Autopsy ordered in woman's death

Officials are waiting for the preliminary results of an autopsy to be performed on the body of Eldora "Lee" Master Knowlton, 49, found dead late Saturday at her home in the 1000 block of Wood Street. Justice of the Peace Willie Grant said an autopsy ordered in connection with the incident will attempt to determine more details about the woman's death. Knowlton was found with a single gunshot wound to the chest after police were called to the home to investigate a welfare concern. Police have classified the incident as an "unattended death." According to a press release issued today, they are investigating it as a self-inflicted wound. Grant said she expects autopsy results today. Funeral arrangements are pending at Myers & Smith Funeral Home.

Printer offering patriotic poster

PERU, Ill. (AP) — A printer is adding staff to handle the overflow of requests for a patriotic poster he's giving to anyone who supports the U.S.-led military action in the Persian Gulf. Norb Ludek began giving away the red, white and blue posters after watching war protesters on television burning flags and criticizing the war. So, he designed a simple poster declaring his feelings: "We Support Our Men and Women in Operation Desert Storm." The slogan is accompanied by a flag. As of Friday, Ludek had given out more than 102,000 posters and was getting requests from 1,000 more people each day, said his assistant, Nina Miller. Duken honors requests for fewer than 100 for free, although he is taking donations. He is charging for large orders: $15 for 100 posters and $150 for 1,000.

Bombers target oil spill source

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — From far-flung desert bases, allied bombers took wing today on the 12th day of their stinging air offensive. But the success of one crucial mission — to staunch the world's worst oil spill — remained to be seen. International experts arrived in the region today to work on cleaning up the slick in the Persian Gulf, which U.S. officials said was begun by Iraqi occupation forces in Kuwait. A Norwegian ship equipped with cleanup equipment was off the coast of Bahrain, and a British consortium was flying in more than 70 tons of equipment including booms and suction skimmers. Coast Guard and Environmental Protection Agency experts met with Saudi officials to put together a cleanup plan. During the weekend, U.S. F-111 fighter bombers blew up the pipeline valves pinpointed as the source of the giant slick, estimated at 300 million gallons. U.S. officials expressed confidence the attack significantly reduced the flow of crude to a 35-by-10-mile slick that could threaten desalination plants on which Saudis — and allied forces — rely for fresh water. Allied officials, meanwhile, cast a wary eye toward officially neutral Iran, where increasing numbers of Iraqi aircraft have been seeking refuge. Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of U.S. forces in the gulf, said Sunday that 39 Iraqi aircraft have flown to Iran since the war began — 23 of them in the previous 24 hours. Iran has said it would confiscate the planes for the duration of the war, but U.S. officials said they had to consider the possibility the move was a ploy to shield Iraq's air force, still largely unscathed by allied bombing. "We would be absolutely not worth our salt as military people if we ignored the fact that those planes could fly back out of Iran after us," Schwarzkopf said Sunday. Military forces — along with millions of citizens of Saudi Arabia

Scud missile launchers have been a principal target of the coalition bombers, but The Washington Post, citing well-placed but unidentified officials, said today only eight of 30 fixed Scud missile launchers had been hit as of Friday — and there was no photographic proof of any mobile Scud launchers being destroyed. The Post also reported 65 percent of Iraq's airfields are operational, along with 8,000 to 9,000 pieces of high-grade, anti-aircraft artillery. The allies took advantage of clear skies to press relentless air strikes. French Mirage and Jaguar warplanes pounded Iraq's elite Republican Guard troops in Iraqi territory near the border with Kuwait, and Italian Tornado fighter-bombers took part in an allied mission. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney says although air attacks against Iraq have scored some successes, they alone will not drive Iraq from Kuwait. Assistance asked for proposed center

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

An estimated 85 percent of those using government social services, on parole or probation in the county, have a problem with alcohol or drug abuse, a state health official told county commissioners this morning. Howard County Commissioners are being asked to provide an office and equipment for an alcohol and drug abuse counseling center, which would be funded by an $80,400 one-year grant from the Texas Commission of Alcohol and Drug Abuse. Commissioners questioned the county welfare-indigent health care director, who was waiting to address the Court on another issue, she confirmed many of the people being handled by her office have alcohol-related problems. "We do have quite a few bills for cirrhosis," said Irene Dominguez. "We treat them and they're back on the street." abuse problem, she said. "It's all substance abuse related. I feel like we need to make an effort on that problem so we can cut down on these people seeking these other services," she said. "I think our most alarming figures are through the criminal justice department." Drug counseling services are limited and there is a need for alcohol abuse counseling and prevention in addition to the treatment and support group services provided by the local chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous, she said. Summit postponement possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet official acknowledged today "things at times are getting out of hand" in the Baltics. President Bush was meeting the new Soviet foreign minister as U.S. officials hinted next month's arms summit in Moscow may be postponed. Vitaly Churkin, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, said "it is the desire of the central government, the president, to work out the situation (in the Baltics) politically." He added "at times it is very difficult to do that because the authorities in Lithuania seem to disregard the Constitution and keep saying, 'we are not part of the Soviet Union.'" Churkin said "things at times are getting out of hand there." Before seeing Bush today, Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh held a second round of talks with Secretary of State James A. Baker III on strategic arms issues. As he entered the State Department building, surrounded by a dozen U.S. security agents, Bessmertnykh said in response to a reporter's question: "There will be a summit. As for the timing, we'll discuss it."

In one sign of improved U.S.-Soviet relations, a daily 15-minute vigil at the Soviet Embassy has been suspended after 20 years because the Soviets have relaxed emigration restrictions, organizers say. "We're here to acknowledge a new era... between Jews and the Soviet Union," Evan Krame, chairman of the Jewish Community Council's Soviet Jewry Task Force, said at the final vigil Sunday, attended by about 110 people. The superpowers' delicate relationship has been complicated not only by the Kremlin's crackdown on the independence-minded Baltic republics, but also by differences over the strategy the United States is employing in the allied war to drive Iraq out of Kuwait. A White House spokesman, Stephen T. Hart, said Sunday, "The summit is still up in the air." Bush, returning from Camp David, Md., refused to say whether he had decided to postpone the Feb. 11-13 Moscow meeting with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Senior U.S. officials have hinted they favored a postponement, even before the Baltic crackdown brought pressure from Congress for the president not to conduct business as usual with the Soviets.

"We are all in the same alliance and there is no difference in the basic approach between the United States and the Soviet Union." Alexander A. Bessmertnykh Soviet Foreign Minister

Administration officials have cited the war in the Persian Gulf and lingering difficulties in completing the arms control pact as reasons pointing toward a delay. Bessmertnykh, until two weeks ago the Soviet ambassador to Washington, on Saturday bluntly criticized the U.S.-led aerial bombardment of Iraq. "There may be a danger of the conflict going more in the direction of the destruction of Iraq and... more casualties on both sides," he said after his first meeting with Baker. Bush added, "We are all in the same alliance and there is no difference in the basic approach between the United States and the Soviet Union." Bush relied on Gorbachev for crucial support in the United Nations behind a dozen resolutions condemning Iraq, including the pivotal one that authorized force to drive Saddam Hussein's army from Kuwait. But the Soviets have never committed any of their military forces to the anti-Iraq coalition. And some critics have suggested Bush was reluctant to react too strongly to the Baltic crackdown for fear of losing Soviet support against Iraq. Bush is still weighing whether to impose economic sanctions against the Soviets over strong-arm tactics against the breakaway republics. ● SUMMIT page 8-A

Appreciation dinner to honor volunteers

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer
The Salvation Army will sponsor its annual appreciation dinner Thursday noon at Garrett Hall in the First United Methodist Church. Lt. W.D. Owens, commanding officer of the Army, said the dinner's purpose is "to show our appreciation to those who have helped us during the Christmas season." The event will include a fund raiser for the Army's "doll dressing" project. The dolls were judged in several categories, including formal, bridal, party costume, dressy and play. The first, second and third-place winners, of about 200 dolls dressed by volunteer groups and individuals, will be sold at an auction during the dinner. "The dolls will be sold to the highest bidder," Owens said. "Sometimes those people will then give them back to us. The idea is to raise money to fund next year's (doll dressing project)." Other dolls dressed as part of the project were given to needy children in the area at Christmas. The agency hopes to raise as much money as possible through the auction, Owens said. "We don't put a goal on it," he said. "I guess you could say we'll take whatever amount we get." But the more money we raise, the more dolls we can buy next year." Owens said all those who participated in the dressing project were invited to attend the dinner and would be recognized for their efforts. Area schools will also be honored for their efforts collecting canned food for the needy, Owens said. The Army sponsored a canned food drive through the schools last fall. The Army will also install new advisory board and executive committee members at the meeting. Three new members will be added to the executive committee and six have been chosen for the advisory board. Tickets are $5.50 each, and will be available at the door of the event. Owens said the Christmas season is "without a shadow of a doubt" the agency's busiest and most important time of the year. Unfortunately, funds raised this year fell about $9,000 short of the goal, and Owens said future programs may be in jeopardy. Upcoming Army events include National Salvation Army Week, to be celebrated in May, for which plans have not been finalized.

Flight returns with fuel leak

GRAPEVINE (AP) — An American Airlines 727 jet bound for Atlanta was forced to return to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport after it apparently developed a fuel leak, officials said.

The pilot became aware of the problem shortly after takeoff Sunday, said American spokesman John Hotard.

"The pilot saw a fuel leak indicator light go on and just notified the tower he was coming back," he said.

The 132 passengers and crew of eight deplaned on a taxiway and were bused to the terminal, where they boarded another airplane and resumed their flight, Hotard said.

No injuries were reported. The incident occurred shortly after 1 p.m., and forced the temporary closure of one runway, Hotard said.

Officials defend security system

DALLAS (AP) — Executives of a national fast-food chain say security is sophisticated and effective, despite five deaths at its Dallas-area restaurants in the past month.

Three men and a pregnant 16-year-old girl were found shot to death in a Taco Bell restaurant in Irving early Saturday after police discovered a take-out sack stuffed with money in a car they stopped several blocks away.

A 19-year-old and 17-year-old, who was an employee at the restaurant, were expected to be charged in the murder today. They remained jailed Sunday.

Jerry Koch of Dallas, president of Taco Bell operations for the southwest zone, said that the company's security system is effective.

Residents picket for fired priest

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Parishioners protesting the firing of a Roman Catholic priest say they hope the bishop who dismissed the minister will explain his decision to them.

An estimated 75 Holy Family Church members picketed in front of Bishop Rene H. Gracida's home Saturday and Sunday, protesting last week's firing of the Rev. Bill Elliott.

The protesters lined both sides of Gracida's street and chanted, "We want Father Bill." Some carried signs reading, "Bishop please don't hurt our community" and "Outspoken but honest."

Diocesan officials have declined to comment publicly on the dismissal.

Astronauts see mission as best way to help

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The astronauts awaiting NASA's first wartime shuttle flight take satisfaction that their mission could eventually lead to better air defense missiles, like the Patriots being used to counter Iraq.

Yet they say part of them years to be serving in the Persian Gulf rather than 161 miles above it.

"You want to do something to help," explained Michael Coats, commander of Discovery's mission, set for late February or early March. "I look at it saying, 'Boy, I wish I could teach the pilots over there some of the things I saw in combat.'"

Coats, 45, a Navy captain, flew 315 combat missions in Southeast Asia during the early 1970s. Two of the six other astronauts also saw combat in Vietnam.

"If I were still a full-time military officer, I would certainly "Am I doing something for defense and the future of our country? Yeah, I'm doing that here. Are the risks I'm taking here compared to the risks that my brother is taking in Saudi Arabia? Who knows?"

Astronaut Donald McMonagle

want to be in the forefront of the action," Charles Lacy Veach, 46, a former fighter pilot, said during crew interviews last week. "But I'm an astronaut now, and this is where I'm contributing to the national effort."

During Discovery's eight-day flight, the astronauts said they will collect data the Defense Department can use to build better Patriots and other air defenses to intercept missiles. Unlike the seven previous shuttle flights devoted to Defense Department work, this one is not completely classified although some of the information gathered will be kept secret.

The crew will operate two major military payloads, one of which will be released temporarily into orbit to study the shuttle's engine plumes. Scientists say study of the plumes should help the military better identify the plumes of missiles that might be fired during future wars.

The experiments were planned before the outbreak of the Gulf war, but the astronauts are pleased with the timing.

"My support of the military is this mission in terms of its ability to help possibly provide data that will maybe protect us in future wars," said L. Blaine Hammond Jr., 39, an Air Force lieutenant colonel.

"If it weren't for those Patriots, there would be a lot of dead and injured folks in the Middle East," agreed Gregory Harbaugh, 34, one of two crew members without a military background. "Really, the research that we are doing is an extension of that sort of thinking."

Air Force Lt. Col. Donald McMonagle believes just as strongly he is serving his country in the best possible way by flying in space. Still, guilt nags at him — his older brother, an Alabama National Guardsman, is in Saudi Arabia.

"Am I doing something for defense and the future of our country? Yeah, I'm doing that here," said McMonagle, 38. "Are the risks I'm taking here compared to the risks that my brother is taking in Saudi Arabia? Who knows?"

To reduce the risk of war-related terrorist attacks, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has increased security at its launch site at Kennedy Space Center and its astronaut headquarters at Johnson Space Center in Houston.

Guards at center entrances scrutinize passes more carefully. Access to sensitive areas such as Mission Control is more limited than before war erupted 1½ weeks ago.

Board to miss deadline

AUSTIN (AP) — A temporary education commissioner could be named since the State Board of Education will not meet Thursday's deadline for nominating someone to the post, officials said.

Current Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby is retiring after six years, and has firmly indicated his last day will be Thursday, said board spokesman Joey Lozano.

An interim commissioner could be chosen to oversee the state's 10.5 million public school system until a permanent replacement is appointed, said Lozano and board Vice Chairman Bob Aikin of Commerce.

"As a practical matter, nobody was ever going to be on board before about the first of June or the first of July anyway," Aikin said, because the appointee likely would have a current contract elsewhere.

The board will nominate a candidate for the $116,590-a-year job to Gov. Ann Richards, who will make the appointment under the education law passed last summer. Senate confirmation is required.

Under the law, which took the power to appoint the commissioner from the education board, the nomination deadline is Thursday. But board Chairwoman Carolyn Crawford of Beaumont said there are no sanctions for missing it.

