District Court in session in Stanton

STANTON — Jury selection began today for three civil trials scheduled to take place this week in Stanton.

Scheduled to go to trial first is a workmen's compensation insurance dispute between Benny Lynn Stone and United Fire Insurance Co., said a clerk in the office of the 118th District Court.

Having second priority is a case in which Sandra Rios is seeking automobile-related damages against Corey Jack Allred.

Third on the trial docket is a personal-injury case in which Leono Ramos Jr. and other plaintiffs are seeking damages against the city of Stanton.

TAB commissioner to retire this month

AUSTIN (AP) — The chief of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission has announced his retirement after 34 years with the agency.

W.S. McBeath, administrator at the TABC for the past 15 years, said Monday he will step down July 31.

McBeath said during his tenure the agency has grown into one "that can stand tall with any department in state government."

Barbecue benefit planned for infant

A benefit barbecue to help raise funds for a bone marrow transplant for 8-month-old Edward Earl "Trey" Hall III has been scheduled at the Shuffle Inn, 3509 W. Highway 80 on June 15.

Don's IGA is donating the beef brisket for the barbecue. The owners of the Shuffle Inn, Kenneth and Lazell Osburn, are long-time family friends, said Trey's grandmother, Fae Hall.

Hall said the Cut-A-Thon Sunday was a success, and the benefit raised $1,110 for their efforts. She said the Chicano Golf Club gave her a check for $100. Rose Garcia of Texas Musicland Promotions presented her with another check for $200.

Garcia, a drug abuse specialist at the Federal Correctional Institution Big Spring, said, "I'm extending a friendly challenge to the community of Big Spring and I'm specifically asking the administration of FCI Big Spring, that's the warden, two associate wardens and all department heads, to each match the $200 donation to this worthy cause. This challenge is issued in a positive way, a good light, and is intended to mean a positive venture for this worthy cause," Garcia said.

Hall said she is overwhelmed and very pleased with the community support she's received to aid her grandson. The transplant has been rescheduled for June 18, and Trey's father, Buddie Hall, has tested compatible as the donor.

Rain too much for some area farmers

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

The rain early today provided many parts of the county with 1/2 to 2 inches of rain, too much for some area farmers. With some areas receiving 6 inches or more last week, a few farmers will be forced to replant.

Ronny Wood, former county extension agent, said county farmers run the full range of farming conditions, from too little or marginal amounts of moisture to having their seeds washed out in the heavy rains. Wood said last Monday's rain did the most damage to freshly planted fields. "That hard and fast rain just washed some of them out," he said. A few farmers are ready to plant or replant but cannot get into their fields because the ground is too wet, he added.

Neil Fryar of Lomax said much of his newly planted seed was washed out in last Monday's downpour and the lighter showers have been keeping the ground too wet to replant. "I was going to try to go in today, but I guess I'll have to wait for it to dry out enough," he said.

A few area farmers have "good" cotton growing at the present, said Wood. "They were lucky enough to catch it just right."

Rainfall this morning was heavier in the city and to the north with 1 to 2 inches of precipitation reported.

Areas south and east of Big Spring received lighter rainfalls, with 0.31 inches reported for areas just south of Big Spring and 0.01 inches reported for areas near Coahoma. Given the dry conditions experienced earlier in the year, few are likely to complain about the rains. Much of Big Spring's vegetation has turned green and lawns are beginning to grow. "It's starting to look pretty good," said Tommy Hart of Big Spring.

According to reports from the Colorado River Municipal Water District, rivers flowing into area reservoirs are up.

Lake Thomas is receiving small amounts of water. Colorado City

Lake is receiving a moderate flow of 200 acre/feet per day. Lake Spence is receiving 1000 acre/feet per day and Lake Ivey is receiving a combined flow of 1600 acre/feet per day from its two rivers.

The lake levels are as follows: Lake Ivey is up 3.15 vertical feet since last Monday, with a total volume of 139,000 acre/feet. Lake Thomas is up 2.14 vertical feet for a total volume of 34,500 acre/feet and Lake Spence is up 1.85 vertical feet for a total volume of 148,000 acre/feet.

States can't bar toxic wastes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today left intact a ruling that bars states from closing their borders to out-of-state hazardous waste.

The court, without comment, rejected an appeal by Alabama officials who said their aim was to protect state residents, not to interfere with interstate commerce.

Alabama in 1989 enacted a law, known as the Holley bill, that prevents private companies in the state from accepting hazardous waste from sites in states with no waste facilities.

The law was prompted by conditions at the nation's largest — and Alabama's only — commercially operated hazardous waste dump, in Emelle.

More than a billion pounds of waste are buried annually at the facility, owned by Chemical Waste Management Inc. (ChemWaste). About 85 percent comes from outside Alabama.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals declared the Holley bill unconstitutional last August, ruling it interferes with interstate commerce and is pre-empted by federal environmental laws.

The appeals court, in a decision that set precedent for Georgia and Florida as well, said the Alabama law let the state create a "blacklist" updated monthly to bar hazardous waste from other states lacking similar facilities.

"Hazardous waste is an object of commerce," the appeals court said. "The Constitution... may not be encroached upon, even in an attempt to do something good for the environment."

The appeals court relied heavily on a 1978 Supreme Court decision that barred states from refusing to accept out-of-state garbage.

"Although the hazardous waste involved in this case may be innately more dangerous than (garbage)... we cannot say that the dangers of hazardous waste outweigh its worth in interstate commerce," the appeals court said.

Noting that Alabama permits hazardous waste from some states, the appeals court said the state implicitly acknowledges that "hazardous waste is not inherently too dangerous to be a product in commerce."

But Alabama officials said the risks from hazardous waste are related directly to its volume. Unlike household waste, toxic chemicals pose a far greater danger to people when large quantities are buried underground, the officials said.

They also said a state's authority to ban hazardous waste is similar, for example, to a state's recognized power to bar infected livestock from out of state.

The Supreme Court in 1989 rejected, without comment, a related appeal by Alabama officials. In that case, the state unsuccessfully challenged a decision by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency permitting hazardous waste from an abandoned Texas chemical refinery to be buried at the Emelle facility.

The case acted on today is Alabama Department of Environmental Management vs. National Solid Wastes Management Association, 90-1718.

Street closings at issue

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

City of Big Spring officials drew criticism at a concert Sunday for failure to complete a street closing that would aid promoters in resolving traffic difficulties.

During the evening concert, which featured Tejano musicians Carlos Guzman, Rene Rene and Laura Canales, the park roads from Highway 87 to the amphitheatre were left open, while Belvedere Street was barricaded at its entrance to the Coronado Hills neighborhood. Both roads had been authorized closed at the council's May 7 meeting, but officials' opinions differ about the application of the resolution.

Taylor Rudd, an organizer of the concert, said he had contacted Assistant City Manager Tom Decell after discovering the park street was open about 4:30 p.m. Sunday, but Decell refused to have city employees close it. Open streets in front of the facility hindered planned filming of a television program, Rudd said.

Taylor Rudd said city officials were representing "only half the people" and called the street closing issue an example of discrimination.

"The city's not representing you," Rudd told the crowd Sunday. "This city is 50 percent Hispanic and it's time they realized it." He called for concert-goers to attend Tuesday's planned city council meeting in protest.

Residents of the Coronado neighborhood had complained about traffic problems caused by the concerts when asking for the street to be closed. Promoters Taylor and Patt Rudd of T.P. & Co. requested the other road be closed.

When contacted today, Decell

Commissioners agree water charges unfair

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

County commissioners agreed early today with owners of a trailer park that it is unfair for water rates for out-of-city residents to be doubled.

Several commissioners said they may talk with city officials to see what can be done and may attend a Big Spring City Council meeting Tuesday night when the owners of Desert Hills Mobile Home Park on Farm Road 700 are expected to address council members.

However, commissioners said, there is nothing they can officially do about it.

"All we can do is just voice our opinion," said Precinct 4 Commissioner John Stanley. Commenting on doubled charges, he said, "I think they're being unreasonable."

Desert Hills' owners Paul Garrett and Morris Griffice addressed commissioners today to garner support to have water rates reduced in an effort to keep the trailer park from closing.

A May 21 bill of $740 for the trailer park is almost as high as the $825 collected monthly from 11 residents. Increased rent would raise rent above competitive rates, a comparison shows.

"I'm going to have to ask everyone to move. It costs a lot of money to move those trailers."

Following a similar complaint in April, city officials and council members said they may reconsider the need for doubled rates. The doubled rates, in use for years, is to compensate for not paying city taxes. City Public Works Director Tom Decell said he is compiling data on maintenance costs in 1990 for out-of-city lines.

"What they're doing in effect is they're going to collect yearly city taxes off us and we can't do it," Garrett said.

However, 50 percent of last year's water bill for the park is 3 1/2 times higher than hypothetical city taxes that Desert Hills owners and residents would have paid in 1990 if they were in the city.

A 1990 city tax rate of just under 58 cents per $100 valuation would set taxes on the park and trailers, valued at about $92,730, at $534.96 for last year. Half of last year's water bill was $1,940. Half of just the May bill this year, which includes the recent increases, is 70 percent of what city taxes would have been last year.

"I personally think it's not being fair to the people living outside the

What's in a team name?

CLUTE (AP) — The coach of the girls sports programs at Brazoswood High School is embroiled in a brouhaha because of his move to buck 22 years of tradition by changing the name of the girls' teams from Buccettes to Lady Bucs.

