Home values down 12 percent in county

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Home values for tax purposes in Howard County dropped 12 percent from values set last year by the Howard County Appraisal District, estimates released today show.

Of 10,229 homes — not including more than 200 trailer homes — in the county, the average value this year was set at about $22,844, down from $25,921 last year.

Total property values in the county, which includes mineral values, dropped only 4 percent.

Total estimated property value this year is $1.2 billion, down $53 million from last year. Most of that drop, $32 million, was in home values.

Forsan is the only area expected to see an overall increase in home values, said Chief Appraiser Keith Toomire. But estimates on homes in Forsan were not ready by early today.

Other homes in the county will also increase in value, but it is too early to tell how many or how much values will change, Toomire said. "There are some increases," he said. "I know that." No large drops in home values are expected.

Estimates available today show that the Forsan Independent School District has the largest overall home value drop, at 20 percent. However, Toomire said that drop is probably not that large. The figures will be readjusted when figures for the city of Forsan are completed.

The current figures show that homes in the Forsan school district are valued at an average of $26,269 compared to $32,651 for last year.

The other big drops are in Big Spring and the Big Spring school district, where average values dropped 13 percent. Averages in the city of Big Spring are $21,699, compared to $25,049 last year. Homes in the school district are about $400 to $450 higher than those in Big Spring.

Average home values in Coahoma and the Coahoma school district dropped less than 1 percent. The average value in the city of Coahoma is $22,663, compared to $22,870 last year. Homes in the school district are about $4,000 higher than those in the city.

Toomire said he plans to mail notices of value changes to property owners sometime this week. Adjustments to value estimates are expected as owners question or contest assessments of property. Besides homes, there are about 13,000 other parcels of property in the county, including vacant lots, businesses, farm land and trailer homes.

Juneteenth fete set for Big Spring

D. Rock Productions will sponsor a Juneteenth barbecue in celebration of the day in 1865 that Texas learned the Emancipation Proclamation signed by President Lincoln had freed the slaves.

Danny Sherman, owner of D. Rock Productions, said the barbecue Wednesday at the Dora Roberts Community Center in the city park will begin at 11 a.m. and continue through 6 p.m. After the barbecue, from 7-9:30 p.m. in the city park, music and entertainment is scheduled, and refreshments, including hot dogs and hamburgers, will be served.

Sherman said he will be serving chicken, brisket, ribs, sausage, home-made Texas hot links and Boston butts, a select cut of pork that's similar to brisket.

The public is invited to attend the celebration. The cost for the barbecue is $5 a plate and tickets may be purchased at the door.

VA clinic set at Dyess June 27

A Veterans Administration follow-up clinic has been scheduled for June 27 from 8:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene. Veterans will be seen by appointment only, and appointments must be made by June 21. No initial evaluations will be accepted.

To schedule an appointment, contact Dan Garcia, Taylor County Service Officer at 915-677-1711, extension 328 or 329, or call the scheduling clerk at the Big Spring VA Medical Center at 264-4811. Only one family member may accompany the veteran to the clinic. Medication refills are also accepted on clinic days.

State DOC plans grant workshops

The Texas Department of Commerce will have four workshops to aid applicants in applying for the 1991 Texas Community Development Program. Topics will include several funding categories such as the emergency/need fund, the planning capacity fund and the newly created colonia fund. Local elected officials and the public are invited to attend. There is no charge.

The workshop will focus on goals and objective of the programs. Information on current application and selection procedures will also be discussed.

The location for the area workshop is in Lubbock at the South Plains Association of Governments Board Room, 1323 58th St. (the corner of 58th and Avenue P). Contact Debra Stubblefield at 806-762-8721. Registration is 8:30 a.m. and the workshop continues through 5 p.m.

Plane broke up in flight

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — A plane that crashed near here earlier this month, killing two Texans aboard, began breaking apart while in flight through a thunderstorm, says a preliminary report of an investigation of the accident.

The wings were found sheared off when the 1977 Cessna 210 was discovered about six miles east of here, said Arnold Scott, an investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board in Denver, Colo.

"The wings failed from overload," Scott said. "The metal was torn back like a piece of paper."

The preliminary report issued by Scott does not conclude what caused the June 3 crash, he said. However, he said, it appears that several parts of the plane broke off while still in flight because the wreckage was scattered over half a mile in a pasture near a cotton field.

Local law enforcement officials said they suspect that thunderstorms dumping 3½ inches of rain in the area that morning may have been the cause of the wreck, which killed pilot Lee Terrell, 24, of Hurst and passenger John William Stokes, 46, of Weatherford. No other passengers were on board.

The plane, enroute from Ft. Worth to Midland, was about 15 miles southeast of Big Spring when Terrell radioed the control center at a Ft. Worth airport at 6:58 a.m. to report "moderate to severe turbulence," Scott said. Big Spring is 36 miles west of Colorado City.

"That was the last radio contact they had with them and they disappeared from radar," he said. The plane was discovered by the Civil Air Patrol about 6 p.m. following a day-long search in which local law enforcement officials assisted.

A final determination of the cause of the accident may not be issued by the Safety Board in Washington until early next year, Scott said.

Other parts of the plane that broke off include the horizontal stabilizer, the horizontal vertical elevators and the rudder ailerons, he said. The bodies of Terrell and Stokes were found nearby.

Farmers' Market to open

By CHARLENE WALKER
For the Herald

Garden-fresh fruit and vegetables will be available again this year at the Permian Basin Farmers' Market. The stands will open at 7 a.m. Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2300 Gregg St. beginning Wednesday.

The farmers' market provides an outlet for the locally grown agricultural products of 29 members and their families. "The main volume of vegetables to begin with will be onions, tomatoes and squash, but as the season progresses so will the variety of produce," said Dennis Schraeder, a St. Lawrence farmer and president of the farmers' market.

For the largest selection of produce, it is best to arrive at the market early in the day, Schraeder said. Later in the day

Vision seminar helpful in defining roles

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

Moore Development for Big Spring Inc. board members said a Saturday seminar helped more clearly define their role and that of other entities in the economic development process.

Members of the economic development corporation sponsored "Big Spring Vision 2000" Saturday, a joint meeting for officials of the college, city, county, school district and chamber of commerce. Leaders there were urged to use long-range, diverse thinking in planning for development.

Board President Owen Ivie said the meeting achieved its desired outcome, a "solidarity of our willingness to launch out on a difficult course."

"We've got to bring all of our citizens of Big Spring together, people of every race, creed and color," Ivie said. "We've got to listen to and take advice."

Board member Jeff Morris said board members, after speaking with consultant Howard Putnam and guest speaker Don Beck, have

"We've got to bring all of our citizens of Big Spring together, people of every race, creed and color. We've got to listen to and take advice."

Owen Ivie

decided to form a core group to develop a vision, or flexible plan, for Big Spring's future.

"I would definitely support the development of a core group," Morris said. "I think we're in agreement that we need to move quickly to act on this."

Jim Purcell said the core group could act as the top of a pyramid, spreading knowledge to a wide base of people in the community as well as taking input from that base.

"It would need to work both ways," he said. "We might be surprised that the consensus of the people might be the same. I know many in our community would like improvement in jobs, pay, and the standard of living in general."

Steve Fraser said the core group should not develop the vision plan alone. "The ideas should come from the community," he said. "The core group should make the vision that is representative of all parts of the community using input from the community."

Beck and Putnam advocated use of a "barn-raising mentality," in which local citizens would contribute to the effort with hands-on support. Purcell said he supports the idea.

"I think things are taken care of more by people who had a part in (creating it)," he said. Big Spring Christmas in April is one example of one local program that uses that concept and has been successful, Purcell said.

Executive Director Ted St. Clair said he gained an appreciation for new methods of development work.

Appraisal district anticipating increased protests

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

With a full reappraisal of homes and other property in Howard County this year, appraisal district officials say they are preparing for possibly twice as many protests as last year. Guides on how to appeal say: Know the system and be prepared.

Howard County Appraisal District Chief Appraiser Keith Toomire said he plans to mail up to 16,000 notices this week notifying property owners of changes in values from last year. Notices of mineral value changes were mailed last month.

Any protests need to be in writing to the appraisal district within 30 days after receiving the notice, according to state law. A protest must identify the owner, the property involved and say that there is a dissatisfaction.

"We made every effort to not make a mistake but we're not foolish enough to think that we didn't," said Chief Appraiser Keith Toomire of this year's estimates. "I'd like to stress to (taxpayers) to not be afraid or apprehensive about calling in."

A partial reappraisal of county property values in 1990 resulted in 100-150 complaints and inquiries, Toomire said. Eventually, 45 disputes were settled, some of which lowered values by a total of $10.7 million.

But a full reappraisal of all property in the county this year is expected to bring more protests, Toomire said. "With new schedules I don't know what to expect. I'm preparing for around 300."

Fundamentally affecting changes in values this year was an equalization program, Toomire said. "If their house is comparable to my house, your house or another house and their value is higher, the only difference should be in the square footage of the living area, the upkeep of the house and additional buildings."

Attempts were made to set property values at market values, Toomire said. "We based our schedules on our sales."

Those wanting to know about the appeal process can get a taxpayers guide prepared by the State Property Tax Board at the appraisal office at 315 S. Main. The National Taxpayers Union in Washington — 325 S.E. Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C. 20003 — is also providing a guide.