The board plans to meet next weekend, and talk to finalists another time, Aikin said.

After a closed-door board meeting Sunday, Aikin blamed the delay in choosing Kirby's successor partly on "turmoil" resulting from the Texas Supreme Court's recent ruling that the school finance system is unconstitutional.

State leaders back a plan to replace local school property taxes with a statewide property levy, to meet the court's order that property-poor school districts must have access to equitable funding. But the plan has its critics in the Legislature and among schools.

"You cannot expect the very best candidate ... to say, 'I'm willing to walk right into that shooting gallery right now, without knowing exactly what's going to happen with school finance,'" Aikin said.

Ms. Crawford said it could have been expected that the search for a new commissioner would take some time.

"Most searches of this magnitude take six months to eight months," Ms. Crawford said. The board announced finalists for the post Jan. 16.

Eight final candidates initially were announced, culled from a list of 147.

Firms would make profit from lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — Companies that help run lotteries have hired lobbyists, including a former lieutenant governor and a former House speaker, to improve the game's chances of winning Texas approval, a newspaper reported.

If a lottery is approved by Texas lawmakers and voters, the state would choose a company to provide computers, tickets and other services. The contract would be worth millions.

Scientific Games, which has pushed creation of a lottery in various states, the Austin American-Statesman reported Sunday. The company is an Atlanta-based subsidiary of Bally Inc.

"Scientific Games contributed heavily to a successful Arizona initiative in 1980, an investment which paid off when the company won a bid to manufacture Arizona's tickets," said a report by the California Senate's Office of Research.

"Scientific Games also lent financial support to ballot campaigns in Colorado and Washington, D.C.," it said.

In Texas, Scientific Games has turned to former House Speaker Billy Clayton, a lobbyist with a number of clients.

Rhode Island-based GTECH has hired former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes. Assisting him are Glenn Smith and Monte Williams, who worked in Gov. Ann Richards' election campaign and then as publicists for House Speaker Gib Lewis; and Ricky Knox, who pushed to legalize pari-mutuel gambling in Texas.

"Right now, we're all working together to try to pass a lottery,"

Knox said. "Once it's legal, then we (GTECH and other companies) will be competitors."

More than one company might be hired by a state when it adopts a lottery.

In 1988, Michigan hired one company to manufacture tickets, another to provide computers, an ad agency to conduct a marketing campaign and an accounting firm to keep the books.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, who is sponsoring a lottery proposal, said the game would generate $80 million a year in ad revenue.

Retailers also get part of the action. On the average, convenience stores that sell lottery tickets get 5.5 cents for each dollar spent, the American-Statesman reported.

"Anytime the state creates an industry or abolishes an industry, people make money and lose money," said Wilson, D-Houston. "It happens every day."

The state could collect more than $700 million a year in lottery revenues.

But the anti-lottery forces are working, too. They have hired former state Rep. David Hudson, a Democrat from Tyler who in the House led "a successful" effort against the lottery until losing his re-election bid in November.

Hudson now works for the Christian Life Commission, a Baptist group that opposes gambling. He says the lottery is a sure thing for gaming companies, but not for everyone else.

"Nobody with a brain would invest in a lottery ticket," Hudson said. "Anybody with a brain would buy stock in GTECH or Bally because that's where all the money is."

Chimayo residents mourn, ponder slayings

CHIMAYO, N.M. (AP) — Friends and relatives mourned the deaths of two well-known, well-liked lawmen and pondered the events that led to the slayings of the officers and five others.

Nearly everyone in this close-knit, rural community seems to have known both Rio Arriba County sheriff's Deputy Jerry Martinez and state police Officer Glen Huber.

"I feel bad because Huber was a friend of mine. So was Jerry," Orlando Martinez, who owns a gas station and mercantile on the main drag through town, said Sunday.

Huber and Martinez were fatally shot Saturday in front of a blue modular home along a dirt road that courses beneath the juniper-studded sandstone cliffs at the edge of the Santa Cruz River valley.

Chimayo, a town made famous by a mystical hole of healing sand and its museum-quality wool weavings, was alive with talk about the killings Sunday.

The lawmen apparently were caught off guard and shot as they attempted to serve a restraining order, police said.

Lt. Herbie Ball of the New Mexico Mounted Patrol described Huber as a "very cautious individual."

"It was hard to believe somebody could have caught him like that," Ball said.

The prime suspect in the police slayings, Ricky Abeyta, 29, surrendered to state police Sunday night. Abeyta, a native of the area, also is a suspect in at least some of the other five killings. All the victims were fatally shot and were found in or near Abeyta's blue home.

The victims were identified as Abeyta's live-in girlfriend, Ignacia Sandoval, 36, of Penasco; her daughter, Mary Ellen F. Sandoval, 19, also of Penasco; Mary Ellen's 6-month-old son, Justin Gonzales; Justin's father, Macario Gonzales, 19, of Alcalde, also Mary Ellen's boyfriend; and Cheryl Rendon, 25, of Dixon, who was Ignacita's sister.

Ignacia Sandoval's son, Eloy Sandoval, 13, was wounded and was in serious but stable condition Sunday at University Hospital in Albuquerque, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Chimayo, a town made famous by a mystical hole of healing sand and its museum-quality wool weavings, was alive with talk about the killings Sunday. Locals were eager to talk about the officers.

"Officer Huber was a real nice man," said Nancy Martinez, no kin to the slain deputy, who stopped in at Martinez's store to buy one of the remaining morning newspapers.

A hundred copies of one newspaper with news of the slayings sold out in 45 minutes.

Teens face murder charges in restaurant deaths

IRVING (AP) — Two teen-agers face capital murder charges in the slayings of four people who were gunned down execution-style in a fast-food restaurant freezer during a robbery.

Formal charges were expected to be filed today.

The bodies were discovered in the walk-in freezer after police officers stopped the driver of a pickup truck on suspicion of drunken driving and spotted a take-out Taco Bell bag stuffed with cash early Saturday morning.

Arrested were a 17-year-old boy who worked at the restaurant part-time in this Dallas suburb, and a 19-year-old man who was the driver of the truck. Both remained jailed Sunday.

Theresa Fraga, 16, of Irving, her cousin Frank Fraga, 23, of Dallas, restaurant manager Michael J. Phelan, 28, of Fort Worth and Fraga family friend Son Trong Nguyen, 35, of Irving, were found fatally shot at the Taco Bell restaurant.

number of people killed during late night shifts at restaurants or food stores in Dallas County since Dec. 4.

Mike Green, 17, and Jessy Carlos San Miguel, 19, who is facing trial on three burglary charges, were taken into custody Saturday. Both are from Irving.

Theresa Fraga and Frank Fraga didn't worry about the dangers of working nights, their uncle said.

"To them, it was irrelevant. They just wanted to work and support their families," Raymond Fraga Jr. said.

Police haven't said how much money was stolen in the robbery. "It wasn't a whole lot of money," said Irving police Capt. T.J. Hall. "It certainly wasn't worth killing four people over."

Nguyen was at the restaurant to pick up Ms. Fraga, who was several months pregnant and had a year-old son.

Security personnel from the fast-food chain's home office in Irvine, Calif., flew to Irving to assist police in the investigation and determine what, if any, security measures are necessary, said Jerry Koch, Taco Bell's zone vice president for the Southwest.

Raymond Fraga criticized the restaurant's security. People, he said, "keep talking about getting security up for terrorists. Well, they got more terrorists killing kids here."

Koch would not discuss specifics of security at the restaurant.

On Jan. 7, Jennifer Soto, 19, was shot and stabbed to death at a Taco Bell in suburban DeSoto. She was night manager of the restaurant. A former employee was one of two men charged with murder in connection with the slaying.

Depositors to get partial payments

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Depositors at seven closed banks and credit unions will get partial payments from their accounts this week, a month after they were shut down because their private deposit insurer failed.

Gov. Bruce G. Sundlun announced the plan Sunday night after about 300 angry depositors marched on the Statehouse demanding all their money immediately.

"People are suffering. These people in these ivory towers are sitting here looking out and saying, 'Too bad,'" said a resident of Blackstone, Mass., who gave her name only as Janice.

"I'm livid. I'm upset. I'm angry," she said.

The governor would not identify the institutions that had agreed to release up to $12,500 for each depositor. He said he would do so later, probably today.

Sundlun's order will give depositors up to $10,000 from checking accounts and half their savings accounts or $2,500, whichever is smaller. About $35 million will be distributed by mail to holders of 175,000 accounts, his aides said.

Sundlun closed 45 banks and credit unions in the state on New Year's Day after their private insurer failed, freezing $1.3 billion in deposits.

Bush will use message to reassure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will use his State of the Union message Tuesday night to try to reassure Americans living under the twin shadows of war and a deteriorating economy of a brighter future.

Bush will announce "nothing major" or costly in the way of domestic proposals, given the clampdown on spending for virtually everything except the war effort, according to his press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater.

In that vein, Bush intends to spend about half the speech talking about the war, with a positive spin on prospects for its conclusion, officials say.

"When everyone is thinking about the war, you can't talk about the domestic agenda and expect anyone to listen," said Stephen Hess, a scholar at the Brookings Institution who specializes in the presidency.

Nonetheless, Bush will devote considerable time to talking in general terms about domestic issues that critics claim he has neglected.

Sources familiar with the speech preparations said there will be no "laundry list" of initiatives. Instead, Bush will keep to a thematic approach.

Man is tried for death of daughter

HIACLEAH, Fla. (AP) — When Ramiro de Jesus Rodriguez came to this country from Nicaragua two years ago, he wanted a better life for his wife and young daughter.

But today Rodriguez faced trial on a vehicular manslaughter charge in his 3-year-old daughter's death because the child wasn't in a seat restraint.

It's one of several recent cases around the country in which parents have been held legally responsible for the safety of children in their cars.

Veronica Rodriguez died of head injuries after she flew out of her mother's arms and hit the dashboard of the family car last August, Rodriguez was driving.

Florida requires small children to ride in car seat restraints. Police at the scene said Veronica probably would have survived had she been buckled in.

"It was an accident," the 30-year-old cook said.

Somalian president is driven from his palace

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The whereabouts of longtime Somali President Mohamed Siad Barre, driven from office over the weekend as rebels closed in on his palace, remained unknown today.

A rebel statement said it is forming a new leadership to take over rule of the Horn of Africa nation, under guerrilla siege since Dec. 30. An estimated 50 people have been slain daily as rebels moved against troops loyal to Siad Barre, ruler of Somalia since 1969 and accused of rights abuses and corruption.

For the first night since the rebels began their offensive against Siad Barre, a spokesman of the humanitarian medical team Doctors Without Borders said his colleagues in Mogadishu reported no fighting overnight in that capital of 600,000 residents.

But a pilot transporting foreign news representatives to Mogadishu from Nairobi said he had heard from another pilot flying into the Somali capital reports this morning of new shooting.

The pilot "only said another pilot in the vicinity reported heavy shooting," said a spokeswoman of A.D. Aviation. "They still don't know if they will be able to land."

It was impossible to ascertain due to widespread communications difficulties whether fighting had resumed or the shooting was part of celebrations that began on Siad Barre's departure late Saturday.

The rebel army that ousted Siad Barre on Sunday appealed for foreign medical aid and calm.

A rebel statement late Sunday in London said the insurgents were "calling on the dictator and his few remaining supporters to surrender immediately as they have no choice of continued resistance."

Spokesman Stevan Van Praet said two members of his Doctors Without Borders team witnessed Siad Barre's departure by tank late Saturday with a small group of military men, but it was not known to where.

Mohamed Robleh, the London-based spokesman of the United Somali Congress, said Siad Barre was last spotted going south toward Merca or Kismayu, two small port towns.

Robleh said today that he had no update of events in Mogadishu.

Walesa moves to strengthen office

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — President Lech Walesa has moved quickly during the first month in office to concentrate his authority and create a new advisory body that critics fear he will use to wrest power from parliament.

Walesa became Poland's first popularly elected chief of state on Dec. 22. During the election campaign, critics charged that Walesa, the longtime Solidarity union leader who led the anti-Communist campaign in Poland, would eventually become a demagogue himself.

His political opponents are already saying he is trying to strengthen his office too much.

They say Walesa really wants to use the proposed advisory body, called a "political council," as a parliamentary substitute more subject to presidential manipulation.

The council would be made up of representatives from Poland's political parties.

The president's office started accepting applications for the council last week.

"The formation of a presidential council, which would at least partially replace the parliament and the government, is contrary to the democratic order of a law-abiding state," said the Citizens Movement for Democratic Action.

North warns against maneuvers

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea said today that planned U.S.-South Korean military exercises threaten reunification talks and might touch off a war.

North Korea demanded the immediate cancellation of the "Team Spirit '91" exercises, which were to begin this week. It called them an open challenge, according to an official government statement.

A "reckless provocation" during the exercises might "start a war of aggression on the northern half of Korea," said the statement.

South Korea's state of heightened military alert since the Persian Gulf war makes the planned military exercises more "grave and dangerous," the statement said.

Seoul has said its heightened alert was prompted by fears that the Communist North would attack while the world was preoccupied with the Middle East.

"Under the present grave situation, we cannot but reexamine whether the present South Korean authorities can be our dialogue partner on peace in the country and its peaceful reunification," the statement said.

Rioting in Haiti leaves ten dead

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Rioters took to the streets in anger over rumors of a plot to free the jailed leader of a coup attempt earlier this month. The violence left 10 people dead and 14 wounded, radio reports said.

The dead Sunday included four reputed agents of the ousted Duvalier family dictatorship lynched by a mob and six protesters shot by soldiers, the independent radio reports said.

Government and military officials denied there had been an attempt to free coup leader Roger Lafontant. They said he and his 15 alleged conspirators remained under heavy guard at the National Penitentiary.

Radio reports said the disturbances began before daybreak as rioters erected barricades of flaming tires and debris in many sections of Port-au-Prince, capital of this impoverished Caribbean nation of 6 million.

Harvard trains superintendents for urban schools

BOSTON (AP) — The job presents challenges that would tax the most experienced Fortune 500 CEO, and it pays in six figures.

But with classrooms besieged by everything from gang warfare to demands for higher standards, big-city school systems are begging for qualified superintendents.

To create a pool of candidates, the Harvard University Graduate School of Education has started the nation's first doctoral program for training urban superintendents.

"Ten years ago when we did searches, we'd get 80 applicants per job. Now we get 25 to 30," said Sam Husk, executive director of the Council of Great City Schools, a consortium of 47 districts.

