Residents warned to trim water usage

Big Spring residents should conserve water Tuesday so that city workers can complete some construction on the main water line, Assistant City Manager Tom Decell said today.

He reminded local residents that using amounts of water normally required for bathing or cooking is fine, but washing cars or watering yards should be avoided all day.

Construction on the water line, due to begin at 2 a.m., will probably continue until about noon, Decell said. Normal water amounts will be available Wednesday, he said.

Warning sirens tested Wednesday

The city of Big Spring will test its emergency warning sirens at noon Wednesday.

Sirens are used to warn of tornado sightings in the area as part of the city's Emergency Management System Program. If there is inclement weather or excessive cloudiness Wednesday, the testing date will be changed to Friday, officials said.

DPS starts checks of trucks Tuesday

The Texas Department of Public Safety will begin Operation Roadcheck at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday.

A 72-hour effort to inspect 18-wheelers and other large trucks traveling on state highways, the program will be conducted locally at the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark. About 50 DPS troopers and 12 Department of Transportation personnel will assist, according to DPS Lt. Jimmie Rhoads.

The information says Roadcheck will be an attempt to discover unsafe commercial vehicles and drivers operating on public roads. Last year, more than 12,000 vehicles were removed from highways after violations were discovered, reports said.

Kindergarten plans preview

Anderson Kindergarten Center has scheduled Kindergarten Preview for Thursday to allow parents a chance to meet teachers, staff and principal Jonathan Slaten and become familiar with the campus and classrooms.

Students who are 5 years old on or before Sept. 1, 1991, and their parents may attend from 6-6:45 p.m. for last names beginning A-L, or from 7:15-8 p.m. for last names beginning M-Z.

The kindergarten center is located at 229 Air Base Road.

Baker asks Soviet support on U.N. unit

CAIRO (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III today asked the Soviet Union for support in authorizing a U.N. police force to replace American and other allied troops protecting Kurdish refugees in northern Iraq.

But Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh did not say publicly whether Baker had persuaded him not to block an expected U.S.-backed resolution in the Security Council.

"A thin line separates the necessity for humanitarian support and the concern for the sovereignty of countries," Bessmertnykh told reporters. "It is a very intricate balance."

Baker took up the problem and other issues, including arms control, in a two-hour meeting here with Bessmertnykh devoted mostly to trying to arrange a Middle East peace conference.

"The possibilities for a conference that we have in mind are growing," Bessmertnykh said, "and the number of problems is fewer than before."

But Baker stressed that "there are some issues that are not agreed to," a point he developed further after a subsequent two-hour meeting with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Baker said that in addition to the dispute between Syria and Israel over the format and authority of a peace conference, the issue of Palestinian representation had not been settled.

He said the options were a Palestinian delegation, a joint delegation with Jordan or an all-Arab delegation.

"Of course, in order to have a conference you have to resolve all the issues satisfactorily," Baker said.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Edmat Abdel-Meguid, sounding upbeat, said "there are still some problems but we don't consider them insurmountable."

Syria's refusal to budge — and the likelihood Israel will resist as well — could spell failure for Baker as he tries to set up the peace negotiations.

The Soviets could play a pivotal role through their ties to Syria and the PLO, which remains instrumental in choosing Palestinian delegates.

The United States, meanwhile, needs the support of the Soviet Union and China before the 3,286 American and 4,865 British, French and other allied troops can withdraw from northern Iraq.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein notified President Bush last week through U.N. Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar that he would not accept a U.N. police force.

As a result, the United States, Britain and France are expected to ask the Security Council to authorize a U.N. force over Saddam's objections.

But the Soviet Union and China could kill the move with a veto.

Baker, at a joint news conference with Bessmertnykh outside the Soviet Embassy, stressed the plight of the Kurdish refugees and also the relief workers assisting them.

"I told the minister that the United States stepped into the breach in this connection because we did not feel that anyone was in the position to do what had to be done," Baker said.

Lightning starts fire at battery

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

Area firefighters worked nearly five hours late Sunday to extinguish a tank battery fire near Colorado City.

Colorado City firefighters received a call about 9:20 p.m. that a D.L. Ray Oil Co. "gunbarrel" had been hit by lightning, an official said. During an extended battle with the blaze, assistance was called in from Westbrook, Loraine and Howard County units.

Colorado City volunteer firefighter Tom Carlock said the fire was not fully extinguished until about 2 a.m. today.

"There was one small water tank on fire, and a large, 25-foot fiberglass gunbarrel tank," he said. "We ended up with nine fire trucks in all, and I'd guess about 40 firemen."

Carlock said the gunbarrel tank's large size and height and strong winds made foam application difficult. The gunbarrel tank has a 750-gallon capacity, he said.

"Also when fiberglass burns, it melts in, kind of folds in on itself and keeps burning. That makes it hard to get the foam on the flames," he said.

"We used all the water we had two times, so they had to leave to refill all nine trucks, which took awhile," Carlock said.

Damage to the company's tanks was "extensive," he said.

Power firm, county debate tax request

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Power Resources Inc. and Howard County commissioners discussed today whether the tax value of plant additions should be tied to the existing value of a plant.

If tied together, it is possible there may be no tax abatement, commissioners said.

Officials representing Power Resources, which is seeking an abatement on $3.34 million in additions to a power cogeneration plant, said the additions are separate from the rest of the plant that is expected to begin depreciating in value.

If the plant, with a preliminary value this year of $83.4 million, depreciates more than what the additions are valued at, then there would be no tax abatement according to a policy adopted by commissioners last year, they said during a Commissioners Court meeting.

"It's due to start depreciating now," said Howard B. Heard Jr. of Houston, a tax consultant for Power Resources. He said he could not predict how fast the 4-year old plant would depreciate, but said, "They start depreciating rapidly."

Presently, Power Resources is the second largest taxpayer in the county, he said.

"You're penalizing one industry for being relatively new for another one which is (older)," said Ken Hamby, manager of the plant which is located near the Fina Oil & Chemical Co. refinery.

"Normally the abated plant stands on its own," Heard said of other abatement policies. He said bylaws in the abatement policy here must be "drawn up a little differently."

Commissioner Bill Crooker, Howard County Appraisal District

Chief Appraiser Keith Toomire and Big Spring Independent School District Superintendent Ron Plumlee, all said the policy would tie together the abated value with the existing value.

But at one point Crooker indicated that they were still in the learning process on giving tax abatements. "We've only been through one abatement," he said. "So we're certainly feeling our way around." A contract was signed with Fina last month for an abatement on $10.1 million in improvements.

U.S. plane arrives with helicopters, medical units

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — The first wave of U.S. troops to join the battle against disease and starvation in cyclone-devastated Bangladesh today scouted out possible sites along the sea coast for water purification units.

Also, a giant U.S. Air Force C-5 Galaxy transport plane landed in Dhaka today with five badly needed helicopters that will be used to ferry supplies to storm survivors.

Millions of people are threatened by sickness, hunger and exposure following the April 30 cyclone that killed more than 139,000 people, many of whom lived on low-lying islands and in coastal villages along the Bay of Bengal.

The first advance teams for the American military task force arrived in Dhaka on Sunday, and 170 soldiers had arrived by tonight, about equally drawn from the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marines.

Altogether, more than 12,000 U.S. troops — including Persian Gulf War veterans — are to contribute to the international effort to save storm survivors.

Most were expected to arrive by sea Wednesday or soon after aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Tarawa and the seven other vessels accompanying it. The Marines on the Tarawa had been headed for Camp Pendleton in California when they were diverted to help with the relief effort.

Some of the most useful equipment coming with this group is likely to be hovercraft that can scoot over the swamped shores of the Bay of Bengal.

"The workhorse is going to be air-cushioned vehicles — otherwise known as hovercraft," Navy Lt. Cmdr. Pete Godbey said while he waited for the C-5 Galaxy to arrive. "It can go right over the mud flats, the islands."

Godbey, 40, of Cincinnati, arrived in Dhaka Sunday night from Pearl Harbor in Hawaii to direct a preventive-medicine team. He said the Bangladesh operation will make use of the Marines' special

Most lake visitors from out of town

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

It was a slow weekend at Moss Creek Lake — only 250 people came out to fish, swim and camp, said caretaker Floyd Earls.

However, Earls said out-of-town and local visitors have flocked to the facility on previous weekends. Earls has volunteered to spend time at the lake since the departure of live-in manager Ron Robey on Feb. 1.

"I'd say over 85 percent of those (250 visitors) were from out of town," Earls said. A list of signed-in guests shows they came from Midland, Odessa, Snyder, Lamesa, Monahans and McCamey, he said.

"It's amazing to me that there are some Big Spring people who haven't been out there in years," Earls said. "The fishing's good, there's a dock (and) a designated swimming area. It's a good facility."

Assistant City Manager Tom Decell said a "test program" currently in place at the lake is working well, with Earls manning the concession stand and taking entrance fees each weekend and some weekdays.

A metal "honor box" has been installed so visitors can leave their fees when Earls is not working. Response has been good, Decell said.

"We've had people come by the concession stand on their way out to pay since no one was there when they came in," he said. "And once we had an empty envelope in the box and $2 with a note saying, 'We forgot to put this in the envelope before we put it in the box.'"

Vandalism has occurred, however. Someone recently attempted to pry the box open for what Earls said may have been a "couple of dollars."

"During the week, there aren't too many people coming out, so there couldn't have been much in there," he said.

Earls has revised the lake entrance fee to $2 per car or pickup load, $4 per van or motor home. The one-time more affordable fee includes overnight stays.

"I think more people can afford it this way," Earls said. "We want to make it something everybody can afford."

Decell said the fees help defray the costs of operations as well as improvements at the lake. With Earls volunteering, the city does not have to pay a full-time caretaker, so money can be saved for construction projects, Decell said.

"There's cleanup going on out there right now," he said. "And we're starting on the dirt work for the bathrooms, as well as a boat ramp for Lake Fest 1991," a weekend boat race planned this summer.

Current operations at the lake will continue at least until October, the end of the season, Decell said.

Moore seminar planned

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The board of directors of Moore Development for Big Spring Inc. plans to discuss a possible all-day work session at its meeting Tuesday.

The meeting is scheduled at 4 p.m. in the board room at the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Board members are expected to examine a proposed seminar to be conducted by consultant Howard Putnam, recently hired to advise the economic development group.

Moore executive director Ted St. Clair said the five-member board and its committee members would invite the Big Spring City Council, the Howard County Commissioners Court, Howard College trustees, the Big Spring school district board and Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce officials to the session.

Putnam, who has been hired to help the corporation market the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark, is expected to discuss long-range planning for economic development with the group, St. Clair said.

In other business, the board is expected to consider:

• Planning for the move to its new facility, tentatively scheduled for this week. Moore will share office space with the chamber at 215 W. Third St.

Richards signs UTPB legislation

ODESSA (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards says an expanded University of Texas-Permian Basin means an investment in economic security for the whole state.

Richards signed legislation Sunday to make UTPB a four-year school.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa. Freshmen and sophomores will enroll in the fall to join the 2,000 students now attending the upper-level university.

Richards told a crowd of more than 500 at the UT-Permian Basin courtyard the oil-rich region has contributed significantly to the Texas economy.

But now it is time to diversify the Texas economy to ensure stability when the price of oil may fluctuate, said Richards.

"I want to be known as the education governor," Richards said. "I also want to be known as the governor of economic diversification."

Richards signed House Bill 277 with the same pen used to sign a bill to charter the university in 1969.

Queen to visit Texas

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Local historian Henry Guerra has been given five minutes or less to explain the history of the Alamo to Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, Prince Philip.

That's going to be a tough assignment for Guerra on May 21 when he gives the royal couple a rapid tour of the Shrine of Texas Liberty.

The Alamo is to be the royal couple's first stop on a 1-hour 45-minute tour of the city, which is to include a barge ride on the river and a quick visit to the Institute of Texan Cultures.

Guerra said he planned to mention the 29 British subjects who fought at the Alamo, but he won't have much time for an in-depth history lesson.

"I've got five minutes to do it all, and they haven't told me how much ground they want me to cover," said Guerra, chairman of the Bexar County Historical Commission. "So, I'll just give her the essentials of the story of the Alamo without too much embellishment because we just don't have time."

Residents petition to keep Carswell

FORT WORTH (AP) — Residents here want the Pentagon to remove Carswell Air Force Base from its base closings list, so they've put it in writing.

Officials with the Base Closure and Realignment Commission in Washington say more than 500 letters of support for Carswell have poured in, reportedly the highest volume of mail from communities whose bases have been targeted for closure by the Pentagon.

Bees dealing destruction in Mexico

HOUSTON (AP) — The aggressive Africanized honeybees have dealt death to the honey industry and even some people in southern Mexico, where beekeepers complain the Mexican government has written them off.

