Iran's leader backs Iraqi revolt

(Iran President) Hashemi Rafsanjani said Iran would cooperate with Iraq only if Saddam and his Arab Baath Socialist Party surrender "to the will of the people."

(AP) Iran's leader today threw his support behind the rebels fighting Saddam Hussein, calling for the overthrow of the Iraqi leader and his party. Baghdad said it would free 40 foreign journalists and two more U.S. soldiers.

The U.S. military, for its part, announced plans today to repatriate more than 60,000 Iraqi POWs.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of Operation Desert Storm, said farewell today to some of his homeward-bound front-line troops. Speaking at a ceremony in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, he told the

1,700 members from the Army's VII Corps, "It's a great day to be a soldier."

A grimmer homecoming awaited the Iraqi POWs, whose repatriation is to begin Monday.

The uprising against Saddam was said to have spread to his capital, and the government said anyone involved is a "traitor" who will pay dearly.

The U.S. military command said today an agreement reached by allied and Iraqi officials on Thursday calls for several hundred Iraqis per day to be sent home by bus and truck from holding camps in northern Saudi Arabia.

The president of Iran, which proclaimed neutrality in the war, today declared his sympathy for the attempts to overthrow Saddam. Hashemi Rafsanjani said Iran would cooperate with Iraq only if Saddam and his Arab Baath Socialist Party surrender "to the will of the people."

Rafsanjani lambasted Saddam for trying to put down the rebellion. "Saddam is making a mistake while suppressing the people," Rafsanjani said. "This is the worst mistake."

The Iranian leader was addressing worshippers gathered at Tehran University for prayers. His comments, carried by Tehran Radio, were monitored in Cyprus.

It was the first time an Iranian leader has openly backed the revolt in Iraq, which has been blamed primarily on Shiite Muslims.

Shiites make up 55 percent of Iraq's 17 million population. They have long historical ties with Iran's predominantly Shiite population of

Protection theme of N-P&W program

Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home is sponsoring a program aimed at protecting children from potential abduction.

The primary objective of "Famous Prints" is to give parents a way to impress upon their children the importance of safety.

The police department is co-sponsoring the program and will fingerprint children from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. March 16 behind the Big Spring Police Department, 400 East Fourth St.

Terry Phillips of Nalley-Pickle & Welch writes, "The Famous Prints fingerprinting program is designed to help parents take aggressive measures against the serious problem of missing children. Over 150,000 U.S. children disappear each year."

Tommy Welch of Nalley-Pickle & Welch said, "Education can significantly lower the odds that kids will be abducted, and it's our hope that this fingerprinting program helps, too."

Art contest open to students

High school students in the 17th Congressional District of Texas are eligible to enter the 10th annual Art Contest, a nationwide competition that began in 1982 and has involved more than 250,000 students.

Students from Borden, Coke, Concho, Howard, Glasscock, Martin and Sterling counties in grades 9-12 are eligible to enter a preliminary contest, scheduled for judging in Big Spring on April 9 at 6 p.m. in the Big Spring High School foyer.

Winners from the 17th district will be announced at an awards brunch in Abilene, April 27. Charles Stenholm, 17th District representative, and his wife Cindy, will preside at the brunch.

One winning entry from each congressional district will be displayed in the U.S. Capitol, Washington, D.C., this summer.

Artwork must be no larger than 30 inches by 30 inches, unframed and two dimensional. Categories are paintings, prints, drawings or collages.

For more information or entry forms, contact Stenholm's office in Stamford, 915-773-3623, or Abilene, 915-673-7221, or Tom Adams in Big Spring at 267-7376 or 264-3641.

Jobless rate falls in February

DALLAS (AP) — The state jobless rate fell to 5.5 percent in February, down nearly a point from January and from February of 1990, the Labor Department said today.

Nic Santangelo, analyst in the Dallas office of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the drop is statistically significant but doesn't illustrate an economic change.

Service issues raised

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

As efforts to finish assigning addresses to telephone numbers for the county's emergency 911 service continue, more issues have been raised, such as operator training and how calls should be dispatched.

Sheriff deputies at a Howard County 911 Communications District board of directors meeting Thursday night outlined problems they have experienced on transferred 911 calls and said calls should be handled completely by a trained 911 operator and dispatched by that operator. Emergency calls should not be transferred to another agency, they said.

Issues began to surface following a problem by deputies in locating a woman being threatened by a knife a few weeks ago. The address received was wrong and incomplete. The woman was roughed up but apparently unharmed.

Records show that of 239 calls to 911 that were transferred to the sheriff's department since the system went on line in March 1990, there have been at least 19 incidents involving incomplete or wrong addresses. Three addresses are not known to exist and one was a vacant house. Efforts are underway to correct the problems.

As far as 911 operators dispatching calls to sheriff deputies for law enforcement help in the county, 911 Director Carl Dorton said, "I totally agree with that."

Sheriff A.N. Standard, contacted this morning, said, "I have said before and I am saying today that I encourage that if the system is going to work, it's got to work with a 911 operator that has no boundary lines in dispatching or handling calls." That would include dispatching emergency calls to deputies, but not transferring them to his office, he said.

Another complaint by deputies at the meeting concerned calls being transferred to the sheriff's department.

FORT STEWART, Ga. — Major Mark A. Milia holds his two daughters, Nadia, left, and Jessica as his son Sebastian looks on early Friday. Milia was with the first troops of the 24th Infantry to return home following the Gulf War.

Soldiers return home to cheers

(AP) The first large group of American soldiers from the Gulf War returned home today to cheers and tears in a jubilant scene destined to be repeated in the days and weeks ahead.

Thousands of people greeted the 105 members of the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) who returned from Saudi Arabia to Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah, Ga. Then, at nearby Fort Stewart, the soldiers hugged and kissed loved ones they had not seen in seven months — or in some cases, ever.

Spec. Robert Teague met his 4-month-old son, Sean, for the first time. It didn't take the 23-year-old father long to spot his first child; he'd carried a picture of the baby around for the last three months.

"There he is," Teague said as he pushed through the crowd. "He looks beautiful."

His wife, Wendy, told reporters as tears ran down her face: "I'm so relieved he's here, I don't know what to say."

Nearly 4,000 more U.S. soldiers were scheduled to return home today to bases in Texas, California, Maine, North Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky, Oklahoma and Louisiana. More flights were scheduled throughout the weekend.

More than 200 members of the 82nd Airborne Division returned to U.S. soil this morning with a refueling stop at Bangor, Maine, and were welcomed by a high school band, a cheering crowd and a free lobster roll breakfast.

"No sand!" exclaimed one soldier at Bangor International Airport. Another, Kevin Tillman of Rockford, Ill., borrowed a saxophone from the band and played a solo of the national anthem. The crowd sang along.

About 540,000 U.S. troops were sent to Saudi Arabia since August, and re-deploying them is expected to take several months. Thousands more allied troops will return to their home countries.

A C-141 flying a U.S. flag atop its fuselage brought the 24th Infantry soldiers back to the same hangar they'd departed from in August. A huge banner said "Welcome Home Heroes."

"I can't tell you how good it feels. I'm from the Vietnam era, and that says it all. These guys are heroes," said Sgt. Maj. Gerald Jones, who helped prepare for the homecoming.

A band played and the crowd cheered wildly as the plane touched down.

The troops, some carrying small American flags, filed out of the plane slowly. One soldier kissed the ground.

The division's brigadier general, Terry Scott, spoke to the crowd briefly.

Firm unveils plans for halfway house

By GARY SHANKS

If federal approval is given, a new, halfway house could bring as much as $1 million and 30 new jobs to Big Spring.

Residential Centers Inc. submitted a proposal to the U.S. Department of Justice today, requesting permission to establish an alternative correctional facility at what is now the American Motor Inn, 804 North I-20. The department's decision is expected no later than April

"We are going to be injecting a lot of money into the Big Spring economy. All of the staff, including the executive director of the center, will come from Big Spring,"

Gene Easley

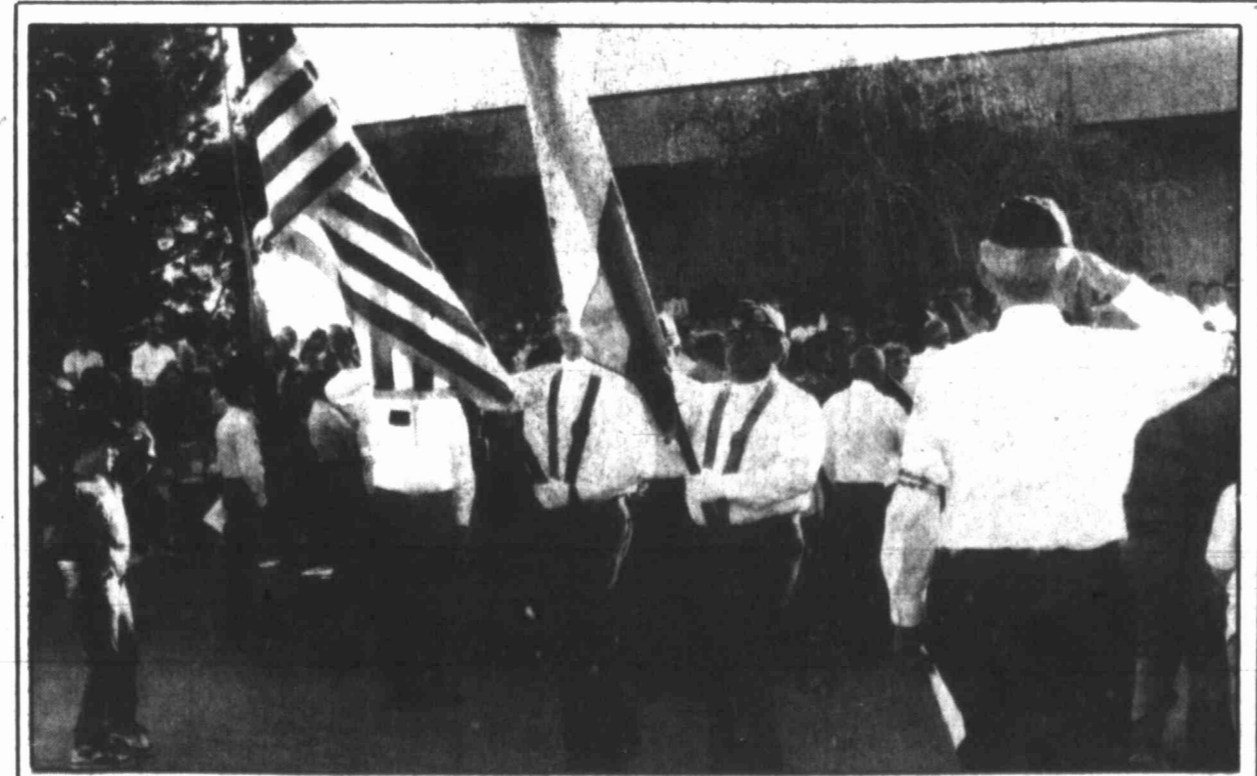

17. Gene Easley of RCI explained that violent criminals will not be eligible for the halfway house. Ac-ording to the proposal to the Department of Justice, "The following categories of individuals SHALL NOT be considered for acceptance into the center:

- Persons with a long or serious history of resorting to violence, with or without a weapon involved.
- Persons with a history of deviant sexual behavior, a history of sexual assault or sexual violence.
- Persons who are severely retarded or have been diagnosed as acutely psychotic.
- Persons whose backgrounds indicate any degree of sociopathic behavior.

Settles' renovation proposed by BSMS

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A proposed move to put the fate of the historic Hotel Settles into the hands of Big Spring Main Street Inc. received favorable comments from members of the county's tax liaison committee Thursday.

Renovating the 15-story hotel, which opened in 1930 and for decades was touted to be the tallest building between Fort Worth and El Paso, would probably save taxpayers up to $500,000 in demolition costs, said BSMS Chairman Richard Atkins at a noon meeting of the committee in the Howard County courtroom.

But if, in a couple years, the BSMS cannot develop a plan for renovation — which is estimated to cost more than $3 million — Atkins said the group will recommend it be destroyed.

He said they have a better chance of receiving grants or seeking another owner if foreclosure is forced on Cuadra Manufactured

Housing Inc., San Antonio, the hotel's current owners. The hotel would be sold at a sheriff's sale, which would be followed by a two-year redemption period when the owner can buy the property back.

"Hopefully, at the end of two years, Big Spring Main Street Inc. can hand you a plan of what can be done with that building. If not, then we recommend demolition," Atkins said.

If there is no buyer at the sale, then the city, county and the Big Spring and college school districts would claim the title and could face paying $250,000 to $300,000 for demolition if nothing can be done with the building, according to an estimate Atkins received. Liaison committee members concurred that it would cost about the same for asbestos removal.

Also, $151,822 in back taxes, penalties and attorney fees would be written off.

However, Drew Mouton, the

Governor seeks federal loans

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) — Killeen, which bore significant economic losses when troops from nearby Fort Hood were deployed to Saudi Arabia, has become too dependent on the defense industry, Gov. Ann Richards says.

"Now, just like we learned in the state of Texas that we cannot be a one-industry state, this area has learned that it cannot be a one-industry town," she said.

Gov. Richards said Thursday she has asked the federal government for $500,000 in loans for small and minority-owned businesses in areas affected by base reductions.

Richards said Killeen had 13 percent unemployment since the deployments and 10 percent before the deployments.

But the Fort Hood area still must deal with the reality that half of the 24,000 troops sent from here to the Persian Gulf will be reassigned after they return, Richards said.

Parkland reacts to infant deaths

DALLAS (AP) — A Parkland Memorial Hospital pharmacist technician has been fired and a staff pharmacist transferred following the drug overdose deaths of two infants.

The baby boys, ages 4½ weeks and 7 weeks died Feb. 16 after an undiluted antibiotic, amphotericin-B, was administered to them.

Parkland officials declined to identify either the two employees or the infants. The pharmacist has been transferred to handle administrative duties, said Esther Bauer, Parkland spokeswoman.

Hospital officials said they did not fire the pharmacist because he is a new employee still serving a trial period.

The hospital is also modifying the way it mixes drugs for children, to prevent future incidents.

Republicans blast Bullock income tax push

AUSTIN (AP) — If a politician votes to create a state income tax, is he committing political suicide?

"I hope so," says Jack Rains, former GOP gubernatorial candidate.

Rains and other Republicans are blasting Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock's income tax push, charging that the deck is stacked for a special study committee to recommend the controversial levy.

"It's the same old tax-and-spend, tax-and-spend, with no interest in efficiency in government," state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer said Thursday.