Officials hope the program will help school boards increasingly looking for highly qualified minority candidates, said education headhunter Ira Krinsky.

Ten students at Harvard — the majority female and ethnic minorities — are getting an intensive program of educational theory and hands-on crisis management.

"We believe for them to be really good superintendents, they need

"You have to be an expert communicator. You have to be an experienced negotiator. You've got to be a person experienced in curriculum. You have to be an expert in multicultural education and you have to be an expert politician as well as one of the world's best wizards in the budget."

Sam Husk
Director of the Council of Great City Schools

the research and theory, mixed with hard-nosed practical components," said Dudley Blodget, a spokesman for the education school.

After 13 months at Harvard, students will complete a six- to nine-month internship in an urban school system and write a thesis before hitting the job market. Most of them already have education administrative experience, some as school principals.

"What's unusual about the program is the residency is much shorter than any other doctoral program in the school of education, because we compressed their time

Said Husk: "You have to be an expert communicator. You have to be an experienced negotiator. You've got to be a person experienced in curriculum. You have to be an expert in multicultural education and you have to be an expert politician as well as one of the world's best wizards in the budget."

And "then you've got the drug problem that is not only impacting students, but impacting our parents," said Floretta McKenzie, a former superintendent of Washington, D.C.

"Some people think it's impossible," said John Williams, interim director of the Harvard program.

Williams, however, is not one of them. His students study social welfare, health, legislative and legal issues as part of developing a public school policy.

Despite demands for school chiefs, Husk thinks the program graduates will not be immediately snapped up by school boards.

"They still have to earn their marks somewhere in an urban system," he said.

Drive safely. Don't wreck your life.

War views from around the world

A great tragedy has started. War did break out, in spite of the largest diplomatic offensive ever waged in history. Saddam Hussein has not been willing to withdraw from Kuwait.

The question is if war could have been avoided. The answer is no. President Bush did no longer have a choice. He had to act now to make it clear that a country cannot ignore the international legal order and go unpunished.

There are still people who are of the opinion that only the oil interests of the West are an issue here. Those interests are indisputable.

Naturally it is particularly about the international legal order. It would collapse if the principle of one country attacking and annexing another were allowed to be a valid one.

Whatever the outcome will be, it is a fact that this war will leave deep traces behind. When this nightmare is over it can be feared that the gap between the Middle East and the West will be bigger than ever.

Algemeen Dagblad, Rotterdam, Netherlands

This first battle now is delighting an America anxious to prove its overwhelming superiority as a military superpower, especially since the Pentagon is confronting, through the Iraqis, an army conceived on the Soviet model.

One year after the destruction of the Berlin Wall and the end of the Cold War, the United States is showing how it would have confronted the (Soviet) Red Army.

This victory... thus represents the pinnacle of the Cold War: the cruise missiles which ravaged Iraq's aviation and defense system are the same ones which yesterday were aimed at Central Europe.

From the frenzy of military technology to CNN's live coverage from Baghdad, a new vision of the world emerges hammering down the proof its superiority: America will have to liberate Kuwait quickly. Saddam Hussein is not the only one taking a risk — the United States is too.

Liberation, Paris

It's great to learn that out of that $1.6 trillion spent on U.S. defense during the eight years of the Reagan administration, the nation actually got some weapons systems that work spectacularly.

Video images of pinpoint precision bomb strikes against Iraqi targets give convincing evidence that many work exactly as designed — notwithstanding criticism of systems and component purchases over the years.

Air Force commanders report a highly satisfactory 80 percent success rate in the thousands of combat sorties that have been flown thus far. Patriot missiles have blown all but a handful of the enemy's Scud missiles out of the sky.

The remarkable success of weapons systems combat-tested over Iraq could save lives and shorten the war — and perhaps supply some valuable data to help guide further development and procurement. With appropriate civilian oversight and restraint in spending for research and development, the United States can maintain its newly reaffirmed technological superiority in weapons systems.

Albuquerque (N.M.) Journal

Saddam Hussein has shown that he intends to observe the Third Geneva Convention, which deals with the treatment of prisoners of war, with the same respect he has given to other international agreements: He will ignore it.

This is a regime that flouts its contempt for humane values by murdering its own citizens and those of Kuwait in the thousands. This is a regime that has reintroduced poison gas as a battlefield weapon against its own helpless civilians. This is a regime that uses its terror missiles against another civilian population in a desperate effort to transform Israel from a noncombatant into a belligerent.

The treatment of American and other captured airmen from the anti-Iraq coalition is unsurprising, but it nonetheless remains shocking. Iraqi television has shown the world men who are under obvious duress, being forced to mouth the stilted phrases scripted for them by their captors.

(At least two of the three Americans who were brought before the cameras had been beaten severely about the face. These overt indications of abuse could not have been anything but intentional. Iraq wants the world to know that it is proud of its cruelty.

Will anyone believe these extorted statements coming out of Baghdad? The level of political credulity in much of the Arab world is high, and those ready — or more accurately, eager — to believe that Iraq's Scuds have set Israel aflame or that its air defenses have shot down hundreds of attackers are probably ready to believe anything they hear from Baghdad. Most of the rest of the world will probably dismiss this frightful nonsense for what it is.

Will international protests do any good? Iraq must go on living in the world after this war is over. Saddam Hussein may view the future only in terms of personal martyrdom. But there may be others in Iraq of somewhat wider vision, who will appreciate the value of treating POWs decently.

Saudi Arabia will have physical custody of Iraqi war prisoners. It should act quickly to invite international human rights groups to oversee its (Geneva Convention) compliance.

Los Angeles Times

A big to-do about very little

WASHINGTON — A visiting mama saw the two books and had a hissy. The school principal went into conniptions. The district school board fled to the mountains. Then the American Civil Liberties Union and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith got into the act. The Concerned Women for America leaped to the defense of an overwhelmed teacher. After a while everyone wound up in federal court, and the story is worth your attention.

James J. Kilpatrick

It began at Berkeley Gardens Elementary School in Denver on a parents' night in September 1987. By ill luck, a parent wandered into the classroom of fifth-grade teacher Kenneth Roberts. There her eye fell upon a small bookcase containing 239 books. Most of the books were at the level of "The Care and Feeding of Gerbils," but aha!

What did her inquisitive eye behold but "The Bible in Pictures" and "The Life of Jesus." The visitor was aghast. She ran to the office of Principal Kathleen Madigan to report the horrid sight. Ms. Madigan at once "entered Mr. Roberts' classroom, perused the two books, and directed Mr. Roberts to remove them from the classroom library."

While she was there, Ms. Madigan noticed a Bible that Roberts kept on his desk. The dreadful sight quite unnerved her. She ordered him to keep this suspicious object out of sight during school hours. She also discovered that from time to time, during silent reading periods, Roberts had been reading to himself from the Bible. This had to stop forthwith!

Not content, Ms. Madigan visited the school library "and removed a Bible from the library shelves." Having thus wiped out the last hint, trace or vestige of potential Christian influence from the school, Ms. Madigan threatened Roberts with disciplinary action for insubordination if he got out of line again.

Naturally, everyone wound up in U.S. District Court. There was some confusion. Suit against Ms. Madigan and the school district had been filed in the name of three youngsters — Kelly White, Kelly Nelson and Amy Nelson. On examination, it transpired that Kelly, Kelly and Amy never had been students of Kenneth Roberts. They had no access to the forbidden books. Their little psyches had suffered no demonstrable damage whatever. Judge Sherman G. Finesilver threw them out of court for want of standing.

That left Roberts' own suit against the school officials. He pleaded that his First Amendment right to the free exercise of religion had been violated. He also claimed violation of his right of free speech. The defendants countered by arguing that Roberts' actions, taken all in all, amounted to conduct respecting an "establishment of religion" in violation of the Constitution.

The trial judge also threw Roberts out of court, or mostly out of court. In January of 1990 Judge Finesilver summarily ordered the Bible restored to the school library, but otherwise the defendants prevailed.

The case went up to the 10th Circuit. On Dec. 17, the appellate court voted 2-1 to affirm. Judge Monroe G. McKay, writing for the majority, took 28 pages to conclude that the school officials had acted properly "for the valid purpose of preventing Roberts from promoting Christianity in a public school."

Promoting? There was not one word of evidence that Roberts ever had opened his mouth about the Christian religion. He had never proselytized anyone. So far as the record discloses, no child ever even looked at the potentially dangerous books. The books just sat there on the shelf, doggo, on the outside possibility that someday some 11-year-old might want to learn a little bit about one of the great towering figures in world history and one of the greatest works of literature ever put to press.

The majority's decision was preposterous. Senior Circuit Judge James E. Barrett vigorously dissented. He denounced Madigan's insistence "on the obliteration of all Christian books from the school premises." Her extreme stance amounted to disparagement and hostility toward the Christian religion. Nothing in First Amendment jurisprudence supports her "unwarranted" actions. Roberts' conduct was passive. The activities were "de minimis."

Well, I hope the Concerned Women for America will finance Roberts' appeal to the Supreme Court, and I hope further that the high court agrees to hear the case. If the facts in this trivial case support an "establishment of religion," words have lost their meaning. But, then, what else is new?

"I SEE A THOUSAND POINTS OF LIGHT." — GEORGE BUSH

Feminist movement adds more problems

By BETTY JOHANSEN
Copy Editor

I'm weary of the feminist movement. My first thought was to say I hate feminism, but I have to admit it infuriates me for some guy with the I.Q. of a potato chip to look down on me when the only thing he ever accomplished was to be born with a y-chromosome. And I think the feminists have helped end some of that male condescension.

Having said that, however, here are my grievances with feminism:

Deception. My first angry thoughts about so-called women's liberation formulated during a short-lived marriage in the 1970s. I was working 70-80 hours a week at the time, and my then-husband was working 40. When he was home, he put up his feet and watched TV. When I was home, I cooked, cleaned — or wasn't home, at all, because there were shopping to do and dirty clothes to take to the laundromat.

Soon I was asking myself, Who got liberated? In my opinion it is the men who have been liberated by the women's movement. Some of the weight of bringing home dollars shifted onto the wife. But the responsibilities of the home never shifted anywhere. (I know, the libbers say the men are supposed to do their fair share of domestic duties. I'm convinced. How do you convince them?)

Loss of choice. It is ridiculous that women who would like to stay home with their children are unable because of the outrageous cost of living. Business and government have adjusted themselves to two-income families and show no indication of scaling back the financial burden on consumers/taxpayers.

Hypersensitivity. I'm sick and tired of thinking I'm speaking simple, everyday English, only to discover my choice of words has offended some uptight feminist.

It works the other way too. Men grow hypersensitive in self-defense. One day I walked out of the post office and realized after it was too late that a man on the outside was holding the other double door for me. When I didn't walk through his door, he muttered something under his breath about "Women today..."

The encounter hurt my heart. I think men who hold doors for women these days are gallant, courageous, considerate and delightful. It grieved me that I helped train him not to do it.

Abandonment of children. Feminists have done everything in their power to convince parents children only need quality time. But I've worked in the school system. I've seen the desperate craving for attention that drives some children to do anything to get noticed. And I've seen the terrible emptiness in their faces as they get old enough to realize nobody important in their lives is ever going to notice them.

If you ask me

I'm not saying women shouldn't work. I am saying that, if they're going to combine a career with motherhood, it's only fair if they have enough energy to give a piece of themselves to their families. I've heard that children spell love T-I-M-E. It's true. I know because I used to be a child myself.

(I think it's only fair to acknowledge here that single mothers have no choice except to work, regardless of their energy level. I salute them for their courage.)

Immorality. I'm most outraged with the feminists for promoting promiscuity and the wholesale slaughter of preborn babies.

Until this month, I never read any of the feminists' books for fear of suffering terminal nausea. But in contemplating this column, I decided to read a few. I was not amused to learn from Betty Friedan's "The Feminine Mystique" that she partially blames the Bible for the suppression of women.

Well, let's see. The Bible tells about Ruth who, after her husband's death, moved with her mother-in-law into a foreign land. She supported the two of them and, when she found a man she liked, she proposed to him and married him.

And then there's Queen Esther, who handily outwitted her husband's henchman and saved her people from annihilation.

And Deborah was a judge, which is what Israel called their head of state in those days. God revealed to her that Barak should lead the Israeli army to war against their oppressors. When she told him about her revelation, he said, "I'll go if you'll go with me. But if you won't go, I won't either." So they both went and destroyed the enemy.

If you ask me, all those women possessed the attributes Friedan holds up as being repressed in women before her ilk "liberated" us, namely self-respect, courage and strength.

Ah but, you say, the Bible is full of women who were nothing more than wives and mothers. Yes, that was their choice. I wish more of us today had the same choice.

Dear Marine had vision of peace

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Just a few weeks before his death, Marine Staff Sgt. Michael Conner wrote his sister and wondered what the world would be like if no nation needed a military.

"No borders, just caring people," wrote the father of two from Fremont. "Our world isn't anywhere near that, however. Shame."

Conner was one of three Marines killed over the weekend in an accidental collision in an undisclosed location in northeastern Saudi Arabia, Pentagon officials said Saturday.

The Marines died when two light armored vehicles collided. Seven soldiers were injured, and four of them were evacuated by helicopter, the Pentagon said.

The accident occurred as Marines near the border fired the heaviest artillery barrage of the war with Iraq, shelling Iraqi positions six miles inside occupied Kuwait.

Commanders at the 1st Marine Division headquarters said three batteries of 155mm howitzers destroyed an Iraqi vehicle.

The others killed were identified as Pfc. Michael A. Noline, 20, of Phoenix, and Lance Cpl. Arthur O. Garza, 20, of Kingsville, Texas.

"He was a Marine since he was three years old," said Conner's sister Pat Thomas, of Hayward, Calif.

In a Dec. 13, 1990 letter to Thomas, Conner wrote, "No nation should allow another to do what Iraq did to Kuwait. You should see it. My God, you wouldn't think people could do this in this century."

"I have often wondered how neat the world would be if no nation needed a military. How easy it could be done..." Conner wrote.

Hometown honors prisoner of war

MOULTRIE, Ga. (AP) — Hundreds gathered outside the local courthouse to honor hometown hero Guy Hunter Jr., a U.S. Marine who was shown on Iraqi television as a prisoner of war.