Leonardo Gomez Perez, a 70-year-old widower, was stung to death by thousands of Africanized honeybees, often called killer bees. The bees were provoked by Perez's machete slicing into their hive in a grove of coffee trees. He died in a Tapachula hospital 11 hours later.

"When I got there, some of the bees were on my father, and some were flying, looking for someone else to attack," his son, Porfirio Gomez Perez, told the Houston Chronicle in a report from Santa Rita, Mexico.

"So I picked him up. But I was being attacked and there was nothing I could do but flee and leave him there, abandoned. I ran to the river," he said.

Leonardo Gomez became the 46th person to die in Mexico of bee stings since 1986, when swarms of so-called killer bees entered Chiapas, the southernmost state that shares a border with Guatemala.

In Chiapas, the bees have killed nine people — more than any other state — and caused considerable economic loss, destroying the honey bee industry and introducing a breed of bee impossible to manage.

"We had absolutely no knowledge about the bees," Gomez said. "We had heard they were dangerous, but we didn't know if they had arrived up here."

The Africanized bees have been on a slow northern trek since escaping from a Brazilian laboratory in 1957. A swarm of the aggressive bees was first spotted in South Texas last October and several more were recently trapped.

Texas' nine southernmost counties have been quarantined since the bees were first spotted last year. The quarantine bars the movement of any bees from the area.

Experts say the Africanized bees spotted in Texas are "pioneer swarms," with the main front remaining in Mexico, about 75 miles south of the border.

Ermilio Galvez Monson, 72, told the Chronicle that his home has been repeatedly visited by the Africanized bees.

"My wife was contemplating making a hive for them. She was getting a box ready. I told her, 'Yes, you'll have them and one day they'll come out and get you.'"

Man killed by trooper

ZAPATA (AP) — Department of Public Safety officials are continuing their investigation of a weekend incident in which a trooper fatally shot a man after he reportedly drew a weapon on the officer.

Olegario Mario Villarreal, 49, of Zapata, was pronounced dead Saturday night at a Zapata hospital, said DPS spokesman David Wells.

Villarreal had been stopped about 10:40 p.m. on U.S. 83, about 2 miles south of San Ygnacio, after trooper John Reed spotted the car swerving in the road, Wells said.

Wells said when Villarreal resisted arrest, Reed returned to his patrol unit to call for assistance. Villarreal came toward Reed, aiming a .22-caliber Magnum pistol at the trooper, Wells said.

"After he pointed it (the gun) at the trooper, the trooper quickly drew his revolver and fired at that time," Wells said.

Police: Attack staged

HOUSTON (AP) — Police believe residents in drug and gang infested areas are trying to capitalize on anti-police feelings, inciting groups to attack cops and making them afraid to patrol dangerous areas alone.

"The drug dealers are trying to keep us from providing ... services, but they will not prevail," Police Chief Elizabeth Watson said. "We hope to gain control, but to do that, we have to concentrate our efforts."

Watson said her officers were using "extreme restraint" following violent attacks on lone police officers in the city's Fourth Ward this month. The attacks coincide with the shootings of suspects by police May 3. One of those shootings killed an unarmed man.

Officers say they have been ordered not to enter the area, less than a mile west of downtown, without backup.

The precautions were ordered after Officer J.R. D'Eugenio was attacked by up to 100 people May 4 while trying to arrest a man who appeared intoxicated.

As the two struggled, D'Eugenio said he noticed he was being videotaped. Moments later, he said, his patrol car was battered by the crowd and he was shot at.

"I think what they wanted me to do was the Rodney King situation," he said, referring to the videotaped beating of a black motorist by Los Angeles police March 3. "I was going to get out there, hit this guy, beat him up, they were going to film it and they were going to start another racial thing with the police department."

D'Eugenio told the Houston Chronicle the incident began about 2 a.m., when the man ran out in front of his patrol car.

Realizing the man was drunk, he told the man he would have to go to jail. The man refused, turned around, and pushed D'Eugenio back, the officer said.

"At that time, I notice another (man) standing behind me with a video camera, filming the whole thing. It was an obvious set-up."

D'Eugenio said moments later, bottles and rocks rained down on the patrol car, and he said he heard four or five shots before he drove away.

Families suing maker of Tylenol

CHICAGO (AP) — The families of seven people who died after taking cyanide-laced Tylenol almost nine years ago say they will try to convince a jury that the capsules' manufacturer bears responsibility for the deaths.

Jury selection was to begin today in Cook County Circuit Court in the civil trial of McNeil Consumer Products Inc., Tylenol's manufacturer.

The victims' families, who sued in 1983, contend the company should have known the capsules were vulnerable and should have acted to protect consumers. The lawsuits seek unspecified compensatory and punitive damages.

The deaths of seven Chicago-area people radically transformed the packaging of over-the-counter drugs.

In the days after the deaths, McNeil's parent, Johnson & Johnson of New Brunswick, N.J., recalled 22 million bottles of Tylenol capsules.

Johnson & Johnson ultimately stopped selling Tylenol in capsule form and also introduced tamper-resistant packages for the nation's best-selling pain reliever.

No one was ever charged with the poisonings.

James W. Lewis was convicted in 1984 of threatening more poisonings in a plot to extort $1 million from Johnson & Johnson. He is serving 20 years in prison. He is the prime suspect in the deaths, State Police said Friday.

Benefits to be given electronically

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland will become the first to go statewide with electronic distribution — via plastic cards — of welfare and food stamp benefits.

Maryland's program already includes 6,000 Baltimore residents and will go statewide by the fall, state officials said.

Welfare, child support, food stamps and any state assistance that participants receive will be put into an account that the government will replenish each month.

Instead of the traditional monthly checks and coupon books, aid recipients will get plastic cards. Aid recipients will be able use the cards to withdraw the cash portion of their benefits from automatic teller machines hooked up to the system. They also will be able to use the cards to buy food at 150 specially equipped stores.

State officials said the system will make it more difficult for food stamp recipients to exchange benefits for cash or drugs, officials said.

The new system also could reduce the stigma attached to receiving government aid, program proponents said.

Raised fists answer Bush's speech

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — President Bush's promises to fight discrimination did not win over an audience of black college graduates who remember he vetoed civil rights legislation.

Many of the students at Hampton University did not want the president to give the graduation address, which was received Sunday at times with scattered applause or silence.

In a wide ranging speech on his administration's domestic priorities, Bush referred to his housing program that includes allowing tenants to buy public housing.

When he finished, several rows of graduates sat stonily and refused to applaud, while about two dozen raised their fists in the traditional black power salute.

Report: Bush plans to cut awards

NEW YORK (AP) — President Bush is sending to Congress this week a plan to pressure states to limit court awards for malpractice, The New York Times said today.

Under the plan, states would be encouraged to strengthen medical licensing boards, set limits on the amount malpractice victims can collect for pain and suffering and establish a system for mediating disputes, the newspaper said.

States that refuse would lose a portion of the federal Medicare and Medicaid funds they receive for health care for the elderly and the poor, according to the Times.

The plan is designed to bring down the cost of medical care by shrinking the amount doctors have to pay for malpractice insurance.

It is also designed to persuade doctors to resume procedures they stopped performing because of astronomical insurance costs.

Concert for Kurdish relief raises millions

LONDON (AP) — The millions of dollars pouring in from a hastily organized global pop concert for Iraq's Kurdish refugees are freeing up scarce Red Cross resources for storm-ravaged Bangladesh and famine-afflicted regions of Africa.

Ticket sales at the Wembley Arena, the main stage for Sunday night's concert, were expected to raise $1.7 million.

Telephone donations totaled $2.52 million internationally by the end of the event, which was organized by novelist Jeffrey Archer.

Organizers said they were sure by the time the appeal closes May 25 to also match the $17 million donated by the British government with funds being collected in other countries.

In the days leading up to the event, several rock stars who would take part expressed concern that some of the money raised should go to other disaster areas as well, including survivors of the cyclone in Bangladesh and Africans suffering from starvation.

But the Red Cross issued a statement that said it was bound by law to earmark the money raised by the concert for the Kurdish refugees.

Princess Diana and Prime Minister John Major were part of the sell-out crowd at Wembley for the concert, which was kicked off by Chris De Burgh in London and Rod Stewart in Switzerland.

Other performers, including Sinead O'Connor, Sting, Peter Gabriel and Paul Simon, were seen by satellite hookup from cities around the world. The concert was broadcast to 34 countries including the Soviet Union, Japan and the United States.

The concert was organized in less than three weeks for the benefit of Kurds who fled Iraq fearing further repression following a failed uprising against Saddam Hussein after the Persian Gulf War.

It said the success of the appeal had, however, "allowed us to free up people to raise funds for Bangladesh and African which we would have previously had to allocate to the Kurdish refugee problem."

Profits from sales of the concert single also go to the Red Cross.

Chris De Burgh, the first musician to volunteer for the concert, sang "Lady in Red" and "Don't Pay the Ferryman" to a wildly enthusiastic audience.

Concert footage was interspersed with news footage of Kurdish refugees and there were occasional appeals for a free Kurdish state. A stall at the concert sold more than 1,000 Kurdistan flags, which many fans waved during the concert.

"The Kurds have been a football kicked around by governments for far too long," Gabriel told a crowd at The Hague.

Gabriel, who performed songs including "Games Without Frontiers," was joined by O'Connor for a duet in his "Don't Give Up."

At Wembley, the crowd roared its approval when greetings from Massoud Barzani, leader of the Kurdish Democratic Party, were read before the finale.

The finale saw De Burgh performing "The Simple Truth" while framed by a large Kurdistan flag.

Chambers divided over emigration

MOSCOW (AP) — One chamber of the Supreme Soviet legislature today approved an emigration bill that would open the Soviet Union's borders to its citizens, but the other chamber rejected it.

The Council of Nationalities fell 12 votes short of approving the bill in principle. Earlier in the day, the Council of the Union voted in favor of the legislation.

The two houses referred the matter to committee for resolution.

The Supreme Soviet approved a first draft of the law, which would next year allow Soviets to leave their homeland, in November 1989. But the legislation languished until Tuesday, when a final version was presented.

The Council of Nationalities' vote on the bill was 121-37 with 21 abstentions. Soviet law requires approval by 50 percent of the members of each house, in this case 133 votes.

It was not immediately clear whether supporters in the Council of Nationalities would amend the bill or try to drum up more votes for the current version.

Both houses of the 542-member Supreme Soviet must adopt each article of the bill and approve an enabling resolution before the legislation can become law.

Students briefly take headquarters

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Students armed with iron bars and clubs stormed into the headquarters of President Roh Tae-woo's governing party today and struggled with riot police before being ousted a short time later.

The fracas at the Democratic Liberal Party building came as dissidents pledged to extend for a third week of the country's worst demonstrations since 1987 protests that led then President Chun Doo-hwan to step down.

This year's unrest began after the beating death of a student by police.

Roh called the mounting unrest intolerable, and police warned that they would forcibly stop a funeral march for the student planned for Tuesday.

At Roh's party headquarters, about 70 students — some disguised in business suits and party buttons — entered the building after overpowering a skeletal force of 10 police left on duty at lunch.

They occupied several floors of the building, shouted anti-government slogans, barricaded themselves in offices and smashed windows.

Police said the radicals occupied the offices for about 30 minutes before 200 martial arts-trained police reinforcements used sledgehammers to tear through office walls.

Fierce fighting between police and students left the stairs and office floors bloodied.

Kurds refusing to return to capital

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) — The United Nations today took nearly 130 tons of wheat and other supplies to a provincial capital controlled by Iraqi forces, as the allies sought to persuade Kurdish refugees to return from mountain camps.

KURDISH CHILD RECEIVES CHOLERA VACCINATION

The world body also plans today to take over two U.S.-built relief camps within the secure zone in northern Iraq created to protect the Kurds, in preparation for its eventual takeover of the zone from the allies.

Plans call for U.S. and other allied troops to eventually leave the area, turning over the entire relief effort to the United Nations and other agencies. Who will protect the Kurds after the allies go, however, worries the refugees.

Officials said the repatriation of refugees from the harsh camps on the mountainous Turkish border has continued, and one major settlement that housed 100,000 refugees is nearly empty.

Mandela convicted of kidnapping

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A Supreme Court judge today found Winnie Mandela guilty in the kidnapping of four young men from a church home in 1988 and convicted her of lesser charges in the beating of the youths at her home.

Mrs. Mandela, wife of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, had been charged with assault in the beatings, but the judge reduced that charge to being an accessory after the fact.

Sentencing was set for Tuesday, and Mrs. Mandela was released on her own recognizance.

"As long as you all now know that I did not assault any child that is all that matters," Mrs. Mandela told the court. She said she was "delighted" about the reduction of the assault charges, but said nothing about the kidnap conviction.

After the verdict was read, Nelson Mandela hugged and kissed his wife. The two emerged from the courthouse arm-in-arm and gave clenched-fist salutes to a crowd of about 200 people who cheered and roared. "Viva, Viva!"

