Less monitoring may reduce costs

The city has received news that may cut the costs of the planned renovation at the wastewater treatment plant, Assistant City Manager Tom Decell said.

Decell told the City Council Tuesday that the plant will not be required to maintain low ammonium nitrogen levels year-round, as previously believed. Instead, monitoring of those levels must only take place six months out of each year.

"This will cut the 20-year (operations and maintenance) cost," Decell said. "It will cut power costs — electricity and some maintenance."

The renovation costs, however, will not be affected. Construction work, originally expected to cost more than $7.6 million, has been re-estimated at $5.9 million.

Renovations are planned because of tightening federal and state permit requirements.

Union Pacific helps United Way

The Union Pacific Foundation has begun distributing $1.2 million in grants to 129 Texas institutions.

Among the institutions receiving these grants is the United Way of Big Spring. They will be receiving a check for $3,000, said United Way of Big Spring Executive Director Sherrie Bordofsky.

Union Pacific Foundation has been awarding grant money since 1959. According to a press release, in 1991, the Foundation will be awarding $7 million.

Veterans sponsor golf scramble

The Texas Legislature has designated Saturday "Because I Care Bone Marrow Awareness Day in Texas." Volunteers across Texas will be participating in a variety of events to promote awareness and to raise funds for testing new donors.

Donors are urgently needed because the chances of finding a match between unrelated people is only 1 in 20,000. Potential donors give a sample of blood for testing, but tissue typing costs $35. Funds are needed to help defray testing expenses.

In Big Spring Rackley Swords Chapter 379 of Vietnam Veterans will sponsor a four-person scramble golf tournament Saturday at the Big Spring Country Club.

Tee time is 8:30 a.m. Entry fee is $30 per person and does not include green fees or golf cart. First, second and third place finishers will receive gift certificates to the Big Spring Country Club.

Proceeds will go to the Bone Marrow Donor Foundation.

If you do not golf, donations will be gratefully accepted. For more information, call 276-1267.

Refugees fear Saddam as U.S. troops pull out

SAFWAN, Iraq (AP) — Refugees who sought the protection of U.S. forces in southern Iraq are now facing what is to many a terrifying prospect: Iraqi police will be moving into the border demilitarized zone.

"Many of us will be executed for opposing Saddam. They will write down our names and kill our families," said Ali H. Ali, a teacher from the southern city of Najaf. "The police will arrest us and kidnap us."

It also is not clear who will feed the refugees now that the Americans, whose deepest penetration had been to the Euphrates River, are leaving.

U.S. forces have stopped issuing ration cards to new refugees, said Maj. Tom Grubbs, of Olney, Md., who helps administer the refugee camp in Safwan.

However, relatively few new people have arrived at the Safwan camp during this week's U.S. pullout. In fact, a few dozen appear to be heading back to their homes in southern Iraq, said Grubbs.

The U.N. observer force is not mandated to care for refugees and the U.N. High Commission of Refugees has not announced any plans to do so.

Some U.S. soldiers will remain temporarily with the refugees in the demilitarized zone until the U.N. Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission, a lightly armed 1,440-person peacekeeping contingent, is in place.

But more of the Americans will soon be gone.

About half the 540,000 American troops have left the theater, the U.S. Central Command said.

Tens of thousands more in southern Iraq, including the 17,000 troops of the 1st Infantry Division of the V Corps began leaving this week with the acceptance of a formal cease-fire ending the Persian

CrimeStoppers begin fundraising

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

Big Spring Area CrimeStoppers President Sam Barron said he doesn't mind that the organization is broke.

A base of only $10,000 has aided in solving seven murders among numerous other crimes, as well as recovering more than $1.5 million in stolen goods during only 10 years, he said. The organization recently began a funding drive locally.

"CrimeStoppers is for real," Barron said. "The last 10 years have been almost unbelievable for us." He said estimates of crimes solved are "very conservative."

CrimeStoppers operates by taking "tips" from local citizens who have information about crimes committed. "Tipsters" call 263-8477 (263-TIPS) and give information to law enforcement officials. All callers remain anonymous.

If the tip helps solve a crime, the tipster can be paid a cash reward, the amount depending on the severity of the crime.

In order for the organization to continue its work, local support is needed, Barron said.

"The reasons are obvious," he said. "CrimeStoppers is by and large a local operation. It belongs to Howard County." The drive for funds is aided by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, of which CrimeStoppers is a part.

Letters have been mailed to members of the chamber, requesting donations. All money donated to the organization will be used as reward money for tipsters. "We're just starting out on this (funding drive)," Barron said. Later plans include advertising in the local media and the possibility of a campaign for support from individuals in the community.

Lt. Terry Chamness, spokesperson of the Big Spring Police Department, said CrimeStoppers has been a valuable tool in local law enforcement.

"The best thing about it is that people can remain anonymous... and they can be paid for helping us out," he said. "It has been very successful."

Howard County Sheriff's Deputy George Quintero said CrimeStoppers is a "must-have" in the community.

"It has helped us in the past with everything from simple misdemeanors, to capturing a (criminal) in Austin, to getting information on murders," he said. "We get calls about who's stealing gas from convenience stores... all they way to some of our capital murder investigations."

Barron said the organization's visibility has increased locally, allowing it to increase its scope.

"We used to be virtually unknown," Barron said. "Now that we're starting to get noticed, we're hoping that will work in our favor."

A non-profit organization, CrimeStoppers operates with help from volunteers from the community and chamber support.

The newest addition to the Big Spring Fire Department arrived during the weekend. This 1991 Emergency One pumper will spend the next two weeks being readied for service at the 18th and Main fire station. Fire Chief Frank Anderson said the truck will allow the department to begin using a system of more efficient and safer firefighting.

Fire department proud owners of new 'top-of-the-line' pumper

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

Fire Chief Frank Anderson talks about his department's new truck like a proud father.

Anderson watched while city maintenance employees on Monday checked the new arrival against a 39-page specification list. The 1991 Emergency One pumper arrived over the weekend, about two weeks earlier than Anderson had hoped.

"You could put this new truck up against anybody's in the country," he said. The shiny red, white and silver E-One is powered with a 300-horsepower diesel engine and equipped with an automatic transmission.

It has a pumping capacity of 1,250 gallons per minute. Its body has a 20-year warranty against rust.

For night firefighting, the truck has high-intensity lights that will be powered by a generator, not the truck battery. Strobe lights in front ensure that the E-One will be visible to local drivers.

At $195,000, the truck is "top of the line," Anderson said. He estimated its endurance at far past the 30-year mark.

"The two rookies we have now, (Mark Settles and Kevin Gehrig), this truck will probably be on our front line long after they've finished their careers," Anderson said.

"I have to say that this is one of the finest pieces of equipment that's been brought into the city. The council recommended that we get the best, and that's what we did."

Fire Chief Frank Anderson

He said he hopes the truck can help start a new era in firefighting locally. Firefighters will use a "direct attack" method with the E-One, a technique that uses three firefighters and is considered much more efficient and safer.

One firefighter would be responsible for hooking up hose at the hydrant, while two would continue to the fire to begin suppression as well as search and rescue.

"We'll man it that way when it's possible," Anderson explained. "You can't really use this truck any other way."

Because of staffing shortages, the department has been working with two men on a truck for several years, a situation that often left one firefighter alone at the scene or delayed the initial attack.

There is little question about the department's need for a new truck. Late last year, several trucks failed to pass a State Board of Insurance inspection. At various points throughout the year, trucks have suffered mechanical problems. The E-One was joined at the city maintenance facility Monday by the department's tanker truck, its hood up.

One of two 1964 Mack pumpers will be replaced by the E-One this year, and Anderson said he hopes to be able to replace the other next year. The Big Spring City Council last year supported Anderson's purchase of the new truck, financing it and new police cars with contractual obligations.

An Orlando, Fla. company built the E-One basically "from scratch" with Anderson's detailed specifications. Capt. Alex Calvio and firefighter Kerry Horton traveled there last week to tour the plant and learn about the truck before driving it back to Big Spring.

Other firefighters will spend a couple of weeks getting comfortable with the E-One before it is put into service at the 18th and Main fire station.

"I have to say that this is one of the finest pieces of equipment that's been brought into the city," Anderson said. "The council recommended that we get the best, and that's what we did."

COAHOMA — Sheriff Deputy Woodie Howell was his first day as the full-time deputy assigned to Coahoma.

New deputy assigned full time to Coahoma

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

COAHOMA — Sheriff Deputy Woodie Howell, 31, assumed responsibility for covering the town of Coahoma, population 1,100, Monday.

On his first day on the job, Howell could be seen pushing a woman's stalled van off Broadway Street and then, only a couple hours later, interrogating a man suspected of ripping up the walls of a home he used to rent.

Those are just some of the routine duties Howell performed during a busy three-hour period Monday.

Besides patrolling the area, he also gave a teenager a ride after his car stalled, assisted a woman who called him asking how to take care of an out-of-town traffic ticket, stopped to offer assistance to a truck driver fixing his trailer, helped two men work out differences over a missing VCR and electrical equipment and soothed a family disturbance over the custody of a child.

In addition, he picked up a bullet which an upholsterer had dug out of a car seat from a victimless shooting a couple weeks ago, collected incriminating evidence in an illegal trash-dumping incident and followed a school bus to make sure no motorist illegally passed it.

Howell, who has lived in Coahoma the past year, has included Coahoma in his patrols since he joined the department in 1985. But on Monday he officially became the full-time deputy assigned to serve the area. He replaces Ben Lockhart, who last year was elected as Howard County Judge.

"He always takes real good care of us out here," said Coahoma State Bank President Dub Moore. "They've checked on us like we were their own kids."

That is exactly how Howell plans to approach his new job. "I'm going to be very accessible to the people."

About 1,200 apply for flood relief

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — More than 1,200 applications for federal and state flood disaster aid have been filed in Cameron County.

President Bush on Friday declared the South Texas county a disaster area at the request of Gov. Ann Richards after residents suffered a string of storms, tornadoes and flooding April 5-6.

Monday was the first day flooding victims could contact the Federal Emergency Management Agency in Harlingen and file relief applications.

The 1,200 who filed did so by phone before the relief agency opened its doors Monday, according to a FEMA press release.

Officials are urging Cameron County residents with an uninsured loss from the disaster to apply for the aid. Also, some assistance is available to car owners who suffered vehicle damage.

Extradition hearing set for prison guard

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — An extradition hearing was scheduled in California Tuesday for a former Texas prison guard wanted in connection with the murder of an inmate.

Luis Sandoval, accused in the 1986 murder of an inmate, was arrested in Los Angeles Friday by FBI agents after nearly a month-long search.

Sandoval was scheduled to go on trial March 18 in Huntsville for the murder of inmate Joe Arrendondo in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's Ellis I Prison Unit.

Prosecutors say Arrendondo was beaten and stabbed after Sandoval left a prison unit door open, allowing rival gang members to get to him.

Sandoval has been in contact with his attorney, Steve Fischer, after he fled to Mexico. However, he did not follow Fischer's advice to turn himself in to El Paso authorities.

Fischer has instructed his client to waive extradition so that his trial can begin May 20.

Family violence bill OK'd by Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate approved and sent to the governor a proposal recognizing the plight of people who may have been imprisoned for fighting back following abuse at home.

The Senate accepted House amendments Monday to a resolution asking the governor to direct the state Board of Pardons and Paroles to review the cases of all people in prison for murder or manslaughter if it appeared they had been the victims of family violence.

Board recommendations for possible pardons or clemency would be forwarded to the governor.

Senators also accepted House amendments and sent to the governor a bill authorizing penalties for those who interfere with animals used in agriculture, research, education or exhibitions.

Negotiator says no rush on pact

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Mexico wants a free trade agreement, but will take its time negotiating with its North American counterparts, Mexico's top agriculture negotiator said.

"The negotiation will take as much time as is needed...one year, two years," said Israel Gutierrez Guerrero, director of sectoral coordination for Mexico's Trade Ministry. "We are not in a hurry."

Gutierrez spoke Monday at the International Agricultural Trade on the Border Conference sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

He said U.S. farmers should not fear being overwhelmed by Mexican commodities after trade barriers are lifted. Mexico, he said, is the fourth largest customer for U.S. agricultural products, and would buy even more if free trade were allowed to strengthen the Mexican economy.

The agreement would keep the United States, Canada and Mexico competitive with Europe and Asia, he said.

Since 1975, U.S. agricultural exports to Mexico have increased more than four-fold, to $2.7 billion in 1990, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Mexico sold about $2.3 billion in agricultural products to the United States in 1990.

Some in agriculture fear that with free trade production could move to Mexico, where labor is cheaper. Others, however, have said free trade could open new markets for them in Mexico.

Gutierrez said the agreement lifting trade barriers between Mexico, the United States and Canada probably would include a lengthy transition period for some agricultural products.

U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said at the conference Monday that the transition period would last up to 20 years.

Tariffs and other trade barriers would be phased out over that transition period, to allow industries in the three countries time to adjust to life without that type of protection, de la Garza said.

"It would have a 10- to 20-year phase-in period," De la Garza said.

De la Garza said it also would include permanent "snap-back" provisions similar to those in the 1988 U.S.-Canada agreement. Snap-back tariffs would go into effect when certain imported commodities began to flood a national market.

The U.S. Congress must decide by June 1 whether to extend President Bush's authority to negotiate a "fast-track" agreement.

The fast-track approach would require Congress either to accept or reject the agreement without amending it.

Leaders of Canada, the United States and Mexico want a trilateral agreement, but internal opposition still could derail it. Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari on Saturday concluded a week-long trip in which he campaigned in favor of free trade in the United States and Canada.