"Twenty-two years of tradition is being trashed by one faculty member," says Debra Houston, a Clute attorney and 1973 Brazoswood graduate retained by opponents of the name change.

Rod Brown, who took over as girls athletic coach last September, said the name Lady Bucs would give the girls' teams more dignity.

"I wanted the girls' mascot the same as the boys," he said. "Lady Bucs has a lot of class. I didn't change it to hurt anyone or to be controversial."

"This thing has caused a mild stink, but the name is going to stay the Lady Bucs."

Ms. Houston contends the Buccettes better reflected the school mascot, the Buccaneers, than Lady Bucs.

Illegal races leaves 1 dead

DALLAS (AP) — One man was shot to death, another was wounded and a third man was stabbed when an argument over an illegal horse race at an "underground" race track turned violent, police said.

The names of the victims were not immediately available, but a 47-year-old companion of the dead man was critically wounded. The gunman suffered stab wounds, officers said.

Authorities said both men were shot in the back of the head and the 26-year-old gunman was stabbed in the back by someone who was apparently not involved in the argument.

Dallas police Sgt. Cloyce Shannon said the argument began about 7 p.m. Sunday on a quarter-mile track in a secluded area of a pasture in Southwest Dallas.

"There was some disagreement over which horse won the race," Shannon said.

The violence erupted, Shannon said, when two men, one on horseback, went up to a man in the crowd of 700-800 bystanders and attempted to collect on a bet.

Principal asks for reassignment

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Porter High School Principal Tony Ortiz has asked to be reassigned less than a week after the University Interscholastic League suspended the school from all competitions.

The action by the UIL was taken, officials said, because school administrators had failed to report an incident in which Porter soccer players allegedly verbally and physically abused a UIL referee.

Astronaut creates a little magic in space

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronaut James Bagian told Mission Control to pick a card, any card, and performed what may have been the first magic trick in space.

After spending the day investigating the mysteries of weightlessness, Bagian presented a puzzle of his own Sunday night. Bagian, a physician, is part of a team conducting medical tests aboard the space shuttle Columbia.

Bagian had left an unopened deck of cards at Mission Control before leaving Earth last week and took another deck with him.

Aided by his "lovely assistant," pilot Sidney Gutierrez, Bagian talked Mission Control communicator Marsha Ivins through the trick. She opened the deck in view of TV cameras, shuffled the cards and put the pile on a console. "We knew that when we came on this mission that when you get to fly at five miles a second, you get a certain prescience, and you can tell the future," Bagian said.

Bagian said that before blastoff he picked a card out of his deck and placed it in the opposite direction. He said it would match the one selected at Mission Control.

Ivins picked the four of spades. Bagian then displayed his deck to show one card facing down. Gutierrez pulled it from the deck and slowly flipped it over — the four of spades.

"A big round of applause! That's truly incredible!" Ivins exclaimed. "Amazing."

"It's hard to do a trick like this, this far out," Bagian said. "For me, this was kind of a do-or-die situation."

The seven astronauts today began a sixth day of orbital experiments to help scientists understand the effects of weightlessness on the body. Shuttle commander Bryan O'Connor said his crew has been working "awful hard" and could use a break Tuesday.

"Give us a chance to do some of the color TV stuff (Earth observations) that got deleted and look out the windows and see their hometowns and enjoy being in space a little bit," O'Connor told Mission Control.

Later, after putting in two hours of work, the astronauts conducted a brief television interview. O'Connor said he and his crew agree with NASA's decision not to perform a spacewalk to fix a loose seal on the cargo bay doors.

O'Connor initially expressed concern Saturday about the plan. He was more satisfied after analyzing test results that showed the seal would not prevent the doors from closing tightly for the fiery re-entry into the atmosphere.

"Everybody was worried when we first saw that seal," O'Connor said. "We needed to talk some more about it because not being able to sit in on all the reviews and look at all the test data and so on, we wanted to be sure we understood all the assumptions that went into the decision."

"But we're all in sync," he said. "We're happy with the program we've got ahead."

Columbia's nine-day mission is scheduled to end Friday.

Workers corral Brazos oil spill

GRAHAM (AP) — Crews on Sunday managed to keep the roiling, oily rapids of the Brazos River from spreading a slick onto Possum Kingdom Lake, and now the emphasis can switch to cleaning up, officials said.

Absorbent booms were soaking up some of the crude oil, while skimmers and other equipment will be used in the 80-mile stretch between Knox City and Possum Kingdom just south of Graham, said spokeswoman Kathy Hughes of Diamond Shamrock Inc. in San Antonio.

The crude spewed into the river from a break in an underwater Diamond Shamrock pipeline five miles west of Knox City, about 150 miles northwest of Fort Worth. Heavy downpours apparently washed out the 10-inch line, which runs from Abilene to Borger in the Panhandle.

The size of the spill could not be estimated until after the water subsided, the pipeline repaired and the inventory checked, said Roger Hemminghaus, chairman and chief executive officer of Diamond Shamrock, a refining and marketing company.

Texas Railroad Commission Field Director John Roberts said

Saturday that at least 2,000 barrels — 84,000 gallons — poured into the roaring river.

The flow of oil was shut off Thursday night when the break was suspected. An overflight Friday confirmed the spill.

Several efforts were made to stop the oil from spreading down the river, but torrential rains had pushed the Brazos to flood stage and the speed of the current hampered the cleanup, Ms. Hughes said.

Local observers estimated that Knox City received about 6½ inches of rain over the past three or four days. The National Weather Service predicted isolated mainly evening thunderstorms for the area Sunday.

The booms finally held at the entrance to Possum Kingdom. Ten boats were deployed onto the lake Sunday while about 100 workers, both from Diamond Shamrock and contractors, tried to contain the oil, she said.

"Our foremost concern is to protect the environment and to clean up the oil as completely and quickly as possible," said Roger Hemminghaus, chairman and chief executive officer of Diamond Shamrock Inc.

Americans still prefer 'choice' label on their beef

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nutritionists have long advocated that people eat leaner meat, but a recent beef industry survey shows that the most popular grade is still "choice," not the less fatty "select."

The study was conducted to help cattlemen provide the kind of meat that packers say is most profitable. It showed 67 percent of packers asked for low choice, with the other 33 percent asking for high choice. No packer preferred select or prime. Prime beef, the fattest grade and often most tender, is usually reserved for restaurants. Select is the new grade that nutritionists are advocating as healthier on the heart.

Ronnie Green, assistant professor of beef cattle breeding and genetics at Texas Tech University, who conducted the survey, said the findings don't mean there isn't a market for select cuts. The packers know there is a market, said Green. It's just that shoppers are more familiar with the word "choice" and that's what they grab from the meat case.

"That would work in the direction everyone wants to go," said Green.

Once, future boomtown: Houston back on top

HOUSTON (AP) — Greg Cornett left Houston when the jobs dried up in the '80s and found himself chasing boomtown construction projects, first to Ohio, then to Seattle. A few weeks ago, he got a call from a former supervisor.

"He offered me a job and said 'It looks like Houston's coming back,'" Cornett said. "I said, 'I'm in.'"

Houston is indeed back. The city that went from the pinnacle of the '80s economic boom to the bottom of the oil patch bust is back on top again.

There's still a glut of office space and shopping centers, and home values haven't rebounded to pre-bust levels. But after losing one in eight jobs during its 1982-87 depression, Houston now boasts of one of the highest employment growth rates in the country — although only in a national recession would a 3.5 percent annual increase seem like a boom.

In the first quarter of this year, home prices inched up 1 percent, while prices fell in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Dallas and elsewhere. The city's apartment occupancy rates, which fell to 79 percent in 1984, now are above 92 percent.

Foreclosures have just about disappeared. Unemployment rates — once over 11 percent — are now among the lowest in the nation, below 6 percent. More people are employed now than at the 1982 peak of the oil boom.

"Houston clearly is one of the new boomtowns," said Ron Witten, president of M-PF Research. "It's a '90s-version boomtown, though, not as hot as the '70s or '80s."

The new boom is fueled in part by deals springing out of the bust. Prices were driven so low that cheap commercial space is attracting new companies and cheap land is allowing more development.

Trammell Crow Residential bought a piece of land that had been foreclosed on twice — once by a savings and loan and once by a bank. The company paid half the early '80s price of the land, and built 221 apartment units. The $15 million year-old CityWalk complex is 96 percent leased and, with an average rent of $800, exceeding its financial projections.

"Rents in Houston are now at an all-time high," said Trammell Crow divisional partner John Rippe. "The economy is really better now, more solid, than in 1982."

CityWalk, and a larger complex under construction called CityScape, cater to young professionals with incomes of more than $60,000. They are located near downtown and near Houston's vast medical center, the world's largest, which economists say has helped stimulate Houston's revival.

Rather than oil, the traditional lifeblood of the Houston economy, the renaissance has been attributed to young professionals in business, medical and professional services, such as law and engineering.

While mining and manufacturing have added 42,000 new jobs to traditionally blue-collar Houston, about 100,000 jobs have been created in the white-collar business, medical and professional services fields, Federal Reserve Bank economist Bill Gilmer said.

"So far, we have sailed right through this recession," he said. Ironically, oil, which plunged below $10 a barrel in the '80s and devastated the Houston economy, has been part of the recovery. Relatively stable prices around $18 per barrel have helped; the Persian Gulf War gave the Houston economy a jolt, too, when a barrel sold for more than $30 for several months last year.

Petrochemicals and refineries have benefited from the relatively low oil prices of the '80s. Demand for chemicals and plastics has sparked a building boom in the Gulf Coast area near Houston. Construction of $7 billion worth of new plants has been announced.

