Emergency hearing set on war suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Wednesday scheduled an emergency Dec. 4 hearing on the effort by 45 House Democrats to bar President Bush from ordering an attack on Iraq without Congress' approval.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene, rejecting an attempt by the Justice Department to transfer the lawsuit to a judge appointed by President Reagan, gave the government until Monday to file its response.

Greene said that at the Dec. 4 hearing he would hear arguments on the lawmakers' motion for a preliminary injunction in the case. The lawmakers, led by Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., contend in the lawsuit filed Tuesday that under the Constitution's war powers clause Congress must debate and vote on a declaration of war before American troops can be used to dislodge Iraqi forces from Kuwait.

"We're talking about a really serious situation — an emergency hearing on Dec. 4 to really determine whether the president can use the offensive option," said Michael Ratner, an attorney for the Center for Constitutional Rights, which represents the lawmakers. Greene, a liberal Democrat appointed by President Carter, rejected the Justice Department's motion to transfer the case to U.S. District Judge Royce D. Lamberth, a former government attorney appointed by Reagan. Lamberth is considering a separate challenge to the president's war-making powers by Sgt. Michael R. Ange.

Ange, a recently activated Army National Guard reservist, is seeking a court order that he be returned to this country.

"There is no basis for the claim that the instant action is 'related to the Ange case," Greene said. The government contended in a motion just hours after the lawmakers filed their suit that the two cases were related because they both dealt with the president's power to deploy troops.

Ange lost a bid for a temporary restraining order to bar his deployment to the Middle East. But Lamberth scheduled a Dec. 10 hearing on his motion for a permanent injunction, saying the case "poses a difficult legal question."

In rejecting the Justice Department's transfer motion, Greene said "the only two factors which the two actions have in common are some of the Department of Justice's apparent defenses, and the fact that there is an overlap among counsel."

The New York City-based Center for Constitutional Rights represents both Ange and the lawmakers. The same section of the Justice Department's civil division is handling both cases.

Ratner said the list of plaintiffs is expected to be expanded. Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa contacted the center and asked to be named as a plaintiff and more members of Congress will be asked to join the suit, Ratner said.

United Way close to goal

The United Way of Big Spring and Howard County funding drive has reached about 95 percent of its goal, the agency director said Wednesday.

Agency director Sherrie Bordsoske said that, at last count, 94.57 percent of the pledges had been reported. "We're still waiting on some major contributors," Bordsoske said. "Fina (Oil and Chemical) company hasn't come in yet, and some of our personal accounts."

She said she expects the total pledges received to surpass the $20,000 goal.

"I have no doubt we're going to go over (the goal)," she said.

Appraisal District shortens name

The Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal District has changed its name to Howard County Appraisal District.

The decision came with a unanimous vote by the district board, which met Wednesday night at district offices. The vote followed a short discussion on whether "tax" should be part of the name or not.

Water line replaced on Johnson St.

City maintenance workers were busy Tuesday replacing a water line in the 400 block of Johnson Street.

After a break in the line was discovered in the mid-morning hours, Assistant City Manager Tom Decell said workers realized they had to replace the line through the entire block.

"We had to put in 320 feet of 12-inch (pipe)," he said. "It was complicated by the fact that we had a 45-inch storm drain that went diagonally across the street."

Once again, the collapse of a bell joint was found to be the culprit.

Pecan profits down

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Pecans, a favorite holiday food grown around West Texas, and other Thanksgiving dinner food items are reaping less profits for farmers this year than they were five years ago, according to local and statewide reports.

Texas farmers will earn an average of 2.2 cents on each typical Thanksgiving dinner, down from 7 cents in 1985, the first year the Texas Department of Agriculture looked at consumer costs and returns for farmers, according to a release from that office. This year's net return is the second lowest of those five years.

The annual TDA study includes turkey, stuffing, rice, whole kernel corn, lettuce, grapefruit, carrots, milk and ice cream and pecan pie. Only pecans are produced in Howard County, according to the Howard County Agricultural Extension office.

This year's 500 acres of pecans are the third largest crop in the county, behind about 80,000 acres of cotton and 10,000 acres of hay. At about $1 per pound in retail prices

Holiday brings back memories

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

Nell Graves remembers when her children thought Thanksgiving was "just the grandest thing in the world."

Graves, a Golden Plains Care Center resident, said the holiday always makes her think of her family.

"When I had all my children at home," she said, "it always meant so much to them. What it meant to me was something for the children, getting all the family together, not for presents or anything, just to be together."

For other residents of two local nursing homes, the holiday brings back similar memories of food, fellowship and faith.

Joanne Potter, a resident of Mountain View Lodge, said she remembers once having to cook an entire dinner by herself. "It was hard, sure," she said. "But it was worth it. I was only cooking for a few. My mom always cooked for an army at Thanksgiving."

Mountain View resident Pauline Smith was once shocked by the amount her son and a friend ate during the holiday.

"He had a friend over... that time," Smith said. "They both ate a big dinner, just ate more than you can imagine. Then, later that night, they went back and ate nine ham sandwiches apiece. Nine sandwiches!"

Golden Plains residents remembered cooking up holiday feasts that were entirely homemade.

"We went out and shot our own turkeys," Graves said. "We made everything all the way down to the piecrust." "Recipes were just a dab of this and a dab of that," Virginia Mullins said. "We didn't write them down."

"Before we did any of this (cooking)," Ida Sneed said, "we'd spend a week just cleaning house for all the guests. I did my cooking late at night. It was cooler then, and with all the work, that was the only time to do it."

Rosalie Hill remembered putting a turkey egg under a hen to hatch it.

"The little turkeys would run around making the hen's sound, clucking," she said.

Harold McMahon had one main memory of Thanksgiving.

"There was always plenty to eat," he said. Potter said the holiday conjures

Bush in Mideast for official talks

JIDDAH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — On the eve of a Thanksgiving-day trip to the front lines, President Bush conferred with Kuwait's exiled emir and Saudi's King Fahd. He said the 230,000 American troops on Saudi soil were not on a "mission impossible."

Shortly after his arrival here, Bush declared he's "more committed than ever" to driving Iraq from Kuwait. "I think we should take action right away in the United Nations for more resolutions," Bush said.

He made it clear he wanted approval of a resolution authorizing force against Saddam, and said that graphic indictments of Iraq's brutality to citizens of Kuwait would be presented next week to the United Nations.

On Thursday, the president and his wife, Barbara, planned to share Thanksgiving with some of the 230,000 U.S. servicemen and servicewomen he has sent to the Persian Gulf region to confront Iraq.

"If I do nothing else, I will convey to them the heartfelt thanks of the American people at this very special time of year for Americans," Bush said.

He told reporters he would tell the troops that "we are going to prevail, that they're not there on a mission impossible."

Bush announced that he will meet with Syrian President Hafez al-Assad on Friday in Geneva on his way home from the Middle East to the United States.

He defended meeting with the controversial leader, whom the United States government officially considers the head of a terrorist state.

"Syrians want to see Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait just as much as we do," Bush said. "I have no problem sitting down with him for this common objective."

Speaking with reporters after

"I have never felt more secure in going anyplace than I do in going to see our troops over there... It's not a risky mission in my mind."

George Bush

meeting with Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, Kuwait's exiled emir, Bush raised the decibel level of his condemnation of the Iraqi leader, including a warning that "steps" against him should be taken at once.

Bush said that he and the exiled monarch agreed that, while a peaceful resolution of the crisis remained desirable, "we also agreed that all options remained open and that steps needed to be taken right now in order to make those options credible and effective."

When asked what "steps" he had in mind, Bush cited his decisions to nearly double the number of U.S. troops in the region and to press for prompt U.N. action.

Bush said the the exiled emir "showed me some pictures that are so cruel and so brutal that it just turns your stomach. The matter is going to be aired in the United Nations next week."

After the meetings with Fahd and the emir, "I am more committed than ever to see this cruel occupation come to an end," the president said.

Bush made it clear he wants the U.N. Security Council to authorize the use of military force against Iraq, but would not disclose exactly what provisions he would like included to trigger an invasion.

"It's been a general understanding that the United States is in

'Turkey capital' has almost everything — except turkeys

CUERO (AP) — "Turkey Capital of the World" is the boast of this little South-Texas town.

The turkey theme is emblazoned on the city police insignia.

The high school football team is called the Gobblers.

The city slogan is: "Where America Talks Turkey."

In fact, the turkey capital claim is the subject of an 18-year-old friendly rivalry between Cuero and Worthington, Minn. Funny thing is, neither town has had a thriving commercial turkey industry since the 1950s.

Around the turn of the century, turkey farming thrived in Cuero, now a town of about 8,000 people located 80 miles southeast of San Antonio.

Until the late 1940s, turkeys wandered the range until fall, when they were rounded up and driven like cattle through the center of town, said Helen Bulgerin, a lifelong Cuero resident.

"They'd come up Main Street, then down the Esplanade (a U.S. highway withing the city)," Bulgerin said. "There were thousands of turkeys. There were young men who would herd them with sticks. Sometimes, the turkeys would fly up in the buildings. They'd take them to the packing plant."

The feathered spectacle was so unusual, residents said, people traveled to Cuero from all over the world to watch the noisy procession of white and bronze turkeys marching to slaughter.

C.L. Duckett, 60, has a collection of newspaper clippings from as far away from Japan describing the turkey drives.

The last drive took place in 1947, according to the late Isabella Kruse Schaffner, a Cuero resident who wrote the definitive, and perhaps the only, book on the subject, "Turkeys in Texas."

Then big companies from Waco came in and established huge turkey farms in nearby Gonzales County, where the big-breasted birds are now raised for Thanksgiving dinners nationwide.

That virtually ended the turkey business in Cuero, said Polly Ritterskamp, Chamber of Commerce manager. Big business also gobbed up the turkey industry in rival Worthington about the same time, said officials in the Minnesota city.

But both towns maintain symbolic ties to their past, having held turkey festivals and biannual turkey races in each town since 1972.

"There are people who raise turkeys right here in Cuero," Ritterskamp said. "They're for pets or for Thanksgiving dinner — sometimes for both. We celebrate the memory of when this used to be the turkey-raising capital of the state."

Ruby Begonia, the turkey representing Cuero, is selected each year from among a handful of turkeys scattered on farms throughout DeWitt County. The 1990 Ruby lives in a small coop with about two dozen other hens and toms on Louis and Joyce Rangnow's farm outside Cuero.

Ruby made a miserable showing in this year's race against Worthington's champion, Paycheck, putting the running score at 12 race victories for Worthington, seven for Cuero.

"Ruby Begonia barely got started in the race before Paycheck was being held up in victory," Ritterskamp said.

Joyce Rangnow said she hopes Ruby races again next year.

And she vows the big bird won't wind up as a main course at a Thanksgiving feast.

Community sits together for Thanksgiving dinner

VATTMAN, Texas (AP) — Folks around Vattman don't even consider eating Thanksgiving dinner at home. They sit down together as a community to give thanks.

"The people here in this community, this is their home for that day," said the Rev. Sean Noone, Irish-born pastor of the small Roman Catholic church that rises out of Vattman's plowed fields.

Thanksgiving has been the high point of the year in the sparsely populated South Texas farming area since 1913, when the annual feast began in a grove of mesquite trees. It was canceled only in 1943, due to food and fuel rationing in World War II.

That was the only year that Idella Strubhart, 71, ever ate Thanksgiving dinner at home. She grew up in Riviera, an unincorporated town of 500 or so about eight miles west of Vattman. She said a daughter in San Antonio invited her for Thanksgiving this year. "And I told her I just couldn't do it. Everybody has a job to do here."

What began as a small gathering has evolved into a major production at the parish hall of Our Lady of Consolation Church. The all-day party merely begins with the dinner.

This year the parish of about 60 families expects to feed 1,500 people at its Thanksgiving Day Picnic.

The church is about the only structure that identifies Vattman as a community in southern Kleberg County. The Handbook of Texas describes Vattman as "more a community center for nearby farming families than a town."

State Department reacts to attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department reacted sharply Wednesday to a military campaign launched by leftist rebels in El Salvador and left open the possibility of increasing military aid to the Salvadoran armed forces.

Deputy spokesman Richard Boucher strongly condemned the military campaign by the FMLN rebels, accusing the insurgents of violating a commitment not to undertake military attacks that affect the civilian population.

He said seven civilians were killed and 67 wounded. Americas Watch, a private human rights group, said the rebels have been responsible for only a small percentage of the civilian deaths in El Salvador over the years. Ann Manuel, an associate at Americas Watch, said the "vast majority" of the estimated 40,000 civilian killings have been the work of government forces and rightist death squads.

An FMLN statement said Tuesday's attacks were aimed at inducing the government to return to the negotiating table.

Under legislation approved last month, Congress cut military aid to El Salvador to $42.5 million — half the administration's request.

Employers to be notified of arrests

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Support for an all-out war on drugs prevailed over concern for civil liberties as the city commission Wednesday approved an ordinance requiring police to report drug arrests to employers.

"Drug users would get a very, very powerful lesson that they cannot use drugs with impunity," said University of Miami President Tad Foote.

Foote, chairman of the Miami Coalition for a Drug-Free Community, said the ordinance will make Miami Beach a leader in the fight against drugs. Supporters and opponents believe the ordinance to be the first of its kind in the nation.