De la Garza said he believes the interests of agriculture would be served best through the fast-track approach "rather than negotiate it on the House floor."

The absence of fast track authority could doom a free trade agreement.

Sex business ordinance ruled unconstitutional

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that Ector County's ordinance regulating sexually oriented businesses is unconstitutional and awarded monetary damages to owner of an adult bookstore and four of her employees.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ruled Monday that the ordinance "did not pass constitutional muster."

Some county commissioners said they will revamp the ordinance in order to make it legally acceptable.

The ruling came a week after a two-day trial to decide if Sharon Lee Wright, owner of B&L Bookstore, and her employees were wrongfully arrested under the county ordinance.

The judge ruled portions of the ordinance were too vague, including the use of the word "operates" which brought into question just who is considered an operator of a sexually oriented business.

Ms. Wright, who had sought $22 million in the suit, was awarded $1,000. B&L employees Terry Dale Miles, Wanda Jean Barrett, Paul Eugene Hudson and Loretta Mae Johnson Hudson each were awarded $100.

They also were awarded attorney's fees and court costs.

Ms. Wright and her employees were arrested June 1 and 2, 1990, and charged with operating a sexually oriented business without a license. A county ordinance adopted Feb. 28, 1990, regulates the location, licensing and inspection of sexually oriented businesses. The license costs $500.

Miles and Mrs. Hudson additionally were charged with possession of obscene devices.

Wright's husband, Jimmy Wayne Wright, who also was arrested during the raids, was awarded $100 in the judgment.

Defense lawyer Gerald Hopkins of Houston argued that the ordinance restricted First Amendment rights and violated the plaintiffs' civil rights in light of the arrests and a subsequent 10-day shutdown of the bookstore.

Odessa attorney Richard Bonner, who represented the county, said he had not received a copy of the ruling and would meet with the Ector County Commissioners Court before deciding the county's next step.

Bunton noted in his ruling that the ordinance failed to specify the status of an application for a sexually oriented business awaiting licensing from the sheriff's department.

The "implicit denial" of a license, which means the application would be turned down if the sheriff took no action in 30 days, was unconstitutional, according to the ruling.

The ordinance also contained no provision for prompt judicial review of a denied license.

Child porn defendant charged

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — The administrator of a psychiatric hospital who has been charged with receiving child pornography has been accused of burglarizing the home of a hospital employee.

Bryan Allen Hale, administrator of Glen Hospital, was arrested Monday on a charge in connection with an Odessa burglary.

Hale, 47, of Midland, was being held at the Odessa City Jail on $50,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Dennis Bright.

Federal prosecutors Monday filed a motion to seek a psychological evaluation of Hale to determine if he is competent to stand trial on the Hale was granted $25,000 bond Friday by U.S. Magistrate Judge Robert Sykes on the receipt of pornography charge but spent the weekend in the Midland Detention Center because a condition of his release was not met, U.S. Marshal Albert Arias said.

Arias said the person designated to conduct electronic monitoring of Hale was gone for the weekend and Hale remained in custody.

The judge had ruled that Hale could be released on bond under strict conditions of release, including the electronic monitoring and an order to stay away from children.

Hale was arrested following a three-month correspondence with an undercover customs agent in which the hospital administrator alleged requested a copy of "Educating Valerie," a videotape that authorities said contained explicit scenes depicting sexual acts involving a young girl and her father.

Odessa Police said Hale was arrested Monday afternoon a charge of burglary of a habitation, a first-degree felony.

Police said that Marilee Anne Kyler said that while she was on vacation between March 29 and April 1 someone broke into her home and took several documents.

The documents included a florist's card, a memo pad sheet with phone numbers on it, a sheet of paper and two pages of notes, police said.

One of the notes taken from Ms. Kyler's home was from Hale, her employer, according to Detective Cpl. E. Martinez.

An affidavit from Martinez said that U.S. Customs Special Agent Joe Kemp Johnson found items Ms. Kyler had reported missing from her home while he was searching Hale's office at the hospital.

Groups offer divergent proposals on tax day

AUSTIN (AP) — The conservative Texas Public Policy Foundation made an across-the-board condemnation of taxes in general, specifically income taxes, while the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws asked to be taxed.

It was tax day at the Capitol on Monday.

"We're the only people in Texas, saying, 'Tax us, please,'" Greg Clark, director of the state chapter of NORML, said.

Clark said legalizing and taxing marijuana would produce billions of dollars in state revenue, reduce law enforcement costs, and rid Texas of a black market run by drug lords.

Clark said Texas' "Al Capone Law," in which persons convicted of illegal drug offenses can also be prosecuted for tax evasion if they didn't buy a state drug tax stamp, is not fair because it subjects people to double jeopardy.

Capitol police stood outside the NORML news conference because they said there had been complaints about the smell of marijuana. Several participants at the news conference smoked hand rolled cigarettes, but they said they were smoking a legal substance.

Prior to NORML's news conference, the Texas Public Policy Foundation, headed by Tex Lezar, an unsuccessful Republican candidate last year for state attorney general, blasted proposals for a state income tax.

"Both higher taxes and a state income tax would be devastating to the Texas economy," he said.

Lezar said cutting waste and increasing efficiency, rather than raising taxes, would solve the state's projected $4 billion deficit.

Stephen Moore, director of fiscal policy at the conservative Cato Institute in Washington, D.C., said state income taxes cause businesses to move elsewhere, and that politicians misled the public when they push a state income tax as a replacement for other taxes.

Budget session set for summer

AUSTIN (AP) — The state budget likely will be written in a special session around July, and it would be "foolish" to predict a tax increase will not be needed, says House Speaker Gib Lewis.

"I don't see any way that anybody that wants to be practical about state government can say we will not require some type of a tax increase," he said Monday.

The state faces an estimated $4.6 billion budget shortfall to maintain services over the next two years.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, has maintained that the state budget should be written this regular session, which ends May 27.

But after meeting Monday with Gov. Ann Richards and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, Lewis said he was willing to wait until comprehensive audits of state agency spending are completed and a special committee on taxes makes recommendations July 1.

"They felt very strongly about waiting until July," Lewis said.

Richards and Bullock have supported a summer budget session.

"That was the agreement in January, when we passed the audit bill. All of us agreed to take state government and give it a good shaking and get to the bottom of our state budget," Bullock said.

Lewis said lawmakers planned to write a two-year state budget, as they traditionally do.

Richards said she may call the special session to begin in June or July, depending on lawmakers' preference.

Next shuttle flight set for April 23

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — In one of the shortest intervals between liftoffs in NASA history, the space agency has set April 23 for the launch of Discovery and a crew of seven on a mission to conduct Star Wars experiments.

NASA officials set the date after a review Monday. The countdown for the shuttle's 7:05 a.m. liftoff begins Saturday.

During eight days in orbit, the astronauts will operate instruments that will study the shuttle's exhaust plumes, chemical and gas releases, and the atmosphere — information needed to develop sensors for tracking enemy missiles.

The last shuttle to fly in space,

Atlantis, lifted off April 5 and returned on Thursday.

Discovery's liftoff 18 days after Atlantis would mark the first time NASA has sent up two shuttles in the same month.

The shortest interval between launches was the 16 days in January 1986 between the liftoff of Columbia and the ill-fated Challenger mission.

The last two shuttle flights of 1990 were 17 days apart because of delays caused by hydrogen leaks. Two missions in 1985 began 17 days apart.

Discovery was to have gone up in early March, before Atlantis, but it had to be taken back to the hangar to replace cracked door hinges.

Researchers resist fetal tissue ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's ban on federal financing of research involving fetal tissue from elective abortions is choking off progress toward possible cures for devastating diseases, opponents say.

"Those of us depending on this work are hostages of abortion politics," Joan Samuelson, a Santa Rosa, Calif., lawyer who has Parkinson's disease, told the House Energy and Commerce health subcommittee Monday.

She called the ban "misguided and heartless," and said that as long as abortion remains legal in the United States "it makes no sense to require that the remains be destroyed instead of being used to save lives."

Ms. Samuelson and other witnesses testified that fetal tissue transplantation is no different from other organ transplantation and should not be held to a different standard.

Guy Walden of Houston, father of the first child to have had a fetus-to-fetus transplant in the United States, said that while he and his wife are ardently opposed to abortion, "stopping this tissue from being used isn't going to bring (the aborted fetus) back."

First Lady not worried about books

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Bush is laughing off the possibility that anyone will write any tell-all books about her years in the White House.

"In our case, in all honesty, there's just not a whole bunch to tell," the first lady told reporters Monday.

Mrs. Bush, who last week dismissed Kitty Kelley's titillating new biography of Nancy Reagan as "trash and fiction," said the former first lady called to thank her.

She scoffed at the suggestion that a first lady could arrange secret liaisons in the White House, as the Kelley book suggests Mrs. Reagan did with entertainer Frank Sinatra.

"The truth is a thousand people walk through this house... the ushers, the household help," she said. "Nobody can come up and not be seen.... And where's the back door?"

The first lady also said her son Neil was being "persecuted" by federal thrift officials for his role in a bankrupt Denver savings and loan. She said the entire Bush family has rallied behind him.

TOKYO — President Mikhail Gorbachev of the Soviet Union inspects Japan Self-Defense Force's Honor guard during a welcoming ceremony at the state guest house in Tokyo Tuesday. Gorbachev arrived in Tokyo earlier in the day on a four-day state visit.

Gorbachev in Japan seeks economic help

TOKYO (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev began the first visit by a Soviet head of state to Japan today by seeking a reconciliation that would lead to Japanese help for the crumbling Soviet economy.

With little negotiating room on a thorny territorial dispute, Gorbachev offered conciliatory gestures aimed at putting historical resentments to rest.

In his only public remarks today, the Soviet president expressed condolences for the deaths of tens of thousands of Japanese prisoners of war in Siberian labor camps more than 40 years ago, although he stopped short of a formal apology.

"Giving the tribute of respect to the memory of the war dead from both sides and expressing condolences to the families of the prisoners of war who died abroad, we say it is time to do everything we can so that our peoples and states will never again drift into the disaster of enmity," Gorbachev said in a toast at a banquet given by Emperor Akihito this evening.

The emperor, in turn, said he was "happy that there is growing enthusiasm in every segment of both countries for deepening mutual understanding and trust and building up a new neighborhood relationship."

In their first summit, Gorbachev and Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu spent more than three hours discussing issues including the territorial dispute that prevented their two nations from ever signing a World War II peace treaty.

After the talks, officials said the two leaders had agreed not to disclose any details of their discussions on the disputed Kuril Islands off northern Japan.

However, a Soviet official today floated a proposal for use of one of the disputed islands: the construction of a nuclear power plant to be run jointly by the Soviet Union and Japan.

A Japanese Foreign Ministry official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Kaifu accepted an invitation from Gorbachev to visit Moscow.

"We want to settle past matters and start and build new, friendly relations," a Japanese Foreign Ministry official quoted Kaifu as saying.

The Soviet president's chief spokesman, Vitaly N. Ignatenko, said the Soviet leader pointed to Moscow's improved ties with Europe and the United States and contrasted them with chilly Moscow-Tokyo relations.

President orders civil disobedience

MOSCOW (AP) — Georgia's new president issued a sweeping decree today instructing the southern republic's government agencies to use strikes and civil disobedience to support its declaration of independence from Moscow.

Zviad Gamsakhurdia, flexing his strong new presidential powers for the first time, also ordered the creation of a government-controlled news service to distribute information about Georgia outside its borders.

The decree was published in local newspapers two days after Georgia's parliament voted to create a strong presidency and unanimously elected Gamsakhurdia to serve until popular elections are held May 26.

If obeyed, the decree would be a strong show of defiance against Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and his twin goals of reviving the economy and reuniting the 15 diverse republics in a new federation.

A widespread strike also could wreak havoc in the Soviet economy, already battered by a 7-week-old strike by 300,000 coal miners. The strike spread today to include 17 sympathetic enterprises in the Ukraine, said Sergei Melnik, deputy chairman of the strike committee.

Gorbachev has insisted that republics wanting to secede from the Soviet Union must follow a legal process that could take five years or longer.

Winnie Mandela testifies in trial

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Winnie Mandela took the stand today in her kidnapping and assault trial, and her defense team said it would show she was not at her home when four young men were allegedly beaten.

Chief defense lawyer George Bizos told the court he would call witnesses to show Mrs. Mandela did not take part in any kidnapping or assault. He also said he would call witnesses to show there was homosexual abuse at a church home that figures in the case.

Bizos also said he would subpoena various journalists about articles they wrote on the case. The journalists involved have indicated they were not ready to reveal confidential sources.

Mrs. Mandela began testifying about her background and political work. She spoke about her marriage to African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela and being prosecuted for anti-apartheid work.

She also said that rooms at the back of her home in the black township of Soweto were used as a refuge by youths who were homeless or fleeing from the police for political reasons.

"My place was some kind of refuge," she said.

Italian army cleaning up beaches

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Italian soldiers today cleaned up tar balls and oil patches that reached the shoreline after a supertanker loaded with millions of gallons of crude oil exploded, burned and sank off the Italian Riviera.

However, most of the ship's cargo remained aboard the tanker, which sank Sunday 1 1/2 miles off the coast, port officials said.

Hundreds of troops arrived today in Arenzano, west of Genoa, and were dispatched to help anti-pollution teams clean 12 miles of shoreline.

The ship, the Haven, burned for three days and was rocked by several explosions. It settled to the bottom of the Mediterranean intact, port officials have said.

An estimated 1.5 million gallons of Iranian crude spilled from the tanker before it sank.

Quotas will not solve poverty

The civil-rights battle is about to resume in Congress. Partisan debate will focus on quotas, on whether making it easier for workers to win discrimination suits will give minorities preferential treatment.