"Houston is still the Oil Capital — it's still an enormous business here," Gilmer said. "It's just shrunk back to a manageable scale."

To be sure, this boom is nothing like the go-go days of the early '80s, when oil was $30 a barrel and people thought it was headed to $50, when savings and loans offered easy money to build at hyperinflated rates, when everyone seemed sure the good times would never end.

S&Ls' free-lending ways helped developers build 40,000 new apartment units in 1982. Even after the economy started to recede, overanxious developers built another 40,000 units in 1983-1984. Millions of dollars worth of development sat empty through the downturn.

Last year, 3,000 new apartments were built in Houston, and building permits predict another 3,000 this year.

"That was a big hole to climb out of, but they're making good progress," said John Tuccillo, chief economist of the National Association of Realtors in Washington. "The people in Houston have gone through their hell, and what they're going to have now is a nice, stable market."

Commercial real estate has not recovered as well as apartments. Office space occupancy has climbed from a low of 67 percent in 1987 to only 75 percent last year. Shopping centers have barely begun to recover, improving only slightly from the 1987 low of 77 percent occupancy to 79 percent in 1990.

"Office space and retail space are improving slowly, but we're still badly overbuilt," Gilmer said. "We're not going to see any cranes over Houston anytime soon."

Dole says tax hurts middle class

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax on luxury items has had a greater impact on middle-income Americans than expected and should be repealed, says Sen. Minority leader Bob Dole. The assessment was intended "to soak the rich," the Kansas Republican said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"It turned out the rich happened to be the middle class that the Democrats say they're trying to help," he said. "A lot of middle class people are losing their jobs now and the tax is not bringing in as much money."

The so-called luxury tax is a 10 percent charge on a portion of the price of such items as high-priced cars, boats, jewelry, furs and private airplanes that was included in last year's budget.

Dole, who blamed House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., for insisting the provision be included in the budget legislation, said he would offer a bill this week to repeal the tax.

Gephardt said the tax was included in the budget package because several other tax increases such as those on gasoline, cigarettes and alcohol fell most heavily on people in the middle income levels and the luxury tax "was one small step toward tax equity."

Smoker sues for help kicking habit

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) — A writer who says he's addicted to Marlboro cigarettes has sued its parent company for the $85 cost of classes to kick the habit.

Daniel Walter of Altamonte Springs contends that Philip Morris Inc. should help him stop smoking because its advertising helped him start.

"They know it is an addictive carcinogen. I thought it was only right they should pay," said Walter, 33, who filed the lawsuit in April in Sanford.

Company attorney Walter Cofer said Philip Morris doesn't believe its cigarettes are addictive and millions of people have quit smoking on their own.

The company hired a prominent Orlando law firm to handle the suit. Walter plans to represent himself in Seminole County small claims court.

"When allegations are inappropriate and untrue, we are more interested in defending the principle," Cofer said.

Richard Daynard, a law professor at Northeastern University in Boston and chairman of the Tobacco Products Liability Project, said the company may fear Walter's suit could open the door for more such claims.

Carpet cleaner strangles two coeds

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A carpet cleaner accused of strangling two young women said he became enraged when they sprayed him with Mace they had been carrying since five students were slain last year, a prosecutor says.

ALAN ROBERT DAVIS

Alan Robert Davis, 29, was charged with murdering University of Florida students Eleanor Anne Grace, 20, of Fort Myers, and Carla Marine McKishnie, 22, of Brandon. He was ordered held without bail Sunday.

Davis said he had gone to clean the students' rugs Thursday and became enraged and strangled the women after they sprayed him with Mace, State Attorney Len Register said.

According to Register, Davis said he punched Ms. Grace in the face and knocked her unconscious, then fought with Ms. McKishnie after she jumped on him.

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines — As nearby Mt. Pinatubo spews rock, ash and gas, U.S. military and civilian personnel leave Clark Air Base Monday in a convoy of cars carrying their essential belongings.

Americans evacuate air base near volcano

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Thousands of Americans piled into cars and buses with dogs, cats and duffel bags and left Clark Air Base today after scientists warned that the eruption of a nearby volcano could turn catastrophic.

The decision to evacuate one of the largest overseas U.S. military bases was made early today after searing gases, ash and rock shot out of 4,795-foot Mount Pinatubo Sunday at speeds up to 60 mph.

The volcano, about 10 miles west of the air base, came to life last week after six centuries of dormancy. No casualties have been reported, but experts are concerned a major eruption could occur soon.

Gases, ash and molten rock continued to pour out of the mountain today, enshrouding it in thick, gray clouds of ash and steam that rose 12,000 feet.

The Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology said it detected rhythmic ground movements today that indicated molten material was rising to the surface of the craters.

Institute Director Raymundo Punongbayan said Mount Pinatubo was in the "early eruptive stage" and "after that we will have bigger ones."

He said most of the ash and molten rocks had been flowing westward away from Clark. But he said geological studies showed that in the previous eruption 600 years ago, the main flow cut across what is now the western portion of Clark.

Rains fell across the area on Sunday night, and officials warned residents in the lush, green lowlands west of the mountain to move to higher ground to escape mudflows.

Air Force spokesman Lt. Col. Ron Rand announced the evacuation in a 5 a.m. broadcast over the U.S. military's Far East Network.

An hour later, the first vehicles began rolling out of Clark for the U.S.-run Subic Bay naval base, where the 14,500 troops, dependents and civilian employees will be housed until the danger passes. Another 1,500 troops remained at Clark to provide security.

The Clark command center operated with a skeletal crew, but the base's operations were suspended. The base is a major terminal for the worldwide network of flights operated by the Military Airlift Command.

"If it's going to blow, I hope it does it fast so I can go home before the cockroaches take my house," said Staff Sgt. Mike Huffman.

There was no indication how long the Americans evacuated from Clark would stay at Subic, but they were ordered to take along important papers and food, water and clothing for three days.

Gorbachev invited after summit

LONDON (AP) — Britain will invite Mikhail S. Gorbachev to come to London at the end of next month's economic summit of the seven major industrialized nations, Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said today.

The Soviet president will be invited to meet with President Bush, Prime Minister John Major, German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and other leaders of the so-called Group of Seven when the July 15-17 summit has formally ended.

"He is not going to come as a supplicant and he is not expecting to receive a check under the plate," Hurd said in an interview with The Associated Press. "That's not the nature of the meeting."

Hurd said the invitation would be issued "within the next day or so."

Hurd's announcement followed weeks of negotiations among the seven nations after Gorbachev publicly angled for an invitation, saying his country urgently needs aid.

On Thursday, Major's office sent messages to United States, Japan, Canada, France, Germany and Italy proposing Gorbachev come to London at the end of the summit.

Stalin's German victims honored

WEIMAR, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl laid wreaths today to honor for the first time victims of Stalinist oppression who lie in unmarked graves beside the site of the Nazis' Buchenwald concentration camp.

Information about the fate of an estimated 8,000 to 13,000 people who died in the Soviet camp at Buchenwald after World War II had been suppressed in Communist-run East Germany, but has been emerging slowly since the collapse of the Communist government in late 1989.

In early 1990, the first newspaper stories were published reporting discoveries of shallow mass graves just outside the barbed wire marking the boundary of the Nazi-era camp, where some 65,000 people — mostly Jews and German political prisoners — were worked to death or executed.

The Nazis cremated their victims, but those who died under Soviet secret police incarceration from 1945 to 1950 were simply buried. If records were kept, they were taken to the Soviet Union, and many German families are uncertain of the fate of relatives arrested after the war.

Westerners seek hostages' release

KURT WALDHEIM

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Amid heavy security, the second-ranking official in Britain's Foreign Office began a freedom-seeking mission for Western hostages today by meeting with the wife of a countryman kidnapped two years ago.

Foreign Office Minister Douglas Hogg said after his 45-minute meeting with Sunny Mann, wife of retired airline pilot Jack Mann, that "there are grounds for careful optimism."

As that meeting occurred, President Kurt Waldheim of Austria was on a visit to Iran, the first by a Western head of state since the 1979 Islamic revolution. News reports said he was expected to seek the release of the Westerners missing in Lebanon.

In Tehran, Waldheim laid a wreath of flowers at the tomb of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the official Iranian news agency said.

City's ticker-tape parades have honored heroes from Lindbergh to Gulf War

NEW YORK (AP) — That peculiar New York institution, the ticker-tape parade — showing affection by dropping trash on idols — will be on display again today, this time for Gulf War heroes.

Dating from early in the century, ticker-tape parades really took off as big-time celebrations with the lionizing of Charles Lindbergh for his solo flight from New York to Paris in 1927.

The most recent was just a year ago, when South African black leader Nelson Mandela heard the cheers and echoes in the "Canyon of Heroes."

Between Lindbergh and Mandela, there have been about two-score parades.

Pope John Paul II got one in 1984; in 1958 it was Van Cliburn, a gangly young Texan whose piano virtuosity took the world by storm. But as a rule, the ticker-tape has flown for aviators, athletes and warriors.

The last parade of massed military men was in 1985, when 25,000 Vietnam veterans, led by Gen. William Westmoreland and 26

Medal of Honor winners, received a 10-years-later welcome home.

The "Miracle Mets" baseball champions of 1969 and the 1986 team that beat the Red Sox in the World Series got confetti showers. So did the all-conquering Yankees of 1978.