The American Civil Liberties Union opposed the bill, and commissioners agreed to seek a court opinion on the measure's constitutionality before any letters go out. The commission approved the first reading, 5-2, and set final review for Dec. 19.

Supporters in Wednesday's debate focused on the need to show the determination of the city — which accounts for 40 percent of Dade County drug arrests — to fight drugs.

Opponents worried about the legality of notification based solely on an arrest, and the potential legal costs of defending the ordinance.

"I know in my heart that the employer is going to take that letter and probably fire the individual," said Mayor Alex Daoud.

Charges against Berry dropped

ST. CHARLES, Mo. (AP) — Pioneer rock star Chuck Berry said Wednesday he's eager to resume performing and recording now that charges of child abuse against him have been dropped.

"I feel fantastic, because I hope and believe that the clearance will be as prominently exposed as the allegation," Berry told reporters at his lawyer's office. "And therefore I can go on with my life."

The 63-year-old rock 'n' roll legend — whose early hits include "Johnny B. Goode," "Roll Over Beethoven" and "Sweet Little Sixteen" — agreed to serve two years of unsupervised probation on a marijuana charge as part of a plea agreement reached Tuesday.

Deposit law on cans and bottles advocated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Levying a deposit on beverage cans and bottles would reduce pollution and conserve energy, says a government report released Wednesday.

The study by the General Accounting Office, the congressional investigative agency, improves prospects for passing deposit legislation next year, said Rep. Paul Henry, R-Mich.

"It addresses all of the industry concerns," said Henry, who this year unsuccessfully sponsored a bill to charge a five-cent refundable deposit on soft-drink, beer and mineral water containers. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., pushed similar legislation.

"There is no correlation between a bottle bill and a dropoff in beverage consumption," Henry said. "There is no direct tie between loss of container manufacturing jobs and a bottle bill."

William L. Ball III, president of the National Soft Drink Association, said a national deposit law "would be an unwanted albatross around the neck of those who are serious about recycling and the environment."

Pepsi-Cola Co. spokeswoman Leigh Curtin said Henry's plan was "high-handed environmental doubletalk" that would impose a "regressive tax" on soft-drink consumers.

Brewers and bottlers once imposed deposits to encourage consumers to return glass bottles. But the practice has gradually disappeared since the 1950s as cans gained popularity and bottlers switched to non-returnable plastic and glass.

Nine states have enacted deposit laws between 1972 and 1983: Connecticut, Delaware, Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, Oregon and Vermont.

California in 1987 established a program where redemption centers, rather than retailers, redeem beverage containers. Florida adopted a disposal-fee system in 1988 that affects beverage and other containers. Several other states are considering some form of deposit legislation, the study said.

The beverage and container industries and retailers have thwarted national legislation repeatedly since 1970. They contend such laws increase the beverage industry's costs, reduce sales and hurt some packaging products.

Global warming could sink islands

MALE, Maldives (AP) — Welcome to paradise — for as long as it stays above water. The people of this chain of palm-studded islands fear global warming could condemn their nation to geological history.

If the earth gets hotter, as some scientists predict, the Maldives could be swamped by rising seas and violent storms. The Indian Ocean archipelago almost certainly would be among the first casualties of the greenhouse effect.

"We may have some islands just disappear. That is according to the business-as-usual scenario.

I would hope that the international community would take note and do something before that happens," said Hussain Shihab, the Maldives' director of environmental affairs.

According to some estimates, unchecked emissions of carbon dioxide and other heat-trapping greenhouse gases will raise the sea level by a foot in the next 40 years — submerging much of the Maldives' 175 square miles.

Few of the islands are more than 6 feet above sea level, so a big splash can be devastating, as demonstrated in April 1987 when a tidal wave rolled over the island nation.

Crash in Thailand kills all aboard

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A plane carrying at least 37 people to a southern resort island crashed during heavy rain Wednesday, and police said all aboard were killed.

The rain apparently caused the Bangkok Airways turboprop to crash into a coconut grove short of the airport on Koh Samui island, said Pitpong Kansan, the island's police chief.

Police spokesman Prateep Pakdeepol said the flight from Bangkok was carrying four crew members and 33 passengers, almost all foreign tourists and one infant. He said the bodies were badly burned.

In Bangkok, Prasert Prasartthongnot, the president of Bangkok Airways, said 38 people were aboard — 33 passengers and five crew members. The passenger manifest listed 30 foreigners and three Thai passengers. It gave no breakdown of the foreigners by nationality.

Among the foreigners were five Japanese, said a first secretary of the Japanese Embassy, Hiroshi Enomata.

Passanee Thongsuk, a hotel receptionist, said she saw the plane crash.

Passanee said she was watching the sky because her hotel was expecting some of the tourists aboard the plane.

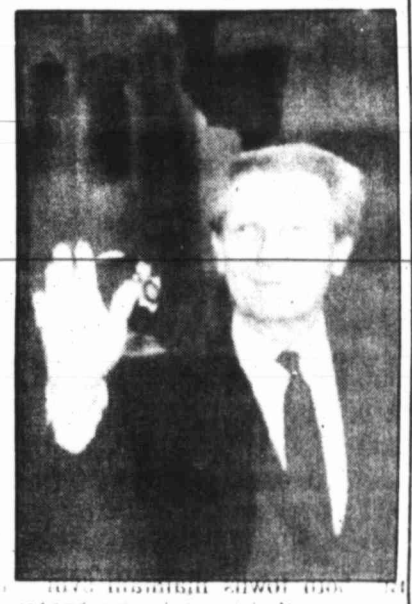

"I saw the plane slowly heading down," she said. "A few seconds later, I saw a big fire and smoke. I was shocked and I knew the plane had crashed. There was a loud explosion."

Heseltine supports defense policy

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's supporters have tried to play the Iraqi card in the Conservative Party's leadership struggle, but her opponent has said he would not change her firm policy in the Persian Gulf.

Michael Heseltine, who is challenging Mrs. Thatcher for leadership of the Conservative Party, has called Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "a destructive loser." He has said that war in the gulf is both "possible and justifiable."

"Heseltine's views on the gulf are a carbon copy of Mrs. Thatcher's," said Jack Spence, a professor of politics at Leicester University. "When it comes to the crisis, it's 'business as usual' under Heseltine."

Milken gets a 10-year sentence

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael R. Milken, who revolutionized U.S. finance in the booming 1980s but became a symbol of its excesses, was sentenced Wednesday to 10 years in prison for his role in the biggest scandal in Wall Street history.

The sentence by U.S. District Judge Kimba M. Wood was by far the stiffest in the government's insider trading probe that focused on Milken after speculator Ivan Boesky confessed to rampant lawbreaking in late 1986.

Milken, 44, sobbed at times during the proceeding but stood expressionless as Wood announced the punishment. The judge called him "a man of talent and industry" but said his crimes merited lengthy incarceration to deter further wrongdoing.

"This kind of misuse of your leadership position (constitutes) serious crimes warranting serious punishment and the discomfort of being removed from society," Wood told a courtroom packed with 200 spectators, including Milken's wife, Lori.

The sentence capped a tumultuous saga of the Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. financier whose pioneering use of high-yield junk bonds raised billions of dollars in capital but also helped fuel the hostile corporate takeovers that characterized an era.

It also appeared to vindicate the government's relentless pursuit of Milken, who pleaded guilty to six felony counts of violating federal conspiracy, tax and securities laws rather than face trial on racketeering and fraud charges.

Reflect on the positive today

In 17th Century America, Thanksgiving was celebrated not only as a religious observance, but also as a harvest festival of feasting. Later, President George Washington proclaimed a Thanksgiving Day in 1789 as an expression of gratitude for the establishment of the new government. President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed Thanksgiving a national holiday in 1863, and decreed that it should be observed on the last Thursday in November. From that day forward, with few changes, Americans have given thanks for their national blessings on the fourth Thursday of November.

While some other countries have an equivalent to the Thanksgiving that's evolved in the United States, we are unique in that we trace our tradition of giving thanks for the freedoms we won so many generations ago.

And, on this Thanksgiving, it would be a good thing to reflect on the positive aspects of our country rather than dwelling on the problems we face. We can give thanks that we are free to choose our own course, unlike so many of our world neighbors.

We, as Americans, may do as we like, when we like and are limited only by what we choose to make of ourselves. Who could ask for more than to be truly free?

Our country has many problems — economic, social, political. But where else in this world do a people have so much opportunity to find happiness?

On this Thanksgiving, we can be happy our children will inherit the heritage of freedom secured so long ago.

Expressing thanks in the face of hardships

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Random notes while suffering from turkey overdose:

Our boys are getting ready for war, gas prices are skyrocketing, recession is here, the number of homeless is increasing and hunger still kills more children than any disease ever could.

Happy Thanksgiving.

One would think that with the above-mentioned ills (and any else you wish to contribute) Thanksgiving, 1990, would be a time for almost anything except giving thanks.

Wrong, bucko.

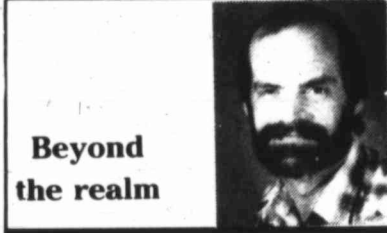

Granted, the world seems to be a scarier place to live, what with the depletion of the ozone layer and what have you, but that's part of the price of progress.

After all, age expectancy is rising, and diseases such as polio and smallpox are answers to trivia questions instead of the dreaded killers they were earlier this century.

What else can you be thankful for, you may ask?

Well, since you asked (and even if you didn't):

- Be thankful you're pumping blood and breathing air.
- Be thankful you can read this (Well, maybe I should say be thankful you can read).
- Be thankful that, Persian Gulf aside, the world is a safer place to live, overall, than a few years ago.
- Be thankful that the air we breathe in this area is clean (Now, if we could only do something about the tap water).
- Be thankful the Cowboys aren't playing the 49ers today.
- Speaking of football, be thankful there are only 25 or so games on TV today.
- Be thankful for your friends.

Beyond the realm

• If you are fortunate enough to have a roof over your head and food on your plate, be thankful for that.

• If you have a job, ditto.

• If your children are with you, be thankful they aren't living on the street somewhere.

• Be thankful that Saddam Hussein is the worst bad guy on the scene right now.

You can add any number of other personal reasons if you so desire. The point I'm trying to make is that, as bad as this world seems at times, there are still things to be thankful for, even if it's something as simple as the sun shining on your face or a football game on the tube.

With that in mind, I'd like to conclude with my list of thanks:

- I'm thankful I have a loving wife, a great son and two cats that have somehow avoided scarring our furniture.
- I'm thankful for my co-workers, who have endured my occasional dark moods and still talk to me.
- I'm thankful I have only 178 more house payments to go.
- I'm thankful for my parents. God keep you, Mom; get well, Dad.
- I'm thankful I have such an interesting job.
- And, I'm thankful for all the nice comments I've received from readers this year. It almost makes deadline worth it.

Happy Thanksgiving, everybody.

Saying thanks

To the editor:

To all citizens of Big Spring: A special "thank you" to all the residents who contributed to the Boy Scouts Good Turn Food Drive. Because of your generosity it was a great success. We collected more than 5,200 cans and packages of food for the needy in our city.

To all the Scouts and their leaders, the parents who helped and furnished vehicles, and to all local agencies for the publicity — thank you.

To Lee's Rentals for the use of a trailer and to the supermarkets who let us place collection boxes in their business — thank you.

I believe this shows what we can accomplish when we all work together toward a common goal.

Thanks to all your efforts, the Salvation Army and Northside Community Center will be better prepared to meet the extra demands placed on them during the holiday season.

Saluting museum and its staff

To the editor:

This is such a lovely town, and the Heritage Museum adds so very much to our town.

I would like to thank the Howard County Historical Society and the Heritage Museum folks — Angie Way, Polly Mays, Ozella Long, Wade Choate, Joe Pickle, and many others who added to the festive air of the reception they honored me with on Sunday. So many of the town folk attended with folks coming from as far away as Lubbock and New Braunfels.

We had the Bradshaw Studio here in Big Spring from 1923 until 1975. It is with pleasure I give back to Big Spring some of its history with my photographs.

I send my thanks and blessings to everyone who helped make the reception such an afternoon to remember.

Agent scorns government waste

WASHINGTON — Maryland travel agent Jack Skloff knows firsthand how cavalier the federal government is with your money. For the past seven years, his company, Dimensions Travel, has made travel plans for several federal agencies. But no more.

Skloff has kissed $7 million a year in business goodbye because, "I didn't want to continue to help them to rape the taxpayer," he told us. "I want to work for people who say, 'Jack, save me money,' not 'Jack, spend my money.'"

No longer will he face the rush to book tickets to Las Vegas and Palm Springs for "meetings" just because it's the end of the federal fiscal year. (One federal agency called Skloff one September and exclaimed, "We've got $49,000 left on our travel budget. Set up some meetings! We'll figure out what they're about later.")

Our associate Jim Lynch has examined the ledgers of several federal agency travel budgets for last year. The amount spent on travel in September, the end of the fiscal year, is almost double that spent in August and most other months too.

That's not all. Skloff said federal travelers are encouraged to use their frequent flyer miles to upgrade their tickets to first class rather than save them for a free coach ticket later.