Police estimated the crowd at 300 and organizers said there were 600 people who gathered for a hour-long ceremony when Sunday was declared Guy Hunter Jr. Day.

Hunter, 46, a chief warrant officer, and Lt. Col. Clifford Acree, 39, were flying a Marine OV-10 Bronco when they were shot down in southern Kuwait a week ago.

Hunter's former Moultrie High School classmates, former prisoners of war and members of the local Post 4830 Veterans of Foreign Wars tied yellow ribbons on courthouse columns and on a magnolia tree on the grounds.

Hunter, a 29-year Marine veteran, is officially listed as missing in action. He was stationed at Camp Pendleton, Calif., before he was transferred to Saudi Arabia.

Andrew calls for periodic cease-fires

FLORENCE, Ala. (AP) — Former U.N. ambassador Andrew Young called for periodic cease-fires in the war in the Persian Gulf to let Arab and U.N. leaders plead with Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein to pull his forces out of Kuwait.

By calling 48-hour cease-fires every 10 days, the United States could guard against losing allies in the battle against Iraq, said Young.

"What Saddam Hussein is trying to do is turn the whole Arab world against us," Young said. "We don't want to lose the friendship of the entire Arab world."

Young, also a civil rights activist and former Atlanta mayor, was U.S. ambassador to the United Nations from 1977 to 1979 during the Carter administration.

Iraq takes tough stand in radio talks

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq says President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt should expect to be assassinated by a countryman soon. Baghdad also suggested it plans attacks with chemical and biological weapons.

Mubarak, Washington's most powerful Arab ally, was accused of betraying Islam in Sunday night's insult-filled broadcast on Baghdad radio.

It came hours after Iraqi media blamed U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar for allied air attacks said to have hit civilian targets in Iraq.

Late Saturday, Iraq's new Mother of Battles radio said "the power that the Iraqis have mustered to confront the U.S. and Zionist aggressors is not a conventional one." It said the allies "have not yet tasted Iraq's gigantic strength" and that Iraq "has not yet started its lightning and painful strikes that will burn their faces and all their black intentions."

The broadcast seemed to renew Iraq's threat to use its large stores of chemical and biological weapons.

"The Egyptian people, who have a rich legacy of Arabism, struggle, and history, have said their word and issued their verdict on... Hosni," said a commentary on Baghdad radio Sunday night.

"They carried out their verdict on his predecessor, Sadat. Hence, Hosni's date with death will not be far away."

Egypt's Anwar Sadat, who signed the Camp David Peace accords with Israel in 1979, was assassinated by Muslim fundamentalists in 1981 during a military parade in a Cairo suburb.

Baghdad called Mubarak, whose country has deployed the second largest foreign contingent in the multinational force, "stupid," "a frightened coward" and "lacking in manliness." It said his speech Thursday made him appear more Zionist than his "Zionist friends in Tel Aviv."

In that speech to the Egyptian Parliament, Mubarak belittled Iraq's missile attacks on Israel as ineffective political gimmicks. He likened them to children's noisemakers.

But Muslim fundamentalists are a political force to be reckoned with in Egypt, and Mubarak has been careful to characterize Iraq's participation in the anti-Iraq coalition as merely countering aggression.

Baghdad radio said Sunday night that civilian areas and Iraqi troops had been hit by 90 raids since morning. It claimed one allied plane was downed and crashed in Turkey.

Iraq acknowledged that some of its warplanes are in Iran, and said it was seeking the return of planes and pilots.

Football from afar

SAUDI ARABIA — Troops sit bundled in chemical suits watching the Super Bowl at an airbase at 2:30 a.m. Monday morning in Saudi Arabia.

Superbowl gives break from war

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf got a brief break from war, huddling in ship galleys and base game rooms to watch the Super Bowl — pretzels in one hand and non-alcoholic beer in the other.

There wasn't even the almost nightly Iraqi Scud attack to disturb the championship football between the New York Giants and Buffalo Bills.

At an airbase in eastern Saudi Arabia, 60 soldiers stood in near-freezing cold watching the game; others gathered by TVs in a munitions depot and a field hospital.

Around the gulf region, many of the half-million American troops watched and listened to the game that some back home wanted to cancel because of the 11-day-old air war with Iraq. But most were grateful for the distraction.

"It feels weird to be watching this here," said Sgt. Kevin Duclos, 26, a Bills fan from Rochester, N.Y. "I thought I'd be home having chicken wings and real beer."

Alcohol is illegal in the Islamic kingdom so soldiers settled for soda. Some, like Air Force Tech. Sgt. James Lee, downed non-alcoholic beers during the game, which began after 2 a.m. in Saudi Arabia and ended at dawn.

He and about 30 Air Force personnel watched the game in the munitions bunker, standing or sitting on makeshift plywood benches not far from stacks of missile cases.

All fell silent as the national anthem was sang but perked up at kickoff. By the time the first quarter ended, however, many were dozing in their seats, exhausted from long days keeping F-15s loaded with bombs and missiles.

For soldiers watching the game outside, it was too cold to fall asleep. Army troops ate popcorn and rubbed their hands together for warmth.

At these Super Bowl parties, comfortable dress was out; troops wore chemical protective suits gas masks strapped to their hips.

Lee and other members of the 1st Tactical Fighter Wing watching the game on Armed Forces Television were in the desert for the World Series, and some predicted they might be here for another one too... and perhaps another Super Bowl.

"I hope not," said Lee, of Rock Island, Ill. "But we're not going anywhere until the job is done."

Although they disagreed over the Bills or Giants, all boasted of being Patriot fans — not the NFL Patriots of New England but the Army's Patriot anti-missile system — the front line of defense against Saddam's Scuds.

The missile attacks have brought many sleepless nights to the troops, who at every launch are ordered to don gas masks.

Few tried to hide their anxiety that a Scud might make it past the Patriots, perhaps carrying a gas or chemical warhead. But so frequent are the attacks that the men discuss them with a bit of humor, too.

"When I go to sleep I don't count sheep," Lee said. "I count Patriots."

A Saudi military patrol found the crew's unoccupied car last week. Saudi officials said Friday that the crew apparently had been heading into occupied Kuwait, more than 350 miles southeast of Baghdad.

CBS spokesman Tom Goodman said the network's appeals for help in getting information about the missing newsmen were made to U.S. and Saudi military officials, and to Iraqi officials in Washington, France, Japan, and Italy and at the United Nations.

Arnett reported that the director of Iraq's Information Ministry told him that "they have nothing in their intelligence sources, and military and government sources, about the presence of the CBS team in Kuwait."

The network also wrote to Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev, and is seeking Iraqi permission to let producer Larry Doyle go to Baghdad to seek information on missing men, Goodman said.

Goodman said CNN "has been very helpful" in relaying CBS requests for information to Iraqi officials in Baghdad.

Simon, 49, with CBS since 1967, has long covered the Middle East. He also covered the Vietnam War and fighting in Lebanon.

CBS expands search for missing television news team

NEW YORK (AP) — A CNN correspondent in Baghdad quoted Iraqi officials as saying they weren't holding a CBS crew that's been missing for a week and didn't have any information about the four-member news team.

CBS, meanwhile, said Sunday it had expanded efforts to find the crew by "urgent and aggressively" contacting officials in the United States and other countries, including Iraq.

Correspondent Bob Simon, producer Peter Bluff, cameraman Roberto Alvarez and soundman Juan Caldera disappeared Jan. 21 while covering the Persian Gulf war. They were traveling without military escort near occupied Kuwait.

"We are doing all we can to determine if indeed Bob Simon and his crew are in Iraqi hands, and if he is, that he be brought to Baghdad and shipped home," CNN's Peter Arnett reported by telephone in a broadcast Sunday.

"The Iraqis are saying they do not have him, or they don't have any information about him about him at this point," said Arnett, who has been reporting from Baghdad since the war began earlier this month.

Arnett reported that the director of Iraq's Information Ministry told him that "they have nothing in their intelligence sources, and military and government sources, about the presence of the CBS team in Kuwait."

Former BSHS grad earns scholarship

Elizabeth Saenz, a 1988 graduate of Big Spring High School and a former student of Howard College, is currently attending Texas Women's University in Denton. She has recently been awarded a scholarship based on her outstanding academic achievements.

Saenz, who is majoring in biology, will be initiated into the Alpha Chi National Honor Society in February.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Saenz Jr., Big Spring.

Trial ordered for high school student

TROY, Mich. (AP) — A high school student who allegedly told friends she drugged her English teacher has been ordered to stand trial on a poisoning charge.

Linda Marie Conflitti, 17, could face up to five years in prison for allegedly dropping the hallucinogen LSD into teacher Robert Heffernan's coffee Dec. 7.

(Linda) said that Mr. Heffernan was going to be tripping out or high and that something had happened (in the) third hour," another student, Heidi Klebba, 17, testified Wednesday during a preliminary examination in Troy's 52nd District Court.

Klebba said Conflitti then told her she had drugged him.

Heffernan said he started hallucinating and felt nauseated shortly after the third-hour class. He went to rest in the teachers' lounge and later became terrified when family snapshots at his desk triggered hallucinations.

"I observed my children looking deformed," Heffernan said.

Heffernan, who has not returned to school since the incident, said that when he went to a hospital for treatment, he confused the emergency room doctor for the character Spock on the TV series "Star Trek" because his ears looked distorted.

Conflitti, free on bond, is suspended from school pending the case's outcome. No trial date has been set.

Exhibitors prepare for stock show

Howard County extension agent Ricky Spencer is busy making preparations to take several 4-H and FFA members and their animals to the Fort Worth stock show.

According to Spencer, he and 13 4-H winners of the Howard County Junior Livestock show will leave Monday. In addition, approximately 30 FFA members will make the trip as well.

The show will be at the John Justin Arena beginning Thursday, Jan. 31 and continuing Friday and Saturday, Feb. 1 and 2.

Spencer said the majority of animals being taken are steers and a few pigs, but no sheep. He said a show the size of Fort Worth can bring a winning steer $30,000 to $50,000 at the auction Saturday.

As soon as the Fort Worth show concludes, Spencer will begin making plans to travel to El Paso for another livestock show. He said this show will attract more swine and a few steers and lambs. The availability of scholarships is what makes the El Paso show so attractive to young exhibitors, he said.

Alumni used to measure effects of college programs

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

Howard College and SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf alumni are the most "effective measures" of the colleges' programs, said Vice President for Institutional Advancement Cheri Sparks. Administrators have recently intensified efforts to contact graduates and solicit their comments about the education they received.

Sparks said she would like to see more and better-utilized alumni information.

"If you can keep contact with your alumni, you can tell something about how you're doing," she said. "And they're our best publicity."

"(Alumni) are in a position to help us grow more than anyone. They've experienced the college, and they care. They can give criticism that has knowledge behind it."

At SWCID, career counselor Jeff Richard keeps personal contact with graduates. He estimates that 80 percent of the former students say school helped them find a good job.

"What they learn here, they apply to their jobs," Richards said, speaking through an interpreter. He added that he and other deaf instructors and staff members often are cited as role models for SWCID graduates.

"About 50 percent of our faculty are deaf," he said. "That helps (students) to realize that they can function out in the real world."

In recent years, concern about the effectiveness of vocational and college training has prompted increased study of the issue. The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, for example, mandates that colleges track former vocational students to find out if their training led to a job.

Dean of Admissions Linda Conway's office mails out a follow-up survey to vocational program graduates twice a year. Unfortunately, not many former students answer the questions and return the questionnaire, she said.

"Last year (a survey of 1989 graduates) was our best response yet," Conway said. At about 48 percent return, the survey "is not a real measure of how your former students are doing," she pointed out.

"If you have only one graduate of (a campus vocational program) return the survey, and he has a job in his field, you have a 100 percent success rate. But if he doesn't, you have zero percent. It just doesn't work as it should."

The survey asks graduates whether they are employed and

In recent years, concern about the effectiveness of vocational and college training has prompted increased study of the issue.

Of 175 surveys sent to July 1, 1988, to June 30, 1989, vocational program graduates, about 48 percent were returned with information about former students' employment. The results are as follows:

- Business, 60 percent employed in field-related jobs.
- Accounting, 28 percent.
- Banking, no response.
- Computer science, 100 percent.
- Data entry, 100 percent.
- Secretarial science, 50 percent.
- Word processing, 50 percent.
- Management, 50 percent.
- Cosmetology, 50 percent.
- Petroleum technology, no response.
- Dental hygiene, 100 percent.
- Dental lab technician, 100 percent.
- Vocational nursing, 87 percent.
- Paraprofessional for the hearing impaired, 0 percent, one survey returned.
- Registered nurse, 100 percent.
- Child care and development, 100 percent.
- Legal assistant, 100 percent.
- Law enforcement, 0 percent, one response.
- Fire protection, 100 percent.
- Residential management, no response.
- Auto technician, 0 percent, one response.
- Drafting, 0 percent, two responses.
- Photo retouch and restoration, 0 percent, one response.

if so, if the job is in the field for which they were trained. Salary information is requested as well, and employer names and addresses are sought.

An employer follow-up survey is then mailed to supervisors of former district students to find out how they compare to other workers.

Information from the surveys is compiled into a report and sent to the coordinating board in April. Of 1990 vocational graduates, Conway said about 10 percent have returned the survey at this point.

At the beginning of February, Conway said, the survey will be mailed out again, in hopes of convincing a few more graduates to take part. Response varies widely between programs, she said.

"Most nursing students respond," she said. "They are generally employed, and their employers respond as well."

At present, students who receive associate's degrees in academic majors are not surveyed. An alumni association has been formed to attempt to involve all students, however.

"We want to get into more of that," Conway said.

"With time, I think we can improve on what we have now," Sparks agreed. "There's interest not just here, but nationwide, for improving (college-alumni relations)."

Richards said he is pleased with the effectiveness of SWCID's alumni-tracking measures. Admission counselor Bob Coltrane agreed.

"It's taken a few years to develop," he said. "Our alumni association is growing now and our efforts are becoming stronger."

Once the Howard College district can purchase the necessary module for its new computer system, contacting former students will be easier, Conway said.

After several years of work, the district has a core list of names of graduates from each decade of its existence, since the 1940's. A newsletter is published to inform the alumni about current and planned college events.

Sparks said the alumni activities such as Homecoming, begun about five years ago, has helped the campus keep in touch as well.

Both officials agreed that program directors and instructors are probably the district's best way of establishing contact with former students.