The parades are rarely marred by mischance, but an exception occurred in 1984. As 220 athletes of the U.S. Olympic team were cheered, a construction scaffold on the parade route gave way and 101 spectators were injured.

The 1960s was largely the astronauts' decade, with parades for John Glenn in 1962, Gordon Cooper in 1963 and the moon-mission trio of Neil Armstrong, Buzz Aldrin and Michael Collins in 1969.

Other notable paraders included:

- Gen. Douglas MacArthur, after he was recalled from Korea by President Truman in 1951.
- Douglas "Wrong-Way" Corrigan, returning from his solo flight to Ireland in 1938. Federal authorities had forbidden the attempt, so Corrigan took off for Los Angeles and claimed a malfunctioning compass misled him to Dublin.

- Howard Hughes, also in 1938, for breaking Wiley Post's round-the-world air flight record.
- Beryl Markham in 1936, for the first westward trans-Atlantic solo flight, described later in her memoir, "West With the Night."
- Amelia Earhart, for being the first woman to fly the Atlantic, as navigator, in 1928, before making her own solo flight some years later.

It's hard to quantify enthusiasm, but one measure the city uses is the tonnage of paper rained on the parades.

The Sanitation Department, which cleans up afterward, says the most ever was 3,474 tons that fell for Glenn, whose parade wound on several miles beyond the "Canyon of Heroes."

Among parades that stayed within the canyon, the biggest was the welcome home for the Americans held hostage in Iran in 1981, which generated a 1,262-ton paper storm.

Official estimates of spectator numbers are never less than extravagant. The Mets' parade was reported as drawing 2.2 million people. That works out to 137,000 people per block, or enough to fill Shea Stadium nearly three times.

Labeling the parade "ticker-tape" is a stretch these days, although a token amount of the old-fashioned paper ribbon on which stock quotations used to be printed is being imported for the event.

Most of the confetti consists of shredded old telephone books, computer cards and printout sheets. Oldtimers say that stuff approximates, but can't duplicate, the streaming, shimmery blizzard effect of real ticker tape.

An extra added feature in today's parade will be yellow ribbon — 140 miles of it, cut into a million pieces and added to the confetti shower.

Operation Welcome Home — the biggest ticker-tape parade in the city's history — got under way as Gen. Colin Powell, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney rolled off in a trio of gas-guzzling vintage convertibles.

They were followed by about 24,000 marchers, more than half of them veterans of the Persian Gulf War from 50 states and 17 nations.

"Coming home to this show of support kind of makes you wish you'd done a little more over there," said Marine Lance Cpl. Lance Reifstek, who served aboard the carrier Nassau during the six-week allied rout of Iraq. He trained for an amphibious landing which never occurred.

Tens of thousands of people jammed sidewalks along the parade route from Battery Park on the tip of lower Manhattan, through the Financial District and past City Hall. More than a million spectators were expected.

Marchers were showered with 200 miles of ticker tape, 10,000 pounds of confetti and an undetermined number of shredded telephone books.

"I just had to be here. ... It makes us feel like we're contributing to what they contributed to us," said a spectator.

NEW YORK — An unidentified painter adds some last minute touches to the yellow ribbon painted on the base of the reviewing stand at City Hall in New York Sunday. The city readied 200 miles of ticker tape, 10,000 pounds of confetti, a million yellow ribbons and enough balloons to fill a six-story building for Monday's parade.

Protests were planned and 3,000 officers were assigned along the route.

Members of the National Coalition to Stop U.S. Intervention in Middle East carried signs reading "250,000 Dead, 170,000 Dying" and "GIs Sent To Fight and Die for Wall Street."

Organizers greeted the veterans with a million yellow ribbons and enough balloons to fill a six-story building.

"This is the day the yellow ribbon can come down and our spirits can rise up to welcome the heroes and she-ros of Operation Desert Storm," Mayor David Dinkins said at a ceremony before the parade.

Keep your promises

Kuwait's ruling Al Sabah family was notably generous in its political promises after it was driven into exile last August by Iraq's invasion. The assurances were virtually nonstop that the emir and other top leaders would see that post-liberation Kuwait had a new political order based on more representative government.

Now, after the tremendously costly U.N.-led intervention to free Kuwait from the invading Iraqis, that pledge so far remains unredeemed.

Now the emir says merely that new parliamentary elections are indeed planned, but not for 16 months.

Why the long delay?

Opposition figures fear, with good reason, that it's to give the Al Sabahs more time to intensify their control.

The current National Council is essentially a rubber stamp for the Al Sabahs. When it meets on July 19 for the first time since the invasion it's expected to set the conditions for the October 1992, voting, including a possible expansion of suffrage. . . . Under current rules, only about 10 percent of Kuwait's population — none women — may vote.

But for now, martial law remains in force, the press is censored and public assemblies are banned. Unless those restrictions are ended, a freer political life, including open public debate, will have no chance to develop.

Kuwait would clearly benefit if its leadership base were enlarged. A stable Kuwait will be a more secure Kuwait. . . . But if Kuwait's Al Sabah family is not capable of doing what's best for the country, Washington has an obligation to help it see the light.

U.S. should help Soviets

The big question President Bush has to decide is, should the United States help bail out the Soviet Union?

Bush won't decide that question all by himself, of course. Congress will be in on the decision. So, too, the American people. Do we want to help out this longtime military and ideological enemy which has clearly fallen on hard times?

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev talked . . . about Western nations providing aid on the order of $100 billion. But other observers think that figure is too low.

To help or not depends on a number of issues. How the U.S. economy is doing, for example. At the moment, our federal debt and the annual deficit that won't go away inhibit our ability to provide financial aid to the Soviet Union. We're still borrowing from abroad hundreds of billions of dollars to fund our annual deficit.

Also, whether we should help depends a great deal on what the Soviet Union does. Gorbachev deserves high marks for opening up the Soviet society politically. It is a much freer society than ever before. But he has accomplished relatively little in reforming the old state-run communist economy.

Whatever help the United States provides should depend on the continuation of political and economic changes that move the Soviets toward a free, market-oriented economy and away from the failed policies of the past.

In the final analysis, however, Bush should think of the huge amounts of money spent during the Cold War by both sides for weapons of war and intelligence gathering and propaganda. . . . The winding down of the Cold War has made such vast spending unnecessary in the future.

For a relatively small sum compared to the cost of the Cold War, Western nations can guide and help move the old Russian Empire toward free enterprise and away from the slavery of communism and Russian czarism.

Courter made right move

Rooting out of public life all conceivable appearance of conflict of interest is sometimes a needless distraction from getting things done. But James Courter got it right the other day when he canceled his consulting contract with a major defense company.

Courter is a key figure in the long-running struggle to close military bases. . . .

Closing bases is such a sensitive issue that members of Congress in 1988 created the (Defense Base Closure and Realignment) commission to take politics out of the closing process.

That's where Courter comes in as head of the commission whose job it is to review the list of installations slated for the ax by the Pentagon.

If the commission and President Bush approve the list, the bases will be closed — unless both houses of Congress vote to stop the process.

It seems obvious, then, that the commission's members must be removed from political horse trading and from vested interests in defense.

Serving on the commission would be incompatible with, say, lobbying in Capitol Hill for defense contractors.

That's why we applaud Courter's decision to end a $3,000-a-month consulting arrangement with Grumman Corp. and to drop plans to consult for Northrop, another major arms company.

Courter also pledged not to lobby Congress during his tenure, which is a good idea.

It would take only a whiff of favoritism by the commission, and the era of uncloseable bases would return.

Less than a landmark decision

WASHINGTON — Let me get back to the Supreme Court's decision of May 23 in the family planning case. The decision in Rust v. Sullivan is being roundly condemned, or roundly defended, as if it were a landmark on the judicial horizon. It isn't.

Several aspects of the high court's action merit better understanding. Except in one critical respect, which I want to return to in a moment, this was not a case of constitutional law. It was a case of statutory law. The court was not construing the word "liberty" in the 14th Amendment. The court was construing the word "program" in the Public Health Service Act.

The distinction is crucial. In the famous case of Roe v. Wade, decided in 1973, the court found that the Constitution accords women an almost absolute right to have an abortion during the first trimester of pregnancy. At a later stage the right may be regulated by the states under their power to preserve potential human life, and it may be regulated by Congress under its power of the purse.

Since the Roe decision of 1973 we have seen half a dozen high court decisions upholding state regulation. The May 23 decision in Rust v. Sullivan served to uphold federal regulation. Specifically the case dealt with a regulation promulgated by Health Secretary Louis Sullivan, forbidding doctors in federally funded clinics from "counseling" a patient on the option of abortion.

Regulations imposed by an executive agency have none of the impressive status of a constitutional declaration. Dr. Sullivan himself, if he were so disposed, could abolish or rewrite the regulation that has kicked up such a storm. Congress could take the matter into its own hands. Last week Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., was working on a bill to overturn the high court's decision. I doubt that his bill will pass, and I am confident it could not survive a presidential veto, but these are political speculations. Put them aside.

On a second point: Except for the one constitutional issue, the court's opinion was soundly based in judicial tradition. The court historically has paid great deference to the presumed expertise of federal agencies in construing federal statutes. Here the court deferred to Dr. Sullivan as secretary of health and human services.

Third point: The complaining doctors and clinics in this case demanded something akin to a summary judgment. They contended that the statute and the regulations are invalid on their face. Simply as a matter of law, this is a tough proposition to prove. The burden on the plaintiffs was to show that "no set of circumstances" could be imagined in which the regulations could be sustained. The plaintiffs clearly failed to meet the requirement.