Not only is the government wasteful, Skloff has seen it be downright stupid when it comes to venturing outside Washington D.C. One federal travel coordinator called Dimensions asking for help to find the town of Vicinity. Her office told her to book travel to St. Louis and Vicinity, but she couldn't find it on the map. Another federal employee asked for help finding the town of Maconga. As it turned out, the destination was Macon, Ga.

Skloff has also had to cope with some quirks, like the bureaucrat who kept demanding advance boarding passes from airlines that didn't issue them, and the woman who complained to him that there were "gay people in the lobby" of the San Francisco hotel where Dimensions booked her to stay. She also griped that the counter in the bathroom was too small to hold her curling iron.

Skloff said he doesn't mind going above and beyond the call of duty for his clients. But seven years of watching the government throw away taxpayers money went beyond common sense. Skloff did not bid to continue his contract work with the government last spring. But he still had some leftover contracts to fulfill with a few agencies, including the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

In late September, NRC Chairman Kenneth Carr went to Europe for an international meeting on nuclear energy. An assistant who went along, Stephen Burns, planned to stay in Europe after the meeting for a vacation, so he wouldn't be coming home with the rest of the team, according to a travel document Carr filed in August.

But when it became clear that Burns would have to spend about $400 of his own money to change his return ticket, Carr signed a new memo saying that Burns would return on the same day as the others, flying first class as the others were. It wasn't true, but it bought Burns a ticket with enough face value that it could be exchanged to cover his extra vacation travel.

Carr says he wrote the second memo to give comparative costs for Burns' travel plans. Burns says the trip was "fully above board." Carr and Burns both noted that the travel is being reviewed by the NRC's legal office.

In the massive federal budget, $400 is barely loose change, but for Skloff it was one more straw on a back that was already broken. "I've been called a fool for giving up $7 million in business," he said. "Maybe I am a fool, but at least I'm an honest fool."

A ROCK AND A HARD PLACE — President Bush has told his intimates why he reneged on his pledge for no new taxes. He still thinks the best way to reduce the deficit is to cut spending, not raise taxes. But the Gramm-Rudman deadline forced him to compromise that principle. He feared that the automatic across-the-board cuts under Gramm-Rudman would have crippled the economy, and he would have been blamed because of his stubborn stand against taxes. A continued stalemate would also have further eroded public confidence in his administration. So he caved in.

A scroll explains holiday

(One day a shepherd boy was out walking with his sheep along the Champs Elysees in Paris when he tripped over a Bouche Noel. In anger he kicked it and found this scroll underneath explaining Thanksgiving to the French.

Victor Hugo translated the document, and since then it has provided enlightenment to generations of French citizens who never understood what Americans did in November. The original scroll rests in a glass pavilion designed by I.M. Pei at the Louvre.)

One of our most important holidays is Thanksgiving Day, known in France as "le Jour de Merci Donnant."

"Le Jour de Merci Donnant" was first started by a group of Pilgrims ("Pelerins") who fled from "l'Angleterre" before the McCarran Act to found a colony in the New World ("le Nouveau Monde"), where they could shoot Indians ("les Peaux-Rouges") and eat turkey ("dinde") to their hearts' content.

They landed at a place called Plymouth (now a famous "voiture Americaine") in a wooden sailing ship named the Mayflower, or "Fleur de Mai," in 1620. But while the "Pelerins" were killing the "dindes," the "Peaux-Rouges" were killing the "Pelerins," and there were several hard winters ahead for both of them. The only way the "Peaux-Rouges" helped the "Pelerins" was when they taught them how to grown corn ("maïs"). The reason they did this was because they liked corn with their "Pelerins."

In 1623, after another harsh year, the "Pelerins" crops were so good that they decided to have a celebration and give thanks because more "maïs" was raised by the "Pelerins" than "Pelerins" were killed by the "Peaux-Rouges."

Every year on "le Jour de Merci Donnant," parents tell their children an amusing story about the first celebration.

It concerns a brave "capitaine" named Miles Standish (known in France as "Kilometres Deboutish") and a shy young lieutenant named Jean Alden. Both of them were in love with a flower of Plymouth called Priscilla Mullens (no translation). The "vieux capitaine" said to the "jeune lieutenant":

"Go to the damsel Priscilla ("Allez tres vite chez Priscilla"), the loveliest maiden of Plymouth ("la plus jolie demoiselle de Plymouth"). Say that a blunt old captain, a man not of words but of action ("un vieux Fanfan la Tulipe"), offers his hand and his heart, the hand and heart of a soldier. Not in these words, you know, but this, in short, is my meaning.

"I am a maker of war ("Je suis un fabricant de la guerre") and not a maker of phrases. You, bred as a scholar ("Vous, qui etes pain comme un etudiant"), can say it in elegant language.

Although Jean was fit to be tied ("convenable a etre emalle"), friendship prevailed over love and he went to his duty. But instead of using elegant language, he blurted out his mission. Priscilla was muted with amazement and sorrow ("rendue muette par l'etonnement et la tristesse").

At length she exclaimed, interrupting the ominous silence, "If the great captain of Plymouth is so very eager to wed me, why does he not come himself and take the trouble to woo me?" ("Ou est-il, le vieux Kilometres? Pourquoi ne vient-il pas apres de moi pour tenter sa chance?")

Jean said that "Kilometres Deboutish" was very busy and didn't have time for those things. He staggered on, telling her what a wonderful husband "Kilometres" would make. Finally, Priscilla arched her eyebrows and said in a tremulous voice, "Why don't you speak for yourself, Jean?" ("Chacun a son gout").

And so, on the fourth Thursday in November, American families sit down at a large table, brimming with tasty dishes, and for the only time during the year eat better than the French do.

Milli Vanilli stripped in lip-synch scandal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The people who hand out the Grammys beat Milli Vanilli to the punch and stripped the dreadlocked duo of its trophy before Fab and Rob — unmasked as no more than lip-synching pretty boys — could give it back.

The National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences rescinded the 1989 best new artist Grammy given to Rob Pilatus and Fabrice Morvan, making them the first act forced to return a Grammy in the 34-year history of the award.

The action Monday came one day before the two planned to surrender the honor on their own.

"My guess is when the academy read that, they decided to beat us to the game," said attorney Alan Mintz. The academy originally planned to consider the matter next month.

The duo admitted last week that they did not sing a note on their album "Girl, You Know It's True." They also lip-synched at concerts and on the Grammy awards show in February. The album sold about 7 million copies.

Pilatus, 25, from Germany, and Morvan, also 25 and a native of the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe, scheduled a Los Angeles news conference today to discuss the scandal. They were unavailable for comment on Monday.

Mintz said the two are "determined to prove to the world that they will come back strongly and demonstrate that they are indeed artists."

"This is the first time this has ever happened" in Grammy history, academy president Michael Greene said. "I do think it's an isolated incident. We are as upset about it as the public has the right to be."

Greene said academy trustees voted overwhelmingly to take back the award. A decision on what to do with it will be made by an academy subcommittee Dec. 5.

Greene said the duo's wish that it be given to the three singers who actually sang was "not a possibility."

The academy recognizes

"packaging" groups is part of the music industry, Greene said. But misleading record labels are unacceptable, he said. The album label "said 'Vocals: Rob and Fab.' That was just absolutely false," he said.

Vocalists Johnny Davis, Charles Shaw and Brad Howell reportedly were the real singers.

"I'm very pleased that it's coming out. I'm pleased that they are taking action," Shaw said.

'War' soundtrack will be released

NEW YORK (AP) — Elektra Nonesuch will release the official soundtrack recording to "The Civil War," the five-part documentary by Ken Burns which has become the most popular offering ever presented on public television.

The series, which made its debut the week of Sept. 23, traces the personal and political fortunes of both the leaders and the soldiers who were involved in America's greatest internal conflict.

Among the well-known American songs featured in "The Civil War" are "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Dixie," "Shenandoah" and "When Johnny Comes Marching Home."

The theme music to the series "Ashokan Farewell," a haunting fiddle tune, opens and closes the 30-track recording. It also includes two spoken word excerpts — an opening track taken from writings of Oliver Wendell Holmes, and a reading of a love letter from a Union soldier to his wife.

"The Civil War" will be rebroadcast in its entirety on most PBS stations beginning in mid-December and continuing into early 1991.

Billy Joel says

money is tight, music still hot

PHOENIX (AP) — Billy Joel once epitomized the Angry Young Man he sang about in the mid-1970s.

Now, at age 41, he's still angry. He's also broke.

Joel is almost a year into a 15-month world tour to promote his triple-platinum "Storm Front" LP and get himself out of a sea of red ink.

Although one of the biggest selling solo artists in the history of Columbia Records — with 14 albums and 25 Top-40 singles in his catalog, Joel has little financially to show for it.

Still in litigation is a $90 million lawsuit he filed in September 1989 against his former manager and brother-in-law Frank Weber for fraud and breach-of-contract. The suit asks for $60 million in punitive damages and alleges that Weber duped Joel out of $30 million, losing $10 million of it in unsafe investments.

The reason for the length of this tour is financial. Look, at this age, you don't want to go out on the road for fun and games. When I started the tour, I was in deep financial straits. I said, 'OK,' and put my head down and went to work and I'm getting back in the black.

"Am I angry about it? Bitter is a good word. The worst thing is having to spend so much time away from my kid," added Joel, who is married to supermodel Christie Brinkley. They have a 4-year-old daughter, Alexa Ray.

Joel is well aware that his cash-flow problems would be history if he agreed to tour sponsorship, but the subject makes him bristle.

"I'm not comfortable with it. Whatever celebrity I have was given to me by people. To trade in on it would be a betrayal to that," he said. "Coke asked me. It was a lot of money. Millions and millions of dollars."

"Part of me was saying to myself, 'What are you, nuts? Take the money!' The funny thing is, I actually drink the stuff. But I can't really recommend it to other people."

If he did accept sponsorship, Joel is wary of another round of bashing from some segments of the media.

"As soon as I started selling records, I was perceived in some circles to be this commercial wunderkind, a tunesmith-balladeer, a Tin Pan Alley man. You know, 'Need a hit? Let me grind it out.' That's not how I write. Any hit I've had is an accident," he said.

Tours reopen at Universal lot

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Universal Studios has reopened its tour for the first time since fire ravaged the back lot two weeks ago.

The fire at Hollywood's biggest and longest-running movie factory destroyed sets for several TV and movie productions, including the "Back to the Future" movies.

"Dick Tracy" and "The Sting." Damage was put in the millions. A security guard, Michael J. Houston, 40, has been charged with setting the blaze.

In ceremonies Tuesday in front of the tour's 37-foot mechanical King Kong, Universal officials presented silver film reel awards to firefighters.

Oil company profits increase only slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Profits for major oil companies increased by less than 2 percent in the months immediately after the Persian Gulf crisis, and most benefits from higher prices went to oil-producing countries, the Energy Department reported today.

A report by the Energy Information Administration said higher crude oil prices "led to substantial increases in income from oil and gas production," but the beneficiaries often were foreign governments.

Income for oil-producing countries, as well as for domestic producers, soared in the third quarter by 684 percent, compared to the same three-month period in 1989, the report said. But for the most part, the benefit did not pass on to many of the oil companies, the study reported.

"For the major petroleum companies, increased profits from oil and gas production were nearly offset by reduced earnings from refining, marketing and chemical businesses," said the report.

The net income for major U.S. oil companies was 1.7 percent overall, the report said. Companies that had to buy crude oil and petroleum products at the higher prices reported profit declines, the report said. Some refineries reported sharp increases in profits, however.

The report said that the net income for independent refiners increased 130 percent in the 3rd quarter compared to the same period a year earlier. Profits from integrated refinery operations at the major oil companies were mixed. Five companies reported profit increases up to 46 percent, while six reported decreases of up to 83 percent, the report said.

The report provided no information on specific companies. Its analysis covered the month of July through September.

Sex discrimination suit filed against TV station

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has filed a sex discrimination lawsuit against a Baltimore TV station accused of firing an anchorwoman because she demanded the same pay as her male counterparts.

Officials said the lawsuit Monday against WBAL and parent company Hearst Corp. is the first such action by the federal agency against a TV station.

EEOC Chairman Evan Kemp Jr. said the agency found that former anchorwoman Ruth Ann "Rudy" Miller was paid less than her male counterparts for similar duties and fired in 1989 because she demanded equal pay.

Miller earned $141,000 a year when she was fired, compared to $170,000 and $180,000 for two male anchors, the EEOC said.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court, also claims Miller was given different assignments and faced increased scrutiny of her clothes and hairstyle because she is a woman. The lawsuit seeks back wages and an equal amount in damages.

Miller filed her own lawsuit in January alleging similar violations. She demanded $200,000 in damages.

"It is ironic and disturbing that an organization devoted to protecting the public's interest paid so little attention to illegal discriminatory activities within its own ranks," Kemp said.

The lawsuit should "send a message throughout the country" to TV stations, he said.

David Barrett, station vice president and general manager, denied the allegations. He said Miller earned less because she refused to anchor the 11 p.m. newscast. She had been anchoring the noon and 5 p.m. newscasts when her contract was not renewed.

Miller, 41, is now host of a daily radio talk show in Baltimore and publishes the monthly Maryland Family Magazine.

