Press deadlines changed at Herald

Bored with eating alone in restaurants at noon? Beginning this week you can lunch with the Big Spring Herald.

Press deadlines for the Herald have been changed to allow the paper to be placed in sales racks at 12:30 p.m., thus giving residents an opportunity to find out about the day's news a little earlier.

Circulation Manager Dale Ferguson said the earlier deadline will not particularly mean the papers will be delivered earlier to subscribers. "We have a 5 p.m. daily delivery deadline and a 7 a.m. Sunday deadline," he said. Circulation phones are open from 9 a.m. to 6:30 Monday through Friday and 7 a.m. until 10 a.m. Sunday.

There are about 60 single-sale outlets in Big Spring where people can purchase a paper, he said. These include convenience stores as well as newspaper racks.

The earlier press time will mean a slightly earlier deadline for local news, explained Managing Editor Karen McCarthy. "We analyzed the news content for a period of several weeks and decided we would not have missed much news by having an earlier deadline. If publishing earlier means added convenience for our readers, then I'm all for it."

Any questions or comments about the new schedule may be directed to Publisher Patrick J. Morgan, Ferguson or McCarthy.

State, city officials talk conservation

Representatives of Gov. Ann Richards' Energy Division office met with city officials this week to discuss ways to conserve power and save money.

Assistant City Manager Tom Decell said the city is considering use of a software package that monitors power usage in all city buildings.

"We're still at the information-gathering stage," he said. "But we've identified some other areas that could use more detailed energy audits. . . . For no cost to the city, this is a good deal."

Workers begin bank stabilization

Texas Highway Department workers have begun stabilizing the section of bank on FM-700 that collapsed recently, officials said today.

Resident Engineer Mike Chetty said the project is expected to continue for about 10 days. Its goal is to temporarily strengthen the bank, located near the Gregg Street overpass, until the department can secure a contract to have it permanently repaired.

Workers use a caliche-type material mixed with cement and water to repair the bank,

Mitchell County sheriff indicted

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — Mitchell County Sheriff Wendell Bryant was indicted Thursday by a grand jury on three sexual harassment charges and one misconduct charge.

County Attorney Clay Strange indicated that the misdemeanor indictments strengthens his effort to have Bryant, 39, ousted from office. Strange filed a civil petition June 13 in 32nd Judicial District Court seeking Bryant's removal and accusing him of sexually harassing employees and incompetence.

If found guilty of any of the indictments, Bryant would automatically be removed from of-ice, Strange said. But since they are not felony crimes, he could run for office again. A district court jury could also remove him from office based on the allegations in the petition filed by Strange, even if Bryant is found innocent of the criminal charges.

"It's certainly an expression by the grand jury that they felt Sheriff Bryant acted wrongly," said Strange, who helped present the evidence to the grand jury. Grand jury indictments were not needed to file misdemeanor charges, but Strange said last week that he wanted citizens of the community to make the determination.

Bryant, who was arrested about 4:30 p.m. Thursday by a Texas Ranger and released upon posting $3,500 in bonds, declined to comment early today when contacted by the Big Spring Herald. "Not at this time," he said.

Among witnesses to go into the grand jury proceedings, which lasted most of the day, were sheriff department employees Carol Hutto, a deputy, jailer Gwen Henderson and jailer Carolyn Rollins. Hutto and Henderson accused Bryant and sexual harassment in sworn statements filed with last week's petition seeking his removal from office.

The petition said Bryant "with provocation or consent, touched, squeezed, grabbed, kissed and stroked various female employees in the area of their backs, their stomachs, their legs and, most unconscionably, their inner thighs."

The alleged acts occurred at the sheriff's office during working hours for a year or more but more frequently within the last few months, the petition said.

Bryant, who has been sheriff since 1981, was divorced from his wife Connie R. Bryant on May 31, according to district court records. The divorce petition was filed March 6.

The misconduct indictment is in connection with an April incident in which Bryant allegedly allowed his 12-year-old daughter to drive a sheriff department vehicle, Strange said.

Meanwhile, a hearing is scheduled June 25 in district court to determine if Bryant should be suspended or allowed to remain in office until a trial convenes to hear allegations listed in the petition. Strange did not say when a civil trial would take place but said a trial on the criminal indictments could possibly be sometime this fall.

If found guilty, the three Class A misdemeanor official oppression charges, in connection with the sexual harassment allegations, are each punishable by up to two years in jail and up to a $2,000 fine. Bonds were set at $1,000 each.

Official oppression, a Class B misdemeanor, is punishable by up to six months in jail and a fine of up to $1,000.

Accident citation dismissed by court

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Staff Writer

Municipal Judge Arnold Marshall on Thursday dismissed a citation issued to Moore Development for Big Spring Inc. director Ted St. Clair for his part in a May 25 traffic accident that damaged a city fire truck.

St. Clair had been issued a citation for failure to yield right of way to an emergency vehicle after the accident, which occurred at the intersection of Birdwell Lane and Fourth Street. The Big Spring Fire Department mini-pumper, driven by firefighter Mark Settles, was operating its lights and sirens on the way to a grass fire when the incident occurred.

Big Spring City Finance Director Tom Ferguson said the dismissal does not change his plans to file for reimbursement from Moore Development's insurance for the cost of repairs to the truck. An evaluation of the vehicle's condition, ordered immediately after the incident, is not complete, officials said.

"As soon as I get some more information from the investigation run by the police department, and those repair estimates, I'll probably go ahead and file," Ferguson said.

The truck and its equipment are being evaluated by a Lubbock company, officials have said.

The city does not carry comprehensive insurance on its vehicles, Ferguson said.

"It was too costly, so the city decided not to carry that. We have so many vehicles," he said.

Ferguson said he did not know if the ticket dismissal lessens the city's chances to regain payment.

"It's our only choice," he said. "If (Moore's insurance company) doesn't pay for it, we'll . . . be out the cost of repairs or forfeit the truck."

Marshall dismissed the ticket after presentations by St. Clair, police investigating officer John Stowers, Settles and Lt. Robert Muller of the fire department. The judge said today it is possible St. Clair did not see the truck.

Distractions, including utility poles and signs at the corner could have blocked St. Clair's view of the approaching truck, Marshall said. St. Clair had said he was driving in the northernmost lane with his windows rolled up and his air conditioner and radio operating.

Witnesses were unable to establish which driver was at fault. St. Clair said he did not see the fire truck until after the accident, but the firefighters said the truck was broadsided by St. Clair's vehicle.

Marshall noted state law allows emergency vehicles to enter an intersection against the light if the driver uses "due caution." He said it is possible the fire truck was traveling at an unsafe speed.

The Moore Development for Big Spring vehicle, which St. Clair was driving at the time, was replaced by the economic development corporation's liability insurance, officials said.

Gene Chartier Smith to conduct symphony

By KAREN MCCARTHY Managing Editor

Gene Chartier Smith, the newly-named music director and conductor of the Big Spring Symphony, was introduced to the community at a reception and dinner at the Country Club Thursday evening.

Smith, a native of Abilene, is the music director and conductor of the San Angelo Symphony Orchestra and Chorale, a position he has held since 1978. The Big Spring Symphony position will be an additional responsibility.

"I am married to the San Angelo Symphony," he explained to board members and guests. "The Big Spring Symphony is going to be my legal affair."

Smith began his musical career at the age of 9, while recovering from a bout with pneumonia. A family doctor encouraged his parents to start him on a wind instrument to build up his lungs. He took up the clarinet, and later the saxophone.

Smith attended Baylor University, earning both a bachelor's and a master's degree in music. He directed award-winning high school bands in Odessa, Denver City and Midland before returning to Baylor as director of bands from 1969 to 1973.

He began his symphony career in 1973 as conductor of the Lawton (Okla.) Philharmonic Orchestra.

"I don't have the typical credentials of a symphony conductor," Smith said, adding that he knew of no other symphony with a conductor who has a marching band background.

Smith has performed twice in Big Spring. In the 1960s he was invited by the director of the Big Spring High School band, Doug Wiehe, to play a saxophone solo at a high school concert. He was also the guest conductor at the Big Spring Symphony's Big Band to Big Balls in Cowtown concert in November.

In addition to conducting, Smith also plays clarinet and soprano sax in the Angelo Jazz Band and arranges and prints music with his computer.

He and his wife Jane, who teaches orchestra in the San Angelo Independent School District, are the parents of a 4-year-old son, James. While James isn't playing a musical instrument yet, his parents have plans to start him on the cello this year.

Coahoma plans gala July 4th

By MARSHA STURDIVANT Staff Writer

Coahoma Mayor Eleanor Garrett issued a formal proclamation today declaring July 4 "Thanks for Freedom Day" in the city of Coahoma.

Garrett presented the proclamation to the Thanks for Freedom Day committee chairperson, Deputy Sheriff Woodie Howell.

The Independence Day celebration includes a parade featuring 250 entries. A U.S. flag flown over the Capitol in Austin for the city of Coahoma by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, will be raised by an Air Force color guard from San Angelo. The flag-raising ceremony will be followed by a 21-gun salute and taps will be played.

A "full day and evening" of events, contests, music, fireworks and food is planned for the Fourth of July, said committee member Clara Justice. The events are sponsored by the Coahoma Lions Club and citizens of Coahoma and surrounding areas.

Quinn and Ruth Reid are the parade grand marshalls. Reid is a World War II veteran, who was captured at the Battle of the Bulge in Belgium during that war. Veterans from all wars will be honored during the celebration, and the names of 170 Howard County soldiers who served in Operation Desert Storm will be announced.

The flag will be dedicated that same day, and a letter Justice received from President Bush will be read to the assembly. The 12 winners of an essay contest about

Jackson wants Americans helped

AUSTIN (AP) — The United States should turn its energies to shoring up services to its own people, just as it has aided countries in Eastern Europe, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said during a weeklong tour of Texas and Oklahoma.

"Let's bail out America. Let's reinvest in America," Jackson said Thursday, after a meeting with members of the Texas Rainbow Coalition.

"We should not go a step further engaging in combat looking for energy in the Middle East with oil wells capped in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas," he said. "We should at least be able to get the same deal for America that (Russian President Boris) Yeltsin's trying to get for the Soviet Union."

Government by cabinet studied

AUSTIN (AP) — Changing to more of a cabinet style of government, boosting a governor's authority over state agencies, is attracting the interest at the Capitol.

The Houston Chronicle reported that lawmakers and the governor's office are studying the idea.

Gov. Ann Richards has called a special session for July 3 to write and fund the 1992-93 state budget, with lawmakers facing a projected $4.7 billion deficit.

The Chronicle reported Thursday that a cabinet proposal would be tied to a reorganization and consolidation of government agencies.

It would represent a major change in the structure of Texas government, with backers hoping it would make the bureaucracy more efficient and more responsive.

GOP officials say minorities will join

HOUSTON (AP) — Blacks and Hispanics will be joining the Republican Party in record numbers as they grow weary of Democratic rhetoric and legislation that doesn't speak for them, GOP officials predict.

Gathering for their summer meeting, Republican party officials told each other Thursday how their party is increasingly attracting traditional Democrats.

"Republican values of strong family ties, religious values and a strong work ethic and sense of self-sufficiency make the Republican Party the natural home for Hispanics," said Jose Manuel Casanova, chairman of the Republican National Hispanic Assembly.