But if the court's 5-4 decision may be defended as a matter of jurisprudence, it cannot be condoned as a matter of constitutional law. Rehnquist and his four colleagues rightly held that Congress may attach conditions to the expenditure of public funds. Congress does this all the time. State highway aid, for one example, has been conditioned on the retention of speed limits and the destruction of billboards.

The point is that Congress may not impose conditions in violation of the Constitution, and that is what Sullivan's gag rule amounted to. Physicians cannot be compelled to abandon their right of free speech when they enter a federally subsidized facility.

They cannot be told what not to say.

Analogies come immediately to mind. Public schools have the power to expel students for misbehavior, but "misbehavior" cannot be defined to include the wearing of a black armband to protest the war in Vietnam. Under the law that authorizes union shops, labor unions have the power to exact agency fees from non-member workers; but as the court just held anew, that power cannot be conditioned upon the workers' constitutional rights of free association. All this is elementary.

It is the constitutional aspect of Rehnquist's opinion that justifies serious concern. If the government may control speech by buying silence, it is later than we think, and the road ahead is darker.

As for the rest, let us calm down. The 4,500 federal family planning facilities assuredly are not the sole source of counseling on abortion. A pregnant woman would have to be ignorant beyond belief not to know that a pregnancy may be medically aborted. Information on the process is widely available. All that is required of her is an ability to read the Yellow Pages and to let her fingers do the walking. COPYRIGHT 1991 UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

Neighbor finds ballpark a nuisance

To the editor:

There ought to be a law against having a ballpark within five miles of anyone else's property.

For five or six years people from a ball park on city of Coahoma land, about a hundred feet from my metal building, throw rocks, baseballs, golf balls, etc. on the roof causing it to leak, plus several holes in the wall facing the park. It doesn't take a genius to figure out the source of damage. Coahoma's city council says: "So what?"

A lawyer writes these people letters, then says: "These things happen" just like I should put up with the damage.

If I were a doctor, banker or plain rich, the problem would have been taken care of long ago. Trouble is, I can't get anyone to do anything about it. Law or otherwise.

To say I am mad is an understatement.

A treasure I received from my Daddy

By BETTY JOHANSEN Copy Editor

I have a treasure. It is two audio cassettes of conversations with my Daddy telling me about his boyhood and youth and, of course, his war stories. I've heard much of the information over the years, but I wanted to have it in a form I could always keep.

It's exciting to learn about a parent's past, so you can understand him better and perhaps even gain some insight into your own makeup.

For example, I learned that Daddy is a real old-fashioned guy, the kind you read about in history books. Growing up near Hubbard (in the Waco area), his family's water supply was a cistern from the rain running off the house. The family bathed in a big tub they carried into the kitchen. And, if you've ever felt the call of nature on a cold, dark night, you can imagine what it was like to make a visit to the outhouse on a January night, wondering what was about to grab your ankle as you sprinted past.

I also learned what a hard worker Daddy was as a boy. He and his siblings used to get up at sunrise to do the farm work before school. And after school, while the other kids participated in football and baseball, the Johansen kids headed home to mend fences or hoe. Fortunately, they never got hot. As quick as they were wringing wet with sweat, a nice breeze would keep them cool.

If you ask me

All that hard work got Daddy to thinking. One day he and his twin brother Jimmie were cultivating 20 acres of cotton. The "Sandy Field" should have made 5-6 bales of cotton, but it was a dry year and they didn't know what to expect. While they were resting their mules, Daddy told Jimmie, "I think this is going to be my last year here. If I make a bale of cotton to pay my registration, I'm going to A&M." Sure enough, he made his bale, sold it and took his $30 to Aggie land where he earned a degree in Landscape Architecture.

Daddy was your typical self-reliant, patriotic American. En route to Africa to serve in World War II an announcement was made: "Russia has joined the Allies." Daddy responded, "Oh, shoot, I wish they hadn't ever joined."

"We didn't need 'em," he explained to me. "We saw we were going to get the upper hand."

I was surprised at his assessment. "Are you sure we didn't need 'em?" I asked.

"Well, I guess they came in handy," he conceded with a twinkle in his eyes.

Everybody who knows Daddy knows he has a sense of humor. When he was stationed in Germany near the end of the war, he was working in a big, barnlike building full of telephones, routing calls. One caller said, "Let me have Gloria."

"If I had Gloria, I wouldn't give her to you," Daddy told him. But when he learned he was talking to a Colonel, he went to find Gloria.

Daddy was a visionary. Growing cotton and corn, mending fences, chopping wood and tending the animals as a boy, he used to admire the plants around him and dream of the day when he would know all their names and be able to beautify yards with trees and shrubs and flowers. But when he arrived in Big Spring in October of 1938 and found dirt roads, whirlwinds dancing with the sand in the streets and few trees except elms and mesquites, he wasn't sure his vision was that big. He turned around and went home.

Contrary to what I said in a previous column, Daddy didn't pass through Big Spring on his way to New Mexico. He says he doesn't know where I got that idea. Instead, a Mr. Ross asked him to come to Big Spring to help with his landscaping business. When he got home, Daddy wrote to Mr. Ross declining the job. Mr. Ross sent a telegram saying, "Please come back." And as Daddy puts it, "I've been back ever since."

After the war, City Manager Boyd McDaniel talked Daddy into taking over the parks department for the city of Big Spring. As he got into the job, he learned that, given water, a lot of trees and shrubs can grow out here in the wilderness. So if you look at some of the big, old trees around town, you may be looking at the fulfillment of a young man's dream.

After I was grown, I learned that children associate their father's character with God's character. A child with an abusive father or a mean, selfish father or an absent father has a hard time picturing a God of love. But a child who has a gentle, loving father, as I do, easily understands the kind, generous God of the Bible. For that, I will always be grateful, Daddy.

Next Sunday, maybe we can all borrow a chorus from Rodgers and Hammerstein's "South Pacific," change one word and let our fathers know: There is nuthin' like a Dad — nuthin' in the world. . . . There is nuthin' you can name that is anything like a Dad.

And if any of you Dads would like to turn the tables and give your kids a gift for Father's Day that will last their whole lives, get the book "The Blessing" by Gary Smalley and John Trent and learn to give your children a blessing. The 1990s world is a hard place to grow up. They need all the help they can get, but most of all they need the encouragement only you can give.

Q. Is there any vehicle in the United States which has right of way over a fire truck on an emergency run?

A. All vehicles must yield right of way to a fire truck on an emergency run. However, the driver of the fire truck must use due caution by law before entering an intersection, according to Lt. Edwards, an officer for the Big Spring Police Department.

Unseating Saddam won't be easy

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Saddam Hussein's resilience in the face of military defeat, postwar revolt and crippling economic sanctions has U.S. and other Western leaders examining new strategies for trying to end his 22-year rule.

Some diplomats believe attempts to negotiate a transition of power in Baghdad could emerge as the bite of sanctions pushes Iraq closer to economic and social chaos.

But others note that Saddam is unlikely to willingly step aside and may be the only Iraqi leader presently capable of keeping the nation from dissolving into civil war among ethnic and religious groups.

"It makes a lot of sense for officials of the Iraqi regime to try to re-establish some form of contact with the United States and Western powers because that's the main stumbling block to reconstruction," said Charles Tripp, a Middle East specialist at the University of London.

"But has anybody told Saddam that?"

Saddam's nation may be reeling, but his personal power base has been fortified.

Republican Guard, a key pillar of the regime.

Also, Saddam has named relatives to key positions and purged those he considered challengers.

"He's giving out titles but no power," said an Iraqi official, who spoke anonymously for fear he would be punished for talking to a Western reporter.

Meanwhile, the allies have closely watched steps for reform by Saddam, who has been effective ruler since 1968 and assumed the presidency in 1979.

Saddam is reported to have agreed to limited autonomy for Kurds in northern Iraq. On Sunday, the government daily Al-Jumhuriya quoted Vice President Taha Yassin Ramadan as saying Baghdad would soon revise laws on political parties and press freedom.

But Iraqi officials say some reforms will have to wait until the lifting of sanctions — which the United States and Britain have said they would oppose until Saddam is out of power.

Some diplomats in Baghdad believe personnel changes in the Iraqi regime may be the best way to break the Baghdad-Washington deadlock.

"The Americans found out they can't bring about a coup d'etat without triggering a civil war," one ambassador said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"If civil war broke out again there would be a great chance of the Shiites coming to power," a development that alarms the Sunni Muslim monarchies in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf states, he said.

"It would change the whole political landscape and not be compatible with American or Western interests."

A knowledgeable ambassador from a Third World country said Iraqi and U.S. officials in New York began last month discussing "some kind of deal... such as perhaps to bring about a cosmetic change in the government."

He said one proposal was for Saddam to relinquish the presidency to longtime ally Izzat Ibrahim, deputy commander-in-chief and vice chairman of the ruling Revolutionary Command Council. Saddam, in turn, would retain leadership of the Baath Party, the diplomat said.

"That's thought to be a compromise which would at least give the Americans the chance to lift the sanctions and at the same time allow Saddam a way out."

Council to elect mayor pro tem

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council is expected to elect a mayor pro tem and consider a zoning change at its meeting Tuesday, 5:30 p.m. at the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark office.

A new mayor pro tem will be elected by the council. The individual will represent the city at official functions in the absence of Mayor Max Green.

The planning and zoning commission is expected to recommend the council approve re-zoning of a city block located on the southeast corner of 13th and Austin Streets. Council member Tim Blackshear has announced intent to convert the old school storage building into apartments.