IRS gives soldiers more time

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. military forces caught in the Middle East crisis and unable to pay back taxes may qualify for special treatment, the Internal Revenue Service said Wednesday.

Procedures for getting more time to pay were outlined by the IRS as part of an announcement providing guidance to reservists activated because of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, to regular military personnel and to hostages held by Iraq.

Here are answers, based on the IRS guidance, to often-asked questions:

Q. Is hazardous-duty pay taxable?

A. Yes, just like regular pay, although basic allowances for quarters, subsistence and uniforms are tax-free.

Q. Is there a booklet that provides details on this?

A. Yes. It is Publication 3, free from the IRS, entitled "Tax Information for Military Personnel."

Q. I am an activated reservist awaiting shipment to Saudi Arabia. I received a bill for past-due taxes, which I cannot pay. What can I do?

A. Call the IRS toll-free at 1-800-829-1040 and ask for Form Letter 1175. Or, you may write the IRS giving your name, Social Security number, monthly income and source of income before military service, current income, rank, the date you entered service and the date you will be eligible for discharge. It also would be helpful if you enclosed a copy of your activation orders.

You will have to show that your income dropped because of activation. If the IRS approves, you will be able to defer payment of back taxes until six months after your initial period of service ends. You will not be charged penalty or interest during the deferral.

Q. What if my income did not drop?

A. The IRS will reduce to 6 percent the interest charged on overdue taxes. The money saved by paying the lower rate will not be taxable income.

Q. What happens to my employer-paid health insurance when I report for active duty?

A. Your employer must give you the opportunity to continue under your old plan, but you may have to pay for the coverage.

Q. I am not in the military but had to leave Kuwait after the Iraqi invasion. What happens to the foreign-income exclusion I have been expecting?

A. Under certain conditions, an American working abroad but not for the U.S. government may avoid tax on up to $70,000 of foreign earnings each year. You must be a resident of a foreign country for an entire tax year or be present for at least 330 days during 12 consecutive months. Those residence and presence tests have been waived for 1990 for Iraq, Kuwait, Libya and Yemen; if other conditions are met you may claim the exclusion even though you were forced to leave one of those countries before the time test was met.

BRISTOW, Okla. — Lorri Bauston and Paula Silver play host during a special Thanksgiving dinner to six turkeys. The pair organized the meal Tuesday to promote humane treatment of poultry.

Turkeys eat holiday meal instead of being the meal

BRISTOW, Okla. (AP) — How did the turkeys that came to dinner enjoy the food?

They gobbled it up, of course. Paula Silver and Lorri Bauston cooked cornbread muffins, cranberries, apple pie and stuffed squash Tuesday for six turkeys at Ms. Silver's home. The two animal-rights activists held the meal to promote humane treatment of poultry.

"The birds gobbled it up," Ms. Silver said. "It was a beautiful little spread."

Mrs. Bauston and her husband, Gene, operate an animal sanctuary in upstate New York and are traveling the country with 15 turkeys to publicize their cause.

They are lobbying to have poultry protected under the federal Humane Slaughter Act, which requires that farm animals be stunned before they are killed for food.

Ms. Silver, who adopted two of the Baustons' turkeys, lives in a log house on 20 acres she shares with a wild mustang, four dogs, a cat and several hens.

County employees to receive holiday

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — One Arizona county's employees will get a paid day off in January in honor of Martin Luther King Jr. despite voters' rejection of a state holiday honoring the civil rights leader.

The Pima County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday unanimously voted to give county employees eight hours of paid administrative leave to be taken on either the third Monday of January or the Friday before it.

Supervisor Raul Grijalva said he hopes the Maricopa County Board of Supervisors in Phoenix will follow his board's example so "that will push the Legislature to either do something themselves, or put it back on the ballot for voters to decide."

Voters in the state's general election on Nov. 6 rejected two propositions that would have created a paid state holiday honoring King. A majority of Pima County voters supported creating a King holiday.

The county includes the city of Tucson, which has a King Day.

Vikings kicker pleads innocent

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Minnesota Vikings place-kicker Donald Igwebuike pleaded innocent today to charges that he helped finance an attempt to smuggle $1 million worth of heroin from Nigeria.

Igwebuike did not speak during a brief arraignment before U.S. Magistrate Thomas Wilson.

Pokes want respect

IRVING (AP) — The Washington Redskins will spend Thanksgiving Day trying to stay in the NFC wild-card playoff race. The Dallas Cowboys will be hoping to earn some respect.

The Cowboys are off to their best start since 1987 with four victories, including a 24-21 triumph over the Los Angeles Rams.

However, they must play a Washington team that not only beat them 19-15 on Sept. 23, but routed the New Orleans Saints 31-17 last week as Mark Rypien returned from an injury and threw four touchdown passes.

Washington (6-4) has lost three previous Thanksgiving games with the Cowboys, who are 14-7-1 on the holiday.

The Cowboys (4-7) fear Rypien, who suffered knee ligament damage against them in the earlier loss at RFK Stadium. He showed no effect from the layoff in his return against New Orleans.

"Rypien was very impressive against the Saints," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said. "I'd say our work was cut out. Washington just got hot again."

The game hasn't drawn the fan attention it usually does. With the Cowboys struggling, the Dallas-Washington matchup isn't the hot ticket it was when both teams were among the NFL's elite.

Dallas owner Jerry Jones said he expected the game to be a sellout by Thursday's 3 p.m. kickoff, but it will be blacked out on local television.

The Redskins represent the Cowboys' longest-running rivalry. Dallas holds a 33-26-2 advantage but Washington has won six of the last eight. Dallas hasn't defeated Washington in Texas Stadium since 1986.

It's a rare national television appearance for Dallas. The Cowboys lost to San Francisco 24-6 in a Sunday night game on Nov. 11, but haven't been on Monday Night Football since 1988.

Joe Gibbs, who is 10-9 against the Cowboys, said playing Dallas is always special.

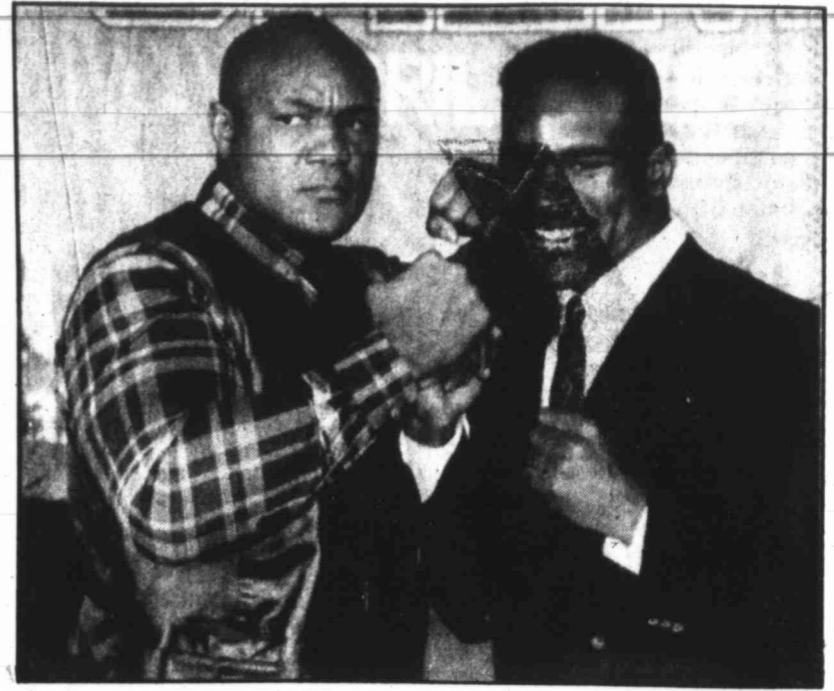

"It's a tremendous series," Gibbs said. "I think it will always be something special to the players and the fans."

The Cowboys found their lost offense against last Sunday in the victory over the Los Angeles

Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Michael Irvin, shown here in this file photo, will be one of the keys if the Cowboys are to upset the Washington Redskins in today's 3:30 game. Irvin caught two touchdown passes last week.

Rams. Quarterback Troy Aikman threw three touchdown passes and running back Emmitt Smith had 117 yards in receptions — the most by a Dallas back since Herschel Walker had 170 in 1987.

Cards claim Manley

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Dexter Manley, two days after his reinstatement following a one-year ban from the NFL for substance abuse, was claimed off waivers Wednesday by the Phoenix Cardinals.

Cardinals general manager Larry Wilson said Manley, a 31-year-old defensive end, would arrive in Phoenix on Thursday night and take a physical Friday before joining the team for practice.

He is not eligible to play in a game until Dec. 9.

"We have been given a two-week (roster) exemption, which will run out Dec. 3," Wilson said. "I talked to Dexter and he's excited about coming here. He's always been a very productive player and I think he's going to be an exciting player for us. We're happy to have him."

"It's a new beginning," Manley said in a conference call from Washington. "I was hoping all along that this day would come. I'm very grateful to come back."

"Washington has some carryover, too."

contribution to Phoenix and on off the field. I want to get back to being the best defensive player in the National Football League. I think I can do that."

Manley, a nine-year pro who is the Washington Redskins' all-time sack leader with 97, was banned from the league on Nov. 18, 1989, after testing positive for cocaine use.

It was his third violation of the league's substance abuse policy in three years, resulting in the so-called "lifetime ban."

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue reinstated Manley on Monday but he was immediately released by the Redskins.

New England, which currently has the league's worst record at 1-9, had the first chance to claim Manley, but passed.

Phoenix and Cleveland, both 2-8, would have had to flip a coin for Manley but the Browns did not put in a claim for him.

Manley had a team-record 18 sacks for the Redskins in 1986. The entire Cardinal team has only 20

Big Spring will compete in the Odessa Invitational Nov. 30-Dec. 1.

Dykes gets new contract at Tech

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes, who suffered his worst season this year at 4-7, was given a 10-year contract extension Wednesday.

Athletic Director T. Jones declined to discuss figures, but said the entire deal was worth more than $1 million.

"I felt that if we as a university were going to make a commitment to a coach who you would search coast to coast to find, then we needed to give him security," Jones said.

"There are very few coaches in the country with 10-year contracts, but Spike Dykes deserves one," he said.

"I'm sincerely happy and deeply honored," Dykes said. "This is what I want to do and where I want to do it."

Dykes is 24-21-1 in four years as Red Raiders coach. He was named Southwest Conference Coach of the Year in 1989 after guiding his team to a 9-3 mark and a 49-21 victory over Duke in the All American Bowl.

Dykes, 52, took over the Tech program on Dec. 6, 1986.

This year's average attendance of 43,476 was up nearly 20 percent from his first season.

Duncanville girls win 100th straight

DUNCANVILLE (AP) — The Duncanville girls' 57-40 victory over Irving High School marked two milestones for the school.

Tuesday's triumph was Duncanville's 100th consecutive victory and coach Sandra Meadows' 800th career win.

But Meadows wasn't in any mood to talk about milestones. Instead, she lamented what she called her team's sloppy play.

"I'm still thinking about the game," she said. "It wasn't beautiful, but it's still a win. I have a young team this year and there was a lot of pressure on them. Even if I don't put it on them, they still feel it."

The Duncanville Panthers have won three consecutive Class 5A state titles.

Meadows, who is in her 34th season as a head coach, said her 800th win held no special significance.

"Really, it just means that I've been around a long time," she said. "Each team I coach is new and that's the only one I think about."

Baylor nixes Independence Bowl

WACO (AP) — Baylor football coach Grant Teaff informed Independence Bowl officials Wednesday that his team won't play in the Dec. 15 game.

The decision means the Bears could conceivably go 7-3-1 and not earn a bowl bid.

"The Independence Bowl required a commitment from us today," Teaff said. "A commitment would be impossible now because we are still vigorously pursuing the host spot in the Cotton Bowl."

For Baylor (6-3-1, 5-1-1 in the Southwest Conference) to get to the Cotton Bowl, the Bears must defeat No. 6 Texas at home Saturday and Texas A&M must do the same Dec. 1.

Independence Bowl officials had said that if Baylor upsets Texas, they probably would not issue a bid to Baylor because they couldn't wait until Dec. 1 to find out the Bears' situation.

But Baylor would have remained the Independence Bowl's No. 1 choice in the event of a loss to the Longhorns, bowl officials said.

"I do not think it's appropriate to be in a position of having to lose to ensure a bowl bid," Teaff said.

"Another important factor was our preparation and practice time before the (Independence Bowl) game," he said. "With the game being played the last day of our final exams, we would have put our players and faculty at a tremendous disadvantage."

Mets after Cards' Coleman

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Vince Coleman's agent said Wednesday the free-agent outfielder has received a "very generous offer" from the New York Mets.

Agent Richie Bry would not disclose terms of the offer for Coleman, who hit .292 and won his sixth straight National League stolen base crown last season for the St. Louis Cardinals.

"We're also talking to other clubs, and it's not fair to the Cardinals to negotiate in the paper," Bry said.

One more year for A.J.

HOUSTON (AP) — More than a half-century of racing will come to an end next year for A.J. Foyt.

Foyt, the all-time winningest Indy-car driver, said Tuesday night he'll make one last run in the Indianapolis 500, "finish the 1991 season and then call it quits."

"I hate that I've got to call it an end," Foyt said. "But there comes a time in everybody's life that, it's over with."

