Ordinance would mandate $4,000 bond

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council will consider an ordinance that, if passed in two readings, will force citizens to fork over a $4,000 bond before petitioning for the recall of city officials.

Council also will consider an amendment that aims to clarify definitions of dereliction of duty and what does and does not constitute an affidavit.

"When a citizen presents the affidavit for the recall petition, at that time he posts a bond of $4,000," said Mayor Max Green.

If the petition receives the proper amount of certified signatures, an election will be scheduled. If the recall election fails, the city will keep the $4,000, Green said.

Green and council member John Coffee requested the ordinances be written by City Attorney Mike Thomas.

provide compensation to the city for the expenses incurred in holding the election," said Green.

The ordinance defining duty and affidavit was taken primarily from Black's Law Dictionary, and could in no way be successfully challenged as being contrary to the city charter, said Thomas.

About the cost bond Thomas said, "I've told the mayor and other council members we could possibly be challenged. I'm not saying it's invalid, I'm just not completely certain."

The Attorney General's Office will not provide an opinion on the ordinance until it is passed and becomes a part of the city code, said Ron Dusek of the Texas Attorney General's Office.

Texas Tech Law Professor Bruce Cramer said he was not aware of any pertinent Texas case law dealing with an election fee. "There's two ways to look at it. It's a regulatory fee to reimburse the city's expenses, but on the other hand it stifles the right that's been given to the city's citizens," he said.

The ordinances will be read Tuesday and, if passed, again on Nov. 26. If passed they will become part of the city code.

Former council member Jack Watkins, who faced an unsuccessful recall election in the early 1970s, said he supported the definition regarding dereliction of duty.

Red, white and blue souvenir American flags, red poppies and a three-star general will help highlight the Veterans Day celebration in Big Spring Monday.

American Legion Post 506, the Big Spring VA Medical Center and the Vietnam Memorial Committee of Big Spring Inc. have planned ceremonies and celebrations to honor all veterans.

Beginning at 7 a.m. Monday, the American Legion, 3203 W. Highway 80, will have a public breakfast for anyone who wants to attend, said auxiliary president Jean Graham.

The American Legion Auxiliary purchased red poppies from the VA hospital. Patients make the flowers and the auxiliary gives them away for donations to fund their veterans' programs. The women have been at Wal-Mart Discount Center, Don's IGA, and the post office with the flowers and may be giving them on Monday, Graham said.

The poppies are free to anyone making a donation, she said. At 10 a.m. Monday, there is a ceremony planned at the Vietnam Memorial. This memorial was con-

Officers undergo materials training

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Hazardous materials training began Saturday for some law enforcement officers as mandated by a new federal law.

Federal law now requires that officers who respond to incidents involving hazardous materials — such as spills or leaks — be trained, said Howard County Sheriff Deputy Barney Edens, who organized the four-hour class. It will be held again next Saturday.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration can cite agencies not in compliance with the new regulations. "The main thing it does is makes emergency response units aware of hazardous materials and substances that they can come in contact with and responses we can take to protect ourselves, human lives and property," said Marvin Keenan of the Texas Department of Public Safety, the instructor for the local course.

DPS has been charged with enforcing hazardous material transportation regulations for the past decade, Keenan said. "We have had some training from day one," he said. The course, which costs $20 per person, is also open to those not involved in law enforcement, Edens said. Area fire departments received notices of the class as well as law enforcement agencies in Howard, Mitchell and Borden counties.

Rollover claims Borden honor student

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A Borden County High School football star and honor student died in a one-car accident about 19 miles northeast of Big Spring on Farm Road 846 early Saturday morning.

Brandon Lynn Adcock, 16, a sophomore running back for the Borden County Coyotes varsity team, died around midnight about four miles from his home after having dinner with friends following a football game between Ackerly and Klondike, said his father, Randy Adcock.

No cause of the accident was listed in a Department of Public Safety report.

"The vehicle ran off the left side of roadway and struck a concrete culvert and overturned... coming to rest on its top," the report stated. Adcock, who was wearing a seatbelt, was not ejected from the 1981 Ford sedan.

"He was truly an all-American young man," said Borden County Independent School District Superintendent Jimmy Thomas. "He was a good moral kid. He was an outstanding athlete."

"He was a good Christian boy," said Adcock's father. "He had a lot of friends in different communities."

Adcock ran the football about 850 yards this year to help the Coyotes make the playoffs with a 7-3 season record and a 4-1 district record, said his coach, Bobby Avery.

He had a chance to end the regular season with 1,000 yards rushing in the last scheduled game of the season Friday, but the Highland team, which did not win a game this year, forfeited. So Adcock instead went to watch the Ackerly game.

Adcock, who last year was the only freshman to make the varsity team, also played quarterback, tailback, fullback and defensive cornerback, Avery said. At 5-foot-9, he weighed 175 pounds and could bench press 210 pounds.

"I used him everywhere," Avery said. "I'm just convinced he could do anything he wanted to do."

His talents were not only in football, Avery said. "Off the field he was a great student."

Adcock was an honor student, a member of Future Farmers of America, received the "Green Hand" award in the FFA while a freshman and was active in the youth department of First Baptist Church in Gail.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by Myers & Smith Funeral Home. More information can be found on page 7-A.

Alpine chief fighting release of records

ALPINE (AP) — Alpine's police chief is asking city leaders to overlook an investigation into complaints he sexually harassed employees during his days as an Odessa police officer. In an open letter published last week in the local newspaper, Police Chief John Ellen acknowledged he was investigated and a board of inquiry recommended his firing as a result of the probe. Ellen also has admitted he failed to tell the Alpine council about the investigation.

But in an open letter published in the local newspaper last week, Ellen asked the city to forgive him. The issue is on next week's council agenda. "At this stage we're trying to get a feel for what the citizens feel and whether they feel (his past) is substantial or isn't," Tom Longman, Alpine City Council member, said Friday. The sexual harassment complaints surfaced when a local alternative newspaper The Nimby News — Nimby stands for Not In My Back Yard — tried to obtain

Ellen's personnel files from the Odessa Police Department. But the city refused to release the records. The state Attorney General's office has ruled that the files were public information, but Ellen sued the city to prevent their release. "They contain highly confidential information," said assistant Odessa city attorney Elizabeth Lutton. "It's more than the usual personnel information, it's a very wide ranging internal investigation that dealt with people's private lives as well as their public lives."

She said the city of Odessa is willing to release the complaint that caused the investigation, the name of the complainant and the final disposition of the case. In his letter, Ellen said he had sexual relations with two Odessa Police Department employees after going through an emotional divorce. He said he was guilty of sexual harassment because he allowed employees to use vulgar language that may have been offensive to other employees and he admitted to employee favoritism. "Please forgive me for the mistakes I have made in the past and allow me the opportunity to serve the community of which I have grown so fond," Ellen said in his letter. "I want to be your chief of police and I am asking you for your forgiveness and for your support." Nimby News publisher Jack McNamara said he still wants the files. "He covered it up when he was hired and there are three or four good cops running around in this state that didn't get hired because Ellen got hired," McNamara said.

Hennard tried to sell guns

DALLAS (AP) — Killen police say mass murderer George Hennard tried to sell his two 9mm pistols less than two weeks before 23 people were massacred in a local cafeteria. Det. Greg Holloway told The Dallas Morning News in Saturday editions that Hennard, 35, offered both semiautomatic pistols to a friend in Austin and to his brother-in-law Jimmy Shellenbarger. Authorities are checking leads that Hennard made other attempts to peddle the weapons, said police Lt. Rick Morrarty.

According to statements made to police, the two men told Hennard they had no use for the guns and no interest in buying them. The weapons were a Glock 17 and a Ruger P-89. Armed with both pistols, Hennard rammed his pickup through the window of Luby's Cafeteria on Oct. 16 and opened fire on patrons. He killed himself after being wounded by police. Based on what he has learned about Hennard's personality, Holloway suspects that Hennard knew he was capable of a deadly violent outburst. "Maybe he saw a sickness in himself. . . He may have been trying to prevent himself from using them," Holloway said.