Blackshear has requested the area be re-zoned from 2-F (two family dwellings) to GR (general residential) to allow for apartment dwellings.

In other business, the council will sponsor a public hearing on the proposed Energas rate increase. An April 19 increase request of about 6 percent was postponed by the council to allow time for the hearing and further study on the issue.

Other agenda items include:

- A public hearing and consideration of a resolution abandoning the alley adjacent to Philadelphia Primitive Baptist Church. The alley is listed as being between 23rd and 24th streets and Runnels and Johnson streets. A church official said the organization plans to build a meeting house.
- Approval of the application submission for a low-interest state loan through the LoanSTAR program to replace mercury vapor street lights with low-cost sodium vapor.
- Consideration of a carnival permit for the Big Spring Band Boosters. The event is planned for June 24-29.
- Final approval of a measure lengthening the school zone speed limit in the Washington Place Elementary School area.
- Extension of the lease agreement with the Northside Community Center.
- An agreement for posting a load limit on the Birdwell Lane bridge.

said the council's May 28 failure to approve a set of management procedures for park concerts prevented the requested street closing. According to minutes of the May 7 meeting, the council approved in a 5-1 vote the closure of both streets "during Sunday concerts," but no specific dates are included.

Decell said he authorized the closure of Belvedere Street Sunday because of a special request by council members. He could not recall which members had requested it.

Council members contacted today had mixed reactions to the issue.

Corky Harris said he understood the council authorized the street closings only for the month of May.

"This is definitely the council's fault," he said. "I know the decision to close Belvedere going into Coronado was not a racial issue. The other street (that was left open) was a matter of saying the council didn't elect to close it."

Pat DeAnda said city officials were "being selective" and the street closing should stand as approved.

"It seems very evident..."

she said. "I got some phone calls but unfortunately was out of town. I had assumed the (council meeting) minutes reflected we would do this. Apparently there is some administration that will do whatever they want to whenever they want to."

Mark Sheedy said he had assumed the street closing resolution would stand as approved May 7.

Green, absent at the May 7 meeting, said he had understood no street closing had been authorized, but would look into the issue further. Ladd Smith said he understood that the decision to close a street would be left to the city staff.

"We authorized (the closing), but we didn't mandate it," Smith said.

Tim Blackshear and John Coffey were out of town and could not be reached for comment.

The council will address the issues involved with amphitheatre concerts at a work session Thursday, 5:30 p.m. at the office of the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark. The session, not designed for action to be taken, will be an attempt to design a working plan for concerts at the amphitheatre, officials said.

Suspect said to be Tamil rebel

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A suspect in the assassination of former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi of India has been identified as a member of a Tamil rebel militia, sources said.

A Tamil politician, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Sunday that he and other Tamils shown photographs of the suspect recognize him as a senior member of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, which has waged an 8-year-old battle for an independent homeland in northern Sri Lanka.

Sources close to the investigation team in Madras, India, confirmed the identification.

Gandhi was killed May 21 at an election rally near Madras, when a young woman triggered plastic explosives strapped around her waist. The woman and 15 other people also were killed.

Police suspect Tamil rebels for the attack because they use southern India as a base and are the only group in the region with sophisticated knowledge of explosives. But spokesmen for the group have denied responsibility.

In 1987, Gandhi ordered Indian troops to Sri Lanka to enforce a cease-fire between the Sinhalese-dominated army and the Tamil rebels. The peace plan failed and the Indian troops fought for 2½ years against the rebels.

Gastineau wins first pro fight

SALEM, Va. (AP) — Mark Gastineau says he was a slow starter when he played defensive end with the New York Jets, usually getting to the quarterback in the fourth quarter and then breaking out into a "sack" dance.

Before he entered the ring for his professional boxing debut Saturday night, Gastineau said veteran trainer Jimmy Glenn advised him to be aggressive and take the fight to Derrick Dukes quickly.

Gastineau took the suggestion literally. Dukes barely got his dukes up before he was out cold on the canvas. The official time for the knockout was 12 seconds, but the blow that put him away came about five seconds into the fight.

"Most of my sacks took longer," Gastineau said, who walked politely to his corner when the fight ended.

The former NFL star proved his punching power in his debut and his promoter immediately began talking about a challenge to the heavyweight champion. But this wasn't exactly big-time boxing.

The fight was barely promoted, and there was a sparse crowd of slightly more than 1,000. The organizers brought the wrong-sized ring and had to scurry to find a replacement and enough gloves to go around.

The five preliminary bouts went a total of 13 rounds, and only one was competitive. One skinny fighter with no record was chased around for a few rounds and quit after being caught and knocked down. Two heavyweights with oversized bellies took bad beatings.

The crowd grew restless and began demanding ring girls to carry the cards designating the rounds, a traditional boxing sidelight. The promoters finally drafted a few from the audience in the fifth fight.

The concession stand even ran out of beer for awhile.

Gastineau's contest with Dukes (2-2) was over faster than it took to take a bite from an overpriced hotdog.

In the first flurry of punches a few seconds into the fight, Gastineau hit Dukes with a right cross that snapped his head back. The 258-pound defensive lineman followed with a left hook that lifted Dukes off the canvas and landed him hard on his back and head.

Dukes stayed down for nearly half a minute.

Rocket proves to be human

TORONTO (AP) — Rocket Ismail needs pointers, just like everybody else.

He might be the Toronto Argos' $18 million blur, but he was missing passes at the Canadian Football League team's opening workouts during the weekend at the nearby University of Guelph campus.

"I told him, 'Don't slow down until you get to the stands,'" quarterback Willie Gillus said when asked what he'd said to Ismail after the rookie slowed down after beating the defender on a pass pattern.

"He's just another athlete. 'And as a rookie, he needs pointers just like the other guys. The good thing about him is that he listens.'"

Ismail sheepishly agreed that he'd pulled up too soon.

"The guy can get it out there," he said of Gillus, one of several quarterbacks trying to win a job behind No. 1 Matt Dunigan and backup Rickey Foggie. "In college, especially on the first day of camp, you beat your man and then you have to stop and wait for the ball like it was a punt."

Bulls one win away from crown

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Chicago Bulls have beaten the rap that they are a one-man team led by a superstar with the initials M.J. Now the Los Angeles Lakers must face it.

The Bulls spread the wealth on offense, smothered the Lakers with stingy team defense and moved a win away from the first NBA title in their 25-year history with a 97-82 victory Sunday.

Both superstars were shocked at Chicago's 3-1 advantage in the best-of-7 series.

"I never dreamed this would happen," Los Angeles' Magic Johnson said.

"No one could think you could dominate a team of the Lakers' stature and the legacy they carry," said Chicago's Michael Jordan, who played 44 minutes despite a jammed right big toe. "I don't think ... we thought we'd be up 3-1."

After Sunday's one-sided game, it's easy to think the Bulls will be up 4-1 after Wednesday night's fifth game.

Chicago, 6-1 on the road in the playoffs, could duplicate Detroit's feat of last year when the Pistons went to Portland with the Finals tied 1-1 and won three consecutive games there.

"This is their building," Chicago's Scottie Pippen said of the Lakers. "The only thing we have to do is hold our composure."

The Bulls did that Sunday, leading 52-44 at halftime, 74-58 after three quarters and by at least seven points the rest of the way. They are younger, healthier, shooting better and defending much better than the Lakers.

"They are very athletic, very smart," Los Angeles coach Mike Dunleavy said. "We're in a ditch, not a hole, a ditch."

It will be up to Johnson to get them out of it if the Lakers are to become the first team to win an NBA Finals after trailing 3-1.

James Worthy re-injured his left ankle. Byron Scott left the game after bruising his right shoulder in the fourth quarter. Sam Perkins made one of 15 shots.

Vlade Divac was the only effective starter besides Johnson. Worthy wasn't sure if he could play Wednesday night, a possibility that would force Dunleavy to turn to his weak bench.

The Bulls have stronger substitutes and a group of starters that has outgrown the stigma of being merely Jordan's supporting cast.

"The other guys have stepped up

"When we play that way, we win." Jordan led the Bulls with 28 points, his lowest total of the series. Paxson added 15, Horace Grant and Pippen 14 each and Bill Cart-

Courier upsets Agassi in Open final

PARIS (AP) — If it was Jim Courier's happiest moment, it was clearly one of the toughest for Andre Agassi.

In his gaudy purple-trimmed outfit, he'd outplayed everybody, including Boris Becker. After losses in two previous Grand Slam finals, here was an ideal chance for Agassi to break through against a lower-ranked player he used to practice with at training camp.

But that script went awry. Courier lost two of the first three sets in Sunday's French Open final, then stormed back — aided at times by gusts of wind that troubled Agassi — to win 3-6, 6-4, 2-6, 6-1, 6-4 in his first appearance in a Grand Slam final.

Courier, after flopping on his back and later throwing his lucky baseball cap into the crowd, said, "There have been lots of happy moments in my life ... but at the moment, this is the happiest."

But Agassi couldn't conceal his dismay at blowing another chance for a Grand Slam title.

"Who knows how many shots you have? I've been fortunate to have three finals, but it's disappointing," said Agassi. "The pessimistic side of me will always have questions."

Courier, 20, had never reached the quarterfinals of a Grand Slam tournament before, but he was more poised than Agassi after two second-set rain delays.

"The rain delays hurt us a little bit, but that's life. That's the way it goes," said Nick Bolletieri, who coaches Agassi and used to train Courier.

