American 'Stars' close with win

TOKYO (AP) — Chuck Finley and Randy Johnson combined for a no-hitter and Greg Olson hit a three-run homer as a touring team of major leaguers defeated a Japanese all-star team 5-0 Sunday in the final game of their exhibition series.

Japan took the eight-game series 4-3-1. It was the second time a North American team ended a Japanese tour with a losing record. The San Francisco Giants were 3-6 in 1970.

Hawks at home against Howard Payne JV

Special to the Herald

Fresh off a three game sweep in the Midland College Chaparral Classic, the Howard College Hawks will entertain the Howard Payne junior varsity at 7:30 tonight at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The No. 6 ranked Hawks pushed their season record to 4-0 over the weekend with wins over Angelina, 120-117; Jacksonville, 111-88; and Murray State, 121-88.

The Hawks were led in Midland by sophomores Vernon Broughton, Johnnie McDowell, and Harvey Petty, as they garnered all-tournament honors.

Last season's nation-leading offense is off to a fast start again. The Hawks are currently scoring at a clip of 123 points per game, while giving up 104.

"I'm very pleased with our offensive output, considering the caliber of teams we've faced so far," said Howard coach Steve Green. "Both Angelina and Jacksonville are talented ballclubs that will have great seasons in the east. Both defeated WJCAC conference rival Western, Texas in the Chap Classic."

"Tonight's game will give us an opportunity to look at a lot of different faces in a game situation. Our depth of 12 players is going to be our major strength this season."

gives you a great advantage as far as versatility, and makes it difficult for an opponent to focus on any one thing in preparing for you," said Green.

Howard's balanced scoring attack boasted double figure scoring from eight different people in Midland. "When you have the capability to go 10 to 11 deep, it

Howard will return to action following tonight's contest Thursday in the Western Texas Classic at Snyder at 7:00 p.m. vs. Weatherford.

LA Lakers still struggling

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Los Angeles Lakers no longer look like the composed, confident team that won 63 games last season.

"The concentration has to be there for 48 minutes," coach Mike Dunleavy said after the Lakers' record fell to 1-3 with a 109-103 loss to the New York Knicks on Sunday night. "I have to take some of the blame as the coach, but each individual player has to look inside himself."

Magic Johnson had 24 points, 15 rebounds and 14 assists, and backcourt teammate Byron Scott scored 24 points, but the Lakers were dominated inside.

Knicks center Patrick Ewing had 27 points and 14 rebounds, forward Kiki Vandeweghe scored 22 points and Charles Oakley grabbed 12 rebounds.

"We need to get tougher down low," Johnson said. "Our problem so far has not been the new offense, but too many mental mistakes. We threw the ball away twice out of bounds and lost a rebound when we could have dusted the game. We have to get mentally tougher when the game is tight."

Trail Blazers 138, Clippers 107

NBA

Portland remained the NBA's only unbeaten team, handing Los Angeles its fourth consecutive lopsided defeat.

Clyde Drexler scored 17 of his 23 points in the runaway first half and Kevin Duckworth added 22 points for the Trail Blazers.

Charles Smith had 21 points and Ken Norman 20 for the Clippers, who have lost four straight games by an average margin of 24 after winning their first two of the season.

The Trail Blazers (5-0) built a 69-42 halftime lead as Drexler scored 13 points in the first quarter and Cliff Robinson came off the bench for 10 of his 16 points in the second period.

Duckworth scored 14 points in the third period, hitting six of eight shots from the field, as Portland extended its lead to 105-76.

Rockets 110, Jazz 90

Houston rolled over Utah behind a dominating performance from Akeem Olatujun, who had 31 points, 21 rebounds and seven blocked shots.

A 2-for-16 shooting slump by the Rockets allowed the Jazz to take a 79-78 lead with 8:27 remaining in the game.

But Houston regained the lead for good on its next possession with a 3-point play by Otis Thorpe that started a 21-2 spurt. Olatujun and Kenny Smith each scored 7 points during the run that gave Houston a 99-81 lead with 3:06 remaining.

