Tuesday final day for absentee voting

Tuesday is the last day for absentee voting for city council and school board elections in Big Spring, Stanton, Coahoma and Forsan.

In Big Spring, absentee voting for three at-large seats on the city council takes place in the Finance Office at City Hall. School board election voting takes place at the county clerk's office in the Howard County Courthouse.

In Stanton, city council and school board election voting take place at the Martin County Courthouse.

Coahoma absentee voting for the city council election takes place at city hall. School board election voting takes place at the administration building.

Forsan residents can vote absentee in both elections at the administration office.

Coahoma Athletic Banquet tonight

The Coahoma Athletic Banquet is scheduled for tonight, and many awards will be presented, including most valuable players for the 1990-91 school year.

Eddie Wolski is the featured guest speaker, a former Coahoma resident and currently the vice-president of the Texas High School Coaches Association. The banquet is sponsored by the Booster Club, and two college scholarships will be awarded.

The celebration begins at 6:30 p.m. in the elementary cafeteria. Tickets, $6.50, will be available at the door.

Court cracks down on frivolous appeals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, complaining about being burdened with "frivolous" appeals, today voted 6-3 to crack down on some of the people who file them.

The three dissenters called the action a "serious mistake" that creates an "invidious distinction" between the rich and the poor.

The court, in an unsigned order, changed one of its procedural rules so that it can strip some poor people of the privilege of filing appeals without having to pay a $300 filing fee and significant printing costs.

People who qualify as paupers and qualify for free appeals — what the court calls the right to file "in forma pauperis" — will face the danger of losing that right if the court believes they are abusing it.

The rule change will take effect July 1.

Marshall added, "This court once had a great tradition: 'All men and women are entitled to their day in court.' That guarantee has now been conditioned on monetary ability."

Violent crimes up 10 percent in 1990

WASHINGTON (AP) — Violent crimes increased at a 10 percent pace across the nation last year.

There were about 23,600 murders — nearly 65 a day — and 103,000 rapes reported in the year, preliminary figures for the FBI's annual uniform crime reports show. Seven cities, led by New York, recorded more than one-fourth of all murders.

The Bush administration and Democrats, each with their own crime bill before Congress, said the findings released Sunday demonstrated a need for legislative action.

"A citizen of this country is today

"A citizen of this country is today more likely to be the victim of a violent crime than of an automobile accident."

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh

more likely to be the victim of a violent crime than of an automobile accident," said Attorney General Dick Thornburgh. "Never before has the need for the president's tough crime bill been so pressing and the consequences of its absence been so dramatic."

The crime figures "show that America set new records for murder and rape last year," said Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-DeL.

chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, who has proposed a Democratic alternative to the Bush bill.

"We must take steps to reduce the violent crime that is destroying our cities and towns," Biden said. "The president and Congress must pass tough measures to fight crime, ban killer assault guns and combat the epidemic of violence against women before the death toll grows even higher."

Only Detroit among the seven leading cities had fewer murders last year than in 1989. The number was 582, down from 624.

Many criminologists don't consider the annual report a reliable indicator of crime trends because it covers only crimes reported to police agencies. A more accurate barometer, these experts say, is the Justice Department's annual survey of crime victims, which shows the level of violent crime has been fairly stable in the last decade.

New York City had 2,245 murders in 1990, more than six a day and up from 1,905 the year before.

"It is distressing," said Deputy Chief Michael Markman in the New York Police Department's Office of Management Analysis and Planning. "It's the availability of drugs and the availability of handguns."

"In 1960, you had the Saturday Night Special, a $25 gun," he said. "It fired a .22-caliber, if it fired at

City declares first Cinco de Mayo week

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

Community leaders today lauded the city-wide recognition of Cinco de Mayo, the historical celebration of Mexico's fight for independence, as a positive step for Big Spring.

Mayor Max Green signed an official proclamation early today proclaiming this week "Cinco de Mayo Week" through Sunday.

"We have all agreed we're in this together," he said. "The direction we move in is the direction our city moves in, and that should be cooperation."

"This (recognition) has never been done in the history of the Hispanic community," said Raul Marquez, who wrote the proclamation. He and Libby Uribe of local organization Amigos del Barrio spoke with the mayor today about their plans for a weekend festival.

"Maybe a proclamation's not a big deal, but to us, to be acknowledged is a big thing," Marquez said. "It sends a message to the Hispanic community that it is being recognized."

Local celebrations begin Friday at 6 p.m. at Los Tres Amigos, 1100

W. I-20. Local and out-of-town vendors will begin setting up food, game and craft booths. Los Libres, a musical group from Lubbock, will perform.

The booths will open both Saturday and Sunday at noon. On Saturday, Chicano Interes of Big Spring will entertain during the afternoon. Two bands — the Twin City Band and Charros — will perform beginning at about 8 p.m. Saturday.

Sunday, a family of mariachis from Mexico will perform beginning at 6 p.m., followed by Sangre Tejana of Big Spring.

There is no admission charge at the event. Uribe said everyone is welcome.

Marquez said the festival will be a "celebration of culture and liberation."

Cinco de Mayo honors a victorious battle in Mexico's fight to prevent Austrian and French armies from taking over the country in the late 1860s.

Pat DeAnda, city council member, said broader recognition gives the entire city an awareness of the Hispanic community.

Training

Howard County volunteer firefighters trained to improve their skills in search and rescue and in structural firefighting this weekend. All of the training was done with air packs on, said County Fire Chief C. Roy Wright.

Improving Birdwell

Big Spring Public Works Department employees place patching material on a section of Birdwell Lane Saturday. The crews were at work this weekend leveling sections of Birdwell Lane, Goliad Street and Wasson Road to prepare for a major sealcoating project. Price Construction of Big Spring has received a contract for the project, which will refurbish 4.84 linear miles of frequently-used streets and a section of the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark roads.

Taxpayer pays to gather data, then must pay to see it

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gregory Orman is a Princeton University student whose attempt to write a thesis on the health of commercial banks provides a glaring example of the growing obstacles to getting government information.

Orman needed 10 years of quarterly reports collected from banks by the Federal Reserve and, until six years ago, made available free to academic researchers.

But the Federal Reserve told him he'd have to get the information, now on computer tapes, from the government's National Technical Information Service.

And the NTIS told him the tapes would cost $20,000.

Orman's case illustrates the problem: As the government gets deeper into the electronic age, information generated at taxpayer expense is becoming costly — and sometimes impossible — for the taxpayer to acquire. It's often available only on giant rolls of magnetic computer tape, not on paper.

Sometimes, the government even buys its own information back from data-collection businesses.

Orman tried using the Freedom of Information Act to get the data, but the Federal Reserve turned him down again on grounds the information was available elsewhere — through the NTIS.

Finally, he used his friendship with an official of the Federal Reserve Bank in Minneapolis, who got the information from NTIS and charged him its costs for extracting it, $760.

A 1985 Reagan administration directive told government agencies to ensure that their computerized information systems don't "unnecessarily duplicate" private systems. They were instructed to place "maximum feasible reliance" on the private sector for the dissemination of government information.

As a result, government-gathered information is often made available to companies that remarket it and that become the public's only access to the information.

The issue was examined last week by Congress' Joint Committee on Printing.

"American citizens sometimes pay twice for some information — once through taxes (to gather it) and the second time through the private vendor (to get access to it)," said the panel's chairman, Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C.

"The U.S. government is the world's most important source of information, and the rules about how this information is disseminated are enormously important," James P. Love of Princeton, N.J., told the committee, citing Orman's case.

"As a rule," he said, "agencies should not be allowed to charge the public prices for information that exceed the incremental cost of disseminating that information."

Love runs the Taxpayer Assets Project of the non-profit Center for Study of Responsive Law. The project monitors the sale of government assets.

To make his point, Love displayed a computer floppy diskette he bought from the Census Bureau for $60. The diskette could be produced for 25 cents, he said, and if the information it contained were on paper the bureau would charge no more than $1 for it.

There are even times, Love said, when a government agency buys back its own information from a

Departure at hand for last U.S. troops

SAFWAN, Iraq (AP) — After weeks of uncertainty, the last U.S. troops in southern Iraq finally know their withdrawal is imminent. For many, a sense of relief is mixed with pride in waging peace as well as they waged war.

"War's hell, but sometimes things come out better at the end," said Sgt. Jim White, an Arabic interpreter who has worked with Iraqi refugees at the U.S.-run camp in this town near the Iraq-Kuwait border.

U.S. troops have provided food, medical care and protection to more than 11,000 refugees around Safwan. Over the weekend, the refugees were told they would have to move to a camp in Saudi Arabia or remain unprotected.

The U.S. Army was moving out. Most refugees agreed to be transferred, and an airlift to the Saudi camp began Sunday. About 640 more Iraqis were airlifted out today.

The operation could be completed in a week, and the Safwan camp will then be closed.

The start of the airlift "signals the beginning of our withdrawal, the end of our mission," said Lt. Col. John Kalb, who has commanded the Safwan sector. But for soldiers like White — a National Guardsman who has been away from his family in West Jordan, Utah, since August — the chance to help the refugees proves a satisfying legacy.

"Eight months away from my family is hard, but things like this make you feel good," he said.

Like others at Safwan, he has become familiar with the fears and hopes of the refugees, many of whom oppose Saddam Hussein and fled Iraq after Saddam loyalists crushed the uprisings that followed the war over Kuwait.

"These people are giving up a lot," said White, referring to rules allowing the refugees to take only small bundles to Saudi Arabia. "I try to tell them, 'Don't be afraid. You have to believe in yourself.'"

Kalb said most of the Iraqis wanted to get as far away from Saddam's security forces as possible. Asked if a change in government would lure them home, Kalb said: "They're going to want to see who comes in if Saddam goes."

Child shot, killed in father's arms

HOUSTON (AP) — Two teenagers faced capital murder charges today for the weekend slaying of a 16-month-old girl who was shot while being carried by her father.

Police said three men apparently were trying to steal Demetrius Sanders' car at a convenience store when one of them pulled a gun and fired at Sanders.

"For some reason — maybe he was moving too slow or something — the shooter shot at him and hit the baby," homicide Sgt. Ronnie Doyle said. "Robbery is the apparent motive, and the car is what they were going after."

Sanders, who works as a security guard and is licensed to carry a pistol, ran to the car to get his own gun and began firing as the three men fled. Although all three escaped, at least one was wounded.

He and a companion, 16 and 17 years old, were arrested Sunday after they showed up later at a hospital for treatment of two gunshot wounds. A third man remains at large.

Demolition plans spark protests

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Some Texas A&M University students who live in a low-income housing area known as "Tortilla Flats" are upset with school plans to demolish the buildings.

"Where are we supposed to go?" says Vickie Smith, who attends school with her husband. The couple also has a 2-year-old daughter. "We can't afford to pay an additional $200 a month."

The Smiths already pay $200 monthly for their three-bedroom duplex built in the 1950s. The rental rate is half the amount for similar housing elsewhere in College Station.

A&M officials say the apartments are so run down they have become a safety hazard and it would be too expensive to renovate them. On April 1, officials taped eviction notices to the doors of 110 units.