Schools cut summer programs

Thousands of schoolchildren needing help with the basics won't get it this summer as financially pressed districts cut or eliminate summer sessions.

Hardest hit so far: Northeastern and Midwestern cities including Philadelphia, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Boston and Chicago. Summer programs seem safe so far in most Western and Southern states.

Indianapolis plans to cut almost all summer enrichment and elective classes — a decision affecting 11,000 of the district's 50,000 students.

Some districts are also sharply increasing student fees for summer school.

Kurds are U.N. problem

Despite many deaths, and despite lingering fears of Iraqi reprisals, the Kurds are being helped down from their desperate mountain perches.

Troops helping out in this humanitarian work deserve every bit as much commendation as those who waged a victorious war over the forces of Saddam Hussein. While relief work may not be as dramatic as combat, helping desperate populations entails responsibility of a high order.

This said, it is also important that allied troops not get drawn into a semipermanent presence on the Iraqi periphery. That role, crucial until an Iraqi regime can be depended upon not to abuse its own people, belongs with the United Nations.

Knowing of Saddam Hussein's murderous past, it would be well for the U.N. peacekeeping contingent to plan on staying around for awhile.

Cut China's MFN status

Next month the United States is likely to repeat an annual exercise by which it betrays its own interests and shames its highest principles. On June 1, unless the experts miss their guess, President Bush will call for renewal of China's most-favored-nation (MFN) status.

The two issues of human rights and American trade rights are linked by Beijing's expanding use of political prisoners to produce its exports. U.S. law strictly forbids importation of goods made by prisoners. Yet, U.S. stores bulge with cheap textiles, shoes and toys produced in China's gulag.

Nor are U.S. economic interests particularly well-served by the current MFN arrangement. An industry group has called China's disregard for American patents and copyrights "blatant piracy." Its system of import quotas and licenses made China the only major country where U.S. imports actually declined last year.

If it must renew China's MFN status, Congress should at least condition its approval so as to register a protest now and provoke a more exacting review next year.

A conditional approval of MFN regarding human rights, while still unsatisfying, would at least offer a small but hopeful mitigation when, as seems certain, the fruits of slave labor continue to pile up on American shores.

Tsongas points the way

What the Democrats don't need, as one wag put it, is another Greek from Massachusetts. Yet there was Paul Tsongas this week, arms outstretched almost sacrificially, braving the rains in post-industrial Lowell, Mass., his old stomping ground, announcing that he's ready to take on President Bush in '92.

OK, he's a long shot even within his own underdog party, but Tsongas is doing something that national Democrats have been avoiding far too long. He's talking about breaking stride with comfortably familiar Democratic positions-as-usual. And for that alone, he deserves some serious attention, especially from any heavier-weights contemplating runs against the commander in chief.

We're not enamored of every item in his agenda. But in going wholesale with his pragmatic, you-can't-keep-slicing-a-shrinking-pie manifesto he pushed in his brief Senate career, Tsongas may finally be giving Democrats a nudge to rethink the attitudes that have lost them the White House for to these many campaigns.

The Philadelphia Inquirer

Cost of F-22 too high

The Air Force's new basic fighter plane, the F-22, to be built primarily by Lockheed, is described as a marvel in the skies.

But does it make sense for America — weighted down by a national debt that has leaped from $1 trillion to $4 trillion in just a decade — to squander $64 billion on a fleet of planes costing nearly $100 million each?

The price might be justified if the Cold War were still in the deep freeze stage. But it's over; the Soviet Union has dwindled as a potential enemy.

Militarists point to the Persian Gulf War as proving a need for perpetual upgrading of America's high-tech weaponry. They have a point — but the real lesson of the Persian Gulf War is that Western, Arab and once-Communist nations stood together to overwhelm an aggressor with reasonably modern war machines and a large army. The war may have been an aberration in a transition to a new era of history.

The F-22 won't be built unless Congress provides the money — and it shouldn't. The Washington Post noted that "the Congressional Budget Office came as close as it ever comes to saying the Air Force cannot afford the F-22." If the plane is built, Congress must cut other military programs and ignore painful domestic needs.

The nation has other needs much greater than the need for fighters costing $64 billion.

The Charleston (W.Va.) Gazette

How far can you trust Bob Woodward?

WASHINGTON — Bob Woodward's new book, "The Commanders" (Simon & Schuster) came out the other day, at about the same time that the U.S. Supreme Court was polishing its opinion in Masson v. New Yorker magazine. It's a good time to talk shop.

Woodward's book may remind many old-timers of a radio comedy that enjoyed modest popularity 40 or 50 years ago. The skits revolved around Baron Munchausen, teller of tall tales. His yarns would go on and on, with one improbable fabrication piled atop another. At the end, when his straight man expressed total incredulity, the baron had the same crushing riposte: "Vass you dere, Chollie?"

That is the problem here. Woodward's book is an exercise in "trust me" journalism. It purports to be the behind-the-scenes story of how President Bush and his military leaders came to their decisions in Panama, the Philippines and Iraq.

Let the author explain his technique: "Nearly all of the information comes from interviews with people directly involved in the decisions. More than 400 people were interviewed over the course of 27 months. The sources are not identified in the text. "Direct quotations from meetings or conversations come from at least one participant who specifically recalled or took notes on what was said. Quotation marks are not used when the sources were unsure about the exact wording."

It is thus fair to infer that when Woodward does use quotation marks, we are in fact getting the exact wording. He sought "to re-create as closely as possible the way the discussion flowed." The author says that his book "falls somewhere between newspaper journalism and history."

Is that where this book falls? Beats me. None of us can check his secondary sources. We don't know who they are. Woodward's readers must trust Woodward, and those who recall Woodward's purported deathbed interview with CIA Director William Casey — an interview that Bill's widow says never happened — may wish to read verbatim conversations with a skeptical eye. Examples: Early on, Woodward undertakes to "re-create" conversations between Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Adm. William J. Crowe, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Their conversation concerned a public rebuke Cheney had administered to Air Force Gen. Larry Welch. In direct quotes:

"I hope that blast didn't cause you a problem," Cheney said. "I just plain disagree with you, Mr. Secretary," (Crowe) began. "It's not right."

Woodward "re-creates" a talk between Gen. Colin Powell and Prince Bandar bin Sultan, the Saudi Arabian ambassador, on Aug. 3 of last year. Powell says the United States is prepared to send a rather large force.

"How many are you talking about?" Bandar asked. "Powell said 100,000 to 200,000. Bandar let his breath out audibly. 'Well, at least this shows you're serious.'"

Was this exactly what was said? At one historic point, "Bandar felt his hair stand up." Really? How high did Bandar's hair stand up? Vass you dere, Bobby? Woodward taped some of his interviews. In some instances he had verbatim transcripts of press briefings. Readers may accept these as reliable. But the gasps of Prince Bandar, the sacrilegious profanity of a congressman and the private thoughts of Gen. Welch — who knows?

This kind of trust-me journalism lies at the heart of the libel suit brought by psychoanalyst Jeffrey Masson against The New Yorker. In a two-part article about Masson's difficulties as projects director of the Sigmund Freud Archives, reporter Janet Malcolm attributed certain statements to him in direct quotation marks. Masson felt he had been defamed.

"I was like an intellectual gigolo," she quoted him as saying. It appears from the evidence that Masson very probably had said something like that. But had he said exactly those words? Apparently not. Does it matter? The high court heard argument in the case in January. An opinion could come down any day.

Speaking for myself (and for many other newspaper people also), I say it matters greatly. It is all very well to tidy up a subject's syntax and to eliminate the ahs, ers and you-knows, but direct quotation marks are a reporter's iron-clad, honor-bound guarantee that something was actually said. "The Commanders" is fascinating reading. Let it go at that.

Life goes on, either up or down

By BETTY JOHANSEN
Copy Editor

Physics is an amazing subject. It will expand your mind — and warp it and wrinkle it and hang it out to dry. And when you get your grade, it will make you humble. A real package deal!

But, no joke, I had a blast doing all kinds of astonishing experiments with light in physics lab. And in physics lecture, I met the illuminating second law of thermodynamics. Don't ask me what thermodynamics means or what it has to do with real life, but it does have a second law that captured my fancy, namely: "When a system containing a large number of particles is left to itself, it assumes a state with maximum entropy, that is, it becomes as disordered as possible."

For example, if a housewife went out of town for awhile and Dad and the kids went about their business as usual, the condition of the home at Mom's return would demonstrate the second law of thermodynamics. Unless some work is put into the system, it deteriorates into mass confusion.

I was thinking about the work I was putting into my system as I was plugging up Scenic Mountain last week. The human anatomy seems especially fond of the second law of thermodynamics. If I take my leisure, eating whatever I feel like eating and never exercising, my weight goes out of control. My system is going to look like a beached whale unless I spend some time in the kitchen, instead of the fast-food Mecca, and a lot of time doing road work.

Work. That's the four-letter word that used to frighten

If you ask me

Maynard G. Krebs every time he heard it. But work is the only thing that keeps a system, a home, a life from traveling down the primrose path into chaos.

Somewhere around 500 B.C., some dude named Heraclitus said, "There is nothing permanent except change." Or as someone else once said, "My four favorite words in the Bible are 'It came to pass.' No matter how bad things are, we can always count on them to pass."

The problem with the permanency of change is that, unless work is applied, the changes are for the worse. It's easy to understand a kitchen filling with dirty dishes or a skirt becoming too small to fasten, but the principle is true in less obvious areas, like character.

We live in an environment where ease and self-indulgence are almost sacred cows. "If it feels good, do it" — otherwise you're weird. We see Bart Simpson, thumbing his nose at authority, and Garfield, preaching the eat-and-sleep gospel. Books, magazines, and TV try to teach us that lying, cheating and adultery are OK, as long as we don't get caught.

All we have to do is live in this culture, and we'll soak it up. Unless we apply some work to developing character, it's easy to slide into a lifestyle where the desire for comfort and pleasure control us.

And then, there is the area of relationships. It would be nice if relationships automatically got better and better. Unfortunately, it never happens. Like everything else in the world, relationships are constantly changing. They're either getting better or worse, and, if no work is being applied to improving a relationship, it is undoubtedly headed downhill.

One day back in 1976 I must have been feeling either pessimistic or philosophic because I wrote:

"Life is a bowl of gravy — lukewarm, murky, mucky, sticky, gooey — slowing us down, blinding our vision, keeping us totally involved with ourselves and our desperate efforts to see where we're going and why."

I went on to say that, when we are born again as Christians, we are issued a pair of windshield wipers to let in a little light and a spoon to climb. Then life consists of plodding up the spoon until we finally climb out into the sunshine at the end of this life.

It doesn't sound very exciting, but I think I was onto one thing anyway. In every aspect of our life, we are on slippery footing. Nothing is ever stationary. We are either climbing into the sunshine of success in any given area of endeavor, or else we're sliding backward into a swamp — or a bowl of gravy if you prefer.

That's the second law of thermodynamics. Like gravity, it works whether we believe it or not. And whether we like it or not,

Make it easy for them to ask you

DEAR ABBY: I hope that by printing this letter it will make other parents do some serious thinking about their relationships with their teens.

My neighbor's 17-year-old daughter and the daughter's 16-year-old girlfriend spent two hours talking to me about boys and sex. The 17-year-old is thinking about having sex with her boyfriend. While I certainly did not encourage it, I did talk openly about safe-sex practices and birth control. I also explained why it would be better if she waited until she is older and more mature.

What bothers me the most is, why aren't these girls talking to their own mothers? The girls are friends of my teen-aged sons — that is how they know me.

Abby, it isn't my place to talk to them about these things, but since I'm the only one they trust, I won't betray them. My sons and I are very open with each other, and we discuss everything they have on their minds.

I wish more parents would listen to their kids — even if what the kids say may shock and dismay them. Parents shouldn't judge — they should just be there for their children. —SOMEBODY ELSE'S MOM

DEAR MOM: The neighbors' kids are talking to you because they are not comfortable talking to their own moms (or dads). How lucky for them that you are there for them. Unfortunately, not all parents are comfortable talking to their teens about safe-sex practices and birth control. Some may even resent the fact that their children are getting information from a neighbor (you) that they, their own parents, would be reluctant to give them.

I say, if kids ask — they are old enough to know. What our children don't know can hurt them.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you for advice about a dilemma that I never thought would happen to me. Several months ago, I asked a girl to attend the high school prom with me. She didn't say yes, but she didn't say no either. A couple of weeks later, I asked her again, and she was very evasive. Tired of her games, I asked another girl and she said yes right away. When the first girl found out that I had asked someone else to the prom, she became moody and distant. Then I found out through the grapevine that she had bought a prom dress on the assumption that she was going with me.

I have no sympathy for her. Her indefinite replies left me second-guessing, so I asked somebody else. Now several people seem to think that I am at fault. The way I see it, since I asked her twice without getting a definite response, I think I should be allowed to ask somebody else. Am I right? —SELF-DEFENSE
DEAR SELF-DEFENSE: You are absolutely right, beyond a shadow of a doubt!