Utah guard Darrell Griffith, inserted into the starting lineup when Jeff Malone could not play because of a back sprain, scored 24 points to pass the 12,000-point mark for his career.

Timberwolves 108, Magic 81

Minnesota outscored winless Orlando 30-10 during one second-half stretch, and the Timberwolves posted their second straight lopsided victory.

The Magic (0-6) have lost 21 of 22 games, 30 of 32 and 37 of 40 since last season. Against the Timberwolves, the Magic shot 40 percent from the floor and committed 19 turnovers.

Minnesota continued its domination of the NBA's most recent expansion teams. On Friday, the Timberwolves won 106-77 over Charlotte.

SAN ANTONIO — San Antonio Spurs David Robinson (50) goes airborne while defending against Houston Rockets Akeem Olatujun during action Saturday night. The Spurs won the game 111-110.

Packers 29, Raiders 16

Don Majkowski threw two touchdown passes and Chris Jacke kicked a team-record five field goals for Green Bay, which snapped the Raiders' 10-game homefield winning streak under coach Art Shell.

Majkowski threw a 28-yard touchdown pass to Perry Kemp on the first play of the fourth quarter and also hit Vince Workman for a 5-yard score. The Packers (4-5) won even though Majkowski was sacked eight times.

Jacke kicked field goals of 39, 51, 32, 23 and 20 yards, and is 17 of 19 this year. The Raiders fell to 6-3 with their second straight loss, but still lead the AFC West.

Chargers 19, Broncos 7

Cornerback Gill Byrd intercepted two passes, setting up 10 second-half points, and Marion Butts rushed for 114 yards on 16 carries for San Diego.

The Chargers (5-5) won their third straight game, getting four field goals from John Carney and a 1-yard touchdown plunge from linebacker-turned-fullback Gary Plummer.

The Broncos (3-6) trailed 9-7 at halftime, their first deficit at the half this season.

Bears 30, Falcons 24

Wendell Davis caught five passes for 105 yards, scored one touchdown and set up another with a 51-yard reception as Chicago (8-1) won its fifth straight game and handed Atlanta its 15th consecutive road loss.

The Bears led 24-3 early in the third quarter, but the Falcons (3-6) rallied to within a touchdown. Then Vestee Jackson returned an interception 45 yards for a touchdown with 1:28 left for a 30-17 lead.

Chicago cornerback Lemuel Stinson, who had engaged in a verbal dispute with Falcons cornerback Deion Sanders and wide receiver Andre Rison during the week, intercepted two passes by Chris Miller.

Saints 35, Buccaneers 7

Craig Heyward, who couldn't control his weight for three years, continued his rejuvenation with his second straight 100-yard rushing game for New Orleans.

Heyward, trimmed down to 259 pounds from a high of 290, rushed for 122 yards a week ago and 155 on Sunday. In the first seven games of the season, Heyward carried 11 times for 35 yards.

Colts 13, Patriots 10

Jeff George, only 6-for-24 for the day, completed a 26-yard scoring pass to Bill Brooks with 2:05 remaining to lead Indianapolis over New England.

The Colts (3-6) stopped a three-game losing streak while New England lost its seventh straight and fell to a league-worst 1-8.

Miami to Cotton Bowl?

DALLAS (AP) — It will be defending national champion Miami against the Southwest Conference champion in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

Jim Brock, executive vice president of the Cotton Bowl, confirmed Sunday night that an invitation will be extended to Miami.

"We have talked to the University of Miami, and it would be safe to say that on November 24th, which is the official selection date, we will invite the University of Miami. We expect them to accept. It's going to be a great game," Brock said at Texas Stadium, where he was attending the NFL game between San Francisco and Dallas.

The Cotton Bowl's first priority was No. 1-ranked Notre Dame, but Brock said he had no regrets.

"There's been a grin on my face since yesterday. We're happy to get Miami."

Earlier Sunday, Miami athletic director Sam Jankovich announced No. 5 Miami's intention to accept a Cotton Bowl bid after Orange Bowl officials said Sunday they were going with top-ranked Notre Dame against Big Eight champion Colorado.