"The (alumni-college) relationship starts in the classroom," Conway said. Sparks added that dorm supervisors often receive visits or hear word of former dorm residents as well.

Conway said the college may attempt to make better use of those people as resources for alumni tracking.

While in school on either local campus, students get a taste of the survey process. They are asked to write about their impressions of all aspects of campus life. Although student comments can be painfully honest, Conway said the learning experience is worth it.

"They tell the truth," she said. "Sometimes it hurts, but you think about it, and you can say, 'That's right, we do need to work on that...'"

Parents can ease children's war fears

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten-year-old Michael Colon has a grim vision of war in the Persian Gulf.

"Wherever you look, someone is going to be dying," said the fifth-grader in Elizabeth, N.J. "It's going to be pretty scary."

War is on the minds of many American children. It can make them anxious enough to develop nightmares, sadness and difficulty concentrating. It may also make teen-agers doubtful about the future.

But psychiatrists say parents can take steps to head off problems.

"The No. 1 lesson is to talk about it," said Dr. Elissa Benedek of the University of Michigan Medical Center. "Do not assume they are too young to have any knowledge of what's going on."

Children as young as 2 or 3 probably can pick up enough to have some fears, said Dr. Lenore Terr, author of "Too Scared to Cry," a recent book about children frightened by news events.

For children up to ages 7 or 8, the prime fear about war is losing Mommy or Daddy and wondering who would then take care of the child. Children also may worry that the fighting will reach their neighborhoods.

Not all children will become fearful, but those already anxious about other things are particularly vulnerable, said Dr. Stanley Greenspan of the George Washington University Medical School.

In one step to ease children's fears, the host of television's "Mister Rogers" show taped public service announcements this week aimed at children and parents. "The least, and best, we adults can do is let our children know that we'll take good care of them no matter what," said Fred Rogers.

Here are some tips from Benedek, Greenspan and Terr:

—First, find out what your child is thinking about war. Don't expect him to bring it up.

War is on the minds of many American children. It can make them anxious enough to develop nightmares, sadness and difficulty concentrating. It may also make teen-agers doubtful about the future.

If the child is verbal, ask whether the child has been discussing the gulf in school or with friends. Or open a conversation by noting that somebody the child knows is involved in the crisis.

Greenspan suggests a daily session of "floor time" or "chit-chat time," lasting at least 20 minutes. Floor time, with preschoolers or early elementary school-age children, means getting on the floor and seeing if the child is playing out a gulf war or such disasters as monster attacks or hurricanes.

"You be a calm, accepting, warm, secure person who's interested and curious in being with him for that period of time, and hearing about whatever's on his mind," Greenspan said. "That probably is more reassuring than anything you can say."

Youths turning to sniffing butane, propane

BOSTON (AP) — The dangerous habit of sniffing butane and propane gas to get high appears to be growing among affluent adolescents and may even approach epidemic levels, two health experts warn.

In a letter published in the New England Journal of Medicine, they described two cases in Cincinnati in which boys died suddenly while sniffing gas. Both occurred within a six-week period in middle-class neighborhoods.

Doctors have known about "sudden sniffing death" since at least 1970, but such deaths are rarely reported in the United States.

They said they suspect that "abuse of these readily available inhalants has reached epidemic proportions, indicating an urgent need for preventive efforts directed at teen-agers and their parents, with an emphasis on the risk of sudden death from sniffing."

The gases can kill by triggering cardiac arrest.

Lady ginner puts in long day

Loray Jeffcoat was one busy lady gin operator at Luther this season. The gin produced 5,521 bales between Nov. 13, 1990 and the January 13, 1991 cutoff date. This compares to approximately 300 bales produced last year at the Knott Planter's Gin and nearly in line with the norm: 5,971 bales in 1987 and 5,243 bales in 1988.

Dean Baker was the scale clerk and Ida Lou Bell worked a few hours each day on the computers. Robert Bell, manager of the Paymaster Ackerley Gin, oversaw the gin production and maintenance this year. "He did wonderful, and I was so pleased," said Mrs. Jeffcoat.

Michael Shockley was the module truck driver, and another man loaded the modules on the pad under the suction at the gin. "Alfonso Lopez is our head ginner — he came to this gin in 1964 and has worked here off and on since," Loray said.

The gin crew worked two shifts, 12 hours each day. Mrs. Jeffcoat's days were 14 hours, from 8:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. Leroy Aldridge of Big Spring kept the scale through the night.

"Repairs and changes to increase the gin's volume and hopefully make the grade of ginned cotton better were made prior to the starting of the season," said Jeffcoat. "We were late starting due to weather conditions."

The farmers had a frustrating year, with 1.4" of rain from April 20 to May 3 for planting. Most cotton was planted in May. Then no rain during the month of June and until July 12, amounting to drought, with cotton plants trying to mature with very little yield. However, 2.7" rain fell July 12, with approximately 4.3" falling in small amounts the rest of the month and 3.1" in August.

The plants took off growing and producing throughout the rest of the summer, with additional rains in September and October. Concern was expressed the strippers would have a hard time with the tall plants, and the possible threat of boll weevils with so much moisture. Early freezes left a lot of green bolls to be dumped.

"The average module has seven to eight bales to the module this year — a little less than is usually produced because the cotton was lighter," Jeffcoat said.

Cotton is hauled to the gin in trailers by the farmers, but the gin picks up the modules (tightly packed rectangles of cotton) in the fields.

The cotton is weighed, then suctioned into the gin where it is separated from the cotton burrs and seeds, cleaned, dried and baled. The cotton seed is sent to the Sweetwater Cotton and Oil Company, except for the seeds farmer want to catch and replant. The burrs, except for those the farmers purchase to spread on their fields, are disposed of by the gin.

"I moved to Big Spring in October," said Jeffcoat, "and people ask me how I like it compared to Knott, and I can't tell them. All I do there is sleep."

The gin office is still open from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. five days a week for buying and selling to the cotton companies. "Recaps are sent to the companies on the Fax machine and they either buy them or reject them. Right now the market is low so most of the farmers are waiting."

STG2 Frank Duane Brooks, son of Frank V. Brooks, 4511 Larry, Big Spring, and Paulette Brooks, Mertzon, is assigned to the USS Dewert, out of Miami, Fla., as a Sonar Technician. Brooks is a 1982 graduate of Irion County High School in Mertzon.

Marine 2nd Lt. Austin L. Petway, son of Malcolm L. Petway, 1506 11th Place, Big Spring, was graduated from The Basic School.

While attending The Basic School, located at the Marine Corps Combat Development Command, Quantico, Va., Petway was prepared, as a newly-commissioned officer, for assignment to the Fleet Marine Force.

The 26-week course includes instruction on land navigation, marksmanship, tactics, military law, personnel administration, Marine Corps history and traditions, communications and the techniques of military instruction.

Petway was also taught leadership and the importance of teamwork. He was also required to participate in a demanding physical conditioning program.

A graduate of Hillcrest High School, Dallas, and a graduate of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, with a Bachelor of Arts degree, he joined the Marine Corps in April 1988.

The first to forgive, the first to find peace

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: Did you know there is an International Forgiveness Week? Well, neither did I until three years ago when Alice Parenti of Fresno, Calif., wrote to tell me about it. And this is the week.

If you are a card-carrying member of the human race, there is at least one person in your life who needs your forgiveness. Or perhaps it's you who needs to be forgiven, so hop aboard the mea culpa bandwagon, let go of those grudges and give your ulcer a chance to heal.

Robert Muller, former secretary general of the United Nations, wrote this lovely piece especially for International Forgiveness Week:

DECIDE TO FORGIVE
Decide to forgive
For resentment is negative
Resentment is poisonous
Resentment diminishes and deavors the self.
Be the first to forgive,
To smile and to take the first step.

And you will see happiness bloom
On the face of your human brother or sister.

Be always the first
Do not wait for others to forgive
For by forgiving
You become the master of fate
The fashioner of life
The doer of miracles.
To forgive is the highest,
Most beautiful form of love.
In return you will receive
Untold peace and happiness.

Here is the program for achieving a truly forgiving heart:
Sunday: Forgive yourself.

Dear Abby

Monday: Forgive your family.
Tuesday: Forgive your friends and associates.

Wednesday: Forgive across economic lines within your own nation.

Thursday: Forgive across cultural lines within your own nation.

Friday: Forgive across political lines within your own nation.

Saturday: Forgive other nations.

Only the brave know how to forgive. A coward never forgives. It is not in his nature.

Now, Dear Readers, if you will forgive me for repeating a portion of the lovely poem titled "Forgiveness," by George Roemisch, here it is:

"Forgiveness is the fragrance of the violet that clings fast to the heel that crushed it."

So, if perchance you are the "heel" that crushed a violet, this is the week to seek forgiveness.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Re-filing of complaint is not a violation

Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — A complaint filed against the county attorney over the re-filing of two driving while intoxicated cases, to lesser charges unrelated to DWI offenses, is not a violation of disciplinary rules, said a Texas State Bar official.

Frank J. Douthitt, the State Bar general counsel, the prosecuting arm of the State Bar, gave that opinion in a Jan. 10 letter to the District 16-C Grievance Committee chairman in Sweetwater, where the complaint was filed. State Bar officials cannot release information on complaints until a final disposition is made, but the letter was passed on to the Big Spring Herald by Mitchell County Attorney Clay Strange.

Strange had a complaint filed against him by Colorado City reserve police officer Melburn

"Despite the favorable ruling, I am still curious as to why Mr. Jaco never expressed any displeasure to me personally about the manner in which I conduct my office. . . ."

Clay Strange
Mitchell County Attorney

Jaco last month. Jaco said it is not "fair and equal" that two people had DWI charges reduced to reckless driving. DWI does not include the lesser charge of reckless driving. "The charges just aren't related," Jaco said.

Strange, who said he refiled the cases because two men could have lost "long held jobs," said he in no way acted improperly. "These are not my buddies," he said.

Douthitt agreed, saying in the letter to Sweetwater district committee Chairman Rod Wetsel, that he was "unable to find that the complained of conduct constitutes a violation of the disciplinary rules."

"I agree with you that the grievance process is not the proper forum for this type of complaint. The complained of conduct appears to fall within the province of prosecutorial discretion, which as you know is quite broad," the letter states.

Based on Douthitt's opinion, Wetsel composed a Jan. 22 letter to Jaco, informing him that the State Bar does not have jurisdiction to hear the complaint brought against Strange. Jaco, who has 30 days to appeal the determination in writing, if he chooses to do so, could not be reached for comment.

Strange, a member of the district committee, who excused himself from the inquiry, said he was not surprised by the opinion of what he termed Jaco's "malicious, libelous accusations."

"Despite the favorable ruling, I am still curious as to why Mr. Jaco never expressed any displeasure to me personally about the manner in which I conduct my office," Strange said. "I only wish he would have been polite enough to at least talk to me. My door was always open, literally, and will remain open to him or anyone else."

The two men who had their cases refiled are: Jimmy Laurens, who was originally charged with a third offense DWI — a felony — in connection with a June 15, 1989, incident; and Donald Anderson, who was charged with a misdemeanor DWI in connection with a March 4, 1990, incident. Records do not indicate whether Anderson's DWI charge was a first or second offense.

Both cases were refiled as reckless driving but Anderson eventually pleaded guilty to reckless conduct. Laurens pleaded guilty to reckless driving. Both received 60-day sentences, fines and one year probation.

A felony DWI is punishable with up to five years in the penitentiary while a second offense DWI carries a penalty of up to two years in jail. A first offense DWI carries a penalty of up to six months.

you can get into early intervention.

An executive director, a counselor and a clerk would be hired. The grant would pay the total annual salaries of $61,500 with the county picking up costs for insurance and other benefits. Other costs would include training fees, supplies, advertising and medical costs.

The county is being asked to provide office space and equipment, including telephones, computer equipment and storage facilities. County Auditor Jackie Olson is reviewing the request to determine the costs to the county.

Two other grants have been approved for counseling centers in Snyder and Sweetwater, Zilai said. Officials in those communities have assisted her in putting together the grant application.

Summit

In recent violence, 21 people have died in clashes with Red Army troops in the Lithuanian and Latvian capitals.

The president said Friday that despite "some difficulties" on arms control and the Baltics, "we have a lot of common ground still with the Soviet Union."

Gorbachev, trying to hold his country together and at the same time overcome severe economic troubles, has been eager to play host to Bush.

Two months ago, the United States gave the Soviets $1 billion in food credits to help avert starvation this winter. The Soviets have already tapped $800 million of those credits.

The proposed centerpiece of the Moscow summit would be a Strategic Arms Reduction treaty to cut each superpower's long-range nuclear arsenal by roughly 50 percent.

But U.S. officials have lingering concerns over Soviet compliance with the conventional arms pact that 34 nations signed in Paris in November.

Questions have been raised whether the Soviets were diverting to east of the Ural mountains some of their tanks that should be destroyed under the treaty.

Bessmertnykh and Baker took Sunday off, in part to give the Soviet minister a chance to get his family ready to move back to Moscow from Washington.

Bessmertnykh was thrust into the foreign minister's post by the sudden resignation last month of Eduard A. Shevardnadze, who warned that the Soviet Union was veering toward a dictatorship.

War

February" to launch a ground offensive, he said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Preparations for the ground confrontation continued around the clock.

In the northern Saudi desert, front-line troops dug foxholes and bunkers to protect them from Iraq's top-line artillery. Army engineers are working to finish airstrips and roads.

In a sober assessment of the potential impact of a ground war, American commanders have warned Army doctors to expect some frontline units to suffer casualties of more than 10 percent in 30 days, if current secret plans for a ground attack are implemented.

The prediction is tentative, officers familiar with the warning stressed, and applies only to the forwardmost units which would be called upon to break through Iraqi defensive lines or drive deep into heavily defended Iraqi-held territory.

A ground battle would pit 675,000 allied troops — including 480,000

Americans — against 540,000 Iraqi soldiers in and near occupied Kuwait.

Much of the allied bombing is aimed at "softening up" the Iraqi ground forces. Schwarzkopf said the pilots are trying hard to keep from causing civilian casualties, making the risky business of bombing runs even more dangerous.

"By requiring that the pilots fly in a certain direction of flight or use a certain type of munition that requires them to go to altitudes that they wouldn't ordinarily be required to go to, those pilots are at much more risk than they would be otherwise," he said.

The Baghdad government has repeatedly accused the United States of targeting civilian areas.