Umpire hails decision in aggravated robbery trial

DALLAS (AP) — An American League umpire shot while trying to stop a robbery said Saturday that "the wheel of justice ran its course" after jurors convicted a Fort Hood soldier of aggravated robbery in the incident. The punishment phase in the trial of Army Pvt. Kevin Bivins began Saturday and was expected to continue throughout the day. Bivins faces up to 99 years in prison and fines up to $10,000 in the aggravated robbery that led to the shooting of umpire Steve Palermo. Bivins, 22, was convicted late

Friday after jurors deliberated for about three hours. He showed no emotion as the verdict was read. Bivins' attorney said he was discouraged. "All of the news coverage in the case may have boxed the jury in from cutting the guy loose," Julius Whittier told The Dallas Morning News. "They were under a lot of pressure." Palermo and former Southern Methodist University football player Terence Mann were among a group that chased robbers who attacked two waitresses.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Art Buchwald's lawyer says he would go to "intergalactic court on Mars" to get his client a share of the profits from Eddie Murphy's smash movie, "Coming to America."

Paramount attorney Charles Diamond said in a Friday hearing he would appeal the case to the highest judicial level. "If they want to go to the intergalactic court on Mars we'll go with them," said Buchwald attorney Pierce O'Donnell.

Governor's race polarizes Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Not even Edwin Edwards, high-roller that he is, could have imagined the scene a block down the street from the federal courthouse where he was tried twice on corruption charges.

Secretaries and lawyers of an old-line, high-powered law firm gathered in the cafeteria and applauded a most unlikely visitor. Edwards, the 64-year-old Cajun gambler, womanizer and disgraced three-time governor, swept in to the room as the beloved savior of the establishment.

He had one man to thank for his newfound resurrection and redemption: David Duke.

"Something really wonderful has happened to me," Edwards told the law firm, which had never before taken sides in a political race. "It sure is good to be the good guy in the race for a change."

In the three weeks since Edwards and Duke — a suburban Republican state representative, ex-Nazi and former Ku Klux Klan grand wizard — were the top two finishers in the state's open gubernatorial primary, Louisianians have been choosing sides like never before.

For a state with a long history of bizarre and controversial gubernatorial candidates, from a deranged hillbilly to a low-budget movie star-singer to a renowned dictator, this race has been as bizarre and controversial as any, polarizing the people, exposing a political fault line with national repercussions, and pitting black vs. white and urban vs. rural. A record number of people — more than 2.1 million — have registered to vote in Saturday's runoff election. Polls show the race too close to call.

The two candidates have waged a war of transformation, two chameleons each trying to shed his past and remake his image. Each candidate has attacked the other's past, and each says he's put his own past behind.

Business and labor embraced Edwards, the first time in 25 years those two have agreed on a candidate. Political enemies became sudden allies. Even Edwards pleaded with voters to "hold their nose" and vote for him.

The telegenic Duke, on the other hand, is waging a campaign by talk show, riding an apparent surge of popularity among working-class white voters. He says his is a fresh face who can turn back the politics of old, and he espouses standard Republican promises to cut taxes and bureaucracy and be tough on crime.

A billboard urging people not to vote for Louisiana gubernatorial candidate David Duke sits beside Interstate 10 in Baton Rouge, La. Duke is facing former governor Edwin Edwards in a runoff election Nov. 15.

A steady stream of supporters flows into his two-story, rickety headquarters in suburban New Orleans each day to buy T-shirts and gimme caps, pick up bumper stickers and yard signs and write small checks to the charismatic, good-looking 41-year-old candidate.

A visitor from New York wanted a souvenir one day last week and a caller from Colorado wanted a sign, while a campaign worker holding an anti-Duke flier wondered out loud, "Are the niggers putting that out?"

Since the Oct. 19 primary, in which he drew nearly a half-million votes, Duke has hopped from radio show to television program, relying on the free and frequent media exposure more so than the traditional political rally.

In one two-day period, he was on New Orleans radio, then did a Voice of America broadcast, then "Larry King Live," then flew to New York for another "Donahue" show.

"The 'Donahue' show is aired in every television market in Louisiana," Duke said, defending his national media forays. "So I will do programs that are aired and seen by Louisiana people."

It is a strategy that brings Duke national exposure and contributions to his organization and 1-900 pay telephone line, countering the big contributions suddenly pouring into the Edwards camp.

"He doesn't have a lot of money to buy paid media, so he does talk shows, and does them well," said U.S. Sen. John Breaux, a Democrat and Edwards supporter.

Duke has repudiated the Klan and Nazi groups, attributing his involvement to youthful mistakes. But those beliefs continued well into the late 1980s, when Duke was in his late 30s.

In a 1985 interview he said, "We don't want Negroes around. We don't need Negroes around. ... We simply want our own country and our own society." Until 1986, the New Orleans Times-Picayune reported, Duke still celebrated Hitler's birthday and argued that the Holocaust of Jews by Nazi Germany never happened.

More recently, Duke ran for president in 1988 as a little-noticed candidate of anti-Semitism and white supremacy who said in one 30-minute television advertisement, "I can tell you the Zionists have long ago bought George Bush and Mike Dukakis."

Duke now says he was referring to just "one of many powerful lobbying groups."

Bush joins Europeans with sanctions

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — President Bush joined European leaders on Saturday in slapping economic sanctions on Yugoslavia. "History allows little time for celebration," he said of a nation that has shed Communism but is now gripped by civil war.

Bush said the United States' sanctions would be "comparable" to those announced by European Community nations on Friday, which include halts in trade and aid programs. He added his administration would also work at the United Nations "toward a possible oil embargo."

Bush made his comments as he ended a four-day European journey that included a NATO summit and talks with EC leaders that produced progress towards a long-sought trade accord.

He spoke as violence flared anew several hundred miles distant in the historic Yugoslav wall-city of Dubrovnik, and said he wasn't certain the economic measures would be enough to end the strife.

Demos worried about their privacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats are worried that an investigation of rubber-check writing will invade "our privacy" and are insistent that damaging material be kept from Republicans, according to a congressman's written account of a party meeting.

"We need to protect our privacy, and wrap up the investigation quickly," the memo said of the ethics committee probe into operations of the House members' bank.

The account by Rep. Terry L. Bruce, D-Ill., obtained by The Associated Press, also reports Democrats' anxiety that members will be judged by standards that did not exist when the bad checks were written.

Bruce confirmed the authenticity of the memo, which he wrote Thursday.

He would not say where the comments on the bank investigation were made.

Nationalists seize airports in Russia

GROZNY, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Nationalists blockaded streets and seized airports Saturday to prevent soldiers from enforcing Boris Yeltsin's emergency rule in the secessionist Chechen-Ingush republic in southern Russia.

The breakaway territory's new president, inaugurated Saturday, defiantly vowed to "leave the totalitarian empire" of Yeltsin's Russian Federation.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Grozny, Chechen-Ingush's capital, was "in turmoil" and events were "highly explosive."

Chechen-Ingush, a small Muslim autonomous republic of 1.3 million people within the Russian federation, declared itself an independent republic a week ago.

At least four men from Chechen-Ingush hijacked an Aeroflot plane to Ankara, Turkey, on Saturday to protest the Russian crackdown, officials said.

Actor Yves Montand dies at 70

PARIS (AP) — Singer and actor Yves Montand, whose smooth sensuality and droopy-eyed charm made him beloved at home and famous around the world, died Saturday of a stroke at a hospital near Paris. He was 70.

Montand died at a hospital in Senlis, about 28 miles northeast of Paris, where he was taken after suffering chest pains early Saturday, hospital officials said.

Off the screen and stage, Montand was an impassioned advocate of disarmament and human rights and an outspoken champion of liberal, pacifist political ideas. In 1984, polls showed that nearly half of all French people wanted him to seek public office — a call he never answered.

Searching for a silver lining

"So life is going to go on for me, and I'm going to be a happy man." — Earvin "Magic" Johnson.