Foyt, 55, is recuperating at his Houston home from injuries sustained in a race crash Sept. 23 at Elkhart Lake, Wis. He broke and dislocated bones in both legs and feet.

"If I get back 100 percent and finish 1991, I've had an enjoyable career," he said.

Foyt had earlier hinted at retirement but had not made an announcement.

"Yes, this will be the last time," Foyt said of next year's 500.

Foyt, who has won four Indy 500s, said the accident spoiled his plan to wait until next year before announcing the 1991 season would be his last.

"It's just a bad misfortune that this (crash) had to happen," he said, adding that he thinks his recuperation is coming along on schedule.

Prior to the accident at Elkhart Lake, Foyt had sustained serious injuries on several occasions. He has twice broken his back in addition to fractures of the feet and ribs.

Foyt, who won the Indianapolis 500 in 1965, 1969, 1974 and 1975, is winless on the Indy-car circuit since a victory in the Pocono 500 in 1981.

With career earnings of $5.5 million, Foyt finished his 34th season with 67 Indy-car career victories and 53 poles. He is second to Mario Andretti in poles.

Foyt's career has not been limited to Indy-cars. He is the only driver ever to win the Indianapolis 500, stock-car racing's Daytona 500 and endurance racing's 24 Hours of LeMans.

He has won races in 18 different seasons and has nine victories in races of 500 miles, both Indy-car records.

His father built him his first race car when Foyt was 3. He won his first midget car race in 1953.

Foyt and his wife Lucy have two sons and a daughter, and six grandchildren.

Alaska Shootout in jeopardy

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The Great Alaska Shootout, an annual early season showcase of the nation's top teams, is in danger of becoming the late Great Alaska Shootout.

"We're worried," Alaska-Anchorage athletic director Ron Petro said. "We're very worried as to whether we can have this tournament as we've known it as of 1992."

The tournament, which opens with four first-round games on Friday, is in its 13th year. Teams that have competed here include the biggest in college basketball — Georgetown, Indiana, North Carolina, Kentucky, Kansas, Louisville, Seton Hall and Syracuse, to name a few.

ESPN has cut back on its coverage and will televise only Monday night's championship game.

First round pairings have Virginia against Siena, Nevada vs. South Carolina, Cal-Irvine against UCLA and Texas Tech vs. Alaska-Anchorage.

This year's field, although considered somewhat below previous standards, still boasts No. 11 UCLA and 18th-ranked Virginia.

But anticipated NCAA rule changes and an increasing difficulty in luring big-name teams to the frozen north has put the event's future in jeopardy.

"We've been fortunate and worked hard to make this a very good tournament," Petro said. "But I'm very concerned and it would be a shame to lose it for our state, our school and for college basketball."

The games in Alaska don't count in the NCAA's 28-game limit, giving teams a chance to iron out early season wrinkles and maybe pick up an extra victory or two.

"It gives you a chance to get away, have a little bit of fun, but get three extra games and have chances for three extra wins," Virginia coach Jeff Jones said. "If you pick up an extra win or two there, then at the end of the year it's all the better.

"For the (NCAA tournament) selection committee, a lot of times it's not how many losses you have, it's how many wins you have."

The tournament's problems with the NCAA are twofold.

First, there is the proposal to prohibit any games before Dec. 1. The Shootout traditionally is held on Thanksgiving weekend.

Petro said if NCAA presidents are so concerned about players missing class time, it doesn't make sense to have the three-game tournament the first week of December, when classes have resumed.

But the bigger concern is a change that would limit the number of pre-season tournaments a school can enter over a four-year period. Currently, a team can either play in Hawaii or Alaska once every four years.

this season.

"It was in the best interest of this football team to make this decision to improve ourselves in this area," Wilson said.

Joe Bugel, the Cardinals' first-year coach who was an assistant at Washington the last nine seasons, pushed hard for Phoenix to acquire Manley. But the decision was up to Wilson and team owner Bill Bidwill.

"It was the unanimous recommendation of Larry and the coach," Bidwill said. "If he wasn't playing for us, he'd be playing against us. The commissioner has a policy and the player has been suspended by it and reinstated by it."

Under terms of his reinstatement, Manley must undergo random drug testing and participate in a structured support program approved by the league.

"We realize there's some controversy in this," Wilson said. "Both Dexter and the Cardinals realize it's an ongoing thing. But he's followed the guidelines to the letter. Here's an example of a person who has had some very big problems and whipped them to this point."

Wilson said the 6-foot-3, 257-pound Manley "has been lifting weights and running and is supposed to be in great shape."

"I'm in great shape. I've always been a guy with great work habits and work ethics. I won't be a Buster Douglas," Manley said. "I've been clean and sober for 388 days. I want to play five more years. I feel honored that the commissioner took my reinstatement into consideration. Hopefully, I'll never violate that trust and policy again."

Bugel said Manley will be used as a pass-rusher for up to 15 plays per game when he is activated next month.

"We think he can be a productive player again," Wilson said. "We're hoping it'll be for us."

"Can he still play? We don't know," Bugel said. "You never marry somebody. If he can't play, 'Sorry, baby.'"

"Hey, I have great respect for the guy. He's paid his dues. He's paid a deep, deep price. Once a guy gets out of prison, do you treat him like that for the rest of his life?"

"I know the problems he's had. I've been around a lot of guys with a lot of problems, probably worse than Dexter, and they're still playing in the league," added Bugel. "He was a great impact player with Washington. He helped put two (Super Bowl) rings on my finger."

Manley, in the final year of a $485,000 contract, will become a free agent after the 1990 season. He will be paid $120,000 by the Cardinals or $30,000 for each game.

Wilson said the team will decide after the season whether to attempt to re-sign him.

Packers quarterback out

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay coach Lindy Infante on Wednesday ruled quarterback Don Majkowski out for Sunday's game with Tampa Bay and the team resigned Mike Norseth as insurance.

Majkowski suffered a severely bruised shoulder in last week's victory in Phoenix. Anthony Dilweg, who replaced Majkowski and rallied the Packers to a 24-21 victory, will start Sunday against the Buccaneers at Milwaukee.

Infante said Wednesday that Majkowski, who has a history of healing quickly, is coming along fine.

"He is still pretty sore," he said.

Fabulous five arrives on the hill

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

One thing that can bring a smile to even the doourest college basketball coach's face is the signing of a top-flight recruit.

Alumni give you a slap on the back and quickly forget any poor showings from last season. Rival coaches even offer that knowing nod of congratulations.

For North Carolina's Dean Smith, the winningest active coach with 686 victories, there was a lot more than signing one blue-chipper. Try five. One at each position, all considered among the top high school players in the nation.

It's certainly not the first time a group of talented players have all registered at the same school at the same.

It's not even the first time for Smith, who had five players come in as the Class of '69 — Rusty Clark, Bill Bunting, Dick Grubar, Gerald Tuttle and Joe Brown — and they reached the Final Four in each of their three years of eligibility. Those three teams are still the only ones to win the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season and tournament titles three consecutive years.

"Going to the Final Four was a lot tougher then because you had to win your conference tournament to get there," Smith said. "That class had a great player on either side of it in Larry Miller and Charles Scott, but they were a great nucleus of role players. Larry Brown was their freshmen coach and that was one of the few teams where we had someone at each position. There was chemistry when they came to the varsity and they let it go around Miller."

There has been a lot of attention directed at this latest crew to walk on to the Chapel Hill campus — 7-foot Eric Montross, 6-9 Clifford Rozier, 6-7 Pat Sullivan, 6-6 Brian Reese and 6-3 Derrick Phelps.

"People write on freshmen. What's the difference between the 14th-best freshman and the 16th-best according to some newspaper writer? They might get lucky and hit on one or two," Smith said. "Go give me your list from four years ago and put the same people in those slots. How'd they do in those four years? Of course I know or I wouldn't have brought it up."

"I can handle it ... but I don't think it's fair to the freshmen. I assume our expectations are because of freshmen, and that's really not smart."

The Tar Heels have been tabbed as the preseason favorite in the Atlantic Coast Conference by both the coaches and media and the five freshmen are a main reason.

You can't find out how the freshmen feel about their rookie season because first-year Tar Heels don't talk to the media until the first game and Smith doesn't talk specifics about them until then. Start asking questions on Nov. 24 when San Diego State visits Smith Center.

The veterans have let their feelings be heard on the newest players to wear Carolina Blue.

"I think that the freshmen really need to learn a lot about playing basketball the way Carolina plays," senior guard King Rice said. "All of them are going to be great players, no doubt about that. But we realize as seniors that we're the backbone of the team, and when it comes down to it, we're going to be on the floor, and hopefully, they'll learn from us and they'll be ready to contribute."

Senior forward Rick Fox echoed those feelings.

"I know they're a great class and they have great potential and I know they play hard," he said. "Now, what I want to know is how they're going to react to Coach Smith. Our team is not going to take a step to start from the basics for them. They've got to catch up to us."

John Wooden, whom Smith passed last season on the coaches' all-time victory list, knows of great classes from his storied career at UCLA. He had two recruiting classes who did Smith's late-60s group even better.

In 1967, Lew Alcindor was among four sophomores who started for the Bruins and won the national championship and won the national championship and won the national championship. Five years later another dominant center, Bill Walton, was the key to a group of three sophomores who would win titles two of their three seasons.

"Most any coach would rather have numbers but at same time would always rather have quality over quantity," Wooden said of bringing in a group of players at the same time.

Full recovery expected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran rocker David Crosby, who broke his left leg, ankle and shoulder in a motorcycle accident, is in good spirits and confident of making a full recovery, a hospital spokesman says.

"David seems to be on the road to recovery from some very serious fractures," Cedars-Sinai Medical center spokesman Ron Wise said Monday. "He seems real clear and upbeat and confident that he'll get through this in good shape."

Crosby was listed in fair condition Monday. Rocker Billy Idol was treated at the hospital in February

DAVID CROSBY after breaking his leg and arm in a motorcycle crash. Crosby, 49, was driving his motorcycle along a winding road Saturday when he lost control and skidded about 40 feet, said police Officer Leona Thomas.

Quayle to be inducted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dan Quayle, who has made it to the big leagues of politics, is about to be inducted into the Little League Hall of Excellence.

"He's the first Little League graduate to be vice president," Little League spokesman Steve Keener said Monday.

Induction ceremonies will be held Dec. 6 in Washington. Quayle plans to donate his old glove to the Little League Museum in Williamsport, Pa.

Quayle played baseball for the Herald-Press newspaper team in the Hoosier Little League of Huntington, Ind., in the mid-1950s.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Although you are interested in making a major change in your life, it might be wise to postpone changing jobs until after Jan. 1. Sticking it out where you are will net you some very nice financial gains next month. By March 1991, travel will play a key role in your success. Set up a regular savings plan if you have not already done so. A family member or friend could offer you investment capital next August. Romance will be all around you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Entertainment costs could be getting out of hand. Financial problems call for a candid discussion with family. A budget revision may be the most practical answer to the temporary money crunch.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A pleasant trip will give your spirits a big boost. Plan to purchase some new items for your wardrobe. Your generous nature will bring you sizable dividends in the near future. Plan a vacation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Early morning hours can be very productive. You should wake up and be on the alert. Even when the odds are against you, you can win. Engaging in vigorous exercise helps relieve tension.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your older, more experienced contacts prove valuable now. Unpredictable people will add an element of surprise to upcoming events. Refuse to be rushed into making a commitment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Many minor problems remain but they should not be taken too seriously. Solve them one at a time! Your allies are much more cooperative than in the past. Present a united front.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An envious friend could pick a quarrel with you without even realizing it. A showdown could be catastrophic. Be tolerant but firm. Remember the good times you have shared and curb your temper.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your desire to see the world may run up against your responsibilities. Those of you who enjoy financial independence should spend some money on educational pursuits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A family member's cooperation makes the atmosphere at home much more tranquil. Keep an important appointment with your doctor or dentist. The evening promises to be very busy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Shoulder the consequences of a mistake without trying to make others share them. Someone behind the scenes is working on your behalf. Avoid all kinds of excess. Keep spending to a minimum.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It pays to be wary of those who call for drastic decisions or actions. A marriage or business partnership is still under strain. Certain events taking place today will determine your future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Monetary considerations have had a lot to do with a decision you reach this morning. Only you can decide whether or not you can afford certain things. Ignore pressure from your peers.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take all the steps you can to protect your personal and joint financial resources. It is far too risky now to take chances. Reorganize your desk or office this afternoon.

NBA Notes

Patrick Ewing and Akeem Olajuwon met this week for only the ninth time in a regular-season game since Ewing came into the NBA in 1985.

Houston's 115-88 victory gave the Rockets a 5-4 edge in the meetings of the two All-Star centers and Olajuwon shot 14-for-19 while outscoring Ewing 30-14.

"I don't think you can use the word dominate," Olajuwon said of his matchup with Ewing, who was 5-for-16 from the field but outscored Olajuwon 11-5. "Just let the stats speak for themselves. I don't want to say too much because Patrick still has to go to Houston this season."

Olajuwon, who played very little basketball before moving to the University of Houston from his native Nigeria in 1980, is averaging 25.1 points and 13.6 rebounds against Ewing, who is averaging 23.9 and 8.2 rebounds against Olajuwon.