Rains and another former GOP gubernatorial hopeful, Kent Hance, predicted that Democratic Gov. Ann Richards' special tax task force would recommend the income tax.

"They will come back and say, 'We don't like it but this state needs an income tax,'" Rains said.

"There's one absolute truth that never changes: government will expand and spend every nickel they can lay their hands on."

Hance, who based his unsuccessful 1990 campaign on an anti-income tax pledge, agreed.

"There's going to be tremendous pressure for an income tax. Just look at that committee... I feel confident they are going to come out for an income tax," Hance said.

Richards' staff denied the charge.

Gubernatorial press secretary Bill Cryer said the task force will conduct an objective review of all state taxes and fees — with no predetermined course of action. The panel is to report by July 1.

"With (Republican) John Connally as chairman, and business leaders and local officials on that committee, I think it is probably the most balanced group you could find," Cryer said.

"Their charge is very straightforward. There is no hidden agenda," he said.

Bullock, a Democrat, stunned many legislators by declaring that he would lead a campaign to create both personal and corporate income taxes.

He proposed a 5 percent personal income tax and an 8 percent corporate levy that would raise about $8 billion in 1992-93. He said the levy should be accompanied by rollbacks in school property taxes and repeal of the corporate franchise tax.

Bullock contends that income taxes are the only option pay for court-ordered school finance reform, more prisons and added welfare services, because the state sales tax already is among the nation's highest.

His bombshell drew harsh criticism from Republicans, and less-than-enthusiastic responses from some fellow Democrats.

Reaction from members of the Democratic-controlled Texas House? "Luke-cold," said Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

House GOP Caucus leader Tom Craddick, R-Midland, said lawmakers reflect the voters' sentiments.

"I would say 85 percent of the members of the Texas House are opposed to it," Craddick said.

"(The public) wants to see a slowdown in the growth of government and some cuts and trying to live within our means, like they're having to do."

Lewis predicted there would be a series of tax proposals.

AUSTIN — House GOP caucus leader Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, confers with colleagues on the House floor Thursday. Craddick is opposed to a state income tax, saying that spending cuts and slowing growth in spending are better alternatives.

Board expels student

PHARR (AP) — A school board has voted not to allow an exception to the dress code for a 4-year-old boy whose parents say they would not cut his hair until they are certain he is free of cancer.

Attorneys said Thursday night's school board vote cleared the way for federal courts to decide the issue involving Joshua Garcia's shoulder-length hair.

Until a lawsuit filed last month against the district is resolved, the vote means that as of today, he will not be admitted to class until his hair is shortened.

Board members cited a need to maintain classroom discipline when they voted against the exception sought by Joshua's mother, Sandra Garcia.

"We have decided tonight that he has to cut his hair," Jaime Ruiz, president of the Pharr-San Juan-Alamo Independent School District board, said Thursday night.

The only dissenting vote came from board member Robert Contreras. Contreras questioned why the district should expel the boy in the middle of the school year when his hair has violated the dress code since the beginning of the school year.

The boy's mother said she would not take the boy back to school unless he is allowed to attend with his hair uncut.

"I'm not going to take him and have them refuse him in front of him," Mrs. Garcia said after the meeting at which she appealed for the exception.

The district's dress code prohibits male students' hair from falling below the collar.

Several secondary school principals at the meeting spoke in favor of strict enforcement of the dress code, beginning in the early grades. They said the code created in 1987 has helped reduce disruptive gang activity in the district.

"It leads to discipline," junior high school Principal Eleazar Romero told the board.

"Without discipline, you cannot have any learning take place."

International news media were to be in town for the homecomings, radio stations planned to broadcast live and post officials are expected a huge turnout.

"I hope (it will be) a flag-waving, exciting demonstration of how glad everyone is that they're coming home and that they came home as heroes," Jean Offutt, post spokeswoman, said. "I expect that there will be a lot of emotion from the families and a lot from the community, because Fort Bliss means a lot to the civilian community."

Among the returning troops will be Patriot crew members, who basked in the success of the weapon that blasted Iraqi Scud missiles. Back home, the soldiers

Fort Bliss troops expected home Friday

FORT BLISS (AP) — It's the news this town's been waiting for.

The first of more than 10,000 soldiers sent to the Persian Gulf for Operation Desert Storm were scheduled to come home today.

The Pentagon said Thursday that 300 soldiers from the 11th Air Defense Artillery were scheduled to arrive at Biggs Army Airfield at 4:51 p.m. MST.

International news media were to be in town for the homecomings, radio stations planned to broadcast live and post officials are expected a huge turnout.

"I hope (it will be) a flag-waving, exciting demonstration of how glad everyone is that they're coming home and that they came home as heroes," Jean Offutt, post spokeswoman, said. "I expect that there will be a lot of emotion from the families and a lot from the community, because Fort Bliss means a lot to the civilian community."

Among the returning troops will be Patriot crew members, who basked in the success of the weapon that blasted Iraqi Scud missiles. Back home, the soldiers already were going up at Biggs and around El Paso in anticipation of the troops' arrival.

The soldiers were to arrive on a Boeing 747 to the patriotic tunes of the 62nd Army Band, a patriotic show from a Fort Bliss troupe and the joyous cheers of families, friends and supporters.

"I'll know that my husband is probably here's a 99 percent chance he's on that plane coming in, but we won't know for sure until this afternoon," said Diane Valencia, support group leader for the 507th, an element of the 11th ADA.

Mrs. Valencia said her teenagers planned to greet their father, Jimmy, in their ROTC uniforms and to hold up posters they made.

"We have three huge trees out in the yard, we're tying red, white and blue ribbons on one tree and yellow ribbons on other tree," she said.

"We're preparing. We're climbing ladders and tying bows."

She said her husband has already put in his dinner order: beer and Mexican food.

The homecoming will be the first of about six months of special activities planned for the returning soldiers.

When the soldiers deplane, they'll be given packages containing coupons for free or discounted items at area businesses, said Wes Jurey, Chamber of Commerce executive director. The chamber also arranged for a motorcycle escort for buses taking the soldiers to Fort Bliss.

But Jurey said the chamber is planning activities for Armed Forces Day, May 18; Flag Day, June 14; and the Fourth of July.

"With the large number of troops coming back to Fort Bliss, in excess of 10,000, they won't all still be here by the Fourth of July.

"I hope (it will be) a flag-waving, exciting demonstration of how glad everyone is that they're coming home and that they came home as heroes. I expect that there will be a lot of emotion from the families and a lot from the civilian community."

Chief wants assault charges filed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The police chief wants felony assault charges filed against three officers whom a bystander videotaped beating a motorist. Daryl Gates hopes people won't lose faith in his police force.

The incident is under federal and local investigation and brought calls for the chief to resign. But Gates said he won't quit and Mayor Tom Bradley, who has voiced outrage over the beating, said he's satisfied by the department's response so far.

The three officers likely to face charges and their sergeant, present during the beating, were relieved of their duties.

Bystander George Holliday shot the video of Rodney King's beating Sunday while trying out a new camera. It showed several officers repeatedly clubbing and kicking King, who had been stopped for speeding, and King pleading for mercy.

"You've got a lot of police officers out there whose morale has been harmed seriously by this," Gates said at a news conference. "They look at those tapes too. They are outraged, as you are."

"Unfortunately, we are painting 8,300 additional officers with this broad brush," Gates said. "They do not deserve to be painted with this brush."

Don't go wobbly

WASHINGTON — President and Mrs. Bush escort former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher from the East Room of the White House Thursday after presenting her with the Presidential Medal of Freedom. Bush told the gathering of some words of advice from Thatcher during the Persian Gulf crisis. "Remember, George," she said, "this is no time to go wobbly."

Judge holds up Exxon settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government must hold up settling civil claims over the Exxon Valdez oil spill until a federal judge considers a challenge by five native Alaskan villages.

U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin issued a temporary restraining order Thursday, saying he wanted to make sure any settlement protects the native Alaskans' rights.

The government and Exxon apparently are close to settlement on civil claims over the massive March 1989 oil spill in Prince William Sound. Sporkin's order directs the federal and Alaska state governments not to sign any agreement before Monday, when he plans a hearing on the villages' lawsuit.

The native Alaskans said the government has barred them from joining the negotiations and they fear it may be preparing to give away some of their rights. Federal law gives the villages the right "to subsist off the natural resources of their ancestral lands," their lawsuit said.

However, government attorney Letitia Grishaw told Sporkin at a hearing that because no settlement has yet been reached, "it's totally inappropriate to presume that the government would attempt to compromise private parties' rights."

Secretary says no drought bailout

EDWARD MADIGAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward Madigan, the newly confirmed agriculture secretary, says California farmers hurt by drought should not look to Congress for a bailout.

"It would be very difficult to say some years you're going to help people and other years you're not going to," Madigan said Thursday in reference to previous drought relief laws.

"But the Farmers Home Administration has a number of programs... from everything like five-year loans at very low rates of interest to assistance while replanting orchards," he said.

Madigan met reporters after the Senate confirmed him for the nation's top farm job in a 99-0 vote Thursday. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., was absent for the vote.

The Illinois Republican has spent 18 years in Congress.

Researchers say coffee affects blood pressure

ATLANTA (AP) — Kicking the coffee habit might be good advice for people with high blood pressure, the authors of a new report say.

The researchers studied men with normal blood pressure, but the findings suggest that eliminating coffee drinking could be an important way to help treat high blood pressure, the researchers said. They presented their findings Thursday at the annual meeting of the American College of Cardiology.

"Maybe this will help them prevent drug treatment" for high blood pressure, said the study's principal author, Jeff Myll of Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif. "It's worth a try."

The researchers reported that healthy men who customarily drank three to six cups of coffee a day experienced a significant drop in blood pressure when they stopped drinking coffee.

The National Coffee Association said that the drop in blood pressure was small and that other studies have shown coffee has no effect on blood pressure.

"This study should not raise concern among coffee drinkers watching their blood pressure," the association said in a statement.

Dr. Robert Superko, a colleague of Myll's, said the fall in blood pressure was significant, and that it varied among study subjects.

"There are some people who went down profoundly," he said.

Many previous studies that found no effect of coffee on blood pressure looked at too few patients to demonstrate any effect, he said.

The new study involved 120 healthy men whose median age was 45. They were given three to six cups of coffee daily for eight weeks; then half were taken off coffee.

When researchers compared the coffee drinkers with the non-coffee drinkers, they found a difference of 5 points in systolic blood pressure — when the heart is pumping — and a difference of about 3 points in diastolic pressure — when the heart is relaxed between beats.

The patients wore a device that measured their blood pressure and recorded readings every half hour throughout the day, the researchers said.

This provides a more accurate assessment of coffee's effect on blood pressure, they said.

Israeli retaliation plan revealed

NEW YORK (AP) — When Iraq first attacked Israel with Scuds on Jan. 18, Israel planned to retaliate with a major ground-air combat mission into western Iraq to destroy the missile launchers, The New York Times reported Thursday.

The plan was never initiated because of U.S. pressure on Israel to stay out of the war, the dispatching of Patriot missiles to Israel and the deployment of U.S. special forces in western Iraq to find the launchers, the Times said.

The account is the first detailed description of the intensity and scale of the Israeli plan to retaliate against Iraq.

The plan called for an Israeli armed sweep of several days through western Iraq with helicopter gunships and commando teams, all protected by Israeli Air Force planes that would have secured an air corridor over Jordan or Saudi Arabia to support the forces, unidentified U.S. officials told the newspaper.

Israeli troops would have attacked the fixed Scud sites while helicopters and commandos conducted search-and-destroy missions against mobile launchers.

Israeli warplanes would have flown strike and reconnaissance missions, the report said.

Major's party defeated in district

LONDON (AP) — Turning their attention from wartime victory to domestic gripes, voters in an English district handed Prime Minister John Major a stunning defeat in his first electoral test, final tallies showed today.

The Liberal Democratic Party, a centrist group, captured the north England district of Ribblesdale Valley by 4,601 votes in Thursday's special election, the first since Major succeeded Margaret Thatcher last November.

The party's victory in Ribblesdale Valley, a stronghold of the governing Conservatives, was seen as a protest against local taxation in the prosperous, mainly rural area.

The vote, which came coincidentally on Major's 100th day in office, marked the Tories' worst special election upset in more than a decade. It overshadowed Major's strong popularity ratings during the war and dampened speculation he will call an election in June, a year before the deadline.

However, in his first public reaction, Major said today it is impossible to "draw any conclusions" from the vote.

Albania given conflicting advice

ALBANIAN REFUGEES REACH ITALY

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Albania today faced a demand from Italy to staunch the flow of thousands of would-be emigrants, and another from a Yugoslav republic to let citizens flee.

A day earlier, the Communist government ordered the military to take control of the main ports including Durres, where thousands of people in recent days have commandeered ships and sailed to Italy.

Officials in Rome said Thursday 17,000 people had made the 50-mile voyage across the Adriatic to southern Italian ports since last week. Yugoslav officials said 550 people had crossed from Albania into Yugoslavia.

Albania is Europe's last hard-line Communist holdout. Refugees have little faith in the country's first multiparty elections — set for March 31 — will improve the backward economy.

Seeing parks on big screen

A little girl we know was once rebuked for burying her head in a picture book while riding through winding valleys and sun-dappled forests. "The scenery — you're missing all this beautiful scenery!" chided her mother. "Scenery's all right," sniffed the child, "as long as I don't have to look at it."

What would our smart-alecky friend, now grown, make of the latest inventions in scenery? We refer to plans by a California company to install a wraparound movie screen, motel and retail complex on the edge of Utah's Zion National Park. Tourists could "visit" the park on the big screen (and presumably stock up on souvenirs) without ever setting foot in the real thing.

The idea isn't new. Similar projects overlook the Grand Canyon, the Alamo and Niagara Falls. As advocates point out, such vicarious trips prevent wear and tear on national treasures.

Perhaps. But as the movie complexes proliferate, they could blot out views of the parks — a case of art obliterating life. Why not put these cinema spectaculars in major cities? "Visit Milwaukee — and see the Grand Canyon."

Keating five decision provides little guidance

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the final Senate verdict is rendered in what's left of the Keating Five case, it will leave unanswered the ethical riddle raised by two realities of Congress: favors and fund raising.

That's a problem for those who sit in judgment in congressional conduct cases as well as for those being judged.

Even with the big dollars and the heavy-handed intercession that figured in the Keating Five case, the Senate Ethics Committee found evidence to warrant possible Senate censure against only one man, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who is ailing and has announced he won't seek re-election next year.

The other four were chastised, and their cases closed. Any further action on those senators will come at the hands of constituents, not colleagues.

Part of the problem in this case, as in most that have gone before, is the absence of written rules to govern the conduct of senators.