BSHS play takes third place at state

Big Spring High School theater students won third place in the State University Interscholastic League one-act play competition in Austin last week.

The play, "The Crucible," was ranked third of more than 165 4A schools in the state, according to theater teacher and UIL sponsor Tim Haynes. Eight schools advanced to the state level of competition and three schools were chosen for awards.

"It was a long, long day. We're very pleased. Two top places and seven of the 18 individual awards came out of our region," Haynes said.

From Big Spring High School, Jason LeGrande was named best actor, John Paul Stevenson was named to the all-star cast and Joshua Free was named honorable mention, all-star cast.

SWCID conference to become annual event

By MARSHA STURDIVANT Staff Writer

The SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf conducted its first Leadership Conference for Young Deaf Adults this weekend, and officials said the program was such a success, it will become an annual event.

Deaf students at high schools in Amarillo, Lubbock, El Paso, Abilene, Odessa and Midland attended the conference, said Pamme Wilding, recreation director for SWCID.

The 42 students and nine parents stayed in dormitories for the three days of scheduled events. The theme of the conference was "If it is to be, it is up to me."

Guest speakers for the event included Wilton McMillan, director of student life at the Model Secondary School for the Deaf in Washington, D.C.; Ralph White, former president of the National Association of the Deaf and retired superintendent of the Oklahoma School for the Deaf; Betty Bounds-Wood, currently working with Relay-Texas/Sprint Services; Angel Ramos, a doctoral student at Gallaudet University in Washington, D.C.; and Ed Bosson, consumer relations administrator with the Texas Public Utilities Commission.

The conference was sponsored by the Texas Education Agency, with coordinator Terry Dobson from Austin; Relay Texas; Sprint Services; Gallaudet University Regional Center, Eastfield College; Educational Resource Center on Deafness, Baton Rouge, La.; Texas Association of the Deaf; West Texas Regional Day School Program for the Deaf and SWCID.

Bill may allow more workers to be covered

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

A bill going into hearings this week in Austin may allow more insurers to pick up workers in the assigned risk pool of the state's workmen's compensation system, a state representative said.

But a spokesman with the Texas AFL-CIO in Austin, which says the present workmen's compensation system is unfair to workers, said he wonders if it will work.

Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, a co-author of the bill and a small-business owner, said the bill would stabilize the market by selling bonds to clear a $1.2 billion deficit in the assigned risk pool.

The bill would allow 20 years for companies to pay back the debt, said Fraser, who sits on the House Business and Commerce Committee that was scheduled to begin hearings on the bill today.

In return, the state would monitor the pool and set rates, Fraser said. "What we're hoping," he said, "is that the insurance companies will pick up (assigned risks)."

Debate

No decisions were made by commissioners early today and more discussion was planned later today.

Power Resources is also seeking tax abatements from the Big Spring Independent School District and the Howard Junior College District. At current tax rates, half of up to $377,212 in taxes over a seven-year period, including a two-year construction period, would be abated if all three taxing entities approve the request.

Construction began one month ago on Power Resources equipment to remove solids from water from Lake Spence, Hamby told commissioners. It will help the company preserve its equipment and keep long-term contractual commitments to sell electricity to TU Electric and steam to Pina, he said.

Noting that area water quality has decreased in recent years, Hamby said, "Our plant depends on extremely high quality water. If you don't have pure water, your equipment goes down."

He also said the plant will be able to add two employees to the 35-employee company after the work is completed.

The bill does not have anything to do with a recent Maverick County district judge's ruling that the present workmen's compensation system is unconstitutional, Fraser said. The suit, filed by the AFL-CIO will be appealed, attorneys for the state have said.

"I'm not surprised by it," said Fraser, who helped write the 1989 legislation that overhauled the workmen's compensation system. "We feel like it will be upheld."

Humor room offers funny videos, books for patients

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Cancer patients need a laugh as much as anyone, and the British Columbia Cancer Agency has opened a humor room.

Corporate, union and individual donors raised money to equip the room with furniture, about 30 videos and more than 50 books, said agency librarian David Noble.

"It's not a formal therapy, per se, but a service which helps to alleviate some of the seriousness of having cancer and makes the patient feel better," Noble said.

The collection is available to the agency's 100 patients, who can watch the videos from their hospital beds, and to all cancer patients in the province, Noble said.

There are videos of Tom Hanks, Bill Cosby, Lucille Ball and the Three Stooges; books by the likes of Stephen Leacock and Erna Bombeck; and comics.

"Robin Williams was excluded on the basis of his material being... very sexually oriented and we thought it might offend some people," he said.

Board to discuss status of buildings

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

The Big Spring Board of Adjustments and Appeals is expected to consider the status of eight local structures when it meets Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the municipal court room, City Hall.

A new program has begun to make local citizens aware of the city's continuing effort to seek demolition or repair of code-violating structures, officials said. Signs declaring condemned properties are on the city's "hit list" will be posted on buildings by Code Enforcement Officer Leland Graves.

The brightly colored signs are designed to let area residents know that structures in the neighborhood are planned for elimination, said Assistant City Manager Tom Decell.

"We want to let people know something is being done," he said. "Once a structure is planned to be abated, we'll place a sign there so people won't wonder if anything is happening to it." Structures to be considered Tuesday include those at: 705 East 16th, 706 Creighton, 604 N. San Antonio, 1311 E. Fourth, 105 N. Johnson, 1609 Osage, 1009 W. Interstate 20 and 500 NE 11th.

Once a building has been ordered abated by the board, a lien is placed on its title for the cost of demolition. City and county crews have been working jointly to demolish and clear away dilapidated structures in the area.

Under the city's complaint program, citizens may file formal complaints about unsightly or dangerous structures in their neighborhoods with the public works department. The structure will be inspected by Graves and, if it is found to violate city building codes, the owner will be contacted and the building considered for abatement.

Among other agenda items, the board will swear in new alternate member Richard Wright.

British, Iraqis exchange gunfire

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) — As allied forces tried to persuade more Kurds to return home to northern Iraq today, British and Iraqi soldiers exchanged gunfire at a summer palace of Saddam Hussein's in the area, British military officials said.

No British casualties were reported, and there was no word of Iraqi casualties in the shootout near the northern city of Sirsenk, well within the allied "safe haven" zone intended to protect the Kurdish refugees.

The British officials said the incident involved a British patrol and several Iraqi soldiers inside the palace complex, which is surrounded by 12-foot walls. It is five miles east of Sirsenk airfield, where the British marines have their headquarters.

The shootout was reported by the British Defense Ministry and confirmed by the British Embassy in Ankara, Turkey.

The first Iraqi gunfire at the Royal Marines patrol took place at about 10:30 a.m. local time, when three rounds were fired from the palace complex in front of a patrol, said James Gee, a spokesman for the British Defense Ministry at Silopi, Turkey.

At 1:13 p.m., one round was fired at the standing patrol from the same area, and it was answered by one round, Gee said.

At 1:20 p.m., two men emerged from a block house on the palace wall and began to fire long bursts of automatic fire at the patrol. Fire was returned and the two men dropped from sight, he said.

Shortly afterward, two more shots were fired at the patrol.

Police beat

The Big Spring Police Department reported the following incidents:

• The theft of a firearm was reported in the 2400 block of Alabama Street. The incident apparently occurred sometime between Tuesday and Saturday.

• A man reported his vehicle tires had been slashed in the 1100 block of South Gregg Street.

• An assault was reported in the 1000 block of Sycamore Street. A man was reportedly struck with a blunt object and sustained neck and facial injuries.

• The burglary of a motel room was reported in the 1200 block of East Third Street. More than $1,500 in cash was reportedly taken from money bags. A door was forced open for thieves to gain entry, reports said.

• A 20-year-old man was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

• A disturbance was reported in the 500 block of Westover Road late Sunday. Several calls to the department reported a loud party at the apartment complex.

• A 22-year-old Knott man was arrested for felony theft by deception.

• A 21-year-old man was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

• A person reportedly carried a short-barreled firearm into Comanche Trail Park.

skills. "You see, for a Marine, they do this all the time. It's an amphibious operation. They go in at ground zero," Godbey said, referring to the fact that the cyclone coast lacks virtually every imaginable necessity, including adequate shelter and power.

"There's not much difference with a disaster situation, whether it's combat or natural. It's distribution of (materials) that's the problem, and they're good at it," Godbey said.

The U.S. transport plane brought in five U.S. Army UH-60 Blackhawk helicopters and 73 Navy, Army and Air Force personnel — mostly Blackhawk flight crews and medical teams.

Army Lt. Col. Tom Ellzey, 40, of St. Augustine, Fla., said the Blackhawks will be used first to survey the cyclone-hit area and then to ferry material. Ellzey said the soldiers had been told they would be here at least three weeks.

Among the material to be transported by the American task force is 55,000 tons of wheat provided by CARE, a U.S.-based international relief organization.

The United States has provided $7.2 million in emergency cyclone aid, but the U.S. Embassy channels funds and distribution through non-profit groups such as CARE, one of the most active organizations in the cyclone-devastated area.

As the misery continued in the southeast, more bad weather struck other parts of Bangladesh. High wind warnings were issued, but none of the new storms and floods approached the intensity of the killer cyclone.

done to save lives," Baker said. "It is our desire to see United States forces removed from northern Iraq just as soon as we can do so — with due regard for the safety of the Kurdish population and due regard for the safety of international humanitarian relief workers."

Baker added: "It is very important, in our view, that the United Nations and other international relief agencies come into northern Iraq and pick up the responsibility for humanitarian relief and for the Kurdish population."

On another subject, Baker seemed skeptical that a U.S.-Soviet summit meeting could be held by midsummer.

Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev would like the Moscow meeting held by then, Baker said. But he said setting a date depends on progress on implementing a treaty to cut non-nuclear weapons in Europe and another accord to reduce long-range nuclear missiles.

Baker's meetings today and Sunday with Bessmertnykh were designed to show Israel and the Arabs that the two superpowers want them to negotiate peace terms.

Baker acknowledged that "there is significant difference of opinion" between Syria and Israel on whether the United Nations should participate in peace talks — and to what extent.

In the 1600 meters, the battle between Hanks and Elizabeth Silva of LaVilla never materialized. Silva finished fourth. "She took the lead into second lap and then she ran on her own."

Hanks will continue her track career at Abilene Christian University.

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Corey Pavin parried the second hole of a sudden-death playoff to beat former UCLA teammate Steve Pate in the Atlanta Classic on Sunday.

Pavin and Pate finished regulation with 16-under-par 272 totals on the rain-soaked Atlanta Country Club course and each parred the first playoff hole — the 10th. Pate bogeyed the 206-yard, par-3 16th after hitting his tee shot into a bunker.

Blazers take narrow win over Jazz

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

For seven minutes in the fourth quarter, Portland and Utah were separated by the smallest of margins.

By the time it was over, the Trail Blazers' lead in the Western Conference semifinal series was a substantial 3-1.

Portland pulled ahead 56-39 in the first half and still led 82-68 going into the fourth quarter before the Jazz started the final period with a 17-2 run for an 85-84 lead with 6:54 left.

That was the first of 18 lead changes as neither team led by more than a point from the 7:21 mark until Terry Porter's two free throws with 13 seconds to go completed the scoring in the Trail Blazers' 104-101 victory.

Clyde Drexler, who had 15 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists and is averaging a triple-double in the series, gave Portland the lead for good at 102-101 on a 20-footer with 36 seconds left.

Detroit, trailing Boston 2-1, plays host to the Celtics in tonight's only game. The other three series resume Tuesday night with Game 5 in Chicago, Portland and Inglewood, Calif.

Kevin Duckworth, who went into the game averaging 10.8 points in the playoffs, scored 10 of his 30 points in the fourth period for the Trail Blazers, while Porter had 20 points.

Karl Malone had 31 points and 12 rebounds and Jeff Malone 23 points for the Jazz. Karl Malone gave Utah its last lead at 101-100 with 43 seconds remaining.

Drexler's 20-footer with 36 seconds left put Portland in front for good. A few seconds later, he intercepted Karl Malone's pass inside to Thurl Bailey, setting up Porter's free throws that snapped the seven-minute stretch in which neither team led by more than a point.

After Porter's free throws, John Stockton missed a 3-pointer that Bailey rebounded for Utah with six seconds left. Karl Malone missed another 3-point attempt at the buzzer.

Stockton finished with 12 points and 16 assists.

Bulls 101, 76ers 85

Chicago won at the Spectrum by holding Philadelphia to 37 percent shooting in the first half, when the Bulls opened a 52-38 lead.

Horace Grant had 22 points and 11 rebounds, and it was his 13 points and six offensive rebounds in the first half that set the tone for the Bulls, who never led by less than 10 in the second half.