"Akeem continues to prove to me he can improve his game even further," Rockets coach Don Chaney said. "Because he started playing the game late, he's still playing catchup compared to American players his age."

The huge salaries being paid to the top players in the NBA is having a trickle-down effect at the other end of the bench.

Fifteen of the 65 rookies on opening-night rosters this season were undrafted players, and another five rookies played last year in Italy, France, Greece and Argentina. Most of those 20 unheralded rookies are at or near the NBA minimum salary, which helps teams stay within salary cap guidelines. Last year's opening day rosters included 75 rookies.

A sidelight to the Olajuwon-Ewing matchup was the appearance in the same game of Kennard Winchester and Greg Grant, two of only six players in NBA history who made the jump from a Division III school.

Winchester, from Averett College in Danville, Va., was cut by Sioux Falls of the Continental Basketball Association in 1989 and played in Cordoba, Argentina. Grant, from Trenton State in New Jersey, was a rookie for Phoenix last season and was signed by the Knicks as a free agent.

The other four Division III players are Clinton Wheeler of William Paterson, who played for Indiana, Miami and Portland in 1988-89; Derrick Rowland of Potsdam State, who played two games with Milwaukee in 1986; Michael Harper of North Park, who played two seasons with Portland in 1981-82; and Sam Pellom of Buffalo State, who played four seasons with Atlanta and Milwaukee from 1980-83.

Eight current players in the NBA played for Division II schools. Three others played for schools that are now Division III, but weren't when they were in college.

Chris Mullin and Mitch Richmond were the hottest-shooting tandem in the NBA, carrying Golden State to a surprising 6-2 start before Richmond broke his thumb.

Mullin was 9-for-14 (.642) on Nov. 10 against Seattle and saw his overall shooting percentage drop.

Coach Don Nelson said Mullin "never misses an open shot, and his trickery around the basket has never been better."

Richmond, meanwhile, was 12-for-15 in consecutive games against Seattle and San Antonio before fracturing his left thumb.

Cleveland coach Lenny Wilkens wasted no time revamping his early season starting lineup, and the results were positive for the Cavaliers.

After starting the season 0-2, Wilkens replaced veterans Craig Ehlo and John Williams with forward Larry Nance and rookie guard Gerald Paddio, who was taken by Boston in the third round of the 1988 draft.

"I feel that when John and Craig come off the bench, it is a plus for us because both of them are experienced players," Wilkens said. "Now, we don't lose anything when we go to our bench. Besides that, Larry Nance has been awesome. He makes the big shots and grabs the big rebounds."

In his first eight games as a starter, six of them victories, Nance averaged nearly 20 points and 10 rebounds. Paddio, who played in the CBA in 1988-89 and in France last season, scored more than 20 points twice in the same span.

Hoopster embarrassed of state

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Once proud to say he was from Arizona, San Antonio Spurs forward Sean Elliott says he's embarrassed his home state rejected a proposal to establish a Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

"I'm disappointed to say the least, over what has happened," Elliott said Tuesday. "I'm embarrassed to say I'm from there. It's a shame to say that about your home state. You shouldn't be ashamed about where you grew up."

Arizona voters rejected a proposal Nov. 6 to make the third Monday in January Martin Luther King Jr.-Civil Rights Day. Voters also rejected a plan to eliminate the state's Columbus Day holiday to avoid increasing the number of state holidays if the MLK Day had been approved.

Thanksgiving

Children share recipes for holiday meal

How I cook my turkey and Pie

By LYNN HAYES
Lifestyle Editor

Thanksgiving Day is finally here, and if you've decided to serve something different this year you might want to try one of the following recipes from area preschool children.

However, before serving any of these dishes to your guests, you might want to sample it yourself.

The following children attend Proffitt Day Care Center:

FRUIT SALAD

Ragan Darden, 6, daughter of Todd and Melody Darden

Strawberries, pears, cherries. Then put some whip cream on it, then oranges. Mix it up and keep it out to eat for dessert.

TURKEY

Put sauce that Daddy puts on meat and pepper on it. Take the feathers and beak off and take his legs off so he can't run off. Put some butter on him. Cook for 20 hours.

TURKEY

Justin Fitzgerald, 5, son of B.R. and Donna Perser

Take the wrapper off and put it in the pan. Put pepper, salt and hot sauce, then put in the oven. Cook it for only 1 minute.

GREEN BEANS

Buy fresh green beans from the store. Put in a pan with salt, pepper and cheese and cook them for a little bit long.

PUMPKIN PIE

Cara Beth Shortes, 4, daughter of Rick and Tanya Shortes

You need pumpkins, chocolate kisses, some candy and milk. Then put it in the oven and bake for a little bit then take it out and we will all eat it.

AT ELMORE THE DIFFERENCE IS PEOPLE

Happy 3rd Anniversary, Geraldine!

We congratulate Geraldine Parrish on her third anniversary at Elmore Chrysler-Dodge-Jeep! Geraldine is the bookkeeper at Elmore, handling accounts receivable and payable and is also a computer operator.

Geraldine is a native of Howard County and has a brother and three sisters also living in Big Spring. In her leisure time she enjoys reading, aggravating her family and traveling (as long as it's no farther than 60 miles from home). She's also been a member of Eastern Star, Chapter 67 for more than 30 years.

Geraldine has been in this particular phase of the car business since December of 1949 and says, "My job at Elmore has been the best thing that's ever happened to me, because I enjoy working and I enjoy working for the Elmore's," they've been very good to me." She also comments, "It sure beats sitting at home in a rocking chair."

"We're proud to have you with us." — The Elmore's.

Panic attacks linked to suicide attempts

By NYU SCHOOL OF MEDICINE For AP Newsfeatures

The nearly 1 million Americans who experience the sudden and intense feelings of fear known as panic attacks may be at increased risk for suicide attempts.

"Fortunately, panic disorder usually responds to treatment," said Dr. Lenard A. Adler, a psychiatrist at New York University Medical Center.

One recent study suggested that as many as 20 percent of people with panic disorder may attempt suicide. This is about three times the figure for people with other psychiatric disorders, and 18 times that for people without any psychiatric disorder.

Suicide is the ninth leading cause of death in the United States, accounting for some 1.5 percent of all mortalities.

Panic disorder generally appears first in the late teens or early 20s, and is somewhat more prevalent in women than in men.

In addition to feelings of intense anxiety and a feeling of impending doom, symptoms of panic disorder may include shortness of breath, dizziness or faintness, rapid pulse and heartbeat, nausea and sweating. Symptoms may be linked with a particular activity or situation, or may occur without an obvious cause.

"A panic attack is usually defined by any four of these symptoms occurring in the absence of a real threat," Adler said. A person who experiences three panic attacks within a three-week period is considered to have panic disorder. Other risk factors for suicide attempts in people with panic disorder include drug and alcohol abuse.

Adler suggested that anyone experiencing the symptoms of panic disorder have a medical work-up to rule out physical causes, such as arrhythmia, hypoglycemia, neurological disorders, and thyroid disease.

If the workup is negative and panic disorder is confirmed, several treatment options are available. "Psychotherapy can help people recognize their panic attacks are limited and not in themselves dangerous, which often alleviates some apprehension," Adler said.

Behavioral therapy, in which a person is helped to overcome a feared situation through desensitization, may also be useful, as may group therapy with people who share similar fears.

Drug therapy is usually included in an overall treatment plan. Antidepressants usually block panic attacks or reduce their frequency and intensity.

Herald employees pose with food collected from a classified advertising promotion held this month. Representing each of the different departments at the Herald are (from left to right) Debbie Lincecum, editorial;

Jessie Ramirez, pressroom; Debbye Valverde, advertising; Keith Carson, mailroom; Yolanda Williams, composing; Patsy Rodriguez, circulation; Cindy Moore, business office.

Thanksgiving Day is the one day particularly set aside to count our blessings. At the Big Spring Herald, we think we have a lot of blessings for which to be grateful.

High among them are you, our readers, who buy and read the product we work so hard to produce. We appreciate the way you let us know when we particularly please you or do something you dislike. At a time when national readership is down, we have increased our newspaper sales, and we're very proud of that.

We appreciate our advertisers. Through advertising, we get the messages of our business community to the public. Their ads make it possible to offer our readers the news — local, state, national and world — day after day.

We count our community among our blessings. Publishing a newspaper is always easier in a community of friendly people working together to make things happen. We want to be part of the economic growth of our town, our county and our area.

Crossroads Country is growing, and we're growing with it. There's a feeling of comraderie among our staff as we work together to produce a new and better newspaper every day. The editorial and advertising efforts are obvious in each day's newspaper.

We must also be thankful for a conscientious group of newspaper carriers who bring the product to your home each day, promptly and courteously.

Less visible, but just as important to our success, are the staff members in the production and press departments — no newspaper operates without them — as well as the accounting department that ensures our outflow doesn't exceed our inflow. We are thankful for all of our employees and the contribution each one is making.

To share our good fortune, the Herald and its staff are participating in a variety of projects to help the less fortunate in our community.

As you celebrate the holiday with your family, take a few moments to reflect with pride on the blessings of living in Crossroads Country. We have much to be thankful for.

Happy Thanksgiving.

Dear Abby

AIDS keeps sister away

DEAR ABBY: You cannot repeat often enough that AIDS is transmitted only through blood contact, contaminated needles or unprotected intimate sexual contact. My lover died of an AIDS-related illness in September, after being cared for by me for 28 months.

His sister, who lives nearby, had rejected him upon learning of his illness. She refused to visit him in the intensive care unit for fear of getting AIDS and passing it to her children!

Her letter to him, saying she would cherish their happy memories as brother and sister, arrived too late. Although she really adored him, she was totally uninformed about his illness.

Abby, no one was in danger of contracting AIDS from him. His former wife and son came from afar to show their love and hold his hand. I still test negative after four years of "safe" intimacy with him.

Perhaps this letter will help others to avoid heartbreak, remorse and recrimination.

BEREAVED IN TEXAS
DEAR BEREAVED: How sad that your lover's sister was unaware that according to the Centers for Disease Control, there is no evidence that AIDS can be spread by touching, hugging or body contact other than sexual intimacy.

AIDS is not spread by casual contact with infected individuals. And neither is there any evidence that AIDS is spread by sharing towels, food or eating utensils with a person who has AIDS. "Sister" could have confirmed those facts by telephoning her local department of health, or calling the toll-free National Aids Hotline: 1-800-342-2437. This letter is too late for your lover's sister, but it need not be too late for anyone who has a friend or a relative who is living with AIDS.

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice. Six months ago, my husband and I separated. I moved out and took all my belongings and half of "our" belongings with me. I really tried to be fair. One thing I kept was a handmade bedspread my husband's grandmother had made and given me five years ago at my bridal shower.

Abby, I have dearly loved this woman and kept the bedspread partly because of what she has meant to me. I felt sure that she would want me to have it. However, recently my former husband called to tell me he wants the bedspread back — that his grandmother told him she wants him to have it.

Well, I am so hurt over this because I really thought my loving feelings for her were reciprocated. I even wonder if perhaps my husband didn't fabricate the story; it's so hard for me to believe.

Anyway, I want to do the right thing. I haven't spoken to her yet because I fear what she may say. This is really hurting me. What should I do? — HURTING IN VIRGINIA

DEAR HURTING: Call her. Be warm and friendly, and tell her that you dearly love her. Then ask her when it would be convenient to return the bedspread. Her reaction to that question will tell you all you need to know.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column concerning the wedding in which the bride wore a $900 bridal gown and the minister was paid $20 reminded me of the "fee" my uncle received for officiating at a wedding back in 1934.

The parents of the bride presented my uncle (a minister) with a pair of leather gloves.

My uncle said, "Thank you," and his wife said, "Leather gloves? That's a strange gift to give in June — but by October they will come in handy."

Came October, when my uncle was putting on the gloves for the first time, he found each "finger" of the glove stuffed with a $10 bill, wrapped in tissue paper! In 1934, $100 was a small fortune.

My uncle told that story often, adding, "That's when I learned never to judge a book by its cover."

Chinese try new dating and wedding rituals

By CHARLENE L. FU
BEIJING (AP) — Feng Xiaolin was clearly embarrassed in preparing for her debut on Beijing's newest, most popular television show.

"This is just too awkward," she complained, following instructions to walk across a miniature bridge toward the camera. "I never wear these colors."

She tried to hide the bright pink sweater with an aquamarine overcoat.

Despite her discomfort, the 37-year-old divorcee went through the shot several times, spurred by thoughts of the hoped-for reward: a husband.

Her video was to be shown on the matchmaking show "Tonight We Meet," which features two-minute spots of four to five single men and women each week and invites viewers to contact the station for dates.

"Tonight We Meet," the idea of the Beijing city government, may seem modern and Western, but it also harks back to the Chinese tradition of marriages arranged by go-betweens. The difference in this case is that the decision to date or marry is made by the couple rather than their parents.

The communists tried to do away with matchmaking when they gained power in 1949, but single people in China have few ways of meeting potential mates. Varied dating and casual pickups are frowned upon.

Professional matchmaking centers have sprung up in recent years. Singles register their names, vital statistics and criteria for a spouse and await responses.

There is more glamor on "Tonight We Meet," which has been broadcast for 20 minutes each Friday night since last summer. Candidates for the show are filmed at work and play, in settings of their choice.