Donald Powell, director of business services at the school, said the apartments have roofs that leak, floors that have rotted and plumbing that can't withstand cold weather.

$30 million OK'd for anti-drug effort

EL PASO (AP) — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm says a total of $30 million in federal funds has been approved for drug interdiction operations in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

The funds are earmarked to provide more resources to local, state and federal agencies involved in drug interdiction efforts along the entire Southwest border, Gramm said Sunday.

Texas will receive $10.2 million of the total funding, with law enforcement agencies in 22 border counties receiving $3 million of the grant, Gramm said.

Study: State would be big winner in trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of a free trade agreement with Mexico can point to another study that shows Texas will be one of the big winners of an anticipated increase in commerce along the border.

The export market to Mexico is dominated by Texas, which shipped $11 billion worth of goods across the Rio Grande in 1989, a new Commerce Department study shows.

The study said exports from Texas accounted for 44 percent of all U.S. goods sent to Mexico that year.

Texas exported $11 billion in manufactured, agricultural, military and mined goods in 1989, more than any other state. Texas' exports grew by 70 percent, or $4.5 billion, between 1987 and 1989, the study said.

"You're talking about thousands and thousands of jobs being created as you increase that kind of trade," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

"It's not just one segment of the Texas economy but the whole Texas economy that will benefit, and every region," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. "We already have a good foothold as the largest exporter, our areas of dominance are broad-based, and we have the locational advantage."

Texas already has the cultural ties, location and foothold in the Mexican economy that would allow it to move quickly if the agreement is negotiated and approved, free trade backers say.

"Texas is certainly poised to be faster off the block," said Roger Wallace, deputy undersecretary for international trade at the Commerce Department.

The state has had a long history of trade with Mexico, and that base of knowledge will help Texas business people develop even stronger ties over the next decade, Wallace said.

The study said Texas' leading exports were electric and electronic equipment, with sales totaling $3.2 billion in 1989, followed by computers and industrial machinery, $1.2 billion; transportation equipment, $1.1 billion; chemicals, $810 million; and food products, $496 million.

Overall, manufactured goods accounted for $10 billion of the state's exports in 1989, followed by $545 million in agricultural products; $26 million in mined goods such as metals, coal, minerals, and oil and gas; and $206 billion in scrap and waste, second hand goods, and military equipment worth $34 million.

Mexico is Texas' largest export market, buying 29 percent of the $38 billion in goods the state ships to the rest of the world.

The study said U.S. exports to Mexico, the third-leading U.S. export market, totaled $25 billion in 1989, a 71 percent increase from $14.6 billion in 1987. After Texas, the largest exporting states in 1989 were California, with $4 billion, Michigan, with $1.7 billion, New York, with $834 million, and Arizona, with $759 million.

Wallace said the economic growth being created by the increase in exports "is not going to be localized. There are real export advantages for all parts of the United States from a free trade agreement."

But the Bush administration must first persuade Congress to extend its "fast-track" authority to negotiate non-amendable trade agreements.

Shuttle astronauts encounter trouble

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Discovery's astronauts collected scientific information today as ground controllers struggled to fix two data recorders whose failure caused some other "Star Wars" experiments to be scrapped.

The crew observed atmospheric light, or aurora, with an instrument unaffected by the problem.

Four attempts to get the tape recorders working failed Sunday night, NASA said. Engineers continued working on the problem today as the astronauts proceeded as planned with experiments involving the unaffected instruments.

The trouble began hours after Discovery thundered into orbit early Sunday on an eight-day mission devoted mostly to tests aimed at helping Pentagon scientists develop sensors for tracking and destroying missiles.

The first exercise canceled, on Sunday, was an observation of the Crab nebula, a huge gas cloud in space. Five observations set for today also were called off, said Air Force Capt. Marty Hauser. He said officials were unsure whether the sightings would be rescheduled for later in the flight.

The cause of the recorder failure, which affected three secondary instruments, was not immediately known. Hauser said this morning the problem could be mechanical, thermal or power-related.

"We're still trouble-shooting. We haven't given up hope on them yet," flight director Rob Kelso said early today. Engineers are "still in the back scratching their heads."

Flight director Ron Dittmore said the recorders were to be used to gather data from three of five scientific instruments in one of the main payloads.

The two other instruments, including the most important one, were not affected, and the most important device began taking data on atmospheric lights early today, Mission Control's Burney DeCamp reported.

"You have a lot of happy guys down here right now," DeCamp told the astronauts after the instrument began working.

All the devices are designed to study natural phenomena such as atmospheric lights, or aurora, that could mask a missile's path.

Soldiers back from Saudi Arabia now on buying sprees

KILLEEN (AP) — Returning Persian Gulf War soldiers are hitting Fort Hood-area stores at a dazzling pace carrying wallets bulging with stockpiled paychecks.

Furniture stores, car and motorcycle dealerships and even photo processing stores are reporting record sales in Killeen, home to the nation's largest military outpost.

Ironically, these businesses, hard-hit by the departure of about 25,000 soldiers from this area for Operation Desert Storm, are now finding they don't have enough inventory to meet the mad dash for goods.

"Our last 48 hours matched all of last month," said Perk Bearden, general manager of Yamaha of Killeen. "We sold eight machines in the last 48 hours and now I'm out of our two hottest-selling models."

New buying trends are also the result of the war, Bearden said.

He said several husbands called away to duty are returning to wives with new lives of their own.

Bearden said many husbands are now shopping for motorcycles because they say: "My wife became independent. She's got a job and needs the car so I have to get transportation."

Many are paying cash for either the total amount of an item or making large down payments, merchants say.

Charles Grant, sales manager at Connell Chevrolet-Geo, said sales and service orders are up at a tremendous rate.

"I've seen guys come in with bank envelopes stuffed this thick," Grant said while holding his fingers about two inches apart.

The big sellers are family economy cars, he said. Single buyers are opting for pickup trucks.

Sgt. Bruce Daise of the 4th Battalion, 5th Air Defense Artillery, 1st Cavalry Division, kept a promise he had made to 16-year-old daughter Kendra Daise, a sophomore at Ellison High School.

"I told her that if I made it back, I would buy her a car," said Daise, who kept his word. He bought Kendra a 1990 Geo Storm.

He's now shopping for a car for himself. Bill Moss, manager of the Radio Shack, said he's seeing a lot more cash sales since the troops returned.

He's also gotten some feedback on electronic items purchased by soldiers or dependents and taken to Saudi Arabia.

"The Walkmans didn't make it," Moss said. "Some of the guys said the Walkmans lasted about two weeks in the desert before the sand would clog them up."

Shortwave radios fared much better, however, Moss was told.

At CPI-One Hour Photo in Killeen, business is up by 50 percent since the soldiers' return.

"We're seeing a lot of sand scratches, heat exposure and overexposure from too much light and... a lot of photos of camels," said Marilyn Waight.

Lynn Montgomery of Furniture Studio in downtown Killeen says business is definitely on the upswing as families come in to "big ticket" items.

Town doesn't want chips to fall where they may

DUMAS (AP) — Don't have a cow, man!

It's not that Dumas officials don't like cattle; they're just tired of cow chips trailing through the Panhandle town.

Officials have beefed up enforcement of an ordinance aimed at livestock haulers who leave piles of cow manure in their wake.

"We've literally had two auto accidents caused by streets covered with this stuff," said City Manager Larry Smith. He said the fire department often is called to hose down the streets to make them passable after a cattle truck pulls through town.

The ordinance allows police oficers to ticket violators and issue fines of up to $2,000. Only six citations have been issued so far, of officials said. Each fine was $217.

Jimmy Rodriguez, a driver for M.T. Carroll Cattle Co. of Plainview, was ticketed March 20 for an incident in which a Dumas police patrol car was doused with waste. The company plans to fight its fine in municipal court.

Dumas Police Chief Gene Davis estimates 150 cattle trucks travel U.S. 287, a main thoroughfare in Dumas, each day. Trucks often carry 80 cattle, and up to 1,600 pounds of waste can be generated by each vehicle, Davis said.

Cattle company owner M.T. Carroll acknowledges the problem, but he said it's an unavoidable byproduct of cattle transportation. "There's no way of stopping it," Carroll said.

Trial will consolidate 9,032 cases

BALTIMORE (AP) — A trial consolidating 9,032 claims against 10 asbestos makers is getting under way here in an attempt to rein in a legal behemoth.

Circuit Judge Marshall A. Levin ordered the thousands of claims consolidated in the trial set to begin this week. The claimants are in the city and four surrounding counties. Most are former steel and shipyard workers.

It's the largest consolidation of asbestos cases in U.S. history and could set a precedent that would speed the resolution of similar cases nationwide.

Jury selection was to begin today. The trial is expected to take months.

Levin wants to use the trial to settle the issue of whether the manufacturers sold products containing asbestos, a mineral used for insulation and fireproofing, knowing it caused lung disease and cancer when inhaled.

If the jury finds for the plaintiffs, damages will be decided later in smaller trials.

Asbestos has been linked to diseases that kill about 10,000 people a year.

Nationwide, 90,000 asbestos personal-injury cases are pending. New claims outpace settlements two to one, said Zach Cowan, director of technical information at the National Asbestos Council in Savannah, Ga.

Many plaintiffs die before their cases get to court.

ABDALLY, Kuwait — An Iraqi refugee packs his belongings in the rapidly emptying Kuwaiti-run camp today, getting ready to be airlifted to a new Saudi Arabian refugee camp in Rafha. Today approximately 650 refugees left for the new camp after they were given the choice to go to Saudi Arabia or head back home to Iraq.

World Bank will shift urban focus

WASHINGTON (AP) — The World Bank said today it will shift from financing low-cost projects in the developing world's cities in favor of a broader strategy to heal urban problems.

The international lending institution's policy will focus on fighting poverty and pollution while increasing the productivity of the 1.3 billion people who live in exploding Third World cities.

For too long, government efforts supported by lenders have addressed urban growth and poverty by backing low-cost shelter, water supply, sanitation and transit projects, said a report by Michael A. Cohen, chief of the bank's Urban Development Division.

Such projects "have not had major impact on the policies of national and local governments and the broader issues of managing the urban economy," the report said.

It estimated that one-fourth of the urban population in the developing world lives in absolute poverty and says urban poverty is growing faster than rural poverty in many countries.

Citizenship will not be granted in Saudi Arabia

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The Iraqi refugees leaving the care of U.S. troops in southern Iraq for a refugee camp in Saudi Arabia will not be granted Saudi citizenship, a senior Saudi general says.

Lt. Gen. Khalid bin Sultan, who led the Arab contingent in Operation Desert Storm, said Sunday that he expected all the refugees in Safwan — 11,000 by U.S. count — to be flown to the camp in Rafha in groups of several hundred a day.

The first group of 339 refugees were flown on Sunday aboard five U.S. Air Force transport planes from the U.S.-protected camp in Safwan to Rafha, on the Saudi-Iraqi border 420 miles northwest of Riyadh.