Most white voters don't like quotas, so expect many political speeches and news analyses about the Q-word.

New civil-rights laws are needed. But all the carping about quotas obscures the most pressing problem for American blacks — poverty and disenfranchisement.

Right now, blacks are not competing in the job market widely enough for whites to worry about reverse discrimination. A disproportionate percentage of blacks are mired in poverty.

Young black men are more likely to go to prison than to college. Health care in poor neighborhoods is so bad that life expectancy is dropping. Median income for black families is 56 percent of white income. Violence and crime are much worse in poor neighborhoods than in middle-class ones. Drug addiction is more intractable. Public schools are much worse. And there's little job-training, and even less employment.

Ending job discrimination may be the path out of poverty for some. But many of our nation's poor are abjectly unprepared to enter the job market. Politicians find it easier to fine tune civil-rights laws than to solve the conundrum of poverty.

What should be done? Attack the root of poverty. To begin, we must remake inner-city schools into centers for empowering the poor, not just for education, but for tutoring, health care, child care, job training, counseling and therapy, and three meals a day.

Expensive? Maybe. But anyone who says we can help America's poor without spending more money isn't being honest.

Even more expensive is losing a segment of Americans to poverty and hopelessness for generation after generation. That's what is happening today, and civil rights legislation alone isn't going to change it.

Invitations to address joint meeting rarely given

BY STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Does a nation's political leader outrank a national deity in the eyes of Congress?

Could be, but that doesn't explain why Nicaraguan President Violeta Chamorro gets the honor this week of addressing a joint meeting of Congress in the House chamber while Tibet's Dalai Lama is relegated to an appearance in the Capitol Rotunda.

Other than the president of the United States, there's no automatic invitation for anyone to make the Big Speech in the chamber. Congressional leaders respond case by case and weigh each request based on protocol, politics and pressure.

That's because the speeches are considered an honor, not a forum for what Congress needs to hear so much as an opportunity for Congress to cheer.

And the speaker of the House, who issues the invitation, turns down many times more requests than he accepts.

Senators and House members may seem to enjoy the pomp of the place, but most don't like listening to speeches. Few lawmakers attend Congress' own debates, and they don't turn out for the addresses by outsiders.

Attendance can be so bad that aides have to scramble to find staffers and pages to fill the House chamber. "No tourist is going to be safe within 20 yards of the Capitol if he's got a coat and tie on," one senior Senate official joked.

Joint meetings also disrupt the normal work day in Congress. Senators especially dislike them, since they must trudge across the Capitol to the larger House chamber. The Senate chamber is so small, one House aide quipped that "once you get all 100 senators in there along with their egos, there's no room for anybody else."

So the only automatic invitation goes to the president, who in modern times appears at least once a year, for the State of the Union address. His presence calls for a joint session, one step up from a joint meeting for others. Sometimes that's the only speech from an outsider to Congress all year.

After the president, dignitaries from the closest U.S. allies are most likely to get an invitation. Queen Elizabeth II's scheduled speech next month is a typical example.

Next down the pecking order are foreign heads of state the United States wants to encourage. Nicaragua's Chamorro, whose election ousted the leftist Sandinistas, is such a case.

Invitations to private citizens are the rarest. Lech Walesa of Poland spoke to Congress before he was elected to political office in his country. Black South African leader Nelson Mandela also was honored with a joint meeting.

If there's controversy or opposition within Congress or at the White House or even within the diplomatic community, the request to speak probably will be turned down.

Such is the case with the Dalai Lama, the venerated spiritual leader of Tibet whose resistance to the Chinese occupation of his country is a sensitive matter to the Bush administration.

During President Carter's term, almost nobody passed muster. Only Canada's Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau addressed Congress.

More recently, then-House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, wanted to invite Costa Rican President Oscar Arias to address a joint meeting, but conservatives distrusted him. Instead, Wright held an informal joint Democratic and Republican caucus to hear the speech.

The first foreign citizen to address the Congress was the Marquis de Lafayette, the French general and hero of the American Revolution, who, late in life, called on Congress and was cheered by the lawmakers in 1824.

One could argue that another foreigner claimed the podium a decade earlier, but it was hardly a welcome occasion. During the British invasion of Washington in the War of 1812, Rear Adm. George Cockburn stood at the speaker's spot and mockingly asked his men to vote on whether to burn the Capitol.

Without dissent, his motion was approved and a bonfire of desks and anything else that would burn was built.

The speeches, even the Dalai Lama's in the Rotunda, require passage of resolutions in the House and Senate. But sometimes, things can be a little more impromptu.

Soon after he became president, Richard Nixon returned to the Senate and received permission to speak on the spot.

George Bush could do the same thing. But anybody else has to wait in line.

Kitty Kelley ruins White House stay

"I'm toying with the idea of running for president of the United States. How would you like to be first lady?" I asked my wife.

"Not while Kitty Kelley's alive," she replied.

"What can she do to you?" I said.

"Nobody wants to be the president's wife and show up on Kitty Kelley's computer screen."

"But you'd make a wonderful first lady. What could she possibly write about you that would be negative?"

"Nothing until she talks to my 'good' friends."

"We've never smoked pot," I reminded her.

"You know that and I know that, but what's to prevent someone with a grudge against us from saying otherwise?"

"Who would do such a thing?"

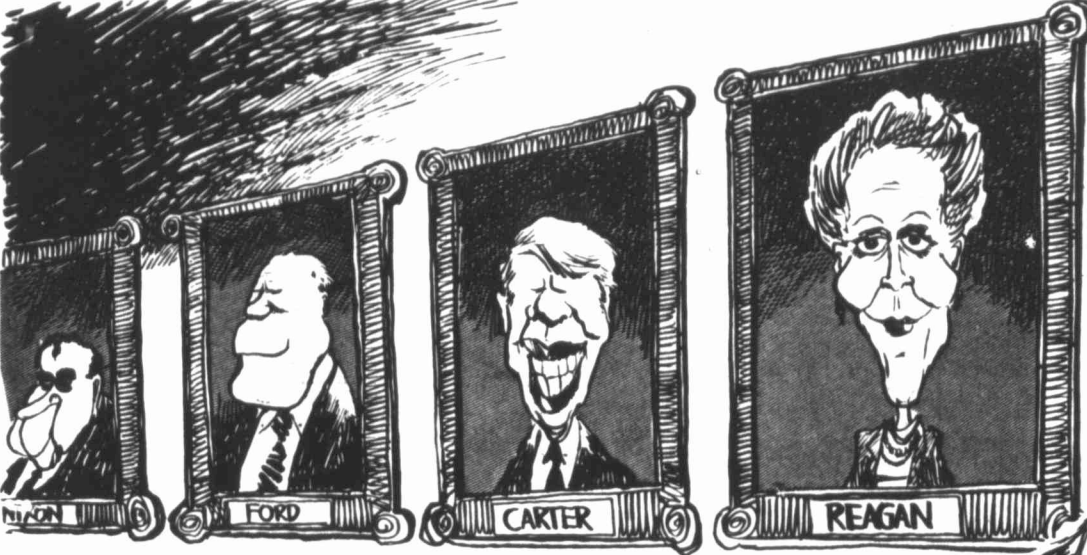

"How about high administration sources who mow the lawn at Camp David? Suppose the White House pastry chef tells Kitty that I make my own clothes?"

"Look, just because Kitty Kelley wrote a tough book about Nancy Reagan doesn't mean she would write the same kind of stuff about you."

"Why not?"

"Because she needs a change of pace. I'm willing to bet that once you had Kitty over for tea, she'd treat you like an East Coast Madonna."

"I am so afraid that if you run for president, Kitty would discover that I make all the decisions in this family. You don't even know whether to stand up or sit down when they play 'Hail to the Chief.'"

I laughed. "That's ridiculous. Everyone knows we're a team. Besides, who would tell them otherwise?"

"An embittered hairdresser, a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, a jealous salesgirl at Bloomingdale's. It just doesn't seem worth it to be the most powerful woman in America if people are going to throw mud at you to feed the public's insatiable appetite for gossip."

"I think that you are overreacting. But before I make my decision to run, I would like to ask you one question so that it doesn't haunt us later on. Has Frank Sinatra ever been on the second floor of our house?"

For some reason, this angered my wife and she yelled, "He's never even been in the basement."

"So," I said, "we have nothing to worry about. Just stick with your story no matter what the National Enquirer says."

She was adamant. "If you run for president and are elected, I will refuse to be the first lady of the land."

"But where will you live?"

"Right here in our house. I'll fax my instructions to you about how to run the government. It's the only way to foil Kitty Kelley."

"I don't want to sit in the Oval Office without you faithfully at my side," I told her.

"Now you're making sense. No presidency is worth the paper an unauthorized biography is printed on."

"What if Kitty Kelley decides to write a book about you even though you aren't first lady?"

"Why would she want to do that?" my wife asked.

"To follow up on the Frank Sinatra angle," I said.

To marketers on Madison Avenue

By EUNICE CHOATE
For the Herald

In the April 1st issue of Newsweek an article called "Dipping Into Granny's Wallet" caught my attention. Here is a paraphrased sentence to give you the gist of what it was about. "As seniors become more affluent," it said, "and have more grandchildren to spoil, marketers of childrens products are realizing that 'there's gold in them thar grandparents.'"

First of all, I'm not a senior. I graduated from high school in 1956, and I haven't been a senior since. I am a fifty-three year old citizen of the United States with the right to vote, to bear arms, and to thumb my nose at marketers bent on digging around in my pockets.

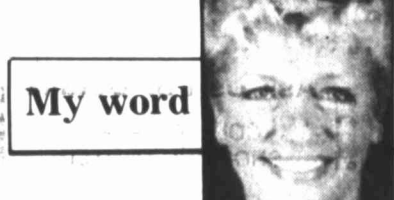

Second, the disrespect implicit in the use of terms like "granny" and "gramps" by the marketers (and Newsweek), is enough to keep my purse and its contents, "off limits," to them and their patronizing attitudes. I believe businesses should respect their customers, whatever their age.

Just one more thing in passing, nobody I know calls me granny, except my daughter-in-law's dad, Jimmy Wood. He uses it with a true understanding of what the word means, and I like it.

I love being a grandmother. I do my best to be a good one, but, if I spoil my grandchildren, it is not with things.

The toy-box in my house is a big red plastic bag with a basket-weave that allows dirt and wads of chewing gum to escape through the holes in its sides. It is a toy marketers nightmare.

The newest thing in it is a plastic push-button telephone that I received, free of charge, for renewing our subscription to Time magazine. It never worked properly, knocked another phone out of order every time it rang, and proved to be worth exactly what we paid for it.

Also in the toy box, there are chess and Chinese checker games — handed down from adults who went on to play Nintendo. There is a deck of playing cards (with three eights of clubs) for playing poker, concentration, and go-fish. A plastic tool-box is filled with unpainted (sanded and stained) wooden blocks and scraps from the floor of my husband's workshop.

In there, too, are a can of eight-year-old modeling clay with two Melmac plates to roll it on; a canister of broken Crayola Crayons with a stack of used computer paper for drawing; and a discarded alarm clock that ticks but won't run, and whose alarm still rings when wound up.

To supplement this mess, there is a paper sack full of wrecked plastic cars we bought at an auction for seventy-five cents, an old suitcase full of worn out curtains and cloth napkins that I keep under the bed, and a coffee pot full of poker chips.

We are equipped to play anything we can imagine.

We line up the cars and pretend everyone is headed for the hotel made of blocks and wood scraps. Some of the drivers deliver food to the grocery store built of poker chips.

Our napkins serve as table clothes and bed linens at the hotel, and as body bags for drivers who go to sleep at the wheel. Our waitresses and grocery clerks wear uniforms made of curtains. Our cooks serve everything on the menu through the spout of our old coffee pot.

We place orders to workmen and take hotel reservations on our, otherwise useless, Time telephone. Our guests are made of clay, and leave wake-up calls with our alarm-clock operator. We write stories on old computer paper, illustrate them with broken crayons, and read them aloud to entertain the tourists who gather around the coffee-pot-bellied stove at the grocery store.

We apply for jobs and lie about our past work experience. When we don't do a good day's work for the boss, we get fired and have to pump gas for all those cars on the Interstate. We work for our living and pay cash (with our deck of cards) for our goods and services.

Other grandmothers I talk to play similar games, with similar equipment, with their grandchildren. We want these children to know what real values are. We play our games honestly, and we deserve more from toy marketers than being looked upon as "grannies" and "gramps" and "greedy kids."

I wouldn't trade the junk in my toy box and the fun I've had with it — for all the marketers on Madison Avenue.

'Disability Bookshop'

The "Disability Bookshop Catalog" includes books about pain, aids, grief, aging, sports, travel, cancer, allergy, healing, exercise, diabetes, deafness, blindness, education, arthritis, nutrition, sexuality, employment, addictions, technical aids, children's needs, personal experience, shop-by-mail sources, home nursing care, resource directories, spinal cord injuries, self-help/inspiration, and starting a business at home. Many books are in large or larger type.

To receive the catalog, send $1.50 for postage and handling to the Disability Bookshop, P.O. Box 129, Vancouver, WA 98666. For more information call (206) 694-2462 or (800) 637-2256.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I read in the Juneau (Alaska) Empire your list of symptoms for detecting diabetes. Had I seen it two months ago, I would have insisted that my daughter consult a doctor immediately. When she called last month from her home in New York, she complained of several symptoms you named for diabetes. She would have scored 13 on your scale, which indicated that a score of above five suggests possible diabetes.

My daughter eventually saw a doctor who said that had she waited a day longer, she might have fallen into a fatal coma! As bad as she felt, the doctor said she didn't feel nearly as sick as she was.