Among suggestions in those guides are the following recommendations to property owners:

- Make sure you have tax exemptions that you qualify for. There are exemptions for homeowners, people over 65, disabled homeowners, veterans and survivors of veterans disabled or killed in a war. Also, agricultural land qualifies for reduced property valuations. A Manual for the Appraisal of Agricultural Land by the State Property Tax Board explains qualifications and how values are calculated.

- Check if the property description is correct. Are the measurements for your house or business and lot correct? Gather blueprints, deed records, photographs, a survey, or your own measurements.

- Check to see whether the appraiser considered defects that would tend to reduce a house's sale, such as a cracked foundation or inadequate plumbing. Get photographs, statements from builders or independent appraisals.

- Get an independent appraisal by a real estate appraiser. Insurance records may also be helpful.

- Get information on similar properties in your area to compare values. Records on properties are available to the public from the appraisal district office. Information of sale prices of properties can be obtained from neighbors and real estate professionals.

- See if you can work out an agreement with appraisal district officials before filing a protest. However, do not contact any of the appraisal review board members, a judicial board which settles disagreements between you and the appraisal district. If your case goes before the board, you will be asked to sign an affidavit saying you have not discussed your case with any board members.

- If you are not satisfied with a appraisal review board decision, you must file a petition for review of the case in district court within

Expert on forest music wins $260,000

AUSTIN (AP) — A University of Texas anthropologist who researches the music made by natives of the Papua New Guinea rain forests became the only Texan to win a MacArthur Fellowship this year.

Steven Feld, 41, was one of 31 people receiving the award Monday. He was given a grant of $260,000.

The jazz trombonist, with interests in African and Oceanic music, said he traveled to the jungles of Papua New Guinea to study how the people of the rain forest adapt to the varied sounds around them.

"I have found that the Kaluli people of Papua New Guinea are so in synch with their environment that the music they create is intertwined with the natural sounds of the rain forest they live in," he said.

Richards hopes to settle jail crowding

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards is hoping to revive legislation that would settle jail crowding lawsuits brought by counties forced to hold state prisoners, aides said.

All 13 counties involved in lawsuits against the state would have to agree to the plan by midnight last Sunday for it to become law. Harris County scuttled the plan by refusing to drop its lawsuit.

But Richards' staff said Monday that they wanted to resume negotiations.

"Our negotiator here remains somewhat hopeful," said Chuck McDonald, the governor's deputy press secretary. "This issue isn't dead."

The Legislature convenes July 8 for a special session on the state budget. Richards could add the prison bill to the session's agenda if a deal is struck with Harris County.

Removal of mixed couple criticized

NEWTON (AP) — A high school principal who asked a black student and his white date to leave a senior prom has been reprimanded by the school board in this Southeast Texas city.

Lidney Thompson's reprimand by Newton district trustees Monday followed a closed-door session with the guardian of James Weaver, a 19-year-old senior.

Weaver had been asked to leave the Newton High School prom in May after he arrived with companion Sara Moak.

Thompson said that he asked the two to leave because he feared allowing a mixed-race couple into the prom might have sparked a fight between black and white students.

San Angelo residents support Goodfellow

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Residents in this defense-minded West Texas city are hoping their banners, balloons and ballyhoo will keep today from being D-Day for Goodfellow Air Force Base.

Local residents have responded with a call to arms at the announcement that Goodfellow may be closed as part of a nationwide downsizing of the country's military bases.

Two members of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission have scheduled a public hearing this afternoon on Goodfellow's future.

And a troop of local support is ready. City officials say attendance at today's meeting could reach 5,000.

Dozens of retailers were expected to close this afternoon to allow employees to attend the 3 p.m. public hearing, which was moved from city hall to a civic auditorium to accommodate more people.

Officials say the city's mostly agriculture and oil-based economy could not survive losing Goodfellow, San Angelo's leading employer.

"You can't ignore the economic impact," said San Angelo mayor Don Butts. "It would be devastating."

City leaders and residents were shocked when Goodfellow was added to the list of base closure candidates at the beginning of this month by the base closure commission.

Other Texas installations targeted for closure include Carswell AFB in Fort Worth, Bergstrom AFB in Austin, Chase Field Naval Air Station in Beville

SAN ANGELO — San Angeloans paint posters in support of Goodfellow Air Force Base onto wooden frames to be set out around town. San Angelo and Kingsville Naval Air Station in Kingsville.

Residents are fighting to have the base taken off the government's list of proposed closure sites.

Volunteers have dedicated thousands of hours to saving Goodfellow, decorating the city with red, white and blue ribbons and shiny bumper stickers.

"If they close Goodfellow, it's not going to be for a lack of support," said Jeannie Beck, a volunteer who helped put together dozens of four-foot tall signs reading "Save Goodfellow." The signs have been sprinkled all over the city.

Mrs. Beck, who has lived in San Angelo all of her life and whose father was stationed at Goodfellow, said the city is protecting the 50-year-old base like a member of the family.

"It's a marriage relationship," she said. "The base personnel fit right into the community. We need each other."

Hundreds of residents will line the route of the base closing officials with banners and balloons.

Two weeks ago, city officials handed out postcards at local churches to be returned with supportive comments and given to base closing officials.

About 12,000 of the cards have been collected.

Economic impact statements show San Angelo's unemployment could surge from 6.5 percent to 15 percent if the more than 4,000 personnel at Goodfellow and their families are forced to leave.

San Angelo would lose $181 million in regional income and at least three schools would close, according to reports compiled by the city.

Goodfellow was added as a possible substitute for Denver's Lowry Air Force Base on the final list after several Colorado politicians suggested closing Goodfellow would be more cost-effective.

Despite the finger-pointing, city officials say they refuse to get into a catfight with Colorado leaders.

Dairy farmers losing their land

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas dairy farmers battered by the lowest milk prices in more than a decade are rapidly sliding into financial ruin, says Rep. Jim Chapman.

"They're calling the bank and saying 'Send out the trucks and load up the cows, we can't hold on any more.'"

Chapman says some Texas dairy operations have run out of money to repay bank loans or buy fertilizer for the next hay crop, while others are being driven from land in their families for a generation or more. Yet the Agriculture Department, he contends, has been oblivious to the effects of milk prices below the costs of production.

"Every week, dairy men are going broke in Texas and across the country," said Chapman, a Democrat from Hopkins County, home to more than 500 dairy farms, most of them family operations.

Chapman said Monday that farmers can't produce milk at today's prices and face summer, when cows produce less milk than the rest of the year, with little cash on hand for their leanest months.

"They've been squeezed all through the first part of the year, and that squeeze will become intolerable through the summer months, which means they will be unable to come anywhere close to meeting the expenses of operating," said Chapman, who was scheduled to testify today before a House committee investigating options for managing the nation's milk supply.

"It's going to force dairy farmers, some of whom have been farming for two generations or more, out of business," he said.

Rising production and declining exports have helped push milk prices down for dairy farmers and are expected to average $11.60 per hundred pounds in 1990-91, the lowest level since 1978-79.

"We have a tremendous financial catastrophe in dairy country," agreed Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee's dairy subcommittee.

Stenholm, who represents Erath County, Texas' other major dairy producing county, said he hopes to have legislation to manage the nation's dairy inventory on President Bush's desk by early August. The subcommittee plans to begin marking up legislation following today's hearing.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, agreed USDA had "sure failed to stand up for farmers on this one."

"From every indication, they're happy with the way things are and they stand as a major hurdle for those of us in Congress who are pushing for price supports that will allow Texans dairy farmers to stay in business," he said.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said that while it's clear there's a "crisis situation" in the dairy industry, it is "premature" to assess USDA's response.

TEXAS CITY — Kristan Hanks, 9, and her brother Brandon, 6, hold "Minnie," a three-week-old puppy with spots that look like the Disney character. Five-month-old Jordan, whose room is decorated with Mickey Mouse characters, looks on. Disney has shown interest in purchasing the puppy.

Groups criticize redistricting plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Civil and minority rights groups criticized Gov. Ann Richards after she allowed the state House and Senate redistricting plans to become law.

The groups filed amended lawsuits in state and federal court in Brownsville on Monday.

The Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund, Texas Rural Legal Aid and the Texas Civil Rights Project allege the legislative redistricting plans fail to ensure enough minority representation that reflects the state's minority population.

The groups also allege that because the Legislature failed to draw new congressional and State Board of Education districts, the 1980 lines could remain in effect for another 10 years.

James Harrington, of the Texas Civil Rights Project, criticized Richards for not vetoing the state House and Senate district lines, which were strongly opposed by a coalition of black and Hispanic organizations.

"It's unfortunate that the governor hasn't paid more attention to the minority communities strongly united behind her candidacy," Harrington said.

Richards said she appreciated the concerns of minorities, and that is why she didn't sign the redistricting bills.

Harrington said that by not vetoing the plans, the result is the same — "Whether you wink at them or kiss them doesn't make the pigs any less dirty," he said.

Jose Garza, an attorney for Texas Rural Legal Aid, said lawmakers implemented "textbook" examples of devising districts that either packed or divided Hispanic or black populations to prevent more minorities from being elected.

To reflect the state's population, he said, there should be about 38 Hispanic House seats and eight in the Senate. But, he said, the new plans would allow about 28 in the House and possibly fewer than the current five in the Senate.