They were allowed to take only what they could carry, and left behind possessions ranging from cars to small stoves. One third were children.

The airlift helps free U.S. forces — who have been caring for and protecting refugees at Safwan for six weeks — for their eventual trip home.

Khalid, a Saudi prince, also said in an interview Sunday that 14,000 of the remaining 17,000 Iraqi prisoners of war still held by the Saudis refuse to return to Iraq. About 60,000 prisoners were taken during the war and eventually placed in Saudi custody.

Many of the prisoners fear for their lives because of their force's poor performance in the war, while others wish to plot the overthrow of the Iraqi leader from exile.

In Safwan, pamphlets were distributed telling the refugees there was little likelihood that Saudi Arabia, or any country except Iran, would resettle them on a permanent basis.

They also were told they would have to remain inside the camp at Rafha and abide by Saudi laws.

"We haven't painted a rosy picture for them, but they still very much want to go — the further from Saddam the better," said Lt. Col. John Kalb, whose troops have provided food, medical care and protection for the Iraqi refugees.

Prince Khalid said the refugees would not be granted Saudi citizenship.

"We will just use it (Rafha) as a refugee camp and hope they can go back to their homes and countries in the future once things are settled."

They could also find a third nation to take them in, he said. So far, only Iran is taking in some refugees.

Yeltsin negotiating with strikers

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin traveled to the Kuznetsk coal basin in Siberia today for more talks on ending a 2-month-old strike by miners, his office said.

Yeltsin planned to spend three days in the region, visiting several mines and talking to miners, his spokesman, Sergei Gribonov, said.

The Russian leader was scheduled to arrive tonight in Novokuznetsk.

Yeltsin and the leaders of eight other Soviet republics agreed last week to support Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's economic "anti-crisis" plan in return for concessions on ending an unpopular new sales tax and possible cost-of-living wage increases.

Gribonov said Yeltsin's talks in Siberia would be a continuation of Saturday's meeting in Moscow during which Yeltsin and miners' representatives worked out solutions for several of the strikers' demands.

Besides higher wages and better working conditions, the Kuznetsk miners have been demanding the resignation of Gorbachev, who is Yeltsin's main political adversary.

Several coal mines resumed production recently after being transferred from the national government's jurisdiction to that of the Russian Federation, which has been more willing to give the miners a share of their production.

Political prisoners to be released

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudan's military leader announced today that he is releasing all of the country's political prisoners.

Lt. Gen. Omar Hassan el-Bashir did not specify how many people were involved. But the chief justice, Galal Ali Lutfy, told Egypt's Middle East News Agency that about 100 people were in Sudanese prisons on political grounds.

International human rights organizations have accused el-Bashir's regime of jailing and torturing hundreds of political opponents.

The general made his announcement at the start of a three-day conference expected to lay the foundation of a political organization based on Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi's system of "people's congresses" in which every adult is supposed to have a role in setting government policies.

El-Bashir led a military coup June 30, 1989 that overthrew the democratically elected government of Prime Minister Sadek el-Mahdi.

Student protester sets herself afire

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — One radical student set herself on fire today and thousands of others clashed with riot police and held campus rallies to protest the fatal beating of a student protester by police.

Friday's beating death of 20-year-old Kang Kyung-dae has grabbed national attention, and left the government scrambling to contain political damage.

Students rallied on 30 campuses today to demand the Cabinet's resignation, the arrest of the outgoing interior minister and an independent investigation into Kang's death, said the national news agency Yonhap.

"Dismiss the Cabinet," protesters chanted.

'Fatal attraction' case deadlocked

PAUL SOLOMON

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — The trial of a teacher accused of killing her lover's wife ended with a deadlocked jury, and her lawyer asked for dismissal of the murder charge. Prosecutors say they'll seek a second trial.

The jury was dismissed Saturday after 11 days of deliberations. Eight voted for the conviction of Carolyn Warmus and four favored acquittal.

Warmus, 27, is accused of murder and illegal weapon possession in the 1989 shooting death of Betty Jeanne Solomon. Prosecutors argued that Warmus killed Mrs. Solomon because she was obsessed with Mrs. Solomon's husband, Paul.

The defense contended Warmus was framed by private investigator Vincent Pardo, who the defense claimed was paid $20,000 by Solomon to kill his wife.

The prosecution's case was entirely circumstantial.

Opinion

Opinions from across the U.S. War ended too soon

It's clear now why President George Bush made Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf shut up.

Schwarzkopf said he wanted to wipe out Iraq's military while we had the chance.

Bush said everyone had agreed to end the war when it was.

If Schwarzkopf had his way, maybe Saddam Hussein wouldn't have been able to slaughter and starve the Kurdish rebels.

By making Americans think that there was no argument among the military leaders about stopping the war, Bush thought there'd be less second-guessing.

Now there's plenty of it.

We didn't finish the job militarily. We asked for the rebellion. When the rebellion came, we didn't help. When there were refugees, we didn't give them aid promptly. Finally, (on April 16), Bush agreed to send troops to protect the refugees.

The Gulf War was fought brilliantly. The aftermath, however, is shameful.

Wausau (Wis.) Daily Herald

U.S. must help Kurds

President Bush has done the right thing by committing U.S. troops to Kurdish relief and protection efforts. While we believe the president has been correct to refrain from active American involvement in the Kurdish rebellion, it has always been evident that the United States must lead the way in assisting refugees.

With power comes responsibility. We still maintain that any permanent presence in the region must be maintained under United Nations auspices.

By all means, the United States and its allies must see to it that those Kurds who have fled Iraq for their lives are not obliged to return to persecution.

At this juncture, the best prospect is some kind of guarantee—defined by the Security Council, and enforced by troops under United Nations command—for the safety of the Kurds, and relief and reconstruction in their northern Iraq homeland.

The Providence (R.I.) Journal

A little meaner next time

The world has learned a good many lessons in dealing with Saddam Hussein's Iraq. Among those worth remembering:

- The United Nations can, and probably will, respond to expansionist-minded dictators who invade a neighboring country. More than 30 nations took part in Operation Desert Storm. That precedent will help deter aggression.
- The United States is a dependable ally. That will help deter aggression.
- The United States can field a credible military force in a short time. That, too, helps deter aggression.

But members of the U.N. coalition also are taking home another lesson that will affect their conduct in future conflicts. The world's Napoleons had better know what it is.

When it began to look as if coalition forces were "piling on" poorly supplied Iraqi troops, President Bush ordered a cease-fire. It was the compassionate and humane thing to do, and most Americans agreed with the decision.

But Iraqi leaders took advantage of the cease-fire to attack their domestic opposition. Thousands of Shiites and Kurds have been killed by an army the U.N. coalition allowed to survive.

Now the world is rallying to help more than 2 million Kurds who are suffering and dying. Everybody is complaining that U.N. forces—specifically, American forces—encouraged people to revolt, but left them facing a still deadly Iraqi army. Nobody is complaining any more about the United States and its allies "piling on" with respect to Iraqi forces.

The United States and the United Nations gave peace a chance. Saddam Hussein rejected the offer.

The next guy who pushes the United Nations into using force is going to be up against a meaner coalition.

Charleston (W. Va.) Daily Mail

Were Patriots overrated?

It is difficult to separate the Persian Gulf War and the Patriot missile if only because the Patriots were so dramatically successful in neutralizing the Scud missile, the most feared weapon in Saddam Hussein's arsenal.

We have that from no less authority than President Bush, who in February went to the Raytheon Co. plant in Andover, Mass., to thank the men and women who make the missiles. The Associated Press reported Army figures showing the Patriots intercepted 45 of the 47 Scuds it tried to shoot down.

Now, however, there are dissenting voices. Testimony presented to the House Armed Services Committee suggested the Patriots did not destroy as many Iraqi Scuds as Pentagon officials claim. Further, the AP disclosed that some U.S. and Israeli experts who have examined data from the war claim the Patriot was overrated.

Among the nay sayers is Theodore Postol, a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The professor quotes Israeli newspaper reports indicating that before the Patriots arrived, 13 Scuds fell on Israeli territory, damaging 2,698 apartments and injuring 115 people. Damage estimates after the arrival of the Patriots included 7,778 apartments and injury to 168 people.

One wonders, however, what the death toll and damage reports from Israel and Saudi Arabia would have been had the Patriots not been deployed—or, if some congressional critics had had their way, never developed.

The issue... is not whether the Patriots prevented damage to the area they were assigned to defend, but whether they successfully checked the Scud offensive.

When computers do the writing

Not long ago I proposed to abolish telephones. This was when the telephone companies began to sell these inhuman systems by which a caller is instructed to press "3" to talk about billing or to press "4" to talk about a job. I renewed the proposal. Down with telephones!

But recently an even more serious threat appeared in the papers. The Associated Press reported that in San Jose, Calif., a free-lance author programmed his computer to write in the fashion of Jacqueline Susann.

According to the author, if so he may be described, the program worked. Out of the computer came a novel bearing the Susannian title of "Just This Once." Said Scott French: "I didn't copy her words or even sentences but her way of thinking."

By way of input, the gentleman read the whole of the Susann opus, beginning with "Valley of the Dolls" and going downhill from there. From this scrutiny he was able to direct the computer in matters of both style and content. He asked the computer "to create hundreds of formulas dictating how a character would react" according to Susannian plots. "I can handle that," said the computer.

In the end, the computer brought forth a 350-page manuscript about several young women who achieve fame in movies and rock music, and then destroy themselves with drugs and high living. The author directed his electronic amanuensis to heat up the steamy sex, and in a flash blouses were ripping and loins were aching. How does a computer know such things?

French estimates that he wrote 10 percent of the work all by himself, and bully for him. The computer wrote 25 percent, and they collaborated on the rest. Unfairly, or so it seems to me, the finished book will bear only his byline.

All this requires some thought. Using the same techniques it ought to be possible to input Hemingway. Short sentences. Active verbs. Much repetition. Laconic characters. We could do a story about an old man. He is not a Cuban fisherman. He is an oyster tonger.

"These are good oysters," said Marco. "Yes," said Guiseppie, "but not great oysters."

They sat in silence. "Yesterday," said the tonger, "I walked barefoot upon the beach, feeling the good sand between my toes."

"Yes, the sand is good and the toes also are good. Let us drink cold beer together and talk of sand and toes. We will pick up sand and we will see it trickle through our fingers."

"It will be good sand and good fingers."

Or come to think of it, a skilled computerist could feed his machine some good Mississippi mash, combining long paragraphs and endless digressions, and the computer would regurgitate Faulkner. On the lower slopes of Olympus we might develop software for Stephen King or Erica Jong. Boot up the Harlequin program, Penelope! And enter a command for heavy breathing.

Instant style! What a temptation for an author! Ah, to write in Gibbon's rolling rhetoric, or to speak with Lord Macaulay of what every schoolboy knows. What of Proust? Forget Proust. What about Dickens? Yes, it would be good to write in the fashion of Dickens. But back to Hemingway.