Republican National Committee Chairman Clayton Yeutter said he hoped to increase black and Hispanic membership in the Republican Party, and said Democrats were losing their traditional hold on urban minorities.

"Hispanics should be disillusioned by what they've been hearing from Democrats," said Yeutter.

Fred Brown, chairman of the black Republicans, said his group opposed civil rights legislation pending on Capitol Hill that Republicans maintain will amount to reverse discrimination in hiring.

He also said black membership in the GOP was steadily increasing.

"We blacks would like to soar with eagles any day than to work with turkeys," Brown said.

Yeutter said he was glad to see black Republicans realize the civil rights legislation "wasn't in the best interests of blacks."

Tony Zagotta, president of the College Republicans, also told the executive committee that his generation was "the most Republican generation in American history."

"I am very confident we are far and above our counterparts on college campuses," Zagotta said. "We usually blow 'em away in numbers by about 10 to one."

Zagotta predicted the 1992 election would be the third landslide election in a row for a Republican president, who would be swept into office mostly by 18- to 24-year-olds.

The summer RNC meeting was to continue today with speakers including Gov. Carroll Campbell of South Carolina, Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, and Gaddi Vasquez, chairman of the Orange County Board of Supervisors.

Gang membership rising in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Gang membership in Texas' largest cities has increased 15 percent during a six-month period from October 1990 to last April, according to a report issued by the state attorney general's office.

"The insidious spread of gang-related violence throughout our state is one of the most acute challenges facing our state in general, and the law enforcement community in particular," Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said Thursday.

In those cities, the survey found about 13,000 gang members affiliated with more than 750 racist, criminal and prison gangs.

The study says about two-thirds of the youngsters incarcerated at the Texas Youth Commission identify themselves as gang members.

Most gang members are unemployed, under-educated and impoverished, the report said.

Morales said so-called "bullet drills" conducted in some parts of the nation where schoolchildren are taught to hide from gang crossfire, may not be far away from Texas.

"More and more of our children are being born into circumstances in which they are increasingly likely to become both the victims and the perpetrators of violent crime," he said.

"Very few gang members ever have the opportunity to effectively escape the influence of their gangs. Most are born into chronic poverty, they fall behind in school almost from the beginning, and they generally have weaker prospects than their parents did when they were young," he said.

Morales said his agency will establish a clearinghouse office for information on gangs. He also said he will seek input from state and local crime and education officials on how to solve the problem.

Schools eliminate new holiday

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Tarrant County school district has removed five holidays including Martin Luther King Jr. Day, from next year's calendar to meet a state requirement that added five days to the school year.

Ironically, the action came down this week as Gov. Ann Richards and Texas lawmakers celebrated the creation of a state holiday in honor of the slain civil rights leader.

Trustees for the Hurst-Eules-Bedford school district decided at a meeting Tuesday to eliminate the King holiday along with Good Friday, Veterans Day, Memorial Day and a Jan. 17 workday to meet the state calendar requirement, officials said.

Hurst-Eules-Bedford schools had included King's birthday on a calendar approved in January.

However, a new state law that lengthened the 1991-92 school year forced the district to reconsider its plans. The Texas Education Agency says schools are not required to take the day off.

"We certainly will celebrate it in our schools. But it won't be a holiday," board president Lennijo Blair said. "We would have honored him both ways had we been able to work it into the schedule."

Administrators considered keeping the Jan. 20 King holiday. But district trustees decided it came too soon after winter break.

So they chose instead to celebrate President's Day on Feb. 17, which falls midway between winter and spring breaks.

Dog rescue
HOUSTON — More than a dozen dogs, out of 60 animals taken from a Harris County home this week, are rescued by SPCA worker Margaret Pace in Houston. Most of the dogs were either malnourished or flea-infested. The owner of the house where the dogs were found was arrested.

Controversial parts of bill dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration dropped two of the most controversial elements of its anti-crime package as the Senate began debate on measures to reduce street violence and curb illegal use of guns.

The administration abandoned a proposal to conduct essentially secret trials with secret evidence to deport aliens suspected of terrorist activity.

It also jettisoned a provision that would have allowed firearms illegally seized by police to be used as evidence.

The last-minute changes, however, failed to win Democratic votes for President Bush's crime package. A Republican motion to substitute the modified Bush bill for the Democratic crime package failed on a 56-40 vote Thursday night.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said the vote showed that Democrats have discovered that "President Bush's crime bill doesn't really curb street crime."

Democrats are pushing a series of gun-control proposals, including a seven-day waiting period on handgun purchases.

Bush has indicated he would sign gun-control measures if Congress enacts his proposals to expand the federal death penalty.

Ruling will allow random searches

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court ruling that lets police board buses and randomly ask passengers if they will submit to searches for drugs could make travel "oppressive" for many innocent people, a civil liberties lawyer says.

University of Miami law professor Mary Coombs, representing the American Civil Liberties Union, said Thursday's high court decision "in theory is not bad."

But, she said, what it means is that "in the real world police will keep on making life inconvenient, difficult and oppressive for bus passengers who don't have any drugs."

Sheriff's Maj. Ralph Page of Broward County, Fla. — where Thursday's case originated — said the ruling was a bonus for law enforcement. The searches are "an effective tool in the fight against narcotics distribution," he said.

The Bush administration joined Florida prosecutors in urging the high court to permit such tactics.

The justices, voting 6-3, ruled that officers may board buses and ask any passenger to consent to a search.

The court is expected to conclude its 1990-91 term next week.

Yeltsin pleased with Bush meeting

NEW YORK (AP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin says he came away from his meeting with President Bush with a "good impression," adding that Bush was willing to deal with both the Soviet Union and its individual republics.

The recently elected president of the Soviet Union's largest republic arrived in New York Thursday night after meeting with Bush for more than an hour in Washington and then visiting with Vice President Dan Quayle.

It was in sharp contrast to his 1989 visit, when Bush saw Yeltsin only briefly.

Yeltsin had a busy schedule in New York today, including a speech this morning at New York University and afternoon meetings with editors of The New York Times and officials of the Federal Reserve Bank.

Army barracks bombed

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Rescue workers enter an army barracks, the worst damaged building in Friday's bomb explosion in front of the Joint Operations Command. Initial reports said 20 were killed but officials fear the death toll could rise to 40.

Funds disappearing from bank accounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans who think they will win a dream vacation by calling a number on a postcard often discover later that they lost more than a great trip. Also gone, sometimes without their consent, is a piece of their checking accounts.

The latest fraudulent scheme by unsavory telephone marketing firms has triggered special alerts to banks by the FBI, the Federal Reserve, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Comptroller of the Currency.

The trouble begins when the telephone sales person, hawking a vacation, low-interest credit card or other product, lures the customer into providing his checking account number.

The unethical operator then encodes the account number on a demand draft — forms that can be used to withdraw funds quickly. Meanwhile, the promoted product is rarely delivered.

Victims often don't learn of such a withdrawal until they spot it on a monthly bank statement. Or, if they have orally agreed to a charge, they become furious when their account was charged but the product wasn't delivered.

The firms send out postcards to generate return calls or do direct dialing to hawk their promises of easy credit, grand prizes or services.

In each case, there's a charge which — in the case of promised prizes — often is called a processing fee. The companies say they'll take care of the transaction if the customer will provide his checking account number.

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., chairman of the House Small Business subcommittee on regulation, said the businesses possess "an impressive array of electronic and computerized tools which literally unlock the bank's safe."

Wyden's subcommittee staff is investigating the unauthorized withdrawals. A staff memo to the chairman said there is no way yet to estimate losses from the schemes, but "individual anecdotes provided by institutions... indicate that the level of fraud easily is in millions of dollars per year."

The drafts submitted for payment by the telephone marketers are like the ones used routinely by legitimate insurance companies, mutual funds and other businesses.

German capital returns to Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Celebrations welcoming the federal government's return to Berlin — Germany's historical heart — gave way today to sobering predictions on how much the move will cost.

With the nation already strained by the costs and problems of reunification, transferring federal offices from Bonn is expected to cost up to $41 billion and take at least 10 years.

"It is clear to me that we have now assumed a big additional task, which cannot be solved overnight," Chancellor Helmut Kohl said.

Money was on the minds of Berliners and other Germans.

It was not immediately certain whether the expenses of moving the capital will slow economic plans. But many residents in the east expected the government would move to Berlin and welcomed the new investment and jobs.

Yet higher prices are also likely in a city that's already becoming too expensive for some residents. The rent for a two-bedroom apartment in west Berlin can go for $1,400 a month. Diepgen has promised curbs on land speculators.

The Bundestag, the lower house of parliament, and the chancellor's office are expected to move to Berlin in about four years.

Governing party wins local races

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Roh Tae-woo's government scored a sweeping victory in local elections, according to returns today, indicating public rejection of a wave of violent demonstrations.

Final results from Thursday's balloting gave Roh's governing Democratic Liberal Party 564 out of 866 seats to form local councils in 15 large cities and nine provinces.

The election, the second round of South Korea's first local elections reinstated in 30 years, also was seen as a dry run for next year's parliamentary and presidential elections.

Both ruling and opposition party leaders said voters were weary of intensive violent protests triggered by the April 26 fatal beating of a student protester by police. Ten protesters died and thousands were injured in the ensuing demonstrations.

Government officials claimed the middle-class demanding stability supported the governing party.

"The victory shows the people want stability and stand against those trying to instigate a revolution through demonstrations," said Kim Young-sam, the government party's executive chairman.

American buys replica of Bounty

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — An unidentified American on Thursday bought an 18th century-style square-rigger ship that was the centerpiece of the 1984 movie "The Bounty."

The three-masted vessel, built by filmmaker Dino De Laurentis for about $4.5 million for the remake of "Mutiny on the Bounty," was sold at auction for $610,000.

A syndicate had bought the 133-foot ship 5 1/2 years ago for $1.5 million and used it for long trips and cruises on Sydney Harbor.

Attorney Tony Latimer said the ship would leave Australia for the United States, where it would be used "for maritime purposes."

The original Bounty was the site of the famed 1789 mutiny led by Fletcher Christian against captain William Bligh. Bligh and

Chances good for gun control

The likelihood that Congress will approve a handgun control law this year is substantially improved now that Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, has joined the cause.

The Brady bill, which would mandate a seven-day waiting period for handgun purchases, is part of an anti-crime package pending before the Senate.

After the House of Representatives overwhelmingly passed the Brady bill in May, Sen. Mitchell moved to strengthen it in two crucial areas. He proposed that it require law enforcement officers to run a background check on all prospective buyers of handguns. He also would provide $40 million in federal grants to enable the states to centralize their criminal records.

This provision addresses a specific concern of the National Rifle Association, which opposes the Brady bill. The gun lobby contends that a nationwide waiting period would create a hardship on millions of law-abiding gun purchasers.

The NRA's concern is not shared by most of the nation's law enforcement organizations. The police understand the value of a cooling-off period for handgun purchases because they deal on a daily basis with the carnage caused by cheap, readily available Saturday Night specials.

A national waiting period also is endorsed by a long list of organizations, including the American Medical Association, the American Bar Association, the National League of Cities, the U.S. Conference of Mayors and the National League of Women Voters.