Michael Jordan had 25 points and 12 assists, while Scottie Pippen had 20 points and nine rebounds for Chicago, trying to reach the Eastern Conference finals for the third consecutive year.

Jordan was just 11-for-27 from the field, but he held Hersey Hawkins, the 76ers' best perimeter shooter, to 15 points on 3-for-8 shooting. Hawkins scored 29 points in Philadelphia's Game 3 victory, including a game-winning 3-pointer.

The 76ers, whose 85 points were their lowest in the playoffs since May 21, 1982, when they lost to Boston 88-75, were led by Charles Barkley with 25 points and 14 rebounds.

Lakers 123, Warriors 107

Sam Perkins scored 27 points on 10-for-13 shooting as Los Angeles pulled within a victory of its ninth appearance in 10 Western Conference finals with its second win at Golden State.

The Lakers used a 16-3 spurt, including 11 consecutive points, early in the fourth quarter to extend a six-point lead to 107-88 with 7:39 remaining.

Byron Scott had 21 points and a career-high 11 rebounds and Magic Johnson had 21 points and 11 assists for the Lakers.

Stage set for Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Motivation was real hard to come by for four drivers who once were psyched for a run at the Indianapolis 500 pole.

Gary Bettenhausen, Arie Luyendyk, Emerson Fittipaldi and Kevin Cogan will start the May 26 race in the middle of the 33-car field, thanks to the unpredictability of the Indiana weather and the gambler's instincts of their car owners.

The four drivers qualified on Sunday after each saw his chance at the pole position, or at least a start near the front of the field, washed away in the rain that closed the Indianapolis Motor Speedway track 90 minutes early on Saturday, the first of four days of time trials.

Rick Mears, Fittipaldi's Penske Racing teammate, took a big risk and ran his four-lap, 10-mile qualifying run in the middle of Saturday afternoon and in the worst heat of the day.

He was rewarded with a speed of 224.113 mph and his sixth pole start — breaking his own record — in the world's richest and most prestigious auto race.

The quartet of gamblers chose to wait for what they hoped would be a cooler and faster track in the late afternoon. Instead, they watched the rain fall and had to settle for positions in the fifth and sixth row — behind the 12 drivers who qualified on Saturday.

Bettenhausen, a second-generation Indy-car driver whose father was killed on this track in a practice session exactly 30 years earlier, went out Sunday and bettered Mears with a speed of 224.468. It marked the first time since 1981 that the fastest qualifier was not the pole winner.

Luyendyk, the defending race champion, was next on Sunday at 223.881, followed by Fittipaldi, the 1989 race winner, at 223.064, and Cogan, Bettenhausen's teammate, at 222.844.

Those speeds were ranked third through sixth among the total of 22 qualifiers over the first two days of time trials, all faster than the 222.443 by A.J. Foyt on Saturday that put the 56-year-old racer in the middle of the front row for his record 34th consecutive start.

"It was a real shame for everybody," Cogan said. "It was shaping up to be a real gunfight at 5 o'clock (Saturday) between Emerson, myself and Arie, and Gary, of course. There were four or five of us that had a real shot at the pole. ... the weather caught us."

Fittipaldi, who last year set one- and four-lap qualifying records of 225.575 and 225.301, respectively, said, "At first, I was ready to go after Rick qualified, and then Roger (team owner Roger Penske) came back and said, 'No, no, you don't go now, you go back.' I ask, 'Why, why, what I do wrong?' It was a very difficult experience for me."

Luyendyk was just as disappointed, saying, "We gambled. ... We knew we'd get in the field and we thought we could get in the first two rows. The gamble didn't pay off. We spoke to some pilots and they said it wouldn't rain. I think Vince (team co-owner Vince Granatelli) is looking for a new pilot."

Bettenhausen has the most mixed emotions of the quartet after winning $20,000 for leading second-day qualifications.

Bettenhausen said he and team owner John Menard decided that the driver would go out Saturday afternoon, about 2½ hours after Mears qualified, and see if track conditions were good enough to qualify. He drove one warmup lap at 3:25 p.m. and came in.

That silly game means some very fast cars will be trying to get to the front in a hurry when the race starts.

"The fifth row is fast ... it will make for a special race," Fittipaldi said. "There will be heavy traffic and a lot of competition. The way the cars are this year, they are more difficult to run through the traffic. I have much more pressure to be starting where I am ... working with the fifth row will be difficult."

Cogan said, "The guys who are in rows five and six who are faster are all pretty talented guys, so I don't think they're going to do anything wrong. But the problem you're going to have is if anything happens in front of us, we're all going to be trucking pretty fast. So, if anything happens, it will be hard to avoid."

Stanton runner hits state daily double

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ Staff Writer

STANTON — Sophomore Jeremy Stallings captured a first in the 800 and 1,600 meter runs to take home two gold medals to become the third Stanton trackster to win two events at the state track and field meet.

Stallings went into Memorial Stadium in Austin sporting one of the best times in the metric half-mile. He recently flew past Abilene's Alex Holland last weekend in Abilene at the state qualifier's meet to hand Holland his first loss of the year, while preparing for the state meet.

"At the state qualifiers meet, Coach (Dale) Ruth didn't let me run in the mile, so I could concentrate on the 800 and I think that helped me prepare for the state meet. And that helped me mentally, as well," Stallings said.

And helped it did, Stallings won the 800 meter run by edging out last year's champion, Fred Yarbough of Timpson. He stretched out the win with a 1:54, while Yarbough crossed the line at 1:54.7.

"I was real nervous before the race, but I knew I could win if I ran my race. So I went out there to do just that and I my first lap was 56 seconds," said Stallings. "I was behind Yarbough at the final curve and I was waiting for him to kick because of what happened last year. But this year I'm stronger and I out-kicked him."

"Jeremy ran a perfect race," said Ruth. "He stayed in the pack all the way until they passed the first lap. The Timpson kid (Yarbough) jumped into the lead and stayed there looking to win, but about the 300 meter mark, Jeremy began to kick and he just outran and outsmarted him, but it was close."

In his second event of the night, Stallings felt most of the pressure was off for the 1600.

"I felt very relaxed after the 800 run, because I knew I had at least one gold medal to take home, but I thinking, in the back of my mind, let's go for two," he said.

Being a darkhorse in the 1,600 meter run, Stallings admitted he was confident in the 800, but not in the four-lap race. "The 800 is my race and I knew I could do it, but the mile was a different story. So, I just went out there relaxed, then all of a sudden my body went numb and I began to feel stronger and my adrenaline was flowing and I saw a chance to win twice.

And win he did, not only did he win the mile run, but also broke his dad Steve's old mark of 4:24.6. His dad, the AA state champion in 1970 in the mile saw his twenty-one year time broke by his son who ran a 4:24.2.

"It's very ironic, because Jeremy ran almost the same time as his dad did, and won in the same fashion too," said Jimmy Stallings, Jeremy's grandfather.

Local resident, Connie (Christon) Pardue felt the excitement of what Jeremy went through. In 1975, the Buffalos had the first double in the SHS history. Pardue placed first in the 100 and 200-yard runs to become one of the elite group with times of 11.01 and 25.10, respectively.

"I felt and I knew what Jeremy was going through. It's a feeling, at whatever age one is, you can never forget. His trip to Austin brought back butterflies in my stomach just if I was running too. I'm proud of him for winning a double, it's an awesome feeling," Christon-Pardue said.

"I saw Jeremy running with the Martin County Track Club five years ago, and I could see his potential and he kept up with it, and look what he has accomplished already," she said.

Another Buff to win a double at state, was Louis Henry. He placed first in the 400 meter run and the long jump.

"In 1980, my first year as track coach I had the opportunity to take my first kid to the state track meet. He won the long jump with a 22-7 jump and the quarter with a 48.20 time," Ruth said.

"I knew when I saw Jeremy run for the first time he had potential, but I never knew he could do it as a sophomore. I was expecting him to flourish as a junior or senior," said Ruth. "One thing I know about kids you can coach them, but after coaching they set their own goals, and Jeremy wanted it bad and he got it. That's one thing a coach cannot do, the runner has to do it for himself," Ruth said.

There's no vacation for Jeremy. "I'll be running in the summer trying to stay in shape," he said. "I'll probably run in the TAC (Texas Athletic Congress) national meet, but right now I'm just going to finish out this year in school."

Surprising Braves remain in first

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The first-place Atlanta Braves would rather be the team doing the chasing. Even as early as May 12, the Braves find themselves in the unfamiliar territory of first place in the National League West following Sunday's 6-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates at Three Rivers Stadium. The Braves lead Cincinnati and Los Angeles by one game. Ron Gant and Dave Justice hit two-run homers and Steve Avery pitched six strong innings against Pittsburgh. Avery (4-1) allowed four hits and an unearned run over six innings in leading the Braves to their seventh victory in nine games. Last year, the Braves lost 97 games and finished last for the third straight season and the fourth time in five years. Gant, whose homer in the eighth inning gave Atlanta a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh on Saturday night, followed Otis Nixon's leadoff single in the first with his second two-run shot in as many at-bats. Cardinals 7, Astros 3 Ozzie Smith's two-run single highlighted St. Louis' five-run eighth inning as the Cardinals defeated the Astros. Cris Carpenter (4-1) pitched the bottom of the seventh for the victory, striking out the side. Al Osuna (1-1) gave up two runs and two hits without getting an out in the eighth. Dwayne Henry, in relief of Osuna, walked pinch-hitter Gerald Perry with the bases loaded to force in the tie-breaking run. A sacrifice fly by Rex Hudler made it 4-2 before Smith's single drove in two more. Pedro Guerrero's RBI single finished the scoring in the inning, giving the Cardinals an insurmountable 7-2 lead.

Reds 5, Cubs 3 Mariano Duncan's two-run triple off Greg Maddux (4-2) snapped an eighth-inning tie to lift Cincinnati over Chicago at Wrigley Field. Jack Armstrong (3-1) gave up seven hits and three runs in seven innings for the victory. Rob Dibble finished for his eighth save, striking out three. Expos 8, Padres 6 Tim Wallach had four hits and drove in three runs as visiting Montreal rallied for four runs in the eighth inning to beat San Diego for its sixth straight victory. The Padres have lost five in a row. Phillies 7, Dodgers 3 Jose DeJesus won for the first time this season despite walking eight batters in five innings as Philadelphia used a five-run first inning to beat Los Angeles. Eight of the first nine Philadelphia batters got hits off

Tim Belcher (3-4) and reliever Tim Crews. Mets 4, Giants 2 Dave Magadan delivered a run-scoring single with two outs in the National League

11th inning off Dave Righetti as New York survived 16 left on base to beat San Francisco at Candlestick Park. The last-place Giants have lost 10 of their last 12 games, including two of three over the weekend to New York. Tom Herr opened the 11th with a walk from Righetti (2-1) and stole second base with two outs. Kevin McReynolds was intentionally walked and Magadan and rookie Chris Donnels followed with RBI singles.

Yankees give rude treatment to 'X Man'

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

For a team in first place, it sure was a rough weekend for the Oakland Athletics. First, they lost ace Dave Stewart to the disabled list on Friday. Then they lost to the New York Yankees for the first time since 1989. On Sunday, it didn't get any better for the Athletics. They lost to the Yankees 10-6, and again Dennis Eckersley didn't do his job. Eckersley, making a rare appearance with the Athletics behind, gave up a three-run homer to Matt Nokes in the eighth inning as the Yankees broke it open. Eckersley allowed only two home runs in 73 1-3 innings last season, but has been tagged for four homers in 14 innings this year. Here's more: Eckersley gave up only one earned run on the road last year in compiling a 0.61 ERA. Nokes' homer at Yankee Stadium pushed Eckersley's ERA to 4.50. At least one thing is still the same for Eckersley — he hasn't walked anyone in 14 innings this season. Rangers 12, Red Sox 5 Ruben Sierra homered in the first inning and hit a pair of RBI singles during a nine-run fourth inning as Texas had fun at Fenway Park. The Rangers got a season-high 19 hits. They tied a team record with nine hits in the fourth against Greg Harris (1-4) and Dennis Lamp. Rafael Palmeiro doubled and singled and Geno Petralli hit a three-run double in the big inning. Texas stopped a four-game losing streak and ended Boston's four-game winning streak. Kenny Rogers (2-3) breezed with the big lead. He pitched eight innings and gave up 12 hits, including Steve Lyons' two-run homer. Mariners 5, Orioles 4 Edgar Martinez and Pete O'Brien singled home runs in the eighth inning as Seattle rallied to win at home. Harold Reynolds singled with one out off Gregg Olson (0-1) and Ken Griffey Jr. walked. Martinez singled with two outs to tie it at 4 and O'Brien followed with the go-ahead single. Indians 4, Angels 1 Tom Candiotti pitched a three-hitter as Cleveland ended its four-game winning streak. The Indians won for only the second time in nine home games this season. Blue Jays 4, White Sox 2 Ed Sprague hit a pair of RBI singles and Jimmy Key pitched seven strong innings in Toronto. The Blue Jays won three times in the four-game series. Chicago has lost eight of 11. Twins 8, Tigers 3 Chili Davis homered twice and drove in four runs, helping Scott Erickson win his fifth straight game. Rookie Chuck Knoblauch had four of Minnesota's season-high 16 hits. The Twins won their third straight game and improved to 16-15, the first time they've been above .500 since June 14, 1990. Cecil Fielder led off the Detroit ninth with his fifth home run against Larry Casian. Travis Fryman homered for the third straight game, a two-run shot, later in the inning. Sabatini defeats world's top player