Perhaps no one has better personified the joy of sports than Magic Johnson, the Los Angeles Lakers' All-Star point guard. Whether sinking an improbable 40-foot shot at the buzzer, or making one of his trademark behind-the-back, no-look passes, Johnson communicated a love for basketball in particular and life in general.

Some of that joy and love dimmed somewhat Thursday with Johnson's admission that he has tested positive for the HIV virus that causes AIDS and was retiring from basketball.

Like millions of people around the world, we were saddened at the news. That someone of Johnson's stature can acquire the deadly virus is a great shock, whether or not you're a sports fan. Our hearts go out to him and his family.

But Johnson has vowed not to succumb to self-pity. He said he will remain a happy man and will now serve as a spokesman for AIDS awareness and education. We applaud his statements to that effect.

This episode is one more bit of proof that AIDS is not just a disease for homosexuals or intravenous drug users or unfortunate blood transfusion recipients, but for all of us. No one is automatically exempt from contracting the disease.

And if there is a silver lining to the Johnson story, maybe it is that awareness of the disease and efforts to find a cure will now increase.

We fervently hope that is the case.

Seniors not required to serve jury duty

To the editor:

As most people are probably aware, jurors are selected at random from the list of registered voters in the County. This list covers all people in the County who have registered to vote.

Texas Law, however, provides some exemptions from jury service. One of the exemptions is for persons who are 65 years of age or older. This does not mean that people over 65 are disqualified from service, but simply that they are not required to serve if they do not choose to do so.

Affidavits claiming a permanent age exemption from jury duty are available in the County Tax Office. By going to the Tax Office and signing this affidavit, a person's name will then be removed from the jury list. They will not be subject to jury service but will still be eligible to vote.

We sincerely appreciate everyone who answers their summons for jury service and encourage people who are over 65 and able to do so to serve as jurors because it is their right and privilege just as voting is their right and privilege. We realize that these are the people who have been called upon over the years to serve as jurors and have performed this service as asked. They have now earned the right to allow someone else that privilege. We urge these citizens to take the time to go by the Tax Office and sign this affidavit. Then they will not be bothered with jury notices and the list of people called will contain only the names of those people who are not exempt from service or who, although having an exemption, are still willing to serve.

Friday Football Forecast was disappointing

To the editor:

I realize we have "freedom of the press" but after reading your Friday (Nov. 1) paper, I found it very disappointing. I'm referring to the sports section, "Friday Football Forecast" November 1, 1991, in the prediction of the Forsan vs. Stanton game.

I was always taught that you don't kick a man when he is down but instead help him up and offer some encouragement. What are you trying to prove? Don't you think these boys know what the score is? Instead of giving up, they keep on going. They have gone through the twelve weeks of workouts, played in the cold and the rain, and received their share of injuries. Sometimes the final score on the scoreboard doesn't make a winner. These boys have built character and pride and will come out the true winners when the final whistle is blown.

I remember a few years back the Steer football team was on the losing side and I don't remember any snide remarks about them in your paper. Forsan is in the community of Big Spring whether you recognize it or not.

I would also like to ask you, after nine football games, why has only one Forsan football player been selected for your honor roll? They are out there making the tackles, getting the fumbles, and recovering the interceptions, and recovering the fumbles. How would you feel if the Forsan fans thought your paper wasn't an "Honor Roll" paper and dropped their subscriptions?

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Jesse Trevino

Two stories frame my perspective on term limitations, an idea whose time has come — but not in the radical form being proposed. The first concerns Bella Abzug, the former congresswoman from New York City.

Many years ago in Washington, she was walking toward me and a friend — he an older, wiser veteran of Capitol Hill. Abzug was talking loudly to a group of young college-age women, and she was gesturing at furries visible only to her.

Wearing one of her famously ridiculous hats — this one an especially large sweeping green oval with a red ribbon around it — she was a woman who perhaps could not escape her war-like name.

She struck me as an eccentric feminist gaffly whose clothes always needed ironing. Her politics were suitable to me, but she had a way of being offensive. She was also ineffective in Congress.

I remember commenting that day to my more experienced friend once Abzug was outside earshot what a buffoon I thought she was. I remember his answer almost verbatim.

"You have a long way to go before you understand Congress. Stop and think for a moment: She fits. Congress is our worst and our best. We work with what the people send us," he said.

Having worked for several members of Congress and heading up a congressional subcommittee staff, he had seen just about everything, including members of Congress who asked lobbyists outright for such vanities as color television sets.

"The voters of some congressional districts send us some very good members. Some send us very mediocre members. Some of the people send us some real rotten eggs. Others send us people like Abzug, who represents a movement.

"She fits: the women's movement is in its shouting phase. But you have to remember, it is the people who elect them. Congress is only as good as the people."

His comments have rolled around in my head since the movement to limit the terms of members of Congress and other officeholders began in California and Colorado. Blessedly, the voters of Washington state last week turned down the idea.

The idea, a quick-fix gimmick, will not work because the only thing that does work in this system is for the public to be more involved in government. That the public has taken so long to get its gander up about Congress proves that the public has not been paying attention.

Congress has been a foul place for many years. It has gotten progressively worse, and this brings me to my second story, which points the way to go.

Since moving away from Washington, a friend returned to his home in California and votes against the incumbent member of Congress anywhere he lives. So revolted was he by what he saw in Congress that he automatically votes against the incumbent.

His attitude is not a bad one. Properly applied, his approach could limit the number of good members who should not be thrown out. It would also remove many rotten eggs — if the public can discern the bad from the good.

It should matter to anyone who signs a term limitation petition that the moves to limit terms are being supported by ultra-conservative, ultra-rich businessmen — like Robert Moshbacher Jr. of Houston — who have their own reasons to want a new Congress or who want to ride the issue to higher political office. I wonder how clean-air legislation would fare in their new Congress, and I wonder if Moshbacher wants to ride this idea, supported by Vice President Dan Quayle, to the governorship of Texas.

That is not to say many members of Congress cannot be replaced. Can they be replaced? Absolutely. Take the Texas delegation to Congress, made up of 27 men elected from 27 individual districts. (Their number will rise to 30 next year.) Each of the incumbents can be called home next November.

The voters of any district can call their own congressman back by voting him out of office. The voters can also recall every member of the state Legislature. Perhaps they should. And they can elect others — even some who might talk loud and wear silly hats.

But throwing incumbents out of office in Washington, D.C., and Austin by limiting their terms matters little if the public forgets that government, after all, is a full-time job.

And so is the job of the citizen. We are only as good as the Congress we send to Washington and the Legislature we send to Austin.

Donors fined for excessive gifts

By BOB MITCHELL

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A few years back, John Tull sat down and wrote a painful letter to the Federal Election Commission.

The Nederland, Colo., attorney was writing in 1988 about his 84-year-old aunt, one of several senior citizens accused by the FEC of making contributions to a political action committee in excess of the $5,000 annual limit.

"She often made multiple — and large — contributions to the same organization with virtually no recognition of the number or the total amount of the contribution she had given to each," Tull wrote.

"Frankly," Tull added, she "was victimized by what I believe were unscrupulous fund-raisers; fortunately, what was happening was discovered before she exhausted the funds she relies on to live in the retirement home."

The story of John Tull's aunt is not unique. FEC files are replete with similar tales of aggressive political action committees and campaigns taking advantage of confused senior citizens to fatten their war chests.

With the quadrennial silly season of American politics — the presidential election campaign — just around the corner, the elderly and just about anybody else who have ever written a check to a candidate or PAC can expect to be inundated with similar missives.

"I think it is a problem," said State College, Pa., attorney Louis

Capitol report

Glantz, who represented an elderly woman fined $1,000 for making excessive contributions to a PAC. "But the people at risk are those not shrewd enough to realize they are making problems for themselves by making large contributions."

Demands for money come from all points of the political compass: congressional campaign committees, presidential candidates, special-interest PACs and the two parties. Tull wrote that his aunt was getting as many as two or three letters each week from a variety of PACs that had obtained her name and address.

But Tull said in an interview that the barrage also involved registered letters, telephone calls, luncheons and even a White House tour. Over a six-month period, he said, his aunt made contributions totaling $144,000.