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has documented in a recent study that the percentage of out-of-state handgun purchases is "directly proportional to the strength of local firearm regulations."

This underscores the need for a nationwide waiting period to prevent gun buyers from slipping across state lines. President Bush has said he will sign the Brady bill if it is part of a comprehensive anti-crime package. Such a measure is before the Senate, and it should be approved.

Lady doesn't recognize yesterday's celebrities

A lady a decade-and-a-half younger than yours truly accompanied me recently to Winston-Salem, N.C., where I participated in the highlight of my golfing year, The Crosby.

The tournament came east from California several years ago. They play some of Bing's old records in the clubhouse at Bermuda Run Country Club and various celebrities and corporate types play for a purse totaling $1.5 million.

What money you win, you don't keep. You designate a charity where you want your winnings sent. The Crosby is all about helping others.

I told the lady as we left for the tournament, "You'll get to see a lot of famous people at The Crosby."

First day of the 54-hole tournament we arrived at Bermuda Run and she said, "OK, show me somebody famous."

"There's Dale Robertson," I said. "Who?" she replied. "Dale Robertson. He was in 'Tales of Wells Fargo,' all those years. Remember his horse's name?"

"How could I remember his horse's name if I don't remember him?" "Good point," I said, "but just for the record, his horse was named Jubilee and Pall Mall sponsored the show."

I looked around for somebody else famous. "There's George Blanda," I said. "I never heard of him, either."

"He holds the record for scoring the most points in the National Football League."

"I thought that was Joe Montana," the lady replied. "Where's he? He's a lot cuter than George What's-His-Name."

"Joe Montana's not here," I said. "But there's Johnny Mathis."

"He's a football player, too?" "Of course not," I explained, becoming somewhat frustrated.

Lewis Grizzard

"He had a lot of hit songs like 'Chances Are.' I know you remember that. 'Chances are, as I wear a silly grin'..."

"None."

"OK," I said, bent but not broken, "there's Willie McCovey over on the practice tee hitting balls. He played for the Giants. And there's Dr. J., the former basketball star. And there's Jim Taylor. He played for the Packers."

"I don't keep up with sports that much," said the lady. "Any movie stars?"

"There's Don Murray," I said. "I remember him. He used to be on 'Saturday Nite Live.'" "You're thinking of Bill Murray. Don's a little older. There's Kathleen Sullivan. She used to be on the news for CBS."

"And there's McLean Stevenson. He used to be on 'MASH.' And there's Bobby Hull. He used to play hockey."

"I've come all this way to see a lot of stars," the lady said. "I thought Madonna and Tom Cruise and Kevin Costner might be here. And why didn't they invite Vanilla Ice?"

Just then Bob Hope came riding past us in a golf cart. "There's Bob Hope," I said. "You can't tell me you've never heard of Bob Hope."

"Of course I've heard of Bob Hope," she said. "My grandmother used to think he was really funny."

Gerald Ford, who used to be president, came by on his way to the first tee. When he was in office, my companion was 12. I said, "Wait here. I'm going to the locker room to change shoes."

Bowing out of contest gracefully

For the past three weeks we have been examining smiles, trying to analyze what makes the good ones work. Now it's time to announce the final two winners in our Grand Simile Contest of 1991 and to review the main points.

DA! DAH! Two readers tied for first place in fashioning a simile for "graceful." L. Gay Yokley of Denver submitted this appealing paragraph:

"I can't recall my grandmother's face. I was very young and she was very, very old. Even now, though, I have an isolated vision of her hands, as graceful as a fall of ancient, unstarched lace. Ahhhh, lovely."

A $25 prize also goes to Rob Carney of Spokane, Wash., for a superlative combination of metaphor and simile that won Best of Show: "Spring breeze is wind with its sleeves rolled up, skipping daffodils to daffodils like graceful snips of garden shears. The judges loved it."

The contest attracted 2,493 entrants who submitted more than 10,000 similes. I was especially pleased to see so many students join the fun, ranging across the country from fifth graders in Florida to college students in Colorado.

The "graceful" division produced some nice honorable mentions. From Wilkeson, Wash., "as graceful as a geisha; every gesture was perfect, and utterly devoid of passion." From Canton, Ohio, "graceful as angel fish gliding through castles." From Seattle, "graceful as a perfect double play."

From Addison, N.Y., "as impeccably graceful as Queen Nefertiti's neck." From Harrisburg, Pa., "as graceful as the curtsy of the rose to the honeybee." From Palm City, Fla., "She moved as gracefully as the curve of a breaking wave."

From Linwood, Mich., "as graceful as swallows dusk-feeding over an August pond."

It was true here, as it was in the other three contests, that most of the entries were not very original. We had hundreds of variations on "graceful as a ballerina" and other hundreds that relied upon "graceful as a willow." Other favorites dealt with the grace of ice skaters, falling leaves, blown dandelions and sheets in the wind.

What have we learned? Apart from being original, good similes must be compact. From Omaha, Neb.: "The weeping willow extends its limbs toward heaven, arching gracefully like the slender neck of a swan." It was too much.

Good similes must rely upon reasonably familiar images. A gentleman in Portland, Ore., submitted: "Lines, graceful as gracillimus, were painted on the walls." He explained in a footnote that gracillimus is an ornamental grass. Another contestant wrote of something as serene as a Brancusi arc. Maybe so, maybe so.

There must be an element of plausibility. A student in Omaha felt that "birds are as graceful as the penmanship of a great writer." But great writers are not necessarily masters of fine penmanship.

Many entries dug up a good idea but failed to polish the nugget. A reader in Oak Harbor,

James J. Kilpatrick

Wash., fiddled with this one: "Her artless pose appeared careless and unstudied, yet was graceful as the meticulously crafted curves of a 300-year-old Stradivarius." Too many words. Other readers tried similes based on a harpist's hands and a flutist's fingers. They didn't quite come off.

Similes must be in good taste - or at least they must fit into the context of a piece of writing. The contest is over, but I remain amazed at the scores of similes that were based upon the supposed slipperiness of snot. One of the entries for "serene" involved the serenity of a nurse in a burn ward.

Every word of a simile has to be in the right key. From Topeka, Kan.: "On hot afternoons, blinds drawn, she slept in the nude. I used to watch her gentle breathing, thinking that nothing is as graceful as the breasts of a snoring woman." Snoozing? Snoozing! Aaargh! There went a promising simile.

All kinds of elements go into this literary device. We want a cadence that is not too obvious. A little alliteration is fine; too much alliteration is ludicrous. Similes must accurately reflect a given comparison. One of my old favorites spoke slyly of someone "as graceful as Jackie Gleason getting out of a Porsche." It was perfect.

The crafting of a good simile begins with close observation. Around the turn of the century, a fellow with a bad hangover woke up with a mouth "that tasted like the inside of a motorman's glove." The author was probably a motorman who drank. He's still teaching us from the grave.

Attack of blood suckers

By GARY SHANKS Staff Writer

At the top of the news this hour, the entire population of the city of Big Spring, Texas, has been found dead, apparently from loss of blood. Rescue efforts have been hampered by hordes of huge, bloated mosquitoes.

Man, have you ever seen so many mosquitoes? No joke, I was slapping and scratching in my sleep the other night and killed so many of the little blood suckers, the next morning my bed looked like some mad scientist's vivisection table. There was blood everywhere and I looked like some swollen bumpy creature that crawled out from under a nuclear power plant.

Mosquitoes have got to be God's curse on Adam. They serve no other purpose but to transmit disease and cause torment.

Granted they serve as one of the lowest members of a food chain, but whatever it is that eats mosquitoes is conspicuous by its absence in Big Spring.

In central and coastal areas of the state there is water standing constantly for the little parasites to breed in, but because of the huge bat populations and fish that eat mosquito larvae, they're not so much of a problem. Maybe we should build more places for bats to live. I already know that you can buy a type of small fish to stock standing water and they live on nothing but baby mosquitoes. Yes!

I was walking across the courthouse lawn the other day to annoy the attack birds (the Mississippi Kites that dive bomb you if you get too close). Anyway, I stepped on the grass and a cloud of ravenous, blood-thirsty mosquitoes rose and blocked out the sun.

I thought it was the apocalypse. I went screaming down Main Street jumping into the air yelling "Wait! You forgot me!"

Mosquitoes! I hate 'em! Nasty little blood-thirsty spawn of Satan!

Even now I can hear them scratching at the window. I've been awake for the last three days watching them pry the screen apart with tiny, little tire tools.

The glass is proving to be more of a problem. They're sacrificing themselves by flying into the pane at full speed. They're dropping like flies, er... mosquitoes. But for every blood-sucking, winged vampire that dies there are a million waiting to take its place. There is a crack in the window now. It won't be long. I've got a surprise for them though.

I've poured gallons of insect killer on the floor, painted it on the walls, soaked it into the curtains, bathed in it and although my hair has fallen out and I don't feel very good, I know that the first drop of my blood they drink will be their last. Ha! Ha! ha! ha!... Who's that buzzing at my chamber door? Quoth the mosquito - nevermore! he! he he he! he! he! he! Ah! Ha! Ha! HA! HA! HA!

Tyler man taps old profession to overcome disability

By LINDI BEAUDREAU
Tyler Morning Telegraph
TYLER (AP) — Horace Gandy suffered a massive stroke last October that left him unable to talk. But Gandy still is able to communicate by making use of a long-dormant skill the former telegraph operator hadn't used in years — Morse code. Gandy's son-in-law has built a battery-operated device that allows him to tap out his thoughts a letter at a time. Gandy was a telegraph operator in various cities across Texas from the 1930s to the early 1950s. Although the stroke left most of his body paralyzed, he has limited movement in his left hand that allows him to use the tapping device. "He can communicate quickly, but he has to be patient with me. . . I can do it one letter at a time," says Gandy's son Gene, an instructor at Tyler Junior College. Gene Gandy repeats aloud the letters his father taps out. If he has the correct letter, Gandy continues spelling out his thought. If his son is wrong, Gandy shakes his head and repeats the letter. Gandy's son related several stories he said Gandy had told him about his 81 years in Texas, stopping often for Gandy's additions and corrections to each tale.

Gandy was born on October 3, 1906, in Wood County, and started working as a telegraph operator when he was 25. He said his job took him to many towns, including Kermit, that at that time had Saturday nights marked by numerous killings. His job was to relay notifications of the deaths. When he was younger, Gandy and his brother, also a telegraph operator, used to talk to each other in Morse code as if it were their own secret language, Gandy's son said. "They would start tapping to each other 100 miles an hour. . . they would be carrying on for hours and just start laughing. . . it was like they were talking in a foreign language, and no one else could understand them," Gandy's son said. After working in telegraphy for 20 years Gandy went to work for the United States Postal Service as a rural letter carrier. And now Gandy, a resident of Colonial Manor, uses Morse code every day again. His son said he is thankful they have a way to talk because Gandy is mentally alert and has a lot to say. Many stroke victims, the younger Gandy said, are unable to communicate, so people assume they don't understand what is happening around them. This is often untrue, he said. Gandy knows the staff at Colonial Manor well, and he tapped out each assistant's name as they walked through the room. "It was really interesting how I got to know Mr. Gandy," activities assistant Paul Budd said. "I walked by his room every day and would hear these beeping noises that I didn't understand. After a while I was talking to some of the nurses — they call him 'Mr. Beeper Beeper,' and they told me about him, so I decided to meet the guy in the room where I had always heard these agitating noises. And he's the neatest guy I've met in a long time."