ROME (AP) — Gabriela Sabatini has used the Italian Open to move a little closer to the No. 1 ranking in women's tennis. Boris Becker wants to use the Italian Open to return to the top spot among the men. Boris Becker is looking for his first major clay court title and a chance to inch closer to the No. 1 ranking as the men move into the Foro Italico today for the Italian Open. Becker will be seeking his first clay court title as the men move into the Foro Italico today for a one-week stay. The three-time Wimbledon champion heads the 54-player men's field that also includes Andre Agassi, Pete Sampras, Goran Ivanisevic, Sergio Bruguera and Jim Courier. The top opening-day matches include eighth-seeded American Brad Gilbert against Mark Woodforde of Australia, No. 11 Andrei Cherkasov of the Soviet Union against Austria's Alex Antonitsch, and another Soviet, 15th-seeded Alexander Volkov, against Jan Siemerink of the Netherlands. A persistent rainfall over the past week marred the women's Open that ended Sunday with Sabatini defeating the world's top-ranked woman, Monica Seles, 6-3, 6-2. With Sabatini leading the 17-year-old Yugoslav 5-3 in the opening set, the match was delayed by rain for 1 hour and 25 minutes. When the players returned to the court, Sabatini ran out the set and the first three games of the second set. Seles said she has to expect such conditions on European clay courts. "but I didn't expect the court to be that slow after the rain delay." Becker, ranked No. 2 on the men's tour, has been preparing for the French Open, a Grand Slam event played on clay, by entering Monte Carlo and now Rome. He is pursuing Stefan Edberg, who is not entered in Rome, for the No. 1 spot, a position he held briefly after capturing the Australian Open in January. The red-haired German reached the final in Monte Carlo, losing to Bruguera, a clay court specialist from Spain, and may find things tougher for his power game here. The Foro Italico courts can take the sting out of the best of a big service even under ideal conditions. Agassi's baseline game is more suited to the court conditions. The American, seeded second behind Becker, reached the final two years ago, losing to Alberto Mancini of Argentina in five sets.

A state tennis title for Hagins

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ Staff Writer

STANTON — Stanton resident, Angela Hagins has been very busy this past year at Midland Christian High School. She not only is an advanced honors student and cheerleader for the Mustangs, she was also starting guard for the MCHS varsity basketball team and state doubles champ in tennis. Hagins began the tennis season as the number two singles player for MCHS Jill Fuller. After successfully playing in tournaments at Odessa, Hobbs N.M. and Lubbock, Mustang Coach Lesa Emmert suggested that Fuller and Hagins team up as a strong doubles team a week before district. Being in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools (TAPPS), the duo began district eight competition by soundly defeating Lynn Hoffman and Helen Catterall of Abilene Christian 6-1, 6-0. In the district finals, Hagins and Fuller captured the district title by hitting past teammates Crystal Sullins and Shana Larance 6-3, 6-1 to qualify to the state tournament in Waco. In the first round of the state tournament, Hagins-Fuller drew the doubles team of Cooper-Huolbig of Briarwood School and had no trouble advancing with a 6-1, 6-0 win. After a rain-delay till the next day, the duo began their quest for the state title pitted against the second seeded team in the tourney. The team of Klotche-Dunkin of Lakehill Preparatory School in Dallas challenged the Mustang doubles team, but were no match as Hagins and Fuller won in straight sets 7-6, 6-3 to advance to the state finals. In their final match, Hagins-Fuller managed to take the first set from Gidcomb-Woolridge, the number one seeded team in the tourney, 6-3. Leading 3-0 in the second set, the MCHS duo began to lose their momentum and the favorite doubles team made a comeback to lead 5-3. Bad weather forced the match to be stopped until the following day. Lakehill won the first game of the resumed match to tie the score at one set each. The Lady Mustangs began to put everything together and took control of the final set to win the match with a 6-2 victory. Hagins-Fuller became the Class AAA state champions in the TAPPS competition and also scored enough points to capture a first-place team trophy as well as the doubles top honors title.

The Gorillas will invade Big Spring

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

When it isn't munching on African plants, swinging from tree limbs or pounding its chest, what does a gorilla do? Who knows. But if a group of local volunteers has its way, a bunch of Big Spring gorillas are going to get together and play beach volleyball. Two tournaments — three-person Gorilla Volleyball and six-person standard volleyball — will take place June 1 and 2 during Heart of the City Festival downtown. All proceeds will benefit Rape Crisis/Victim Services, a non-profit organization that aids victims of violent crime. Coordinator Nigel James said the project's goals are having fun and raising awareness of RC/VS's work. "We started in this because the game was a lot of fun, and we had a good time playing last year," he said. "But once you work with this organization, you realize they really do a service. They're definitely a worthy cause." Rape Crisis/Victim Services, founded eight years ago by local residents Gail Earls, Mary Kenny and Cecilia McKenzie, serves crime victims in five local counties. Volunteers and a small staff help the victimized regain confidence with counseling and other forms of assistance, said Director Lisa Brooks. "Most people don't think about us unless they've been faced with some sort of victimization," she said. "The average person just doesn't think they're going to need us." Gorilla Volleyball is the agency's only official fundraiser. Its work is financed primarily through federal and state grants as well as money from the city of Big Spring and Howard County. Benefit volunteer Bob McKaig has designed a guaranteed-two-games tournament set to extend over both festival days. Teams need to sign up as a group, and include fees of $30 for gorilla volleyball or $60 for standard.

Gorilla Volleyball, originated locally by former benefit coordinator Vicki Jernigan, varies only slightly from the standard variety, McKaig explained. "It's really a slang term for beach volleyball, with less regulation rules," he said. "It's not really technical as far as what kind of hits are allowed, that kind of thing." Because the tourney takes place in West Texas, don't count on much tree-swinging, but chest pounding is more likely. Courts will be constructed on two lots in the 200 block of Main, where the burned-out shells of buildings were recently removed. The lots have been prepared for blacktopping by filling them with sand — a beach perfect for a bunch of sportive gorillas. Teams must register by May 24 so McKaig can arrange the bracket to minimize waiting and mix-ups during the tournament. When a team signs up, they should choose a name and team captain. Prizes will be awarded to the winners in both categories.

In its three-year history, Gorilla Volleyball's fame has spread throughout the area. Last year, one team came from Dallas, and many others from Abilene, San Angelo and Midland. To further support RC/VS, the group plans to create a program with tourney listings, information about the agency's work, and advertisements from local businesses. James said administrative costs have been minimal to non-existent, so all advertising profits will go to RC/VS as well. Gorilla-watchers are welcome to bring lawnchairs and spectate, James said. T-shirts with the benefit's own spiking gorilla logo, designed by Dallas artist Walter Horton — a Big Spring native — will be sold at the event. Registration forms are available at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, the Big Spring Main Street caboose and many other local businesses. For registration information, call Heidi Vizcaino at 263-8294.

'Tiny' will be inducted tonight

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Nate Archibald, the little man at 6-foot-1 who always seemed a step ahead of the opposition when he played, has his eye on a larger competition than his induction into the Basketball Hall of Fame. "I'm elated, of course," said Archibald, who has never forgotten his inner-city childhood. He now teaches in the New York City schools and helps run a homeless shelter in Harlem. "But the important thing is that now my guys (from the shelter and the schools) can come here and say, 'If he can make it, I can,'" he said. Also to be installed tonight are Indiana coach Bob Knight and two big men — Dave Cowens, who played most of his career with the Boston Celtics, and Harry Gallatin, who starred for the New York Knicks in the late 1940s and 1950s. "I'm greatly honored," said Gallatin. "After 30 years, it's almost like dying and going to heaven." "I'm still in disbelief," said Cowens. "I wouldn't put myself in the class of the greatest. But I played against a lot of them and tried not to concede anything." Other inductees include former NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien, who died last September, the late Larry Fleisher, who founded the NBA Players Association, and Boris Stankovic, head of the International Basketball Federation. "It's different when a coach is elected," Knight said. "When a coach is honored, it is a recognition of all the kids that played for him." "I'm really pleased for people other than me. Their time was not wasted. Some of the best minds this game has ever known have been close to me. And now they can feel, despite all the trials and tribulations I gave them, that they ... listened after all."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Resolving relationship conflicts this summer will smooth the path to business success as well as true love. Job opportunities open up in a field closely related to your own. Further technical training will boost your earnings. Keep your eye on the ball at work regardless of office politics. The emotional uncertainties of December will disappear early in 1992. New professional recognition next spring will give you a chance to bask in the limelight!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Listen carefully to catch the drift at business meetings. Timing is your secret weapon. A self-improvement program will boost your self-esteem. Short business trips could prove profitable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your ability to move with the times is your strongest asset. Discuss proposed changes with an authority figure. Career matters are under favorable auspices. Put a romantic relationship on hold.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Labor-saving devices will prove wise investments, especially if you work at home. Face-to-face encounters are more productive than faxes or phone conversations.

productivity. Messages could be confused; check them out. A romantic partner may throw you a curve!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): News regarding a friend or family member brings a feeling of relief. Finances could be involved. You find new clues to a puzzle. Your intuition is right on target in personal matters.

Police save young kitten

HOUSTON (AP) — A police officer who rescued a kitty found dangling from a precipice of a highway overpass had a tough time finding a home for the dirty stray among her fellow officers.

Patrol officer Heidi Duscher and another officer were driving through downtown Houston in separate vehicles about midnight Saturday when a man stepped into the street and flagged down both vehicles.

The man pointed at the struggling, wildly meowing kitten that was hanging from its front paws off the two-story Pierce Elevated, a raised section of Interstate 45 through downtown.

"He was really screaming," Ms. Duscher said of the kitty. "I felt really bad for him."

As one patrol unit shined its spotlight on the wailing cinnamon feline, Duscher pulled the cat to safety.

Brits, Iraqis swap fire

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) — As allied forces tried to persuade more Kurds to return home today, British and Iraqi soldiers exchanged gunfire in the "safe haven" zone intended to protect the refugees, British military officials said.

No casualties were reported in the shootout near the northern city of Sirsenk, and there was no word on why Iraqi troops would have been in the area.

However, President Saddam Hussein has several lavish palaces in the picturesque mountain valley near Sirsenk, and under an agreement with the allies a small number of his troops were permitted to stay to guard the villas.

According to the Ministry of Defense in London, the incident occurred at Ayn Shaykh near Sirsenk, where the British Royal Marines have established a field headquarters at an airfield that was being constructed by Saddam.

A British Embassy spokesman in Ankara confirmed the incident but said he could provide no other details.

In other developments today, the United Nations today took nearly 130 tons of wheat and other supplies to a provincial capital controlled by Iraqi forces, as the allies sought to persuade Kurdish refugees to return from mountain camps.

Plans call for U.S. and other allied troops to eventually leave the area, turning over the entire relief effort to the United Nations and other agencies. Who will protect the Kurds after the allies go, however, worries the refugees.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III today asked the Soviet Union for support in authorizing a U.N. police force to replace American and other allied troops protecting Kurdish refugees in northern Iraq.

But Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh, who met Baker in Cairo today, did not say publicly whether Baker had persuaded him not to block an expected U.S.-backed resolution in the Security Council. Iraq rejected a previous U.N. effort to establish a police force in northern Iraq.

Officials said the repatriation of refugees from the harsh camps on the mountainous Turkish border has continued, and one major settlement that housed 100,000 refugees is nearly empty.

Yet Kurdish leaders representing the people of the provincial capital, Dohuk, on Sunday frustrated efforts to speed the repatriation by deeming inadequate a U.S.-brokered security agreement in the city.

Double gold

Baker seeking Soviet support

CAIRO (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III today asked the Soviet Union for support in authorizing a U.N. police force to replace American and other allied troops who are protecting Kurdish refugees in northern Iraq.

But Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh did not say publicly whether Baker had persuaded him not to block an expected U.S.-backed resolution in the Security Council.

"A thin line separates the necessity for humanitarian support and the concern for the sovereignty of countries," Bessmertnykh told reporters. "It is a very intricate balance."

Baker took up the problem and other issues, including arms control, in a two-hour meeting here with Bessmertnykh devoted mostly to trying to arrange a Middle East peace conference.

Syria's refusal to budge on two key issues — and the likelihood Israel will resist as well — could spell failure for Baker as he tries to set up peace negotiations.