Marco looked at the sky and then at the oyster beds. I hate oysters, he thought. But Dickens is good. The sky is good, but the wind is rising. Soon the sea will be choppy. If I tong today, I will likely throw up. It would be better to drink a cold beer with Guiseppie. Then I will not throw up. We will drink our beer and we will wonder if an oyster has a soul, and after a while we will drink another beer, and Guiseppie will tell me of the women he has known. We will drink lite beer because it has less cholesterol and we will hate every drop of it.

Well, writers have been trying to write like other writers for many years, and not many have gotten away with it. In my own Early Mencken Period, I scorned the booboisie. Under the spell of the Sage of Baltimore I spoke of brummagem schemes and mocked the Bible Belt. It never worked. My publisher thought I was nuts.

Some of my colleagues have used plastic wheels as plot finders: FBI agent meets girl reporter; girl reporter falls for auto thief; FBI agent arrests thief, loses girl, runs amok. The agent was weary now. He gripped his .350 Magnum and gazed again at the darkening sky. It is a good sky, he thought, and the girl reporter is a nice reporter—even if she cannot spell worth beans. I desire her greatly, but I need a cold beer. I will find Guiseppie and together...

If it tastes good, don't eat it

By BETTY JOHANSEN
Copy Editor

One day as I was eating lunch at Sonic Drive-in, a sparrow landed on the hood of my car and gave me a good looking over. I looked back, amazed at its boldness. After awhile it flew away and I turned my attention to my food, still wondering why a bird would perch so close to a human.

A few minutes later, a nearby car drove away. Several sparrows descended on the tray that had been left behind and pecked through the leftovers. Oh! The light dawned and I tossed my own sparrow a scrap of bread. It swooped down on the tidbit and flew off with its hard-earned meal.

The moocher birds reminded me of a fish tank I saw at an aquarium in Corpus Christi. Whenever people approached the tank, the fish swarmed to the surface of the water like a mass of bees, and pleaded for a hand-out. Obviously they had good reason to believe their begging would be rewarded.

On another occasion, I made a trip with my brother Carl and his family to the zoo in San Antonio. In one cage I came upon a cute little monkey doing all kinds of tricks. It was a nice change since most of the animals were stretched out dozing. A few might do us the honor of opening an eye and checking us out; otherwise there was no action.

So I was pretty excited about an adorable little animal actually doing something. I called my nephew and niece to "hurry and come look." But they were busy feeding some bird on the other side of the path and refused. Blew my mind! What's so much fun about tossing food into a cage? A playful monkey beats an eating bird any time in my books.

It makes me wonder. What's this thing we have about food? I don't mean eating it. I mean feeding it to someone (or something) else.

It starts in infancy with a nervous new mother, hovering over the newborn, worrying whether baby is getting enough milk. Next comes the turbo-prop spoon loaded with baby chow, doing dips and dives until it lands in the little mouth—hopefully—and gets swallowed.

Childhood is the period of the eat-everything-on-your-plate wars, complete with those stories about starving children in India. I remember a "Bill Cosby Show" where Rudy had to sit at the dinner table until she ate her brussels sprouts. Even if all her friends grew up, began dating and married while she sat there, she would not be allowed to leave until her plate was clean.

No wonder so many of us Americans struggle with our weight. We're surrounded by people determined to shovel food down our throats. If it's not the guilt trip about some child starving somewhere in the world, it's the guilt trip from the chef who slaved all afternoon on this supreme dessert and "you must have just this one piece or I'll be broken-hearted." It's not like I don't want to eat it, you understand, and with that kind of "help" around, a diet is doomed before it is begun.

It's amazing how many feeding cues there are in everyday life. We eat to celebrate or because we're depressed, angry, frustrated, weary or bored. And, like a mother ready to pop a bottle into the crying infant's mouth, some compassionate soul is always around to feed the hurt or toast the joy with us. What I can't figure out is why we have so much hunger in the world when there are also so many determined feeders in the world.

In the library I found "The No Nibbling Book" by Robert Mark Alter. I can't actually recommend it because it is occasionally offensive, but Alter gives some reasons not to eat. Specifically, it offers "128 things to remember or do at the refrigerator door so you won't open it."

For example, suggestion #26 says that you're wanting to nibble because you want to change the taste in your mouth, which is bad from your last nibble—"Go brush your teeth."

Suggestion #41 tells you that the need to chew may really be a need to clench your jaw because you're feeling violent. Don't take your violence out on your mouth. "Go... beat up your bed."

And #79 explains that the movement you feel in your stomach isn't hunger as you're being telling yourself. Nope, actually the last time you ate, you ate so much you paralyzed your gastric juices for hours. "That's not hunger, that's your stomach coming out of a coma."

Well, it's refreshing to hear a voice in the land saying, "Don't eat." But, considering that all my favorite foods are bad for me, the most practical suggestion came from a book of quotations. "Your diet should be a very simple matter—some unknown person has said, "if the food tastes good, spit it out."

Quotes

"We haven't resolved much. We're going to go back and see what else we can think of." — Mission Control's Roscoe Miller as the astronauts aboard space shuttle Discovery struggled to fix two tape recorders needed to record scientific, Star Wars-related data.

"The president and Congress must pass tough measures to fight crime, ban killer assault guns and combat the epidemic of violence against women before the death toll grows even higher." — Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-DeL., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, as preliminary figures from the FBI showed violent crimes around the nation increased by 10 percent last year.

Content of math courses debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — What good is it teaching pupils 15th century arithmetic, algebra dating back to the Pilgrims and geometry from the time of Euclid, if they have no use for it in the late 20th century?

The nation's math teachers want to know. They are at the forefront of a movement among educators to re-evaluate what students learn.

The math teachers were touted last week by President Bush and Education Secretary Lamar Alexander as examples of what instructors of all subjects should achieve as they pursue the administration's new "America 2000" education strategy.

"We're questioning whether students should have eight years of 15th century arithmetic, one year of 17th century algebra, followed by one year of third century B.C. geometry," said Thomas Romberg, director of the National Center for Research in Mathematical Sciences Education at the University of Wisconsin.

at how other children (from other countries) look at math," Romberg said in a recent interview.

Race and the roles of other cultures in mathematics also are issues of discussion, said Paula Duckett, a math resource teacher at River Terrace Community School in Washington, D.C.

Math leaders stress the importance of updating outdated curricula that don't reflect ethnic diversity and new approaches to math is important. But they say it cannot be the sole focus.

Forgers sought to test new system

MURRAY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Eyal Kishon is looking for a few good forgers.

Kishon, a scientist at AT&T Bell Laboratories, has devised a signature-identification system he thinks could snag the baddest of bad-check artists.

Testing the system on other scientists at Bell Labs produced sterling results, but Kishon wants to give it a real workout. That's where the problem lies.

"We need impostors and forgers to really test this," he said. "However, most are in prison, and the really good ones haven't been caught."

If the system is developed for commercial use, companies could make sure the right person is signing a credit card, entering a building or logging on to a computer.

There are other methods of identifying people that are virtually foolproof, but the signature is suitable for everyday transactions at the bank or department store.

Fingerprinting is too closely associated with criminals. DNA, or genetic, fingerprinting is considered highly accurate, but "most people don't want to give blood every time they go to the grocery store," Kishon said.

Mapping the blood vessels in the eye is used by the Pentagon for top-secret projects but is far too expensive for consumer use, Kishon said.

Kishon's system consists of an electronic pen to sign a transparent, pressure-sensitive writing pad. Three elements of the signature are recorded: the shape, the pressure applied and the speed at which it is written.

MURRY HILL, N.J. — Eyal Kishon, an AT&T Bell scientist, signs his name onto an electronic pad at the Bell Labs center in Murry Hill, N.J., Wednesday. Kishon is developing a signature-identification system using the shape, pressure and speed of the signer to detect forgeries.

"A forger can copy the shape of your signature," Kishon said, "but he doesn't know and can't imitate the pressure you use, the speed with which you write, or the sequence in which you cross your t's and dot your i's."

In Kishon's system, the modern John Hancock gives 10 sample signatures.

A computer breaks down the samples and comes up with a model signature. The model does not look exactly like the original but contains all the critical information: pressure, speed and shape.

In his test, Kishon gathered the model signatures of 20 scientists. Some were told to practice forging the signatures of their peers.

When processed through the computer, real signatures look like a shadow or double image of their stored model. A forgery — even one that looked identical to the naked eye — looks like tangled string when imposed over the real thing.

The reason? Speed and pressure don't match up.

Steve Markardt, an FBI spokesman, said the Bell Labs system measured one variable that law enforcement officials cannot — speed.

Kishon said the yet-unnamed system will not be foolproof but could serve a variety of uses.

For example, someone making a credit card purchase could sign directly on a computer pad. The computer would instantly compare the signature with one stored in a data base or information stored in the card's magnetic stripe.

Sand Storm Relays

Big Spring State Hospital conducted the fourth annual Sand Storm Relays April 26, and 81 patients entered the track and field events. Sponsored by the activities therapy department at the hospital, 22 first place and 21 second place medals were given to the winners in each event. Each unit participated, and a new series of events for the Adolescent Care Unit was included this year. The adolescent winners were given first and second place ribbons. Many patients entered more than one of the 23 combined events, and the afternoon culminated with a water balloon toss. Contestants at left await their turn as a frisbee thrown by Harold Filewood flies towards the fire targets in the accuracy contest. Ann Lindeman, center, lines up her shot as she prepares to toss the ball towards the hoop in a basketball shooting contest. Above Javier Kellogg attempts to get a football he tossed to go through a tire.

Q. Was Humphrey Bogart the first choice for the leading role in Casablanca?
A. No. Ronald Reagan passed on the male lead, then the part was offered to Bogart. Also, Ingrid Bergman got the part of the female leading role only after Ann Sheridan passed on the opportunity, according to USA Weekend.

Tabloid claims to have more ethics than Times

LANTANA, Fla. (AP) — World exclusive! The untold story that will shock millions!

The National Enquirer, supermarket tabloid and self-described scandal sheet, claims it's been more ethical in its reporting on the alleged Kennedy estate rape than the mainstream news media — especially The New York Times!

And as the Enquirer might write in its own heavy-breathing style, some stunned experts agree!

The Washington Post cited the tabloid in a story on the decision by the Times and other news organizations to identify the alleged victim. The Post said "it was clear the journalistic world had been turned upside down" when Enquirer editor Dan Schwartz could claim his paper took "a more ethical stand" than the Times in deciding not to name the 29-year-old woman.

The Times said it identified the woman in an April 17 profile because NBC's disclosure of the woman's name in a broadcast the night before made it pointless to continue withholding her name for reasons of privacy.

In its profile, the Times included the woman's history of traffic offenses, noted she was an unwed mother and quoted an unidentified high school friend as saying she had a "little wild streak."

On Friday, the Times published an editor's note citing complaints from its staff that the article impugned the woman's claim to have been raped by William Kennedy Smith, a nephew of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. It said "no such challenge was intended" and that the article "should have explicitly asserted that nothing in the woman's background could resolve the disputed testimony."

The Times said it has been preparing a profile of Smith, who hasn't been charged and has denied any wrongdoing.