Jankovich said Miami is happy to play in the Cotton Bowl, but also felt college football is missing a great opportunity to determine which team best deserves the national title.

Miami will probably play No. 14 Texas in the Cotton Bowl, but Baylor and Texas A&M remain in the running for the Southwest conference title.

Happy birthday

NEW YORK (AP) — Turning 81 doesn't scare Katharine Hepburn, who says: "I look forward to oblivion."

"I'm what is known as gradually disintegrating," Hepburn told The Associated Press. "I don't fear the next world, or anything. I don't fear hell, and I don't look forward to heaven."

HEPBURN

The star of such films as "On Golden Pond," "Bringing Up Baby," "The Philadelphia Story" and "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" turned 81 Thursday.

In the interview in her home last month, Hepburn said she still gets acting offers.

"Yes, I get offered roles," she said. "But I'm fascinated by writing now. I find all life thrilling."

Campaign promises

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton kept a campaign promise by dancing through the streets of this one-time frontier town. He sweetened the deal with some impromptu jamming on the saxophone.

The Democrat, re-elected to a fifth term Tuesday, had pledged to dance through the streets of Fort Smith if he won in Republican-dominated Sebastian County.

The governor and his wife, Hillary, stepped out Thursday to the strains of "Satin Doll." Police stopped downtown traffic for about 45 minutes.

Clinton, who has played his saxophone on NBC's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," later joined the band in a rendition of "Summertime," after someone gave him a sax.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1990

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Richard Mulligan and Dack Rambo, TV producer Garry Marshall.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stop worrying about unimportant details. Friends bring you joyful news. Better health will be yours if you adopt a more active lifestyle. You feel new enthusiasm for your job.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not expect higher-ups to be open to new ideas today. An older person can help you sort out a financial problem. Be discreet if dating someone who works at your company.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends look to you for guidance. Set a good example. You could spend a lively evening in the company of a member of the opposite sex. Spruce up your appearance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22):

Chances are that, if you lose something important, you will find it after a long search. Curtail spending. Your mate may be more demanding than usual. Devote more time to home life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be cautious in your business dealings. Read legal documents carefully and pay attention to public opinion. Consult lawyers if you have any doubts. A close relationship is more rewarding than ever.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get together with someone more experienced than yourself if you need help with an important project. Review your finances this afternoon. Do not count on a major increase in income.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow up on yesterday's developments, particularly where romance is concerned. Expect some confusion where your finances are involved. You are in better shape than you think.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will have to be patient with romance. Let the object of your affections make the next move. Things will improve. Do not hesitate to accept a date with someone else.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Overindulgence could cause you problems. Pay attention to what your loved ones are saying. Get some daily exercise if at all possible. Your motivation is stronger than in the past.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Conflicts could arise where children are concerned. Try to remember what it was like to be a child. A relative receives good news. Romance looks mostly happy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Begin the day by throwing yourself into your work and getting as far ahead as you can. There is a good chance romance will beckon later today. Stay home and relax tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A change of scenery would do you good today. Getting away from routine concerns for a day could change your whole outlook. You will return to your work with new enthusiasm.

Q. When should a person file for social security benefits and what paperwork should you have with you?
A. According to the Social Security Administration, you should file for monthly social security benefits no more than three months before you want benefits to start. Most people need to have their birth record or other evidence of age, proof of the last year's earnings, an estimate of what you will make in the current year, and in the upcoming year. To find out if other information is necessary in your particular case, and to make an appointment for convenience, call toll-free — 1-800-234-5772.

Family says frog to return again

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Kermit the Frog, the fuzzy green alter ego of the late muppeteer Jim Henson, will live on with someone new supplying his voice. Kermit will be among the characters appearing in "The Muppets Celebrate Jim Henson" on CBS Nov. 21. The amiable amphibian has been a mainstay of the Muppets for 35 years. Henson, who directed his motions and supplied his voice, died of pneumonia in May. "When Jim was alive, he said if anything happened to him, Kermit must go on right away," Henson's widow, Jane, told TV Guide, the magazine reports in its Nov. 17 issue. "Because of Kermit's significant place, Jim had essentially chosen who he thought could do it. But we don't want to say who it is before the show." "The performer needs time. Kermit won't come back so strong at first. Then little by little, he will get his whole personality back." Young viewers ensured Kermit's return. "We found the kids really wanted to keep Kermit going," said Henson's daughter, Cheryl. "It was a touchy thing. They were sorry Jim had died and wanted to know if the Muppets could die." "We thought that the Muppets were characters, not people, and that it was much better to say that they don't die."