The ethics committee said it found general guidelines for intervention with federal agencies — in this case, savings and loan regulators — but said those standards were "unknown to many senators."

So the committee recommended that a special task force or the Senate Rules Committee write regulations guiding how senators should intercede with federal regulators or other government officials in performing "constituent service." That means going to bat for an individual who has a problem with a government agency.

The individual in this case was Charles J. Keating Jr., who sought and got help from the five senators in his dispute with regulators over his savings and loan operations, which eventually failed with bailout costs estimated at $2 billion.

Keating and his associates had donated $1.3 million to the senators' campaigns and causes. He said he certainly hoped his financial backing had led them to take up his cause.

At the opening of the ethics committee's two-month hearing on the case, Robert S. Bennett, special counsel to the panel, said its findings would provide guidance on the proper limits of constituent service.

Perhaps so, but it certainly is murky guidance.

The committee found that Cranston may have violated

Capitol report

Senate rules with an "impermissible pattern of conduct in which fund raising and official activities were substantially linked."

Two other Democrats, Dennis DeConcini of Arizona and Donald W. Riegle Jr. of Michigan, were rebuked for involvement that "gave the appearance of being improper and was certainly attended with insensitivity and poor judgment." Sens. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and John McCain, R-Ariz., were scolded more mildly, for poor judgment.

Glenn and McCain will be up for re-election in 1992, DeConcini and Riegle two years later. All will have to deal with the political fallout of the ethics case, an issue that has hurt them in home-state opinion polls, and one likely to persist along with savings and loan bailout costs.

After 14 months of investigations, public hearings and private committee deliberations, there's still no clear guide for the senator who gets a call for help from a constituent who also is a donor.

"At the same time that constituent service demands on members have increased, the cost of election, the cost of running campaigns has skyrocketed," Bennett said when the hearings began on Nov. 15. "More and more constituents are requesting the assistance of their congressmen at the same time that those congressmen must ask more and more of the same constituents for campaign contributions."

"I ask you this: how can our system of government maintain the appearance and the reality of integrity as these trends continue?" Bennett said then.

That stands, unanswered.

Congress never has had much success in writing clear ethical codes, or enforcing them. Compromise is essential, almost instinctive. While it is vital in legislating, it can be a liability when the task is one of judging conduct.

Hence the muffled verdict on the Keating Five, and the current Washington "good news-bad news" wisecrack:

The good news is that Saddam Hussein will be tried for war crimes.

The bad news is that he's being judged by the Senate Ethics Committee.

I'm plainly not afraid of planes

Barbara Bush made news recently when she took a commercial flight from Washington. What made it news was that Barbara Bush is, of course, wife to our president, and she could have had her husband's plane fly her with all the security that goes with it.

Mrs. Bush's reason for flying commercial was she wanted to show Americans she wasn't afraid of terrorists in the sky and the rest of us shouldn't be either.

I'm just afraid of terrorists blowing up an airplane in which I'm a passenger as a means of gaining revenge for the war in the gulf as the next American.

But if Barbara Bush could do it, so could I. Yes, I also flew commercial recently.

The reason you're hearing about it here and not on any of the networks is I'm no relation to the president, and I don't have my own plane.

Still I think it's a little newsworthy that I did it. I could have taken the bus. As far as I know no American bus has ever been bothered by terrorists from other countries.

During the Greyhound strike disgruntled employees did shoot at buses, but they were all Americans simply exercising their God-given right to bear arms and shoot at things that move.

I must admit, however, I didn't fly coach as Mrs. Bush did. I got one of those frequent flyer upgrades and sat in first class where it's easier to get extra

"I know people worry about the terrorism threat, but with the sky less crowded because of all the cancellations, it might actually be SAFER to fly!"

peanuts.

Plus, I figured if terrorists were aboard my flight, they'd probably be sitting in coach, and might not notice me if they decided to start shooting hostages.

It would be less difficult to conceal a bazooka or a scud launcher in coach and nobody on a mission from Allah would care about extra peanuts anyway.

I flew from the East Coast to the West Coast and back to the East Coast again and we didn't experience a single instance of terrorism either way — if you discount a baby that cried from somewhere over Arkansas to Los Angeles.

That's not to say it wasn't obvious the airlines are taking more security measures due to the threat of terrorists.

"Just to be on the safe side," said one of my pilots, "I'm going to leave the seat belt sign on during the entire flight."

A terrorist strapped in his or her seat can't do a lot of terrorizing was the reason for that.

Also, the flight attendants reminded us that "In the unlikely event of a terrorist attack, your seat cushion can be used to hide under."

The only time I was nervous about a possible terrorist attack was when they handed out the hot towels just before landing, and the guy sitting in the row next to me put his on his head.

He turned out to be a guy with a bad hangover.

My point is the same as Barbara Bush's. We Americans simply can't be held hostage by the threat of terrorists.

We must go about our lives as we did before the war.

Next, I'm going to try to go an entire week without watching CNN.

Before the war, the only face I recognized on CNN was Jim Huber's, the sports guy.

Now, I'm suffering from Peter Arnetophobia, the fear that one day I'll turn on my television to find he's been replaced by Dick Vitale.

The writer's art

Looking for the right word

Sometimes we try too hard, and sometimes, like Homer, we nod. Those are the only explanations that come readily to mind in browsing through a file of clippings labeled "Wrong Word!"

Back in October, the Port Arthur (Texas) News carried a story about a change in local election laws. The change drew "venomous protests" from Jefferson County Republican leaders. But as the story made clear, the GOP protests may have been vigorous, and they may have been vehement, but they plainly were not "venomous." How did the word slip in?

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer noted in January that residents of the city's Capitol Hill area "once again are being plagued by an old nemesis, muggings." This was a mistaken application of a useful allusion. My dictionary of classical allusions, published by Facts on File, identifies Nemesis, the goddess of vengeance, as the daughter of Erebus (hell) and Nyx (night). In contemporary usage, a nemesis is a persistent, formidable, usually victorious rival who exacts some form of retribution. A mugger doesn't qualify.

Thinking of classical allusions: In December the St. Augustine (Fla.) Record carried a feature story on "party line" telephone conversations among strangers. Some participants are bold; many are shy. "One caller gets brave and crosses the rubiconud." Crosses the what? In 49 B.C., so the story goes, Julius Caesar defied the Roman Senate by crossing over the boundary between Italy and Gaul. He crossed the Rubicon River. Allusions are splendid devices, but let us allude with care.

On the morning of Superbowl XXV, a sportswriter for the Charleston (S.C.) News & Courier had words of praise for the Giants' quarterback Jeff Hostetler. He is a "career backup jettisoned to instant celebrity by Phil Simms' season-ending foot injury." Jettisoned? It's a fine word, dating from 1850 or thereabouts, but it means "to discard; to cast off as superfluous." That wasn't what happened to Hostetler.

In Texas, a writer for the Cox News Service reported a sharp decline in the number of court cases involving illegal hunting. A headline read: "Game violation cases soaring downward." How can you soar downward?

Remember Howard Cosell? He loved the word "plethora" and worked it overtime. He came to mind a few months ago as I was reading a letter to the editor of the Bloomington (Ind.) Herald-Times. "Ms. Williams is obviously experiencing a plethora of distress over a previous letter..." To determine public attitudes, reporters should ask "a plethora of people" how they feel about homosexuality. The word is offensive "to a plethora of the population."

The writer was trying too hard. "Plethora" comes from a Greek word meaning "fullness." In ordinary usage (as distinguished from medical usage, where "plethora" has a specific meaning), a plethora is simply an excess, a superabundance. Houston has a plethora of office buildings.

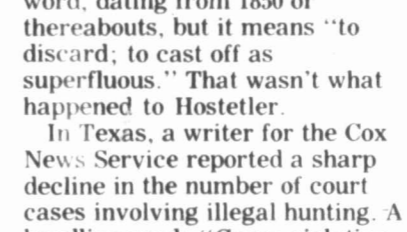

An open primary election is likely to have a plethora of candidates. The writer who insists on using $10 words ought to use them at a discount.

This would have been sound advice for an Associated Press writer who worked up an article in November on animal rights activists and their crusade against fur coats. Organizers of a Fur Free Friday say their work "has put a palatable dent in sales." Maybe the writer meant an agreeable, pleasant, enjoyable dent in sales, but one can't be sure. A palpable dent? A perceptible dent? Hard to say.

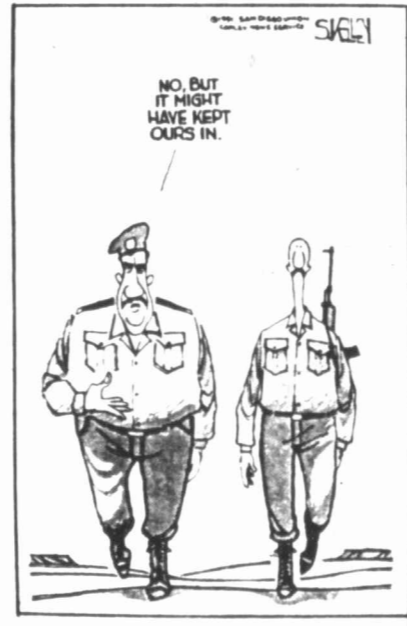

James Holderman resigned last summer as president of the University of South Carolina. The Columbia State reported that the university's programs would continue nonetheless. "The university's inertia should not be slowed." Good for the school! But how does one slow inertia?

Good writers cherish good words, i.e., words that have precise meanings. One such word is "alibi." Last summer a writer for the San Francisco Examiner said that Cincinnati's Pete Rose "can't alibi himself" by saying it was too hard to stay away from gambling. We ought not to abuse "alibi" in this fashion. Yes, I know that dictionaries give "excuse" as a synonym for alibi, but lexicographers do all kinds of things they have no business doing. An alibi is a plea of having been somewhere else at the time an act was committed.

You will understand that I am not condemning long words, exotic words, foreign words or words that give a writer pleasure. To borrow from Mr. Browning, all I am suggesting is that when we veach for an unusual word, let us not reach too far beyond our grasp.

Letters

Letters to the editor on issues of general interest always are welcomed by the Big Spring Herald and always are printed if these guidelines are followed:

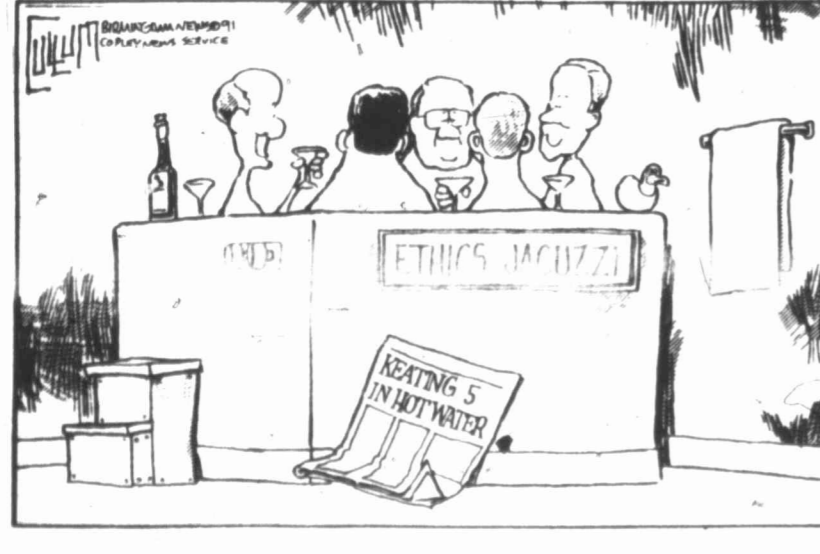

Letters should be 350 words or less, typewritten if possible, and double spaced. If not, the handwriting must be legible to reduce chances for mistakes. They are subject to editing, but the essence of the writer's message will not be altered. Letters exceeding the 350-word limit will be cut.

They must be signed, free of libelous statements and in good taste. Political endorsements won't be accepted during a campaign; candidates are allowed a single letter during a campaign. Letters listing numerous donors to projects are not published.

Please write your name and address on the letter and include a daytime phone number for verification. Letters submitted without signatures won't be published.

Doctor reports participating in suicide

BOSTON (AP) — A doctor prescribed sleeping pills for a cancer patient so she could kill herself, then recounted the suicide in an extraordinary signed article that troubled some physicians and impressed others.

The case is the latest in a series of incidents in which doctors have participated to varying degrees in the deaths of patients, but rarely have doctors openly described such participation.

In the essay in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Timothy E. Quill of the University of Rochester described how he prescribed sleeping pills, and told the patient how many she needed to kill herself, when she could no longer stand the pain of her acute myelomonocytic leukemia and wanted to die.

Several experts said Quill acted both legally and ethically.

"From my point of view, this story comes as close as I can imagine to a morally defensible role for a physician in the suicide of a patient," said Arthur Caplan, a bioethicist at the University of Minnesota.

However, Dr. Nancy Dickey, a trustee of the American Medical Association, said that while Quill did not illegally assist in the suicide, she was troubled by even this much involvement.

"We don't get to choose the moment of our arrival into this world, and I don't believe we have the right to choose the moment of our departure," she said. "The AMA suggests that physicians will not assist in achieving that goal."

Quill said he told the story of his patient, whom he identified only as Diane, to bring the discussion of death and suffering into the open.

"We can't do that without talking about real examples," he said in an interview. "I hope this will cause doctors who take care of severely ill patients to think seriously about what they do and how they handle these situations."

In his essay, Quill said he told Diane, his patient of eight years, that she had a 1-in-4 chance of surviving chemotherapy and bone marrow transplantation and gaining a long term cure.

But she refused such a course of treatment because "she was convinced she would die during the period of treatment and would suffer unacceptably in the process."

Diane wanted to be in control of her life and her dignity, Quill wrote. "When this was no longer possible, she clearly wanted to die," he said.

At Diane's request, and after he was sure she understood her decision, Quill prescribed barbiturates and told her how to use them.

"I wrote the prescription with an uneasy feeling about the boundaries I was exploring — spiritual, legal, professional and personal," Quill wrote.