The first 1990 census tally showed Texas has about 17 million people, including 25 percent Hispanic and 12 percent black. A newer count released last week, would boost that total to about 17.5 million. U.S. Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher must decide by July 15 which figures will become law.

Republicans have already filed lawsuits challenging the new legislative districts.

Officials want flag

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 155 years ago, a battle at a former mission in San Antonio grew into a legend in Texas' fight for independence.

Now Texas officials want what could be a flag that flew over the Alamo during the 13-day siege between 5,000 Mexican troops and 187 Texas volunteers.

Gov. Ann Richards, without signing the measure, allowed a resolution to take effect that asks Mexico's President Salinas de Gortari to either give the flag back or loan it to Texas "as a gesture of goodwill."

It also urges President Bush, through his intermediaries in free trade talks, to push for return of the banner.

The flag was used by the New Orleans Greys, a volunteer outfit in the Texas Revolution against Mexico, according to The Handbook of Texas.

Given to them by a group of East Texas women, the Greys left the flag at San Antonio when they went on to Goliad and Refugio.

Visit will require careful handling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boris N. Yeltsin's visit to the United States as the first popularly elected president of Russia presents a delicate challenge for President Bush.

Bush wants to celebrate the spread of the democratic process that Yeltsin's victory in last week's balloting represents. But he will try to avoid any move that could be interpreted as an attempt to undermine the leadership of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Yeltsin, the newly chosen leader of the Soviet Union's largest republic, is coming to the United States to establish his identity as leader of a sovereign European state, a Yeltsin spokesman said Monday. The administration can be expected to offer him little encouragement in that regard.

Bush last week hailed Yeltsin's electoral triumph as a victory for democracy, and he repeatedly has prodded Gorbachev to undertake the sort of fundamental economic reform that Yeltsin advocates.

It also has been an official goal of the administration to broaden contacts with republic and local officials.

Flags fly for conference

BERLIN — The flags of the 34 nations attending the meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe wave in front of the Berlin Reichstag building Monday. The meeting takes place on June 19-20.

Women prove themselves in gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The exemplary performance of female warriors during Operation Desert Storm is posing a serious challenge to the U.S. military's 43-year-old policy of excluding women from combat.

Of the 540,000 U.S. military personnel assigned to the Persian Gulf region during the war, 35,000 were women. Eleven of them died — five in hostile action.

The women's performance did not go unnoticed in the House, which last month approved a provision to the 1992 defense budget that would permit the Air Force and Navy to use female pilots to fly combat missions.

The measure has become one of the hotly debated issues of the military bill and was being explored today by the Senate Armed Services manpower and personnel subcommittee.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney met Monday with the service chiefs and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin Powell, to discuss the legislation, government sources said.

One source, who declined to be identified, predicted that no major shift in policy would be announced at the hearing and that the officials would offer to look at opening more positions to women once the legislation is passed.

Shots fired at Carter building site

CARTER AT WORK

MIAMI (AP) — Shots were fired Monday near a construction site where former President Carter was working with other volunteers, police said. One volunteer was grazed in the head.

Investigators believe the shots were fired between two cars and were not targeted at the project or Carter, said Metro-Dade police Lt. John Pace.

Carter, about a block away from the shooting site, was not hurt.

"When a former president or somebody famous comes to a place, they try to cause a little disturbance," Carter said before police said it may have been stray gunfire.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, are working with Habitat for Humanity.

FBI agents say unfair preferences being given

WASHINGTON (AP) — White FBI agents who say the bureau is giving unfair job preferences to women and minorities aren't the only FBI employees complaining about hiring and promotion policies.

An FBI survey of 3,000 FBI employees suggests that the complaints of white agents were spawned by dissatisfaction with personnel practices from a wide cross-section of the bureau's rank and file.

Those complaints have prompted a Justice Department review of the hiring practices at the FBI, which allows women and minorities to pass the entrance test for new agents at a lower score.

The survey of agents, professional staff and support personnel found that 69 percent felt the bureau's career boards did not promote the best candidates. Sixty-eight percent of white employees and 70 percent of blacks felt the best candidates weren't promoted.

The survey was undertaken by FBI Director William S. Sessions as part of his efforts to deal with longstanding charges of racism against the FBI, which has settled several discrimination lawsuits by black and Hispanic employees in recent years.

Sessions is also poised to announce disciplinary measures to be taken against 11 agents involved in harassment of Donald Rochon, a former black agent who last year settled his lawsuit. The deal under which Rochon will be paid his full salary and pension could end up costing the bureau more than $1 million.

One agent, Richard Ganslein, recently was given a three-week suspension for initially denying that he had been involved with fellow white agents in harassment of Rochon in the Chicago field office, according to a law enforcement source.

An internal investigation found that FBI supervisors and managers failed to promptly respond to the black agents' complaints and may have been guilty of retaliating against Rochon.

White males make up nearly 90 percent of the bureau's 10,000 agents despite recent efforts to recruit more women and minorities.

Sessions has placed minorities on career boards that select agents for promotion and ordered that records be kept of all the panels' discussions.

Low AIDS rate noted in health field

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Two studies indicate a relatively low number of AIDS victims among U.S. health care workers and suggest that the chances of the infected workers passing the virus to patients is extremely remote.

The reports, presented Monday at the annual International Conference on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, could ease growing fears of AIDS transmission from doctors, dentists and nurses.

A survey of approximately 33,600 health care workers who gave blood last year at 20 facilities around the United States found 42 were carrying the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which can lead to AIDS.

Of the infected group, 20 people reported behavior traits that put them at risk for contracting AIDS, according to the study by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"The risk closely resembles the risk of a vehicular fatality during transportation to and from the hospital," said the study's author, Albert B. Lowenfels.

According to the CDC, there may have been between 12 and 129 cases of HIV transmission from surgeon or dentist to patient in the United States in the past 10 years.

Judge in controversial trial killed

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Gunmen today killed a judge who was presiding over the controversial criminal trials of several members of former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's party, including her husband, Asif Ali Zardari.

Police said the judge, Nabi Sher Junejo, was killed along with his bodyguard and chauffeur when the gunmen opened fire on his car early this morning. No one claimed responsibility and police said no arrests were made.

"The judge had just stepped into his car when another car sped past and opened fire," said a Karachi lawyer who witnessed the attack. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Junejo had received threatening telephone calls warning him to abandon the controversial anti-terrorist court he had been sitting on. The provincial government refused to speculate who might be behind the threats.

One-judge anti-terrorist courts were set up by President Ghulam Ishaq Khan after he dismissed Ms. Bhutto's government in August, accusing her of power abuse and political ineptitude.

Blacks waiting for voting rights

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Anti-apartheid leaders and ordinary people alike say parliament's repeal of the 41-year-old law that classified all South Africans by race does little to improve the lot of blacks.

"It doesn't give us the right to vote. We are still not represented in parliament," said one black man questioned about the repeal Monday of the Population Registration Act.

Newspapers today urged the main opposition African National Congress to quickly enter negotiations with President F.W. de Klerk on a new constitution, which would extend voting rights to the 30-million black majority.

The ANC called Monday's repeal of 1950 legislation largely symbolic because racial classifications would continue.

Shift resources to demand side

The U.S. government spends nearly $12 billion a year to combat narcotics abuse. 70 percent of this sum is devoted to reducing the supply of drugs (interdiction, law enforcement, international activities), while only 30 percent is dedicated to curtailing demand (education, treatment). Yet programs aimed at the demand side of the problem have yielded far greater success than those directed at the supply side. This suggests a fundamental imbalance exists in the way the United States allocates its limited anti-drug resources.

A San Diego-based panel of experts from the United States, Latin America and Canada has highlighted this glaring disparity in funding priorities and has proposed a far-reaching shift in emphasis.

The recommendations of the Inter-American Commission on Drug Policy, sponsored by the Institute of the Americas and the Center for Iberian and Latin American Studies at the University of California at San Diego, deserve attention in capitals throughout the hemisphere, but especially in Washington. The group has proposed a coherent framework for a more effective campaign against illicit drug use.

In capsule, the commission has concluded the federal government's massive interdiction efforts along U.S. borders have failed to stem drug shipments enough to seriously disrupt supplies or make their cost prohibitive for users.

For instance, even as U.S. programs to intercept drugs have grown to more than $2 billion a year, the cost and availability of cocaine in this country have remained about the same. During the same period, the tragic epidemic of crack cocaine has spread alarmingly.

In addition, the panel believes crop-substitution programs designed to halt production of cocoa leaf by impoverished peasants in South America have failed their mission. And the group argues that herbicidal spraying to eradicate drug crops in Latin America should be halted because of the environmental risks and political opposition it provokes.

Not all commission members embraced this assessment, which runs counter to Washington's longstanding focus on law enforcement.

Panel member Peter B. Bensinger, a former head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, dissents from the view that less money should be invested in interdiction endeavors. But the nine other commissioners believe much of the money spent on these ineffective activities should be redirected to programs centered on the demand side of the equation.

Specifically, the panel asserts that street-level law-enforcement programs can more readily disrupt the availability of drugs than seizure activities along the border. And it believes greater dividends are to be gained from spending more heavily on treatment programs, especially in prisons, where a large percentage of offenders are addicts.

Higher priority also should be given to education and counseling in schools and the work place, because such programs have proven they can deliver the greatest long-term results. The panel also calls for drug-abusing women of child-bearing age to be targeted for treatment in order to check the spread of AIDS through contact with infected intravenous needles.