Glantz said his client's situation was similar. Family members suspected there may have been a problem but did not know the extent of her contributions until the FEC brought it to their attention, he said. His client, now in her mid-70s, holds strong political views but was unaware of federal limits on the amount that can be given to a PAC.

The fund-raising letters themselves are models of marketing skill, Tull said. Punchy two-sentence paragraphs, with key phrases capitalized and phony hand-written notes scrawled across the top, help give the pleas for money a dramatic quality, he said.

The appeals had one characteristic in common, he added. "It would always be, 'this is it — this is our last chance to get Ted Kennedy and his ilk,'" Tull recalled.

"A key to what the groups do to raise money is to appeal to the ego of the person," he said. "They fill a certain void that folks who are elderly and feel alone — that they are no longer important."

Family members who worry that an elderly relative may be exploited by unscrupulous political fund-raisers can take action to protect a loved one, Glantz said. Two-signature checking accounts, a declaration of guardianship or a limit on the amount of funds available for check-writing can staunch the flow of money, he said.

The Pennsylvania attorney has another idea: instead of fining individuals for violations, heavy penalties — perhaps the equivalent of the excessive amount collected — should be assessed against PACs that collect more than they should from donors, he said.

"If there were larger penalties on PACs," he said, "they would keep track."

Yugoslav federal soldiers rest near a bullet-pocked traffic sign in downtown Vukovar Friday after taking control of most of the embattled Croatian town, one of the last Croatian strongholds left in the area.

Yugoslav federal army closes in on Dubrovnik

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serbia and its allies, in a surprising shift of position, urged the United Nations Saturday to send peacekeeping troops to Croatia to stop ethnic bloodshed in the battle-scarred republic.

The appeal came as fighting raged across Croatia. A seven-hour assault on Dubrovnik, the fiercest army attack in a 42-day siege, brought federal troops closer to the medieval heart of the Adriatic port in preparation for a final onslaught on Croatian defenses.

The army issued an ultimatum for besieged defenders to lay down their arms. But the demand was rejected, according to a pool dispatch from reporters in the Adriatic port city, where most communications were severed in the fighting.

Shells from cannon and gunboats hit Dubrovnik early Saturday, the Tanjug news agency said, quoting Croatian radio. Croatian TV said suburbs bordering Dubrovnik's old walled center were under assault.

In a heated battle for strategic Bosanka hill overlooking Dubrovnik, two federal soldiers were killed and six were injured, and the Croats took heavy casualties, Tanjug reported. It said the army finally took the hill.

Croatia declared independence on June 25, and more than 1,700 people have died in fighting since. Serb rebels and the Serbian-dominated federal army have captured about one-third of Croatian territory.

The appeal for the dispatch of U.N. peacekeeping troops came in a letter to the U.N. Security Council from the four pro-Serbian members remaining on the collective federal presidency. They urged that the peacekeeping forces form a buffer zone between areas dominated by Serbs and Croats in Croatia.

Serbia and its allies previously have rejected any foreign troop involvement in Croatia's four-month war of secession.

Their appeal likely was coordinated with commanders of the Serb-dominated federal forces, who have helped rebel Serbs capture one-third of Croatia's territory and are nominally under command of the federal presidency.

Saturday's statement appeared to be an attempt to forestall a U.N. oil embargo requested by the European Community when it imposed economic sanctions on Yugoslavia Friday.

President Bush announced Saturday in the Netherlands that the United States was joining the European sanctions and would support the call for an oil embargo.

Croatian Foreign Minister Zvonimir Separovic gave a cautious welcome to the request for peacekeeping troops. But there was no suggestion in the presidency's letter that the Serbian side intended to relinquish territory captured from the Croats.

Serbia has said Croatia cannot secede from Yugoslavia within its present borders, claiming the republic's 600,000-strong Serb minority would face persecution.

Thanking U.S. veterans with words and actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — As America pays tribute to veterans of the Gulf War and past conflicts on this Veterans Day weekend, it struggles as it has from Revolutionary days with the problem of paying them in more than words.

The nation's 26.7 million veterans are eligible for benefits ranging from home loans to special clothing for the disabled, but veterans' groups say more money for their medical care is desperately needed.

Veterans' lobbyists on Capitol Hill also are seeking changes in federal laws cutting pensions for incompetent vets and burial benefits in national cemeteries, but medical care is their chief complaint.

"Since there has been underfunding over the past years, the VA is attempting to play catch up. It can't do it, and the veterans are paying a price for it," said Dennis Cullinen of the legislative office of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

It is a price that has been paid before. After the Revolutionary War, the Continental Congress voted pensions for the estimated 184,000 to 396,000 men who served in the Continental Army and state militias. But without any federal appropriation to pay for them, payment was left to the states. Only about 3,000 of the veterans ever drew a pension, the Department of Veterans Affairs says.

• Local Veterans Day activities planned, 1-A; veterans recall war service, 1-C.

Cullinen said VA medical care funding has increased 10 percent since 1980, while the costs of care have more than doubled.

Faced with the budget squeeze, the government has shifted some costs to private insurers, four congressionally chartered veterans service organizations noted in a recent report to Congress.

The department's recently approved fiscal 1992 budget for medical and all other programs is $32.5 billion, compared with roughly $34.2 billion recommended by the veterans' groups. The current budget is $31.3 billion.

Veterans groups also are pushing for more help for homeless veterans, estimated to number about 1 million by some counts.

The VA has a program under which it can sell at a discount, for use as homeless shelters, property that it has taken over after a default on a VA home loan.

"That's a great idea," said Cullinen. "Unfortunately, it is so difficult and complex to set up such a shelter that not many such arrangements have happened. It has not been a success."

In their recommendations to Congress, the veterans' groups said needs of homeless veterans have not been met despite a program under which about 18,000 veterans have been housed in VA facilities and offered help.

"We want to make the homeless veteran independently capable of taking care of himself and contributing back to society," said Ralph Cooper, executive director of Veterans Benefits Clearinghouse in Roxbury, Mass. "This is a bigger thing than taking them off the street and warehousing them. I don't think that's productive."

The report to Congress was submitted by the American Veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, the Disabled American Veterans, the Paralyzed Veterans of America and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The four veterans groups also recommended repeal of a law passed last year that cut off disability payments for about 11,400 incompetent veterans who have no dependent child, spouse or adult and who have estates greater than $25,000. The measure was passed to prevent windfalls to remote heirs but veterans' groups said immediate families would suffer most.

Palestinians hopeful about prospects

BIR ZEIT, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Jamile Abdel Hadi, 70, dares to dream about the future for the first time since Israeli occupation began 24 years ago.

If there is a peace agreement with Israel, she said with a broad smile, she will resume adult education classes at Bir Zeit University, now closed by the Israeli army, and bring home a son exiled by the military government.

Other Palestinians caution that the emotional high created by the Madrid peace talks may be short-lived. They say deep despair may follow unless the lot of Arabs in the occupied territories improves quickly.

Mrs. Abdel Hadi and the other comparative optimists have been gripped by euphoria since the Madrid talks, imagining for the first time in years what it would be like if the army withdrew and they could run their own lives.

They spin fantasies of opening a business, running for city council or voting for the first time.

Many swelled with pride at the television pictures of their delegates whisked in motorcades through the streets of the Spanish capital and sitting as equals with the Israeli occupiers.

"It was a great achievement ... after all these years in which Israel refused to deal with us," said Talal Zahran, 40, a contractor from the West Bank town of Nablus. "Now the whole world knows who the

"It was a great achievement ... after all these years in which Israel refused to deal with us. Now the whole world knows who the Palestinians are."

Talal Zahran

Palestinians are.

Ibrahim Dakak, a 62-year-old Palestinian philosopher, had a more skeptical view: "People are fed up with words and slogans. They want something very practical. Nothing has changed here since Madrid. We still have curfews, we have strikes, we have people being killed."

Generally, however, hope prevails.

"When I watched our Palestinian delegation, I felt this was a beginning, and that all our pain and suffering will come to an end," Mrs. Abdel Hadi told a visitor on the glass-enclosed porch of her home in Bir Zeit.