Ms. Feng, a medical worker, wore her uniform cap and gown and posed in the laboratory of the university infirmary where she works.

Yang Guang, the host and editor, shouted encouragement throughout the filming.

"You look beautiful!" she called out. "We're going to get a whole mailbox full of letters for you!"

She said the waiting list to get on the show was more than two months long and that most applicants, like Ms. Feng, were divorcees in their 30s or early 40s.

"They all say they are a pitiable generation" because their youth was disrupted by the radical Cultural Revolution of 1966-76, Ms. Yang said. In that decade, many young people chose spouses on the basis of their political convictions or because they had residence permits for the cities.

Unlike past generations, Ms. Feng said, people of her age are not willing to stay in loveless marriages. "We still feel young, like we've still got a lot of life to live," she said.

Ms. Yang, who is single, said no marriages had resulted from the show but many couples had begun dating. A 60-year-old widower who appeared reported receiving more than 100 letters from interested women.

For those who want to meet other singles but are not brave enough to appear on television, the station holds dances. The co-sponsor of the first dance was a firm called the Purple House, which arranges fancy weddings, another revived tradition.

For decades, ostentation was frowned upon as ideologically unsound. Most couples simply got a marriage license and invited a few friends and relatives to a quiet party.

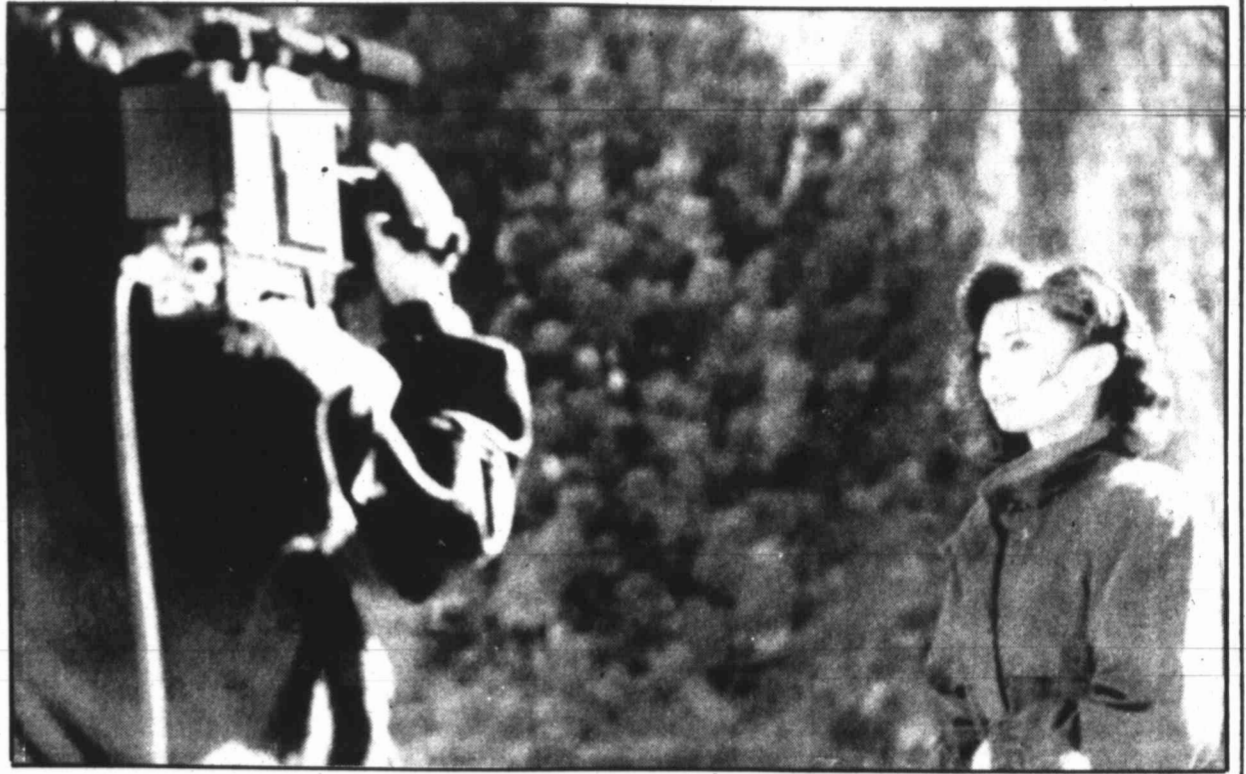

Higher living standards are bringing back old-fashioned wedding bashes with new, Western touches.

The Purple House, which opened in June, is the only operation of its kind in China. For a fee, it can provide tuxedo and gown for the bride and groom, limousine pickup, a wedding complete with flower girl and attendants, a feast afterward and even a suite for the wedding night.

So far, it has arranged more than 50 weddings, said Zhao Zhongfeng, assistant to the manager. She said couples already are booking for January and February, the lunar new year season and China's most popular time to get married.

A typical wedding organized by the Purple House costs about 3,000 yuan ($633), which is 15 months' pay for the average worker. The ceremonies are a mix of Chinese and Western customs.

At one recent wedding, the couple walked in to the Wedding March and promised Western-style to love and respect each other "through sickness and health," causing giggles among guests who had never heard such vows.

Then, Chinese-style, the couple took a sip of wine and bowed to their guests, employers and parents.

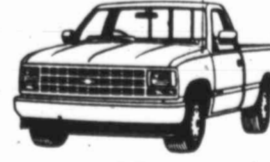

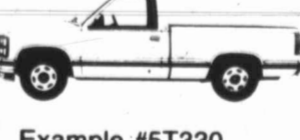

Finally, socialist-style, they bowed to each other while the master of ceremonies reminded them that Chinese law allowed them to have only one child.

District 5-AA champion Van Horn Eagles will face District 8-AA runner-up Goldwaite Eagles in area playoff action Friday night at 8 p.m. in Buffalo Stadium.

Van Horn enters the contest with a 9-0-1 record; its only tie was with District 6-AA runner-up Iraan Braves in the third game of the season. The Eagles destroyed the Braves in bi-district action last weekend, 42-19.

Goldwaite will be sporting a 9-1-1 record, with a loss to district champ DeLeon 21-0 and a tie against San Saba 14-14 as the only bad marks on its slate. Goldwaite defeated Anson, 6-0, in bi-district action last weekend.

Annual event in Dawson County

LAMESA — The 10th annual Pecan Show and Pecan Food Show will be held Dec. 6-7 in the Lamesa National Bank Meeting Room, 112 Houston Ave.

Any pecan grower from Dawson County and adjacent counties can enter a sample of 42 nuts from each variety he or she grows. Contestants can only enter one county contest. The competition will be divided into three categories: commercial, classic and native.

All entries should be delivered to the LNB Meeting Room on Thursday, Dec. 6 between 11:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. Entries should be in a paper sack with the name of the grower, telephone number, address and variety of the nut.

The food show will be divided into six categories: appetizers, snacks, breads, pies, cakes, cookies, and candies. All pecans used in the entry do not have to be homegrown. The show will take place at the LNB Meeting Room from 8-9:30 a.m. on Friday, Dec. 7.

Plaques will be awarded to the champions of the pecan show and the food show. Ribbons will be awarded for first, second and third places. Judging in both categories will take place from 9:30-noon on Friday, Dec. 7.

Postmaster: Stanton faces automated age

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
Staff Writer

As in many postal offices across the nation, automation is changing Stanton's service for the better, according to newly appointed Postmaster Gail Teegarden.

"Whether we like it or not, our El Paso office has changed the way we used to do business, especially in our smaller towns," Teegarden said. "Midland sorts all of Stanton's mail as well as towns like San Angelo, Big Spring and other surrounding towns."

"Midland's office is considered a General Mail Facility, where all mail is sorted into box sections. When mail comes in without a box number, we have to handle it one by one and look up the name to find out who's mailbox it is," Teegarden said.

She adds, "With the cutback of personnel, we have no choice sometimes but to return the mail because it is time consuming. Our office keeps getting the same volume of mail, but our clerks have been cut from three to two clerks and one postmaster."

"Everytime we have to sort out mail that has been sent without a box number, we have to spend overtime with one of our clerks. That means that I have to justify or explain overtime spent with my El Paso office, and they may not see a good reason for sorting mail that should have already been sorted out in Midland," she said.

With automation, the postal service in Midland already has a machine that can read handwritten letters, according to Teegarden.

"Change is hard to accept, but if we have to change, our customers have to change with us. We are in a computer age and our goal from this office is to get our customers their mail as quick as we possibly can," she said.

"The goal of our Postmaster General is to have every area of the postal service in every office on total automation by 1995," Teegarden said.

"If there is anything that we can help the community to understand or just to talk with ways we can help with their mail they should just come to our office and we'll try to iron out this problem," Teegarden said.

Homeless poisoned by meal

AUSTIN (AP) — A free Thanksgiving lunch for the homeless sent more than two dozen people to three area hospitals with food poisoning Wednesday, officials said.

"It's not a pretty sight," said Brackenridge Hospital spokesman Larry BeSaw.

Officials said the meal had been served to some 300 people at a downtown-area soup kitchen called the Austin Baptist Chapel.

Between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m., some of those who ate the lunch of turkey sandwiches and turkey soup started becoming ill.

"It looks like a pretty straight case of food poisoning," said Sue Noffke, of the Austin-Travis County Health Department.

The city's emergency medical service set up a command post at the Salvation Army shelter, where many of the homeless went after lunch.

City buses, fire department vans and private ambulances were used to transport people to hospitals, officials said.

"We have a clinic in the Salvation Army. There have been people complaining of the symptoms common to food poisoning."

Judge sets hearing on Democrats' suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Wednesday scheduled an emergency Dec. 4 hearing on the effort by 45 House Democrats to bar President Bush from ordering an attack on Iraq without Congress' approval.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene, rejecting an attempt by the Justice Department to transfer the lawsuit to a judge appointed by President Reagan, gave the government until Monday to file its response.

Greene said that at the Dec. 4 hearing he would hear arguments on the lawmakers' motion for a preliminary injunction in the case.

The lawmakers, led by Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., contend in the lawsuit filed Tuesday that under the Constitution's war powers, clause Congress must debate and vote on a declaration of war before American troops can be used to dislodge Iraqi forces from Kuwait.

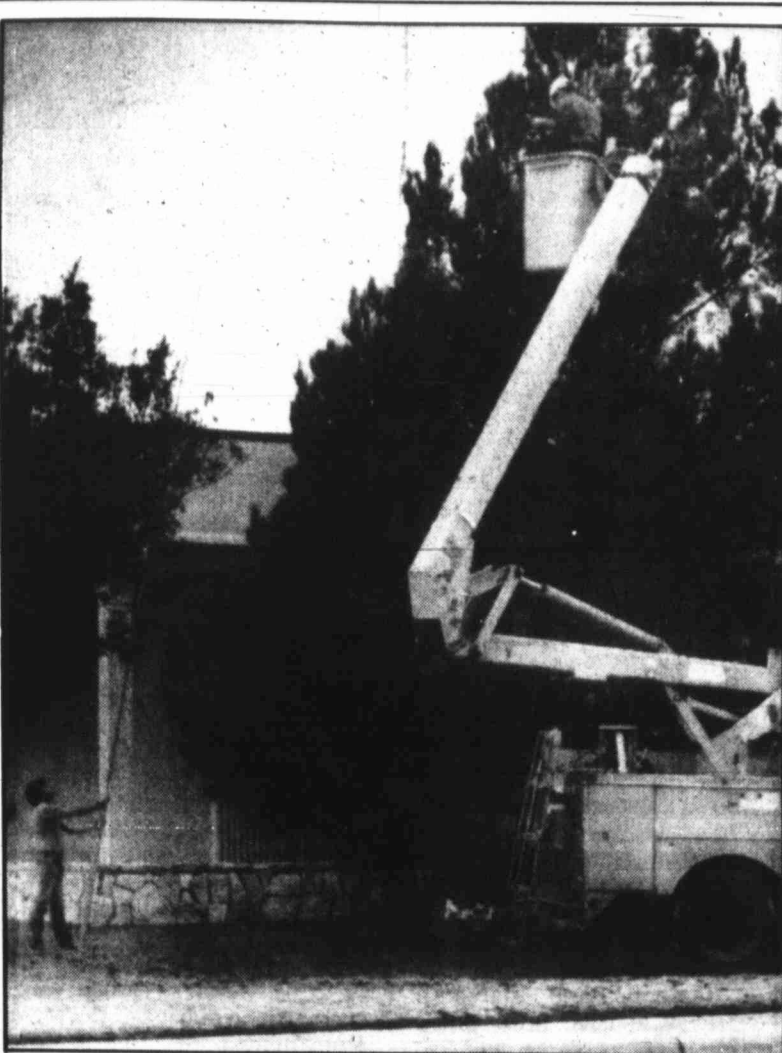

"We're talking about a really serious situation — an emergency hearing on Dec. 4 to really deter-

Bush arrives for talks

JIDDAH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — On the eve of a Thanksgiving-day trip to the front lines, President

Bush conferred with Kuwait's exiled emir and Saudi's King Fahd. He said the 230,000 American troops on Saudi soil were not on a "mission impossible."