'Views' captivate collectors

By REBECCA DeLONG
Waco Tribune-Herald
WACO (AP) — Long before Nintendo and videotape, when moving pictures and one-hour photos didn't exist, entertainment was a far less complicated thing. At the turn of the century, stereoscopes — hand-held gadgets that allow three-dimensional viewing of photos and drawings — were popular entertainment. Brian and Ellis Bennett of Waco own no less than 500 antique "views." "We have a very small collection. We're not serious collectors," said Ellis, pulling favorite views from her stack. "We just buy what we like." Among the favorites? Antique pictures of wars, cowboys, London and Scotland and other places the Bennetts visit. "They're fun to look at," Brian said. "It's back before the days of freeways and fast food." A British scientist invented the first stereoscope in the 1830s while studying depth perception. Astronomers and aerial surveyors still use them today. Like modern-day Viewmasters, stereoscopes have two eyepieces through which two similar photos or drawings, mounted side by side, are viewed. The resulting image appears three dimensional. "It was quite a parlor amusement in the Victorian era," Ellis said. What's more, it brought the world to people who otherwise might never have known what Charles Lindbergh looked like. Or the pyramids of Egypt. Or the Tower of London. Little wonder that they were popular in schools, too. "The original reason for these was to see people and places that these people would never see," Brian said. Ellis has more than 400 travel photos and garden scenes in her collection. "Yeah, we're nuts."

WACO — Brian and Ellis Bennett have collected more than 500 photos used to look at through their vintage stereoscope. The device invented around the turn of the century allows viewers to see three-dimensional photos and drawings.

the views were of her own family, Ellis said. "Who knows what happened to them. They're gone now," she said. Cards are readily available, though, at most antique stores. They aren't as plentiful in Texas as they are in places that were settled earlier, though. "There aren't too many old cards of Elm Lott," Brian joked. About 500 people belong to the National Stereoscopic Association, which is holding a Trade Fair and convention today through Sunday in San Antonio. About 70 dealers will be at the show. "We figure after three or four hours of the trade show we'll be blind," Ellis said. Non-collectors are also welcome to come learn the latest on modern, three-dimensional cameras and equipment. (For information about the show, call 512-474-2097.)

Cabbie entertains captive audiences

NEW YORK (AP) — Taxi passengers hardened by brusque cabbies and often death-defying rides through clogged, pot-holed streets are taken aback when Brian David Smith gives them a gracious greeting and a few minutes of comedy.

"You look good in a tuxedo," he told the male half of a yuppie couple heading for a benefit gala recently. "I got a couple of tuxedos but I'm a little too heavy to wear them right now. I want to get back to my original weight — you know, 8 pounds, 4 ounces."

Smith, 41, a struggling stand-up comedian and actor, bills himself as the "Comic Cabbie." While driving from 5 p.m. to 4 a.m., he tries out new material for an act that so far has been confined to small comedy clubs around the city.

He started attending open mike nights at comedy clubs. "I bombed at first," he said. "With stand-up comedy, you're naked to the world. Sometimes they don't laugh and, man, those weak little smiles can be deafening."

He's written screenplays, and has acted in several low-budget features. He also writes, performs and records his own music.

"Want to hear some of it?" he asks a passenger, who doesn't have much choice.

DALE GABBARD

Rubber band ball weighs 100 pounds

SOMERVILLE, Ohio (AP) — It began taking shape 16 years ago when Dale Gabbard picked up a few rubber bands littering a school's hallways, looped them together and rolled them up in a ball.

An estimated 400,000 rubber bands later, the ball weighs 100 pounds, and some of the neighbors think Gabbard's the oddball.

"I was a part-time custodian at the old Somerville School," Gabbard said. "I noticed there were a lot of rubber bands on the floors in the hallways, and I had to pick them up."

When he took them home, his mother complained.

"One day she told me to ball those up and get them out of her way," he said. "So I did."

"Now I'm 32. But there were about four years there when I didn't work on it at all."

Gabbard, an assistant manager of Megan's Grocery and Deli, said rubber bands of all colors and sizes go into the ball, which can usually be found atop a pedestal near the store doorway.

"I don't just go out and buy rubber bands," he said. "Some people bring their rubber bands into the store for me."

Learning to garden in prison

BRYAN (AP) — Lee Williams and Ruby Stephens spend their days chatting about their families, attending classes and gardening in the Texas sunshine.

But the two women aren't part of a coffee klatch or neighborhood car pool. They are drug offenders serving time at the Federal Prison Camp. And they're future Master Gardeners.

"I've always had a garden at home and I like to work outside," said Stephens, 48, wiping her forehead with the back of a dirty hand and breaking into a grin. "And we've learned to wade in mud."

Williams, 67, recently trudged through a muddy field, picking squash. "My mother and I always had a garden when I was staying with her. We never did as well as this, though."

The two are among a dozen inmates selected for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service's first-ever Master Gardener program conducted at a prison through nearby Texas A&M University.

Lisa Whittlesey, an extension service horticulturalist, acts as the instructor for the group at the low-security prison now located at the former Allen Academy campus.

The course is like any that the extension service provides for master certification: 50 hours of gardening instruction, 50 hours of volunteer work in horticulture and an examination.

Texas is one of 25 states in the country that offer the Master Gardener program. More than 500 Texans have completed such programs in 20 counties in the past decade.

At the two-year-old prison, Whittlesey teaches botany, landscaping and horticulture in a trailer for half the day. She plods through the fields with inmates for the other half, showing them how to grow crops and flowers, fertilize and landscape.

"They weren't what I expected," Whittlesey said. "I thought they would be big, brawling, brute-looking women. I thought most of them would be young, like in their 20s. But a lot of them are older and have husbands and children."

"And they're serious about gardening," she said. "You can just tell them, 'This is what needs to be done' and they'll do it."

"She's a slave-driver," Stephens said with a wink and a smile.

The class began in mid-March and will continue through the fall. Already, the inmates have built rail-edged flower beds and landscaped several buildings on campus. In addition, they have planted fruits and vegetables to supplement the food rations.

"It's good for the prison and it's good for the women," Whittlesey said.

The women are mostly "white-collar" criminals, serving sentences for drug offenses, embezzlement or fraud, said Terri Lane, assistant superintendent at the prison camp.

"Most of the women in here are mothers and a lot of them are heads of single-parent households," Lane said. Many have high school diplomas, but few have skills for a high-paying career.

The prison itself still is being remodeled since its days as an academy. But there are no fences, no guards armed with semiautomatic weapons nor bars on the windows. The women sleep in dormitories and the grounds look more like a college campus.

But prison officials credit the gardening class with adding to that environment.

"We do like to have a nice facility that will blend into the community," said Jamie Rodriguez, supervisor of education at the prison. "But we also were looking for a trade to teach these women. The Master Gardener program has been a benefit to both the institution and the inmate population."

The handpicked students in Whittlesey's class have learned to draft their landscaping ideas, cut and place treated rails, test soils, order, plant and fertilize flowers.

They've transformed a muddy courtyard into a gazebo area for picnics and sunbathing. They've relandscaped the headmaster's yard. They've learned about vegetables, the importance of weeding, root treatments and building up beds. They've picked tomatoes, squash, watermelons and peppers.

"I was surprised when we first started in the garden," Stephens said. "We thought Whittlesey was kind of touched (in the head) because she had us pull up everything. But now we can see that she really knew what she was doing."

Inmates have since grown bushels of vegetables — some from seed and some from seedlings. Class members have each become experts on one particular crop and have shared information with others.

But the best part of the class, inmates said, is that it has allowed them to feel the success of their own accomplishments.

"I let them do things their own way," Whittlesey said. "We talk about it and they do it. They get really upset if they've planted something and see it doesn't grow as they planned."

"She has treated us like adults and humans," Stephens said of her instructor. "She lets us make our own decisions about things. And she compliments our work and pats us on the back when we do well. That's important for kids and it's important for adults, too."

British coddling bat populations

WESTMILL, England (AP) — St. Mary the Virgin has bats. It's a bother, but everyone does try not to mind.

No, they are not in the belfry. "It's quite unusual for bats to use belfries," said Brian Briggs, one of the many certified bat fanciers in Hertfordshire. "They're usually cold and drafty places."

Retired Rear Adm. Kyrle Pope, the church warden, strolled down the aisle pointing out droppings in the nave, on window sills.

"We usually have a clean white cloth over the altar, and occasionally we will find a bat dropping on it," he said, peering over the tops of his square-cut glasses. "Only a pipistrelle. Nothing to worry one."

Pipistrelles, Britain's most common bat, weigh less than a quarter and would fit easily into a matchbox. Like all the 15 types in Britain, they eat insects — up to 3,000 a night.

Pro-bat groups began organizing after Parliament declared the winged mammals a protected species in 1981. They now have 2,000 members and work with the government to enforce the law.

Mr. and Mrs. Briggs were called to the church in Westmill, a village 20 miles north of London, because some unusually large droppings indicated the possible presence of a rare bat.

Their search led them up a narrow spiral staircase to the room behind the steeple clock, where bat signs were unmistakable: scratch marks, droppings and piles of moth wings.

No bats were in the room, dining or otherwise. Briggs blamed an unseasonably cold May, which has kept all "smart, self-respecting" bats in hibernation.

St. Mary's bat problem pales beside that of St. John the Baptist in nearby Great Gaddesden.

At St. John's, Briggs declared, 300 pipistrelles were roosting inside the hollow roof beams. When they became agitated by the singing of hymns below, he said, guano would shake loose and fall through cracks in the beams.

"All the droppings would fall down on the front two pews, which was where all the rich hoi polloi happened to sit," he said, with a certain relish.

Since bats are protected, church leaders had to call the government for help. Briggs and other volunteers plugged the cracks.

"We used to have people call and say, 'We've got bats, how can we get rid of them?'" said bat expert Robert Stebbings. "Now, we hear, 'We've got a house in the country. How do we attract bats?'"

Stalwart defense of animals is a British trait. Britain pioneered test-tube parakeets in 1986, introduced toad tunnels beneath highways and provided escape ramps for hedgehogs caught under cattle grids.

Despite the new coddling, bats are growing fewer in Britain, killed by pesticides and deprived of traditional forest roosts by development.

Some Britons continue to withhold their affections from bats, however difficult that may seem. Among them are Westmill's 89-year-old Buchanan twins, Isabelle and Flora.

"What I object to is having them fly up and down in my bedroom when I've got the light on and am trying to read," Isabelle said.

Art Association

shows their stuff

The Big Spring Art Association assembled June 19 for their monthly meeting.

Newly-elected president Mary Horn, presided.

Wilson Money demonstrated the progressive stages of crafting wooden jewelry and belt buckles. He used wood obtained from several states and the continent of Africa. He and his wife, Jean Money, are presently crafting life size Christmas decorations out of exterior grade plywood.

Three club members won the drawing selection and as a result, will have paintings displayed locally. Betty Conley's watercolor painting will be at Highland Mall. Jean Money's oil painting will be displayed at Bluebonnet Savings. Jerry Williams' oil painting can be seen at the State National Bank.