Her house was rebuilt from ruins. Soldiers blew it up in 1969, when one of her sons was convicted of planting a bomb that killed three Israelis.

"If there is to be peace, we must forget about the terrible things we did to each other," she said.

Several men who had gathered for a morning chat in Bir Zeit's central square seemed baffled when asked whether they had plans for life under self-rule. Their talk kept returning to hardships of the present, like tax raids and curfews.

"I can't tell you anything because peace is still just a dream," said Hanna Mussallem, 40, who runs a snack shop on the square.

When their initial reluctance had passed, the men spoke of the future with relish.

Mussallem said he would like to open a boarding house for university students, run for the city council and be the one to hoist the Palestinian flag atop the town hall.

Mahmoud Abdul Lafi, a tailor, wants to design his own line of clothing for export and take an active role in municipal affairs. "We need to build gardens and swimming pools here; we need to build our Palestine," said Lafi, 53.

Some Palestinians doubt the peace talks will produce tangible results. They cite the hard line taken by Yitzhak Shamir, the Israeli prime minister, who has said the Palestinians can hope only for limited autonomy.

Israel's continuing practice of settling Jews in the occupied territories makes Palestinians fear settlers will take all the land and force them to leave. So far, no settlements have been built near Bir Zeit.

Justice officials review BSISD compliance

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
 Staff Writer

The United States Department of Justice reviewed the Big Spring Independent School District on its compliance with federal desegregation mandates, but the results will not be available until the new year, said officials.

"We're happy and we hope to see the end of the desegregation suit in January," said Murray Murphy, assistant superintendent for personnel and instruction.

He said unitary status would release the district from the 1982 court orders that required the district to eliminate racially identifiable schools.

At that time, Bauer Magnet School on the north side of Big Spring had more than 95 percent minority students. Rural white students were being bused to Washington Elementary past Bauer, and the League of Latin American Citizens filed suit against the schools. The magnet school was created to comply with the court orders and today has nearly 50 percent non-minority students attending, Murphy said.

Parents may request that their children attend Bauer and Murphy said the school offers several programs not available at other campuses.

"That's the whole concept of a magnet school. They have the extended day program, the computer programs and tutorial programs — that's three good reasons there (why parents would choose Bauer)," Murphy said.

"It's been very successful and will continue to be that way. We've got a good representation of the Anglo community at Bauer. We have met all the requirements and should be released from the court orders," he said.

Two attorneys from the justice department reviewed information supplied by BSISD, he said. The materials were taken back to Washington D.C. and will be evaluated for a later ruling.

"It was a good visit. They complimented the district and our efforts made to comply with the court orders and they were pleased with the success Bauer Magnet School has had," Murphy said.

The administration will now wait for the department's decision. "We've waited eight years, we can live with it, but we'd like to be out from under the orders. Then we can operate the district without federal controls," Murphy said.

United Way drive 60 percent complete

The United Way is showing a steady incline in pledges, and is now 60.31 percent of the way to its 1991 goal, officials said.

A total of $142,000 has been pledged so far this year.

The drive got a lift recently in the Loaned Executive Division from Fina, BSID, TU Electric, State Hospital, CRMWD, Western Container, S.W. Bell, First National Bank and Power Resources, according to UW official Sherrie Bordofski.

Outstanding in the Commercial Division have been Winn-Dixie employees, who doubled their pledges from last year, Bordofski said. J.C. Penny Co. employees had a 100 percent participation rate, she added.

The Combined Federal Campaign has pledged $15,832.00 so far, but has not completed its campaign. This division includes V.A. Medical Center, Federal Correctional Institute and Social Security Administration.

Golden Age is a division for retired citizens who are homeowners in Big Spring. "This is one of the biggest divisions and a great one, I may add," Bordofski said.

Upcoming events for the United Way are the phone bank in which volunteers will call those who have not responded so far. This will be in a conference room at Fina, she said.

"Should anyone get a call, we are asking that each one co-operate with their pledge or contribution and volunteers will go immediately to receive the contribution," she said. The Up, Up, and Away Celebration will be at the Big Spring Country Club on Nov. 21, beginning at 7 p.m.

There will be a $5 fee to cover expenses for the horsedouves and drinks. This can be paid at the door. RSVP is preferred by Nov. 19 so that enough food can be prepared. Call 267-5201.

There will be some entertainment and a report about the United Way campaign, Bordofski said.

"We are making a final request of everyone who cares to give and give this week so we may finalize the 1992 campaign. We will gladly take pledges and then anyone may pay next year. We will not stop the campaign. It will continue throughout the year although we do need to know what we may depend on for the agencies.

"All that I am asking is, won't you help those in need through the United Way agencies? The need is tremendous and this is the best way to show you care about others more than yourselves," she said.

 speaker at the medical center's ceremony that begins at 11 a.m.

Other festivities planned at the hospital include the Honor Color Guard from Goodfellow Air Force Base, San Angelo, and the American Gold Star Mothers laying of a wreath at the conclusion.

Fred Cox, chief of voluntary service for the hospital and master of ceremonies for the event, said the activities will include a student from Goliad Middle School reading the winning essay from a contest in Bobbie Moore's language arts class.

The essay contest, "What the Flag Means to Me," was won for the second year by seventh-grader Stephanie Talbott. She will receive a gift certificate from the American Legion Auxiliary. Second place went to sixth-grader Ramnath Subbaraman. Third place was won by Josna Adusumilli.

All three students will receive sweat shirts for prizes, Cox said. The contest was judged by patients at the hospital.

"We've sent out more than 500 invitations and we're expecting 200 to 500, depending on the weather," Cox said.

Patients unable to attend the ceremony will be visited by the special guests following the ceremony. All VA hospital patients will be given a copy of President George Bush's proclamation of the day, as well as Big Spring Mayor Max Green's proclamation, he said.

Christmas parade planned for Dec. 7

By LEA WHITEHEAD
 Staff Writer

Churches, businesses, civic groups, schools and individuals are urged to make plans early to enter Big Spring's annual community-wide Christmas Parade.

The parade is scheduled this year for 10 a.m., Saturday, Dec. 7. With area bands, a celebrity grand marshal, floats and other colorful entries, the parade traditionally heralds the arrival of the Christmas season in the area.

For the fifth consecutive year, the parade will be sponsored by the Big Spring Herald as a community service. Employees of the Herald plan and execute the event, coordinating entries, contacting dignitaries, acting as traffic directors, and many other duties.

"However, the annual parade is a Big Spring and Howard County event," says Pat Morgan, publisher of the newspaper. "We are merely the mechanical arm that puts the parade on the street."

Past entries have included Scenic Mountain Medical Center, Western Container, VA Hospital, NAACP, LULAC, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, United Way, Shrine Temple, Comanche Trail Muzzleloaders, Howard County Sheriff's Posse, Antique Car Club, First United Methodist Church, Assembly of God Church and many others.

years, and an entry form will be printed regularly in the pages of the Herald, or can be picked up at the Herald's office at 710 Scurry. Entry deadline is November 27, but the sponsor urges that entries be turned in as early as possible.

"We need about a week's time to organize the parade and check on last minute details between the deadline and the actual parade date," says Lea Whitehead, who has coordinated the past four parades for the Herald. "That last week is very hectic!"

First, second and third prizes will be offered in each of the four categories of entries — school or college, church, civic, and commercial or manufacturing. Individual entries, such as an antique car or a horse with carriage, are accepted as well.

"We ask that undecorated vans and cars of a strictly commercial nature not be entered," said Whitehead.

Economy big worry to the 1991 electorate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Still unsure what voters were trying to say in Tuesday's stormy elections? Never mind the political analysts, just ask people like Claire Brinn and Roger Weck.

"Economy-wise, they've got to do something. People are giving up," was the post-election analysis of Brinn, an electronics technician from Manchester, N.H.

"I would like to see a limit of one term for everybody in everything," said Weck, a middle school teacher in Jackson, N.J. "Then maybe they wouldn't say, 'I have to spend my time trying to get re-elected.'"