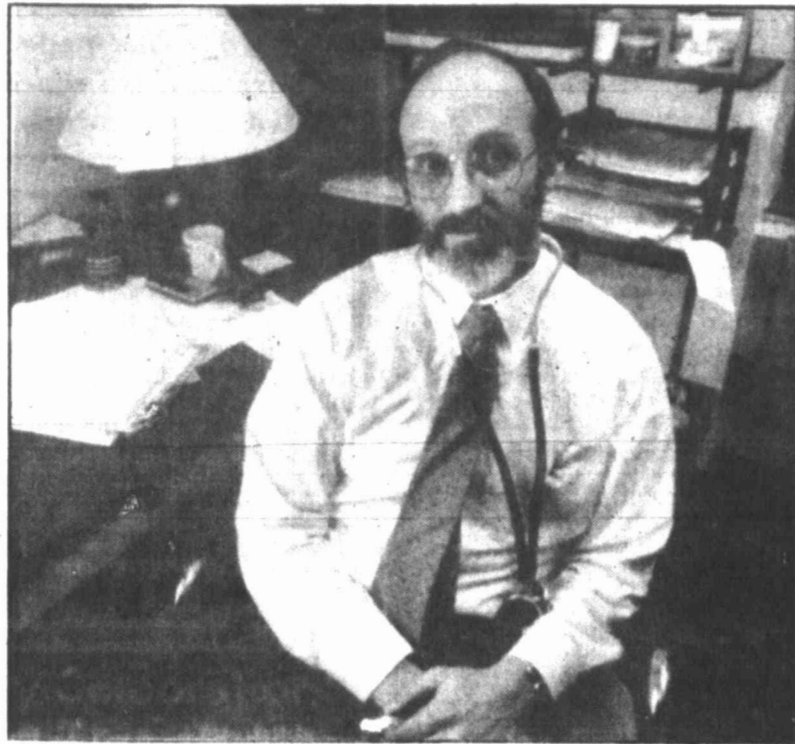

"Yet I also felt strongly that I was setting her free to get the most out of the time she had left and to maintain dignity and control on her own terms until her death."

After several months of spending as much time as possible with her husband and son, pain began to dominate Diane's life. About a year ago, at age 45, she took the pills and died at home.

Quill told the medical examiner Diane died of leukemia rather than suicide, which would have prompted a police investigation.

After learning of the article, Howard R. Relin, the district attorney in Monroe County, N.Y., said he would investigate.

Three years ago in the Journal of the American Medical Association,

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Dr. Timothy Quill sits in his office in Rochester, N.Y., Wednesday. An article by Quill about his decision to help a terminally ill leukemia patient commit suicide by writing her a prescription for sleeping pills appeared in the March 7 issue of The New England Journal of Medicine.

a doctor wrote an anonymous and controversial article describing how he gave a lethal injection of morphine to a suffering cancer patient he did not know.

Last year, a Michigan doctor hooked an Alzheimer's victim to a machine he invented that let her give herself a fatal injection with the press of a button. He was charged with murder, but a judge dismissed the case.

Medical and legal experts cited several differences in Quill's case: He had a long relationship with the patient, he had urged her to receive standard care and he was not with her when she died.

"I don't see any technical kind of legal wrong in Tim Quill's conduct, and I certainly don't see any professional ethic that has been violated," said Dr. Jane Greenlaw, who teaches health care law at the University of Rochester.

George Annas, a medical legal expert at Boston University School of Medicine, agreed: "I want this guy as my doctor. The vast majority of people in the United States would want somebody like this."

Pledge to flag does not violate the Constitution

CHICAGO (AP) — A judge upheld a state law requiring elementary school pupils to recite the Pledge of Allegiance, dismissing a lawsuit by an atheist who argued that the phrase "one nation under God" violated the Constitution.

Robert Sherman, national spokesman for American Atheists, sued a school district in the Chicago suburb of Wheeling, its superintendent, a school principal and the state attorney general on behalf of his son, Richard.

The lawsuit said pledging allegiance to "one nation under God" violated the First Amendment right to freedom of expression.

Dismissing the claim last week, U.S. District Judge Ann Williams wrote that reciting the pledge is "rationally related to the legitimate state interest of instilling knowledge of and appreciation for patriotic values in public school students."

The law does not force Sherman's son to participate because it contains no penalty for refusing to comply, Williams ruled. She cited precedents holding that singing the national anthem and using the motto "In God We Trust" on money do not violate the Constitution.

Descendants of slave and slaveholder meet

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A descendant of slaves and their owner's great-great-grandson met for the first time and caught up on their shared history.

Hugh Gordon and Jonathan Wafer hugged each other and shook hands last week before exchanging written histories of the white Gordons of Georgia and the black Gordons, whose former slave ancestors came to California.

A mutual friend, San Francisco Examiner columnist Noah Griffin, brought them together.

The meeting resulted from sheer serendipity, said Griffin, recalling the day he realized the two men had someone in common in their backgrounds: Confederate Gen. John B. Gordon.

"What are the chances of talking to the descendant of Georgia slaves in the morning and a descendant of their owners in the afternoon — 2,300 miles and 140 years away?" Griffin mused.

As it happens, both the descendants of the general and of his slaves were moving on parallel tracks tracing their ancestry.

Hugh Gordon, 48, a stockbroker from Piedmont whose family came to the San Francisco Bay area after World War II, said his father began researching his heritage 30 years ago.

Jonathan Wafer, 28, a paralegal from Berkeley, was a student at the University of California at Berkeley when he began to investigate the story of his great-grandfather, Walter Gordon. Wafer's most illustrious forebear was an All-American football player at UC-Berkeley, from which he was graduated in 1918.

It was at a library that Wafer discovered John Gordon, the general, had owned Walter Gordon's grandfather. Thus the family name.

Incentive for organ donations suggested

The proposals, made at a conference last week in New Orleans, are aimed at increasing the supply of donated organs, which falls far short of demand.

NEW YORK (AP) — Families who donate a deceased relative's organs should be reimbursed for burial expenses, a group of transplant experts recommends.

If a person declares a decision to donate his own organs upon death, the same amount of money should be paid instead of his estate or a beneficiary, the experts said.

The proposals, made at a conference last week in New Orleans, are aimed at increasing the supply of donated organs, which falls far short of demand. The experts didn't decide who should make the payments, however.

The conference was sponsored by the National Kidney Foundation and an advisory board of the National Institutes of Health. Participants included transplant coordinators, surgeons and doctors, ethicists, attorneys, organ recipients and representatives of the federal government.

The goal was to produce consensus statements that the kidney foundation will consider for further action, said conference chairman A. Bruce Bowden, a Pittsburgh attorney who is secretary of the kidney foundation.

The recommendations on financial incentives applied only to donations from cadavers, not living donors, he said Tuesday. Living donors can donate kidneys.

Bowden and Dr. Alan Hull, chairman of the kidney foundation's public policy committee, stressed that the financial benefits were proposed for the act of giving an organ. They said that differs from paying for organs, which federal law prohibits.

"There is no direct monetary benefit to the organ donor, so it's not like selling a pint of your blood," said Bowden. And the family wouldn't benefit beyond reimbursement for burial expenses.

Bowden said he didn't think federal law would have to be changed to permit the financial incentives, although some federal regulations that carry out that law would have to be altered.

Houseboats to be beached

SHASTA LAKE, Calif. — Houseboats, floating earlier this year on what's left of Shasta Lake's Digger Bay, are facing a move — to a parking lot for the summer — since the lake's levels have receded to an all-time low as California enters a fifth year of drought.

Turning to faith can ease the pain

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My girlfriend has dumped me, and I am miserable. I know you probably can't understand how I feel, but I don't think I can live without her. We were even talking about marriage. My parents just laugh and say my feelings will wear off, but they don't realize how I feel. I even wonder if life is worth living. — K.U.

Billy Graham

DEAR K.U.: When you care deeply about someone and you believe they care deeply about you it hurts very much when that relationship is broken. Not only do you miss them, but you even begin to doubt if anything (or anyone) can take their place. You may even wonder if there is something wrong with you that made the other person reject you.

literature, and I have even read some books about it, but it seems like the more I know about the Bible the more confused I get. To be honest, I started getting interested in it hoping I would find God, but now I am not sure. What am I missing? — K.T.

Yes, I understand how you feel; I had similar experiences when I was young. Let me assure you that God also understands your feelings. But more than that, God knows your future, and the most important thing you can do is turn yourself — and your future — over to Jesus Christ and trust Him for the future. Although it may be hard for you to accept right now, God has a plan for your life — and His way is always better than our way. "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways" (Isaiah 55:9).

DEAR K.T.: Have you ever read the Bible itself, and not just books about it? There is no substitute for firsthand experience with the Bible, and don't let the opinions or views of other people about the Bible keep you from discovering its message for yourself.

Time after time I have looked back at times of disappointment and realized God always had something better in store for me, if I trusted Him. I am so thankful, for example, that I waited for God's choice for my wife! The same will be true of you, if you will let God lead you. Yes, life is worth living, because God is in the future. "Many are the plans in a man's heart, but it is the Lord's purpose that prevails" (Proverbs 19:21).

The central message of the Bible is God's love for the human race, and how He has made it possible for us to come to know Him personally and be saved. The early chapters of the Bible tell us God created us; we are not here by chance. But they also tell us we have rebelled against God, and the oneness and joy God intended for us has been shattered because we are now separated from God because of sin. Almost all of the rest of the Bible tells how God has been pursuing us, and how He has acted to bridge the gap between us and Himself by sending His only Son, Jesus Christ, into the world to take away our sins.

Your parents are partly right, however; time can heal your wounded emotions. In the meantime, don't become withdrawn or depressed, but make a special effort to keep active and outgoing.

That's why the best place for you to begin reading the Bible would be at its heart — which is the life of Jesus Christ. The Gospel of John is an excellent place to start, because it was written to explain what God has done in Christ — "that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that by believing you may have life in his name" (John 20:31).

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I know a lot about the Bible since I took a course once on the Bible's value as God has given us His Word, the Bible, to tell us of His love for us. Ask Him to help you understand its message — and then to act on that message by giving your life to Jesus Christ.

Bishop proclaims day of thanksgiving, prayer

In a letter to all clergy and faithful, Bishop Michael D. Pfeifer, O.M.I., Catholic Bishop of San Angelo, has proclaimed Sunday, March 10, as a day of celebration to offer thanks for the cessation of the war in the Persian Gulf.

is also a time to pledge ourselves to be peacemakers and to bring into our hearts the message of Christ "Peace be with you."

Pfeifer's diocese, or area of jurisdiction, includes 29 counties in West and Central Texas, including the cities of Big Spring, Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Abilene, Brownwood, Sweetwater and Fort Stockton.

The prelate, in proclaiming the special day of thanksgiving, ordered all pastors to include in their services special expressions of prayer and gratitude to "our dedicated service people and their families." He invited "all people of good will" to join in these prayers. Also to be remembered in the prayers at all Masses on that day are those who "made the supreme sacrifice of their lives" and those who have been wounded.

The bishop, in his letter, refers to the address President Bush made Feb. 27, announcing the cease fire and the task of securing peace that still lies ahead.

In closing, the bishop reminded the Catholic faithful "God still loves the entire world" and he invited all everyone to "extend that love to all people."

Bishop Pfeifer said "now is the time to give thanks to our God for bringing and end to the war . . . It

God's guidance shaped retiring chaplain's life

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

After nearly three years as chaplain at the VA Medical Center, and 20 years as a counselor, Iva May Foster announced she will retire at the end of the month. She said she will leave Big Spring to be near her family in Sonoma, Calif.

"I've been so blessed by God to have had the kind of heart-warming experiences I've had. I have no regrets. There have been so many good ways God has led me to do things at the right time in my life. I'm so grateful for the pain as well as the good times," Foster said.

She worked as a music teacher until she became a minister in 1978. Foster said the problems being a female minister have been surprisingly few. She added she has thoroughly enjoyed working with counseling groups and ministering at various churches.

"Sharing a person's life and soul is such a privilege, and it's such a challenge to be God's representative and to present God's love and forgiveness," said Foster.

She originally trained in Gestalt therapy and has counseled all age groups with differing problems, from marriage and family therapy to adolescents. Although she hasn't worked with inmates, she once led a prison Bible group.

Her work at the VA involved the alcohol and drug abuse treatment program. Foster said her primary role has been to give spiritual lectures, counsel small therapy groups and hearing fifth steps in the Alcoholic Anonymous program.

She explained the fifth step requires a person to share the past with another, facing all mistakes and wrongdoings, and prepare for personal change and growth.

"Just the chaplains do it here, because we're sworn to secrecy. But it's very exciting to help put a life together, to help someone let go of the past (so it will not) interfere or get in the way of the present," she said.

IVA MAY FOSTER

Foster said she was working as a counselor in Washington, D.C., when she received "the calling." She was chaplain of the youth division at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, working with adolescents, at six-month intervals, to determine their mental status and well-being.

"Those street kids taught me more than I taught them. What they needed was someone to genuinely care, and if you were a phoney, they could see right through you. We had a club, the God Loves Us Club, and they picked the name. I learned so much, it was a wonderful experience. I've never been afraid of street people since," she said.

Foster has also worked in family and marriage counseling, been minister of several churches in Michigan and Lubbock. She's a volunteer with the Project Literacy program and is teaching someone to read.

"A person's self-concept and their God concept is so related. If you envision God as a tyrant and a severe judge, you'll feel like a worm. If you think God is love, you'll relate to that and know you are worthwhile. The two are so one," said Foster. "I've definitely been called to do this."

Foster also worked in a hospice, with terminally ill patients and their families. She said working with someone through death is a very rewarding experience.

"Being close to the family when someone is dying — that's a very, very, special privilege. You get so close at that time," she said.

She speaks with a soft brogue, which she attributes to her Irish mother. Foster was born in Canada, and still has family there. Her move to California will put her near two of her five children and her 2-year-old granddaughter, Caitlin Foster-Evans.

Foster said when she and her daughter looked for a home in California, they found her a condominium the first day. She was awarded the bid, and plans to move after she retires.

"It's a great experience, traveling around a lot, but I long for roots now. I want to be settled. I think Big Spring is very family-conscious, and a lot of people here have roots for years and years, and I've envied that," she said.

Foster said she's not worried about retirement. "I'm sure God is going to open up something," she said.

"Nothing's going to end with my retirement. I've just got a new life that I don't know much about. This is just the beginning, and I feel like I'm going home," she said.

Area briefs

Sweetwater site of two-day meeting

Jehovah's Witnesses from Big Spring met with members of congregations from Snyder, Colorado City, Sweetwater, and Midland at the Sweetwater High School for a two-day session of Bible-related instruction and fellowship.

C.L. Lunsford, spokesman for the Big Spring group, said 799 attended the program. The theme, taken from 1 Thessalonians 5:6, "Stay Awake and Keep Your Senses"

To symbolize their dedication to do God's will and to follow Jesus's example, three ordained ministers were baptized.

The principal address was delivered by E. C. Woodley, a representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society. He is also a District Overseer, covering all of Texas, except Houston and the Panhandle. His subject was, "Acting Wisely in a Senseless World."