Agencies ask hunters to help feed the needy

ODESSA (AP) — Deer hunters across the state can donate their game to agencies that give the food to the needy under a program called Hunters for the Hungry. Permian Basin Food Bank executive director Dolly Neff had no idea how her agency could use cases of donated chili mix. Canned tuna and chicken constitute the meat supply for the food bank, which feeds the hungry in 17 counties. But ground deer meat donated by charitable hunters may replace some of the food bank's canned meat, Ms. Neff said. "It's like God planned it," Ms. Neff said of the donated chili mix and deer meat. Hunters for the Hungry is overseen by Texas' departments of Agriculture, Health and Parks and Wildlife and is sponsored by several groups, including the Texas Association of Meat Processors, Sportsmen Conservationists of Texas and Texas Association of Second Harvest Food Banks. Under the program, which went into effect this year, hunters can donate the meat from the deer they kill if it is processed at state-approved packing plants. Instead, they decided they could inspect the deer meat at processing plants. Although the food bank spent three years working to get the program approved, Ms. Neff said it was time well spent. "It paid off because we placed a lot of calls to legislators last year. They did not drop the ball," she said. "It's a godsend. Red meat is scarce at the food bank." Tommy Hubbard, owner of Hubbard Packing Co. in Big Spring, said he's state approved for the program, and he's agreed to prepare the deer meat for the food bank at a reduced processing fee of $15. But hunters are refusing to pay the fee, he said. "The hunters don't mind giving the deer, but they don't want to pay the processing fee. I guess you could say the hunters are backing out on me. They think if they donate the deer, that's enough. So many people kill deer but don't want the deer, they just do it for the sport," Hubbard said. Hubbard added that the $15 fee is tax deductible for the hunters. He said that his usual fee for deer processing is $35, and that some hunters are choosing to take the processed deer home, instead of donating it to the food bank. "I hate to see them do that, a lot of people need the meat," he said. State-approved processing plants also are located in Midland, Fort Stockton, Barnhart and Odessa.

Jean Henry, a retired science teacher, who has spent the last seven summers working in national parks, worked in Carlsbad Caverns, N.M., last summer and developed a strong appreciation for bats.

Bats: clean, gentle animals

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Bats are clean, gentle animals who eat up to 600 mosquitos per hour, according to Jean Henry. And that's not all. The 900 species of bats are preserving tropical rainforests, dispersing seeds and protecting fruit crops. Henry, a retired science teacher, spent her seventh consecutive summer as a seasonal national park ranger and interpretation naturalist. Last summer she worked in Carlsbad Caverns National Park, New Mexico. "That is caverns with an s," the Odessa resident emphasized. "There are 75 caverns in that national park."

In addition to regular ranger duties such as keeping people on the trails and answering questions, she spoke to groups in the evenings — about bats. "Historically, Carlsbad's name reflected the huge bat population. It used to be called Bat Cave National Monument. But then, there used to be more bats." Park figures vary, but Henry said that there were an estimated 8.7 million bats in 1936. The August 1990 figure was put at 250,000. The numbers fluctuate because migratory bats "head for Mexico and use Carlsbad like a motel." Why are people terrified of bats? Henry credits the wholesale destruction of bats to superstition and lack of knowledge which she hopes to help correct. • MYTH: BATS ARE BLIND. They have eyes and they can see. However, no animal can see in total darkness. Besides eyes, bats have an echolocation system like sonar that they use to find the way in pitch dark. "They scream at their target, ultrasonically. They send out a pulse of sound and catch the sound coming back. It is very precise. They analyze the sound pulse, locate an insect in the dark, hone in and grab it. We started doing the same thing during World War II. "It is so precise that they can distinguish a single human hair. If we could hear them, they would sound like high speed motor boats, but it is above our ability to hear. It's outside our range, above the frequency our ears are set to receive." • MYTH: BATS ARE UGLY. "What is ugly? They wrinkles help them analyze echolocation sounds. Bats have large ears to hear echolocation sounds and insects on the ground. A bat can hear a scor-