It's hardly the kind of talk any incumbent politician wants to hear, but the ominous rumbling of Tuesday's vote has them listening.

Traditionally, off-year elections are forgotten soon after the results are in. But the surprise upsets in the Pennsylvania Senate and Mississippi governor's race and dramatic turnover in legislative and mayoral contests have caught the attention of politicians from President Bush down.

"It was a scary election for incumbents of any party," said Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn, whose easy re-election win was an exception. "It's more than a wake-up call. It's like getting hit over the head in the middle of the night while you're sound asleep."

Conversations with voters in a handful of states in the wake of last week's elections revealed an electorate that is angry to say the least, mostly at perceived government inaction at a time of economic trouble. Most voiced frustration with their government, from the White House and Congress down to state legislators and mayors.

"I didn't like the incumbents," Paul Pugliese of Long Branch, N.J., said in explaining why he skipped over Democratic and Republican candidates to vote for independents. "It's the lesser of two evils."

And voter after voter professed a willingness to abandon traditional party loyalties in favor of candidates they believe will bring change.

"I voted Republican for the first time in my life and I feel guilty about it," said Patricia Santoro, a high school teacher from Middletown, N.J.

In the Pennsylvania contest, Democrat Harris Wofford defeated heavily favored Republican Dick Thornburgh.

And the change of power voters forced in New Jersey's Legislature was a clear backlash against Democratic-sponsored tax increases, a message not lost on politicians elsewhere.

Officials and analysts in both parties said that while Tuesday's results reflected widespread disillusionment with incumbents, many simply paid the price for being on the ballot in tough economic times.

Lady Hawks could fly high

By LORNE FANCETT
Staff Writer

First off I would like to take this opportunity to say hi to everyone and also to say that I am thrilled to be doing this.

Being new to the area, I learned quite a bit about high school football from all of the different places that I've covered this season. But now that the regular season is winding to a close, this might be a good time to look into the bevvy of indoor sports on the horizon.

The one that comes to my mind first is basketball. Local action has already begun with the Howard College Hawks and the Lady Hawks.

If last Monday was any indication of what is in store for the 1991-92 season, then this will be a good year.

I gave a call to Coach Chadwick's Lady Hawks to see if I could talk to the players. They were more than happy to let me talk to them and find out what they feel about the upcoming season. Here is what some of them had to say:

The first one I caught up with was Kathy Mangram, a sophomore from Matador. She tells me that one of the basic reasons why the Lady Hawks will be successful this season is because of their overall balance.

"I think we're doing pretty good right now," Kathy said. "We have a good team this year. We got a lot of people in different positions. We're strong on the guard, have good shooters and fast, good post-ups. We're going to do pretty good this year."

Next I was able to flag down Kim Smith, a freshman from Nashville, Tenn. She feels that a good season will come about through an overall team effort.

"I feel that we're going to have a pretty good season. If we work hard and stick together then we'll have a real good season. Hopefully we will go all the way."

"I love the coaching staff. They make us work hard and I like that. They're just great." Glad to hear that, Kim, but how about the change from Nashville to Big Spring?

"Moving into a small town was a big adjustment, but I like it here. It's quiet so I get a lot of studying done."

Yolanda Wells, a second-year player from Houston, feels that this year's team has more depth at each position.

"Our team, comparing it to last year, has players for every spot. We're a better team this year with much more balance. Our point guard for this year (LaKisha Wiley) plays the same way as the point guard did last year."

Sophomore Desiree Wallace, one of the leaders of the team, agrees with Yolanda in her assessment of why the team is better than last year.

"Basically I figure we can go all the way. We're better than last year because we have depth in every spot. And all of the girls, even the freshmen, have a lot of talent and a lot of ability."

Regina Huff, the leading scorer for the Lady Hawks against Hardin-Simmons, feels that the attitude of her fellow players will make the difference this year.

"I think our team has adjusted a lot. We work really well together and we have a lot of unselfish players; some very good sophomores who are going to help us out and good freshmen who are coming in. We are a very talented team."

"We have good coaches and they make us work hard. They don't come in and say that we have the talent to be this or be that. They make us work for it, especially in practice."

Yumecca White, coming to the Lady Hawks this year from Dallas, sums her view of this team's future in one sentence: "Well, I think that we should go all the way this year."

Thanks, Yumecca and all of the rest of the Lady Hawks, for a nice time and also I'd like to thank coaches Royce and Lisa Chadwick for allowing me to talk to the players.

Next week I'll be talking to

Hawks sweep in Midland Classic

By LORNE FANCETT
Staff Writer

MIDLAND — Howard College won their second game of the Midland Classic as they defeated Murray State College, Okla. 98-58.

The Hawks, who had a tough time in their victory against Angelina Friday night, came out roaring to open the game Saturday night and never looked back.

"Our kids came out after a real emotional game yesterday where we had to fight and claw for every thing and hang on at the end to win." Coach Jeff Kidder said of his team after the game. "But we came out today, we didn't come out flat, came out and played well defensively, got the ball inside and I'm real proud of the kids."

Leading scorer for Howard College was Will Macon with 20. Macon, a freshman from Pittsburg, made nine of 16 from the floor for the evening. He also led the team in rebounds with 13. Chuckie Robinson followed Macon with 19 and Reco Burt contributed 17 for the Hawks.

"Will and Chuckie make a great tandem for the team inside and both played real well tonight," Coach Kidder said of his players.

Russell Ponds was the leading scorer for the Aggies with 12. Chad Burden followed with 11 and Cal Clinton added nine.

The Hawks shot well from the floor, making 57 percent of their attempts. Murray State played man-to-man defense for most of the game, reverting to a pressure-style defense half way through the second quarter. The pressure-style seemed to confuse the Hawks at the onset, but they changed back to man-to-man after five minutes of basic success with it and Howard College ate them up.

The Hawks defense for the evening was in fine form as they utilized an aggressive man-to-man, putting good pressure on the Aggies. Murray State shot only 36 percent from the floor and turned the ball over 23 times. Howard's defense got 16 steals on the night.

Chuckie Robinson started off the evening for the Hawks as he scored four of the six opening points. It took Howard College just about two minutes into the contest to put their first points on the board. After that it just didn't stop as the Hawks scored 25 points in the next seven minutes, opening a 25-6 lead.

The Aggies started to put more points on the board as they opened

HC ladies romp

LEVELLAND — The Howard College Lady Hawks made it a clean sweep as they polished off the Western Texas College Dusters 79-43 in the third game of the Levelland tournament.

The game was close for about seven minutes before the Lady Hawks took control. Howard had a comfortable 42-19 lead at the half. It also marked the seventh consecutive time Royce Chadwick had beaten dad Kelly, in head-to-head competition.

Lady Hawks assistant coach Lisa Chadwick said this was the best defensive game the Lady Hawks have played this season. She also added the freshman guards Vernetra Allen and Yumecca White played good games.

Allen and White led the scoring with 14 and 12 points respectively.

The Lady Hawks, 4-0 this season, will host the Crossroads Classic Thursday through Sunday at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Can Blue Devils repeat?

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duke's run of four consecutive Final Four appearances and five in six years is the modern-day version of UCLA's NCAA tournament dominance a quarter century ago.

Now Duke has a chance to become the first repeat champion since the Bruins seventh straight title in 1973. And the Blue Devils chances to do it again have to be considered the best since UNLV last season.

Duke has four starters and a solid supporting cast back with two freshmen expected to make an immediate impact. This could be a better version of the team which ended UNLV's perfect repeat season one game early.

"We don't look at defending anything because it is a different team, even though we have a lot of guys back," coach Mike Krzyzewski. "Each year is different just like it has been in the past."

Things haven't been that different, though. Duke has been a Final Four fixture in an age when balanced brackets and at-large berths have made Sweet Sixteen and Round of Eight badges of honor.

Krzyzewski has maintained a system that has teams peak in March after a season of calculated meetings with opponents of different strengths.