At the Jordanian border, at least two refugees fleeing Iraq said today they had seen allied warplanes bombing civilians convoys trying to flee toward Jordan, killing and wounding some people. Hundreds of evacuees were fleeing into Jordan after Iraq reopened its border.

Today, the Iraqi military issued a communique saying the allies had carried out 118 bombing sorties against Iraq since Sunday.

Red Grange dies at 87

LAKE WALES, Fla. (AP) — Red Grange, football's "Galloping Ghost" who starred as a running back at Illinois and later in professional football, died early today at a Lake Wales hospital. He was 87.

Grange died of complications from pneumonia at about 3 a.m., said his wife of 49 years, Margaret Grange. He had been in the hospital since July and had been on the critical list for a week.

Grange, one of the storied players of the game and one of 17 charter members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, made his jersey number "77" famous during the years 1923-25 at Illinois.

His blazing speed and electrifying performances helped catapult football from the inside sports pages to front-page headlines.

In his junior year, he scored four touchdowns in 12 minutes against Michigan with sprints of 95, 67, 56 and 45 yards. The next season he gained 363 yards against undefeated Pennsylvania. He was an All-America for three seasons.

He spent 13 years as a player, coach and promoter of pro football. He was in New York several years with a team called "Red Grange's Yankees" in the American professional league. Grange wound up his playing days in 1934 with the Bears, finishing his career as a pass receiver and defensive back. Grange scored 56 touchdowns in his pro career.

Grange played 20 games for Illinois. In his three years, he scored 31 touchdowns and ran for 3,637 yards.

Giants work for Super victory

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — After all the big plays, all the star turns on a super stage, there was nothing left to do but watch.

Ottis Anderson, the game's Most Valuable Player, and Jeff Hostetler, its most important backup, kneeled helplessly on the sidelines. Thurman Thomas, once again carrying the load for the Bills, and Jim Kelly, who had gotten his team in position to win, stood and stared.

On the Tampa Stadium field, Scott Norwood readied himself for a 47-yard field goal that would bring fame or failure. All that depended on it was the NFL championship.

"If you wrote a Super Bowl script, you'd want it to come down to the end," Kelly said.

The end meant Norwood missed to the right, and the New York Giants escaped with a 20-19 victory in the Silver Anniversary Super Bowl, one that certainly provided a super ending.

"I thought it was a little out of his range," Lawrence Taylor said, "and, I know it's not nice to say, but I hoped he'd miss it. We deserved to win that game."

The Giants won their second Super Bowl in five seasons just the way they always win. They controlled the ball and the clock — time of possession read 40:33-19:27 for New York, a record. They made all the key plays, especially on third down, converting nine of 16. They used a strange 2-3-6 defense — yes, only two down linemen — daring the Bills to run, seeking to destroy the rhythm of Buffalo's no-huddle attack.

And, in the end, they prayed.

"On my wrist, I have written 'Just a Prayer,' and that's what we asked for," said Giants linebacker Pepper Johnson, who did the same thing last week in San Francisco when teammate Matt Bahr tried and made a last-second, game-winning field goal. "I don't know how he missed it, but all the guys were screaming, 'He missed it' and that was good enough for me."

It was good enough to decide one of the few Super Bowl to live up to expectations, if not predictions. The miss also punctuated the importance of experience in big games.

"I think he's a pretty good

Certainly, it was the toughest loss the Bills have had.

"I thought I could make it and I got plenty of distance," said Norwood, 1-for-5 from beyond the 40 this season. "I had the one opportunity there and didn't do the job. 'You just have to go forward, not look back.'"

Looking back, the Bills will see so many missed tackles and dropped passes. They'll see the mistakes that cost them in their first Super Bowl.

They also will see Anderson, the 33-year-old workhorse whom coach Bill Parcells claims is headed for the Hall of Fame, rushing for 102 yards and a touchdown. He had 63

Nicklaus makes most of second chance

KOHALA COAST, Hawaii (AP) — Gary Player knows better.

He said so. Now in his 30th season of competition against the Jack Nicklaus, Player gave his old foe a second chance.

And he knows full well that is something that just isn't "I made a mistake," Player said after Nicklaus made the most of the gift and went on to score the biggest payday of his career Sunday in the Senior Skins Game.

Player, literally, had Nicklaus on the rocks and a $285,000 payoff in his hands on the second hole of a sudden death playoff.

Pressure was involved, Player admitted; the pressure of the prize money and the pressure of the pride in competing against his old friends and golfing foes, Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino and Chi Chi Rodriguez.

"There's real pressure involved when you're playing for that kind of money," said Player, who won less than one-quarter of that amount when he led the American Tour with $64,540 in 1961.

"You just have to put that (pressure) behind you and think of the course," Player said. And therein lay his mistake. "When he got it into the rocks," Player said, "I thought, 'I can win it with a (par) 5.'"

"And I played it for a 5. That was my mistake," he said, and shook his head. "I just blanked out. I don't know what it was, but I wasn't thinking right."

"I played it for a (par) 5 instead of trying to make birdie," Player said.

It was on the second hole of a sudden death playoff — the par-5 18th on the Francis H. Brown course at the Mauna Lani Resort — after Palmer, Trevino and Rodriguez had been eliminated.

Nicklaus hit his drive into the black rocks of an ancient lava flow and was in deep, deep trouble. He took a penalty drop from the rubble, then lashed a 3-wood third shot 243 yards over the lava, around a palm and onto the fringe of the green. From there, he got down in two and matched Player's par.

On the next extra hole, Nicklaus hit a 2-iron to the fringe of the green and rolled in a 35-40 foot winning putt for eagle-3 and all the money up for competition Sunday, $285,000.

"That's the biggest payday I've ever had," said Nicklaus, who was almost babbling in excitement.

He also won $25,000 Saturday for a two-day total of $310,000, more than he pocketed in all but one of his eight seasons as golf's leading money-winner.

"A tough way to go out," said

WAIMEA, Hawaii — Jack Nicklaus throws his arms up in victory after sinking the winning putt on the final day of the Senior Skins Game. Nicklaus won 10 skins for a total of $310,000.

Player, who was left with a tap-in putt for birdie on the final hole, a tap-in he never executed.

"I've played very well for two years in a row and didn't win a cent," he said.

Rodriguez also was shut out. Trevino, with $125,000, and Palmer, with $15,000, won all their money on Saturday.

Nicklaus won it all Sunday as the first nine holes were tied, five of them with birdies. So all the prize money was carried over into the playoff.

"This was the start of the season for me; and a very nice start it was," said Nicklaus, who now will go on to Pebble Beach and the National Pro-Am, the second start on what he said will be a very restricted schedule this year.

Physical Giants simply wore Buffalo Bills down

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — While Ottis Anderson ran and Jeff Hostetler threw, Jim Kelly and Thurman Thomas could only stand and watch.

They stood and watched the Giants beat Buffalo 20-19 for New York's second Super Bowl victory in four years.

The Giants set two Super Bowl records for controlling the clock. More important, their stingy style of offense kept the Bills' dangerous no-huddle attack on the sidelines for all but 19:27 of Sunday's game.

"Very frustrating," said Buffalo quarterback Kelly. "We know we're going to put the ball in the end zone, but we didn't have that many opportunities."

The Giants rallied twice in the second half with a pair of scoring drives that consumed a total of 17 minutes. Anderson pounded the middle, Dave Meggett provided a change of pace to the outside, and Hostetler completed four third-down passes for first downs.

"Our whole plan was to try to shorten the game for Buffalo," coach Bill Parcells said. "We wanted the ball, and we didn't want them to have it."

New York's time of possession totaled 40 minutes, 33 seconds — a Super Bowl record. The Bills, who scored 95 points in their two postseason wins, had the ball for less than eight minutes in the second half.

"That's been our key all year — controlling the ball," Hostetler said. "Our defense likes it when we're out there a long time because it gives them a chance to rest, and the offense likes to see it because eventually we start overpowering people."

New York finished with 73 plays to just 56 for the Bills. Kelly threw for 212 yards and Thomas ran for 135, but the NFL's highest-scoring offense spent most of the night in the shadows instead of the spotlight.

"When you run the no-huddle, you don't have a lot of possession time," Bills coach Marv Levy said. "And when you don't score, you get rid of it fast."

Excluding a clock-killing sequence at the end of the first half, four Buffalo possessions lasted four plays or less. Each took 91 seconds or less.

The Giants, meanwhile, played keepaway. And they did it best after taking the kickoff to start the second half.

"I told them (at halftime) that the first drive of the third quarter was the most important of the game," Parcells said. "We had to do something with it."

Trailing 12-10, New York kept the ball for a Super Bowl-record 9:29 with a touchdown march that covered 75 yards in 14 plays.

Possession passes kept the drive alive. Hostetler hit Meggett on third-and-8 for 11 yards. He hit Mark Ingram on third-and-13 for 14 yards. He hit Howard Cross on third-and-4 for 9 yards.

"That's what Jeff's paid to do," tight end Mark Bavaro said. "And we're paid to catch them." Anderson broke away for 24 yards on a third-and-1 play. He also scored the touchdown from the 1.

"It was very disheartening," Levy said.

"That was the biggest drive of the season," New York receiver Stephen Baker added.

Several Giants said the Buffalo defenders began to weary at that point.

"Our offense tired them out with the constant pounding," linebacker Pepper Johnson said. "They were the ones sucking air."

The Bills rebounded quickly. Thomas' 31-yard touchdown run on the first play of the fourth quarter gave them a 19-17 lead, capping a four-play drive that lasted just 1:27.

But New York's patient, deliberate offense responded again, moving 74 yards in 14 plays to set up Matt Bahr's 21-yard field goal with 7:20 left.

The Giants struggled for most of the first half and gave up a safety when Hostetler was sacked by Bruce Smith. But they mounted an 87-yard drive near the end of the half to close within 12-10.

"We had some momentum going into the locker room at halftime," Meggett said. "We just wanted to come out and establish ourselves with that first drive. It was great for our momentum."

Smith, limited to just three tackles, said the Bills' defense was to blame for the lopsided ball-control totals.

"Missed tackles really hurt us," he said. "We had a number of plays where we could have tackled them and it would have been fourth down. Yet they were able to keep their feet moving, and two or three tacklers missed them, and they were able to get the first down."

Anderson broke more tackles than anyone, finishing with 102 yards in 21 carries.

Ben Johnson wins first race

OTTAWA (AP) — Ben Johnson won his first race since returning to competition after a two-year ban for substance abuse. Johnson took the 55-meter dash at the Ottawa Winter national indoor meet.

With about 6,000 fans cheering him on, Johnson hit the tape in 6.20 seconds, .01 seconds ahead of Canadian Brian Morrison. In third was Daron Council, who spoiled Johnson's celebrated return by edging him at 50 meters in the Hamilton, Ontario, indoor meet two weeks ago.

Henke wins Phoenix Open

PHOENIX (AP) — Nolan Henke rolled in an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole Sunday, ending a back-nine collapse and giving him a one-stroke victory over Curtis Strange, Tom Watson and Gil Morgan in the Phoenix Open.

Henke finished with an even-par 71 and a 16-under total of 268. The victory was worth $180,000, more than half of what the 26-year-old Henke earned last season.

Morgan and Strange both bogeyed the 18th hole to fall to 15 under with Watson, who had a 65 with birdies on five of the last six holes. Morgan shot a 66 and Strange a 67 on the 6,992-yard TPC course.

Henke, who started the round with a four-stroke lead over Robert Wrenn, made the turn at 17 under and then birdied the 10th hole for a three-shot lead over Strange.

But Henke bogeyed the par-5 13th, the par-5 15th and the par-3 16th to fall to 15 under.

Fem hoop coached killed in accident

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Betty Clark, coach of the East Stroudsburg women's basketball team, died late Saturday from injuries suffered in a car accident. She was 37.

Clark was returning from a game in Stillman, N.J., Friday night when her car was hit broadside on U.S. Route 22 as she was pulling onto the highway, authorities said.

Clark was in her third year as coach. The women's game scheduled Saturday night in Bloomsburg was postponed. Assistant Terry VanDusen will take over coaching duties.

Lakers whip Celtics at Boston Garden

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics are 30-11 at the halfway mark of the NBA season — and Chris Ford is headed for the All-Star Game next month as the Eastern Conference coach.

The Los Angeles Lakers also are 30-11 and coach Mike Dunleavy already is looking forward to the playoffs.

"Hopefully we'll peak by the playoffs," Dunleavy said Sunday after Magic Johnson and the Lakers whipped the Celtics 104-87 for their 11th consecutive victory.

"There isn't any team in the league we can't beat," Dunleavy said. "I really don't know how good this team can be. Our bench just has to be more consistent."

With James Worthy, the Lakers' leading scorer, sidelined with a foot injury suffered Friday night, Johnson figured "I had to get more involved."

And that's what he did, scoring 22 points, getting 15 assists with pinpoint passing and grabbing nine rebounds as the Lakers ended Boston's eight-game Super Bowl Sunday winning streak.

Johnson said he missed his usual showdown with Larry Bird, who is gradually working for a return from a back injury which has sidelined him since Jan. 8. However, he noted, that former Celtic Dennis Johnson "was always my most difficult opponent."

"I'd like to have had Larry in there because you have to approach the game differently when he's out," Johnson said.

"They're a different team without him," Johnson added. "He adds so much, just his presence on the floor. I miss him, the fans miss him. I think the whole country misses him."

"The biggest thing for us today was our defense," Dunleavy said. "Our defense is the main reason for us winning."

Playing 38 minutes, Johnson, like Bird a 12-year veteran, frustrated the Celtics as the Lakers pulled away from a 53-51 halftime lead after the game had been tied 10 times and the lead exchanged 21 times.

"We made a couple of runs, but they countered every time with Magic directing the attack," said Brian Shaw, who led Boston with 20 points. "Magic made things happen for them. It's difficult to defend Magic. You double team him and he finds other guys in open spots."

"We couldn't see to keep the ball out of Magic's hands," said Kevin McHale, who had 15 points. "We're not playing well. It's real frustrating."

"They were doubling down on Kevin (McHale) and Robert (Parish)," Boston's Kevin Gamble said. "The spacing wasn't good. Sometimes it looks so easy out there, but it gets all clogged up. And LA knows how to get Chief and Kevin off the blocks because they've been playing them for so many years."

"The Lakers played very well," Ford said. "They're on a roll. We played well for 24 minutes and then we did whatever they wanted us to do. We settled for the shots they hoped we would take."