At the Enquirer — the tabloid given to stories of UFO encounters, celebrity dirt and Elvis sightings — Schwartz said his paper has presented both sides of the story while protecting the woman's identity, as is traditional in rape cases.

Enquirer president Iain Calder said the woman's name was withheld even though revealing it would probably sell more copies of the "inquiring-minds-want-to-know" paper.

The Enquirer, which has a weekly paid circulation of 4 million, estimates 20 million people actually read each issue. Papers like it helped cause the controversy over naming the alleged victim in the first place.

After another supermarket tabloid, The Globe, published the woman's name and a photo it said was first used in a London tabloid, NBC News, the Times and several other news organizations followed in naming her.

Their reasoning included arguments that naming victims would ease the stigma of rape and that the woman's name had already become widely known.

At the Enquirer offices in this Palm Beach County suburb last week, Calder and Schwartz said the paper is facing more competition from the mainstream media.

Calder pointed to the proliferation of other supermarket tabloids, celebrity-dominated magazines and "tabloid television" shows, along with more "people-oriented" reporting.

"Fifteen years ago, they only reported what they considered 'important news,'" Calder said. "Now the rest of journalism has realized what the readers think is important is important news."

The alleged March 30 rape at the Kennedys' Palm Beach estate posed a special challenge to the Enquirer. Not only was it just 15 miles up the road, but the story involved a family Calder says fascinates Enquirer readers.

Police beat

The Big Spring Police Department reported the following incidents:

- Burglaries of two vehicles were reported at a parking lot near the intersection of I-20 and Highway 87. Two citizens band radios and a small amount of cash were reported taken.

all. It bounced off your jacket half the time. It would fire one round and that was the end of it.

"Now we have 9 millimeters. They carry maybe 16 rounds, 18 rounds, they work all the time, they're more powerful, you don't have to be a good shot when you fire 16 rounds."

Other leading murder cities were Los Angeles with 983 slayings, up 12 percent from 877; Chicago 850, up 15 percent from 742; Houston 568, up 24 percent from 459; Philadelphia 503, up 5.9 percent from 475; and Washington, D.C. 472, up 8.8 percent from 434.

The FBI expressed the national picture only in percentages. Applying those percentages to last year's figures, these would be the numbers nationally in a few categories:

Violent crime, up 10 percent to about 1,810,000; murder, up 10 percent to 23,600; Rape, up 9 percent to 103,000; robbery, up 11 percent to 642,000 and aggravated assault, up 10 percent to 1,050,000.

In non-violent crimes, burglary was down 4 percent to 3,040,000; larceny theft, unchanged at 7,872,000; motor vehicle theft, up 5 percent to 1,620,000.

"The growth in violent crimes is larger than I would have thought," said Alfred Blumstein, dean of the School of Urban and Public Affairs at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

He said he also was surprised that robberies rose while burglaries declined.

"Robbery and burglary tend to go together," Blumstein said. People on drugs are more likely to be robbers than burglars, he said, because a drug-dependent person would want money quickly to buy drugs.

Cities in the 500,000 to 1 million population range experienced large increases in the violent categories. Murder was up 19 percent, rape 11 percent, robbery 18

Baker criticism draws rebuke

WASHINGTON (AP) — The criticism Secretary of State James A. Baker III directed at Israel last week at a news conference in Syria drew a rare rebuke from a predecessor, Alexander M. Haig Jr.

"I was appalled to see our secretary of state condemn Israel from a platform in Damascus," Haig said in a panel discussion Sunday night at the Washington Institute for Near East Policy.

Haig, who was President Reagan's first secretary of state, also questioned President Bush's formula for a settlement.

"I never believed in 'territory for peace,'" Haig said. "Whose territory? Whose peace?"

He predicted the administration's effort to set up Arab-Israeli peace talks would not succeed.

"I don't see anything coming out of this, and I don't think President Bush is going to engage himself in this process," Haig said.

The parties have not reached the point where they are ready, on their own, to negotiate a settlement, Haig said, and the Middle East remains volatile despite the defeat of Iraq.

Former President Carter succeeded at Camp David in 1978 in steering Egypt and Israel into the peace treaty they signed the next year because the countries were ready to make peace, Haig said.

Baker and other U.S. officials, in pushing for peace talks, portrayed the Middle East as vastly changed after the Persian Gulf War. The situation, according to Baker, created "a window of opportunity" for Israel and the Arabs to make peace and for the Palestinian question to be addressed.

However, Baker wound up his third visit to the area in seven weeks Friday night with a statement suggesting the administration might abandon the drive unless Israel responds to his questions about sponsorship of the peace talks and other issues.

The Arabs want the United Nations to play a major role. The Israeli government, fearing outsiders would be inclined to side with the Arabs, is resisting.

Another hangup is who would represent the Palestinians in the negotiations.

In Damascus last Wednesday, Baker publicly criticized Israel for moving to establish a new settlement on the West Bank. "That points up very vividly it is easier to obstruct peace than to promote peace," he said at a news conference with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa.

Haig said he was especially distressed by Baker's remarks because they were made in Syria, "a former client of the Soviet Union."

Traditionally, former secretaries of state do not openly evaluate or criticize the actions of their successors.

Baker was in Houston today to attend the funeral of his mother, Bonner Means Baker, who died Friday at 96. He is expected to report to Bush on his Mideast talks when he returns to Washington.

private vendor.

When the Federal Maritime Commission decided to develop a computerized filing system for ocean tariffs, he said, Congress headed a request from the Information Industry Association and "severely limited" private citizens' access to the system.

The tariff information was offered for sale to shippers by a private vendor, Transax-Rates, a subsidiary of Knight-Ridder Inc. The congressional provision made it possible for that company to remain the chief source of the information, Love said.

Even the Maritime Commission and the U.S. Navy found it more convenient to use the information in on-line computer format than to deal with it on paper. They became customers of Transax-Rates.

"One of the great unexamined issues in the debate over public access to government databases is the extent to which the federal government is forced to buy its own information from commercial vendors," Love said.

The congressional committee heard from only one witness representing business: Jeanne M. Isacco, director of U.S. government publications for Readex Microprint Corp., a division of NewsBank Inc., which offers government information in computer formats to libraries.

"Since no one, including the government can cope with the vast amount of information produced by the federal government," she said, the answer is to allow both government and business to make it available.

Herald announces its new auto section

The first edition of the Big Spring Herald's new automotive section, Wheels of Crossroads County, will be published this week.

More than 20,000 copies of the edition will be produced each week for Wednesday distribution in the Crossroads Country Advertiser and in the Thursday Big Spring Herald for complete coverage of this region. At least 2,000 copies will be delivered to area automobile dealers and key locations in the area for additional free distribution.

The weekly package is designed to provide readers with information on new automotive efforts and industry news, as well as a focus for local dealers to make staff and marketing announcements.

"There is a trend in the newspaper industry to do all we can to serve each and every one of our markets the best we can — and we believe Wheels of Crossroads County will do exactly that for the automotive market seller and buyer of this area," said Publisher Robert Wernsman.

He said the Herald plans to accept all types of local automotive news and information that will serve the market of automotive dealers throughout the Crossroads Country area.

For more information on this section, contact the Big Spring Herald, 915-263-7331.

WICHITA, Kan. — U.S. Air Force Sgt. Kim Lombardi carries an armload of bowling pins Sunday as she helps clean up at the bowling alley on McConnell Air Force Base near Wichita. A tornado struck the area Friday evening, killing at least 14 people and injuring more than 200.

Cinco de Mayo

"It means that people other than the Hispanic community see this as a very vital and integral part of (Big Spring)," she said.

DeAnda, also president of the local League of United Latin American Citizens, said she will operate a booth at the Amigos del Barrio event.

Amigos is already planning a Diez y Seis celebration to take place downtown this year. DeAnda said she was not sure yet if LULAC would join it.

"Going downtown will make this for everybody in Big Spring," Marquez said. "The whole city can be part of it."

Other plans for Cinco de Mayo celebrations include a picnic and festival Friday at College Heights Elementary, where DeAnda is a teacher.

Marquez said observing holidays is vital to preservation of Hispanic culture, and children are an important resource.

"Children should be aware of where they came from," he said. "If you grow up with this in your culture, you don't let it die."

Henderson ties record

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Sitting in the Oakland Athletics' dugout, having already tied Lou Brock's record for career stolen bases, Rickey Henderson's thoughts drifted to his next victim.

Tonight, the A's are off ... Tuesday night? Hmm, the New York Yankees come in ... The New York Yankees.

Henderson called this kind of scheduling the stuff his dreams have been made of.

"I thought about that after (manager) Tony (La Russa) took me out of the game," Henderson said Sunday after tying Brock's record with his 938th career steal in Oakland's 7-3 victory over the California Angels. "The thought of getting the steal against New York is a dream to me."

Henderson played for the Yankees from 1985-89. The Yankees are the only team besides the A's for whom he has played during his 11½ seasons in the majors. Henderson is the career stolen-base leader for both teams.

"I think deep down in my heart, (owner) George (Steinbrenner) deserves something, so it will be nice to steal the base against his team," Henderson said with a smile.

Playing Sunday in his second game after missing 14 with a strained muscle in his left calf, Henderson went 2-for-3 with singles in the first and third innings. He was hit in the back by a pitch from Jeff Robinson in the sixth.

"I was a little frustrated because I got hit," Henderson said. "Tony wanted to take me out of the ballgame and have Willie Wilson run."

"But I thought that was the time I should at least try for the record. There was a right-handed pitcher in there. I read right-handers better than left-handers. Besides, I got hit and I felt it's payback time when I get to first."

Henderson broke for second on a 1-2 pitch and was safe with his trademark head-first slide, beating catcher Lance Parrish's high throw.

The record-tying steal came after Parrish called for a forkball.

"It was down, but I thought I got off a good, accurate throw," Parrish said. "... I was anticipating him going on every pitch, but I wasn't going to alter the way I called the game."

After the record-tying steal,

Henderson picked the base up and held it over his head in triumph.

After the base was removed, Henderson repeatedly thrust his fists and waved to the crowd, which responded with a standing ovation.

"That was a spur-of-the-moment thing," Henderson said. "The thrill, the happiness inside me. The way the crowd reacted was a joy."

Becker upset in final

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Spain's Sergi Bruguera upset Boris Becker 5-7, 4-6, 7-6 (7-4) today in the rain-delayed final of the $1 million Monte Carlo Open tennis tournament.

In a match that had brilliant displays of tactical tennis, the ninth-seeded Bruguera won in 4 hours, 5 minutes and earned $125,000. Becker, the No. 2 seed, got $65,800.

Bruguera, playing in his third consecutive clay court final, has won 16 of his last 17 matches. He won a tournament at Estoril, Portugal, and lost in a final at Barcelona, where he beat Becker 6-2, 6-4, in the third round.

Becker has won many tournaments on fast surfaces, including three Wimbledon and the U.S. and Australian Opens. But only three of his 45 finals have been on clay.

The match resumed under bright sunshine. Becker could not hold his first service as Bruguera took three straight points, tying the score 5-5. But Becker broke Bruguera again and went on to win the set.