The UCSD report makes a strong case that America's spending priorities are upside down. What cannot be disputed is that scant progress is being made now in the anti-drug campaign. A sweeping redistribution of resources from the supply side to the demand side could make a significant difference.

Hiding from sun, recession

You hear the figures being quoted by financial reporters. The economy is up — it's down — and the big turnaround will be on Babe Ruth's birthday. Where do the forecasts come from?

They are released by government economists like Jim Warner.

Warner works in a small windowless room on the third floor of the U.S. Bureau of Highs and Lows. He has been there for 20 years and has never seen the sun.

When I went to visit him, he was bent over his desk studying what appeared to be a printout.

"Warner," I said, "when will the recession be over?"

He blinked his eyes. "The recession is over."

"Are you crazy? Have you been out in the street? Every other store has its windows covered with white paint, and there are Space For Rent signs all over the place. Half the buildings in Washington have For Lease banners hanging from the roof. Go out and see with your own eyes."

"I never leave the office," Warner replied. "It confuses me. We economists believe that what you don't see can't hurt you."

"So, if you won't look, how do you know whether there is a recession or not?"

"I pore over these printouts. A bottom line never lies."

"Today I read that 100,000 more people were laid off in the manufacturing arm of American industry. Doesn't that tell you something?" I asked.

"It wasn't in my computer," Warner said. "People have a strange idea of how economists work. We are in the business of collating numbers. The more numbers we collate, the more accurate are our predictions. Now you may walk down the street and see empty shops, or maybe your son can't get a job, and perhaps you are unable to get a loan from the bank. So you think there is a recession."

"What would you call it?"

"It's a slight misfortune, but it isn't a recession. The only device that can recognize whether it's a recession or not is this high-tech laser printer which can spit out 14 data sheets of bad news a minute."

"If the recession is over, why doesn't it show up in profits?"

"It takes time to pick up after a recession is finished — maybe two or three years. My job isn't to forecast the exact shape of the recovery."

"Whose job is that?" I asked Warner.

"Donna Hickman's, but she was laid off by Richard Darman in the OMB Monday Night Massacre. I hear it was a terrible blood bath, but I didn't see it because I have no windows."

"Why don't you come out with me for lunch and look at what's going on in the country?"

"I can't do that. I might see something that could affect my economic game plan. I am only interested in the evidence that's forwarded to me by all the other U.S. agencies."

"I'm happy that you're certain the recession has bottomed out," I told Warner.

"If I wasn't, the administration would find somebody who was."

Ready, anxious and waiting

By EUNICE CHOATE For the Herald

My granddaughter Claire has a security blanket. She told her mother once, "It's never a good day when you forget your blanket." It made me remember how blamed hard it can be to be a child.

For the first 12 or 14 years they get up every day and prepare to face the enemy. That's us, the adults who are supposed to be in charge. By the time they are about two years old they've figured out that (however they phrase it in their minds) the only thing consistent about adults is our inconsistency.

We call that stage The Terrible Twos. They must view parents then as The Terrible Twosomes. In their eyes — we're out to get them. The different stages progress from year to year, and all the children have at hand to operate their lives on is what we teach them. Sometimes we forget something.

My husband says he must have been 18 or 19 years old before he learned to sing in church. He had a nice voice, and he could read; but when he opened the hymn book to sing, he could never get beyond the first line of the song. He would continue to the second line, while the rest of the congregation went on to something else entirely.

No one had ever thought to tell him that you don't read a song the same way you read a book, line by line, from the top of the page to the bottom. When everyone veered off and left him singing the second line alone, he cast furtive glances at the hymnals opened around him to see if he had the same book. He always did. He was a big boy before he figured out what was going on.

When I asked him why he didn't ask someone about it he said, "I don't know. I was just a little boy. Everyone else knew what to do. I guess I thought I was supposed to figure it out for myself."

When we say, "I wish I was a kid again," I suspect we've forgotten a good bit about what it was like. It can get really sad.

Take my grandson Caleb. He's not yet three years old, but he stopped off in this world on his way to find a baseball. All he wants is to play ball, and I'm sure he envisions it as a simple and satisfying way to live. But adults don't see it that way. We make him learn to say "Yes, sir," and wash his face. We make him chew with his mouth closed and stay out of the street.

By now, Caleb has learned everything's a trade-off; if he gets anyone to play ball with him — he has to do all the other stuff first. So he does it. And every Saturday morning he suits up in his little helmet and goes with his brother to Jason's T-Ball games. And nobody lets him play.

He stands in the dugout the whole game and waits for the coaches' call that never comes. Our adult explanations don't mean zip to him. He intends to play ball, and if we make him wait a million years, he'll be ready when some adult says, "Batter-up, Caleb!"

Kids and adults come from different directions to reach the same point. Here's another example: Jason told me that one hot day towards the end of school, his driver handed out free popsicles to all the kids as they got off the bus one afternoon. Jason had one in each hand and got on his bicycle to ride home. His front tire hit a curb, he overcorrected, and his back tire hit it, too. He said, "Maggie, those popsicles were pretty. I was holding them up just like rockets pointed toward the sky. And when I hit the curb — that's how they took off."

First one, then the other, they blasted off to the middle of the street. Jason figured they were far enough apart that a car tire could roll between them if one came by before he could retrieve them. But then, a United Parcel truck (with wider tires) came along and squashed both of them.

He had had about half a bite of his first free popsicle and he sorely regretted his loss. I thanked God that Jason used the seconds before the truck turned the corner to put down his bike. He was sorry and I was glad about the same story.

It's tough to be a kid sometimes. All I can say is: Caleb, someday you'll get to play ball. And, Jason, off and on throughout your sweet life, someone will squash your popsicle.

Lump in breast puts fear in heart

DEAR ABBY: I recently felt a lump in my breast. It doesn't really hurt, but I know it's there. I stand a very good chance of having cancer because my mother passed away five years ago with breast cancer.

Dear Abby

Right now, I'm trying to handle it on my own, but I'm getting cross and downright hateful with my husband and children. I love them dearly. I know this can't go on forever.

I watched my mother die a very slow and painful death, but just the thought of going to a doctor scares me. On the other hand, if I do go to a doctor and he says it's cancer, he might have to remove my breast, and if he does, I'm scared my husband might not love me anymore, or he might leave me.

What should I do? — SCARED TO DEATH

DEAR SCARED: Do not wait another minute! Call your doctor. Tell him exactly what you have told me, and make an appointment to see him as soon as possible. Early detection has saved the lives of many with cancer. Don't think of anything except getting to your doctor for an examination immediately.

I am sorry you didn't sign your name, because I want very much to talk to you. Please write again after you've seen the doctor. I want to stay in touch with you.

DEAR ABBY: After nearly 10 years of marriage, I told my husband I was leaving. Before I even found a place to move to, he kicked me out. After I relocated, we started seeing each other again, and within a week, we were back where we started — fighting. They say there's a very fine line between love and hate. I still don't know which side I'm on. I have filed for divorce, but I feel lonely and hurt. He was fantastic in bed, and just the thought of being intimate with another man nauseates me. Also, why risk AIDS for sex that may not be any good?

Abby, after 10 years, I wouldn't even know how to act on a date. I can't live without him, but I can't live with him. Is this normal for someone who has just split up, or do I need help? — IN LIMBO IN TACOMA

DEAR IN LIMBO: Not being able to live with or without someone is an old refrain I hear often. And the love/hate ambivalence is as old as the hills. Your feelings are normal — and you do need help. Get professional counseling. If money is a problem for you, check with your local YWCA and ask if they offer free counseling.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

NEW YORK (AP) — Jeff Sieglen quit his marketing job to stay home and raise two sons while his wife works as a doctor. But try telling that to his old pals at work.

"Even now," he said, "the guys I used to work with ask me, 'So what are you REALLY doing?' I keep telling them I'm staying home with the kids. That's my job. That's what I do."

"They say, 'Uh huh. But what are you REALLY doing?'"

Small wonder his friends are confused. Though Sieglen is one of about 257,000 men aged 25 to 54 raising children while their wives work, stay-at-home dads make up less than 2 percent of married parents of children under 18, according to the U.S. Labor Department.

And though the number of househusbands has increased about 50,000 over the past two decades, most companies still have made little or no provisions for fathers who want to take time off.

Unlike the Mr. Moms of the '80s recession era, it is economic opportunity rather than disaster that has lured many of these latest converts cribside — economic opportunity for their wives, that is.

While women's overall earnings still lag behind men, the number of women in $50,000-plus jobs has quadrupled over the last decade, the U.S. Census Bureau says. The fastest-growing segment of the workforce today is married mothers with children under 2 years old, according to 9 to 5, an organization that tracks working women's issues.

"Being the provider is no longer a mandate for a man," said Ronald Levant, a Brookline, Mass., family psychologist who gives parenting seminars and co-wrote "Between Father and Child."

"It is now possible for men to consider themselves a primary care-giving parent and not suffer any loss of their sense of masculinity or worth," he said.

Marcelo Seabra said he hopes his decision to stay home will actually enhance his image in his son's eyes.

"I want Luke to feel proud of his father — and close," said Seabra, a self-employed contractor whose wife went back to her $50,000-a-year job as an architect at a Manhattan firm eight months after giving birth in February 1990.

Sieglen, whose wife earns four times as much as an anesthesiologist as he did marketing pharmaceuticals, said he already can see a strong bond between himself and his two sons, ages 7 and 4.