Becker wins Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Now that he has what he wanted most in tennis, Boris Becker is thinking about how long he will keep it and what life might hold after it loses its appeal.

Finally No. 1 after more than five years within reach of the top, Becker says he's uncertain how long he will stay there but doesn't want it to be too long.

He's a lot like Mats Wilander in that sense. Wilander reached the No. 1 spot in 1988 when he won three of the four Grand Slam tournaments. Then he decided there was more to life, and a Wilander advance to the semifinals of one of the big four tournaments now is considered a major feat.

Becker said that was not necessarily bad.

"I am a person like Mats, a person of extremes," Becker said. "I'm not like Ivan Lendl 1-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 for his first Australian Open title Sunday and the top spot in the men's rankings."

"I have to be comfortable in it," he said. "I have a little fear, that it won't go on. I like to be No. 1, but I like then to go on to other things. I hope I can stay there for maybe two years, and then I want to be a private man, spending time with my kids and my wife. That's what I want."

In keeping with this ethereal, somewhat poetic approach, Becker did an extraordinary thing after clinching the victory with a zinger of a forehand service return.

He went for a jog in the park.

"Outside, there is a little park with a couple of trees, and I went there to run because it meant so much to me," the 23-year-old Becker said. "I was thinking back about the past, what I had to go through. Not how long it took me, just about all the people who had been there."

Lendl reached the final when Stefan Edberg, who lost the men's No. 1 ranking to Becker, blew two match points in the semifinals. Becker almost didn't make it past the third round, surviving a tournament-record 5-hour, 11-minute five-setter against unheralded Italian Omar Camporese.

And then there was the McEnroe factor. John was absent with injuries and never got a chance to repeat his fourth round dominance for arguing line calls a year ago. But his youngest brother Patrick, ranked 114th, reached the semifinals before losing to Becker in a tough four-setter.

Perhaps the strangest event of the tournament before Sunday's victory lap also involved the eventual men's champion. Becker got a good laugh during his second-round victory over Marian Vajda when a drunken fan who had heckled him throughout the match exposed her breasts before being led away by ushers.

Becker himself looked ready to be led away in the first set against Lendl.

The two-time defending champion was relentless in the early going, limiting Becker to two points in the first three games and saving the only break points against him in the fifth before holding for the set on his fourth ace.

Lendl was at break point in the first game of the second set when he lost what he considered the biggest point of the match. A backhand down the line landed out of Becker's reach — but also out of bounds — and Becker won the next two points on another Lendl error and a service winner to start his comeback.

Becker slowly was getting into his game and getting over a stiff back that required treatment from trainer Todd Snyder after he held for 2-1. Becker kept twisting and turning in between points and changeovers, and the back loosened up.

The defending champion wasted three break points in the first game of the third set and spent much of his time in the next game arguing line calls. Becker spent it breaking for 3-2 and moved to 5-2 before Lendl won three in a row, saving five set points to break for 5-4 on a great forehand into the corner. But Becker broke on his sixth set point and hopped up and down in anticipation of his long-sought victory and climb to the top of the rankings.

yards in the second half, when New York staged two scoring drives that lasted a total of 16:59.

"He's going to Canton," Parcels shouted. "I don't see how they can keep the kid out. He's got too many pellets on his horse. The mettle is the test of time and he's met it."

"I said a long time ago," Anderson admitted, "if I got into a Super Bowl, I'd be a most valuable player."

Just as valuable, of course, was Hostetler. He ended his implausible run with exactly what the Giants expected — a solid, unimpeachable performance. The man who sat behind Phil Simms since 1984 now is 7-0 as a starter and staked his claim to remain a starter.

"Every game, I've gotten the chance to learn things and get better," said Hostetler, who was 20-for-32 for 222 yards and a 14-yard TD pass to Stephen Baker with 25 seconds left in the first half. "I still feel like I can get a lot better."

"It's amazing how comfortable you feel out there after a couple of games in a row."

The Bills never could get comfortable in their no-huddle because the Giants left them no time to run it. New York trailed 12-3 when it put together a 10-play, 87-yard drive to Baker's TD.

The Giants took the second half kickoff and went 75 yards in 14 plays to Anderson's 1-yard TD and a 17-12 lead.

SMU Mustangs shock Houston Cougars

DALLAS (AP) — If Southern Methodist coach John Shumate is looking for respect, he's made a believer out of Houston Cougars coach Pat Foster.

"SMU just lined up and whipped us," Foster said after the Mustangs won for the sixth time in seven games, upsetting Houston 81-75 Saturday night.

"They played extremely hard and deserved to win. If they aren't a good basketball team, then I must be missing something. They ran their offense well and screened us all over the floor."

In other Southwest Conference games Saturday, Arkansas became the first Division I team to post 20 victories this season by holding off Baylor 73-68; Texas whipped Texas Christian 90-49 in Austin; and Rice handled visiting Texas A&M 98-76.

Texas Tech ended a five-game losing skid by beating Southern Illinois-Edwardsville 94-66.

Southern Methodist improved to 9-9 overall and 4-3 in league play, thanks to substitute center Greg Kinzer, who scored 7 points during a pivotal 17-6 second-half run. Tim Mason led the Mustangs with 21 points.

"There's no question that Houston is a national basketball team," Shumate said. "Anytime that you beat a national team, it gives you some credibility."

The Cougars (12-6, 4-3) hit only one of 12 shots during the fateful run that saw SMU turn a 47-46 deficit to a 63-53 lead with eight minutes left.

Byron Smith led the Cougars with 20 points. Alvaro Teheran scored 17 points, but only two in the last 15 minutes while Kinzer and Bobby Holkan were guarding him. Kinzer finished with 13 points.

The Mustangs were down 11-2 and 36-27 in the first half, but freshman Chad Allen's pair of 3-pointers tied the game at 37 at halftime.

Baylor (9-7, 2-5) scared Arkansas with flashbacks of last year's upset.

The Bears put together a 15-6 run, ending on David Wesley's

3-pointer, to close to within 68-66 with 34 seconds left. But Arkansas hit 5 of 6 foul shots to preserve the victory.

Oliver Miller led Arkansas (20-1, 8-0) with 22 points.

"We will be a better team for having to overcome the adversity we had to overcome tonight," Razorbacks coach Nolan Richardson said.

Arlyn Bowers and Lee Mayberry scored 11 points each for Arkansas. Todd Day, the SWC's leading tough," Mayberry said. "I thought we would win by 10 or 12 points. We didn't play like the No. 2 team would in the nation. We were having flashbacks to last year — that was in the back of our minds."

A year ago, Arkansas was ranked third in the nation when it came to Baylor, and the Bears pulled off an 82-77 upset.

Chase Maag scored a career-high 29 points and Marvin Moore added 23 as Rice (7-10, 2-5) beat Texas A&M, which fell to 5-13 and 0-7.

Locksley Collie had 21 points and 10 rebounds in the Longhorns' 90-49 thrashing of TCU (12-5, 4-3).

Texas (12-5, 6-1) has won five straight and seven of eight. TCU made just 5 of 18 free throws and Reggie Smith, who led the Horned Frogs with 18 points, was 0-for-7 from the foul line.

In Lubbock, Bernard Saulsberry made eight consecutive free throws on one possession to cap a 19-2 second-half run in Texas Tech's rout of Southern Illinois-Edwardsville. Tech is 6-14.

the season," Baker said. "If it wasn't for that, we wouldn't have done what we did today. If we don't get anything out of that, we're thinking that things could get out of hand."

They still could have. Kelly and Thomas needed four plays to push the Bills back in front. Thomas' 31-yard run on which he broke two tackles made it 19-17 eight seconds into the fourth quarter.

"All those runs, all those catches, they don't mean a thing because we lost the game," said Thomas, the NFL's total offense leader the past two seasons. He had 135 yards rushing (a 9.0 average) and 55 receiving Sunday.

They lost because their sloppy tackling gave New York extra opportunities and extra yards. The Giants, once again displaying their cool efficiency and power, marched 74 yards in 13 plays and Bahr kicked the 21-yard field goal that won it.

The NFC has won the last seven Super Bowls. This was as close as the AFC has gotten in that span.

"They call us predictable and conservative," Parcels said, "but I know one thing — and I've coached this game a long time — power wins football games. It's not always the fanciest way, but it can win games."

Mistakes will lose games, of course, and Buffalo made so many that Norwood was placed in the steamiest pressure cooker sports can provide.

Iraqi planes flee to Iran

President: U.S. fighting just war

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today that the United States is fighting a "just war" that does not seek the destruction of Iraq.

In a speech to religious broadcasters, Bush repeatedly described the conflict in moral terms. "It has nothing to do with religion, per se," said the president. "It has, on the other hand, everything to do with what religion embodies: good versus evil, right versus wrong."

He added, "Every war is fought for reasons but a just war is fought for the right reasons, for moral, not selfish reasons."

"We seek nothing for ourselves," Bush said.

Looking to the future of the region, the president said, "We do not want a country so destabilized that Iraq itself could be the target of aggression."

"We do not seek the destruction of Iraq," he said. "We have respect for the people of Iraq, for the importance of Iraq in the region."

Bush said the United States had made every effort to resolve the Persian Gulf crisis peacefully but Saddam Hussein rejected all overtures. "He made this just war an inevitable war," Bush said.

"Some ask whether it's moral to use force to stop the rape, the pillage, the plunder of Kuwait, and my answer: Extraordinary diplomatic efforts having been ex-

Allies appear to stem oil spill

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The U.S. military said today an attack by American warplanes apparently has halted Iraq's dumping of oil into the Persian Gulf. Iraq maintained an allied attack created a separate spill.

Army Brig. Gen. Pat Stevens IV told reporters the extent of the giant oil spill — estimated at some 300 million gallons — remains unclear. But, he said, "It appears we have stopped the flow of oil."

Stevens also said 69 Iraqi aircraft have flown to Iran, including 39 fighter planes.

Iraq has an estimated 700 combat aircraft, and Saddam Hussein has largely kept them out of the air since the allied assault began.

Although Iran has said it would confiscate the planes for the duration of the war, Stevens said they have to consider the possibility the planes were going to Iran to shield them from attack.

"We would be absolutely not worth our salt as military people if we ignored the fact that those planes could fly back out of Iran after us," Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said on Sunday.

The Baghdad government claimed today a U.S.-led attack on Kuwait on Sunday started a fire and spilled oil into the gulf. The United States said its warplanes attacked a Kuwait oil facility Saturday in an attempt to halt the flow of crude that was creating the world's largest oil spill.

Fryar makes academic list

KERRVILLE — A 1986 Stanton graduate recently was named to the President's List for the Fall 1990 Semester at Schreiner College in Kerrville.

Kristi Lynn Fryar, daughter of Linda and Danny Fryar of Stanton, earned a place on the President's List with a 3.8. To qualify for the President's List, a full-time student must have at least a 3.6 grade-point average on a 4.0 scale.

Kristi plans to get her degree in Math and minor in Physical Education and be certified in Spanish. According to her dad, the Schreiner senior would like to get her degree and come back around the West Texas area and coach.

Schreiner College, a liberal arts college in the Texas hill country, offers ten majors in its bachelor of arts degree and three majors in its bachelor of commerce degree programs.

Extension club plans tour

The Stanton Extension Homemakers Club met recently at the home of Mrs. P.M. Bristow with Mary Payne presiding.

Committee reports were given by the treasurer and program committee chairman from the previous meeting.

Plans were made to take part in the "Home Tour" that is planned for April 26. The tour, as well as the soup cook-off, will benefit the convent restoration.

Payne introduced a program concerning "Fat in your diet." A luncheon was served to: Mary Payne, Gerry Campbell, Joyce Wells, Helen Ruth Louder, Joan Henley, Dorothy Miller, Mildred Reynolds, Edwina Tom, Minnie Lee Wells, Janice Kelly, Ann Jenkins, and the hostess. The next meeting will be at Helen Ruth Louder's home Feb. 21.

Construction set to begin

AUSTIN — Construction will begin next week on FM 307, according to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The project, just over one mile long, extends from South Lamesa Road to east Fairgrounds Road.

The highway, which leads to Greenwood, will remain open to traffic, with one lane in each direction. Traffic will be rerouted to a temporary detour during construction.

The project includes widening FM 307 from two to four lanes, adding curbs and gutters, and reconstructing the existing lanes. New signals will be installed at the intersection of FM 307 and Florida Street.

South Texas Construction of Midland will have 120 working days to complete the project. Cost of the construction is $603,411 and will be funded with federal and state highway funds.

There will be no speed reductions posted.

Co-ops could get boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmer-owned cooperatives may see larger opportunities as the new farm law unfolds and, hopefully, global trading rules are relaxed, an Agriculture Department official says.

Randall E. Torgerson, administrator of the department's Agricultural Cooperative Service, said the negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade are important to the outlook.

The GATT talks are at an impasse, although attempts continue to get them back on track. A major goal is to liberalize global trading rules, including cutbacks in trade-distorting subsidies.

A cornerstone of the new farm law is the so-called triple base plan that reduces the base acreage farmers have available for price supports, Torgerson said. But it also provides more flexibility in deciding what to grow.

Torgerson, writing in the current issue of Farmer Cooperatives magazine, noted that the 1990 farm law provides for $40.4 billion in income support payments to farmers over the next five years.

Overall, that amounts to a five-hausted to resolve the matter peacefully, then the use of force is moral."

He said the United States and its allies "are doing everything possible, believe me, to avoid hurting the innocent."

Bush spoke shortly after a Soviet official expressed concern about any U.S. war effort that might go beyond liberating Kuwait.

The president had a meeting scheduled later in the day with the new Soviet foreign minister, Alexander A. Bessmertnykh to discuss whether next month's superpower summit in Moscow will be delayed.

The Washington Post reported today that significant portions of Iraq's war machine have survived the 10-day air assault. The newspaper quoted unidentified government sources as saying that U.S. bomb damage assessments can confirm hits on only eight of Iraq's 30 fixed Scud missile launchers, while there is no photographic evidence of the destruction of any mobile

Massacre suspect surrenders quietly

CHIMAYO, N.M. (AP) — A 29-year-old man suspected in the fatal shootings of two lawmen and possibly five other people, including his girlfriend, and the wounding of a sixth person, surrendered to police after evading a manhunt.