Becker returned to the drop shot backhand that was so successful in eliminating defending champion Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union in the quarterfinals. He would draw his opponent to the net, then pass him or force errors.

But Bruguera started getting to them, delivering winners of his own.

Second round draft choice of Bears has prayers answered

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Chris Zorich grew up in a fatherless household, but the Notre Dame defensive tackle thinks it was a bit of mass-and-pop conspiracy in heaven that put him into a Chicago Bears uniform.

"Mom" was Zorich's irrepressible mother, Zora, who died earlier this year at age 98, while "Pop" was George "Papa Bear" Halas.

Zorich says on National Football League draft day, he prayed that the two would pull a few celestial strings to make sure the Bears picked him.

"She's the one who hooked up with Papa Bear and cooked this up," Zorich said, holding up his new jersey, No. 97. He wore "50" at Notre Dame, the number worn on the Bears by perennial All-Pro Mike Singletary.

"I'm very happy and I'm sure she's very happy for me. I just wish my mom had a chance to see this. I don't think there was a day in the 21 years she raised me that I didn't tell her that I loved her."

Zorich, an only child raised on a welfare check by a single parent, knew that his mother would rise to any occasion. She rode around their tough South Side neighborhood on a bicycle, and was at least bit shy about promoting her son's athletic career.

At a high school sports banquet several years ago, Zorich's mother spotted Bears coach Mike Ditka.

"She walked up to say 'Hello, I'm Chris Zorich's mother,'" Ditka recalled this week. "I said, 'My God, you're embarrassing me.' But

Reds hurler loses cool

CINCINNATI (AP) — Another disappointing outing, another angry outburst for Cincinnati Reds reliever Rob Dibble.

Dibble threw a baseball into the Riverfront Stadium seats after he got the final out Sunday in a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs. The ball reportedly struck a fan.

Dibble had a rough outing, giving up five hits and two runs in the last two innings as he earned his fourth save. He got Ryne Sandberg on a called third strike to end the game, then got the ball back from catcher Joe Oliver.

In the middle of receiving congratulations from teammates just behind the mound, Dibble turned and heaved the ball into the stands in center field.

A Reds employee who spoke on condition of anonymity said the ball reportedly hit a woman in the arm, but she wasn't seriously injured. Nobody was brought to the stadium first aid room for treatment.

When told of the report that the ball hit a fan, Dibble said, "I hope not."

He refused to discuss the incident any further.

Dibble faces a three-day suspension and $1,000 fine from NL President Bill White for throwing a fastball behind Houston's Eric Yelding in a game April 11. The fastball came on the first pitch after Dibble gave up pitcher Curt Schilling's first major-league hit, an RBI single.

The pitch touched off a brawl and resulted in harsh words that brought White to Houston last week when the teams resumed their season series. Yelding has served his one-day suspension for charging the mound and throwing his batting helmet at Dibble.

Dibble has appealed his suspension.

Brooks wins Greensboro in sudden death playoff

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — There were several reasons for Mark Brooks to celebrate winning the Greater Greensboro Open, but he didn't have time.

"It'll have to be on the airplane," Brooks said after his par putt on the third extra hole beat Gene Sauers for the $225,000 first prize in the $1.25 million tournament. "Usually, you're tired and happy to sit down finally."

Brooks became a millionaire with the victory and picked up his second playoff victory in a career which began in 1984. He fired a final-round 8-under-par 64 built on 10 birdies and two bogeys.

It wasn't party time then, either, because the competition was both closing ground and falling out of contention after Brooks had finished.

"I watched a little bit, called my wife, changed my flight, drank a couple of glasses of water and then went and putted and hit some balls when I realized we had a good chance of making the playoff," he said.

Brooks had a string of six birdies over the front and back side, and two more in the last four holes. But there was no resting on a day in which rain was forecast but sunny skies and warm temperatures prevailed.

The swing of emotions and shots began at the turn. After nine holes, third-round co-leader Bob Wolcott was at 14-under-par, with Sauers, Jeff Sluman and Duffy

PGA

Waldorf one shot back. Within five holes, Sauers and Wolcott had tied for the lead at 13-under. Waldorf had run into trouble and fallen back to 10-under. He eventually dropped out of the running.

Sauers fell to 13-under because he failed to take advantage of a birdie opportunity at the 13th hole. From 3 feet, Sauers three-putted for a bogey that dropped him back into a tie with Wolcott.

Wolcott played himself out of the playoff at the par-3, 17th hole when his tee shot went to the right of the cart path beside the green. He settled for bogey.

Sauers couldn't get the lost stroke back and the two went back to the 17th hole to begin their playoff.

After both men parred the first two playoff holes, they returned to the par 17th hole. Brooks hit his tee shot in the left bunker, while Sauers found the right sand trap for the second time on the 200-yard hole.

Sauers blasted out, but his shot rolled 20 feet beyond the pin. Brooks wedged within 3 feet and his putt ended the tournament.

Brooks raised his playoff mark to 2-1. He lost to Tom Purtzer in 1988 in the Southwest. In two of two playoffs he was involved in that season. For Sauers, it was his first playoff loss after beating Blaine McAllister in the 1986 Bank of Boston Classic.

Soccer star out on bond

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Soccer star Diego Maradona is out of jail on $20,000 bond, awaiting trial on charges of possession and distribution of drugs.

Federal Prosecutor Roberto Amayo said Sunday outside the Federal Court Building that Maradona, arrested Friday with two companions, was accused of "distributing drugs free of charge and drug possession."

Maradona, whose goal gave Argentina the World Cup in 1986, is forbidden from leaving the country pending trial.

A trial date was not announced. Under Argentine law, criminal trials usually are held in private, with the accused and witnesses testifying before a presiding judge who determines guilt or innocence.

Blazers go up two games on Sonics

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Danny Ainge finally was able to do what the Portland Trail Blazers signed him to do — light up the scoreboard in the playoffs.

Ainge, 3-for-10 in the first seven quarters of the postseason, scored 16 of his 18 points, including three 3-pointers, in the fourth quarter as the Trail Blazers defeated the Seattle SuperSonics 115-106 for a 2-0 lead in their best-of-5 playoff series.

The Blazers, 6-0 against the SuperSonics this season, led only 81-79 on a 15-footer with 10:55 left by Eddie Johnson, who scored 28 points.

Ainge then sank two 3-pointers and scored eight points during a 13-2 run that gave the Blazers a 95-81 lead with 7:52 to play.

"I wasn't concerned about Danny," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "I had a feeling he was going to snap out of it."

Adelman said Ainge's first 3-pointer seemed to relax him.

"He seemed to loosen up after that," Adelman said. "Before that he was rushing things, trying to do too much."

Ainge, who plays behind starters Clyde Drexler and Terry Porter, said he needed playing time to get himself started.

"I think that was the difference," he said after playing the entire final period. "I just really got a chance to get my rhythm going."

Elsewhere on Sunday, the Chicago Bulls extended their series lead to 2-0 by overtaking the New York Knicks 89-79; the Indiana Pacers pulled even with Boston by winning at Boston Garden 130-118; and two-time defending champion Detroit evened its series with Atlanta, beating the Hawks 101-88.

The playoffs resume Tuesday night with the Los Angeles Lakers at Houston, Detroit at Atlanta, Chicago at New York, Milwaukee at Philadelphia, Portland at Seattle and Phoenix at Utah.

On Wednesday night, Boston is at Indiana and San Antonio at Golden State.

In addition to top seeds Portland and Chicago, the Lakers and Philadelphia are leading 2-0. The other series are 1-1.

Portland, which had the NBA's best regular-season record at 63-19 and has won 18 of 19 games, boosted its lead to 19 on Ainge's final 3-pointer with 4:50 to play. The final 9-point margin was the closest Seattle got the rest of the game.

Drexler, who scored a playoff

CHICAGO — Chicago's Michael Jordan races past New York's Gerald Wilkins (21) as he goes to the hoop during the second half of Sunday's NBA playoff game. Jordan scored 26 points as the Bulls beat the Knicks 89-79 to go up 2-0 in the best-of-five series.

career-high 39 points in Portland's 110-102 victory in the series opener Friday, led seven Blazers in double figures with 22 in Game 2.

"We played very well for 2½ quarters and then there was a spot in the fourth period when we were down by four and had the ball and turned it over," Seattle coach K.C. Jones said. "It was a self-inflicted wound. That seemed to open things up for Portland."

Pistons 101, Hawks 98
 Detroit, in a must-win situation at home, pulled even with Atlanta behind Joe Dumars' 28 points and stifling defense.

The Pistons, who shot only 38.5 percent in a 103-98 loss in Game 1 on Friday night, shot 47 percent in the second game while holding the Hawks to 36 percent. Dennis Rodman grabbed 16 rebounds for Detroit, and set a team playoff record with six offensive rebounds in the first quarter.

Detroit never trailed after the midway point of the first quarter and opened a 19-point margin in the fourth period.

Dominique Wilkins, who scored 32 points in the Game 1 upset, was held to 20 on 5-for-14 shooting in Game 2.

"Rodman always does a great job on Dominique," Hawks coach Bob Weiss said. "But like any other defensive scheme, or offensive scheme, it takes more than one player."

Pacers 130, Celtics 118
 Chuck Person set an NBA playoff record with seven 3-pointers and scored 39 points as Indiana won its second postseason game since 1976 and for the sixth time 38 visits to Boston Garden.

Larry Bird got off a hospital bed where he was resting his ailing back and had 18 points and 10 assists for the Celtics, but he couldn't handle Person, who broke the playoff record of six 3-pointers by Michael Cooper and Vernon Maxwell.

The Celtics led 51-45 before Person scored 11 points in a 3-minute span, including three 3-pointers, as the Pacers took a 64-61 lead. He also helped the Pacers come back after Boston regained the lead in the third quarter.

"Chuck had a great game," said Bird, who played 40 minutes despite his aching back. "Time after time we started to make a run and Chuck would hit a big shot, and that really demoralized us."

Person was 16-for-24 from the field, including 7-for-9 from 3-point range.

Michael Williams had 24 points and 10 assists for Indiana. Brian Shaw and Reggie Lewis scored 22 points apiece for Boston.

Triple play highlights Phils win

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

An unassisted triple play is so rare that only eight players have done it in major league history. Randy Ready needed only to stick out his glove to become No. 9. He didn't.

The Philadelphia Phillies pulled off the first triple play in the 20-year history of Veterans Stadium in Sunday's 9-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Jason Grimsley opened the game by walking Paul Faries and Tony Fernandez. With the runners going, Tony Gwynn lined to Ready at second. He stepped on second base for the second out and Fernandez was crossing right in front of him, only a foot or two away. But Ready threw to first for the third out.

Morris became the 89th pitcher to get 200 career victories as the Minnesota Twins beat the Seattle Mariners 8-2. He did it despite pitching on three days' rest and with the flu, which pushed his temperature to 100 degrees.

"I knew I'd try, unless I went out to the bullpen and fell off the mound," Morris said. "I appreciate T.K. (manager Tom Kelly) giving me the ball, because I'm sure he had some doubts. I gave it all I had, and the guys came through again for me."