"As much as they love their mother, when things go bad, they look to me. I'm the one who's here all the time. I'm the steady influence," he said from the couple's Princeton, N.J., home.

While many mothers would love to stay home themselves, their ample salaries or substantial health insurance packages force them to kiss their babies and husbands goodbye in the morning and head for the office.

For the husbands who watch them drive away, there is sometimes lingering guilt.

"My wife is sacrificing her motherhood so we can do this," said Peter Candela, whose wife, Mary, went back to her $30,000-a-year job testing cosmetics for Avon Products Inc. 13 weeks after the birth of their son last winter.

Candela has put his career as a music composer on hold and is committed to staying home in Wayne, N.J., until their son goes to school. Economics dictated the couple's choice, but it was much easier to accept before her son was born, Mrs. Candela said.

"You don't want to send them to day care so you think 'We'll have the baby stay home with a parent. Why should it matter which parent?' When the baby is actually here, it's really hard," she said.

David and Sarah Burris of Zanesville, Ohio, wanted their daughter, Alexandra, to be raised by a parent. Determined to keep her health benefits, Sarah returned to her $20,000-a-year job as program director for the Girl Scouts of America three weeks after giving birth last autumn. David, a stage manager, stayed home.

"My wife feels she misses out on the little things, like the first time Alex rolled over and the first time she sat up. But it would upset us even more if it happened at day care," he said.

If Mom at work and Dad at home is an economic equation for some families, for others it is a way to satisfy personal needs.

"My wife wasn't interested in staying at home. She wanted to get back to work as quickly as possible," said Philippe Henri of Berkeley, Calif., whose wife, Carol, returned to work as a computer analyst with IBM eight weeks after giving birth to Natalia in September 1989.

"Her career is very important to her. Very, very important," Henri said.

A high school math teacher whose $30,000-a-year salary is about half what his wife earns, Henri said he needed a break from the working world. He took a 10-month paternity leave and, when it was over, said he felt confident Natalia was "ready" for day care.

David Burris feeds daughter Alexandra, 7 months, at their home in Zanesville, Ohio last month. While Sarah Burris returned to her job as program director for the Girl Scouts of America three weeks after giving birth, David, a stage manager, stayed home.

Philippe Henri holds his daughter Natalia, 20 months, after her bath at their Berkeley, Calif. home last month. Henri, a high school math teacher now back at work, took a 10-month paternity leave to stay home with Natalia. He said he got to know his child in a way that most men never get a chance to.

Life and home is what you make it

NEW YORK (AP) — Ricardo Ramirez smiled with pride as he looked across the abandoned, litter-strewn lot at his community — a group of 11 handmade wood and canvas huts. Officially homeless, he was happy to have a roof over his head and proud to have put it there.

But now that he's got something, Ramirez is worried that other homeless people — including the scores routed from nearby Tompkins Square Park earlier this month — will try to take it away.

"They're jealous of me because my shack is so neat and clean," he said. "They said they're going to burn my shack down."

Ramirez and other squatters have erected some of the city's most elaborate makeshift housing in the empty blocks near the park. His hut is carpeted and has a front door that locks.

Manhattan's Lower East Side, was the focal point for years of battles between squatters, police and residents of surrounding homes until authorities evicted the homeless and closed the park for renovations on June 3.

Ramirez, once one of the park's more than 100 squatters, said he moved out four months ago because he could "read the writing on the wall."

He built his new home by using rocks to hammer together scavenged 2-by-4s with scrounged nails. At night, he locks his door and reads by candlelight.

Several of the neighborhood's squatters, like Ramirez, said they want no part of the park's refugees.

"We don't let them come over here," said Hector Amezcua, a resident of another squatter's village. "We don't want no trouble. They're too crazy, those people."

Amezquita, 54, lives in one of the area's "nicest" squatter's neighborhoods. Nicknamed "The Condos," it is located on a city-owned vacant lot and contains a dozen small wooden huts with pitched roofs and raised floors.

Ramona Rivera stands on the porch of her hut built from scavenged materials on a lot in New York City's Lower East Side where she and 11 other homesteaders have erected their make-shift houses. Her housemate Lisa Velez attends to their garden while neighborhood kids and the couple's chihuahua, Lucky, observe.

Hope is not lost along with vision

WACO, Texas (AP) — Lujan Henn can't see the hand in front of her face. But she's not totally blind.

With the help of assistive devices, Henn has sewn five quilts and can slowly read the printed page. She's also taught school in the past.

"A person looking at me wouldn't know I was blind," said Henn, who is a victim of macular degeneration, a degenerative eye disease. "I do have peripheral vision."

The loss of vision is a life-changing event, but victims learn to cope.

"I continued to teach for four years using closed circuit TV and magnification devices," said Henn.

Special glasses can be fitted to assist a person with low vision, said Kathy Bowersox, a counselor with the Commission for the Blind's Waco office.

Bowersox said people who have peripheral vision can be fitted with a prism, a part of their glasses that can enhance their side vision.

People who need to see at a distance, such as reading the writing on a classroom chalkboard, can use small telescopes on either side of their eyeglasses, she said.

When Henn quilts, she uses a pair of clear eyeglasses that magnify things 15 times their normal size.

Outside, she uses a special pair of dark glasses that improve the contrast, helping enhance what little vision is remaining.

"Optometrists do know about lenses," Henn said. "They have different means of checking the acuity of your eye rather than the wellness or illness of an eye. They just dance when they can make a lens that helps you."

People with limited vision may be able to read street signs and house numbers with another type of telescope, Bowersox said.

"Some people can't drive anymore but they like to take walks," she explained. "Seeing the street signs are impossible. This helps."

Those with failing eyesight can use hand-held magnifiers to read. "Some have lights, and some are small like a paperweight that you move over the words," Bowersox said.

Closed circuit television can also magnify small print.

Henn explained that her closed circuit TV is not something that broadcasts television programs. Instead, it greatly magnifies written papers when the papers are put into a platform underneath the screen. The letters shown on the TV screen are 45 times their normal size.

The problem is you don't get very many words on the screen that way, she said.

The computer age has brought new technology to people with limited sight. Bowersox said talking computers can help visually impaired workers check their work appearing on computer screens.

While computers can greatly assist people with low vision, the cost of such high-tech devices can be prohibitive, she said.

However, not every vision problem requires a special computer. People who have sight problems resulting from glare can get special devices to fit over regular computers. One example is a glare screen, which attaches over a regular computer display, Bowersox said.

How's that?

Q. Is there a program set up by the city to control the mosquito population?

A. According to Tom Decell, assistant city manager, the city uses a fogger in the morning and evening when the weather is calm; this is when the mosquitoes are most active. However the use of chemicals by the fogger is limited by the EPA. The key to getting rid of mosquitoes is not the fogger but is by eliminating all standing water. By doing this, the mosquitoes are not capable of hatching. However if the problem persists, you can call the street department at City Hall, and officials there will put your neighborhood on their schedule.

U.S. evacuation from Philippines at full steam

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Another U.S. Navy flotilla steamed toward Subic Bay today to help speed an American exodus, and Filipinos complained their government failed to prepare them for the devastating fury of Mount Pinatubo.

"We were really caught flat-footed. They had not expected anything of this magnitude," said Gov. Bren Guiao of Pampanga province, where about 120,000 refugees were seeking help.

More than a week of eruptions covered the countryside with ash and debris, contaminating water supplies and knocking out almost all services in some areas. Food and fuel were difficult to find for many Filipinos.

The Red Cross reported at least 146 deaths from the volcano, 50 miles northwest of Manila, and warned that disease could spread.

Relief workers also feared more landslides could increase the number of homeless. An estimated 200,000 Filipinos have been forced from their homes, many of which collapsed under the weight of rain-soaked ash.

Scientists said today Mount Pinatubo appeared to be calming after a series of huge explosions Saturday that collapsed sections of the 4,795-foot mountain, which burst to life June 9 after lying dormant more than 600 years.

At least three minor earthquakes were recorded today and a small eruption dumped fresh ash on Clark Air Base, which is 10 miles east of the volcano and is one of the biggest U.S. military facilities overseas.

About 15,000 troops and their families moved from Clark last week to Subic Bay naval base, which was subsequently blanketed with about a foot of ash. On Sunday, all 20,000 military dependents in the Philippines were ordered home.

Military officials hoped to remove all the dependents by the end of the week, and eight more warships, including the aircraft carrier Midway, were bound for Subic Bay to help with the evacuation.

Since Sunday, more than 7,000 spouses and children have boarded 10 warships, including the aircraft carrier Abraham Lincoln, to be ferried 350 miles south to Cebu to board flights to the United States.

Ash forced the closing of airports in the Manila region, and officials said they would decide Wednesday whether they could be reopened.

Chief Petty Officer Jerry Moore said about 2,000 dependents were expected to leave Subic Bay today. Navy officials said the Midway, bound from Yokosuka, Japan, should arrive Thursday.

"It's about time we left," Lisa Hedland of Ware, Mass., wife of Air Force Sgt. Jeff Hedland, said as she waited to board the cruiser Long Beach with her 15-month-old daughter, Ashley. "It's been horrible this past week."

In some towns close to the volcano, people wandered through ash-covered streets seeking relatives or looking for food and clean water.