Christian Laettner is the only senior starter returning and he comes back with a 19.8 scoring average while grabbing 8.7 rebounds per game. A fine collegiate center, Laettner's professional future is as a power forward and he'll get to play there this season with the addition of 6-11 Cherokee Parks and 6-10 Eric Meek.

"Cherokee and Eric are going to be factors," Krzyzewski said. "Having two big men gives us some flexibility in how we use Christian Laettner. They will play together and they will play with Laettner. I think what they do is add rebounding, inside defense and enthusiasm to the team."

Things on the perimeter will be handled once again by junior point guard Bobby Hurley who had 43 assists and 10 turnovers in the NCAA tournament and is on the way to setting the school career assist mark this season. With him in the backcourt will be the Hills,

"Our goal is to play a tough schedule and be at our best in March. That is exactly what we are doing. I think if you set your goal to win a national championship it's too long term and too unrealistic. The only thing you can do is say we think we are going to be good, we want to be real good and we want to be real healthy in March. Those are realistic goals and those are the same as in the past six years," Mike Krzyzewski.

defensive specialist Thomas who scored 11.5 points per game and swingman Grant who can handle the point for a while but don't forget his 30 blocked shots.

This team is good enough to repeat and will almost be a disappointment if it doesn't at least keep the Final Four streak alive.

"Our expectations are always high so I don't see our expectations being any different this year," Krzyzewski said.

One of the teams given the best shot of derailing Duke's repeat season is that of Krzyzewski's college coach and mentor, Bob Knight. Indiana has all five starters back from a team Knight said was better last season than he expected for such a young team.

Calbert Cheaney almost set a single-season scoring record at Indiana and Eric Anderson and Damon Bailey are players who understand what Knight wants and are good enough to provide it.

LSU can be mentioned in the same breath simply because of 7-1 Shaquille O'Neal, the man who averaged 27.6 points, 14.7 rebounds and 5.0 blocked shots per game and is back for his junior year with a better supporting cast and a healthy leg.

The Big East will offer St. John's and Seton Hall — a different pair than the usual Syracuse and Georgetown — to the upper echelon mix, while North Carolina should join Duke from the Atlantic Coast Conference. Ohio State could be as good as Indiana in the Big Ten if Jimmy Jackson is as good as before his summer leg injury. Arizona should be the best of a rejuvenated Pac-10 and Arkansas and Kentucky look to be the best in their respective divisions of the Southeastern Conference.

The 12-team SEC is one of 26 conferences to make a change in membership last season, this year or next. Just seven conferences — Big Eight, Ivy, Mid-Eastern Athletic, Pac-10, Southwestern Athletic and West Coast — didn't need to order new letterheads.

The Great Midwest makes it debut this year while the American South merged with what was left of the Sun Belt to form an 11-team conference. Only 30 conferences are eligible for automatic bids this year — the Metro and East Coast lost theirs because of a dip in membership below six members — so there won't be play-in games for the lesser conferences to make the 64-team field.

Off season movement was contained to schools as All-Americans Kenny Anderson of Georgia Tech and Billy Owens of Syracuse left with eligibility remaining to apply for the NBA draft. That leaves O'Neal as the only returning All-American.

Mississippi Valley State junior Alphonso Ford is the leading returning scorer at 32.7 after finishing second to Kevin Bradshaw's 37.6. Even if Bradshaw wasn't a senior he wouldn't have been back with U.S. International.

The departure of USIU and Augusta from Division I and the addition of Sacramento State, College of Charleston, North Carolina-Greensboro, Buffalo and Southeast Missouri State means a record 298 schools will start the season with a chance at the national title.

Four schools are on a probation which will keep them out of the tournament — Maryland, Northwestern Louisiana, UNLV and Texas A&M — and six have ended a punishment of the same fate for this season — Missouri, Illinois, Robert Morris, Kentucky, Marshall and Southeastern Louisiana.

Lady Steers sixth at regional

LUBBOCK — The Big Spring Lady Steers came away with a surprising sixth place finish at the Region I-4A cross country meet here Saturday morning.

Big Spring's top finish came from junior Elizabeth Lopez, who ran a personal best 13:22 to finish 23rd. Right on her footsteps was sophomore Evey Perez in 24th with a personal best of 13:24. Dorothy Trent finished 40th in a personal best 13:49.

Hope Martinez was 58th (14:25), 61 Brandy Wheeler (14:37), 78 Shawnda Wilson (15:29), 80 Stephanie Mendoza (17:10).

"For having four girls sick, I thought they did a real good job," said Big Spring coach Randy Britton. "I really thought we would be hovering near the bottom. If Hope had been well, we might have finished fourth."

Canyon Randall won the meet, followed by Borger, Grandbury, San Angelo Lake View, Boswell and Big Spring. Then there was Northwest Justin, Stephenville, Levelland, Fort Worth Brewer, Frenship and Azle.

San Angelo Lake View won the boys division, Northwest Justin was second, followed by Boswell and Andrews. The top two teams and 10 individuals qualify to state.

In Class A competition, the Garden City Bearkats and Lady Bearkats finished 12th in the team race.

Rockets edge

Suns, 96-95

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets defeated the Phoenix Suns, 96-95, Sunday night behind the 24 points and 11 rebounds of Otis Thorpe, just holding on when Negele Knight's 15-foot jumper missed at the buzzer.

Neither team led by more than four until Hakeem Olajuwon's basket with 2:14 left gave the Rockets a 94-89 advantage.

Houston led 96-91, but Dan Majerle scored four straight points, bringing Phoenix to 96-95 at :32.

The Rockets' Kenny Smith lost the ball out of bounds at :15, but Knight missed on his last-second attempt to give Phoenix the victory.

Thorpe sank six free throws in the final seven minutes. Houston trailed, 84-82, before Thorpe hit two free throws with 6:34 remaining to tie the game.

Olajuwon added 20 points and 15 rebounds for Houston, and Buck Johnson had 12 points.

Majerle led Phoenix with 28 points and nine rebounds, followed by Tom Chambers with 22 points and Andrew Lang with 13.

Phoenix led early, 10-4, but Houston led at the end of the first quarter, 27-24.

Houston was up 33-30 early in the second quarter when it put together a 16-3 run that built its lead to 49-33 with 2:56 left in the half. Phoenix scored seven straight points to close to within 54-46 at intermission.

The Rockets led, 76-70, going into the fourth quarter.

Mullin scores 38 as Warriors win

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Chris Mullin scored 38 points and the Golden State Warriors rallied to beat the Washington Bullets 127-119 Saturday night, their first victory at the Capital Centre in eight years.

Sarunas Marculionis scored 11 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter to help the Warriors (5-1) bounce back from their first defeat of the season, one night earlier in Philadelphia. Marculionis made 11 of 14 shots.

Pervis Ellison led Washington with 26 points and Harvey Grant had 22, but it wasn't enough to prevent the Bullets from having their seven-game home winning streak against the Warriors snapped. They hadn't lost at home against Golden State since Nov. 22, 1983.

Red Raiders rout Razorbacks

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech is relishing its role as spoiler.

The Red Raiders were knocked out of the race for the Cotton Bowl after several early-season losses. But Tech may have ruined Arkansas' chance for a Southwest Conference title on the eve of the Hogs' departure to the Southeastern Conference.

Tech (4-5, 3-3 in the SWC) gave Arkansas (5-4, 4-2) a harsh good riddance in a 38-21 rout Saturday behind Robert Hall, who threw for a touchdown and rushed for another score.

The Red Raiders had not beaten Arkansas at home since 1966. And Tech fans savored the moment, singing "Hey, hey, hey goodbye" in a spiteful sendoff for the Hogs, who will leave the SWC as a founding member for the SEC next year.

Tech grabbed the momentum midway through the first quarter when Steve Carr broke through Arkansas' offensive line and smothered Pete Raether's punt.

Shawn Jackson recovered for Tech at the Razorbacks' 40. Six plays later, Hall hit Rodney Blackshear with a bullet on a 9-yard slant for a touchdown, giving Tech a 10-0 lead.

Lin Elliott had blasted a 46-yard field goal into the wind for an early Tech field goal.