Please warn your readers, Abby, that if they have the symptoms, even if they don't feel very sick, they may be in grave danger. — JOHN B. D'ARMAND, JUNEAU, ALASKA

DEAR JOHN D'ARMAND: Thank you for writing. Some readers have complained about the number of letters I use concerning diseases, but now that we know that early detection can save lives, I feel more or less vindicated.

Readers who want more information on diabetes, please contact the American Diabetes Association National Center, 1660 Duke St., Alexandria, Va. 22314. The toll-free telephone number is (800) 232-3472.

DEAR ABBY: Our family has a problem most families will eventually have to face. At what point do you sell the property, house and car of an elderly relative who is in a nursing home and will probably never get out?

My father-in-law had a stroke a year ago and has been in a nursing home ever since. Meanwhile, his house sits vacant and his car sits idle. None of his children live close enough to maintain the house and care for his car and they think both should be sold.

My husband, acting as power of attorney, has been paying all the bills and says his father's small life savings is being depleted. When his father was asked if his property, house and car should be sold, the answer was an emphatic, "No, let them sit!" My husband does not want his father to give up all hope for recovery and feels that if the assets are sold, his father will give up.

We need an outside opinion. Please rush your answer, Abby, as this is causing serious dissension among family members. — A DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR DAUGHTER-IN-LAW: Unless your father-in-law has been diagnosed as mentally incompetent, all decisions concerning the disposition of his property should be made by him. He specifically stated the house and car should not be sold, so (to use his words), "Let them sit!"

B.A. Kennemur asked to borrow his grandmother's typewriter one night, and he wrote a letter to President Bush expressing his concern over the war in the Persian Gulf. The 10 year old, son of Kay and Danny Kennemur, received a reply from the president, including a picture. Kennemur has written again to the White House asking Bush to become his pen pal. Kay Kennemur said she had no idea her son had such strong feelings about the war. "I'm really proud of him."

Coahoma school board discusses fashion

By MARSHA STURDIVANT Staff Writer

COAHOMA — Fashion, what is fashion? The Coahoma Independent School Board members attempted to define fashion in Monday night's meeting, but became bogged down over the difference between shorts, split skirts, skirts, and city shorts.

"I've never seen this board so confused. Personally I don't have any problem with what we've seen."

Marvin Keenan, board member, said, "The problem is we've out-fined ourselves in definitions." A committee was appointed to update the dress code, but its recommendation was for board members to define shorts.

The student dress code prohibits shorts except for certain school ac-activities. A compromise was reached between the school policy and the students, and shorts will be allowed three days out of the school year, Gary Rotan, superintendent, said.

"We've got to catch up to 1991, and get fashionable," Wright said. The school board members gave final approval to retaining Global Roofing Consultants to oversee the construction and repair for the junior high school and high school roofs.

Wright said the delay rested on Global Roofing providing a fixed daily rate for the consultant. "We want no overtime charged back to the district. What we want is what we pay for, nothing more and nothing less," Wright said.

Bob May, representing Global Roofing, after discussing the request with other consultants in his firm, agreed to a daily fixed rate of $360, including per diem charges for meals and lodging, and set the work week at six days.

The cost for the junior high roof is estimated at $180,000, and the repairs to parts of the high school roof may cost $60,000.

Gary Rotan, superintendent, said $110,000 has been budgeted for these repairs, but should the work run in excess of the budget, the Capitol Projects Fund will provide the money.

"The capitol projects funds were dedicated for that purpose," he said.

repairs will be advertised throughout April, and opened and awarded May 6, the next regularly scheduled meeting.

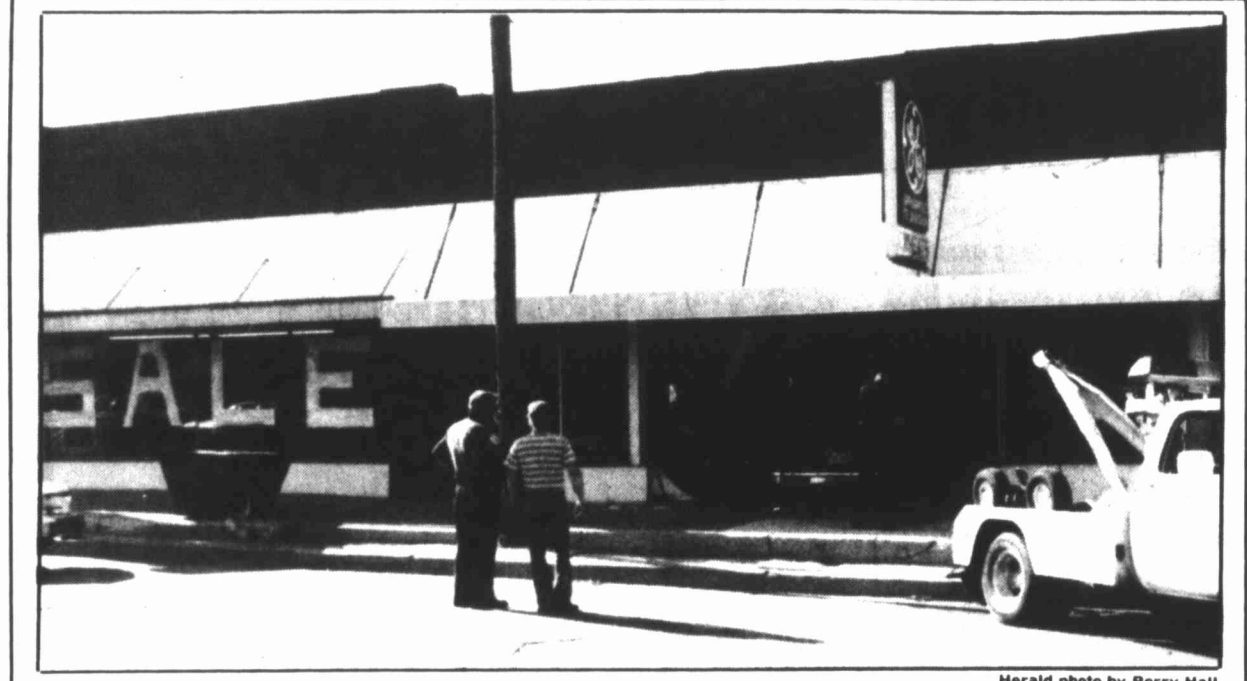

In other action items, the school board members:

- Accepted the resignations of teachers Virginia Allen and Rae Nell Best.
- Approved the request by Keith Toomire, Howard County Appraisal District chief appraiser, to retain the refund due the district, $2,665.26, to defray the expected operating costs for this appraisal season.
- Approved the sale of school property to Randy and Beverly Thompson, for $1,000. Russell McInturff also addressed the board concerning the sale of 11 other properties.

- Approved the use of the school cafeteria for the 20th high school reunion for the class of 1971.
- Approved the student dress code based upon committee recommendations.
- Amended the budget to include $2,519 for the special education teacher's salary, from the Education for Handicapped Act, Title VI B.

Rotan interpreted some of the new school finance bill for the board members, and said he would provide more information once he's received and evaluated other data. Some discrepancies exist with the funding portions, and Rotan said he's going to contact Austin to clarify.

"It is subject to being challenged," said Rotan. He explained the reforms do not include a building facilities fund, which may force poor districts to spend enrichment money, targeted for educational expenses, on building maintenance. He also said the recaptured portion may be challenged by wealthy districts.

Man drives into Wheat Furniture

Onlookers discuss the plight of a 29-year-old local man who drove his vehicle into the front of Wheat Furniture shortly after 5 p.m. Monday. Leonard Glenn McPeak, 608 State Street, reportedly suffered a seizure while driving, causing him to veer from the road and into the building. McPeak was cited for driving while license suspended, but the apparent seizure is the only contributing factor listed on police reports. He was treated and released at Scenic Mountain Medical Center after the incident.

Equipment stolen from center

By GARY SHANKS Staff Writer

Over $2,500 worth of equipment was stolen from the Big Spring Rape Crisis - Victim Services Center, according to police reports.

The burglary occurred sometime between Friday night and Sunday morning, said Executive Director Lisa Brooks.

Equipment missing from the Center includes typewriters, a TV, a VCR and every telephone in the building, said Brooks.

Today, the Center's employees are using an answering machine to accept incoming calls, and going to a nearby building to return the call, said Brooks.

Brooks explained that anyone needing the Center should leave a message and a counselor will return the call as soon as possible.

Brooks hopes to have replacement phones by the end of the week. ATS Telcom in Big Spring will be donating the new system to the Center. "We donated the original system for them, and we'll donate this one also," said ATS Telcom Director Gene Moses.

Brooks has been completing paperwork involved with acquiring the state and federal grants that allow the Center to remain open. She explained that she has had to borrow a typewriter to complete this task.

"The grants are not renewed automatically. We have to justify yearly what we do with them," she said.

The Center's statistics show that they served 42 victims of sex crimes in '91. A yearly total of 644 people includes services to primary victims of all crimes and family members of those victims, she said.

"It seems like something peculiar happens every time I cram to write these grants," said Brooks. She explained that the Center was located in the Permian

Building in the year of the fire. "At the governor's office, they use us as an example hen people can't get their grants written on time. 'Theirs was in on time and they had two floods and a fire,'" she said.

Last night the Big Spring Woman's Club voted to donate $450 to the Center, said Brooks. "They've always been real generous. This is like the fourth year in a row they've given us donations," she said.

Anyone wishing to make donations, may call 267-3626. In addition to funds, a typewriter is needed and, since all of their training material is on video-cassette, they will need a TV and VCR, said Brooks.

"It's kind of discouraging. Most of the things that were taken were donated by some very kind people," she said. "We'll make it though. We've been open eight years and we've had adversity before," she said.

Gulf War.

On Monday, about 300 worried refugees blocked a road with a sit-in outside their dusty tent camp, chanting slogans in English such as "Save The People of Iraq," and "Saddam, Saddam, Same As Hitler."

"Given Saddam's track record, these people probably have a reason to be scared," said Grubbs.

The U.S. Army is caring for more than 11,000 refugees at an abandoned construction company in Safwan. About 6,000 displaced people, mostly Iraqis, are at a Red Crescent camp about a mile away on the Kuwaiti side of the border.

They are among 40,000 Iraqi refugees in Iraq, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, and some say they will try to prevent the Americans from leaving Safwan.

"We will sleep in front of the American trucks," said Abu Nathal, a history teacher from Nassiriyah. "Only the Americans can protect us from Saddam Hussein."

U.N. peacekeepers are expected to arrive in Kuwait later this week, and their deployment on the 120-mile-long Iraq-Kuwaiti border is still one to two weeks away. U.N. officials have refused to give any timetable.

Once in place, the peacekeepers have a strict and limited mandate to observe and "to interfere as little as possible" in the affairs of Iraq and Kuwait, said Joachim Hutter, the U.N. delegation's acting spokesman.

Iraq and Kuwait will not be allowed to send troops into the demilitarized zone, which stretches six miles into Iraq and three miles into Kuwait. But their governments will handle civil administration in their territory, including police duties.

The Iraqi refugees, who include many fighters against Saddam's rule, say this is intolerable.

Kuwait's government does not want any Iraqi refugees. But border controls are relatively lax, and about 4,000 of the 6,000 people at the Kuwaiti Red Crescent camp are Iraqi, al-Mamen said.

Kennedys apparently misled police

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Police said they went to the Kennedy estate one day after the alleged rape of a young woman there and were falsely told Sen. Ted Kennedy, his son Patrick and nephew William Kennedy Smith had left town.

Police Chief Joe Terlizze gave the account Monday in the wake of allegations police are giving the Kennedys special treatment in investigating the alleged rape March 30 of a 29-year-old woman who had met the three at a bar.

Also Monday, the supermarket tabloid the Globe published the alleged victim's name and photograph despite a Florida law forbidding disclosure of rape victims' identities.

"Everyone in the world knows the victim's identity, her name and photo had been published in newspapers and magazines worldwide," said Wendy Henry, editor in chief of the Boca Raton-based weekly.

The woman has accused Smith of raping her. No charges have been filed. Smith, a 30-year-old Georgetown University medical student, has denied any wrongdoing.

On Easter Sunday, the day after the alleged rape, detectives went twice to the estate to talk to the senator and other family members but were told the Kennedys had left town, the police chief said in today's The Palm Beach Post.

Later police learned that Smith didn't leave for Washington until that night and that the senator and his son left the next morning, Terlizze said.

Terlizze wouldn't say who misled the police.

"We're looking at why," he said. "When it's all over, the truth will be known. . . . Then, let the chips fall where they may."

The Police Department had come under fire for failing to interview the Kennedys while they were still in Palm Beach.

Kennedy attorney Mark Schnapp had no comment on the matter.

On Monday police received results of tests on Smith's blood and hair samples and on material provided by doctors who examined the woman after the alleged assault. Police also said they identified new witnesses but would disclose no more about the tests.

ple and very service oriented," he said.

That includes getting to know people, from pre-kindergarten on up, by name and face. He said he will especially work to develop a rapport and trust with students — even to the point of joining them for lunch.

"That trust is not a one-way trust. It's a two-way trust," he said. "We as law enforcement officers have got to earn their trust."

Besides other benefits, he said it will help squeeze out any existing or potential drug problems. "That's how you do it. That's how you win the battle," he said. "Then the dope dealers don't have a market."

His plan includes helping to bring in anti-drug education programs such as the Drug Free Youth In Texas program formed last year at Big Spring High School.

Howell also acknowledged that there is a large older population in town. "They deserve a little bit of extra attention," he said.