In Olongapo, adjacent to Subic Bay, long lines formed at bread shops and merchants rationed customers to one small loaf each. Streets were buried by ash, and drinking water was polluted with mud and debris.

In Angeles, adjacent to Clark, dozens of desperate residents smashed storefronts with crowbars Monday in search of food.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schragar said 1 million ready-to-eat meals left over from the Persian Gulf War were being brought in by Navy ships. He also said 16 U.S. earthmovers would be turned over to Philippine authorities to help clear roads.

Many Filipinos complained they had not been given adequate warning of the destructive power of Mount Pinatubo.

"The government gave us no help," said Estrella Lacson, 52, a housewife in Angeles.

President Corason Aquino admitted there were shortcomings in relief efforts but said the government was doing its best.

"That there will be moments when efforts will sometimes not be adequate and that some of the victims may not be reached immediately is a reality that we must face," the president said in a statement.

When the U.S. military evacuated Clark last week, the mayor of Angeles, Antonio Abad Santos, angrily accused the Americans of "overreacting." Five days later, his city was in ruins and about 30 people in the area had been killed.

Truck mishap forces day care evacuation

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

An accident Monday forced the evacuation of 63 children from a Big Spring day-care center when an 89,000-pound tractor-trailer rig overturned close to the building, officials said.

"If you stop and look at what happened with that rig, we are very fortunate it turned out the way it did," said Assistant City Manager Tom Decell. Big Spring police, fire and public works units responded when the truck, a Brother Franks unit from Carr Well Service of Odessa, overturned about 11:30 a.m. near the intersection of Simler Road and Randolph Blvd.

Driver Ronnie Roberts, 42, Odessa, was arrested on charges of felony driving while intoxicated. Big Spring Police reports said he sustained non-incapacitating injuries, but the truck was heavily damaged.

Officials said they were grateful the situation was not much worse.

"Something really bad could have happened out here yesterday," said Melinda Hernandez, director of West Side Day Care Center, located near the intersection. Day-care center workers acted quickly to evacuate the children after the incident, she said.

"When he came around the corner, the whole building shook," Hernandez said. "The kids were terrified. The guy said he knew it was a day care, and so he tried to avoid hitting it and turned over the truck."

The accident was one of many at the intersection, she said.

"A lot of our parents are worried because we have so many accidents out here. We need a guard rail or something. It's scary."

Decell said the truck had been headed in the direction of a natural gas line, where one spark could have ignited a massive blaze.

"We're extremely fortunate that rig did lay over," he said.

Workers from Cathey Construction Co. pulled the truck back upright with a crane and hauled it away, officials said. About 100 gallons of diesel fuel spilled onto the roadway was cleaned and stored by public works department employees.

"We've got that situation under control," Decell said, adding that dirt around the accident scene will be tested for contamination.

"We'll tally up our work hours and equipment costs to charge to the insurance company," he said.

Food poisoning trial stalled by restaurant's bankruptcy filing

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

The owners of a building housing Karla's restaurant on Lamesa Highway recently filed for bankruptcy, a move that stalled a district court trial scheduled to begin this week to hear a claim of food poisoning at the restaurant.

A suit filed in September 1988 in 118th Judicial District Court seeks $175,000 in damages against owners David and Francis Gomez in connection with an alleged May 1988 food poisoning incident. A jury was scheduled to be selected Monday to hear the case.

However, an emergency Chapter 13 bankruptcy filing by the Gomez' last Friday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Midland automatically put the trial on hold, said 118th District Judge Bob Moore.

Mary Ann Kestermeier, who filed the suit, must now seek a ruling in bankruptcy court to allow the district court trial to proceed, Moore said. "Of course we can't try it this week," he said. "All that can't take place this week."

No hearing dates have been set in the bankruptcy case, said a court clerk in Midland. The filing, which asks that a trustee be appointed to prorate payments to creditors, does not contain detailed information on the Gomez' financial status, the clerk said.

It is not the first time the trial has been postponed. An original trial date of May 20 was moved back after Dr. Bruce Cox of Big Spring informed those involved that a medical check of Gomez showed he had high blood pressure, court documents say. Gomez would have been in "extreme danger" if he participated in a trial at that time, Cox said.

According to the suit filed in district court, Kestermeier became seriously ill after eating at Karla's on May 19, 1988. She suffered vomiting, diarrhea and fever over a prolonged period, it says. More than two months after the incident, she underwent gall bladder surgery and continued to have bowel problems. Medical costs exceeded $20,000.

An answer filed by David Gomez contends he is not liable because he does not own the actual restaurant, even though he owns the building and land. His ex-wife Dolores Martinez Gomez has the sales and use tax permit, as well as the liquor and food handlers' license. Gomez works at the restaurant, but he said he was not in control of it when the alleged poisoning occurred.

Glasscock board picks Big Spring bank

By GARY SHANKS Staff Writer

After reviewing bids from one Midland and two Big Spring banks, the Glasscock County School Board chose State National Bank of Big Spring as the depository for school funds for the 1991-92 school year.

During a meeting with elementary and secondary principals, the board voted in favor of the following changes in school policy:

- Due to past abuses regarding long-term assignments and absenteeism, the policy statement was augmented so that a student who is absent on the day a long-term assignment is due, will be required to turn in that assignment on the following school day instead of the second following day.
- Regarding the acceptable length of short pants, the statement was changed from "2 inches above the knee" to read "long, casual type shorts." This was to allow for individual variation in leg length.

- Stronger wording was adopted for the school's anti-drug policy following suggestions of the Drug Education Co-op.
- For more advanced courses with a higher degree of difficulty, the board decided to accept 65 percent as the lowest passing score instead of the usual 70. This is allowed under the state eligibility requirements to encourage students involved in extracurricular activities to take these more advanced courses, said high school Principal Charles Zachry.
- The school board voted to change the absentee policy giving each student 10 excused absences per semester. The change was designed to augment enforceability, said Zachry. "I think 10 is really generous." Any student with more than this number will be reviewed by the absentee committee for possible retention, he said.

The board estimated the school district's budget for the 1991-92 school year at about $2.5 million.

Primarily because a number of departmental budgets were allotted funds last year to buy re-usable equipment, a number of departmental budgets were cut. The budget cuts are exceptional this year, said Superintendent Donn Stringer. No department received an increase in its budget for the 1991-92 school year.

Dennis Fuchs was accepted as county education director.

The pay scale for maintenance personnel was increased and one position was deleted by attrition.

The adoption of a new calendar, which includes five additional days mandated by Senate bill 2885 was postponed until next month.

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incidents:

- Jay Boyd Allen III, 38, Route 77, Box T-33-D, was arrested on grand jury indictments for theft between $750 and $20,000 and commercial bribery. He was released on two $10,000 bonds.
- A prowler was reported on South McGregor Street. No arrest was made.

Spurs guard facing paternity suit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio Spurs guard David Wingate faces a July 12 hearing in a paternity lawsuit filed by an Illinois woman. Mary T. Salmon, 23, is seeking support for a 10-month-old daughter she claims Wingate fathered. Lawyers said Wingate will be required to appear at the San Antonio hearing and confirm or deny paternity. He will also be asked to present Internal Revenue Service tax returns for the past two years and other financial information. Ms. Salmon said she met and dated Wingate in late 1989 while she was in military service at San Antonio. She said she was later stationed in Turkey and the relationship ended. The woman said she gave birth to a daughter on Aug. 8, 1990, and had earlier filed a paternity lawsuit. But she said she dropped it when Wingate was suspended from the Spurs during an investigation of two separate rape charges leveled against him. Wingate was later returned to the active roster. Two women, one from San Antonio and another from Wingate's home state of Maryland, filed rape charges and civil suits against the Spurs player. Criminal charges were dropped by the women before the start of the Maryland trial in February and the civil actions were withdrawn.

Reds hang on to beat AL Colts

By STEVE REAGAN

COAHOMA — The Coahoma Reds have definitely put the excitement back in the city Little League tournament.

After winning consecutive games in come-from-behind fashion, the Reds stretched out in an unaccustomed position against the American League Colts Monday night — holding a three-run lead early in the game.

This would not be an easy one for the Reds, however, as they had to hang on by their fingernails, relying on some stellar late-inning defense and pitching to take a 4-3 win in losers bracket action.

The Reds now advance in the tournament to take on the International League Rebels at 8 p.m. tonight in Coahoma. The other game tonight will pit the AL Stars, a 10-8 winner over the National League Lions, against the IL Panthers in an elimination game at 8 p.m. in the AL park.

Vincent Garcia survived a shaky third inning to go the distance and pick up the win. For the evening, he surrendered five hits while striking out nine and walking one. Gilbert Hilario took the loss for the Colts, playing their final game under manager Johnny Hobbs, who's retiring after 40 years in Little League.

"We haven't played (an easy ching and we did a good job hitting. We consistently put the ball in play and when you do that in Little League, the other team will make some errors sometimes." The Reds scratched for a run in the bottom of the first. With one out, Marshall Wright tripled and came home when Colts shortstop Derek Hobbs misplayed Aaron Barr's grounder.

Coahoma padded their lead with two more runs in the second. Blake Nichols led off with a single and scored on two errors by Colts first baseman Jeremy Mintor. Josh Collum made the score 3-0 when his double down the left field line scored Judd Cathey from first.