Morris, the winningest pitcher in the 1980s with Detroit, struggled for six innings. He gave up two runs on seven hits with two wild pitches and a hit batter.

Minnesota won at home and extended its winning streak to five. Seattle lost its fifth in a row.

Astros 2, Braves 0
 Casey Candaele hit a two-run double in the seventh inning and also tripled at the Astrodome as Houston won for only the third time in nine games. The Astros have scored just 11 runs in that stretch.

Pirates 7, Mets 3
 Barry Bonds stole home and drove in three runs with two singles as visiting Pittsburgh knocked out Ron Darling (2-1) with seven runs and seven hits in 1-1-3 innings.

John Smiley (4-0), who pitched a one-hitter against the Mets on April 17, allowed three runs and six hits in five-plus innings as he increased his career record against New York to 9-3. Bill Landrum pitched three innings and Neal Heaton finished the seven-hitter.

Blue Jays 9, Tigers 6
 Devon White's bases-loaded single stopped the Detroit bullpen's shutout streak at 36 2-3 innings as Toronto won at home.

White hit a two-run single that keyed a five-run rally in the sixth inning that made it 8-4. Glenallen Hill homered and had a career-high four hits for the Blue Jays. Cecil Fielder and Alan Trammell homered for the Tigers. Fielder hit his third home run of the season and almost joined Jose Canseco as the only players to reach the upper deck in the SkyDome. Trammell connected for the first time since his first at-bat of the year.

Rookie reliever Mike Timlin (3-0) was the winner and Duane Ward got his fifth save. Reliever Al Leiter (0-1) was the loser.

White Sox 4, Yankees 1
 Frank Thomas homered, drove in two runs and scored twice as Chicago beat New York at Comiskey Park.

Jack McDowell (4-1) gave up one run on five hits in 7 2-3 innings and Bobby Thigpen worked the ninth for his sixth save.

Thomas drew a leadoff walk from Chuck Cary (1-2) in the second and scored on Cory Snyder's double. Thomas hit his third home run in the fourth and added an RBI single in the seventh.

Thomas is batting .412 with three homers and nine RBIs in nine games.

Earnhardt nabs 50th career win

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt got the 50th victory of his NASCAR career by going back to square one when he got the chance.

Earnhardt, who turned 39 today — if you believe him, or 40 if you believe his mother — was fighting Davey Allison, Kyle Petty and a bad-handling car late in Sunday's Hanes 500.

"Early in the race, the car was running pretty good," Earnhardt explained. "In the middle of the race, we made (chassis) adjustments on two straight stops that were just the wrong way entirely and the car just got worse and worse."

The 500-lap race was fast approaching its conclusion on Martinsville Speedway's .526-mile oval, with Allison leading, Petty second and Earnhardt fading all the way back to fifth.

Then, on lap 455, Allison slowed, his right front tire in shreds, and Petty zoomed by to take the lead.

As Allison drove to the backstretch pits, he dived from the top of the track toward the pit entrance and was hit by Alan Kulwicki, bringing out the 11th and final caution flag — just the break Earnhardt needed.

"I really needed the caution," the four-time and defending Winston Cup champion said. "If we hadn't got it, it still would have been a question of who would have gone all the way on gas, and we weren't going to stop."

"But when we got that caution, we took out all those changes we had made in those other stops and went back to where we started and the car was great the rest of the way."

Earnhardt, pitting on the front straight, got back onto the track first after his stop, but Petty, pitting on the back straight, got back out just ahead of Earnhardt to hold the lead.

It took Earnhardt just two laps of green-flag racing to go to the front for good on lap 464, passing Petty easily and pulling away. Earnhardt, driving a Chevrolet, beat Petty by 3.4 seconds.

"(Earnhardt) was just a whole lot better than I was with new tires," said Petty, who drove a Pontiac. "Our tires would come in good after 20 or 30 laps."

Earnhardt's victory tied him for seventh on the all-time list with Hall of Famers Ned Jarrett and Junior Johnson.

"Those guys raced my dad and I can pick at them now," Earnhardt joked. "Really, though, it feels good, a real feather in your hat."

"These are people I've been looking up to and admiring for a long time, and they've meant so much to the sport. It means a lot."

The victory, his second this season, also made Earnhardt the first repeat winner in eight races this year. The seven different winners in as many races tied the NASCAR record set in 1963.

Earnhardt earned $63,600, but more important moved closer to series points leader Ricky Rudd, who finished 11th. Earnhardt, who fell out of the lead early in the season and dropped as many as 119 points behind, cut the margin to 42, 1,233-1,191.

"We had a couple of bad races at Darlington and Bristol and got behind on the points, but now we've come back these last couple of races and got right back in it," said Earnhardt, second a week ago at North Wilkesboro. "It's real early, though."

Darrell Waltrip, the North Wilkesboro winner, was third Sunday, followed by Brett Bodine and a lap down, Harry Gant. Allison, who also had brake problems, wound up eighth.

There were several spins and crashes, but none serious and no injuries were reported.

Dallas topples Eastern bloc?

NEW YORK (AP) — Hanging up his 10-gallon hat after 13 years of "Dallas," Larry Hagman insists the weekly tales of the rich and famous did more than make viewers ask, "Who shot J.R.?"

Hagman, who starred as the ruthless Texas oilman J.R. Ewing, believes the show might actually have helped topple the Eastern bloc.

"I think the opulence, the consumerism, the food, the cars — these things made (people) want more than their governments provided them," Hagman said in the May 6 issue of People magazine.

Houston sues badmouth

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Whitney Houston and brother Michael are suing two men over a fracas at a Lexington hotel, the singer's publicists say.

The New York publicity firm of Solters, Roskin, Friedman Inc. said the lawsuit, which seeks unspecified damages, was filed Friday in federal court in Ms. Houston's home state of New Jersey.

The Houstons maintain they were the victims of an unprovoked attack by Kevin Owens and Ransom Brotherton and that the men had made racial slurs against the singer.

The legal action stems from an April 19 fracas in the hotel where Ms. Houston was staying.

The singer and her brother were charged with assault, and Ms. Houston also was charged with terroristic threatening. Brotherton claimed Ms. Houston punched him in the eye and threatened to have him killed.

Violent crimes increase in '90

WASHINGTON (AP) — Violent crimes increased at a 10 percent pace across the nation last year.

Houston was far above the national average in the increase of murders. There were 568 in 1990, up 24 percent from the 459 reported in 1989.

There were about 23,600 murders — nearly 65 a day — and 103,000 rapes reported in the year, preliminary figures for the FBI's annual uniform crime reports show. Seven cities, led by New York, recorded more than one-fourth of all murders.

The Bush administration and Democrats, each with their own crime bill before Congress, said the findings released Sunday demonstrated a need for legislative action.

"A citizen of this country is today more likely to be the victim of a violent crime than of an automobile accident," said Attorney General Dick Thornburgh. "Never before has the need for the president's tough crime bill been so pressing and the consequences of its absence been so dramatic."

The crime figures "show that America set new records for murder and rape last year," said Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, who has proposed a Democratic alternative to the Bush bill.

"We must take steps to reduce the violent crime that is destroying our cities and towns," Biden said. "The president and Congress must pass tough measures to fight crime, ban killer assault guns and combat the epidemic of violence against women before the death toll grows even higher."

Only Detroit among the seven leading cities had fewer murders last year than in 1989. The number was 582, down from 624.

Many criminologists don't consider the annual report a reliable indicator of crime trends because it covers only crimes reported to

U.N. sending convoys to Iraq

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) — The United Nations on Tuesday will take its first step toward assuming control of the camps for Kurdish refugees being built by Western forces in northern Iraq, officials said.

In a statement today, the United Nations said it would send a humanitarian convoy from Turkey into Iraq on Tuesday morning "to establish a regular presence in northern Iraq." And a U.N. humanitarian center will be established just outside the tent camp built by Western military forces, officials said.

"This is to establish their presence and start the process of assuming control," said Col. Don Kirchoffner, a spokesman for U.S. forces aiding the Kurdish refugees.

A second U.N. convoy bringing personnel and equipment from Baghdad to Zakho is scheduled to arrive at the northern city late Tuesday or Wednesday, according to the U.N. statement, which was given to The Associated Press by U.S. officials at the Incirlik air base in Turkey.

The statement said the world body was acting in accordance with an agreement signed with Saddam Hussein's government in Baghdad on April 18.

Lt. Gen. John M. Shalikashvili, the commander of the multinational military forces participating in the Kurdish aid effort, learned details of the U.N. plan on Sunday, said Kirchoffner.

The U.S. commander held an unscheduled meeting with a special U.N. envoy for humanitarian action, Staffan De Mistura, whom he encountered at the Zakho camp, said Kirchoffner said by telephone from the Incirlik base.

SAFWAN, Iraq — Iraqi refugees board a U.S. transport plane Monday prior to their departure to Saudi Arabia. About 650 refugees left for the new camp after they were given the choice of going to Saudi Arabia or back home to Iraq.

The allied forces are seeking to relocate hundreds of thousands of the Kurdish refugees who fled to the Turkish and Iranian borders as Saddam's military crushed a short-lived Kurdish rebellion.

On Sunday, U.S. officers announced the allied forces had more than doubled the size of their security zone for the Kurdish refugees and were scouting a site for a second settlement.

The European Community, meanwhile, has endorsed a British plan to have U.N. forces protect refugees in the zone once U.N. administrators take over the camps from the U.S., Dutch, British and French troops establishing them.

The European Community also announced today it had granted $4.7 million to support French and Dutch projects to help Kurdish refugees in northern Iraq.

Still, yet another obstacle to the repatriation of the Kurds arose. Refugees and others said Kurdish rebels were stopping refugees

In southern Iraq on Sunday, other refugees who also fled civil turmoil after Iraq's defeat in the Persian Gulf War were flown to a refugee camp in Saudi Arabia.

Ex POW discusses captivity

EL PASO (AP) — The postwar pace has been hectic since Melissa Rathbun-Nealey came home.

Sandwiched between a crush of requests for interviews, book and movie offers and requests to make appearances, she also got married.

But the first female prisoner of war since World War II says she's mainly trying to live her life as normally as she can.

"I'm trying to get my life back to normal, so I'm trying to tame it," she said. "I'm glad to be home and living my life as happily as I am."

One of the things she's done since her ordeal ended is marry Michael Coleman, a specialist in her Fort Bliss unit, on March 28 and change her name.

Since her return, Mrs. Coleman has received dozens of book, television and movie offers. She said she might consider one book and one movie offer, but she's rejecting most other requests.

In an interview that appeared in the El Paso Times Sunday, Mrs. Coleman, 20, said her Iraqi captors treated her humanely.

Action causes wool prices to plummet

WASHINGTON (AP) — A massive overhaul of Australia's sheep industry and plummeting prices are being felt by wool producers from South Africa to Uruguay, from New Zealand to Texas and Montana.