Expressing faith topic of discussion

The women of First Church of God heard the third in a series of study lessons about Islam at their March 4 monthly meeting. The lesson was presented by Betty Reagan, Mission, Resource Coordinator, and was entitled "Dialoging with Differences."

The purpose of the lesson was to teach how to become more aware of the complexities of sharing one's faith with people of other faiths.

The lesson was followed by a discussion by Linda Lindell and Virginia Chappell, called "My Culture/Your Culture, on how to express one's faith with those whose opinions are different.

Lindell, spiritual life coordinator, closed the meeting with worship sharing the scriptures in Acts 17:22-31 and Ephesians 4:16-32 to illustrate how Paul bridged the gap between Jews and non-Jews of the early church.

Myths topic of program

A special evening program is being planned by the Unitarian-Universalist Church, Midland, on March 13.

Participants will view and discuss a videotape of Joseph Campbell's Power of Myth series entitled "The Hero's Adventure."

The major point of discussion will be Campbell's discovery of the commonality of themes in world myths and religions.

A potluck supper will precede the program at 6 p.m. The video and discussion will begin at 6:45 p.m. Child care will be provided.

The church is located on the corner of Midkiff and Neely streets.

Benefit brunch to aid remodeling

The Spanish Inn Restaurant will serve a benefit brunch for Saint Thomas Catholic Church Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

All food and drink proceeds will be donated to help fund the remodeling of Saint Thomas Catholic Church. The public is invited.

All items from the menu will be available, including breakfast selections.

Britain's chief rabbi wins progress in religion award

NEW YORK (AP) — Britain's Chief Rabbi Immanuel Jakobovits today became the first Jew to win the $800,000 Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion, the world's richest award.

Jakobovits, 70, was cited for his "moderation and compassion on Arab-Israeli issues," his "enlightened approach to interfaith relations, and his originality in interpreting traditional values of Judaism."

The Templeton was founded by American investment manager

John M. Templeton and was first given in 1973. It is kept larger than the Nobel Prizes in science, literature and other fields to show that religion is more important.

Past winners include Mother Teresa, writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn and evangelist Billy Graham. The Templeton has gone to Protestants, Roman Catholics, Hindus, an Eastern Orthodox, a Buddhist and a Muslim.

Jakobovits, born in Konigsberg, Germany, fled the Nazi terror as a teen-ager. He was chief rabbi of Ireland from 1949 to 1958.

He was appointed chief rabbi of Great Britain and the Commonwealth in 1967. He was knighted by Queen Elizabeth in 1981 and made a titled member of the House of Lords in 1988, the first rabbi to hold a seat there.

While rabbi of New York's Fifth Avenue Synagogue from 1958 to 1967, he broke ranks with fellow Jews in condemning the 1962 U.S. Supreme Court decision banning Bible readings and prayers in public schools.

Proble caused foot m

NEW YORK (AP) — Aching feet really slow down a person. Not according to Helfand of Thon University Hospital, Philadelphia.

"A great misconception is that foot problems are supposed to be solved by podiatric medicine and stress — they are not," he said.

"Problems arise from misuse of the foot's walking on inappropriate footwear with improper professional shoe size fitting, not practicing their feet."

He said concrete surfaces on feet. Sid no absorption for the step. The result is stretching of foot muscles, bones. The remedy: thick leather soles.

High heels are ill-timed walking. The pressure of each step on the foot, causing in whole area. The discomforts are obvious. Those cause problems by blisters when within the shoe.

Helfand says most could be avoided. As for fallen arches, "Arches don't become misaligned."

Thriftiness seen as just being too tight

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I've been dating a man for nearly two years. He has never been married, and I am a widow. He earns about one and a half times the salary I make. Our financial obligations are about even. I've given him several small gifts for no special reason except I wanted to please him. (Once it was a tin of gourmet cat food for his pet.) I have had him over to my house for nice dinners quite often. He keeps telling me how much he enjoys home cooking. He has taken me to dinner occasionally, but he says he doesn't enjoy eating out much. As Christmas approached, he told me he didn't enjoy Christmas. I thought he meant because it had become so commercial and had gotten so far away from the original meaning of the holiday. I gave him a $40 sweater. He gave me a $2.98 paperback book because he doesn't enjoy shopping.

When my birthday rolled around, I discovered he didn't "enjoy" birthdays, either. I didn't even get a card.

I finally told him I thought he was cheap, and he reminded me that he had installed washers on a leaky spigot in my kitchen.

He doesn't enjoy movies, but he enjoys television. There are so few things this man enjoys I wonder what's wrong with him. What do you think? — ANONYMOUS IN SAN BERNARDINO

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I think he "enjoys" saving a buck.

Community blood drives honored

By BARBIE LELEK
The Colorado City Tumbleweed Lioness Club received an award from United Blood Services, San Angelo, naming Colorado City as one of the top ten blood donor communities outside of San Angelo.

Connie Simpson, club president, accepted the award during the Feb. 20 blood drive, which resulted in 46 pints of blood being donated by local citizens.

Mrs. Simpson stated, "I have a goal of 75 units of blood and I hope to meet that goal someday." She also thanked the many people and businesses who faithfully contribute to this important cause.

Local merchants helped make the drive a success by donating prizes. The winners and contributors were: Ben Lancaster — two Mexican dinners from Eppy's; Santiago Espinoza — coyote from Ceramic Hut; Susan Anderson — certificate from Eddie's Curl and Style; Elizabeth Robertson — scarf from Free's Fashions; John Manning — tie bar from Merle Norman Cosmetics; Rebecca Ramirez — Sonic Brown Bag Special; Norma Sorrells — wallet from Wood's Boots and Shoes; Rodney Lindsey and Manuel Molina both won dinners for two at Fort Wood Cafe; Gayle Houston — medal from Gifts Unique; Terri Owens — five, guests attend their weekly dinner meeting Wednesday at the Villa Inn. Members of the Sweetwater Jaycees were there to promote the World's Largest Rattlesnake Round-Up, scheduled this weekend at the Nolan County coliseum. The men began their snake handling demonstration by placing one snake on the table near many of the "trembling" Rotary members. They showed the proper way to handle the snakes as well as explaining how to react if a snake is encountered in the wild. A demonstration on the use of an extractor was also interesting to all present.

Another high point of the meeting was the installation of the newest member Sharon Sables, the new pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church.

Church plans open house

The public is invited to attend the Open House of the new addition to the First Baptist Church. The Family Life Center includes a gym/fellowship hall with new sports carpet. Also added was a new, big kitchen equipped with the finest in kitchen aids.

First Baptist Church members would enjoy all those interested to attend this function and get a first hand view of the new building.

Hospital auxiliary welcomes newcomers

The "Pink Ladies" of the Mitchell County Hospital Auxiliary hosted a reception to honor Colorado City's two newest medical professionals March 3, in the C.C. Thompson Room.

Dr. Royce McAnally moved here from Bandera with his wife, Sharan and daughter, Audra, a high school freshman. Dr. McAnally practices family medicine as well as Obstetrics. His office is located at 505 Chestnut.

The hospital's new administrator, Wendell Alford and his family have also moved here recently. Welcome to both men and their families.

Problems caused by foot misuse

NEW YORK (AP) — Your aching feet really shouldn't. Not according to Dr. Arthur E. Helfand, an adjunct professor of podiatric medicine. "Feet are amazing mechanisms for balance and stress — they are built to do the job."

"Problems arise when people misuse the foot's structure by walking on inappropriate surfaces with improper protection, by not tailoring shoe size to foot size, and by not practicing maintenance of their feet."

He said concrete is the hardest surface on feet. Sidewalks provide no absorption for the shock of each step. The result is stress and shearing of foot muscles, tendons or bones. The remedy is rubber or thick leather soles.

High heels are ill advised for sustained walking. They push the pressure of each step to the front of the foot, causing imbalance of the whole area.

The discomforts of a small shoe are obvious. Those too large also cause problems by building friction and blisters when the foot slides within the shoe.

Helfand says most foot problems could be avoided. As for fallen arches, Helfand says, "Arches don't fall. The foot becomes misaligned and rotates."

How's that?

Q. At what rate are rain forests in South America disappearing?

A. "According to recent statistics, an acre of rain forest is cut down and destroyed every second," said Ray Sutton, wildlife manager of the International Wildlife Park in Grand Prairie, Texas. A number of environmental groups are attempting to save large areas of land by purchasing parcels of the rain forests.

Firm considering move to Big Spring

Moore Development Inc. could soon begin negotiations for a manufacturing firm to locate in Big Spring.

The Moore Board of Directors met for more than half an hour in executive session this morning at the Colorado River Municipal Water District offices to discuss the interest by the firm, which cannot be identified at this time, in possibly moving here.

"We instructed the executive director to let the manufacturer's know we do have an interest in their business," said board Chairman O.H. Ivie. "That may breed future meetings in the near future."

It is not the first prospect that the board has considered, Ivie said. But "this looks the most promising," he said. "We hope to make contacts within the coming week."

The board also discussed possibly employing a consultant. The identity of an individual being considered cannot be divulged, Ivie said.

"We instructed the director to let the individual know that we are interested in meeting and discussing the possibilities," he said.

Congressman hits dog with gunfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wounded dogs told no tales, Rep. Frank Guarini says, after his first hunting adventure ended with an accidental spray of birdshot in a hunting dog's tail.

"The dog does not wish to make any statements," the Jersey City, N.J., Democrat said. "He will neither confirm nor deny the rumors."

But Guarini added: "The dog and I have remained the best of friends."

Guarini was one of several House members invited by Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., to join him for an annual weekend of quail hunting and fishing in Arkansas. The private trip has been an Anthony tradition for eight years.

No one in Anthony's office was talking on Thursday about last weekend's mishap.

"Beryl considers the hunting trip a private matter," said spokeswoman Karen Hancock.

Campaign funding debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Democratic-sponsored bill to rewrite campaign finance law would have prevented abuses that came to light in the Keating Five ethics case, the Senate majority leader contends.

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Thursday that campaign contributions that savings and loan owner Charles H. Keating Jr. raised for five senators would have been prohibited or severely restricted under his party's legislation.

Senators of both parties say a longstanding political stalemate on changing campaign financing law demands urgent attention. Separate bills passed each house of Congress last year, but a conference committee never met to reconcile differences.

Sharp differences remain. Senate Democrats insist on voluntary spending limits. Republicans — belonging to the minority in both houses — oppose the provision as unfair to candidates who face entrenched incumbents.

Senators from both parties want to ban political action committee contributions, but most House Democrats balk at the idea.

Reasons cited for changing the law include the politically damaging contributions from Keating, which led to the ethics investigation of the five senators; the low, 36 percent voter turnout in the last election; the spiraling cost of campaigns; the influence of special-interest money and the overwhelming spending advantage of incumbents over challengers.

Senate Rules Committee Chairman Wendell Ford, D-Ky., said the panel would begin writing its bill on March 20 after two more hearings next week to hear from Republican sponsors of campaign finance legislation.

One member of the Keating Five, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., testified Thursday to the Rules Committee in strong support of changing the system.

Mitchell told the panel, "Charles Keating gave more than $1.5 million to the five senators involved and all of that money would be either prohibited under this bill or severely restricted."

Keating donated or raised $1.3 million for the senators' campaigns and political causes; and his Lincoln Savings and Loan extended a $300,000 line of credit to one of the five, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Most of the money was donated while the Federal Home Loan Bank Board was investigating Lincoln, which was seized by the government at a potential bailout cost to taxpayers of more than $2 billion.

Mitchell, Ford and Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., are the prime sponsors of the main Democratic bill, which includes voluntary spending limits for Senate campaigns.

While opposing that provision, Republican senators have said they agree with other proposals that would provide discounts for broadcast ads and curb abuses of "independent" expenditures, those supposedly made without consultation with the candidate.

The Rules Committee's first hearing of the year on campaign financing considered Democratic proposals. Republican bills will be considered next Wednesday and Thursday.

Boren said whatever emerges must provide "a comprehensive solution which guarantees that the millions of special-interest dollars spent on campaigns are cut out of the system for good." He said "the only true way to fix this system" is with spending limits.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., suggested a combination of spending limits and voluntary public financing of Senate general election campaigns.

His plan would establish a voluntary tax checkoff, as in presidential elections. If participation fell short, candidates would be notified they could make up the shortfall by raising money from individuals.

county's delinquent tax attorney, said those are losses that those taxing districts probably face anyway.

"As a practical matter, this group will ultimately have responsibility. If that's the case then we're probably not taking on any liability that we don't already have," Mouton said. "The legal owner in my opinion is probably totally unable to respond financially."

An additional cost, if the taxing entities take over the title, would be a $1,500 annual insurance payment for each $1 million in protection for accident liability.

Mouton and liaison committee members commented that the BSMS proposal sounds like a good idea. "I think it's a viable alternative," Mouton said.

"We want to save the citizens of Big Spring maybe half-a-million (dollars) in demolition costs," Atkins said. Either way, he said, "It's going to continue to be more and more of a problem."

ARCHITECT'S VISION OF RENOVATED HOTEL SETTLES

ment fining Gil Cuadra $30,000 for safety violations is on appeal in Howard County Court.

A BSMS brochure proposes renovating it into a plaza. "A home, an experience: The Settles Hotel is a major physical asset in Big Spring's downtown," it says. A mixed-use development centering on elderly apartment living, offices, a roof-top restaurant and a through-block shopping arcade on the street level is suggested.

911

problem because of an address problem when another service such as an ambulance is needed. "They are dispatching ambulances but they don't know where to go," Sheriff Deputy Tiburcio Trevino Jr. said.

Dorton agreed there is a problem because five to 10 percent of about 14,500 phone lines have not yet been assigned addresses. In an enhanced emergency system, addresses are automatically flashed, along with names and phone numbers, onto a computer screen every time a call comes in.

But 911 board members said some problems in finding locations are created because a computer screen and printer have not yet been installed in the sheriff's department. "Maybe... if you had a monitor there, you would have the information instantly," said 911 Chairman Tim Yeats.

However, Standard said that that information would only be useful for their records, since 911 dispatching should be done solely by a centralized station. He said he has never refused the equipment but does not encourage it. "Why would you want to put it over here if you've got a 911 dispatcher?" he said.

Dorton and board members also said they need to know when there is a problem so that they can correct it.

But Trevino said he calls 911 operators back whenever a mistake is found and corrected. "The problem is the dispatcher over there is not doing the job properly," he said.

Operators are trained, Dorton said. "As long as we provide the training, hopefully they'll pick it up," he said.

Because of funding, specialized training is limited, Dorton said in an interview last week. Standard said last week that operators should be knowledgeable about trauma situations, especially when first aid needs to be administered.