The Colts, however, rallied to tie the game in the fourth. Kayne Stroup started things with a single, moved to second on a wild pitch and went to third on Hilario's single to left. After Hilario went to second on the throw, Mintor redeemed himself with a seeing-eye single up the middle that scored two runs.

Mintor went to second on the throw home, moved to third on Markos Balderach's flyout and scored on Clayton Pate's ground-out to second.

The Reds rallied in the bottom of the inning. Hilario surrendered a double to Nichols, Jonathan Barr reached on an error and Robb Walker walked to load the bases. Hilario then walked in the game-winner when he issued a free pass to Collum.

Coahoma had to weather one last rally in the sixth before nailing

CHASKA, Minn. (AP) — Champagne, courtesy of Champ Payne, flowed after the U.S. Open, but plain water made the difference.

There would have been no bubbly, no tears of joy streaming down Payne Stewart's face, if his tee shot on No. 8 in the playoff Monday hadn't plunked into a pond, struck a shallow rock and popped back out onto dry land.

He "might still be playing" with Scott Simpson, each of them trying to cope with the vagaries of wind-blown, sun-baked Hazeltine National, if Simpson's tee shot on No. 17 had not ricocheted into a tiny water trap.

"To win championships, you have to have some good breaks," said Stewart, who celebrated in a style reminiscent of the late Champagne Tony Lema by wheeling cases of bubbly into his press conference.

With a little luck and a lot of gutsy golf, Stewart beat Simpson 75 to 77 to claim his second major title. Stewart, the 1989 PGA champion, now is aiming for the British Open

Yankees knock Indians from unbeaten ranks

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Thanks to the International League Yankees, there are no undefeated Little League teams in the city.

The Yankees knocked the International League Indians from the unbeaten ranks by taking a 7-5 win in a battle of the only two undefeated teams left in the city Little League tournament.

The win gives the Yankees a 15-4 record while the Indians go to 17-1. The Yankees, from the Tarzan-Lenora area, won't play again until Friday in the finals. The Indians will play Thursday night against an opponent to be determined.

The Yankees only got three hits in the game, but they got strong pitching performance from Brad Cox, who went the distance. John Morelion, who had beaten the Yankees twice earlier this year, was saddled with the loss.

Cox scattered six hits, fanned seven and walked three. Morelion lasted three-and-one-third innings, allowing three hits and seven runs. Three of the runs were unearned.

Morelion was replaced in the fourth inning by Scott Goodblanket, who dominated Yankee hitters the rest of the way. Of the eight Yankees he faced, he fanned six, including the last five in-a-row.

The Yankees struck first in the top of the first inning, leadoff hitter Cox reached base on a fielding error by the second baseman, went to second on a passed ball, to third on a wild pitch and scored on a wild pitch. Also in the inning, Indians catcher Brock Gee gunned down Brady Peugh trying to steal second.

The Indians erupted for three runs in the bottom of the first, thanks to two Yankees errors. With one out Brock Gee singled and went to second when the ball got by the Yankees left fielder. Next Morelion reached base when the third baseman dropped his pop fly, sending Brock Gee to third. Morelion promptly stole second. Both Brock Gee and Morelion scored when Edward Aguilar doubled down the third base line.

Aguilar scored from third on a wild pitch, putting the Indians up 3-1.

The Yankees took the lead for good in the third. An indication of what was to come occurred when Cox was hit by a pitch. Three wild pitches later he had scored, cutting the lead to 3-2. Next Brady Peugh walked, but Morelion retired the next two batters.

The Yankees tied the game when Brian Tubbs' grounder got past the third baseman, allowing Brady Peugh to score.

The next batter Gilbert Morales gave the Yankees the lead for good. He planted a Morelion pitch deep over the right field fence for a two-run homer, giving the Yankees a 5-3 advantage. Morales, who hit a grand slam last week in the tourna-

IBF will investigate gloves controversy

DALLAS (AP) — The International Boxing Federation is investigating whether a lightweight boxing glove may have contributed to a title challenger's coma.

It was the tale of the glove, not the tape, that led to Kid Akeem Anifowoshe's injuries, said IBF junior bantamweight champion Robert Quiroga of San Antonio.

Quiroga said he would never again fight with the 6-ounce gloves. "I'll ask the IBF to stop doing it. This is my fourth fight with 6-ounce gloves and we just don't need them. You can score as much and fight the same kind of fight with 8-ounce gloves," Quiroga said Monday.

But IBF president Robert Lee said he was not sure if the lighter gloves contributed to Anifowoshe's injuries.

"Many jurisdictions in South America, the Orient, Europe, where they have small guys fighting, they have always used 6-ounce gloves, and this is the first time we have ever had a hullabaloo over it," Lee said Monday from federation offices in East Orange, N.J.

Lee said he instructed his medical advisory council to look into the weekend bout in San Antonio to determine if 6-ounce gloves' use should be banned.

Anifowoshe remained in critical but stable condition late Monday at Baptist Medical Center in San Antonio. He became comatose after vomiting blood and collapsing in the 12-round loss Saturday to Quiroga.

Quiroga said the first hometown defense of his title was in doubt for a time. On Monday, he still had swollen eyes, his lip was black and blue and his sewed-up chin was bloodied. After the fight, he had said he was saddened by Anifowoshe's injuries.

A Nigerian living in Las Vegas, Anifowoshe regained consciousness Sunday after undergoing emergency surgery to relieve pressure on the brain.

"I am not sure if the gloves had anything to do with this fight. It was a hard-fought battle and both fighters were banged up pretty

Arkansas St. coach arrested for DWI

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas State head football coach Al Kincaid said he "made a terrible mistake" following his arrest on a DWI charge.

Kincaid was arrested Saturday night in Trumann, Ark., state police and ASU officials confirmed late Monday.

State police said Trooper Mark Dixon pulled Kincaid over around 10 p.m. Saturday because a headlight was out on the private vehicle Kincaid was driving.

Kincaid, in a statement released through the university, said he was returning to Jonesboro from a function in Marked Tree, Ark., when he was stopped.

"(The trooper) told me I was not speeding or driving recklessly. He asked if I'd consent to a breathalyzer and I agreed to do that. Then they charged me and that was that," the second-year ASU coach said.

A state police spokesman said Kincaid's blood alcohol registered .16. Under Arkansas law, a person with a reading of .10 is legally intoxicated.

Kincaid was arrested and released after posting an appearance bond. He was to appear in Trumann Municipal Court on July 10.

"I've made a terrible mistake in judgment and I'm embarrassed by the situation. This is the first time anything like this has ever happened to me, and I am very sorry about it," Kincaid said in the statement. "I regret the embarrassment that I've caused the university, and I can say that it will never happen again."

Athletic director Charles Thornton said he and Kincaid had visited with ASU president Eugene Smith "just so he would have the full story."

Dravecky undergoes fourth surgery

NEW YORK (AP) — Feeling a sense of relief after months of torturous pain, Dave Dravecky was to undergo surgery today for the fourth time since cancer was diagnosed in his left pitching arm in 1988.

Whether the arm was to be amputated was uncertain.

"The doctor said he would not know until he got to the hospital," Sealy Yates, Dravecky's agent, said Monday.

"The cancer has not spread beyond the arm," said Jonathan Petersen, director of media relations for Zondervan Publishing House, co-publisher of Dravecky's autobiography, "Comeback."

Dravecky is resigned to having the arm amputated.

"In as much as there is a certain amount of fear involved in losing my arm, reflecting upon my past eight or nine months, it is a sense of almost relief that I feel," Dravecky said in a statement. "The pain and discomfort of that time is now about to end and I look forward to once again doing the things I enjoy."

"Amputation is very likely, but there is a slight possibility that it won't happen," Yates said.

The operation was to be performed by Dr. Murray Brennan, chairman of the Department of Surgery at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

"Dave is resigned to the amputation, he said he's ready for his arm to come off," Petersen said.

"Our understanding is that Dave has told the doctor he is ready to have the arm removed," Yates said. "He doesn't want to go into a scientific longshot to save the arm. There's no heroics in that sense. Dave doesn't want to experiment ..."

"But there's a remote chance it might not have to come off. He's resigned to the probability of losing the arm, if that's what it takes to get well."

Commissioner wants to get rid of DH

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Commissioner Fay Vincent says he wants to get rid of the designated hitting rule.

"It was brought in as an experiment," Vincent said. "It served its purpose. Let's declare it a success and be done with it."

Vincent made his remarks in an interview published today in the San Francisco Chronicle.

Describing himself as a baseball traditionalist, Vincent said there should be symmetry between the National League

Drabek helps Bucs keep six game lead

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

That Cy Young award jinx everyone was talking about a month ago is taking a beating now.

Doug Drabek won his fourth straight decision and pitched well for the fifth consecutive start as the Pittsburgh Pirates maintained its six-game lead in the National League East with a 3-2 victory at San Diego Monday night.

In his last five appearances, including a no-decision, Drabek has allowed only four earned runs in 36 innings for a 1.00 ERA.

Drabek (6-7) beat Bruce Hurst (7-4) for the second time in 11 days with relief help the last two innings. Drabek was a 1-0 winner over the Padres June 7 in Pittsburgh.

Drabek got offensive help from another slow starter, Gary Redus, who homered for the first time this season and doubled twice.

Dodgers 6, Cubs 4

Los Angeles coasted to a 6-0 lead before holding on to win at home against Chicago.

Juan Samuel and Kal Daniels homered in the sixth inning for the Dodgers, who now lead Cincinnati by four games in the National League West.