The Soviets could play a pivotal role through their ties to Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization, which remains instrumental in choosing Palestinian delegates.

The United States, meanwhile, needs the support of the Soviet Union and China before the 3,286

American and 4,865 British, French and other allied troops can withdraw from northern Iraq.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein notified President Bush last week through U.N. Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar that he would not accept a U.N. police force.

As a result, the United States, Britain and France are expected to ask the Security Council to authorize a U.N. force over Saddam's objections.

But the Soviet Union and China could kill the move with a veto.

Baker, at a joint news conference with Bessmertnykh outside the Soviet Embassy, stressed the plight of the Kurdish refugees and also the relief workers assisting them.

"I told the minister that the United States stepped into the breach in this connection because we did not feel that anyone was in the position to do what had to be done to save lives," Baker said.

"It is our desire to see United States forces removed from northern Iraq just as soon as we can do so — with due regard for the safety of the Kurdish population and due regard for the safety of international humanitarian relief workers."

Baker added: "It is very important, in our view, that the United States and China be clear that the United States is committed to a policy of peace."

Troops join cyclone relief efforts

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — The first wave of U.S. troops to join the battle against disease and starvation in cyclone-devastated Bangladesh today scouted out possible sites along the sea coast for water purification units.

Also, a giant U.S. Air Force C-5 Galaxy transport plane landed in Dhaka today with five badly needed helicopters that will be used to ferry supplies to storm survivors.

Millions of people are threatened by sickness, hunger and exposure following the April 30 cyclone that killed more than 139,000 people, many of whom lived on low-lying islands and in coastal villages along the Bay of Bengal.

The first advance teams for the American military task force arrived in Dhaka on Sunday, and 170 soldiers had arrived by tonight, about equally drawn from the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marines.

Altogether, more than 12,000 U.S. troops — including Persian Gulf War veterans — are to contribute to the international effort to save storm survivors.

Most were expected to arrive by sea Wednesday or soon after aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Tarawa and the seven other vessels accompanying it. The Marines on the Tarawa had been headed for to Camp Pendleton in California when they were diverted to help with the relief effort.

cyclone victims Monday. The U.S. is sending forces from the Persian Gulf to help in the cyclone relief effort.

Some of the most useful equipment coming with this group is likely to be hovercraft that can scoot over the swamped shores of the Bay of Bengal. "The workhorse is going to be air-cushioned vehicles — otherwise known as hovercraft," Navy Lt.

Cmdr. Pete Godbey said while he waited for the C-5 Galaxy to arrive. "It can go right over the mud flats."

Premature baby snatched from Las Cruces hospital

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — The abduction of a premature infant last week from a hospital nursery may have been the work of a professional baby-snatcher, the president of Memorial Medical Center said.

"This is not a totally isolated situation," Bill Webster said at a news conference Sunday. "This does happen nationally. Hospitals are being the targets of these baby snatchers. Unfortunately, we have become a part of that."

The child's mother, Sandra Chavez, issued a tearful Mother's Day appeal for the return of the boy — or at least for word of him. "I want my son back," Mrs. Chavez said at the news conference. "I would like to hear how he's doing, if he's OK. I just want him to be in good health."

The baby was taken from a bassinets in the hospital nursery around 6:30 a.m. Friday by a woman posing as a medical student, police said.

The woman, believed to be in her mid-40s, claimed to be a University of New Mexico intern. She allegedly took the baby during rounds by medical residents at the nursery.

Mrs. Chavez, who wept during the news conference, said she believes her son is in good hands because "the lady who's taking care of him knows the procedures of a nurse."

The missing boy, Kevin, and twin Christopher are the first children born to Sandra and Jerry Chavez of Las Cruces.

The 5-pound baby was delivered by Caesarean section Thursday and needs medical attention. Police Sgt. Joel Cino said the baby suffered from a low glucose level and must be fed every three hours.

Jerry Chavez, 23, said: "Everybody's praying real hard. Today is a special day. It is Mother's Day, and the lady, the person who has our baby — it would make us feel a lot better if we had our baby, or even a phone call to let us know our baby is OK."

Richards signs UTPB legislation

ODESSA (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards says an expanded University of Texas-Permian Basin means an investment in economic security for the whole state.

Richards signed legislation Sunday to make UTPB a four-year school.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa. Freshmen and sophomores will enroll in the fall to join the 2,000 students now attending the upper-level university.

Richards told a crowd of more than 500 at the UT-Permian Basin courtyard the oil-rich region has contributed significantly to the Texas economy.

But now it is time to diversify the Texas economy to ensure stability when the price of oil may fluctuate, said Richards.

"I want to be known as the education governor," Richards said. "I also want to be known as the governor of economic diversification."

Richards signed House Bill 277 with the same pen used to sign a bill to charter the university in 1969.

Queen to visit Texas

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Local historian Henry Guerra has been given five minutes or less to explain the history of the Alamo to Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, Prince Phillip.

That's going to be a tough assignment for Guerra on May 21 when he gives the royal couple a rapid tour of the Shrine of Texas Liberty.

The Alamo is to be the royal couple's first stop on a 1-hour 45 minute tour of the city, which is to include a barge ride on the river and a quick visit to the Institute of Texan Cultures.

Guerra said he planned to mention the 29 British subjects who fought at the Alamo, but he won't have much time for an in-depth history lesson.

"I've got five minutes to do it all, and they haven't told me how much ground they want me to cover," said Guerra, chairman of the Bexar County Historical Commission. "So, I'll just give her the essentials of the story of the Alamo without too much embellishment because we just don't have time."

Residents petition to keep Carswell

Officials with the Base Closure and Realignment Commission in Washington say more than 500 letters of support for Carswell have poured in, reportedly the highest volume of mail from communities whose bases have been targeted for closure by the Pentagon.

Bees dealing destruction in Mexico

HOUSTON (AP) — The aggressive Africanized honeybees have dealt death to the honey industry and even some people in southern Mexico, where beekeepers complain the Mexican government has written them off.

Leonardo Gomez Perez, a 70-year-old widower, was stung to death by thousands of Africanized honeybees, often called killer bees. The bees were provoked by Perez's machete slicing into their hive in a grove of coffee trees. He died in a Tapachula hospital 11 hours later.

"When I got there, some of the bees were on my father, and some were flying, looking for someone else to attack," his son, Porfirio Gomez Perez, told the Houston Chronicle in a report from Santa Rita, Mexico.

"So I picked him up. But I was being attacked and there was nothing I could do but flee and leave him there, abandoned. I ran to the river," he said.

Leonardo Gomez became the 46th person to die in Mexico of bee stings since 1986, when swarms of so-called killer bees entered Chiapas, the southernmost state that shares a border with Guatemala.

In Chiapas, the bees have killed nine people — more than any other state — and caused considerable economic loss, destroying the honey bee industry and introducing a breed of bee impossible to manage.

"We had absolutely no knowledge about the bees," Gomez said. "We had heard they were dangerous, but we didn't know if they had arrived up here."

The Africanized bees have been on a slow northern trek since escaping from a Brazilian laboratory in 1957. A swarm of the aggressive bees was first spotted in South Texas last October and several more were recently trapped.

Texas' nine southernmost counties have been quarantined since the bees were first spotted last year. The quarantine bars the movement of any bees from the area.

Experts say the Africanized bees spotted in Texas are "pioneer swarms," with the main front remaining in Mexico, about 75 miles south of the border.

Ermilio Galvez Monson, 72, told the Chronicle that his home has been repeatedly visited by the Africanized bees.

"My wife was contemplating making a hive for them. She was getting a box ready. I told her, 'Yes, you'll have them and one day they'll come out and get you.'"

"We can't go near them," said Sabino Mejia Perez. "They've been here a year, and when they come out, they come out in a huge ball," Mejia said.

Mexican beekeepers say that Chiapas was written off by the Mexican government, which instead is concentrating efforts to combat Africanized bees in the Yucatan peninsula, the source of 40 percent of Mexico's honey production, and in other states.

"Right now, the beekeeping industry here is completely abandoned," said Francisco Choy Hernandez, president of the Tapachula Beekeeping Association.

Choy said the number of hives has been cut more than 50 percent, from 28,000 hives in 1985, the year before the Africanized bees arrived in Mexico, to 10,500 hives in 1990.

Capt. Feliciano Godines, of the Tapachula Fire Corps, says his personnel quit responding to public calls to remove swarms of Africanized bees because the government won't help with expenses.

"We used to help, but eventually they left it all up to us, so we retired from the job. I mean, they won't even help us with gasoline," Godines said.

"Today, we send the public to SARH," the Mexican agriculture department, he said. "They used to have a telephone and they took it out — that should tell you everything."

Vigil

WASHINGTON — Martha Boswell of Houston, the mother of a Houston police officer who was killed in the line of duty, cries during the third annual candlelight vigil for the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund Sunday night.

Man killed by trooper

ZAPATA (AP) — Department of Public Safety officials are continuing their investigation of a weekend incident in which a trooper fatally shot a man after he reportedly drew a weapon on the officer.

Olegario Mario Villarreal, 49, of Zapata, was pronounced dead Saturday night at a Zapata hospital, said DPS spokesman David Wells.

Villarreal had been stopped about 10:40 p.m. on U.S. 83, about 2 miles south of San Ygnacio, after trooper John Reed spotted the car swerving in the road, Wells said.

Wells said when Villarreal resisted arrest, Reed returned to his patrol unit to call for assistance. Villarreal came toward Reed, aiming a .22-caliber Magnum pistol at the trooper, Wells said.

"After he pointed it (the gun) at the trooper, the trooper quickly ... drew his revolver and fired at that time," Wells said.

Police: Attack staged

HOUSTON (AP) — Police believe residents in drug and gang infested areas are trying to capitalize on anti-police feelings, inciting groups to attack cops and making them afraid to patrol dangerous areas alone.

"The drug dealers are trying to keep us from providing ... services, but they will not prevail," Police Chief Elizabeth Watson said. "We hope to gain control, but to do that, we have to concentrate our efforts."

Watson said her officers were using "extreme restraint" following violent attacks on lone police officers in the city's Fourth Ward this month. The attacks coincide with the shootings of suspects by police May 3. One of those shootings killed an unarmed man. Officers say they have been ordered not to enter the area, less than a mile west of downtown, without backup.

The precautions were ordered after Officer J.R. D'Eugenio was attacked by up to 100 people May 4 while trying to arrest a man who appeared intoxicated.

As the two struggled, D'Eugenio said he noticed he was being videotaped. Moments later, he said, his patrol car was battered by the crowd and he was shot at.

"I think what they wanted me to do was the Rodney King situation," he said, referring to the videotaped beating of a black motorist by Los Angeles police March 3. "I was going to get out there, hit this guy, beat him up, they were going to film it and they were going to start another racial thing with the police department."

D'Eugenio told the Houston Chronicle the incident began about 2 a.m., when the man ran out in front of his patrol car.

Realizing the man was drunk, he told the man he would have to go to jail. The man refused, turned around, and pushed D'Eugenio back, the officer said.

"At that time, I notice another (man) standing behind me with a video camera, filming the whole thing. It was an obvious set-up."

D'Eugenio said moments later, bottles and rocks rained down on the patrol car, and he said he heard four or five shots before he drove away.

Lifestyle

Make it easy for them to ask you

DEAR ABBY: I hope that by printing this letter it will make other parents do some serious thinking about their relationships with their teens.

My neighbor's 17-year-old daughter and the daughter's 16-year-old girlfriend spent two hours talking to me about boys and sex. The 17-year-old is thinking about having sex with her boyfriend. While I certainly did not encourage it, I did talk openly about safe-sex practices and birth control. I also explained why it would be better if she waited until she is older and more mature.

What bothers me the most is, why aren't these girls talking to their own mothers? The girls are friends of my teen-aged sons — that is how they know me.

Abby, it isn't my place to talk to them about these things, but since I'm the only one they trust, I won't betray them. My sons and I are very open with each other, and we discuss everything they have on their minds.

I wish more parents would listen to their kids — even if what the kids say may shock and dismay them. Parents shouldn't judge — they should just be there for their children. —SOMEBODY ELSE'S MOM

DEAR MOM: The neighbors' kids are talking to you because they are not comfortable talking to their own moms (or dads). How lucky for them that you are there for them. Unfortunately, not all parents are comfortable talking to their teens about safe-sex practices and birth control. Some may even resent the fact that their children are getting information from a neighbor (you) that they, their own parents, would be reluctant to give them.

I say, if kids ask — they are old enough to know. What our children don't know can hurt them.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you for advice about a dilemma that I never thought would happen to me. Several months ago, I asked a girl to attend the high school prom with me. She didn't say yes, but she didn't say no either. A couple of weeks later, I asked her again, and she was very evasive. Tired of her games, I asked another girl and she said yes right away. When the first girl found out that I had asked someone else to the prom, she became moody and distant. Then I found out through the grapevine that she had bought a prom dress on the assumption that she was going with me.