The club will be sponsoring art demonstrations at the Rodeo Southwest Sale, June 29 at the fair barn.

The next meeting will be at 7 p.m. July 16, at the Kentwood Senior Citizens Center, 2805 Lynn Drive. Hoyt Mulanax of Sweet-water will do a watercolor demonstration.

Those interested in art will be encouraged to attend the Rodeo Southwest Sale, and also the club meetings.

DEAR ABBY: One would think that after 34 years of pastoral experience, I would have been prepared, but when asked by a professional adult, whose father's funeral I had just conducted, "What do you charge?" I answered, "Nothing!" The reply I received was, "If you will give me the name and address of your church, I will send a check in your honor."

I should have said, "Nothing, but I am accustomed to receiving an honorarium — especially from non-church members." And I could have added, "Today is my third trip to this city, totaling 240 miles. At a mere 20 cents per mile, that would be almost $50 for expenses alone — not including the six to eight hours spent in travel and preparation."

Last month I was asked to conduct a funeral service for a non-church member who lived in our community. I received an honorarium of $100, which was greatly appreciated and set aside for a future vacation.

The majority of pastors are underpaid and taken for granted. My wife reminded me of the time I was paid $10 for a wedding with the suggestion that I split it with the pianist! — ANOTHER GEORGIA PASTOR

DEAR PASTOR: Perhaps your letter will remind readers who require the services of a clergyman for happy occasions (weddings, christenings,) as well as sad ones (funerals, last rites, etc.) that Hoover is no longer in the White House, and the clergyman should be appropriately compensated for his/her automobile use, gasoline, dry cleaning, haircut — not to mention the effort and the time spent in preparing and delivering the service.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and her husband are separated. Their children — an 8-year-old daughter and 11-year-old son — spend one weekend with their father and the next with their mom.

When they are at their father's, both children sleep in the same double bed with him. I think this is a bad idea and I told him so. His reaction to my protestations was, "Well, it's not as though I sleep in the nude — I always wear shorts!"

Abby, both children are developing rapidly and our whole family is concerned about their sleeping arrangements when they're at their dad's. Are we overreacting? Or do you think our concerns are valid?

DEAR GRANDMA: Your concerns are valid. Not only should your grandson and granddaughter not be sleeping with their father — they should not be sleeping with each other.

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read the letter from "A Lusting Guy in Indy" who roamed the malls lusting after slim maidens in tight jeans.

After 23 years of marriage, like a lot of other women, I've put on a few extra pounds. Try as I may, I can't get them off.

One day, my hubby asked me — with a sad expression, "Whatever happened to that little 24-inch waist I married?"

I replied — with an equally sad expression, "Well, Dear, I left it in the '50s with your hair!" (He's bald!) —NOBODY'S PERFECT

HELEN GARRETT

Condo kiss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A condominium association apologized for publicly accusing a 51-year-old financial consultant of "kissing and doing bad things" in a parked car, saying it was a case of mistaken identity.

Helen Garrett on Wednesday threatened to sue the Townsquare Owners Association if it didn't apologize for humiliating her. She said people starting calling her "hot lips" and "marathon kisser" after the association posted a notice accusing her of violating condominium rules.

Ms. Garrett found a "courtesy notice" in her mailbox after she kissed a friend goodnight on the evening of May 22. The description of the violation said "Resident seen parking in circular drive kissing and doing bad things for over one hour."

Ms. Garrett also wants Vanco Properties, which manages the Santa Ana condo complex, to pay her unspecified damages for emotional distress. Ms. Garrett said she kissed a friend after a two-minute visit.

The association issued an apology Wednesday. Townsquare Owners attorney Brad Walker in Irvine said the violation involved a teen-ager about 17 who parked with a 21-year-old man in a fire lane, then gave a doorman Ms. Garrett's address.

Tumbleweed entralls crowd with tall tales

By SKIP SEISER
City Editor

COLORADO CITY — Tumbleweed Smith opened the door to nostalgia Thursday night, humoring a capacity crowd of about 150 during a premier performance at the Colorado Opera House with his taped renditions of Texas Stories.
Smith, who lives in Big Spring and whose real name is Bob Lewis, took his audience back over the last 20 years of his best taped interviews of ordinary Texans.
By way of these tape recordings came some raw and basic Texas humor.

Smith told his audience the man and woman were indeed married and upon leaving the justice of the peace were pelted with pinto beans.
"Only in West Texas," Smith said.

Review

Smith at one time had interviewed a Brownwood man who sported a rather long and full beard. From the tape recording, the man said he has a pet squirrel living in his beard. It slept there and peeked out occasionally. The man also suffered from several scratches on his chest from the squirrel's claws. "It's just something you have to put up with," the man said.
Smith's audience also gave roaring approval to a short story about an official at the Same Day Fire Station in central Texas. That official said in his taped interview, "If you call in the morning, we'll try to get there the same day."

Smith's show at the historic Opera House was pure Texas folklore at its best. Smith walked back and forth across a stage that contained the facade of a surely West Texas farmhouse, circa 1920s. Besides the farmhouse were a water tower, a windmill, a butter churn and an outhouse, among other nostalgic items one rarely sees any more — except in museums.
For one elderly member of the audience, Smith's sights and sounds of Texas brought back an earlier era, a simpler time. "Yes, it sure did," Vera Carroll said.
Smith said he has recorded more than 5,000 programs for his syndicated radio show that's broadcast on more than 60 Texas radio stations. Besides his radio show, he teaches broadcasting at the University of Texas/Permian Basin in Odessa.
Smith, 56, got his start in radio in Big Spring. He also has worked in Houston, Columbia, Mo., and Des Moines, Iowa, where he worked at WHO, the same station where former President Reagan once worked.
It was at Des Moines where

Tumbleweed Smith, whose real name is Bob Lewis, stands ready to mesmerize and humor a capacity crowd at the historic Colorado Opera House in Colorado City Thursday night with his taped Texas Stories.
Smith got started on his Texas stories, doing "reports on life" for the NBC radio network. "I like interviewing people and driving around Texas," Smith said before the start of his show. "I'm now making a living at it since I started back in August 1969."
Smith's program for NBC was titled "Tumbleweed," and he eventually added Smith, his middle name. Why Tumbleweed? "It's a great symbol of West Texas," Smith said.
Smith is scheduled to perform again tonight, Saturday and Sunday at Colorado City's historic Opera House, which was constructed in 1899-1900.

Conductor

"It will be hard to not push him if he's not musical," Jane Smith said. "If James doesn't show musical talent, he will be breaking a family tradition. Gene and Jane Smith were introduced by Jane's mother, who was playing piano with Gene at the time. Since their marriage eight years ago, Jane has acted as symphony librarian and also accompanies the symphony chorale during rehearsals.
The Big Spring Symphony's next performance will be July 4th in Comanche Trail Park. Smith said the program will include his own arrangement of the National Anthem, as well as a Desert Storm Fanfare written by Randal Bass of Austin especially for this year's celebrations. Also included will be a salute to the armed services, the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and, of course, the "1812 Overture." The orchestra will continue to play during the fireworks, accompanying the display with patriotic songs such as "Stars and Stripes Forever," "God Bless America" and "Deep in the Heart of Texas."
Smith hopes to build popular support for the symphony in Big Spring.

Woodwind quartet hopes to attract young people

Circa, a woodwind quartet from Midland, performed at the Big Spring Symphony's reception at the Country Club Thursday evening.
The group, headed by Don Grant, Big Spring, has a special interest in young audiences. It hopes to encourage interest in classical music among young people by playing at schools and special concerts for children.
"If small children have never been exposed to classical music, I would never expect them to tune in to it on the radio or buy a record," Grant said.
Other members of the group include Marjory Jennings, Jim Burleson, Deann Chryst and Carol Deats. Their repertoire includes "Peter and the Wolf" and "Opus Zoo," a composition in which different instruments and melodies represent animals.
While people tend to think of string instruments for small classical music groups, "the woodwind quartet is what Mozart envisioned for the outdoor sound," said Grant. "This makes it particularly appropriate for this area."
Circa is available for local performances. He can be reached at Midland College, where he is the coordinator of the music department.

Events scheduled include a co-ed softball tournament, an egg toss, a washer (horseshoe) tournament and a watermelon seed-spitting contest. Everyone is invited to bring fireworks to the Coahoma Ball

Park, and the Coahoma fire truck will be standing by in case of mishaps.
The Melody Maids, a local, six-woman band, will perform and the Big Spring Squares will present a square dancing demonstration. Local churches will also offer music to help participants beat the summer heat.
Justice said donations from area residents enabled the committee to purchase flags and flag poles to be flown down First Street. After assembling on the south side of the service road at 10 a.m., floats will parade down First Street to Bulldog Stadium, where the other festivities will take place.

Martin water district agrees to project

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer
STANTON — The Martin County Underground Water Conservation District board of directors agreed Thursday to conduct a demonstration project to see how effectively it can eliminate bacteria that is being found in water wells.
The board also voted to support efforts of an underground water district in Amarillo to oppose the expansion of a nuclear weapons plant there. Various local government entities in West Texas are being asked to support the opposition efforts.
Concerning the demonstration project, one or two water wells on Mulberry Lane just north of Stanton that are contaminated with coliform will have hydroxyacetic acid put in them to kill the bacteria, said Martin County water district Manager Mark Hoelscher. "We would like to gain insight on our ability to handle coliform problems that we're running up against," Hoelscher said.

Contamination of 11 wells in the Mulberry Lane was identified by the water district within the past few years. Hoelscher said he is not sure of the cause of the contamination but said he suspects rust from metal well casings and septic tanks.
Treatment of the wells could include anywhere from one to 16 gallons of acid per 100 feet of water at $65 for five gallons, Hoelscher said. "It works great." The project will probably take place in August.
The board also passed a resolution supporting efforts by the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District No. 3 to oppose the expansion of the Pantex plant near Amarillo. The plant, which handles nuclear weapons, may begin actual manufacture of nuclear weapon parts, an operation previously done at a plant in Rocky Flats, Colo., which was closed in 1989.

A letter from the manager of the Panhandle groundwater district, C.E. Williams, said contamination of air, soil and underground water at the Rocky Flats site plus several fires and explosions should raise concern about moving that operation to Pantex.
"With these and other documented problems we think the citizenry needs to think long and hard before they jump the bandwagon to welcome the expansion of Pantex," states the letter by Williams.
"We support the Panhandle district's effort to oppose the expansion of Pantex," Hoelscher said.

Resurfacing done on Wasson, Goliad

Big Spring public works employees have completed resurfacing of Wasson Road and Goliad Street, part of a project to lengthen the life of major city roads, officials said.
Workers were expected to continue working on Birdwell Lane and will progress to Sixth Street after its completion. Also included in the maintenance project is the Big Spring Correction Center II.

Sidelines

Howard signs two more post players

Howard College Hawks Coach Jeff Kidder signed two more post players for next year's basketball team, Michael Blassingame and Chuckie Robinson.

The 6-8 Blassingame is from Seneca, South Carolina, was a five-year starter at Seneca High School. This past season he averaged 21 points, 11 rebounds and shot 56 percent from the floor and 76 percent from the line.