"It goes back to money," Dorton said. If they could afford it, he said, it would be best to have police officers or deputies who are trained as emergency medical personnel.

Concerning a centralized 911 station, Dorton said funding is again a problem. Limited funds have resulted in a contract with the police department to assist in calling 911. 911 pays the city $19,000 a year, which funds one operator. The 911 budget of $134,000 allows salaries for 1 1/2 operators. A minimum of five operators is needed, Dorton said.

Meanwhile, the 911 board approved authorizing $12,700 to hire temporary help to speed completion of addressing. Dorton said they are hoping it will be done by October. It takes one person a little more than a day to address one block, he said.

The Big Spring Police Department reported the following incidents:

- A 24-year old Big Spring man was arrested on assault charges.

- Following an assault, a woman was transported by ambulance to Scenic Mountain Medical Center where she was treated and released.

55 million people, but Iranian officials have denied any involvement in the unrest.

Saddam and his main government aides are Sunni Muslims.

Baghdad Radio today quoted an unidentified government spokesman as saying it would turn over the 40 foreign reporters and the two American soldiers to Red Cross officials in Baghdad. It said they disappeared "during illegal presence in Basra."

Regarding the two soldiers, Pentagon spokesman Army Col. Miguel E. Monteverde said he was aware of the Baghdad Radio broadcast but "they don't match any names that we've got... Right now we don't know who they are."

The Baghdad government had refused to say it was holding any missing journalists, who were trying to cover the rebellion in southern Iraq.

Earlier today, two journalists — CBS technician Timothy Dickey and cameraman Chris Everson — surfaced near the Iraq-Kuwait border. Iraqi gunmen had stolen their four-wheel drive vehicle and equipment earlier in the week, and U.S. Army units came across them in the desert.

The Iraqis are also promising to release Kuwaitis abducted during the nearly seven-month Iraqi occupation of the emirate.

The first 1,000 of them — of an estimated 30,000 — were freed Thursday, and some were arriving home today in Kuwait City. They expressed fury at their former captors.

"It was like hell," said Hami Jamal, a 27-year-old computer engineer who was taken from his house by Iraqi troops three weeks ago. "We drank swamp water for days. And for what crimes? For being Kuwaitis."

With the passing of the Persian Gulf War, Secretary of State James A. Baker III turned his attention to another Middle East quarrel — the Arab-Israeli conflict.

En route to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, where he was to hold meetings today, Baker told reporters the United States is prepared to meet with Palestinian Arabs in Israel.

Barring a new outbreak of fighting in the gulf, U.S. troops will begin leaving at the rate of 5,000 a day, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Thursday.

At that rate, most of the 540,000 U.S. soldiers sent to the gulf would be home by the Fourth of July, the date President Bush has set as "a special day of celebration for our returning troops."

ASPEN, Colo. — Rescue workers use poles Thursday to search for a possible avalanche victim near Aspen, Colo. A cross-country skier was believed to have been buried by a massive avalanche Wednesday.

Easley explained at length that this will not be a prison. "There will be no fence, no razor wire, no guard tower and no guns," he said.

According to the company policy manual, the typical client is a white-collar offender and those convicted of relatively minor property crimes such as hot checks and shoplifting. Professional criminal are not assigned to residential centers.

Lower recidivism rates are a hallmark of the halfway houses. According to an article in Corrections Compendium magazine, the failure rate for detainees released from properly run halfway houses is drastically lower than those released from prison.

"To the taxpayer, a residential center makes a great deal of economic sense. The average cost of keeping a man in the state prison is $60 per day. The average cost in a county jail is $40 dollars per day," the article states.

"The average cost in a residential center is $28.50 per day. In addition, the working client is required to pay 25 percent of his gross wages to the center, which then deducts that from the amount billed to the state," it added.

"We are going to be injecting a lot of money into the Big Spring economy. All of the staff (including the executive director of the center) will come from Big Spring. We will be serving about 110,000 meals per year in the restaurant, and we intend to buy all food and other goods and services from Big Spring companies," Easley said.

RCI has been evaluating halfway houses in 11 states and researching the field of alternative sentencing. If approved by the Department of Justice, the Big Spring center will be the firm's first operation and the culmination of two and one half years of preparation.

According to the application, "We do not believe our newness to this endeavor to be a handicap — we view it as a definite asset for this reason: We are not approaching this operation with a set of preconceived, out of date, ideas."

Easley explained that RCI should, in almost all instances, exceed minimum government requirements defined in the Department of Justice's Invitation to Bid.

According to company literature, "The better the facility and the more effective the counseling, the more likely it becomes that a resident will complete the program and return to his home a productive, law-abiding citizen."

The company also plans to institute a citizens advisory committee of Big Spring residents to report directly to the executive director in order to provide constant community input.

Odessa retires Lady Hawks

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Editor

WACO — The Howard College Lady Hawks and Odessa College Lady Wranglers have had three battles this season, the teams split in the previous two meetings.

The Howard College Lady Hawks — shown struggling for the ball against Clarendon earlier this year — closed their season against Odessa College Thursday.

The Lady Wranglers overcame a six-point halftime deficit to claim a 57-55 win. The win sent the No. 2 Lady Wranglers (29-1) to the finals against South Plains, which beat Grayson 53-47.

Odessa post player Twanda Wilson scored three baskets in the final three minutes and 40 seconds to pave the way for Odessa.

The coaches agreed the key to the game was Odessa's defensive pressure. "We didn't score enough points in the first half to put pressure on them," said Odessa Coach Ken Hefner.

Howard Coach Royce Chadwick said his offense struggled in the second half. "We couldn't get anything going in the second half, our offense was almost nonexistent."

Chadwick referred to point guard Julie Lempea getting into foul trouble early, forcing her out at crucial times.

Williams holds fond ring memories

By STEVE REAGAN Staff Writer

EVANS WILLIAMS

He's not fought competitively in nine years, but boxing is still very much in Evans Williams' blood.

Williams, a Navy and Army veteran currently at the Big Spring VA Medical Center, almost looks like he could step in the ring tomorrow.

During his 11-year boxing career, he rubbed shoulders with some of the greatest boxers of recent times, including Muhammad Ali, George Foreman, Ken Norton and Sugar Ray Robinson.

"I pretty much had to scrape coming home from school," he said. "I didn't have to start boxing early, because I'd been fighting all my life."

His attitude toward the sport changed, however, when he entered the Army in 1972. "I was just a street-fighter anyway, so when I saw organized boxing, I said, 'Shoot, this is going to be easy.'"

He progressed rapidly, becoming the Army's light-heavyweight champ in 1974. He had set his sights on making the 1976 Olympic team, but that effort was cut short when he was shot during an altercation while stationed in North Carolina.

After his recuperation, he continued boxing in the Army until his discharge in 1979, then went to Los Angeles with the intention of turning pro.

"I was intent on signing up and fighting in the pros under Scrapiron Johnson," Williams said, "but his ideas and methods of training were different from mine... I then met my idol, Sugar Ray Robinson, and he got me a job sparring with Eddie Lopez."

A few months later, Williams went to Philadelphia, where he was introduced to Ali, then the heavyweight champion of the world.

"It was something like a dream meeting Ali," Williams said. "He had a lot of my attitude, because he had a fast mouth and was willing to back it up."

His introduction to the champ was somewhat dramatic. Williams was at Ali's training camp in the Catskills Mountains with a group of other young fighters one day when

Boxing tourney set Saturday

The Big Spring Boxing Club will be hosting Saturday Night at the Fights, a United States of America/American Boxing Federation tournament, Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Howard County Fair Barn.

Teams from Odessa, Floydada, Snyder, Pecos, Fort Stockton, Olton, Lubbock, Hereford, Seminole, Colorado City, San Angelo and Monahans will be competing.

Tickets are $3 for adults and $2 for children under 12. For more information call Henry or Sue at 263-2100.

a black Rolls Royce with tinted windows arrived. The door opened, and out popped Ali, who promptly began shadow boxing.

"He said, 'Hoo! I see they brought me a whole lot of meat to beat up on,'" Williams said.

Williams' hopes of signing with Ali's camp were dashed, however, because of a disagreement between him and Ali's trainer, Angelo Dundee.

"He thought I should fight as a light-heavyweight," Williams said. "I didn't agree. I thought I was too old to take off the weight... I was a solid 190 pounds. To get down to 175, you were talking about almost 20 pounds."

So, it was back to his native Texas, where he eventually signed on as sparring partner to heavyweight contender Ken Norton.

SWC elite fighting for seeds

DALLAS (AP) — Neither the No. 5 ranked Arkansas Razorbacks nor the No. 23 ranked Texas Longhorns believe they must win the Southwest Conference tournament to make the NCAA playoffs — but they know their eventual seeding in the 64-team field could depend on their finish.

"We're automatic and we don't even need to be here," said Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson. "We did our job 28 games ago. What we did to win 28 games will get us to the big dance. We're just playing for fun."

Texas coach Tom Penders said "we're not as desperate as last year. We feel we're in the NCAA tournament. Now, we're playing for a good seed."

The Razorbacks make their SWC farewell appearance in the SWC tournament beginning today. Richardson is nostalgic about it.

"We'll miss being a Southwest Conference member," Richardson said on Thursday. "It's been rewarding. We'll miss the trips to all the schools. I've always thought it would be an upcoming conference."

The No. 5 ranked Hogs play in the Southeastern Conference next season.

Arkansas, 28-3, will play Texas A&M after the Aggies defeated Texas Tech, 57-46, in the "play-in" game Thursday.

Pitchin', hittin', complainin' — all's well

(AP) — Roger Clemens was pitching, Darryl Strawberry was hitting and Rickey Henderson was complaining. It didn't take long for things to fall into place on the opening day of the exhibition season.

Ryan's more than a card

WHEATON, Ill. (AP) — The elusive Nolan Ryan rookie baseball card resurfaced in court in the midst of a legal battle over the sale of the card for 1 percent of its claimed value.

Attorney Walter Maksym pulled the card out of his pocket in DuPage County Court on Thursday.

Bryan Wrzesinski, 13, of Addison bought the card last year for $12 from Ball-Mart Baseball. Wrzesinski said he traded the card away Monday, the night before the trial began.

"So far, so good," Clemens said. "The second inning seemed to go a little longer than I wanted it to, but that's all right. I hope I give up all of my runs down here and pitch a shutout on opening day."

Over in Vero Beach, Strawberry went 1-for-3 with a double in his Los Angeles debut, but the Dodgers lost as Rob Deer drove in three runs in Detroit's 10-3 victory. Strawberry, who left the New Associate Judge Ann Jorgensen ordered Maksym to keep the card until the suit is resolved.

Maksym, however, insisted the judge has no power to tell him what to do with the card.

Ball-Mart owner Joe Irmen said the card was marked at $1,200, and sued Wrzesinski for the return of the card or $1,188.

But Wrzesinski has said the card was simply marked "1200" without a dollar sign, decimal point or comma. He said he knew the card was worth more than $12, but he had no idea how much.

York Mets last autumn and signed a five-year, $20.25 million contract with Los Angeles, grounded out to second twice before doubling to right in the sixth off Paul Gibson.

"Like I've said before, this isn't the game I played seven years ago," Strawberry said. "My game will be at a different level."

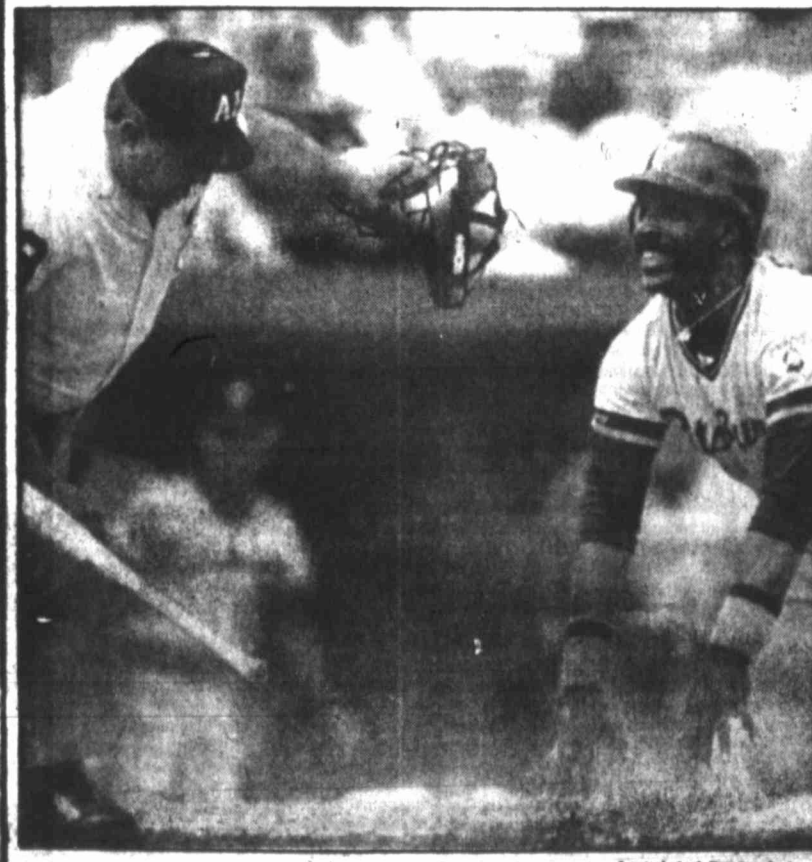

Henderson, the AL's MVP, finally arrived at Oakland's training camp in Scottsdale, Ariz. Henderson, in the second season of a four-year, $12 million deal, wants to be one of the five highest-paid players in baseball and wants the deal done by opening day.

"It's pride, period," Henderson said. "Every time I hit that dirt (stealing a base), it's pride... I don't think my contract is fair. I don't think it goes with the way I play the game. I don't think I'm 40th or 50th on the list."

In another game, Baltimore beat the Chicago White Sox 8-0 on a combined four-hitter by Ben McDonald, Jose Mesa, Dave Johnson and Kevin Hickey. Sam Horn hit a three-run homer for the Orioles.

Atlanta beat defending NCAA champion Georgia 2-0 on Sid Bream's two-run, fourth-inning homer.

The Chicago Cubs beat Arizona State 5-4, overcoming four RBIs by Mike Kelly, and the Minnesota Twins beat Edison Community College 13-2 as Kirby Puckett hit a three-run homer and Chuck Knoblauch had three hits.

Freddie Ricks scored 17 of his 19 points in the second half to lead the Aggies, who built a 45-33 lead with 5:33 to go on a 9-0 run, which included two baskets by Ricks. Then Ricks scored the last four points of the game on free throws.