Mike Morgan (7-5) took a four-hit shutout into the eighth inning before Shawon Dunston ended his bid for his eighth career shutout with his seventh homer. Morgan was charged with three more runs in the ninth, two on a single by Dunston off Tim Crews, before Crews got the final out for his fourth save.

Mets 10, Reds 6

New York won for only the third time in seven games on its home-stand as Howard Johnson and Hubie

NEW YORK — New York Mets' Gregg Jefferies (9) tries in vain to escape the tag of Cincinnati Reds catcher Jeff Read in a first inning rundown Monday night at Shea Stadium.

Brooks hit two-run homers against Cincinnati.

Ron Darling (3-4), who last won on May 11, got off to a smooth start, but allowed three runs and seven hits in six innings. Three relievers finished the game for the Mets, who snapped the Reds' four-game winning streak with the help of three Cincinnati errors, two by outfielders.

Phillies 4, Braves 3

Dale Murphy's 433-foot homer with one out in the eighth inning gave Philadelphia the victory at home over Atlanta.

Juan Berenguer (0-2) gave up Murphy's homer as the Braves lost their fourth consecutive game.

Starter Tommy Greene and John Kruk also homered for the Phillies. Dave Justice and Sid Bream had RBI singles in Atlanta's three-run fourth inning.

Reliever Mitch Williams (1-3) pitched the final 1 2/3 innings for the victory, striking out the side in the ninth.

National League

Expos 3, Astros 2

Montreal twice overcame one-run deficits when it was two outs away from defeat, then beat Houston at Olympic Stadium on Tim Wallach's RBI single in the 16th inning.

The Expos were out 12-6, but they came back from 1-0 and 2-1 deficits in the ninth and 11th innings to win their fourth straight game.

Wallach got the game-winning hit off Curt Schilling (3-5) following a single by Marquis Grissom, a sacrifice and an intentional walk to Ivan Calderon. Jeff Fassero (1-1) pitched one inning for the victory.

Cardinals 5, Giants 4

St. Louis won a seesaw game at San Francisco on Geronimo Pena's game-winning sacrifice fly in the ninth inning.

Todd Zeile doubled to start the ninth off Giants reliever Dave Righthet (2-3) and went to third on Tom Pagnozzi's sacrifice bunt. Pena, who entered the game as a pinch-runner in the eighth, fled to deep right to score Zeile for a 5-4 lead.

Angels 4, Red Sox 2

California averted its first four-game sweep at Fenway Park since 1967 as Mark Langston allowed six hits in seven innings.

Wally Joyner's two-run double off Greg Harris (2-7) keyed a four-run fifth inning. Jack Clark singled home two runs in the bottom of the fifth off Langston (9-2), but that was all the Red Sox could manage.

Bryan Harvey, the Angels' third pitcher, got the last four outs for

Brewers 5, Athletics 0

Don August pitched a five-hitter for his first shutout in two years and Billy Spiers and Jim Ganter sparked a five-run fifth inning with two-run singles as Milwaukee beat visiting Oakland.

Rangers 10, Royals 9

The longest winning streak in baseball again belongs to the Rangers. Texas, which won 14 in a row last month, won its seventh straight after making up a 9-4 deficit against the visiting Royals.

Ruben Sierra hit a three-run homer in the eighth and a game-tying two-run single in the ninth before Gary Pettis won it with a bases-loaded bloop single in the 10th off Jeff Montgomery (1-3).

Orioles end Twins winning streak at 15

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Minnesota Twins knew they had to lose eventually. They probably didn't expect it to happen so suddenly.

The Twins, who won four one-run games and two in extra innings during a team-record 15-game winning streak, were three outs away from going 16-for-16 in June. Instead, relief ace Rick Aguilera allowed a sacrifice fly to Joe Orsulak and a two-out, two-run double to Randy Milligan to give the Baltimore Orioles a stunning 6-5 victory Monday night.

Quiroga was treated at the same hospital for head injuries he suffered in the fight.

ment, also singled in the second inning.

The Indians padded their lead by adding two more runs in the fourth, chasing Morelino from the mound. Leadoff hitter Michael Madison walked. Then Morelino fanned P.J. Rodriguez, bringing Cox to the plate. Cox hit a pop foul that first baseman Jason Brock dropped. Cox made the Indians pay for Brock's error by delivering a double to left field, scoring Madison.

Cox scored from third on a wild pitch, giving the Yankees a 7-3 lead.

The Yankees held the lead until the bottom of the sixth, thanks to two good plays on fly balls by second baseman Cody Peugh. In the fourth Cody Peugh robbed Chico Zarraga of a base hit. He did the and the Masters to complete his goal of a career Grand Slam.

"It wasn't outstanding golf, but the golf course was very difficult today," said Stewart, whose winning score was the worst in a U.S. Open playoff since Tommy Armour's 76 in 1927. "It tested your patience. It tested your ability. It tested your fortitude. I'm fortunate to be the champion."

Stewart rapped his knuckles on a table and said the greens were that hard.

"If the greens were like this all week long, even-par would have run away with it," he said. "It was a grind out there."

Stewart, who held or shared the lead each day, jumped ahead in the playoff as Simpson bogeyed the first two holes to pick up where he left off Sunday, when he bogeyed two of the last three.

But Simpson evened the match with a brilliant approach shot from the light rough along the fairway on No. 5 that settled 3 feet from the pin. He knocked the ball in for a birdie, while Stewart made a bogey-5 after hooking his second shot into the rough beside a bunker and chipping it short into the sand.

down the win. Hilario led off the inning for the Colts with a double to deep left field, but Garcia forced Minton to ground out and first baseman Cathey made a fine defensive play when he threw out Hilario, who was trying to reach third on the play.

Garcia then struck out Balderach looking to end the game.

"We didn't do too good," Hobbs said afterwards. "It was a good ballgame, but we made two or three errors in that one inning that just killed us."

"I hate to get out of it," Hobbs said of his retirement. "I've enjoyed it for 40 years."

Names in the news

Gimme' the ball
ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo, who turned 59 on Saturday, has a challenge for anyone who suggests he's over the hill.
"Want to play basketball?" Asked Friday how it felt to be fast approaching 60, Cuomo shot back that he can still run the basketball court.
Cuomo, viewed by many as a potential 1992 Democratic presidential contender, is a regular on courts around Albany.
Ewing represents Texas
WASHINGTON (AP) — It was Dallas on the Potomac as J.R. Ewing took on the politicians at the

MARIO CUOMO LARRY HAGMAN
Texas Festival Ball on Washington Mall.
Actor Larry Hagman, who played J.R. Ewing on the long-running television series "Dallas," was decked out in a white 10-gallon hat and black leather vest with a map of Texas on the back for Friday's evening of barbecued beef and chili.

The event was part of the Kennedy Center's tribute to the Lone Star state.
Alabama hosts concert
FORT PAYNE, Ala. (AP) — The country group Alabama held its 10th annual June Jam charity concert Saturday, calling on some of its big-name friends to dig deep for schools and community organizations in northeast Alabama.
The all-day concert was held behind Fort Payne High School, which band members Randy Owen, Teddy Gentry and Jeff Cook attended.
Proceeds benefit the high school, along with libraries and service groups.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your sense of honor commands widespread respect and helps you to advance your professional goals. A natural sense of thrift aids your efforts to accumulate capital. Although you are a good mixer, you are also a highly private person who enjoys regular periods of solitude. A reputation for thoroughness and reliability could result in your being offered a prestigious executive position in early 1992. Do not let pride keep you from accepting a favor from a friend.
CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Kathleen Turner, dancer Paula Abdul, author Salman Rushdie, actor Louis Jourdan.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day to discuss your career goals with someone in a position of influence. Planning ahead will help you avoid time-consuming mistakes. Your mate needs to be kept informed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Trustworthy and considerate, you draw generous people into your sphere. Good luck follows you in financial transactions. Favors can be won with a meaningful gift.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep tension to a minimum by avoiding any risky business. Guard against rash behavior, jealousy and resentment. Lie low today, but not tonight when you can win rave reviews.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): The urge to take off for a distant locale grows stronger. Heed your instincts. An unexpected windfall or favorable verdict sets your mind at ease. Pick up some travel brochures this afternoon.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A new associate or organization could help you advance a special cause. Reach out to people who share your concerns. Water sports like swimming and canoeing may hold new appeal.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Beware of strangers today; they could be wolves in sheep's clothing. A longtime alliance is solid gold. Both parties will reap new benefits in the near future. Start reading a best seller tonight.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Valuable information surfaces today. Do everything you can to protect your source. Satisfying business agreements await—spell out your terms. It is time to expand your circle of allies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Brace yourself. You may have to take charge at a social event or deal with demanding VIPs. This might go into extra innings, so hang loose. A romantic encounter is best postponed.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Exuding charisma from every pore, you are a sure bet to win friends and influence people today! There are seeds to be sown and favors to reap—pastures of plenty lie ahead.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You ought to be able to earn some extra cash now. Bring bills up-to-date. Your co-workers share your desire to get back on schedule. Attend a glamorous social gathering tonight.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This can be a happy day for romance. Resist the temptation to point out other people's shortcomings. It is time to concentrate on completing a personal project.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Self-control is essential if you are to emerge unscathed from a confrontation. Someone with a daring outlook can help you to solve a troubling business or personal problem.