That extra attention can sometimes save people possible litigation and heartache, such as the man who wanted to file charges on another man for a missing VCR. Howell made a few phone calls and soon the two men were on the phone to each other working out the problem.

"I'd of hated to have let him file charges on him when it was just a mistake," he said.

A person identified in a trash-dumping incident will be given the opportunity to clean it up. "I'm going to talk to them and see what their attitude is," he said. "Hopefully they'll learn a lesson about dumping trash out here."

Howell, who waved at almost everybody he saw during the three-hour patrol Monday, has never shot a weapon except when practicing during his 11 years as a law enforcement officer. Asked what the most common crimes in this area are, he said burglaries are a big concern.

A graduate of Big Spring High School and Howard College, Howell was in the Army for three years before joining the Stanton Police Department and later the Odessa Police Department. Last year he received his degree in criminal justice from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Dorsett to star in adventure film

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett will trade his football helmet for a U.S. Marine Corps helmet for a Vietnam action adventure film.
 Dorsett's press agent Milton Kahn said Monday that the former National Football League player will star with David Carradine in "Kill Zone."

"They wanted a superstar's name," Kahn said Monday. "Tony's interested in show business. Why not Tony?"
 Dorsett will portray a Marine sergeant who is sent out on a secret mission to destroy an enemy dump.
 "Kill Zone" is expected to be shot on location in the Philippines starting April 29. Cirio Santiago will direct the film, Kahn said.

An upcoming 90-minute animated feature called "T.D. Tony," featuring Dorsett is expected to be completed in about a year. A comic book will be based on the feature, Kahn said.

In 1976, Dorsett led the University of Pittsburgh to the national championship and won the Heisman Trophy that same year. He went on to become the second-leading rusher in NFL history, with 12,739 yards.
 After playing for the Cowboys for 11 seasons, Dorsett moved to the Denver Broncos in 1988. He retired after seriously injuring his left knee in a non-contact drill during the Broncos' training camp in 1989.

Clemens accused of attacking officer

 Clemens did not testify before the grand jury.

Kidder eager to begin coaching Hawks basketball

By STEVE BELVIN
 Sports Editor

Jeff Kidder thinks his first head coaching job is an ideal situation.
 The new Howard College Hawks basketball coach said he's ready to start his new duties. Kidder was hired Friday to take over the job vacated by Steve Green, who took the job at Midland College.

"I felt I was ready to take on a head coaching position somewhere," said Kidder. "The fact that it's Howard College is just icing on the cake. It's a program that has high expectations and great support. It makes you work harder."

The 28-year-old Kidder comes to Howard College from West Texas State University, where he was an assistant coach under Mark Adams for one year. WTSU won the Lone Star Conference and qualified for the Division II playoffs, losing in the opening round to Central Missouri. The Buffaloes finished with a 25-7 record.

For the past three seasons the Hawks have been a defensive-minded, up-tempo type squad, and Kidder plans more of the same. He said his team will play pressure defense and push the ball up the floor offensively.

"I believe this is a player's game. That doesn't mean I'll roll the ball out and let them play; there'll be discipline in what they do," said Kidder. "I'll find out what their strengths are and let them be creative. The players will also know what their limitations are."

Basketball needs to be a very entertaining product, the fans are a big part of the program. It's like a show, if the fans get their money's worth, they'll want to come back."

Kidder hails from Meade County, Ky. He graduated from the University of Kentucky and got his first part-time assistant coaching job there under Eddie Sutton. He stayed at Kentucky three years until Sutton took the head job at Oklahoma State last year.

He said he made the move to West Texas State because it gave him the opportunity to be a full-time assistant coach. Coach Adams was so impressed by Kidder that he hired him over the telephone.

The new HC coach said that Sutton and Adams have made huge impacts on his coaching career, especially Sutton, who had high praise for Kidder. "Howard College has made a great choice," said Sutton. "Jeff worked under me for three years at the University of Kentucky. I have great respect for him and am very proud of his accomplishments since then."

Jeff Kidder has tremendous work habits and will meet every expectation Howard College has for a basketball coach. He will recruit good student athletes and will help them be successful on the court and in the classroom. He is just a quality human being."

The first order of business is to meet the nine freshmen Howard has and to evaluate them in some practice sessions. "I want them (the players) to know I look at them as people, then students and then players. The most important thing that I get across to them is that I'll be very fair and consistent with my discipline. They'll get a fair shake with the program; they'll have to prove themselves to me. I'm the type of coach who'll be very supportive of them," he said.

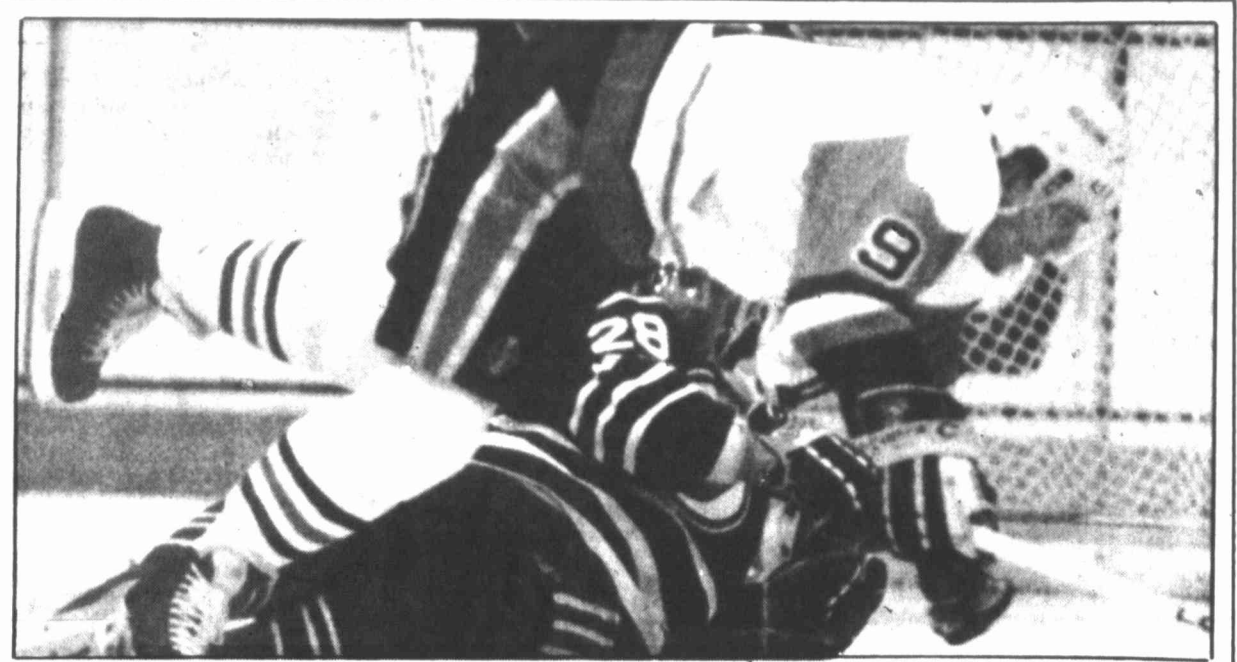

The second order of business is recruiting, which assistant coach Greg Pinkey is doing right now. Kidder said Howard hasn't signed any players yet.
 Sutton said one of Kidder's strong points is recruiting. "Being from Kentucky I'll start where I know," said Kidder. "But I'll recruit all over. I was hired Friday at 11 o'clock. At 11:01 I was on the phone representing Howard College," he joked.

The new coach said as with every job, there comes some pressure. "It's kind of like the first date, you're a little nervous. But as far as having a fear of me not being able to do the job, that never entered my mind," said Kidder.

"The kids will play hard and be good people on and off the court. I look at this job as a vocation. I'm emotionally involved in the game. I'm committed to the situation at Howard. Our goals and expectations lie high."

Jiri Hrdina and Frank Pietrangolo spent most of the stretch drive watching as their teammates led the Pittsburgh Penguins to their first-ever division championship. On Monday night, both got their chance in the spotlight.

Hrdina, a seldom-used forward, had two goals and Pietrangolo, a backup goaltender, stopped 27 shots as Pittsburgh blanked the New Jersey Devils 4-0 in the seventh and deciding game of their Patrick Division semifinal series.

The Penguins will meet the Washington Capitals, third-place finishers during the regular season, in the division finals beginning Wednesday night at Pittsburgh.

The Penguins got an emotional lift when All-Star defenseman Paul Coffey, expected to be out for the rest of the playoffs, was in the starting lineup wearing a special face guard to protect an injured eye. Coffey's goal early in the third period wrapped up the scoring as the Penguins won for only the second time in nine attempts in the decisive game of a playoff series.

"Having Coffey in the lineup gave them a big lift," Devils coach Tom McVie said. "He's one of the top two or three players in the world. His presence certainly had a psychological advantage."

"I wasn't even thinking about playing when I went to the doctors (Monday) morning," Coffey said. "They said there was no risk in playing and that any injury would be a new injury. I got a little nervous and scared about two hours (before game time), but I didn't think about it when I was playing."

Hrdina and Mario Lemieux, who did not play the last two periods due to back spasms, gave Pittsburgh a 2-0 lead after one period.

The Penguins made it 3-0 just 29 seconds into the second period when Phil Bourque skated down the left-wing boards and threaded a pass through the crease to Hrdina, who beat Chris Terreri to the glove side. Hrdina took only one shot in the first six games of the series and had just one two-goal game during the season.

Pietrangolo, who started and won Game 6 when Tom Barrasso was unable to play due to a shoulder injury, had little to do in the first two periods as the Devils managed only 13 shots. New Jersey appeared deflated and tentative after a questionable call by referee Bill McCreary late in Game 6 disallowed Laurie Boschman's apparent tying goal.

"Instead of kicking them when they were down, we let them get back into it when we let them win Game 6," Devils defenseman Ken Daneyko said. "We didn't get anything going all night and it didn't get any better."

"When we came home after winning Game 5 (in Pittsburgh), I had no doubt that we would be playing in the second round," McVie said. "We lost the series Saturday in New Jersey. We took home ice advantage away from them twice and gave it back twice."

Magic sets new record

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson surpassed Oscar Robertson as the NBA's all-time assist leader Monday night, getting 19 to lead the Los Angeles Lakers over the Dallas Mavericks 112-106.
 Johnson, a three-time league MVP, needed nine assists to break Robertson's record of 9,887. He finished the game with 9,898 assists.

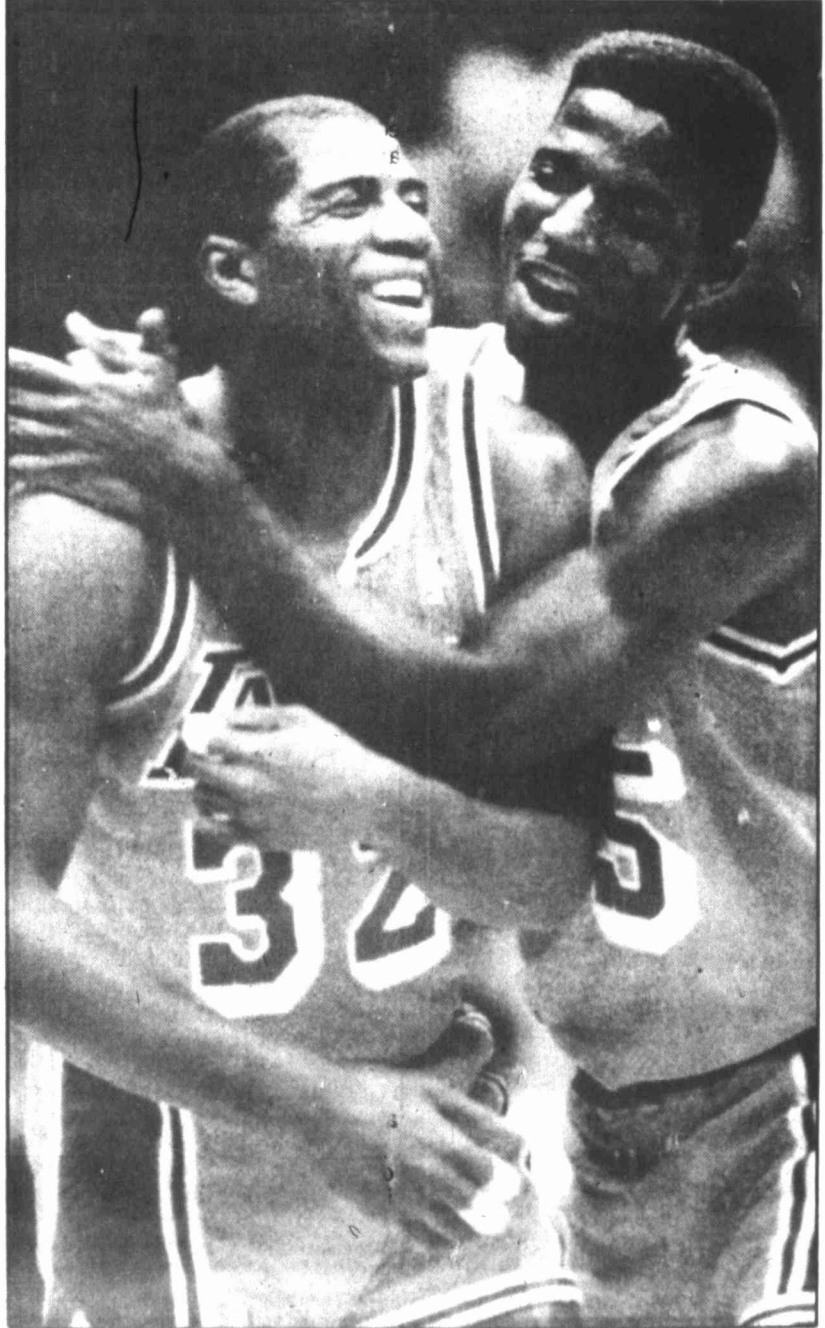

Johnson tied the record with 6:46 left in the second quarter, setting up James Worthy for a short jump shot. He got his record-breaking ninth assist with 5:44 left in the period, lobbing a pass to Jerry Teague, who made a 15-foot jumper from the right baseline.