Steve Miles was the leading scorer for the Raiders with 14 points and Butts added 12 points. Shedrick Anderson scored 14 points for the Aggies and Brooks Thompson added 12.

Richardson said Arkansas will miss its hotcourt advantage in Reunion Arena. Almost 70 per cent of the fans in the soldout tournament will be from Arkansas.

"Playing us in Reunion Arena is like playing Notre Dame in Rome," Richardson said. "We'll miss the tournament."

The SWC tournament proper gets underway today with Houston and Southern Methodist meeting at noon. Texas, the tournament's second seed and 23rd ranked nationally, meets Baylor at 2 p.m.

After the Arkansas-Texas A&M game at 7 p.m., Rice and Texas Christian meet at 9 p.m. in the last quarterfinal game. The semifinals are set for 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturday. The championship game will be nationally televised at 3 p.m. on Sunday.

In Laramie, Wyo., Walter Watts had 13 points as the eighth-ranked Utes downed San Diego State in the WAC quarterfinals. Backup center Paul Afeaki, playing for the first time since being shot by a motorist on Feb. 14, added 11 points as Utah (27-2) won its 16th game in 17 tries against WAC opponents this season.

The Utes will play the host team in the semis. Brian Rowers had 16 points, including two free throws with 17 seconds left, as Wyoming beat Texas-El Paso.

Reserve Ray Reed scored 22 points as Hawaii rallied to upset New Mexico. Steve Schreiner scored 18 points and Shawn Bradley added 16 as BYU eliminated Colorado State.

The Cardinals, seeded last after 14 straight years of being either first or second, stunned the top-seeded Golden Eagles in Roanoke, Va., for their fourth straight win as Everick Sullivan scored 26 points.

"We're playing the best we've played this year right now," coach Denny Crum said. "It doesn't guarantee anything obviously, but it does give you confidence."

The Cardinals forced Southern Mississippi (21-7) into 24 turnovers that produced 29 points as the Golden Eagles lost for the fourth time in five games.

Elliot Perry scored all 14 of his points in the second half to lead Memphis State over Tulane. Florida State overcame 38 percent shooting to beat South Carolina and Rod Wheeler scored the final 12 points for Virginia Tech, which blew a 12-point lead before beating Cincinnati in the Bearcats' final Metro Conference game.

Williams came off the bench to fuel the Howard surge, scoring nine points. She finished her season at Howard with 24 points and 10 rebounds, both team highs.

She was followed by Mulu Tosi, who scored 14 points, nine rebounds and three steals. Tosi and Cindy Williams and injured Kim Robinson were the only sophomores on the Howard team.

Howard began strong in the second half, scoring the first four points on a jumper by Desiree Wallace and a basket when Lempea fed Tosi.

But Odessa continued to whittle at the lead, thanks to timely three-pointers by Melanie Fletcher and Parker. Fletcher's three-pointer cut the lead to 40-36 at the seven-minute mark. Another Fletcher three-pointer put the game at 46-46 at the 4:55 mark. From that point, Wilson came through with her offensive rebounding and three clutch baskets.

Although he is fairly content with his exit from active boxing, he admitted there are some things about the sport he misses.

The key came after Tosi made one of two foul shots, tying the game at 55-55 with 28 seconds left. Wilson came down and hit a shot over Tosi and was fouled with three seconds remaining. She missed the free throw and the only thing Howard could muster was a halfcourt shot by Marcia Oilverti.

HOWARD (55) — Julie Lempea 6-1, 3-4, 3; Desiree Wallon 1-3, 2-2, 4; LeAnn Heinrich 0-4, 0-0, 0; Yolanda Wells 2-10, 2-2, 5; Mulu Tosi 6-12, 2-5, 14; Cindy Williams 9-12, 4-8, 24; Rebecca Brown 1-1, 0-0, 2; Kelly Williams 1-1, 0-0, 2; Kathy Maugramo 1, 2-2, 2; Marcia Oliveria 0-0, 1-2, 1; Totals 17-45, 17-25, 55.

HOW IT WORKS!

- The Big Spring and Stanton Herald Telephone Number Sweepstakes Contest will commence on Monday, March 4, 1991 and will terminate Sunday, May 12, 1991.
- Entry coupons for the Telephone Number Sweepstakes Contest will appear in the Herald and Crossroads Country Advertiser, as published by the Big Spring Herald, beginning February 24, 1991. Additional entry coupons will appear in the Herald and C.C.A. during the contest. Additional entry forms will be available at the participating contest merchants, beginning March 4, while the supply lasts. No purchase is necessary. A person may become a contestant by depositing or mailing their coupon to the Big Spring Herald, 710 Scurry St., P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720. All entries being forwarded by mail must bear sufficient postage. The Herald takes no responsibility for any lost or misdirected entries.
- During the first 9 weeks of the Herald's 10 week contest, the Herald will publish at least 2 telephone numbers as chosen by random draw from all entries received, in the advertisements of at least 2 participating merchants on the Telephone Numbers Sweepstakes page each day from Tuesday to Sunday. The value of each of the numbers published from Tuesday thru Sunday, will be $10. Each Monday of the first 9 weeks of the contest, the Herald will also publish at least 2 telephone numbers also chosen by draw from all entries received. These numbers will appear in at least 2 of the merchant's ads on the contest page. The value of the numbers published each Monday during the first 9 weeks of the contest, will be $25.
- The 10th and final week of the contest, will be known as Grand Prize Week. From Monday to Thursday of this week (May 6-9) 2 telephone numbers, as drawn from all entries, will be published in the advertisements of 2 participating merchants. The value of each of these numbers will be $50. On Friday, May 10, one number, as drawn from all entries received, will be published in the ad of one of the participating merchants. The value of this number will be $250. On Sunday, May 12, the final day of the contest, one telephone number drawn from all entries received will be published in the advertisement of one of the participating merchants chosen by drawing. The value of this number, known as the Grand Prize Number will be $500.
- All entries drawn during the contest, up to and including May 10, will be returned to the draw drum the day following the publication of the telephone number.
- The holder of a telephone number published in the Herald's Telephone Number Sweepstakes Contest from March 4 to May 12, must call the Big Spring Herald at 263-7331, by no later than 5:30 p.m. on the 7th business day following the publishing of the winning number. Contest Department hours are from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday to Friday. The contest office is not open on Saturdays, Sundays or Statutory holidays. Upon reporting a winning telephone number, the holder of the number will be advised of the steps to follow to claim the prize. Published telephone numbers reported to the Herald following the close of the contest department on the 7th business day following publication of the number, will not be accepted and will not be eligible to claim a prize.
- The holder of the Grand Prize telephone number as published on May 12, the final day of the contest, must call the contest department of the Herald at 263-7331 no later than 5:30 p.m. on May 23, 9th business day, following publication of the winning number. Business hours are shown in rule number 5. If the Grand Prize, relating to the telephone number published in the Herald on May 12, has not been claimed by the close of the contest department office on the 9th business day following publication, a 2nd Grand Prize number will be published on the 10th business day following the publication of the initial Grand Prize number. This process will be repeated, until the Grand Prize has been claimed.
- If a successful winner receives 6-day home delivery of the Big Spring Herald, by carrier, motor route delivery, or mail, this person will receive an additional cash amount, equivalent to their prize. The winner must be receiving home delivery the day the winning number appears in the Herald.
- It is not necessary to purchase the Herald to participate in the contest. Live telephone numbers will be posted in the main business office of the Herald, 710 Scurry St., and copies of the Herald are available for inspection during regular business hours.
- Published telephone numbers will not be given out over the telephone.
- By playing Herald Telephone Number Sweepstakes contest, contestants agree to accept these rules and to allow publication of their name and address and/or picture within the Herald. The decision of the judges appointed by the Herald will be final and binding.
- Anyone 18 years or older can play the Herald Telephone Number Sweepstakes contest, except employees and their immediate families of the Big Spring Herald and Thomson Newspapers Corporation.
- Any person without a telephone number can submit their address for contest participation.
- Photo identification is required to collect your prize.

Lewis begins new film

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis, approaching his 65th birthday, is marking his 60th year in show business by working on a new film. Lewis is in the Arizona desert filming, "Arrow-Tooth Waltz," with Faye Dunaway and Johnny Depp. The film is the 53rd Lewis has appeared in since making his movie debut in "My Friend Irma" with former partner Dean Martin 42 years ago.

Lewis made his show business debut at age 5, singing in a New York hotel. His birthday is March 16.

Lewis, a resident of Las Vegas, spends much of his time working for the Muscular Dystrophy Association. He has raised millions of dollars for the organization since 1950, mainly through his Labor Day telethons.

King, creator of the horrific hotel in "The Shining" and the terrifying clown of "It," preferred much gentler reading as a child — Dr. Seuss.

The author says in the April issue of Ladies' Home Journal his favorite childhood book was the good-doctor's "McElligot's Pool." King is one of several celebrities who told the magazine about their preferred reading from days gone by.

Most of the other selections were more predictable. Gloria Steinem liked "Little Women," while Ann Landers enjoyed the children's classic "Charlotte's Web."

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE:

Your self-confidence and strong sense of responsibility make you a natural administrator. Be careful not to take on too much work in July. You may have to be apart from your loved ones for business reasons in September. Late fall is the best time for a second honeymoon. How about a weekend at a quiet country inn? Business booms as the winter holidays draw near.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Give your own motives a long, hard look before questioning someone else's intentions. Greater faith and trust will make you a winner in romance. Your partner looks to the future with new confidence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A former love could re-enter your life. A family gathering brings back many fond memories. Realize that another person's dependency could cost you some of your cherished freedom.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It is time to yield to the wishes of your mate or partner! A sudden change in travel plans will be an improvement on the original arrangements. Keep your ambitions in proper perspective.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Inventive thinking will help solve a family dilemma, but do not expect a miracle overnight. Welcome suggestions from your loved ones. Roll up your sleeves and tackle housework.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Childish spats offer both amusement and aggravation. Trust the advice of an old friend who has your best interests at heart. Business and travel are a successful combination this month.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Transportation and communication are in the spotlight. "Mind over matter" becomes your motto. The more independent you are, the more others will seek your company!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Loved one's emotions could be rather raw right now. Be considerate of those whose feelings are easily hurt. Tact will head off unhappy confrontations.

Give a relationship a second chance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try to get a better grip on your financial affairs. You can promote your interests best by letting logic prevail. A friend may not come through when the chips are down. Persevere!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have a free hand today but should maintain a low profile around sensitive relatives. To increase your capital, adopt a more conservative approach toward spending. Widen your social circle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Marital rapport and family unity are uppermost in your thoughts. Temper criticism with words of praise. Small fry will comply with your requests. A chance encounter could lead to a delightful experience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A change of pace or scenery will help recharge your batteries. A friend's actions both surprise and delight you. An older person shows admiration for your grace under pressure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your ability to help others see things in a more positive light wins you a new admirer. Someone solicits your assistance in getting a major project off the ground. Request full details.

Iran backs Iraqi revolt

Iran's leader today threw his support behind the rebels fighting Saddam Hussein, calling for the overthrow of the Iraqi leader and his party. Baghdad said it would free 40 foreign journalists and two more U.S. soldiers.

The U.S. military, for its part, announced plans today to repatriate more than 60,000 Iraqi POWs.

The trickle of American troops arriving home, meanwhile, swelled to a joyous flood.

In Savannah, Ga., one arriving American soldier bent to kiss the ground after a C-141 transport plane carrying 105 troops touched down early today at Hunter Army Airfield. A waiting crowd cheered wildly, and a huge banner read, "Welcome Home Heroes."

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of Operation Desert Storm, said farewell today to some of his homeward-bound front-line troops. Speaking at a ceremony in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, he told the 1,700 members of the Army's VII Corps, "It's a great day to be a soldier." A grimmer homecoming awaited the Iraqi POWs, whose repatriation is to begin Monday.

The uprising against Saddam was said to have spread to his capital, and the government said anyone involved is a "traitor" who will pay dearly.

The U.S. military command said today an agreement reached by allied and Iraqi officials on Thursday calls for several hundred Iraqis per day to be sent home by bus and truck from holding camps in northern Saudi Arabia.

The president of Iran, which proclaimed neutrality in the war, today declared his sympathy for the attempts to overthrow Saddam. Hashemi Rafsanjani said Iran would cooperate with Iraq only if Saddam and his Arab Baath Socialist Party surrender "to the will of the people."

Rafsanjani lambasted Saddam for trying to put down the rebellion. "Saddam is making a mistake while suppressing the people," he said. ● REVOLT page 10-A

Luncheon planned in Midland

Permian Chapter of Professional Secretaries International will have a noon meeting and luncheon at the Midland Hilton, Tuesday, March 12, according to local spokeswoman Carol J. Whitten, CPS.

Guest speaker will be Harry L. Harrison of Tex-Chem Specialties, a volunteer with the Midland Community Theatre.

For reservations or information call 688-0484 or locally 458-3371. Deadline is Friday, March 8.

Neurologist to discuss dyslexia

Stanton Elementary School will host a meeting for parents with Dr. Herman Cirkovic, a noted Midland neurologist. The meeting will take place in the elementary cafeteria March 21 at 6:30 p.m., said Jim White, elementary principal.

Dr. Cirkovic will speak on dyslexia and related disorders. He will be available for questions at the end of the meeting. In his discussion, he will emphasize a number of conditions which may exist to the afflicted child.

According to Cirkovic, because of these disorders a child may be experiencing difficulty with the alphabet.

Everyone is encouraged to attend this free session.

Grady board to appoint judges

Grady Independent School District will meet in a regular session Tuesday at 7 p.m. to discuss the appointment of election judges and clerks for May 4 election, according to GISD Superintendent Gerald Singleton.

The board will consider the homestead exemption act and setting the minimum value for minerals at $100 for 1991.

- Other agenda items are:
- Vote for education service center board of directors;
  - Consider teacher contracts;
  - Change regular May board meetings to May 6 to canvass returns of elections.

Commissioners face busy week

Commissioners' Court will meet Monday, March 11 to discuss the landfill situation and to accept bids for a new fire truck, according to Bob Deavenport, county judge.

Deavenport said the commissioners will meet with the Scurry County Commissioners in a special joint session at 5 p.m., Tuesday, to discuss selling a grid roller and review county unit systems.

Commissioners' will meet later that night in special session with the Stanton City Council at 7 p.m., to consider landfill problems and equipment needed to operate the site.

Grain program payments scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corn and sorghum farmers who participated in the Agriculture Department's 1990 feed grain program will soon receive about $1.2 billion in cash deficiency payments.

Officials said Thursday the corn payments will be about $1.07 billion and sorghum $130 million. The payments will be made this month.