Though Bolletieri shared Agassi's disappointment, he was in some ways the biggest winner of the tournament. Not only Courier and Agassi, but also women's champion Monica Seles are former pupils at Bolletieri's tennis academy in Florida.

Seles, the top seed and defending champion, defeated fifth-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain 6-4, 6-4 in a hard-fought final on Saturday.

Andrade makes it two straight

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Billy Andrade paid attention to some advice from a veteran touring pro.

Early last week, Andrade said: "Jay Haas told me the best time, the easiest time to win your second tournament is right after you've won your first. He said you're still on a roll and you're up high and you can keep it going."

So Andrade did just that. The 27-year-old followed up a career-first PGA Tour victory in the Kemper Open with a two-stroke triumph Sunday in the Buick Classic.

"I felt in control. I was feeding on last week," Andrade said after outlasting such international stars as Hale Irwin, Seve Ballesteros and Greg Norman over the final nine holes.

Brad Bryant, the runner-up to Andrade on the Westchester Country Club course, said that's not as far-fetched as it may sound.

Bryant, 36, who has not won in a 14-season career and missed the cut in 10 of 13 previous starts this year, came on to salvage second with a round of par 71 and a 275 total.

Nolan Henke, who had a share of the lead until he double-bogeyed the 15th hole, tied Irwin for third at 276. Henke shot 70 and Irwin had a 73.

Ballesteros, with a 71, was tied at 277 with Wayne Levi and Larry Rinker. Levi closed up with a 67 and Rinker had a 71.

Norman also had a 71 and finished at 279.

Andrade, now in his fourth season on the pro tour, is in no rush to get started on the run toward a third consecutive title.

"I'm very, very tired," Andrade said. "Right now I think a little rest might be more important than practice."

The Monday after he won his first tournament in Potomac, Md., Andrade went through 36 holes of U.S. Open qualifying. He played in pro-ams on each of the next two days, followed by four days of competition in the northern suburbs of New York.

"I haven't even had time to really celebrate my first win," he said. So he's planning to use today as a travel day, possibly take off on Tuesday and play only one practice round on the Hazeltine course Wednesday.

There was nothing of a rookie in the way he played the final nine holes Sunday. He handled them with the poise and control of a veteran, and let the better-known names make the mistakes.

And they did. Irwin, the defending Buick champion as well as the defending title-holder in this week's Open, and Ballesteros, winner of three of four international events coming into this one, each played the back in 2-over-par 37.

Geddes holds off Amy Alcott

SOMERS POINT, N.J. (AP) — Amy Alcott wasn't the only one to feel the pressure of trying to get into the LPGA Hall of Fame.

Jane Geddes — who is nowhere near getting into The Hall — felt it, too, and it nearly cost her the Atlantic City Classic and almost gave Alcott her 30th career win and a permanent place among the greats of women's golf.

Geddes overcame the pressure and delayed Alcott's entry in The Hall with great saves on the final two holes Sunday to capture the Atlantic City Classic by a stroke over Alcott and Cindy Schreyer.

"I never had a flay like today," Geddes said. "It was very emotional. I was trying to win and Amy is going for the Hall of Fame. I envy her in one respect and I wanted it badly, too."

In some ways, Geddes brought the pressure on herself. She played outstanding golf for 12 holes, rolled in four birdies and opened a two-shot lead over Judy Dickinson and a four-shot edge of Alcott, the second-round leader.

Baseball had a jump on Abner Doubleday

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — The legend of Abner Doubleday may never die, but it's becoming more dubious by the day.

Doubleday allegedly invented the game of baseball here in 1839, but historians have already proven that the game is much older.

The earliest known printed reference to organized baseball in America has turned up in the July 13, 1825, edition of the Delhi (N.Y.) Gazette — 14 years before Doubleday's alleged deed. It was discovered recently by someone doing research on a family history.

The newspaper notice from Hamden, N.Y., dated July 12, 1825, contains the names of nine men challenging any group in Delaware County to a game of baseball at the home of Edward B. Chase for $1 each, per game.

"It is a significant find, without any question, for early baseball," said Tom Heitz, librarian at the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown.

Historians have shown that forms of baseball were played in New York state in cities such as Rochester and Genesee in the 1820s. There also are references to baseball as far back as the American Revolution and even earlier references dating back to 1744 in England.

The 1825 find falls roughly into the same category as the claim of Hoboken, N.J., as the home of baseball. Hoboken has laid claim to what is believed to be the first organized baseball match — June 19, 1846. On that day, the New York Nine defeated the New York Knickerbockers 23-1 on a diamond laid out by Alexander Cartwright, a bank clerk who managed the apparently inept Knickerbockers.

It was Cartwright's idea, baseball historians say, to place bases 90 feet apart, to have three outs an inning, a regular batting lineup, only three outfielders and a defensive player at the three infield bases.

The Hall of Fame has lost track of the person who found the 1825 reference.

Geddes

But the 13th hole almost ruined Geddes' day. She popped up her drive on the par-4 dogleg left, had to chip out on her second and eventually settled for a double-bogey 6.

Alcott made matters worse by sinking a 10-foot birdie on the 13th and draining a curving 40-foot birdie on the next hole. That created a three-way tie for the lead with Dickinson, who just as quickly dropped out of contention with a bogey on No. 15 and a double bogey on 16.

Geddes and Alcott, playing in the group behind Dickinson, parred the next two holes and headed to the par-4, 355-yard 17th hole, where the crowd came into play.

Geddes didn't and she drove it way right into the rough, with no shot at the green. It seemed at that point that Alcott was destined to become the 12th member of the LPGA Hall of Fame.

But things didn't work out that way.

Geddes, who won the opening tournament of the year in Jamaica, pitched her second shot from the right rough to the left rough and then hit a sand wedge from about 100 yards to 25 feet left of the hole.

62-48. Jordan took none of them but assisted on three. He finished with 13 assists to Johnson's 11.

Los Angeles showed some life by scoring the first seven points of the fourth quarter, five by Johnson and two by Divac, and extended the spurt to 13-4. That cut the lead to 78-71 with 7:03 left.

The momentum shifted immediately as Chicago got two baskets in 18 seconds. Paxson connected from the left corner. Terry Teagle then missed his shot for the Lakers and Jordan fired a three-quarters court pass to Pippen, ahead of the field, for a dunk that made the score 82-71 with 6:16 remaining.

The lead never dipped below nine after that.

"This is no time for me or the team to get overanxious," Jordan said. The Lakers "are still a potent team."

Not nearly as potent as the team Jordan is a member of.

"He's going great, but so is the team," Johnson said. "When that happens, they're unbeatable."

London wins inaugural World Bowl

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — Dan Crossman intercepted three Scott Erney passes, returning one for a touchdown.

He also intercepted a car.

Being named most valuable player in the first championship game of the World League of American Football meant safety Crossman collected a new car as his prize. He also collected a winner's ring as the London Monarchs shutout the Barcelona Dragons 21-0 in the WLAF's inaugural World Bowl before 61,108 mostly British fans at the home of English soccer.

"I have no idea how to get this car back home," Crossman said. "I just want to know if I have to declare it at customs."

Crossman's interception return for a touchdown came at 2 minutes, 42 seconds of the second quarter.

"I don't think Scott Erney saw me," Crossman said. "He threw it out flat, I was in a forward position and made the catch and ran in for a touchdown."

"I thought we had a completion, but Crossman got up inside and was there to make the play," said Erney, who missed the game's second half with a twisted knee.

Despite the score, the Dragons outgained the Monarchs 332 yards to 245. Barcelona handed London its only defeat of the season, 20-17 two weeks ago.

With Tony Rice replacing Erney in the second half, the Dragons dominated, but failed to get on the scoreboard: "We beat them on the stat sheet, first downs, you name it, everywhere but the scoreboard," Barcelona wide receiver Gene Taylor said.

"It was a game of almosts," said running back Jim Bell. "When you get the ball inside the 20 five different times and don't score, you are not going to win many football games."

Crossman, nose tackle Roy Hart and defensive tackle Mike Renna made sure they didn't.

The Monarchs' first touchdown, on the final play of the first quarter, came on a 59-yard pass play from Stan Gelbaugh to wide receiver John Horton.

The third came 47 seconds before halftime when Gelbaugh threw 14 yards to running back Judd Garrett, capping a 55-yard drive that began with an interception by Crossman.

Orel's bat leads to 100th career victory

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Missing more than a year did nothing to hurt Orel Hershiser's batting eye. In fact, he's hitting .714.

Hershiser pitched seven strong innings and had two key hits as Los Angeles beat Chicago 6-3 at Wrigley Field on Sunday for his first victory in three starts since returning to the rotation.

It was Hershiser's first win since April 19, 1990. Then he underwent surgery to reconstruct his right shoulder in a revolutionary procedure.

There were doubts Hershiser would ever return, and certainly not to the form that made him a Cy Young Award winner in 1988.

"I've waited 13 months for this day," Hershiser said. "Not only to pitch in the big leagues again but to win in the big leagues again. It was against a special team in a special park. Next to Dodger Stadium, Wrigley Field is my favorite place to pitch because of the tradition and the fans."

Hershiser (1-1) allowed two runs, six hits, walked one and struck out six in seven innings for his 100th career victory. Jay Howell got the last three outs.

"It was his 100th victory and that should tell it all," manager Tommy Lasorda said. "I didn't think anybody thought he could come back from that surgery, but knowing him, I said if anyone can do it, the 'Bulldog' can."