The game was then stopped and Johnson received a standing ovation from the sellout crowd of 17,505 at the Forum, hugs from his teammates and a trophy from Lakers owner Jerry Buss. The game was delayed for nearly 15 minutes.

Johnson finished with only seven points, making just one of four field goal attempts. He also had nine rebounds and 11 turnovers.

It took Johnson three minutes to get his first assist, but less than another 1½ minutes to get his next two.
 He had seven in the first quarter and sat out the opening 5:08 of the second period before getting four more, including the record-breaker, by halftime.

Johnson, 31, needed less than 12 seasons to break the mark it took Robertson 14 seasons to establish. Johnson has led the Lakers to five NBA championships.

Oakland Athletics on winning streak

By The Associated Press

The Oakland Athletics didn't wait long to get hot. Since losing their opener, they've won five in a row.

Jose Canseco broke a seventh-inning tie with a three-run homer and Cy Young Award winner Bob Welch (1-1) allowed seven hits in eight innings Monday night as the A's beat the California Angels 5-2.

Welch (1-1) allowed seven hits in eight innings, walked two and struck out four.

"Every year you want to get that first one over with," said Welch, who pitched a complete game in a 4-1 loss to Minnesota last Wednesday.

Canseco came up in the seventh with the score tied 2-2. Mike Gallego singled off McCaskill to open the inning. Lance Blankenship struck out and Dave Henderson singled. Canseco then hit a drive that sailed 25 feet beyond the 386-foot sign in left-center field.

"But Jose only got a piece of the ball," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "He's incredible. You should have seen him in batting practice today. He hit some that brought everybody to their feet."

The loss, in the Angels' home opener, denied them their best start ever. They dropped to 5-2 and matched the club best, set three times previously. It was the fifth consecutive victory for Oakland, the three-time American League champions.

Kirk McCaskill (1-1) said that he called off catcher Lance Parrish on the pitch to Canseco.

"There was a guy on third and Lance called for a curveball, but my thought was that I was really going to work him, try not to give him anything to hit," McCaskill said. "It was a classic case of making a bad pitch at a bad time."

In other games, Seattle beat Minnesota 8-4, Cleveland beat Boston 1-0 in 13 innings, Chicago beat New York 6-5, Toronto beat Detroit 4-3 and Baltimore beat Milwaukee 7-2.

McCaskill walked four batters in the first inning, including the first three he faced, but Oakland got just one run. Harold Baines hit into a run-scoring double play and, after a walk to Terry Steinbach, Mark McGwire flied out on the first pitch.

Mariners 8, Twins 4

Seattle won its first game of the season, stopping a six-game losing streak behind home runs from Edgar Martinez and Tracy Jones in the Mariners home opener.

Randy Johnson (1-1) scattered seven hits, struck out six and walked four to end the worst start in the Mariners' 15-year history.

Martinez gave Seattle a 3-0 lead in the first inning off Allan Anderson (1-1) with his second home run of the season.

Indians 1, Red Sox 0

The marathon between Cleveland and Boston lasted longer than the Boston Marathon.

Brook Jacoby homered in the 13th inning off Dennis Lamp (1-0) as the Indians won in 3 hours, 45 minutes on Patriots' Day. The game started one hour before the start of the 95th Boston Marathon and ended more than 30 minutes after Kenya's Ibrahim Hussein won the race.

Sidelines

South Africa may go to 1992 games

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — International Olympic Committee vice president Keba Mbaye of Senegal said it's likely that South Africa, banned from the Olympics in 1970 because of its apartheid policy, will participate in the 1992 Summer Games in Barcelona.

South Africa may also be readmitted in time to take part in the Winter Olympics next February in Albertville, France, Mbaye said.

The first appearance of South African athletes at a major international event could occur at the World Track and Field Championships in Tokyo in September, he said.

Mbaye said the country's return to the Olympic movement still depends on its compliance with a set of conditions. These include the abolition of apartheid and the unification of sports federations into non-racial bodies.

Mbaye said he expects all apartheid legislation will be abolished by the end of June, as promised by President F.W. de Klerk.

Jury to decide fate of Sanders

HOUSTON (AP) — A jury was seated in the trial of Washington wide receiver Ricky Sanders, accused of running over a nightclub parking attendant last May.

Sanders faces a charge of failing to stop and render aid in the May 1 incident. Sanders also faces an aggravated assault charge in the case, but a trial date has not been set.

The trial recessed once the seven-man, five-woman jury was selected. Opening arguments were scheduled for today.

Sanders is accused of running over Assam Jamus, 29, a valet parking attendant at the Men's Club in west Houston. Jamus said he and Sanders argued over hubcaps that were missing from the car and Sanders ran over him after the argument. Defense attorneys have said Sanders thought Jamus hit his car as he was driving away and have denied that their client had any intent to assault the man.

Harrison leads A&M to victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Brian Harrison struck out six Rice batters to lead Texas A&M to a 7-3 Southwest Conference victory over Rice in the finale of a rain-delayed baseball series Monday night.

A&M's sweep of the three-game series ends the Aggies' SWC mark at 6-6 and boosts their season record to 34-16. Rice falls to 6-12 and 16-31.

In his longest relief appearance of the season, Harrison retired eight Rice batters in a row to earn the victory. No Rice batter reached third base against Harrison until Harry Duffey knocked in a pair of runs in the eighth.

A&M had three runs in the second inning, then Jason Marshall knocked in two more runs in the fifth. An inning later, Brian Thomas completed the Aggie scoring with a two-run home run.

Rice had a 1-0 lead in the first on a walk to Donald Allen, a stolen base and John Eierman's double to left. But the Owls couldn't score again until the eighth.

Former Orioles pitcher charged

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ken Dixon, a former pitcher for the Baltimore Orioles whose career was sidetracked by drug problems, was charged with possession of cocaine.

Dixon, 30, of Middle River, Md., and William High were arrested near City Hall at about 1:30 a.m. after plainclothes police officers, working a drug detail spotted their car illegally parked, a police spokesman said.

When police asked the men to get out of the car, they spotted a plastic bag of cocaine on the floor and another bag with cocaine residue. Both men were arrested and released on recognizance pending trial May 15.

Dixon pitched for Baltimore from 1984-87 before being traded to Seattle, which released him. The Orioles signed him again and released him in 1989 from their Class AA team in Hagerstown, citing his failure to comply with the minor league drug prevention and testing program.

Cincinnati Reds appear to be on losing streak

By The Associated Press
Things aren't quite as easy for the Cincinnati Reds this time.

The defending World Series champions, who led wire-to-wire in 1990, have lost four straight games. The Reds started a West Coast trip Monday night and dropped 3-2 decision in 11 innings to San Diego.

The Padres made some big changes over the winter, and so far it's working as San Diego is off to a 6-1 start and leads the NL West.

Manager Lou Piniella was disgusted with the Reds' performance after a 12-1 loss to Atlanta at Riverfront Stadium on Sunday. Monday's loss was another ugly effort as two wild pitches by Ted Power allowed Shawn Abner to score the winning run.

"It's a tough way to lose a game," Piniella said. "That's all I have to say."

Abner led off the 11th with a single off Power (1-1) and moved to second on pitcher Mike Maddux's sacrifice. Abner then took third on Power's first wild pitch.

"Last year we fell apart in close ballgames," Abner said. "This year, from 1 to 25, no one quits. If it was 2-2 last year, we'd have hung our heads. Now we're trying to score runs and win ballgames."

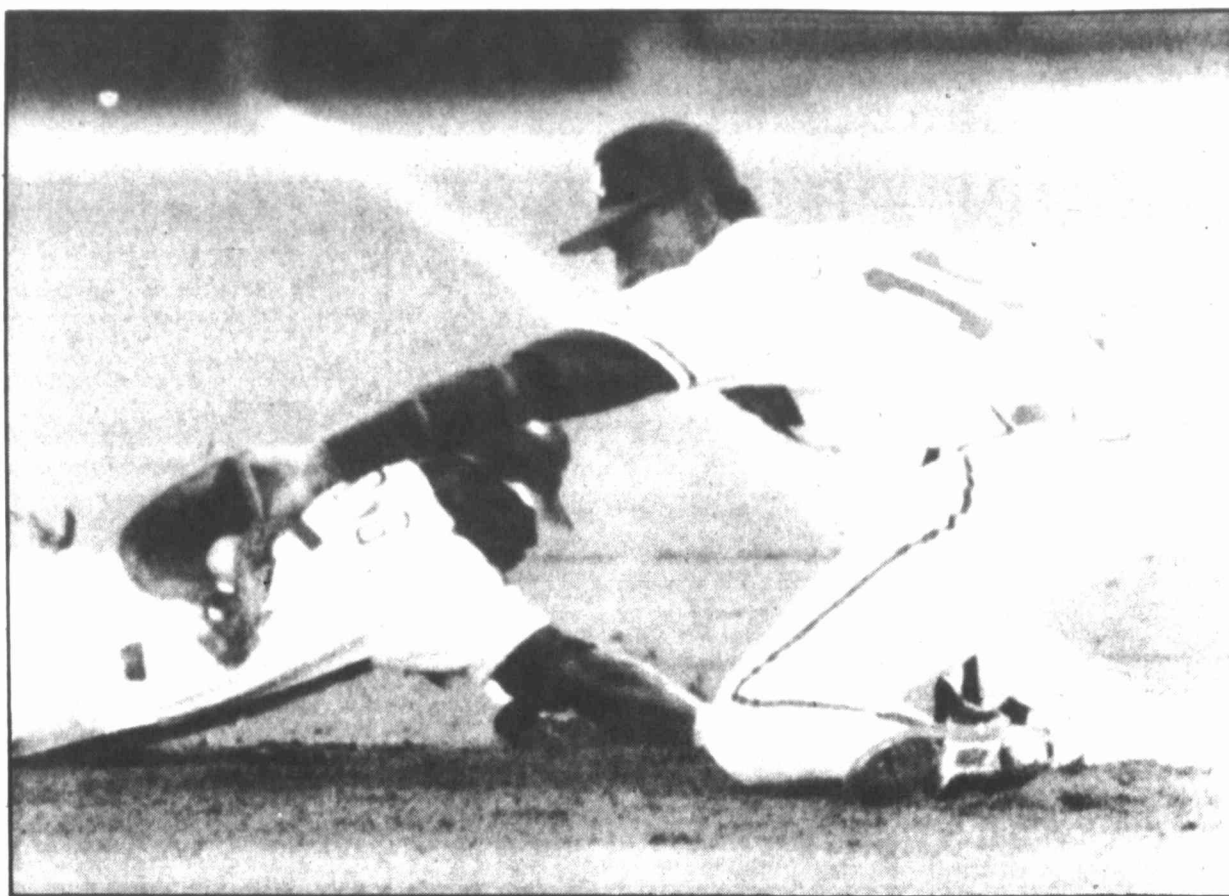

Power, the third Reds' reliever, said the first wild pitch was a slider. He then went with a fastball, trying to get Bip Roberts to hit a ground ball.

But, it "was just bad location," Power said. "I started it too low. I didn't throw it, I just aimed it. That's the only explanation in my mind."

"I knew it was trouble. I was hoping to get a break, and maybe (Jeff) Reed could stop it, but it was nasty."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was St. Louis 5, Montreal 4; Chicago 5, Philadelphia 4; New York 9, Pittsburgh 3; Houston 3, Atlanta 1; and Los Angeles 2, San Francisco 1.

Maddux (2-0) pitched two perfect innings in relief of starter Bruce Hurst.

Hurst was one out away from victory when Eric Davis scored from second on two errors to make it 2-2 in the ninth.

Third baseman Garry Templeton, a shortstop throughout his career, fielded a grounder by Todd Beninger, but his throw to first was in the dirt and Fred McGriff couldn't handle it. McGriff threw home, but catcher Benito Santiago couldn't come up with the throw for another error.

Tony Gwynn, who has hit in six of his seven games, had a sacrifice fly in the first inning and a run-scoring single in the fifth.

Mets 9, Pirates 3

Howard Johnson drove in four runs, including a run-scoring single in a six-run ninth inning, to carry New York past Pittsburgh at Three Rivers Stadium and keep David Cone undefeated in seven career decisions against the Pirates.

With the score 3-3, reliever Bob Kipper (1-1) started the ninth by walking Gregg Jefferies and Vince Coleman. The Mets broke the tie when Kipper threw wildly on Keith Miller's bunt single. Dave Magadan, Johnson and Tom Herr followed with RBI singles as the Mets won their third straight game. Kevin Elster then drove in two more runs with a triple to break the game open.

In the second inning, Johnson hit a home run into the upper deck in left field.

Astros 3, Braves 1
Jeff Bagwell's first major league homer, a two-run shot in the ninth inning, lifted visiting Houston over Atlanta.

Ken Caminiti, who had three hits, singled with two outs off reliever Kent Mercker (0-1) and Bagwell followed with a drive over the left-field fence.

Reliever Al Osuna (1-0) picked up the victory by pitching two-thirds of an inning and Curt Schilling got the last two outs for his second save.

Penguins

Penguins' team physician, said Lemieux felt much better after icing his back during the final two periods and would probably play Wednesday. Lemieux's problem was related more to the playing every other day and the constant travel than his earlier problems, Burke said.