Blassingame was named All-State three years, All-Region four years, Area Player of the Year two years, Region Player of the Year two years, Honorable Mention McDonald's All-American and Honorable Mention USA Today All-American.

Blassingame also holds the all-time scoring and rebounding records at Seneca High School with 2,116 points and 1,313 rebounds.

Coach Ron Ledbetter of Seneca High School said, "Michael is a terrific player and an even better person. Around here he is the stuff legends are made of. He helped lead our team to a 21-6 season and four of the six losses was because he was out with a broken collarbone."

Coach Kidder said, "Michael is a highly-recruited player who will have an immediate impact on Howard College basketball. He comes from a strong basketball background, having a brother who played for Radford University in Radford, Virginia. I am very excited to sign a player of his caliber."

The 6-7 Chuckie Robinson attended James Island High School, Charleston, South Carolina where he averaged 20.5 points, 10.9 rebounds, two blocks, two steals and three assists. Robinson helped lead his team to a 31-2 season last year.

Robinson was named All-State two years, All-Region three years, Low Country Player of the Year, South Carolina All-Star Game Most Valuable Player, Regional Player of the Year, first team State Newspaper All-State and Honorable Mention Orlando Sentinel Dixie Dozen.

Coach Ronnie Dupree of James Island High School said, "Chuckie is an outstanding talent with a tremendous amount of potential. But his greatest attribute is that he is an intense competitor."

Coach Kidder said, "Chuckie brings a lot of stability to the inside game at Howard College. He is a power player, slamming the ball often which makes him a crowd favorite. Off the court and on the court, he is a very classy young man."

"I am very pleased to have signed three South Carolina players," Kidder has also signed post player Rico Burt of Greenville.

Inflatable dolls invade Fenway

BOSTON (AP) — Fenway Park's bleachers have always had a reputation for attracting rowdy Red Sox fans. But some spectators say the recent appearance of nude, anatomically correct inflatable dolls goes too far.

Some fans fondle them. They pass them around. They make obscene gestures.

The lewd behavior offend other ballgame fans, like Jeannine Robbins, 32, who witnessed the doll phenomenon last Friday.

"The men were sucking on her. It was disgusting," Robbins said. "You come here to watch the game. You don't really need to see men sucking on women's parts, even if they're plastic."

The Red Sox issued a statement Wednesday condemning the practice after one angry fan complained to a local newspaper. But some patrons say they have seen blowup dolls in the bleachers as early as last year.

And the naked dolls have made an appearance elsewhere at Massachusetts sporting events. After Boston Herald sports reporter Lisa Olson was harassed by the New England Patriots, vendors sold naked "Lisa Dolls" at Foxboro Stadium.

Fenway's $6-a-seat bleacher crowds are known for more fun-loving antics. Usually, the partying is restricted to innocent fun: rising for waves and tossing beach balls. But beer drinking sometimes gets out of hand, and Red Sox officials estimate security officials eject 10 to 20 fans from the bleachers per game.

Spectators who attended ballgames last weekend, where dolls were passed around, said security guards moved slowly to confiscate them.

The Red Sox issued a statement responding to the criticism:

"Such conduct is reprehensible and the club has made special efforts and will continue to make special efforts to prevent such occurrences in the future," the team said.

The Red Sox said there have been only two such incidents during the 1991 season, and said the club "makes every effort to maintain socially acceptable standards of behavior in order to allow all fans to enjoy the game in comfort."

Stepped-up security was in evidence at the game Wednesday, and the Red Sox were so sensitive about the issue that they threw a reporter out of the bleachers for asking questions about the blowup dolls.

Richard Levin, a spokesman for commissioner Fay Vincent, said he has never heard of similar incidents in other ballparks around the country.

"We certainly don't condone that behavior, but we understand that the Red Sox have it under control," he said.

Ellen Zucker, president of the National Organization for Women's Boston chapter, welcomed the Red Sox response, but said more should have been done sooner.

"I think when we get reports from fans that they were quicker to remove beachballs than sexual dolls that were used for lewd sexual acts, there is reason to be concerned," she said. "That they are moving quicker on it now is a good sign."

Zucker, who called the blowup doll behavior a "rape-like act," said both the Lisa Olson incident and the recent behavior of some Red Sox fans raises disturbing questions.

"The lessons we as women have been taught is that we are not welcome at sporting events," she said. "We are not welcome in locker rooms and we are not even welcome as spectators."

Sox fans who attended the game Wednesday were divided on the issue.

Robbins' husband, Garland, who also witnessed dolls getting passed around Friday, said he didn't see any harm in the bleacher antics.

"If the women have any problems with this, bring in men dolls," he said. "These people just want to party."

No showdown for Burrell

HOUSTON (AP) — World record-holder Leroy Burrell says he still is not planning on running in the 100-meter showdown July 1 between Carl Lewis and Ben Johnson.

Burrell and Tom Tellez, his coach, said Thursday that Burrell will run the 200 and not the 100 in the meet at Lille, France.

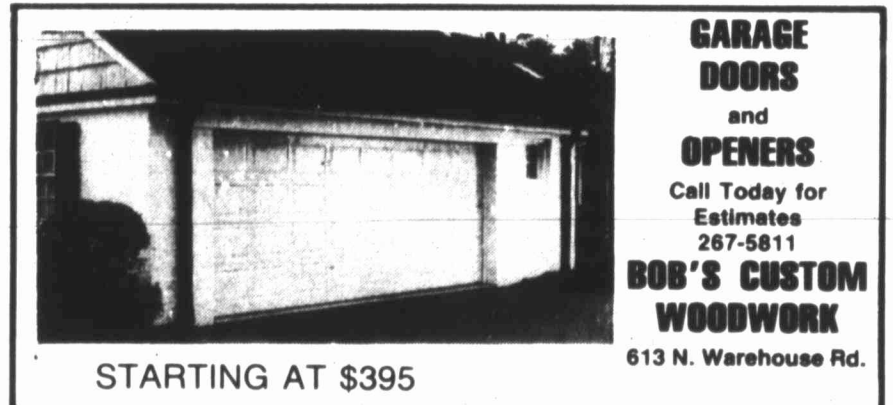

"I don't feel that I'm ready to run the 100 again at the level I would have to run. My original plan is to run the 200, and that's probably what I'm going to do," Burrell said.

Burrell added that chances are "very slim" he will change his mind.

Burrell set the world record of 9.90 at the U.S. national championships a week ago. Lewis was second to Burrell with 9.93.

"They thought because they upped the ante, Leroy would run the 100," Tellez said. "We decided we weren't ready to run another 100 that quickly."

Ex-high school star struggles with big football hopes, prison

MIDWAY (AP) — The young man was quietly writing a letter in his prison cell when a guard making the nightly rounds stopped to stare.

"Derric Evans?" the guard asked.

The former All-State and All-American high school football player looked up but said nothing. "Derric Evans," the guard said, shaking his head. "You shouldn't be in here."

He knew that. Even if he didn't, there is always someone around to remind him. And nobody needs to remind Evans of the bright future he gambled away when he and some classmates at Dallas' Carter High School decided that armed robbery might be fun. They never took it seriously, never dreamed that they would get caught. They were wrong.

Nearly two years have passed since Evans and 10 buddies were sent to state prison. Not a day has gone by that he hasn't thought about what could have been.

Steroids

Costopoulos, Zahorian's attorney, identified the wrestlers as Hogan, whose real name is Terry Bollea; Rowdy Roddy Piper, whose real name is Roderick Toombs; Rick Martel, whose real name is Richard Vigneault; Brian Blair and Dan Spivey.

"The WWF feels victimized by the tactics and libelous statements of defense attorney William C. Costopoulos in utilizing the media in a bait and switch defense," the federation's statement said.

DeVito said the federation adopted a drug policy in 1987 prohibiting the use of controlled substances in connection with any of its professional activities.

U.S. Assistant Attorney Theodore Smith III said none of the wrestlers will be charged because steroid use was not a federal crime during the period covered in the indictment.

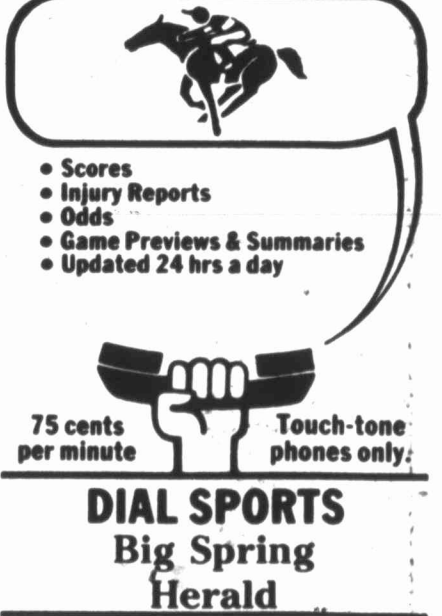

In separate interviews, three sources close to the case, who asked not to be identified because grand jury proceedings are supposed to be secret, also identified the wrestlers as Hogan, Martel, Piper, Blair and Spivey.

A former two-time WWF champion, Hogan is probably the best-known figure in wrestling.

Parker's two run shot leads Angels

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Another day, another baseball. In the latest installment of a season filled with incidents, the California Angels and Detroit Tigers cleared the benches after a beanball battle Thursday night.

Already this year, Rob Dibble, Kevin Mitchell, Otis Nixon, Dave Valle and Mark Whiten have been in the middle of big fights. Earlier this week, Tom Glavine was ejected after throwing at Dale Murphy.

This time at Tiger Stadium, the teams stayed pretty calm. The dugouts emptied in the fourth inning, but no punches were thrown. California eventually won 7-5 on Dave Parker's tie-breaking, two-run homer in the seventh.

The problems started when Detroit's Dan Gakeler hit Luis Sojo in the left earflap with a fastball in the top of the fourth. Sojo was taken to a hospital with a mild concussion.

Gakeler said he did not hit Sojo on purpose. Rader said Finley also hit Tetteleton by accident.

"I don't want to make any more of it than it is," Gakeler said. "It was just a fastball that got away. I don't want to talk about it."

Finley had dressed and left by the time the game ended.

Cecil Fielder hit his 15th home run and Alan Trammell hit his fifth homer as the Tigers built a 5-3 lead. Luis Polonia tied it with a two-run single in the California sixth.

The Angels had gone 89 innings without a home run until Parker connected off Paul Gibson (2-4). Joe Grahe (1-1) pitched 4 1-3 innings for the victory and Bryan Harvey worked the ninth for his 18th save.

which took a 7-6 lead in the seventh with the help of Willie Wilson's 2,000th career hit.

The Red Sox came back when Mike Greenwell singled off Curt Young and reliever Steve Chitren inning action Thursday at Comiskey Park. Franco scored on a single by Juan Gonzales.

(1-2) threw a wild pitch. Brunansky hit his 12th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the fifth inning, had a run-scoring double in the fourth and a solo homer in the eighth. There were eight home runs hit in the game, four by each team.

Jeff Gray (2-3) pitched two scoreless innings. Jeff Reardon worked the ninth for his 18th save.

Dodgers beat Pirates in battle of division leaders

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Things are looking a little better each day for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Take Thursday, for example. Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh 3-2 in a battle of division leaders for its fifth straight victory. Meanwhile, second-place Cincinnati lost World Series MVP Jose Rijo for as much as six weeks with a broken ankle.