Shortly after his arrival here, Bush declared he's "more committed than ever" to driving Iraq from Kuwait. "I think we should take action right away in the United Nations for more resolutions," Bush said.

He made it clear he wanted approval of a resolution authorizing force against Saddam, and said that graphic indictments of Iraq's brutality to citizens of Kuwait would be presented next week to the United Nations.

On Thursday, the president and his wife, Barbara, planned to share Thanksgiving with some of the 230,000 U.S. servicemen and servicewomen he has sent to the Persian Gulf region to confront Iraq.

"If I do nothing else, I will convey to them the heartfelt thanks of the American people at this very special time of year for Americans," Bush said.

He told reporters he would tell the troops that "we are going to prevail, that they're not there on a mission impossible."

Bush announced that he will meet with Syrian President Hafez al-Assad on Friday in Geneva on his way home from the Middle East to the United States.

He defied meeting with the controversial leader, whom the United States government officially considers the head of a terrorist state.

"Syrians want to see Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait just as much as we do," Bush said. "I have no problem sitting down with him for this common objective."

Speaking with reporters after meeting with Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, Kuwait's exiled emir, Bush raised the decibel level of his condemnation of the Iraqi leader, including a warning that "steps" against him should be taken at once.

Bush said that he and the exiled monarch agreed that, while a peaceful resolution of the crisis remained desirable, "we also agreed that all options remained open and that steps needed to be taken right now in order to make those options credible and effective."

When asked what "steps" he had in mind, Bush cited his decisions to nearly double the number of U.S.

 troops in the region and to press for prompt U.N. action.

Bush said the exiled emir "showed me some pictures that are so cruel and so brutal that it just turns your stomach. The matter is going to be aired in the United Nations next week."

After the meetings with Fahd and the emir, "I am more committed than ever to see this cruel occupation come to an end," the president said.

Bush made it clear he wants the U.N. Security Council to authorize the use of military force against Iraq, but would not disclose exactly what provisions he would like included to trigger an invasion.

"It's been a general understanding that the United States is in favor of such a step. I would expect that there would be yet another (U.N.) resolution strongly against Saddam Hussein. We'll wait to see what that resolution does," he said.

"How long this coalition will wait until other options are exercised, I can't tell you that," he said.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait was the focus of the Monday's meeting in Geneva with the Syrian leader, but that the plight of U.S. hostages in captivity in Lebanon also would be discussed.

The announcement of the visit, and Wednesday's strong saber-rattling in Jiddah, were the latest maneuvers by Bush to increase pressure on Saddam.

Earlier Wednesday, Bush told reporters in Paris that he and Mikhail S. Gorbachev now see "eye to eye" on the crisis, even though the Soviet president's public statements have reflected a greater reluctance to use military force.

Bush's meeting with Assad was expected to last several hours, following talks in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Although the United States still considers Syria a terrorist state, the president agreed to the first meeting between leaders of the two countries in 13 years because of Syria's importance in the coalition trying to pry Iraq from Kuwait, Fitzwater said.

Syria has contributed about 5,000 troops to the U.S.-led military operation confronting Saddam across the Kuwait and Iraq borders.

Although Fitzwater said that the visit did not imply a change in U.S. condemnation of Syria for terrorist activities, an administration official traveling with the president said "we think there's opportunity to move ahead on other issues once the crisis is behind us."

Fitzwater also disclosed that Bush while in Paris had tried to arrange a separate meeting with Jordan's King Hussein but that Hussein "couldn't come."

Sinton artist content keeping creations at home

SINTON (AP) — Inside the rusted, corrugated metal walls of a sign shop half a block north of U.S. Highway 181, a man in paint-splattered overalls sits behind a dusty workbench.

Raw materials normally found in a sign painter's shop — paint, brushes, just-finished signs — fill the drafty rectangular building facing Kohler Street, but it's the smaller tools that betray one of O.W. "Red" Hendley's passions in life.

Chisels, files, knives — anything to cut away the slivers of wood, ebony, jade and ivory he carves into figurines — dominate his working area located just inside the front door of his shop.

Hendley, 58, is using a small chisel to cut feathers into the wings of an eagle he recently carved from wood.

He'd rather talk about his work than himself, and, no matter what "I like to create, and I don't pattern anything after anyone else. I don't even necessarily want to copy nature, if I can improve on it."

O.W. "Red" Hendley

the subject, his answer always takes him back to his work rather than himself.

Although a carver for the past 30 years, Hendley's work won't be found at area arts and crafts shows.

"I had a plan when I first got serious about this that I wouldn't let anything go until I retired," Hendley said.

His plans were changed a bit when friends and customers of his sign shop took a liking to his work and convinced him to sell a few pieces.

Still, most of his work remains at his Sinton home, where some 70 to 80 carvings of pheasants, eagles, frogs, and a variety of other subjects sit in his den.

His lack of business hustle tends to irritate his wife and son, who believe he could make a full-time living from his carvings if he worked at it. Yet Hendley said monetary gain isn't what motivates him.

"I have to do something," Hendley said. "If I've got time and nothing to do, I'll be carving."

Hendley began carving as a child during World War II. Toys were scarce then, so he got wood from an old apple crate and carved toy guns and rifles.

He took up carving seriously about 30 years ago, drawing upon a natural artistic talent, despite coming from a family that showed no particular indication of such abilities.

"I drew cartoons from the time I could pick up a pencil," he said.

His first attempt at carving as an adult came in the 1960s, when he spotted an article in Popular Mechanics magazine on carving a pheasant out of wood. Seizing a 2-by-6-inch cut of lumber, Hendley duplicated the carving, which he describes as "a modern abstract of a ring-necked pheasant."

The piece resembles a pheasant, but doesn't duplicate every detail of the real-life bird. Hendley gave the piece an artistic twist, exaggerating the ring around the pheasant's neck and giving the bird a sleek, modern look unknown to nature.

"I like to create, and I don't pattern anything after anyone else," he said.

"I don't even necessarily want to copy nature, if I can improve on it."

Hendley picked up a few tips from the late R.S. Harvill, who also lived in Sinton, and whose gemstone carvings earned him national acclaim.

But he believes talent can't be taught, so most of what he knows today about carving he learned on his own. And that's the way he believes it should be.

"You could get somebody started, but you can't show them each cut. You need to let them do their own thing, otherwise you could just get a production machine," he said.

Perjury charges refiled against ex police chief

DALLAS (AP) — Officials on Wednesday refiled the perjury charge against former Dallas Police Chief Mack Vines, one day after a visiting judge threw out the indictment that cost Vines his job.

Former Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Judge John Onion, hearing the case at the request of Criminal Judge John McCall, quashed the misdemeanor perjury indictment during a hearing Tuesday.

"This is a judicial opinion that the language in the charging instrument was not as good as it should have been and we intend to clear that up by drafting a new charging instrument," Onion said.

But Assistant District Attorney Ted Steinke said the perjury case was refiled Wednesday afternoon.

"That missing language has now been added to the new charging instrument," Steinke said Wednesday. "It was a procedural matter that was correctable and it was corrected today."

Neither Vines nor his attorney could be immediately reached for comment by The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Vines and his attorney, Bill Boyd, said they hoped the district attorney's office would not pursue the case.

"I'm having trouble putting this whole case into perspective," Boyd said. "I would certainly think that there are more important matters in the community for this office to be dealing with."

Vines agreed that the city has too many problems for his case to continue to monopolize judicial time.

"I can't wait for the whole process to reach its fruition," he said. "I would then be allowed to go on with my life which has been held in limbo."

Vines is accused of lying to a special panel investigating the June 1989 firing of officer Patrick LeMaire, who fatally shot an unarmed man last year. LeMaire was reinstated last July by an administrative law judge, but declined to take a job with the police force.

The perjury charge alleged that Vines lied to the panel about a telephone conversation he had with assistant police chief Greg Holliday on Aug. 2.

Holliday said Vines called him late at night and tried to influence Holliday's testimony before the panel. Vines has maintained his innocence.

Dallas City Manager Jan Hart fired Vines on Sept. 12, only hours after he was indicted. Prosecutors had sought seven felony perjury counts against Vines.

The district attorney's initially filed the case in state district court, but last month the case was moved to Dallas County Criminal Court.

McCall stepped aside and asked Onion to preside to insure no bias entered the proceedings.

More than 100 candidates have applied for Vines' job, including acting chief Sam Gonzales.

 ing through there all afternoon," said Dan Pickens of the city-county health department.

Because the homeless are difficult to contact, Pickens said, police officers were being called on to help. "We have to tell patrolmen to be on alert for people who may be exhibiting the symptoms," he said.

Sally Muir, an EMS spokeswoman, said 28 people had been taken to local hospitals by 6 p.m.

Since some 300 reportedly ate the lunch, more could become ill, she said. But Ms. Muir said she did not believe that everyone who had eaten at the soup kitchen would become sick.

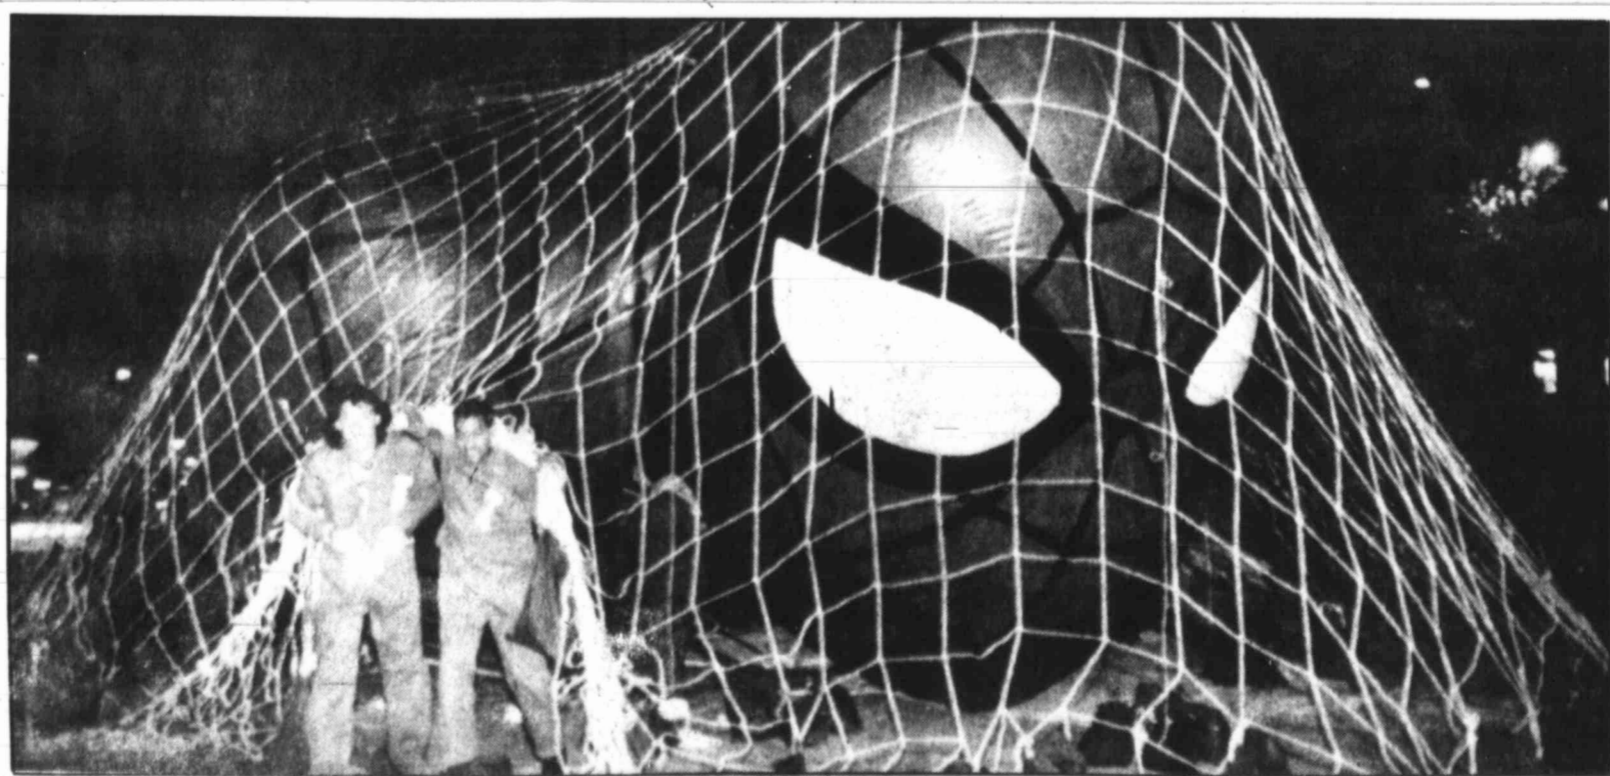

"The potential is there, but I doubt there are going to be that many," she said.

Ron Kingsbury of the Salvation Army said two ambulance crews had been working at his facility. People also were taken to Brackenridge, Seton Medical Center and St. David's hospitals.

At St. David's, officials said the emergency room was packed. "They are overloaded," said spokeswoman Kelly Erickson.

Ms. Noffke said the food was not prepared at the soup kitchen, but donated by a local church. She said she did not know which church had donated the food.

Health officials were at the soup kitchen but said they were unable to retrieve any samples of the meal.