"He has a greater risk (of spasms) because of his history, but he was 50 percent better after the game," Burke said. "He'll be better (Tuesday) and even better the next day."

On Tuesday night, the St. Louis Blues and Calgary Flames will try to make NHL history.

Both teams have rallied from 3-1 deficits to force deciding games in their best-of-7 series — St. Louis vs. Detroit and Calgary vs. Edmonton. The Blues and Flames will try to cap their comebacks at home and join seven other NHL teams that have won playoff series after trailing 3-1.

"Both teams are on equal footing now," Detroit coach Bryan Murray said after St. Louis evened the Norris Division series with a 3-0 victory Sunday. "But they're in their building and that gives them an advantage."

Theoren Fleury scored in overtime at Edmonton after intercepting a pass by Mark Messier, giving

Cubs 5, Phillies 4

Greg Maddux pitched three-hit ball for seven innings and Andre Dawson hit his first home run of the season as Chicago took advantage of four wild pitches by starter Jason Grimsley (0-1) to beat Philadelphia at Wrigley Field.

Maddux (2-0) retired nine consecutive batters after John Kruk's fourth-inning single and worked out of trouble in the seventh inning. Paul Assenmacher pitched a hitless eighth and Dave Smith finished for his third save despite allowing Dale Murphy's leadoff homer in the ninth.

Cardinals 5, Expos 4

Pedro Guerrero hit two homers, including a leadoff shot in the ninth inning that sparked a three-run St. Louis rally, as the Cardinals beat Montreal in the Expos' home opener.

With the Cardinals trailing 4-2, Guerrero opened the ninth with a homer off Tim Burke (1-1). Felix Jose followed with a single and scored when Todd Zeile tripled off the center-field fence. Zeile then scored the go-ahead run on Tom Pagnozzi's sacrifice fly to right.

Cris Carpenter (1-0) pitched two-thirds of an inning for the win, while Lee Smith struck out the side in the ninth for his fourth save.

Dodgers 2, Giants 1

Tim Lincecum (2-0) scattered five hits in 6 2-3 innings and survived three Los Angeles errors as the Dodgers defeated San Francisco in the Giants' home opener on a cold and windy night.

As temperatures fell into the 40s and winds reaching 20 mph at Candlestick Park, Belcher and two relievers surrendered one unearned run to a Giants offense that scored more runs than any other major league team the first week of the season.

Bud Black (0-2) gave up five hits in seven innings.

Hussein wins Boston Marathon

BOSTON (AP) — Ibrahim Hussein has a warning for the media for the 1992 Boston Marathon.

"Don't make some wrong prediction," he said with a smile Monday, shortly after winning the Boston Marathon for the second time.

The media had given Hussein little chance of winning this time. After all, he had not won a marathon since 1988, when he became the first African winner in the Boston Marathon's then 92-year history.

Since then, he had finished fourth in the 1989 Boston Marathon and dropped out of the 1990 Boston Marathon after 20 miles because of an Achilles' ailment.

"Last year, when I got injured, very few people thought I would be back," he said.

Hussein was among them. "Last year, with the Achilles' injury, I thought my career might be over," he admits.

After last year's race, Hussein went back to his native Kenya for six months.

"I couldn't do anything," he said. "I had trained very well and I was ready for Boston. But afterwards, my left Achilles was bad. It just stopped me during the race. I felt so much pain."

"I thought I had ripped off the Achilles." In my mind, if you tear your Achilles, that's a career-ending injury.

Hussein's foot was in a cast for two months before he was able to resume light running.

"When I started, I felt some pain," he said. "But after I began training, I started pushing it a little and I had a lot of long runs without pain."

"Before each run and after it, I stretched the leg for precaution. And I was seeing a trainer every day."

Hussein, a former steeplechaser and 10,000-meter runner at the University of New Mexico, did a lot of distance running in preparation for Boston 1991.

"For Boston, you need endurance, not speed so much," he said. "You have to be strong."

By stressing endurance, rather than speed, Hussein showed he had learned a lesson from last year's race, when he and five other Africans had gone out at a wild and crazy pace for the first 20 miles before crumbling and allowing Italy's Gelindo Bordin to pass them and win.

Hussein did many of his long-distance runs in altitude at Flagstaff, Ariz., after returning to the United States in October. He also trained in Albuquerque, N.M., where he lives. As he built up his mileage, he built up his confidence.

"I don't think the lack of competition will hurt me at Boston," he said prior to the race. "The thing that will help me is that I haven't competed in a long time. I'm fresh. I'm very anxious. I can't wait until they shoot that (starting) gun off."

He showed no staleness Monday. Jumping into the lead pack from the outset, Hussein stayed at or near the front the entire 26 miles, 385 yards, and won handily in 2 hours, 11 minutes, 6 seconds.

Abebe Mekonnen of Ethiopia, the 1989 champion, finished second in 2:11:22, but the 16-second difference, the ninth-closest finish in the race's storied history, was deceptive.

After Hussein broke away from Andy Ronan of Ireland near the 22-mile mark, he ran unchallenged toward the finish line. Only in the closing stages did Mekonnen make a strong run, passing Ronan. But then it was too late.

"Winning Boston is like winning a gold medal at the World Championships or at the Olympics," Hussein said. "It's very important to me."

"Very few runners from the continent of Africa have won the Boston Marathon. Many have tried, like the great Abebe Bikila (of Ethiopia, the 1960 and 1964 Olympic marathon champion). I was fortunate to be the very first to win in 1988."

"This is a very special race to me."

Also very profitable. Hussein received $55,000 from the total purse of $402,000, but with appearance money and other financial extras, his earnings are expected to exceed $100,000.

Kelly Gruber homered for the second consecutive game and visiting Toronto increased its record to 6-2, the Blue Jays' best start since 1984.

Hepburn waited 45 years

NEW YORK (AP) — Audrey Hepburn says her current role as UNICEF goodwill ambassador is one she's taken nearly half a century to land.

The 62-year-old actress was catapulted to fame in "Roman Holiday" and after that acted in many films in the 1950s and '60s. She left the spotlight to raise her two sons.

In the May issue of Vanity Fair she spoke about UNICEF and a childhood that gave her an affinity for children in need. Hepburn was born in Belgium, but the family moved to the Netherlands, where she endured the privations of World War II.

"I finished the war highly anemic, and asthmatic, and all the things that come with malnutrition," she said.

Powell home in Bronx

NEW YORK (AP) — Gen. Colin Powell

came home to the South Bronx and his old high school for the first time in 37 years to throw out the first ball at Yankee Stadium and make a stay-in-school pitch to youngsters.

The 54-year-old chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff was on his first major speaking tour Monday since the Gulf War. "I'm giving you an order," he told about 200 students at Morris High School. "Stay in high school and get that diploma. Don't do drugs, it's stupid. Don't think you are limited by your background. Challenges are there to be knocked down."

Powell later tossed out the first ball at the Yankees-White Sox game. He also met with players and signed baseballs in the locker room.

Anderson's ex-husband seeks permanent custody

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The ex-husband of country singer Lynn Anderson says their two children suffer when they visit their mother, and he wants permanent custody.

"They come back tired, wound up, anxious," Harold "Spook" Stream testified Tuesday. "They're argumentative and hard to deal with. They don't want to go back."

Cancer crusade set for tonight

The Martin County unit of the American Cancer Society is asking everyone in Stanton to turn on their porch lights tonight for a very special cause.

The American Cancer Society asks residents to have their checks ready to welcome friends and neighbors who will be coming to your door between 6-8 p.m. with an important message about cancer. They will be seeking contributions toward the fight against the disease.

Volunteers will meet at 5:30 p.m. for a short briefing before starting the "Lights On" crusade at 6 p.m. Anyone wishing to volunteer two hours to help fight cancer please meet at the TU Electric Reddy Room at 5:30 p.m., Helen Ruth Louder said.

"When residents contribute money to the fight against cancer, the funds are used effectively. Most of the money the society raises in Texas is used to support the ACS research, rehabilitation programs and service for cancer patients," she said.

Martin chamber sponsoring sales

The Martin County Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a city-wide garage and sidewalk sale May 4. A number of organizations are already making plans to take part.

Any individual, store or group that would like to join in the one-day affair can get their sale listed by calling the Chamber office and paying a $10 fee. All money received will be used in area media to publicize the event. The deadline for getting a listing is April 26.

In addition to advertising the event in area papers, all participants and the Chamber office will pass out listings of the individual garage and sidewalk sales.

U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Sadako Ogata, right, reacts to cheers from a large group of Iraqi refugees who crossed into Iran at the Paveh region in the Iranian-Iraqi border on Monday. Mrs. Ogata arrived at the region to inspect a flow of Iraqi Kurdish refugees.

Refugees fear return of Iraqis

SAFWAN, Iraq (AP) — Refugees who sought the protection of U.S. forces in southern Iraq are now facing what is to many a terrifying prospect: Iraqi police will be moving into the border demilitarized zone.

"Many of us will be executed for opposing Saddam. They will write down our names and kill our families," said Ali H. Ali, a teacher from the southern city of Najaf. "The police will arrest us and kidnap us."

It also is not clear who will feed the refugees now that the Americans, whose deepest penetration had been to the Euphrates River, are leaving.

U.S. forces have stopped issuing ration cards to new refugees, said Maj. Tom Grubbs, of Olney, Md., who helps administer the refugee camp in Safwan.

However, relatively few new people have arrived at the Safwan camp during this week's U.S. pullout. In fact, a few dozen appear to be heading back to their homes in southern Iraq, said Grubbs.

The U.N. observer force is not mandated to care for refugees and the U.N. High Commission of Refugees has not announced any plans to do so.

Some U.S. soldiers will remain temporarily with the refugees in the demilitarized zone until the U.N. Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission, a lightly armed 1,440-person peacekeeping contingent, is in place.

But more of the Americans will soon be gone.

About half the 540,000 American troops have left the theater, the U.S. Central Command said.

Tens of thousands more in southern Iraq, including the 17,000 troops of the 1st Infantry Division of the VII Corps began leaving this week with the acceptance of a formal cease-fire ending the Persian Gulf War.

On Monday, about 300 worried refugees blocked a road with a sit-in outside their dusty tent camp, chanting slogans in English such as "Save The People of Iraq," and "Saddam, Saddam, Same As Hitler."

"Given Saddam's track record, these people probably have a reason to be scared," said Grubbs.

The U.S. Army is caring for more than 11,000 refugees at an abandoned construction company in Safwan. About 6,000 displaced people, mostly Iraqis, are at a Red Crescent camp about a mile away on the Kuwaiti side of the border.

They are among 40,000 Iraqi refugees in Iraq, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, and some say they will try to prevent the Americans from leaving Safwan.

"We will sleep in front of the American trucks," said Abu Nathal, a history teacher from Nassiriyah. "Only the Americans can protect us from Saddam Hussein."

U.N. peacekeepers are expected to arrive in Kuwait later this week, and their deployment on the 120-mile-long Iraq-Kuwait border is still one to two weeks away. U.N. officials have refused to give any timetable.

Once in place, the peacekeepers have a strict and limited mandate to observe and "to interfere as little as possible" in the affairs of Iraq and Kuwait, said Joachim Hutter, the U.N. delegation's acting spokesman.

Little hope seen in preventing U.S. rail strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Freight railroads and their unions pledged to keep on negotiating until a midnight strike deadline tonight, but both sides say a coast-to-coast walkout appears imminent.

The nation's 235,000 freight workers are set to walk off their jobs early Wednesday if the 11 unions representing them have not all agreed to new contracts settling a three-year dispute over wages, health care and work rules.

Such a walkout, which would be the first since 1982, would strand passengers, choke the flow of goods and idle hundreds of thousands of non-railroad workers.

A four-day rail strike in 1982 effectively shut down the nation's rail system and stalled passenger trains around the country. At the time, officials estimated the walkout cost the U.S. economy up to $1 billion a day.

Congress has the authority to step in and stop a transportation strike, but lawmakers have indicated they would not interfere until all avenues of bargaining have been exhausted and a strike is under way.

On Monday, President Bush tried to nudge unions and freight carriers closer to agreement by publicly noting the disarray such a strike would cause.

Bargainers continued negotiations through much of Monday evening, but both sides thought they were so far apart on the key issues — mainly wages and other financial issues — that there was little reason to hope a strike would be averted.

"It remains unlikely that agreements will be reached with each of the unions before the deadline," said Charles Hopkins, chief negotiator for the major freight carriers, such as the Burlington Northern, Conrail and Norfolk Southern.

If a nationwide strike occurs, it is expected to immediately choke the flow of one-third of the nation's goods and idle as many as 550,000 other American workers who depend on train-delivered goods to complete their jobs.

A freight strike, for instance, could have a dramatic impact on auto workers who rely on parts transported in from other regions, potentially shutting down some assembly plants.

Production and employment levels in auto, paper, lumber, steel, coal mining, glass production, plastics and chemical industries are expected to be hardest hit, administration officials have said.

Thousands of train-riding commuters and Amtrak passengers could be stranded, too. That's because most Amtrak trains, and many commuter trains such as those in the Chicago area, run on tracks owned by the freight railroads and often rely on union signalmen, brakemen and other employees.

Amtrak's busiest region, the Northeast Corridor from Washington to Boston, would not be affected because Amtrak owns that track.

Few, if any, of the railroads are expected to try to operate without their union crews.

The Union Pacific Railroad, based in Omaha, Neb., said it will be completely shut down if a strike occurs. Passengers on Amtrak trains that use Union Pacific tracks will be let off at the nearest terminal, spokesman John Bromley said.

Burlington Northern Railroad, based in Fort Worth, Texas, also said it would be shut down if a strike begins.