Corn participants got about $1.9 billion in advance payments when they signed up in the program last year, said Keith Bjerke, executive vice president of the department's Commodity Credit Corp. Sorghum producers received $175 million.

The payments basically make up the difference between a target price level and market prices or price support loan levels, whichever are higher.

Last year's corn target, for example, was $2.75 per bushel and the basic price support level was $1.96 per bushel. The market price average price used in the formula was $2.22 per bushel.

Adjustments also were made for other factors and for the advances made last year.

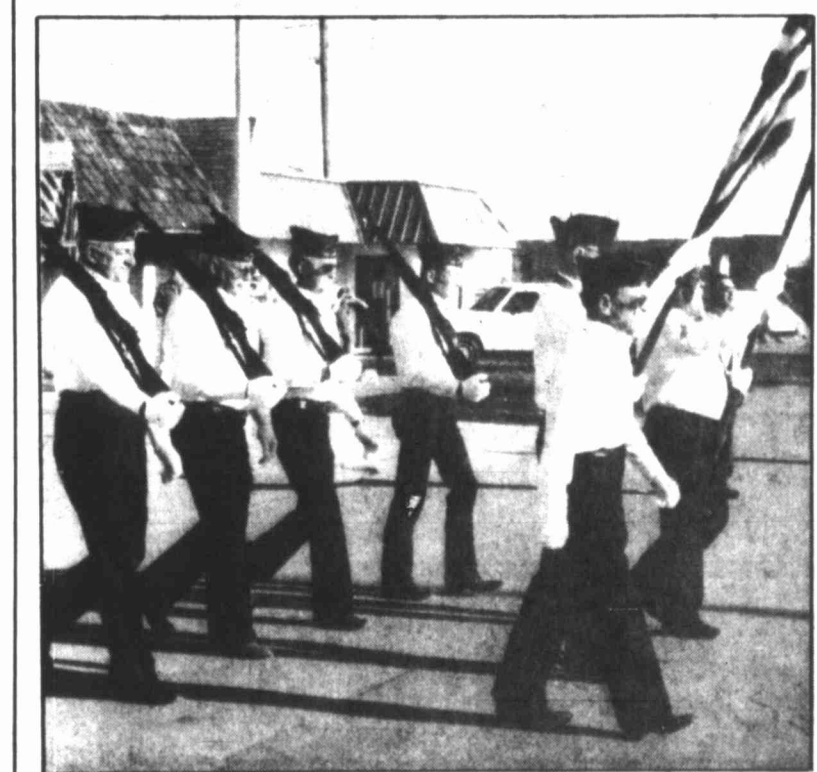

The Agriculture Department says its subsidy program to help sell U.S. wheat and other commodities overseas is practically out of money.

F. Paul Dickerson, general sales manager for the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, said Thursday only about $13 million remained available under the Export Enhancement Program, or EEP.

County residents celebrate victory

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The rally organized to show support for local service men and women became a celebration of the allied victory Thursday afternoon.

The event, which was conducted at the courthouse, honored 54 families with relatives serving in the Persian Gulf and those on active duty.

The rally, which had been planned before the war concluded, quickly became a day for county residents to show their patriotism.

Myrl Mitchell, rally emcee, informed the gathering only one Stanton resident was known to have been injured during the conflict. Jesse Cortez, who is with the U.S. Army, was injured in a Scud attack on a military barracks in Saudi Arabia.

Cortez, 20, is recovering in a military hospital in California from burns received in that attack.

Hundreds of Martin County residents gathered downtown, near trees decorated with yellow ribbons, in front of the courthouse. The names of relatives serving in the Gulf also decorated the trees.

"I'm proud of our community. There were many volunteers." ● RALLY page 10-A

Flag-waving crowd greets returning troops

The first large contingent of U.S. troops from the Persian Gulf War reunited with their loved ones early Friday at Georgia's Fort Stewart as a flag-waving crowd screamed and chanted "U.S.A.! U.S.A.!"

The emotional scene was destined to be repeated in coming weeks at military bases nationwide and in allied countries as hundreds of thousands of troops returned home after months in the Saudi Arabian desert.

A C-141 flying a U.S. flag from the top of its fuselage brought 105 members of the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) back from Saudi Arabia to the same hangar they departed from at Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah in August.

The soldiers then were bused to Fort Stewart, about 40 miles away. Under floodlights in front of a crowd of hundreds, they rejoined spouses, children and other loved ones in a joyous burst of hugging, kissing and crying.

Some people wandered through the crowd, calling out names, unable to immediately find the one person they came to see.

Two more planes carrying about 600 troops from the division were expected later Friday.

Beer was on ice at Fort Stewart and at air bases around the country as several thousand more Gulf War troops were scheduled to return later Friday. A full-scale redeployment of the 540,000 troops sent to the gulf is expected to take several months.

At Hunter airfield, a band played and a crowd cheered wildly as the first group of soldiers walked off the plane. A large banner said, "Welcome Home Heroes."

One soldier kissed the ground. The division's brigadier general, Terry Scott, briefly addressed the crowd, thanking the American people and President Bush.

"I'd like to tell the American people..." ● HOMECOMING page 10-A throughout our area that helped put this together. Over 18 members of our local American Legion Post 429 helped along with other organizations involved in this community project," said County judge Bob Deavenport.

Signs were hung from flag poles and bushes in the area containing messages honoring the country and the military.

Myrl Mitchell, a Lenorah farmer and veteran of World War II, paid homage to the troops and their victory against Iraq.

The high school band, directed by Kirke McKenzie, helped heighten the feelings of patriotism by playing the national anthem. The American Legion Color Guard posted the colors. The guard included: Sgt. Sam Houston, flag bearers — Albert Garza and David Workman; rifle crew — Don Keaton, Marvin Standefer, Glenn Brown and Charles Hale.

The invocation was given by Milton Jocketz, a local minister, and was followed by the band performing "America".

Two former POWs, Workman and Tull Ray Louder, led the pledge of allegiance. While the band played "Duty, Honor and Country", Mike Harris narrated a stirring essay by General Douglas MacArthur.

A salute to county servicemen and women was read by Louder. The 72-year-old veteran, who was held by the Japanese for more than three years, shed tears while recounting his experiences. "We were there for one thing. We were there to do a job and we did it. We are proud of our men and women in our armed forces," Louder said. "We are especially proud of the way they conducted themselves in the Gulf, and the humanity they imparted to surrendering enemy soldiers. That makes me proud to be an American."

The rally continued with the audience singing "America the Beautiful and Battle Hymn of the Republic". The program closed with the retiring of the colors, led by the SHS band and American Legion Color Guard.

The following Martin County residents serving with the U.S. military forces were honored at the rally:

Those serving in the Persian Gulf — N.H. Allen, Jr., William Lee Atwater, Michael S. Bailey, Randy Böhner, Reginald S. Brazel, John L. Brenner, Carl Brunner, Stephen D. Church, Felipe D. (Jesse) Cortez, Levi W. Cronk, Jeffery D. Duke, Ray M. Duke, Robert L. Fortune, Robert C. Geilhausen, Jr., Marty Glendening, Mike Hansen, Sharon Hill Karl Horst, Timothy R. Hull, Bruce W. Newton, Sharon Oldaker, William Oldaker, Virginia Pribyla, Marty Rotering, Troy Scurlock, Jr., Brad L. Simmons, Robert O. Solano, Michael Wright, Chris Yater and Steven M. Yates.

In active duty: George Betterson, Troy W. Bradshaw, Jerry Lee Castro, Michael W. Denman, Ralph Gonzales, Jose Angel Guevara, Jr., Shawn Harrison, Michael Hutchison, Jesse Nevarez, Wade Nicholson, Carlos Ortiz, David Pribyla, Kenneth Pribylas and Michael Wayne Trinaystich.

ASCS plans meeting to discuss farm bill

By NESTOR HERNANDEZ, CED

The Martin County Agricultural and Stabilization and Conservation Service will meet Tuesday, March 12, to review provisions of the 1991 Farm Bill. The meeting will be in the Grady Independent School District auditorium at 9 a.m.

"We will review and discuss program procedures as they relate to the 1991 wheat, feed grain and cotton programs," county ASCS official Nestor Hernandez said. Topics to be discussed include triple base and "flex" acreage, sod-buster and swampbuster provisions, maximum payment acreage, payment limitations and various planting options.

The Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act of 1990 contains several new programs options. "It is important that we acquaint farmers with these options and programs changes before they sign into the program," Hernandez said.

ASCS will also review payment yields, crop acreage bases, 092-5092 planting options, acreage conservation reserve and other farm program requirements.

"All Martin County farmers are invited to attend this meeting," Hernandez said.

people how much we appreciate their support, prayers and confidence during the last seven months. You've truly been our inspiration," Scott said. He also thanked President Bush "for his purpose and resolve and for his concern for us."

Most of the troops were sleepy and subdued on the flight home, although they did get some beer and pizza during a refueling stop at McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey, Scott told reporters.

Officials had said the first plane landing in Georgia would carry one officer and four or five soldiers from each unit in the division. Most of the returning troops are logistics, finance and medical personnel.

The entire division of 18,000 troops will be home in about a month, said Fort Stewart spokesman Dean Wohlgenuth. It was deployed to the Persian Gulf in August.

Scattered small groups of troops already have arrived in the United States.

At Dover Air Force Base in Delaware, Air Force Sgt. Brian

Mann had to dig into three ice chests before he found what he wanted. "Here it is, man. I've got the coldest one," he said, lifting a beer and popping the top.

"All we talked about for seven months was beer and women," said Mann, who was heading back to Myrtle Beach Air Force Base in South Carolina on Thursday.

More than 30 members of Hill Air Force Base's 2952nd Combat Logistics Support Squadron arrived at Salt Lake City International Airport on Wednesday evening, where they were greeted by family and friends.

"We're going to spend as much time together as it takes to make up for the seven months he has been away," said Michelle Ramsburg, whose husband, Staff Sgt. Herbert Ramsburg, left Aug. 9 for duty in the Saudi desert.

Charleston, S.C., and Philadelphia have been selected as two cities where reservists and members of small military units will return to the United States, said Ruth Bievens, a spokeswoman for the Military Traffic Management Command in Virginia.

Revolt

Rafsanjani said. "This is the worst mistake."

The Iranian leader was addressing worshippers gathered at Tehran University for prayers. His comments, carried by Teheran Radio, were monitored in Cyprus.

Baghdad Radio today quoted an unidentified government spokesman as saying it would turn over the 40 foreign reporters and the two American soldiers to Red Cross officials in Baghdad. It said they disappeared "during illegal presence in Basra."

The Baghdad government had refused to say it was holding any missing journalists, who were trying to cover the rebellion in southern Iraq.

Earlier today, two journalists — CBS technician Timothy Dickey and cameraman Chris Everson — surfaced near the Iraq-Kuwait border. Iraqi gunmen had stolen their four-wheel drive vehicle and equipment earlier in the week, and U.S. Army units came across them in the desert.

The Iraqis are also promising to release Kuwaitis abducted during the nearly seven-month Iraqi occupation of the emirate.

The first 1,000 of them — of an estimated 30,000 — were freed Thursday, and some were arriving home today in Kuwait City. They expressed fury at their former captors.

"It was like hell," said Hami Jamal, a 27-year-old computer engineer who was taken from his house by Iraqi troops three weeks ago. "We drank swamp water for days. And for what crimes? For being Kuwaitis."

The official Kuwait News Agency later put the number of released civilians at 1,881, quoting Kuwait's Human Rights Committee.

With the passing of the Persian Gulf War, Secretary of State James A. Baker III turned his attention to another Middle East quarrel — the Arab-Israeli conflict.

En route to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, where he was to hold meetings today, Baker told reporters the United States is prepared to meet with Palestinian Arabs in Israel.

In another mark of rejuvenated Middle East efforts, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar has picked a special representative on the region, U.N. officials said.

They said the Swiss ambassador to the United States, Edouard Brunner, had been tapped for the job and a formal announcement was expected in the next few days.

Cheney cautioned the pace of the U.S. withdrawal hinges on the outcome of the formal cease-fire negotiations with Iraq, as do prospects for the removal of the allied forces occupying much of southern Iraq.

Cheney, in an interview, called the situation in Iraq "somewhat volatile," but said at least for now, it appeared Saddam would be able to keep a grip on power.

Saddam may have more to fear from top Iraqi officials than from civil unrest. According to U.S. intelligence assessments, there are signs of discontent among Saddam's inner circle — political and military allies who would be best positioned for a strike against him.

"He needs to be more concerned about the men in uniform closest to him," said Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

Official Iraqi media, which at first ignored the unrest, made their first overt reference to it on Thursday, in the form of threats against dissidents.

"Everybody who tries to undermine the security of the revolution is a traitor and a mercenary," said the Al-Thawra newspaper. "All of them shall regret it. They will pay."

The warnings came as a Shiite opposition leader said the rebellion had spread to Baghdad. The leader, Ayatollah Mohammed Taqi, said rioting broke out Wednesday in Baghdad's al-Thawra and al-Shulla districts, where many poor Shiite Muslims live.

Payments

Under the program, exporters are paid subsidies in the form of surplus government commodities so they can sell wheat or other designated product to a foreign buyer at competitive prices.

The program was started in 1985 to help offset subsidized exports by other countries, notably the European Community.

Congress last year effectively capped EEP at a level of $425 million for the current fiscal year that began last Oct. 1. Subsidies so far total approximately $412 million, Dickerson said.

Bills have been introduced in Congress to remove the EEP lid and boost funding in order to maintain U.S. farm export competitiveness.

PROTECT YOUR RIGHTS—

file tax rendition!

Monday April 1991

RENDER YOUR PROPERTY

A rendition is a report to the appraisal district that lists all the taxable property you own or control on January 1, 1991. The form is available at your local appraisal district or you may draft a similar form.

You must file a rendition if you own tangible personal property used to produce income—such as the inventory and equipment used by a business.

The appraisal district may require any taxpayer to file a rendition by sending the taxpayer a written notice and a rendition form.

The advantages of filing a rendition:

- You give your opinion of your property's value. If the appraisal district wants a higher value for your property, it must notify you in writing of the higher value and explain how you can protest that value to the appraisal review board.
- You record your correct mailing address so your tax bills will go to the right address. If your bill is mailed to the wrong address, the law still holds you responsible for paying your taxes on time or paying extra charges for late payments.
- You can also file a report of decreased value, to notify the appraisal district of significant depreciation to your property in 1990. The district will look at your property before assigning a value in 1991.

The last day for filing or post-marking 1991 renditions is Monday, April 1. You can get an extra 30 days if you ask for it in writing before the April 1 deadline.

File renditions with your local appraisal district at the address shown below.