A turning point in the race, perhaps.

Dennis Martinez anchored a combined three-hitter and Marquis Grissom singled home an 11th-inning run as Montreal beat Cincinnati 1-0 at Riverfront Stadium for its seventh consecutive victory. The loss dropped the Reds six games behind the Dodgers in the National League West.

The Reds now have two starting pitchers on the disabled list — Rijo and left-hander Norm Charlton, out with shoulder tendinitis — and three others who are struggling. Jack Armstrong, Scott Scudder and Chris Hammond have been unimpressive the last month, going 1-9 in their last 12 starts combined.

Martinez retired the first 17 batters before Rijo singled in the sixth inning. Rijo then tried to steal second base. Big mistake.

He started his slide wrong, digging his right cleats into the dirt. All of the force came down on the ankle, causing it to chip. Rijo rolled off it awkwardly and was tagged out.

It was a major setback to the club, and Rijo knew it.

The night was even more disappointing when the Reds found out the Dodgers won again on Stan Javier's tie-breaking single in the eighth inning.

Hubie Brooks hit two homers and drove in four runs and Dwight Gooden also homered as New York beat slumping Atlanta. The Braves have lost six of seven to fall seven games behind Cincinnati.

Brooks hit his 12th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the fifth inning, had a run-scoring double in the fourth and a solo homer in the eighth. There were eight home runs hit in the game, four by each team.

Gooden (7-5) got the victory despite giving up three home runs, two to Terry Pendleton. John Smoltz (2-9) took the loss.

Robby Thompson and Will Clark had RBI singles and another run scored on a wild pitch in the seventh inning as San Francisco rallied to beat visiting Chicago, sending the Cubs to their sixth straight loss.

Francisco Oliveras (3-2) worked two innings in relief of rookie Mike Remlinger to get the win. Dave Righetti got the last three outs for his eighth save, allowing Jerome Walton's RBI single in the ninth. Les Lancaster (2-2) was the loser.

Phillies 7, Astros 3
Rookie Wes Chamberlain had four hits and John Kruk drove three runs to lead Philadelphia over Houston at Veterans Stadium.

by Thigpen, sparking a five-run rally that lifted Texas over Chicago.

Sierra hit a two-run homer that put the visiting Rangers ahead and Franco followed with another shot. Ivan Rodriguez, 19, married earlier in the day after being called up from Double-A Tulsa, added a two-run single off Melido Perez.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 1
Joe Carter hit two solo home runs as Toronto beat New York and stopped a four-game losing streak at the SkyDome.

Carter went 3-for-4 and scored three times. He homered in the third inning and hit his 14th home run in the fifth off Tim Learly (3-7).

Brewers 4, Mariners 0
Jaime Navarro pitched a four-hitter for his second shutout of the season as Milwaukee beat visiting Seattle.

Navarro (7-4) struck out four and walked two in his team-high fourth complete game. Brian Holman (7-7) took the loss.

Darryl Hamilton and Billy Spiers hit RBI singles in the second inning. Franklin Stubbs got a run home in the third with a double-play grounder and singled home another in the seventh.

Royals 3, Orioles 2
Brian McRae singled home the winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning, and Kansas City beat Baltimore for the fifth straight time.

The Royals evened their record at .500 for the first time since April 27.

Falcon chasing two mile world record

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — One week after barely making the U.S. national team, Joe Falcon has his sights on a world record.

An obscure record, to be sure, but a record nonetheless.

Falcon, considered by many track fans to be the next great American distance-running hope, will try for the world mark in the rarely-run two-mile at tonight's Prefontaine Classic.

Other competitors in tonight's women's mile include Darcy Arreola, who was third in the nationals, along with Annette Peters and Maria Mutola.

The Prefontaine meet also features the top three finishers in

National League

the hammer competition at last week's national championships — Lance Deal, Jud Logan and Ken Flax.

Other top competitors are Kory Tarpenning in the pole vault, Nigerian Joseph Taiwo in the triple jump, Brazilian Jose Luis Barbosa and Canadian Graeme Fell in the men's mile and the 1-2 finishers in the women's javelin at the U.S. nationals, Karin Smith and Paula Berry.

"I've trained hard since 1983, and at this stage in the United States I've been able to establish myself as one of the best, if not the best, distance runners," he said. "It's something I pride myself on and it doesn't get any easier."

Although he may be better-suited to longer distances, Falcon has focused on the 1,500 meters, and he almost didn't make the U.S. team for the world championships during qualifying last week at the national finals in New York.

His third-place finish was a relief, he said, not a disappointment.

"My whole training has been based on running in the world championships," he said. "After two runners went by me, I told myself there was no way I was going to let another one go by because I can't waste this opportunity. I'm just very happy to be on the team, to be honest."

He vows to continue to make the 1,500 his main event.

"I really believe over the next two to three years I can run close to the world record," Falcon said. "After that, the 5,000 is definitely an avenue I will need to look at."

He is counting on a fast pace to propel him to a world mark in the two-mile.

The world best is 8 minutes, 13.45 seconds by Said Aouita of Morocco, set at Torino, Italy, in 1987, and the American record is 8:17.12 by Marty Liquori at Stockholm, Sweden.

up," Evans said in an interview at the maximum-security Ferguson Unit north of Huntsville. "This is a challenge for me."

Just as he felt the day he was sentenced, the tall, lanky 20-year-old still believes that his term of 20 years was too harsh. Sent to prison on Sept. 22, 1989, by state District Judge Joe Kendall, Evans will not be eligible for parole until Aug. 15, 1994.

"I am bitter about that," he said. "My attitude sometimes is not that good. I'm not going to lie. Sometimes I'm just in a bad mood and I don't want anyone around me."

Evans said he vividly remembers the crowd of news cameras and reporters swarming around him and his mother every time they showed up at the courthouse for a hearing. Evans, a standout player for the state champion Carter Cowboys football team, was a particularly newsworthy subject.

He said he often wonders whether he might be free today, or at least facing a shorter sentence, if he had not been in the limelight because of his athletic talent.

"I didn't really think he (Judge Kendall) was going to send us to prison," Evans said. "But the media was watching. I think he felt he had to. That wasn't any deterrence. The crime rate's only gotten worse." Evans said he thinks a touch of racism also may have played a role.

"We all would have gotten probation if we were white guys," he said, with a hint of anger in his normally quiet voice. "We were black guys. We all went to Carter and won a state championship. They all wanted a chance to get back at us. I am bitter about that, because it's true."

All that aside, however, Evans places the bulk of the blame squarely on his own shoulders.

"Most of the time I get mad at myself," he said. "I did this to myself. I blame myself. And I'll be the one that brings myself out of it."

So instead of dwelling on the events that led to prison, Evans said, he has chosen to accept his time behind bars, make the best of it and plan for the future.

Just as when he was a senior, those plans still center on football.

As a star defensive back for the Carter Cowboys, he helped lead his team to the state championship in December 1988. Both on and off the field, he was known to be daring and proud. As a symbol of his speed, he once had a lightning bolt shaved on his scalp.

Evans felt invincible, he said. As a senior he was courted by college recruiters. He was voted most popular by his senior classmates. Even the faculty allowed him virtually free rein of the Carter campus and rarely disciplined him, he said.

"When I was out there, I wasn't taking life seriously," Evans said, gazing through the glass that separated him from the free world. "I was daring. I thought I couldn't do anything wrong. If I did do something wrong, I would always get out of it."

So when the idea of robbery entered his mind, the idea of getting caught never did, Evans said.

Football season was over and there was a lull in excitement. Evans overheard some of his teammates talking at school about how easy it was to commit a robbery. He and his best friend, Gary Edwards, decided to give it a try.

They started with the Taco Bueno at 4228 W. Camp Wisdom Road in southwest Dallas, not far from Carter High. That was May 18, 1989. Similar heists followed. The crime spree ended a month later when they were caught moments after holding up a video store.

Their arrests led to the unraveling of 21 robberies committed by nine current or former students from Carter High and three from Hillcrest High School who lived in the same neighborhood. Evans admitted to taking part in nine of those stickups.

During the months of presentencing hearings that followed, one by one the youths told Judge Kendall that they had robbed for cash they really didn't need.

All the youths were from hard-working, churchgoing, middle-class families. None used drugs or even drank.

Each robbery seemed to get easier and more thrilling, the youths testified. They carried pistols, but they never loaded them. Some were fake. The boys rarely wore disguises and often called each other by name in front of their victims. A couple of times they giggled as if it were all a game.

"We never really thought about what we were doing," Evans said. "We never even thought about getting caught."

Throughout his first few months behind bars, Evans still couldn't believe that he was a prisoner.

"He would say to me, 'Get me out of here, Mama, whatever it takes,'" recalled Evans' mother, Peggy Evans. "Derric was so used to his freedom."

Evans says he has adjusted to prison. But the process has been torturous, he said. More than anything, he misses his family.

"I always miss them," he said. As the only child of a single mother, Evans admits that he sometimes was spoiled. His mother acknowledged that from the time he was born, her son was showered with attention.

Texas State Campers on Mission

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

Many hard-working volunteers moved into the parking lot of Baptist Temple Church last week and began remodeling classrooms to hold the new 2,800 square foot Fellowship Hall.

Workers with the Region 1 Texas State Campers on Mission parked their recreational vehicles in the church's parking lot, which they'll call home for the next two weeks.

The Rev. Syl Moore of Baptist Temple said the nearly 30 workers came to the church to volunteer time and labor to the church's renovation of the Fellowship Hall. The renovations include locating the kitchen and fellowship hall downstairs, and adding new bathrooms, cabinets and storage space are part of the plans, he said.

"Their labor is totally free. This is saving the church as much as 30 to 40 percent. We won't have the total cost until the whole project's over, but we expect it would have cost $65-70,000 without these workers," Moore said.

Church part-time secretary Belinda Woodall said the church decided to move the Fellowship Hall downstairs for church members who found climbing the stairs difficult.

"We've been working on organizing this about six weeks," said Woodall about the volunteers' efforts.

The church is providing the materials for the work. Moore said the Sunday school class members are providing a hot noon meal for the workers.

Edna Ames, a Campers on Mission member from Big Spring, said the workers involved in this project are retired professionals and only a few of them had experience working in construction and remodeling.

"You don't have to be retired to be part of the Campers on Missions, and you don't have to be a Baptist," she said.

Campers on Missions is a national organization sponsored by the Baptist General Commission in Texas. The headquarters for the Home Mission Board is in Alabama, Ames said.

Ames stated that normally the RV-camper volunteers donate their labors to construction at a Baptist camp somewhere in Texas. The volunteers provide their own transportation and expenses when they travel to the construction or remodeling site.

"This is the third church we've worked on this year," she said. The group had just finished some work at the Circle Six Baptist Camp in Stanton.

Members of the Campers on Mission parked their recreational vehicles in the parking lot of the Baptist Temple and went to work remodeling the Fellowship Hall. The volunteers did carpentry, sheetrock and painting to remodel the 2,800 square foot space.

The volunteers also recently erected an entire building for one church in Seminole, from the ground up, she said. "We did that in one week, and my muscles were sore from carrying all those boards."