United Parcel Service, which uses freight trains to transport 30 percent of the 11 million packages it delivers each day, said Monday it has contingency plans to cover a strike scenario, but delays could occur.

A key issue in the negotiations is how closely railroad workers' contracts should mirror a presidential emergency board's report issued in January. That study recommended yearly pay boosts for workers.

Grady 7th grader best in free throws

Scott Peel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Peel of Lenora, is a Grady Junior High seventh grader who participated in the Knights of Columbus Free Throw Contest recently and took home the state free throw title.

"I just wanted to do it," the young Peel said. "The only way I made it to state was because of practicing. I knew I had practiced enough to win local and area, but I didn't feel that I could go all the way to state and win."

Peel started his journey to Austin at the campus of St. Edwards University followed by a win at the local level in Stanton. He won the local contest sinking nine out of 15 free throws to advance. He traveled to San Angelo to participate in the district area championships and hit 20 of 25 shots from the charity line.

At the state competition, Peel's talent was matched with another competitor, with both required to shoot 25 free throws. The one with the most at the end of the baskets would win.

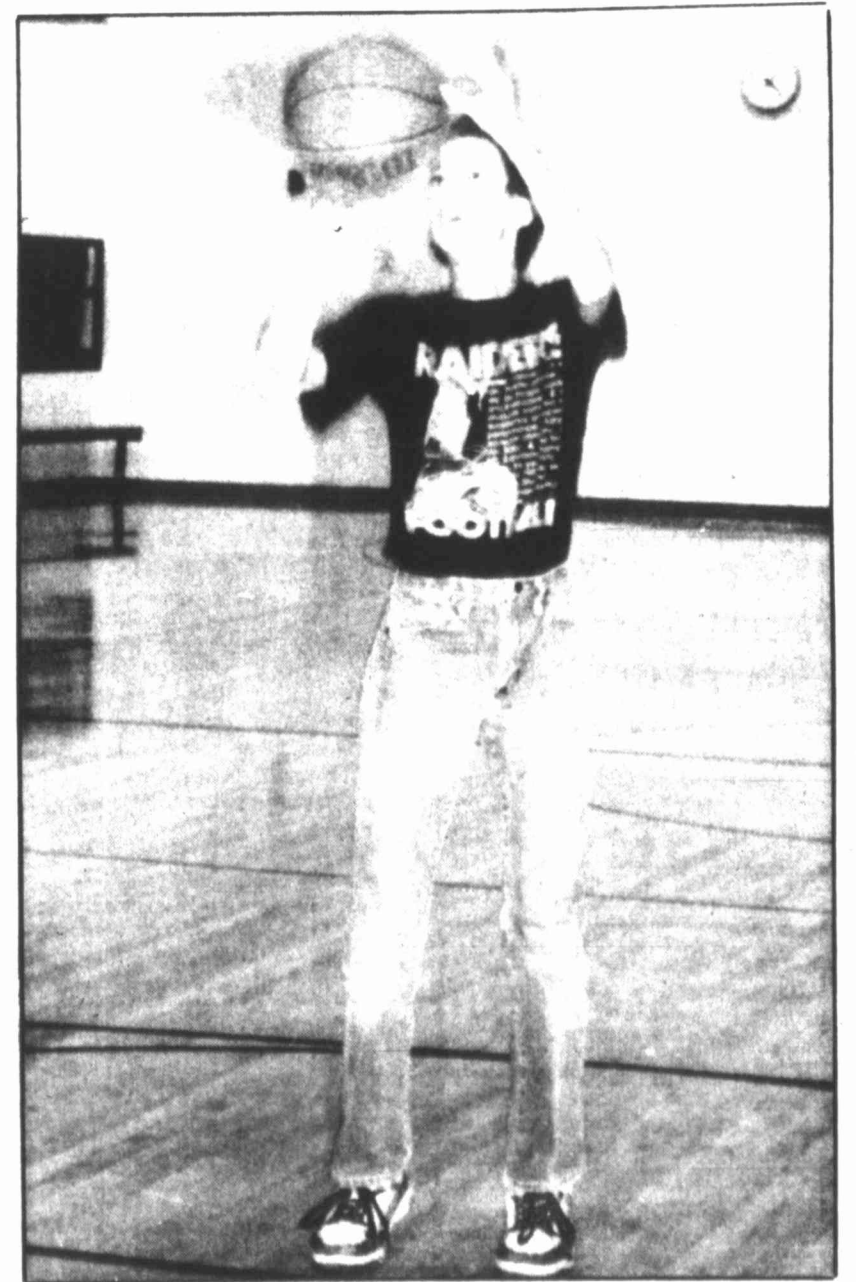

"We shot 25 and I hit 21, but so did the other guy. After we tied we had to go to the best out of five shots. Both of us hit four out of five. We had to go to another tie-breaker," he said.

"Again, we hit the same, we hit all five free throws. We went on, and this time I hit four and he managed only one good shot out of five. So I won."

Peel keeps himself busy everyday with practicing on his free throws. "I usually try to shoot 100 free throws everyday, and I am to the point of hitting between 70 and 80 free throws."

"I love basketball, and since the third grade I've been practicing and getting ready to play in high school. Maybe with all the practicing I've been doing, I can play high school ball and go from there."

The 13-year-old Grady student is ready for next year's competition, Peel said.

Grady seventh grader, Scott Peel, demonstrates the proper technique to shoot a free throw. He recently won the Knights of Columbus-sponsored free throw contest in Austin. For his efforts, Peel won the state title in his age group and plans another trip next year.

Workers return to state building

AUSTIN (AP) — An estimated 100 to 150 workers were evacuated from a state office building for about half an hour this morning following a chemical spill, officials said.

Workers in the Employees Retirement System building, several blocks north of the Capitol, were cleared from the building after odors set off alarms but caused no injuries, said Capitol police dispatcher Marilyn Moller.

"It's just one of those little spills that every once in awhile you'll get," Capitol police supervisor Lt. Ron Woods said.

Woods said the workers were evacuated about 11 a.m. and returned to work shortly after 11:30 a.m.

He said workers reported odors that might have entered an air conditioning shaft following the fourth-floor spill.

Woods and Ms. Moller said they didn't know what chemical was involved, but said it probably was a janitorial substance such as cleaning fluid.

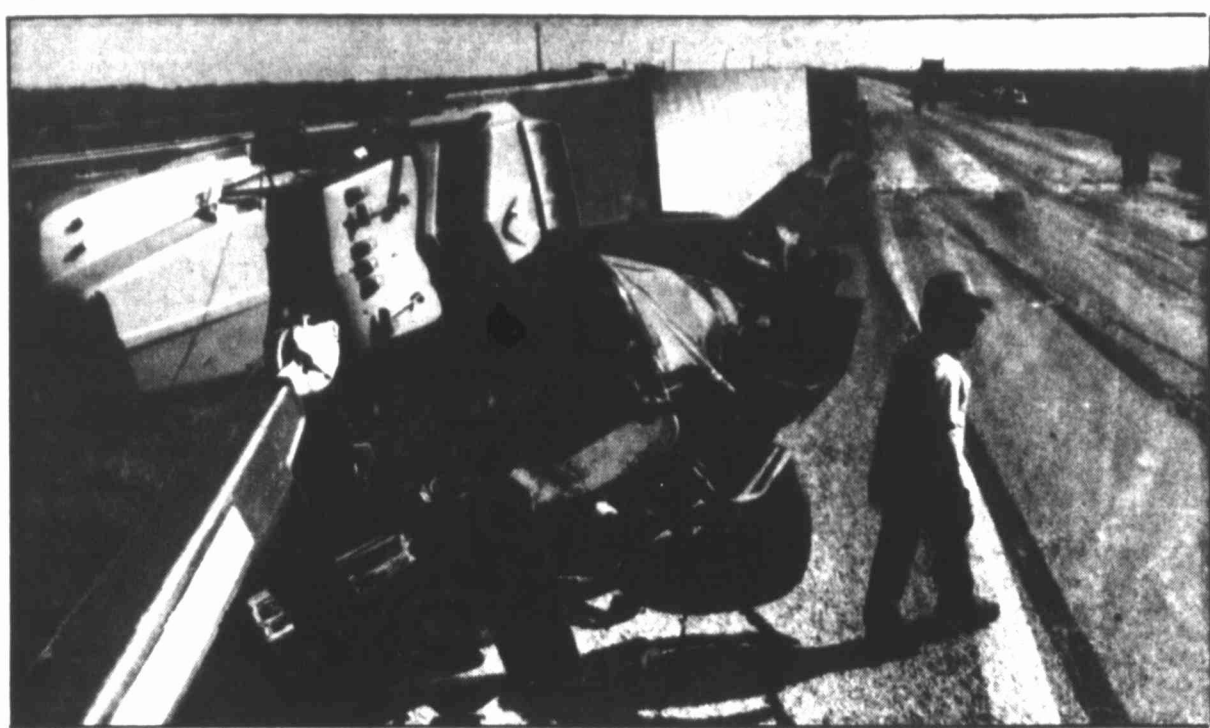

Capitol police and the Austin fire department were called to the scene, Ms. Moller said. Only one of the two retirement system buildings was evacuated, Woods said.

Court seeks redistricting plan

Martin County Commissioners, who met in a special meeting Monday, are seeking local minority leaders to submit a plan for a redistricting criteria.

The deadline for the plan is May 3. Public hearings are scheduled April 30.

Earlier, commissioners approved a bid by Neal and Associates for the purchase of a new fire truck for $80,000. Commissioners approved the purchase on a condition the Waco business would send a representative to answer questions from the Volunteer Fire Department. If not, VFD spokesmen Danny Iretton and Gary Reid, along with Commissioner James Biggs of Precinct 1 would visit Waco.

Precinct 3 Commissioner Ronnie Deatherage said that Tunnell Road between State Highway 829 and Farm Road 1212 is being prepared with crushed caliche and a special formula of emulsion instead of a seal coating.

After a delay, the commissioners resumed with retained counsel J. Greg Hudson of Austin to propose a plan that commissioners can follow to set changes in each precinct.

According to Hudson, with a 5.81 percent increase in the county, precinct 2 has accumulated more residents, while precinct 4 has dwindled, according to the 1990 census report. He presented ways the court could move the boundaries but must not disturb the Hispanic area boundaries. With such an imbalance, Hudson recommended that commissioners redraw county precincts to be equal in population.

"Unless the court does not comply with our recommendation, it is apparent that certain Voting Rights Act issues are likely to arise regarding these precinct lines," Hudson said.

Hudson also presented commissioners two proposed orders for the court to follow: "If redistricting is desired, we can set up a criteria for the redistricting. An order could be set up to set the dates on public hearings and for the public to submit their own plans, or to go ahead and publish that the court will be receiving proposals from the public and then set up a date for the hearings."

According to the office of Bickerstaff, Heath and Smiley, the firm Hudson represented at the court had its figures showing three precincts with a population increase, while precinct 4 decreased by 19.4 percent. Precinct 2 increased by 23.5 percent.

Hudson said to the court that in 1979, the county experienced a federal suit filed by four county residents. "It is in the best interest of the county that the court get minority leaders involved in the division of population in precincts to satisfy everyone. One cannot force the public to participate, but must be informed, according to the Justice Department."

Precinct 2 Commissioner Don Tollison said, "We need to involve as many people as we can, it is for our own good as well as the voting public. Minority leaders will have a chance to submit their own proposals and we will discuss the plan, if we have to, one by one."

County Judge Bob Deavenport agreed with Tollison. "The more plans the public submits, the more ideas we will be able to kick around. Sometimes someone will submit a plan and the next day take a look at it and decide they do not like what they turned in."

Cap Rock connection

By PEGGY LUXTON, Communications Advisor Cap Rock Electric Inc.

Bill Allred has been employed by Cap Rock Electric for 31 years. He had prior experience as a lineman before coming to the co-op and has spent his entire Cap Rock career as a lineman.

Allred has been assigned to the southern portion of the service area since 1962. His territory covers Glasscock, Reagan, Upton and a small portion of Sterling, Irion, Tom Green and Midland counties.

"There is a difference in the co-op's seven linemen's territories," he said. "My territory is 90-plus percent oil field and ranchland, with a few farms and houses. Everything in my territory is three-phase line, with very little single-phase. The three-phase is required for the heavy oil field load. This makes for different working conditions and different problems."

Allred said that for someone not familiar with his territory, it would be very difficult to find individual locations. He said there are few county roads to use as landmarks and there are usually many miles between houses.

Though the territory presents problems, Allred says he is happy with his long-time work assignment. He says, "I've been there so long, it seems like home to me. When I first went down there, for the first five years or so, I almost pulled my hair out. But I've been there through all the changes and the growth and I wouldn't trade territories with any of the other linemen now."

Cindy Dillard is Cap Rock's receptionist. She worked as cashier before assuming her present duties. She has been a cooperative employee for the last three years.

Daughter of F.C. and Emma Wheeler of Stanton, Cindy has a daughter and a son of her own. She is single and lives in Stanton.

A receptionist's duties include answering the telephone and greeting visitors to the co-op headquarters office. With 67 telephone extensions, she doesn't have much time for conversing with visitors.

The favorite part of the job for Cindy is the close contact she maintains with the public, both by telephone and in person. She also likes the friendliness of the company.

"Even though there are almost a 100 employees at Cap Rock, it doesn't feel like a big company. It is very friendly, open and a pleasing place to work."

Though she's only been employed three years by the company, Cindy feels she has found her niche. "I like this job better than any I've ever had," she says. "I certainly don't plan to leave. Part of the reason I want to stay here is the overall friendliness of the company, the employees and the customers. It's fun to work in a place where you have that."