I have no sympathy for her. Her indefinite replies left me second-guessing, so I asked somebody else. Now several people seem to think that I am at fault. The way I see it, since I asked her twice without getting a definite response, I think I should be allowed to ask somebody else. Am I right? —SELF-DEFENSE

DEAR SELF-DEFENSE: You are absolutely right, beyond a shadow of a doubt!

Baker

Nations and other international relief agencies come into northern Iraq and pick up the responsibility for humanitarian relief and for the Kurdish population.

On another subject, Baker seemed skeptical that a U.S.-Soviet summit meeting could be held by midsummer.

Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev would like the Moscow meeting held by then, Baker said. But he said setting a date depends on progress on implementing a treaty to cut nuclear weapons in Europe and another accord to reduce long-range nuclear missiles.

Baker's meetings today and Sunday with Bessmertnykh were designed to show Israel and the Arabs that the two superpowers want them to negotiate peace terms.

Baker acknowledged that "there is significant difference of opinion" between Syria and Israel on whether the United Nations should participate in peace talks — and to what extent.

He told reporters "there are a number of issues with respect to which there seems to be agreement between the parties — far more issues with respect to which there is agreement than there are issues with respect to which there is not yet agreement."

But Syrian President Hafez Assad told Baker in Damascus he still wants the United Nations to play a role in the negotiations and that he wants the United States and

Soybean prices projected to remain low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soybean farmers may see more of the same in the coming year as U.S. supplies remain about the same and prices continue to be muffled by huge global oilseed inventories.

Last week the Agriculture Department issued its first "projections" of 1991 crop production, along with some supply-and-demand analysis of what might be ahead for markets and producers.

Projections are based mostly on yield trends, economic analysis and assumptions of normal weather during the crop year.

The projections were said to be "highly tentative" and will be made obsolete in August when USDA issues its first official estimates of 1991 production of soybeans and other fall-harvested crops.

Meanwhile, the report projected the average farm prices of soybeans in the 1991-92 marketing year that will begin Sept. 1 at $4.75 to $6.25 per bushel. The midpoint of that range is $5.50 per bushel.

In the current soybean marketing year, the farm price was indicated at $5.75 per bushel, just a shade above the average of $5.69 reported for 1989-90.

According to USDA records, soybean farmers began the 1980s with an average price of $7.57 per bushel, reflecting a growing export market. Production was stepped up from 1.798 billion bushels in 1980 to 1.969 billion in 1981.

Exports were still strong, but excess production pressured prices and the farm average in 1981-82 tumbled to $6.07 per bushel. The 1982-83 prices, burdened by a record harvest of 2.19 billion bushels, dropped to $5.71 per bushel at the farm.

So it went through much of the decade. Drought in 1983 reduced production and boosted prices — to $7.83 per bushel, on the average in 1983-84. Then there was a four-year streak of erratic markets and prices.

The decade low came in 1986-87 with a U.S. farm price average of $4.78 per bushel of soybeans. Some recovery occurred the following year, and in 1988-89 the price average rose again to $7.42 per bushel.

But now, according to the latest projections, farmers stand a chance of seeing national average soybean prices below $6 per bushel for the third year in a row.

Further, the USDA analysis helps put into perspective the effect of world oilseed supplies and markets on soybean growers in Illinois, Iowa, Arkansas and the other dozens of states where the crop is so important.

Total oilseed output in 1991-92 was projected at a record 223 million metric tons, up 2 percent from 1990-91.

Oilseeds include those from other oil-bearing crops such as peanuts, sunflowers and cottonseed, as well as soybeans. For 1991-92, total U.S. oilseed production is expected about the same as this year at 60.5 million tons, including 51 million tons of beans.

But foreign output is projected to rise 3 percent in 1991-92, although that would be less than the 5 percent annual growth rate of the 1980s.

The 1991 U.S. soybean crop was projected by USDA at 1.875 billion bushels, down from 1.922 billion bushels last year. Exports are expected to rise to 600 million bushels from 540 million in 1990-91.

Most of the export increase is based on a reduction in the availability of foreign soybeans for the world market, particularly in Brazil where the current crop is expected to be down 20 percent from last year.

"Brazil likely will be a significant importer of soybeans this fall to cope with short domestic supplies," the report said. "With anticipated gains in other oilseed crops in major importing countries, net export demand gains for soybeans are expected to be limited in 1991-92."

Counting the total supply minus exports and domestic use, the soybean inventory on Sept. 1, 1992, was projected at 350 million bushels, about the same as the 355 million bushels expected in the stockpile on Sept. 1, 1991.

The 1991-92 outlook for U.S. soybean oil and meal also was examined. Despite some pickup in exports, oil stocks were projected to increase and prices soften.

Book: CIA mistakenly returned spy to KGB

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legendary CIA spy hunter James Angleton erred by returning a turncoat agent to the KGB after mistakenly concluding his cooperation with the United States was a fraud, a new book says.

There are conflicting accounts of what became of the agent, KGB Major Yuri Loginov — that he was shot or merely fired by the Soviet spy agency, according to the book by British journalist Tom Mangold.

According to the book, after Loginov had been secretly spying for the CIA from within the KGB for six years, Angleton arranged to have him arrested as a Soviet spy in South Africa in 1967 and swapped against his will two years later across the West-East German border in 1969 for 11 westerners.

A secret two-year investigation by the CIA concluded in 1979 that Angleton had erred and Loginov had genuinely transferred his allegiance from the KGB to the CIA, writes Mangold, the senior correspondent on the British Broadcasting Corp.'s "Panorama" program.

He says Angleton's error cost the United States a rare opportunity to discover and manipulate an entire network of so-called "illegal" Soviet agents in this country. "Illegals" are usually immigrants in private life. Because they have no connection to the spies under cover in the Soviet embassy, few are ever caught.

Mangold's book, "Cold Warrior, James Jesus Angleton, the CIA's Master Spy Hunter," is to be published here and in Great Britain this month. It is the basis for a documentary by Mangold to be shown on Public Broadcasting Service's "Frontline" program.

Based on interviews with past and present intelligence officers in several countries — many identified by name — the book discloses a number of startling events related to Angleton's long and controversial search for a Soviet "mole" or spy within the CIA.

Angleton headed CIA counterintelligence from 1954 until he was fired in 1974 by then CIA-director William Colby for tying the agency's Soviet division in knots for years with his mole hunt.

Among the book's purported disclosures:

— Trying to find Soviet spies in French intelligence, Angleton personally led an FBI "black bag" team into the French embassy here after hours in 1963 and photographed French code books.

— James Bennett, deputy counterintelligence chief of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who was forced to retire in 1972 because of Angleton-inspired suspicions he was a Soviet agent, was cleared by CIA and RCMP in 1977.

PR firm creates unwanted spin for company

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spin control specialists at Ketchum Public Relations were drawing up plans for a hypothetical p.r. disaster involving one of its clients, the Clorox Co., but they weren't ready when their plans were leaked.

The Ketchum "Crisis Management Plan" laid out suggestions for Clorox just in case the Greenpeace, the environmental action group, should launch a major campaign against the company's household bleach.

Several imaginary developments were chewed over in elaborate detail: If a newspaper columnist calls for a Clorox boycott, think about suing him for slander. If a scientific report links chlorine to cancer in humans — which hasn't happened — try to "cast doubts on the methodology and findings."

Deal with the environmentalists and any "unalterably green" journalists by accusing them of "environmental terrorism."

The Ketchum planners went over various "worst case" events, but they apparently didn't give any thought to what actually happened: The plan was leaked to Greenpeace, which gave it to the media.

Spokesman Peter Dykstra said the group has never had any plans to target Clorox bleach, but is sticking to its campaign against the pulp and paper industry's use of chlorine, which Greenpeace says is dangerous to people and the environment.

In Oakland, Calif., Clorox issued a statement distancing itself from the Ketchum crisis plan.

"Clorox management was not involved in its preparation, and is not acting on its recommendations," said Sandy Sullivan, manager of consumer information.

The statement says Clorox's active ingredient, sodium hypochlorite, is safe and effective and is no more closely related to chlorine than is ordinary table salt, sodium chloride.

Journal blasts minority health care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Long-standing racial discrimination is one reason blacks and Hispanics are slipping through ever-widening cracks of the U.S. health care system, the editor of a prestigious medical journal said today.

In a bold editorial in this week's Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. George Lundberg said it is no coincidence that the United States and South Africa are the only developed countries that do not have a national health policy that ensures access to basic care for all.

The United States and South

Africa "also are the only two countries that have within their borders substantial numbers of underserved people who are different ethnically from the controlling group," he said.

Inequity in access to health care in the United States, he said, is due in part to "long-standing, systematic, institutionalized racial discrimination."

Such racial characterizations U.S. health care have been voiced before, but Lundberg's statement was considered remarkable for an AMA official. Lundberg is editor in chief of all of AMA's publications.

Blacks and Hispanics have higher rates of unemployment than whites, and more often have low-level jobs. So they have less employment-related health insurance and are less likely to receive medical care, Lundberg said.

And the public sector has not filled the gaps, he said, noting that Medicaid coverage is often harder to get in states that have large populations of blacks.

Nationwide, an estimated 31 million to 37 million Americans don't have any health insurance, and millions of others who are insured lack adequate coverage.

Troops

the islands."

Godbey, 40, of Cincinnati, arrived in Dhaka Sunday night from Pearl Harbor in Hawaii to direct a preventive-medicine team. He said the Bangladesh operation will make use of the Marines' special skills.

"You see, for a Marine, they do this all the time. It's an amphibious operation. They go in at ground zero," Godbey said, referring to the fact that the cyclone coast lacks virtually every imaginable necessity, including adequate shelter and power.

"There's not much difference with a disaster situation, whether it's combat or natural. It's distribution (of materials) that's the problem, and they're good at it," Godbey said.

The U.S. transport plane brought in five U.S. Army UH-60 Blackhawk helicopters and 73 Navy, Army and Air Force personnel — mostly Blackhawk flight crews and medical teams.

Army Lt. Col. Tom Ellzey, 40, of St. Augustine, Fla., said the Blackhawks will be used first to survey the cyclone-hit area and then to ferry material. Ellzey said the soldiers had been told they would be here at least three weeks.

Among the material to be transported by the American task force is 55,000 tons of wheat provided by CARE, a U.S.-based international relief organization.

The United States has provided $7.2 million in emergency cyclone aid, but the U.S. Embassy channels funds and distribution through nonprofit groups such as CARE, one of the most active organizations in the cyclone-devastated area.

As the misery continued in the southeast, more bad weather struck other parts of Bangladesh. High wind warnings were issued, but none of the new storms and floods approached the intensity of the killer cyclone.

Foreign and local relief agencies have been struggling to get food and safe drinking water to survivors, thousands of whom are suffering from diarrhea that health officials say could turn into a cholera epidemic. Cholera is spread by contact with human waste.

The government — whose tallies are usually conservative and slow — said Sunday night at least 204 people in the area hit by the cyclone have died of diarrhea since May 1.

As the U.S. military began its relief efforts, the weather bureau said squalls might hit Dhaka and five other cities today — covering virtually every part of the country except the area struck by the cyclone.

"We have issued warnings that storms with wind speeds of 55 to 75 miles per hour or more may hit the area," said the bureau's deputy director, Azizul Hossain.

Newspapers and officials said today that flash floods in the Sylhet area, 120 miles northeast of Dhaka, had claimed at least 15 more lives in the last 24 hours. That brought to 133 the number of people known to have died in floods and tornadoes since the cyclone hit.

Hossain said he had no indication that any new cyclones were forming to the south in the Bay of Bengal.

Reporter, translator detained

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — An Associated Press reporter and a translator held by Iraqi police have been moved farther into Iraq, away from a demilitarized border zone where they were picked up, a U.N. official said today.

Reporter Mark Fritz and his translator, Kuwaiti citizen Salah Zamani, were detained Sunday while in the nine-mile-wide buffer zone straddling the Iraq-Kuwait border, according to witnesses from the United Nations and the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Iraqi police transported the two from the Iraqi border town of Safwan, which is in the demilitarized zone, toward the southeastern city of Basra on Sunday evening, according to Majed Fayad, spokesman for the U.N. peacekeeping mission. Red Cross officials in Safwan said both men were in good condition.

One U.N. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the two were probably in Basra. But neither the U.N. mission nor the Red Cross had received word from the Iraqis on their whereabouts today.

The Associated Press has undertaken efforts to obtain the release of the two.

Fritz, 35, is based in Berlin. Zamani, 25, was studying film at the University of Miami in the United States and has been working temporarily as a translator.

The two left by car Sunday morning from Kuwait City, about 60 miles south of the Iraq-Kuwait border.

U.N. peacekeepers are limited to monitoring the demilitarized zone. The Iraqis and the Kuwaitis handle all civilian administration, including police duties, in their parts of the zone.