"They groom themselves like a cat. They hang by one foot and use the other claw-foot to clean their fur. Then they clean their feet. They do have fleas and mites that are specific to bats. That means, they die when the bat dies." Jean Henry

• MYTH: BATS DIVE INTO HAIR. "No. They make quick turns and dive to get lift to fly just like pilots." • MYTH: BATS ARE FLYING MICE. They are mammals who have fur and nurse babies. Their birth weight is one-quarter that of their mothers who weigh an average of one-half ounce. More closely related to primates than to rodents, they have their own order — Chiroptera, which means hand in the wing. The thumb is free, not buried in the wing. The long forefingers extend between thin skin spread between fingers. The skin that goes from finger to finger to create the wing is thinner than a surgical glove and feels very much like one. They, in fact, use their hands to fly. • MYTH: VAMPIRE BATS LIVE IN THE UNITED STATES. There are no vampire bats in the United States. The three species of vampire bats in Latin America feed from birds and cattle. Even with cattle they suck at the tail area, not the throat. They make a tiny incision, inject an anticoagulant and suck out about one teaspoon of blood. • MYTH: BATS ARE VICIOUS. Their teeth crush moths and beetles, but most lack the jaw strength to break human skin. "When you see them with their mouths open, they are not about to bite. They are echolocating their dinner. "They are very gentle little animals; people who study them have never been attacked." Not aggressive, they mate for life. • MYTH: BATS CARRY RABIES. "They can get rabies like any other animal and if they do, they die. They do not go mad like a dog or skunk and attack people. "That myth has continued because in early tests they carried a Rio Bravo virus which is fatal to mice but not people. Mice die of rabies-like symptoms. "We are in far more danger from our household pets than from bats." In 40 years only 16 people in the United States and Canada have died from bat-related diseases, Henry said. One died from histoplasmosis and 15 from rabies. Those were bats that had been downed with rabies and people picked them up. "Do not ever pick up any wounded or dying wild animal." • MYTH: BATS ARE UNCLEAN. "They groom themselves like a cat. They hang by one foot and use the other claw-foot to clean their fur. Then they clean their feet. They do have fleas and mites that are specific to bats. That means, they die when the bat dies. "Fear of bats is more dangerous than bats. People destroy bats from fear and ignorance. "Bats are extremely vulnerable to mass destruction because they live so close together. In 1963 Eagle Creek Cave in Arizona was the largest known bat colony in the world with 30 million Mexican free-tailed bats. In six years the count dropped to 30,000, a 99.9 percent drop. That translates to 350,000 pounds of insects not being eaten every night. That's a dreadful imbalance of nature." Even though the pesticide DDT has been banned, it is still a problem. Mother bats eat DDT-laced insects and pass it on to the young. "Cavers and other untrained explorers upset maternity caverns. Since mothers produce only one pup a year, an entire cycle is destroyed if the babies are dropped." And the other problems: owners seal up cave entrances to keep people out, dooming the bats. Habitat is lost. Hunters take their toll. Why should we care? Bats are the only major predators of night flying insects, beetles, cornborers and grasshoppers. Bats eat fruit and spread seeds of plants. Plants such as agave depend on bats for pollination. No bats, no tequilla. With a master's degree from the University of Oklahoma funded by a National Science Foundation Grant, Henry came to Odessa College as interim director of the planetarium.

Achievement day features local artists

By KATHRYN BURCH
 Martin County Extension Homemaker Achievement Day was Thursday, November 8 at the Community Center. The event, attended by 150 people, featured a delicious Mexican luncheon, fashion show and bazaar.