Agriculture Department economist Nancy Morgan says the changes were triggered Feb. 11, when Australia suspended its "reserve price scheme" for wool.

The RPS, as it is known, served as a world floor price for wool, since Australia produced 60 percent of the total. Morgan explains the situation in the May issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine.

Between 1985 and 1989, she said, the minimum reserve price of wool virtually doubled, leading to "an imbalance in world markets, a massive accumulation of Australian wool stocks and a 13 percent increase in sheep inventories."

Australia's action will affect major world wool markets, Morgan said. Exports from the other big producers — New Zealand, Argentina, South Africa and Uruguay — will remain high in 1991, but returns to producers will be reduced substantially as prices decline.

The Australian Wool Corp., which administered the wool price guarantees for 17 years, responded to plummeting wool prices by introducing a flock reduction program. It calls for the nation's sheep inventory to be reduced by 20 million head, or about 12 percent, in 12 months.

Morgan said the subsidies for disposing of the surplus sheep are financed by compulsory taxes on producers. The payments for reducing flocks were set at $1.80 per head in Australian currency, which has a current exchange rate

Q. Was Humphrey Bogart the first choice for the leading role in Casablanca?
A. No. Ronald Reagan passed on the male lead, then the part was offered to Bogart. Also, Ingrid Bergman got the part of the female leading role only after Ann Sheridan passed on the opportunity, according to USA Weekend.

 them on a desert road. That's when they and another vehicle missed a turn that would have led to their unit. When Lockett drove their truck into what appeared to be a deserted city, they saw a group of about 20 Iraqi soldiers. They tried to escape, but the soldiers began shooting, spraying shrapnel into Lockett's midsection and Mrs. Coleman's right forearm. The two were captured after getting out of their truck, she said. "I was in a hysterical state, heaving like I was crying, but there were no tears," she said. They had stumbled upon the occupied coastal Saudi city of Khafji, near the border with Kuwait. The two were taken through Kuwait to Basra, Iraq, and then to Baghdad, where they were held until their release when Iraq was defeated.

Tornado claims 14 in Kansas Wool

ANDOVER, Kan. (AP) — Townspeople collected clothes and opened their hearts to victims of a tornado that killed 14 people. Survivors sang, "We'll understand it by and by" at a memorial service. "Friends, we're not defeated, the Rev. Steve Weldon told worshippers. "We are not without hope. We have not lost the battle."

The Andover Methodist Church was crammed with clothing donated to the 1,500 residents who were left homeless by the twister that flattened a trailer park and destroyed 88 houses, a mobile home park and 11 businesses on Friday night.

In a big meeting room, workers sorted 3,000 pounds of clothing donated by people, churches and businesses. Andover Primary School's gymnasium was filled with rows of donated food.

"I bet some stores aren't stocked this well," Red Cross volunteer Marvin Keeler said.

Fourteen residents of the town's 40-acre Golden Spur Mobile Home Park were killed when a tornado destroyed 226 trailers and heavily damaged 15.

Three Wichita residents were killed during Friday night storms and three other fatalities were reported in outlying Kansas counties. Three people were killed just over the state line in Oklahoma, for a total of 23 dead.

Andover's lone siren did not sound to warn residents of the tornado.

But Mayor Jack Finlason said that it didn't matter because patrol cars and fire engines were sent into the streets with lights flashing and sirens wailing, as they have for the past 40 years. He said residents had 20 to 30 minutes' warning.

During the memorial, worshippers sang the hymn "We'll Understand It Better By and By." Another hymn told of God being a "shelter from the stormy blast."

Fewer than 100 people attended, probably because victims wanted to use the remaining daylight to look for belongings in the rubble, organizers said. In Washington on Sunday, President Bush urged Americans to pray for the victims. He promised to "do whatever we can to help."

The wholly homeless continued to find lost treasures under the mobile home frames, which were twisted like giant steel pretzels.

"We just found our cat. She's alive," said Renee Berggren. "She had been bulldozed under."

"There's the quilt I made! I just don't believe it!" Kathy Schultz shouted to a friend, pulling the colorful item from the debris.

Bud and Alta Kafton found some family photographs and a century-old shotgun that was Kafton's grandfather's. But that didn't ease the heartache.

"You know, 54 years of marriage and you collect a lot of things. To lose it all, well, it's pretty hard," Mrs. Kafton said.

National Guardsmen patrolled and a curfew remained in effect to prevent looting. No looting was reported in Andover.

Town tries to help Willie Nelson

LIMA, Ohio (AP) — The city's "Chili for Willie" benefit for Willie Nelson may not have helped him pay his debt to the Internal Revenue Service but it gave the city a chance to show its appreciation of the country singer.

When this city of 46,000 was going through tough financial times in 1982, the country singer came to cheer people up. Now that Nelson is trying to pay the federal government, residents wanted to return the favor.

The "Chili for Willie" festival Saturday, which included live country music, a chili cook-off and armadillo races, raised more in good feelings than money.

"We'll probably break even," said Martie MacDonnell, one of the prime movers for the festival, which was sponsored by the local Jaycees.

"But really, this is more of an appreciation thing than it is to raise money," Nelson could not attend the festival because he was playing a concert in Port Arthur.

The relationship between Nelson and this northwestern Ohio town began in 1982 after a story in The Wall Street Journal contrasted Lima to San Angelo.

"Lima was in the middle of the recession and San Angelo was booming," said Marilyn Collmer, director of the Lima Convention Bureau.

 police agencies. A more accurate barometer, these experts say, is the Justice Department's annual survey of crime victims, which shows the level of violent crime has been fairly stable in the last decade.

New York City had 2,245 murders in 1990, more than six a day and up from 1,905 the year before.

"It is distressing," said Deputy Chief Michael Markman in the New York Police Department's Office of Management Analysis and Planning. "It's the availability of drugs and the availability of handguns."

"In 1960, you had the Saturday Night Special, a .25 gun," he said. "It fired a .22-caliber, if it fired at all. It bounced off your jacket half the time. It would fire one round and that was the end of it."

"Now we have 9 millimeters. They carry maybe 16 rounds, 18 rounds, they work all the time, they're more powerful, you don't have to be a good shot when you fire 16 rounds."

Other leading murder cities were Los Angeles with 983 slayings, up 12 percent from 877; Chicago 850, up 15 percent from 742; Houston 568, up 24 percent from 459; Philadelphia 503, up 5.9 percent from 475; and Washington, D.C. 472, up 8.8 percent from 434.

The FBI expressed the national picture only in percentages. Applying those percentages to last year's figures, these would be the numbers nationally in a few categories:

Violent crime, up 10 percent to about 1,810,000; murder, up 10 percent to 23,600; Rape, up 9 percent to 103,000; robbery, up 11 percent to 642,000 and aggravated assault, up 10 percent to 1,050,000.

In non-violent crimes, burglary was down 4 percent to 3,040,000; larceny theft, unchanged at 7,872,000; motor vehicle theft, up 5 percent to 1,620,000.

"The growth in violent crimes is larger than I would have thought," said Alfred Blumstein, dean of the School of Urban and Public Affairs at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

He said he also was surprised that robberies rose while burglaries declined.

"Robbery and burglary tend to go together," Blumstein said. People on drugs are more likely to be robbers than burglars, he said, because a drug-dependent person would want money quickly to buy drugs.

Cities in the 500,000 to 1 million population range experienced large increases in the violent categories. Murder was up 19 percent, rape 11 percent, robbery 18 percent and aggravated assault 14 percent. Geographically, the South had slightly larger increases in violent crimes than did the Midwest, West and Northeast.

All of the 1990 figures released Sunday were based on preliminary data, with the final figures to be released this summer.

Meanwhile Sunday, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., announced that former Presidents Carter and Ford have endorsed legislation requiring a seven-day waiting period for the purchase of handguns.

With previous endorsements by Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan, that means all of the nation's living former presidents back the measure, Schumer said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press." His office released copies of nearly identical letters from Ford and Carter.

Bush has said he might temper his opposition to the measure if Congress adopts his own crime bill.

 of about $1.29 for each U.S. dollar.

To date, Morgan said, more than 840,000 of the 2.8 million sheep registered under the program have been certified as killed.

Meanwhile, mutton prices dropped from 28 cents per kilogram in Australian money in 1989-90 to six cents Australian for a kilo — 2.2 pounds — in 1990-91. At those prices, Morgan said, producers "are unwilling to incur the transportation charges" to move sheep to processing plants.

"Consequently, 80 percent of the registered sheep slaughtered so far have been disposed of in on-farm or community pits," she said. "In the short term, meat processors and exporters are having difficulty obtaining the sheep they need to remain viable."

The tumble in wool prices has sent other countries scurrying to help take up the slack and trim expenses. Because the United States is not a major player in the world wool market, sheep and wool producers are protected somewhat by annual government "incentive" payments when market prices are down.

In an optimistic note, Morgan said the lower prices "are likely to entice China and the Soviet Union, two major wool buyers, to step up purchases in coming months."

If that happens, she said, "the forthcoming season could see markets healthier than anyone believed possible" when the Australian floor price was operative and inventories were record large.

Even so, she added, wool prices will remain depressed until Australia disposes of its surpluses, which could take five years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — California was the top farm export state in 1990 for the sixth consecutive year, according to Agriculture Department trade analysts.

The annual ratings by the department's Economic Research Service were for the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30 when export values totaled about $40.2 billion, up from $39.6 billion in 1989.

In all, the report showed, the top 10 states accounted for about 59 percent of the 1989-90 export value total.

California, with estimated exports of more than $4.2 billion, has many high-value crops such as fruits, nuts, vegetables and seeds, as well as cotton, rice, wheat and other bulk commodities.

Export values of wheat and some other crops have suffered because of lower prices, meaning that states producing them would tend to lose export value.

The annual ranking are not meant to be absolute, since USDA does not monitor state origins as products move into export channels. Mostly, the estimates are based on an assumption that each state's contribution to exports is equal to its share of production and marketing.

According to the report, last year's top 10 export states, in order, in millions of dollars, and their percentage increase or decrease from 1989, included:

1. California, 4,241; 19 percent.
2. Iowa, 3,194; 7.
3. Illinois, 3,168; 20.
4. Nebraska, 2,571; -14.
5. Texas, 2,506; -5.
6. Kansas, 2,202; -23.
7. Minnesota, 2,001; 13.
8. Indiana, 1,556; 9.
9. Washington, 1,142; -8.
10. Missouri, 1,088; -11.

"My heat pump's so efficient it saves money. And it's a clean system. I like what it means for the environment." — Elta Chandler, Park Board Member Elta Chandler cools and heats her home with a heat pump because it saves money and energy. And since it's electric, it's "wonderfully clean."

A heat pump uses the energy in the air to keep her home comfortable all year. Even on cold winter days there's heat in the air. A heat pump captures that heat and uses it.

And it costs less to operate than a gas furnace. It's so efficient that for each unit of energy it uses, it creates two to three units of heat.

In the summer a heat pump becomes a high-efficiency air conditioner, capturing the heat inside the home and removing it.

For more information, call a heat pump dealer or TU Electric. It's your chance to save more money.