Elsewhere in the National League, it was San Diego 5, Pittsburgh 3; Atlanta 8, Montreal 6; Cincinnati 6, Philadelphia 3; San Francisco 3, St. Louis 2; and Houston 1, New York 0.

Hershiser lost his first start on May 29 to Houston 8-2 and pitched 6 r-3 scoreless innings in a game the Dodgers eventually lost 3-2 to St. Louis last Tuesday.

Hershiser, 5-for-7 in three games, had key singles in the fifth inning when the Dodgers scored a pair to tie the score and in the seventh when they broke the tie with three runs.

CHICAGO — Los Angeles Dodgers' Orel Hershiser pitches during game action against the Chicago Cubs Sunday. It was Hershiser's 100th career victory and his first win since April 13, 1990 before he underwent shoulder surgery.

Danny Jackson (0-2) took the loss in his first appearance after coming off the disabled list. Jackson, on the DL since April 20 with a groin injury, gave up 11 hits and five runs in 6 2-3 innings.

The Cubs took the lead in the second when Andre Dawson hit his 10th home run after George Bell doubled.

"When Andre hit the ball out of the park, I didn't feel very effective," Hershiser said. "I made some mistakes but I settled down.

It was nice to get some runs and work from there."

Astros 1, Mets 0
Pete Harnisch pitched a three-hitter and struck out a career-high 11 as Houston edged New York at the Astrodome.

Harnisch, who came to Houston from Baltimore in the Glenn Davis trade, tossed his first major league shutout. The only run he needed came on Ken Caminiti's RBI double in the fourth inning off David Cone (6-4).

Cone gave up three hits in seven innings and struck out eight, increasing his NL lead to 82.

Braves 8, Expos 6
David Justice hit two two-run homers to help Tom Glavine become the NL's first 10-game winner with his eighth consecutive victory as Atlanta beat visiting Montreal.

Justice broke a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning with his second two-run shot off Mark Gardner (1-3). Glavine (10-2) became the first

Yankees beat faltering Texas Rangers

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Neither the Minnesota Twins nor the New York Yankees are favored to win their respective American League divisions. In fact, they were preseason picks to finish near the bottom.

But, the two will start a three-game series Tuesday night at the Metrodome as the hottest teams in baseball.

The Twins, who haven't contended since their World Series championship in 1987, won their eighth straight by beating the Cleveland Indians 9-2 Sunday. The Yankees beat Texas 6-4 for their 12th victory in 16 games.

"It's a confidence thing," said Jack Morris, who pitched five-hit ball for eight innings and improved his record against Cleveland to 28-9. "You know something good is going to happen. If you keep the game close, somebody has a chance to hit the ball in the seats and break open the game on offense."

Morris (7-5) won his fourth consecutive game, giving the Twins their first eight-game winning streak since May 22-29, 1988. "I'm very prejudiced," Morris said. "Pitching wins everything. I wanted to finish the game, but the starting pitchers have been throwing well and some of the guys in the bullpen needed the work. One guy isn't going to carry a team."

Morris allowed one earned run, struck out three and walked three.

"I didn't have real good stuff, but I found my rhythm in the second inning," he said. "It's good to know that I don't have to have good stuff once in awhile and can still throw a pretty good game."

In other games, California beat Detroit 7-3, Chicago beat Kansas City 8-2, Seattle beat Milwaukee 6-1, Oakland beat Boston 8-0 and Toronto beat Baltimore 3-2.

Rod Nichols (0-5) was the loser as the Indians lost their fourth straight. They have not scored more than two runs in seven straight games.

"We've been struggling to score runs," Joel Skinner said, "but you have to keep on an even keel. You can't get too down when you're heading south and you can't get too high when you're heading north."

Shane Mack led the Twins with a three-run homer in the seventh inning.

Yankees 6, Rangers 4
Rookie Pat Kelly hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning as the Yankees completed a three-game sweep and sent visiting Texas to its seventh straight loss.

John Habyan (4-1), the third of four Yankees pitchers, was the winner and Steve Farr pitched a hitless ninth for his sixth save.

Kelly's homer, the second of his major league career, came off former Yankee Rich Gossage (4-1) after Alvaro Espinoza singled with one out in the eighth. The Rangers blew a 4-1 lead.

"I was feeling really slow," Kelly said. "You know, a day game after a night game, you feel a little tired. But now I feel great."

New York has won six games in its final at-bat during the streak.

Angels 7, Tigers 3
Chuck Finley gave up one run and struck out nine in 6 2-3 innings at Anaheim Stadium to become the AL's first 10-game winner.

Finley (10-2) joined Atlanta's Tom Glavine as the majors' only 10-game winners. He has 83 strikeouts, second in the league to Roger Clemens' 88.

Wally Joyner and Dave Winfield hit home runs for the Angels.

White Sox 8, Royals 2
Jack McDowell retired the first

18 batters and finished with a four-hitter as Chicago completed its first three-game sweep at Royals Stadium since 1974.

McDowell (7-3), who two-hit Detroit on April 13, struck out three and walked two as the White Sox won their fourth straight. He lost his no-hit bid when Gary Thurman led off the seventh with a single.

Mike Boddicker (5-5) allowed six hits and six runs in 5 1-3 innings.

Athletics 8, Red Sox 0
Bob Welch pitched a five-hitter and Harold Baines drove in three runs with a double and a homer as Oakland sent the visiting Red Sox to their 11th loss in 15 games.

Vance Law had two doubles and two RBIs and Mark McGwire added a solo home run as Oakland won after losing the first two games of the three-game series.

Tom Bolton (5-4) gave up four runs and seven hits in one-plus inning.

Mariners 6, Brewers 1
Brian Holman pitched a five-hitter in the Kingdome as Seattle sent the Brewers to their seventh straight loss.

Harold Reynolds' three-run homer broke a 1-1 tie in the seventh and allowed Holman (7-5) to beat

National League

Atlanta pitcher to win eight in a row since Pasqua! Perez won nine in a row over a two-season span in 1982-83. Phil Niekro won eight in succession during the 1982 season.

Padres 5, Pirates 3
Tony Gwynn extended his hitting streak to 15 games with a triple and tie-breaking single, leading San Diego over Pittsburgh at Three Rivers Stadium. The streaking Padres have won eight of their last 10 games.

Andy Benes (4-6) gave up six hits and three runs in 8 2-3 innings. Zane Smith (7-4) lost his second straight start.

Gwynn is hitting .439 (25-for-57) during his hitting streak, the longest in the NL this season.

Reds 6, Phillies 3
Glenn Braggs hit a pair of sacrifice flies to erase a two-run deficit and Barry Larkin homered and singled in a run as Cincinnati rallied past Philadelphia at Riverfront Stadium.

Chris Sabo had an RBI single, a double and a triple off Terry Mulholland (6-5) to help the Reds overcome a 2-0 first-inning deficit.

Tom Browning (8-4) gave up a pair of runs on four hits in the first inning, then checked the Phillies off just two hits over the next five to get his fourth victory in his last five starts.

Giants 3, Cardinals 2
Kevin Bass' two-run single broke an eighth-inning tie as visiting San Francisco beat St. Louis for the Giants' sixth victory in their last eight games.

Greg Litton homered for San Francisco and John Burkett (4-3) gave up three hits and one run in eight innings. Jeff Brantley relieved Dave Righetti with one out and two on in the ninth and finished for his fifth save.

Jose DeLeon dropped to 2-5.

American League

Jaime Navarro (5-4). Navarro took a 1-0 lead and a four-hitter into the inning.

Blue Jays 3, Orioles 2
Todd Stottlemyre held Baltimore to three hits in seven innings as visiting Toronto gained a split of the four-game series.

Stottlemyre (6-2) won for the first time since May 13, striking out four and walking three. Tom Henke got the final out of the five-hitter for his eighth save, getting Dwight Evans on a pop up with runners on first and second.

Jeff Ballard (3-7) gave up seven hits and all three runs in six-plus innings as the Orioles lost for the fifth time in seven games.

Boss 'brides' again

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Springsteen has married for the second time, wedding singer Patti Scialfa in a weekend ceremony at their home. The couple wed Saturday evening, surrounded by family and friends. Springsteen spokeswoman Marilyn Laverty said Sunday. No other wedding details were released. Springsteen, 41, and Scialfa, 37, have a son, Evan James, born last July. Springsteen, whose hits include "Born to Run" and "Dancing in the Dark," was married four years to actress Julianne Phillips. They BRUCE SPRINGSTEEN AND PATTI SCIALFA divorced in 1989. Miss Scialfa was a backup singer in Springsteen's E Street Band.

New kid gets great break

NEW YORK (AP) — Kam Cheng never waited tables. She doesn't have blisters on her feet from pounding the pavement to countless auditions. And she's never had a bit part in an off-Broadway play. So what's this 22-year-old doing sharing the female lead role in the Broadway hit "Miss Saigon"? "I'm having the best time," Cheng said. She almost didn't try out for the part she now performs twice a week, filling in for Lea Salonga, who just won the Tony Award for best actress in a musical. After driving from her family's home in Sewell, N.J., to New York the night before the audition, Cheng decided she wasn't good enough, that she didn't have the experience to land a part on Broadway.

TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Highly motivated and unafraid of hard work, you are destined to find both satisfaction and prominence in your chosen field. A supervisory position will bring increased income and prestige next month. Your natural reserve is seen as a challenge by those who want to know you better in the fall. A new romance could prove very fulfilling at Christmas.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: explorer Jacques Cousteau, actors Gene Wilder and Chad Everett, composer Richard Strauss.