Extension notes

Local artisans displayed their beautiful items. Joni Lou Hazelwood had pepper necklaces, silver jewelry and underwear painted pepper hot. Mary Tunnell was showing Avon's latest fashions, jewelry and cosmetics. Winnet Brown showed some beautiful individually designed ceramic bowls. John Webb had a display of wood items, including clock faces marked with miniature tractors. He also had wooden necklaces, ideal for Christmas exchange gifts for children. The Music Club was selling fruit cakes. Stanton Club sold knives. Lakeview Club demonstrated how to do a string piece quilt and had a variety of handmade items for sale. Bill Baker had some beautiful wood pieces; including quilt racks, children's furniture and shelving. Rosella Grasha of Midland had a variety of country items, beautifully pieced corduroy jackets, stuffed animals, Christmas tree ornaments, and applied clothing. Mickey Lander was selling Christmas around the world items. The fashion show was full of beautiful items from Haislip's, Susan's Flowers, Rosella Grasha, Romper's by "Simply Us" (Clara Stewart & Kay Simpson), and home-sewn fashions. Beautiful robes, gowns, coats, dresses and fun sportswear were featured. Remember to shop Stanton first this holiday and bring your friends. Stanton, Lakeview and Lunch n' Learn Extension Homemaker Clubs did a lovely job of organizing the event. The food was delicious and the desserts were out of this world. Doris Hull was commended for the outstanding job she did on decorations. The stage featured a Spanish style mission with two gardeners working out front. Brightly colored flowers circled the stage and down the runway. Mrs. Minnie Lee Wells was recognized for being a vital Extension Homemaker member for 65 years. She can remember result demonstrations when a large barrel was mounted in the corner of the kitchen to provide indoor running water. All in all, the day was a wonderful success. If you missed it, mark your calendars today for next year. Extension Homemaker Achievement Day is held the 2nd Thursday of November. Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages, regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

 Kuwait as a peacekeeping force. When Baker visited Cairo last week, a senior U.S. official said the United States is confident that Egypt would fight alongside U.S. forces if war broke out. Asked by his party's newspaper, Mayo, whether Egypt would send troops to Iraq following a U.S.-led attack, Mubarak said: "No, we have nothing to do with Iraq." But if the anti-Iraq allies invaded Kuwait, he said, "We do not mind at all entering Kuwait as peacekeeping forces... although I do not hope for this day at all." In other developments Sunday: Foreign Minister Qian Qichen of China arrived in Baghdad. A Chinese diplomat said Qian would inform Saddam that China would not veto a U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force against Iraq. Such a measure has been drafted by the United States but has not yet been circulated in the U.N. Security Council, where the Soviet Union, China, Britain, France and the United States have veto power as permanent members. Iraq reportedly had hoped for a Chinese veto. The Baghdad government denounced food hoarders and said the price of rice would increase. It did not specify by how much. Before it overran Kuwait on Aug. 2 and was hit by the global embargo, Iraq imported about 70 percent of its food. In September, it began rationing essential foodstuffs including rice, wheat, milk, sugar and cooking oil.

 wall, with the names of more than 58,000 Vietnam war dead on it, that is the central feature of the Vietnam memorial. Ms. Ramati said the nine-member jury was divided. Veterans favored a representative sculpture; designers leaned toward an abstract design. Diane Carlson Evans, director of the project, said the two finalists would be asked to refine their proposals and the final design would be a collaboration of the two. The target date for dedication is 1992. At the Vietnam memorial, representatives of military and patriotic groups placed wreaths in front of the wall as a bagpiper played "Abide With Me." The National Park Service estimated the crowd at 5,000. The weather was bright and sunny, with a crisp wind. The ceremonies were held on Sunday, the traditional Veterans Day, although today is the official national holiday. Veterans Day is not a holiday for the 230,000 American troops deployed in the Persian Gulf, but many remembered their fellow soldiers who fought in previous wars. Lacy said Veterans Day "means many people before me put their life on the line. Many died, some are scarred for life. It's time to honor them." Forty-six soldiers have died so far in Operation Desert Shield, which was launched in response to Iraq's Aug. 2 takeover of Kuwait.