Alma Simpson, another volunteer from Odessa, said the workers were not necessarily carpenters before retirement. She said the troupe includes a salesman, a dairy worker, a banker, a sheet metal worker and civil service workers, as well as several oil-field related professionals in this volunteer group.

Ames said, "We have three electricians and one building contractor. We have a few tell us what to do and we pitch in and do what we can."

"I can't tell you in words what this means to us, the fellowship we have. We all meet and don't know each other and then we work together and there is never any quarreling or cursing like you might hear in other places," Ames said.

The campers will have their fall rally in Leakey, Texas at the Alta Frio Baptist Camp. Each year the group has two rallies for groups across the state to meet across, Ames said.

Moore said the Fellowship Hall will be used for dinners, banquets and memorial dinners for the church. Baptist Temple offers several programs for their members, as well as an invitation to non members.

For anyone interested in joining the Campers on Mission or to submit a request for construction, contact Doc Slater, Region 1 coordinator at 915-728-5545, in Colorado City.

Celebration of our christian heritage

A Patriotic Rally to celebrate our christian heritage as a nation is being sponsored by the Howard County Minister's Fellowship. It is scheduled for June 30 from 3 to 4:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium. Admission is free.

A choir is being organized to sing patriotic songs in conjunction with dramatic readings from the writings of our founding fathers. Anyone interested in participating in the choir should call Everett Bender at 263-0556, and plan to rehearse at First Baptist Church on June 29 from 10 a.m. till noon.

One day Bible School

"Vacation Bible School Plus" that's how Doug Morris, V.B.S. Director at the 14th & Main Church of Christ, describes Saturday's event. Instead of the usual week long Vacation Bible School, the church is holding a one day school. During the day V.B.S. students will relive the lives of famous Bible people.

A huge ark has been constructed. Children will become animals and board the ark with Noah. They will even sail on a brief "40 days and 40 nights" trip.

In another class a 25 foot whale has been constructed. Students will be with Jonah as he is swallowed by the great fish. Blacklight art work will enhance the inside belly of the fish.

Students will learn of David and will attempt to slay the giant Goliath.

And the last class features the life of Daniel where students will visit a lion's den and a fiery furnace.

The adventure begins Saturday at 9:30 a.m. and will conclude at 2:30 p.m. for grades 1-6.

The Vacation Bible School is the result of many of the church members working together. It's their most ambitious V.B.S. to date but one children are sure to remember.

How will we know where all that money goes?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Maybe I am just cynical, but the other day I watched a telethon trying to raise money to save starving children. I know that most of the money will just go to pay for the television time, and very little of it will go to save starving children. I admit I would like to help with problems like this but how can I know my money is actually going to solve the problem instead of lining someone's pockets? — Mrs. H.H.

DEAR MRS. H.H.: Starvation is a tragic reality in our world today — and right now there are terrible situations facing millions of desperate people in some parts of the world. We have so much in our society, and God would certainly have us do all we can to alleviate these problems. Jesus' miracle of feeding the five thousand demonstrated His concern for the physical needs of people (see Matthew 14:13-21).

Yes, there may be some instances where very little that is given actually reaches those in need — but there also are many respected organizations which work diligently to keep down expenses and meet the needs of people. I suggest you ask your pastor about religious agencies which are involved in such projects; they often work very efficiently. Our own organization has an emergency relief fund which is used to support dedicated and efficient Christian relief agencies; we deduct nothing for administrative expenses. Ask God to guide you in your giving. Remember, too, to pray and to give toward meeting the spiritual needs of the world's billions.

Christ was concerned with both the body and the soul — and so should we. "For the Son of Man came to seek and to save what was lost" (Luke 19:10). Only Christ can satisfy our inner spiritual hunger — and He will, as we turn to Him in faith and commit our lives to Him. Do you know the joy of His presence in your life?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am really concerned about our daughter, because she talks about food all the time and yet she eats almost nothing. She tells me that she thinks she is overweight, but the truth is she is losing weight all the time. I have heard about people like this, but we don't know what to do. Is this just a passing fad with her, do you think? Or is it serious? Should we insist she eat more, or what? — Mrs. F.W.

DEAR MRS. F.W.: From what you say — and from articles I have read and other cases I have known about — this is a very serious matter that needs to be dealt with as directly and openly as possible. I strongly urge you to talk with your family doctor immediately. He will probably refer you to a specialist or a treatment center which specializes in eating disorders of this nature. They will be able to make a firm diagnosis and suggest a plan of treatment.

If your daughter does in fact have an eating disorder, she needs to eat more — but simply insisting she eat more will not solve the real problem. Her problems are not just with food, but they involve complex emotional pressures she herself does not fully understand. They may not be easy to solve — but the alternative is for her to spend her life fighting this problem and even endangering her life. She doesn't think she has a problem — but she does, and you must take firm action even if she resists. The Bible says we should "bear with the failings of the weak... for his good, to build him up" (Romans 15:1-2).

Encourage your daughter also to seek God's strength and help for her life. It is not God's will for her to destroy herself; God loves her, and Christ wants her to be part of His family. Let Christ draw you to Himself — and then to each other in a closer way as a family during this time of stress.

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My husband and I are having a disagreement about disciplining our children. He tends to believe that our children need a lot of discipline, but I am afraid that if we discipline them too much we will only make them resentful and angry, and in the long run it will be self-defeating. How do you know how much discipline to give your children? — Mrs. P.F.

DEAR MRS. P.F.: My wife and I had five children — and every one of them was (and is) different. We found, therefore, that we had to deal with each of them in a different way as far as discipline was concerned. Ask God to give you wisdom, therefore, to understand each of your children and deal with them as individuals. Remember, too, that discipline can take many forms.

You both have legitimate concerns, I suspect. On one hand, children do need discipline; without it they will grow up to be self-centered, spoiled people, and they will always have a hard time getting along with people. The Bible says concerning a child that "he who loves him is careful to discipline him" (Proverbs 13:24). On the other hand, harsh, unloving discipline — such as that done out of anger — will do more harm than good. Don't overcorrect, for as the Bible declares, "Fathers, do not exasperate your children; instead, bring them up in the training and instruction of the Lord" (Ephesians 6:4).

Love your children, and let them know you love them — even when they do wrong.

A new Bible translation

Rev. Robert R. Roberts, the Western Regional Director of God's Word to the Nations Bible Society, will be speaking to members and visitors at St. Paul Lutheran Church, Ninth & Scurry, in Big Spring on the evening of June 26 at 7:30 p.m. He will be reviewing a new translation of the Bible and giving all who attend a free copy of the new translation. Visitors from the community are welcome to attend the presentation.

God's Word to the Nations Bible Society is relatively new on the Bible scene, having been founded only a few years ago in Cleveland, Ohio, for the express purpose of developing a new translation of the Bible which is both "literal," (that is, a direct translation from the original language), and also easy to read. The society maintains that there are many literal translations which are hard to understand and also many "paraphrased" Bibles which, while they are easy to understand, are not faithful to the original text.

Reverend Roberts travels widely in the western states to speak to individuals, churches, pastoral groups and many different lay organizations to promote the new Bible and the work of the society. His home in Louisville, Colorado is centrally located in the area which he serves. He is in Texas on a one-week speaking tour which will include eight cities in Texas and New Mexico.

Roberts, 60, is uniquely qualified to serve in his position. He entered the ministry late in life and was ordained at age 51. Prior to that he was a management consultant with the state of California where he served under four governors including former President Ronald Reagan. He is also a licensed pilot and utilizes this skill to cover some of the wide open spaces in the western United States.

Coffee and refreshments will be served.

"His Children" sing

"His Children," under the direction of Joe Whitten, will be performing at the First Church of the Nazarene, 1400 Lancaster, this Sunday, at 10:30 a.m.

The group has appeared in over 250 state and federal prison concerts, in army facilities, as well as churches across 20 states. They also were featured at the 115th Congress of the American Correctional Association in New York City; the 116th Congress in Las Vegas; the 117th Congress in New Orleans; and the 119th Congress in Baltimore.

This group is comprised of 9 college students who donate one year of their lives to this special service.

The Joe Whitten Prison Ministries has now been endorsed by the American Correctional Association.

She won't play with Madonna

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — There's been a lineup change in the women's baseball movie, "A League of Their Own." Debra Winger is off the team; Geena Davis is being called up to replace her.

Ms. Davis, a box-office slugger in "Thelma and Louise," was hired after Miss Winger left the film.

According to a source close to the film who spoke on condition of anonymity, Miss Winger, who starred in "Urban Cowboy," and "The Sheltering Sky" was replaced because of disagreements with director Penny Marshall and Columbia Pictures. Miss Winger objected to the casting of Madonna in the movie, the source said.

DEBRA WINGER GEENA DAVIS

The house next door

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Billionaire Gordon Getty is raising roofs, not to mention eyebrows, with a $4.25 million plan for buying and redecorating the house next door.

The oil heir and his wife, Ann, want to raise part of the second floor of the adjoining house by three feet and remodel the facade to match the Italian Renaissance style of their 12,750-square-foot mansion next door.

Inside, the addition will include a swimming pool and a 40-by-24-foot music room where Mr. Getty can "compose his own music and listen to it," architect Ed McEachron said.

The music room will hold 70 seats for social occasions, such as fundraising parties, but some neighbors think the audience's cars might be harder to accommodate.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

SATURDAY, JUNE 22, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Partnerships — both business and personal — dominate your thoughts. Legal matters will require very careful handling in September. Unexpected financial assistance comes from people in distant places. Postpone non-essential business travel until January 1992. Teamwork is the key to swifter career progress. Setting up a special conference or seminar could lead to greater public recognition. Romance becomes less turbulent.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Meryl Streep, actor Kris Kristofferson, broadcaster Ed Bradley, actress Tracy Pollan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although travel and higher education will broaden your horizons, family needs must come first. The temporary sacrifices you make now will be richly rewarded.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A surge of optimism could cause you to throw caution to the winds. Just make sure you do not sacrifice something you will miss later on. Open the door wide to romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Weekend chores should go quickly if you tackle them methodically. Get an early start! Showing greater sensitivity to your partner's needs will enhance romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good news arrives this morning, but contact with people at a distance will be only partially satisfying. Write more letters. Your romantic passions could be ignited this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It is "now or never" where a financial deal is concerned. Avail yourself of an opportunity to extract something that is owed to you. A platonic relationship intensifies. Trust your instincts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A clash may be unavoidable unless you keep out of an associate's way. Not a good day for travel. Be cautious. Reveal nothing about your home life when chatting with new acquaintances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get right down to business this morning and dispose of a matter that has weighed heavily on your mind. A loving heart works miracles! Reach out to your relatives. Forget past grievances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A communications mix-up could cause costly delays today. Keep your temper in check and play a waiting game. Take time out for vigorous exercise. Be careful of a romance on the rebound.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Although nothing goes as smoothly as you would like this morning, several factors will lift your spirits around mid-afternoon. Your efforts are appreciated by those who really count.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accept someone's offer to assume greater responsibility. Delegating routine tasks will free you for more creative work. You can easily learn a new skill if you put your mind to it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There may be good reasons for covering up your actions. A measure of secrecy helps you pull off a profitable deal. Social affairs enjoy favorable influences tonight.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): The career you have chosen, or which you feel compelled to pursue, may not be the right one after all. You must be sure. Try to get out this evening and have fun.