Ricky Abeyta, 29, turned himself in to New Mexico State Police in Albuquerque Sunday night and was arrested on suspicion of homicide, Officer Dan Lichtenberger said.

Abeyta was in police custody in Santa Fe early today pending further action on his case. Details about a possible court appearance were not immediately available.

He is suspected in the slaying Saturday of state police Officer Glen Huber, 35, and Rio Arriba County sheriff's Deputy Jerry Martinez, 30, in a rural cluster of mobile homes a few miles from this community 100 miles north of Albuquerque.

The two officers were killed after they arrived at Abeyta's home to serve a restraining order on him at his girlfriend's request, police said.

Abeyta also is a suspect in at least some of the other deaths, state police Sgt. David Osuna said. It remained unclear if any of the other victims were shot before the officers arrived. Police also were investigating the possibility that someone else might have been involved in the shootings.

Also killed were Abeyta's girlfriend, Ignacia R. Sandoval, 36; her daughter, Mary Ellen F. Sandoval, 19; Mary Ellen's 6-month-old son, Justin Gonzales; Justin's father, Macario Gonzales, 19; and Cheryl Rendon, 25, Ignacia's sister.

Eloy Sandoval, 13, a son of Ignacia, sustained gunshot wounds and was in serious but stable condition Sunday at University Hospital in Albuquerque.

State police Maj. John Denko described the incident as a domestic dispute that caught the officers by surprise.

Abeyta and Ignacia Sandoval had lived together for about a year, but the woman wanted to move out, said Carol Vigil, state special commissioner for domestic violence.

Osuna of the state police said shots had been reported fired at Abeyta's home before the two law officers arrived.

Huber was shot in the head through the window of his car and Martinez' body was found on the ground near his vehicle, police said.

Circumstances behind Abeyta's surrender were unknown.

Summit postponement possible after meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh offered assurances today there would be a U.S.-Soviet summit meeting, but he hedged on whether it would be held next month.

"There will be a summit," he said at the start of another round of talks with Secretary of State James A. Baker III. "As for the timing, we'll discuss it."

Soviet military actions against the independence movement in the Baltic republics has caused President Bush to reconsider his scheduled meeting Feb. 11-13 with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Moscow.

Bush is expected to decide after he sees Bessmertnykh later at the White House.

Bessmertnykh told reporters that troops recently sent to the Baltics had been withdrawn, but others remained.

Baker did not seem impressed. "We're concerned by troop actions in the Baltics," he said. "That's no secret."

Bush administration officials have been hinting for some time that the summit would be postponed.

Meanwhile, Vitaly Churkin, the Soviet foreign ministry spokesman, said "it is the desire of the central government, the president (Gorbachev), to work out the situation (in the Baltics) politically."

But he said on the ABC-TV program "Good Morning America," that "the problem there is that of ensuring the rights of national minorities, civil and human rights of people, and ensuring the observance of the Constitution."

He added that "at times it is very launchers. Responding to the report, Brig. Gen. Pat Stevens said allied attacks on Iraq's Scud launchers appear to be working.

"We have been very successful in a very difficult situation," he told reporters in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. "We continue to target Scud launchers. We believe we are effective in doing so. We believe we have seen a reduction."

The newspaper also said that nearly all of Iraq's air defense radar was destroyed the first week of the war but that about 20 percent was now back in operation.

A Pentagon source, who declined to be identified, refused to comment on the specifics of the Post story, but said the military would be "astounded" if Iraq had not put efforts into rebuilding facilities. He said these efforts are an "enormous drain" on Iraqi war energies.

He said the allies are now able to "inflict damage with relative impunity" and that the Iraqis now lack centralized control.

He said the Iraqis on the ground are using ammunition "at a delightfully rapid rate" and time is on the coalition's side. "Over time we are going to wear them to their knees," he said.

Bush told the National Association of Religious Broadcasters that "when this war is over, the United States, its credibility and its reliability restored, will have a key leadership role in bringing peace to the Middle East."

Acknowledging dissent to the war, including some among clergymen, Bush said, "I know some disagree with the course we've taken... I am convinced that we are doing the right thing."

"The first principle of a just war is that it supports a just cause," said the president. "And our cause could not be more noble. We seek Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait, immediate, completely, and without conditions."

Vitaly Churkin, the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, in an interview on ABC's "Good Morning America," said any goal beyond liberating Kuwait "will entail much more destruction and many more victims among civilians and among the soldiers. So, what we are saying is let us stick to the original goal of the United Nations."

Secretary of State James A. Baker III was meeting today with Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid as well as holding a second session with Bessmertnykh. Egypt is pivotal among Arab nations in the anti-Iraq coalition.

Senior administration officials said Sunday that Bush had ruled out seeking a tax increase at this time to finance war operations.

"We expect this to be manageable because we expect to have very substantial foreign contributions," budget director Richard Darman said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

White House chief of staff John Sununu, interviewed on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley," said those contributions now total between $30 billion and $40 billion — including a $13.5 billion pledge from Saudi Arabia announced Saturday by Baker.

Estimates on the cost of the war range as high as $1 billion a day once ground forces are committed.

Before the fighting started, the administration estimated that the operation would require $30 billion in new budget authority and $15 billion in actual cash outlays.

The United States will have to replenish its stock of Tomahawk and Patriot missiles and other weaponry after the war, said Darman, but "that's what the foreign contributions in substantial measure are for."

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said the Pentagon has ordered production lines "cranked up" for the Patriot missile so that supplies of the successful anti-missile missile do not run out while Iraq's Saddam Hussein still has Scud missiles.

Cheney said U.S. forces in the gulf region are approaching the half-million mark and the deployment is nearly complete.

The president and his wife, Barbara, saluted U.S. troops in the gulf and their families in a message videotaped Jan. 14 and shown during halftime of the Super Bowl football game on Sunday. "Not only do they have the heartfelt thanks and gratitude of this president, but of all Americans as well," Bush said.

worst oil slick. Stevens said nothing about a second U.S. attack on the oil facilities.

The Baghdad radio broadcast did not mention the giant oil slick, which U.S. officials maintain was begun by Iraqi forces in Kuwait.

Schwarzkopf told reporters in Riyadh on Sunday that there was "no indication" allied bombing raids caused the giant oil spill. He said U.S. F-111 fighter-bombers used "smart bombs" to attack a coastal oil facility in Kuwait on Saturday to try to prevent more oil from entering the gulf.

International experts arrived in the region today to work on cleaning up the huge slick, which U.S. officials said was begun by Iraqi forces in Kuwait.

A Norwegian ship equipped with cleanup equipment was off the coast of Bahrain, and a British consortium was flying in more than 70 tons of equipment including booms and suction skimmers. Coast Guard and Environmental Protection Agency experts met with Saudi officials to put together a cleanup plan.

U.S. officials expressed confidence the attack significantly reduced the flow of crude to the 35-by-10-mile slick, which could threaten desalination plants supplying water to Saudis and allied forces.

Schwarzkopf said the U.S. warplanes targeted a complex of pipes linking oil fields with an offshore loading buoy for tankers. He said a videotape taken after the air strike indicated much less oil was flowing from the loading buoy after the attack.

"I think that we have been successful," he said Sunday, "but only time is going to tell."

Before dawn today, Saudi time, American soldiers in sand-strewn camps and on ships in the hazy Persian Gulf gathered around radios and televisions for a Super Bowl memorable for more than the play on the field.

Clad in protective gear, gas masks at the ready, troops quaffed non-alcoholic beer — alcohol is illegal in Saudi Arabia — and wondered whether they would make it home for next year's matchup.

"It feels weird to be watching this here," said Sgt. Kevin Duclos, 26, a Buffalo Bills fan from Rochester, N.Y. "I thought I'd be home having chicken wings and real beer."

The troops — along with millions of citizens of Saudi Arabia and Israel — had a rare respite from the Iraqi missiles that have rained from the sky almost nightly. No missile launches were reported Sunday night or this morning.

Since the war began, Iraq has hurled 51 Scud missiles — 26 at Saudi Arabia and 25 at Israel, the allies said.

The allies took advantage of clear skies again today to press relentless air strikes. French Mirage and Jaguar warplanes pounded Iraq's elite Republican Guard troops in Iraqi territory near the border with Kuwait, and Italian Tornado fighter-bombers took part in an allied mission.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney says that although air attacks against Iraq have scored some successes, they alone will not drive Iraq from Kuwait. U.S. soldiers will be prepared "before the end of February" to launch a ground offensive, he said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Preparations for the ground confrontation continued around the clock.

In the northern Saudi desert, front-line troops dug foxholes and bunkers to protect them from Iraq's top-line artillery. Army engineers are working to finish airstrips and roads.

In a sober assessment of the potential impact of a ground war, American commanders have warned Army doctors to expect some frontline units to suffer casualties of more than 10 percent in 30 days, if current secret plans for a ground attack are implemented.

The prediction is tentative, officers familiar with the warning stressed, and applies only to the forwardmost units which would be called upon to break through Iraqi defensive lines or drive deep into heavily defended Iraqi-held territory.

A ground battle would pit 675,000 allied troops — including 480,000 Americans — against 540,000 Iraqi soldiers in and near occupied Kuwait.

Much of the allied bombing is aimed at "softening up" the Iraqi ground forces. Schwarzkopf said the pilots are trying hard to keep from causing civilian casualties, making the risky business of bombing runs even more dangerous.

"By requiring that the pilots fly in a certain direction of flight or use a certain type of munition that requires them to go to altitudes that they wouldn't ordinarily be required to go to, those pilots are at much more risk than they would be otherwise," he said.

The Baghdad government has repeatedly accused the United States of targeting civilian areas.

At the Jordanian border, at least two refugees fleeing Iraq said today they had seen allied warplanes bombing civilians convoys trying to flee toward Jordan, killing and wounding some people. Hundreds of evacuees were fleeing into Jordan after Iraq reopened its border.

Baghdad radio said Sunday night that President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, whose country has deployed the second largest foreign contingent in the allied force, should expect to be assassinated by a fellow Egyptian.

The radio called Mubarak "stupid," "a frightened coward" and "lacking in manliness," and said he appeared more Zionist than his "Zionist friends in Tel Aviv."

Summit

difficult to do that because the authorities in Lithuania seem to disregard the Constitution and keep saying, 'we are not part of the Soviet Union.'

Churkin said "things at times are getting out of hand there."

In one sign of improved U.S.-Soviet relations, a daily 15-minute vigil at the Soviet Embassy was suspended after 20 years because the Soviets have relaxed emigration restrictions, organizers say. "We're here to acknowledge a new era...between Jews and the Soviet Union," Evan Krame, chairman of the Jewish Community Council's Soviet Jewry Task Force, said at the final vigil Sunday, attended by about 110 people.

The superpowers' delicate relationship has been complicated not only by the Kremlin's crackdown on the independence-minded Baltic republics, but also by differences over the strategy the United States is employing in the allied war to drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

A White House spokesman, Stephen T. Hart, said Sunday, "The summit is still up in the air."

Bush, returning from Camp David, Md., refused to say whether he had decided to postpone the Feb. 11-13 Moscow meeting with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Senior U.S. officials have hinted they favored a postponement, even before the Baltic crackdown brought pressure from Congress for the president not to conduct business as usual with the Soviets.

Bessmertnykh, until two weeks ago the Soviet ambassador to Washington, on Saturday bluntly criticized the U.S.-led aerial bombardment of Iraq.

"There may be a danger of the conflict going more in the direction of the destruction of Iraq and more casualties on both sides," he said after his first meeting with Baker.

But Bessmertnykh added, "We are all in the same alliance and there is no difference in the basic approach between the United States and the Soviet Union."

Bush relied on Gorbachev for crucial support in the United Nations behind a dozen resolutions condemning Iraq, including the pivotal one that authorized force to drive Saddam Hussein's army from Kuwait.

But the Soviets have never committed any of their military forces to the anti-Iraq coalition. And some critics have suggested Bush was reluctant to react too strongly to the Baltic crackdown for fear of losing Soviet support against Iraq.

Bush is still weighing whether to impose economic sanctions against the Soviets over strong-arm tactics against the breakaway republics. In recent violence, 21 people have died in clashes with Red Army troops in the Lithuanian and Latvian capitals.

Two months ago, the United States gave the Soviets $1 billion in food credits to help avert starvation this winter. The Soviets have already tapped $800 million of those credits.

The proposed centerpiece of the Moscow summit would be a Strategic Arms Reduction treaty to cut each superpower's long-range nuclear arsenal by roughly 30 percent.

But U.S. officials have lingering concerns over Soviet compliance with the conventional arms pact that 34 nations signed in Paris in November.

year reduction of $13.6 billion, or 25 percent. Most of the reduction is in price support programs, Torgerson said.

As this protection is reduced, he said, farmers "are subjected more to the impacts and vagaries of unorchestrated decisions by other producers in a global context of what to produce and when."

Torgerson listed several challenges for farm cooperatives as a result of the changes in public policies:

- Maintaining financial integrity of their own operations to withstand ups and downs in the market.
- Using more group action to assure fair returns from the marketplace and to control their own destinies.
- Coordinating production with market demand to assure a use and home for their products.

"Agricultural producers are well equipped with an arsenal of group action tools that have been tested and proven over many years of operation," Torgerson wrote. "They include a cooperatively owned credit and farm supply distribution system on a par with any in the world, both farmer-owned."

Additionally, he said, the co-op structure includes agricultural bargaining associations that negotiate contracts with processors. Farm operators also have developed marketing cooperatives to provide better access to users.

"Agriculture continues to be a capital-intensive business," Torgerson said. "Producers need to assure themselves returns commensurate with their investment and management. Cooperatively owned businesses will be more in vogue if producers seize the opportunity open to them."

Base fertilizer decision on soil test

by GREG JONES

It's not too late to test soil samples to determine fertilizer needs for spring crops.

When farmers look for ways to reduce production costs, they often consider reducing fertilizer usage. But such a practice may result in yields too low to cover production costs.

A soil test may indicate that fertilizer is needed to attain a desired yield goal. Fertilizing at recommended rates will increase the probability of boosting yields enough to more than pay for the fertilizer and provide some margin of profit.

On the other hand, savings can also result when a soil test shows adequate levels of nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium or other necessary nutrients.

In either case, following soil test recommendations would effectively reduce the per-unit production costs and increase the chances of making a profit.

The Texas A&M Soil Testing Laboratories at College Station and Lubbock routinely analyze soils to determine the amount of available nitrogen present in the soil. This