Tech went up 17-7 on a 12-yard touchdown run by Anthony Lynn in the second quarter. The Raiders padded the lead to 24-7 with five minutes left in the half after recovering a fumble by Tony Jeffery at the Hogs' 28. Three plays later, Byron Morris lugged the ball 13 yards into the end zone.

It appeared Tech would run away with the game, but the Razorbacks chipped away at the lead by pounding the ball at the heart of Tech's defense.

With only 11 seconds left in the half, Wade Hill lofted a 2-yard touchdown pass to Ron Dickerson to cap a 16-play, 80-yard drive, which included 10 runs up the middle.

Arkansas then pulled within 24-21 midway through the third quarter when Michael James took a punt at his own 25, zig-zagged through the first wave of tacklers and then sprinted up the sideline for a 75-yard touchdown return.

But Tech got two insurance touchdowns on a 1-yard sneak by Hall late in the third quarter and a 1-yard blast by Louis Sheffield early in the fourth quarter to give the Raiders an insurmountable 38-21 advantage.

Tech scored on four of its first five possessions to help pull away. Hall passed the ball at will between the 20-yard lines, and Tech's running backs gobbled up tough yardage close to the goal line as the Red Raiders rolled up 445 yards.

Hall finished 17-of-27 for 219 yards and one touchdown without an interception. A slippery scrambler, Hall continually eluded tacklers in the backfield to buy more time to spot receivers and rushed for 56 yards.

Morris led Tech rushers with 77 yards.

Hill, a sophomore quarterback, started for the Hogs in place of injured starter Jason Allen. Hill was 8-of-18 for 99 yards and one touchdown without an interception.

E.D. Jackson and Freddie Bradley led Arkansas' ground attack with 70 yards and 45 yards respectively. Bradley also had a 2-yard touchdown run.

Houston 23

Texas 14

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Cougars Saturday had to overcome an enemy more destructive than Texas' defense — themselves.

But David Klingler's clutch fourth quarter passing and a 32-yard field goal by Roman Anderson with 4:23 left in the game, helped the Cougars overcome their mistakes and beat the Longhorns, 23-14.

Klingler, sacked four times and intercepted once by the Longhorns, hit passes of 10, 10 and 13 yards to Marcus Grant and benefited from a 15-yard pass interference penalty against Mark Berry during the game-winning drive.

Klingler pulled a leg muscle in the fourth quarter and told his offensive line he needed maximum protection.

"I told the guys on the last drive 'don't make me run I can't go anywhere,'" said Klingler. "But anything it takes to win."

Houston's only loss in 1990 was a 45-24 decision to the Longhorns.

"Revenge is sweet, I feel we got a little on them today," said linebacker Ryan McCoy, who stopped Texas' Adrian Walker on fourth down at the Houston 16 that started the Cougar drive to the winning field goal.

Anderson's game winner made him the first 400-point scorer in NCAA history. He missed an extra point in the first quarter that ended a string of 136 consecutive conversions.

Texas fell to 4-4 and 3-2 in SWC games. Houston is 3-5, 2-3.

"This is a very disappointing loss," Texas coach David McWilliams said. "We just didn't execute on third or fourth down and then we missed three field goals. We didn't take advantage of our opportunities."

After Anderson's go-ahead field goal, Kevin Batiste intercepted a pass by Texas' Peter Gardere and the Cougars drove to a 1-yard touchdown run by Klingler with 14 seconds left in the game.

Prior to the late turnaround, Texas linebacker Boone Powell recovered two fumbles that produced 10 points and gave the Longhorns at 14-13 lead going into the fourth period.

Gardere rallied the Longhorns' offense in the second half after he was hit in the head and missed part of the first half.

"I didn't remember what happened right after I was knocked out of the game," Gardere said. "As an offense, we had opportunities and didn't take advantage of them."

Rice 31

SMU 10

DALLAS (AP) — Trevor Cobb, the nation's second leading rusher, scored two touchdowns and ran for 203 yards Saturday to carry the Rice Owls to a 31-10 Southwest Conference victory over Southern Methodist, the 24th consecutive league loss for the Mustangs.

Rice is 4-5 overall and 2-4 in the SWC while SMU dropped to 1-8 and 0-7.

It was the eighth time in nine games and the 15th time in his career that Cobb rushed for more than 100 yards.

Cobb, who ran the ball 41 times, has four 200 yard games. He was averaging 154.5 yards per game.

The Mustangs tried a psychological ploy of wearing red jerseys for the first time since 1978, but it still couldn't bring them their first SWC victory since 1986.

Before the 44-degree, chilled SMU homecoming crowd of 13,100, the Owls built a 17-3 halftime lead.

Lions, Rams tie, 39-39

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Walter Ransom's second touchdown run of the day, followed by a 2-point conversion, lifted Angelo State to a 39-39 tie with East Texas State on a wild, windblown Lone Star Conference game Saturday afternoon.

Angelo State's Rams, with a 20 mph wind at their back, jumped off to a 21-0 lead in the first quarter. But the Lions were even more formidable when they got the wind, scoring a school-record 32 points, including Billy Watkins' 53-yard field goal as time expired in the half.

Angelo State pulled to within 32-31 in the third quarter on Wilbur Odom's 11-yard pass to Darron Johnson and a 2-point PAT pass, followed by a safety.

Willie Mozeke's 1-yard run late in the third quarter padded the ETSU lead to 39-31, but Ransom scored from a yard out early in the fourth quarter to bring Angelo State to within 39-37. Odom threw to Kenneth Washington for the 2-point conversion that tied the game.

The tie jeopardized both teams' chances for the league title. Both are now 3-1-1 in league play. Angelo State is 5-3-1 overall, and East Texas State is 5-3-1.

After Ransom's 5-yard run for Angelo State's first score, Blaine Pederson returned an interception 24 yards and Joel Smith ran 4 yards for touchdowns.

No. 13 Vols shock No. 5 Fighting Irish

Notre Dame had been hoping for a national title, but...

"Whenever I go home, my mom teases me about my big butt. Today, that big butt paid off for us," said Tennessee defensive back Jeremy Lincoln, who used that portion of his anatomy to misdirect a last-second Notre Dame field goal and preserve the 13th-ranked Volunteers' 35-34 upset of the fifth-ranked Irish.

By overcoming a 31-7 Notre Dame lead at South Bend, Tennessee not only defied astronomical odds but also stomped into the middle of the bowl picture. Gone are Notre Dame's national title aspirations and the possibility of a shootout for No. 1 against the Florida State-Miami winner in the Fiesta Bowl.

Top-ranked Florida State beat South Carolina 38-10 and No. 2 Miami beat West Virginia 27-3 to set up a battle of Sunshine State unbeaten next Saturday.

Washington, co-No. 2 with Miami, improved to 9-0 by beating Southern Cal 14-3 while the Huskies' likely Rose Bowl opponent, No. 4 Michigan, moved within one game of clinching a trip to Pasadena by clobbering Northwestern 59-14.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz was downcast after his team's uncharacteristic fumble before the hometown fans.

"This is the most difficult loss I've ever been associated with," he said. "It's the most disappointed I've ever been in my life. It's very difficult to accept."

It's certainly difficult to believe, given that the Irish (8-2) were leading 31-7 seconds before halftime. Then Tennessee's Floyd Miley returned a blocked field goal 85 yards for a TD 14 seconds before intermission.

"Words can't express how satisfying this is," Miley said. "This will be the biggest victory in my life."

"I am so happy for the girls," said Smith. "The girls and I are both surprised they did so well, they're feeling real good right now. The hard work is starting to show up. They wanted to beat somebody, and they didn't know if they could. Now they know."

Big Spring's next meet will be

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — South Carolina quarterback Bobby Fuller (20) is overwhelmed by Florida State's defenseman Sterling Palmer (56) and Lonnie Jackson (85) in first half action Saturday.

Quarterback Andy Kelly threw for three TDs, the last to Aaron Hayden with 4:03 to play. Notre Dame moved 66 yards to the Tennessee 9 to set up a field goal attempt. With regular kicker Craig Henrich on the sidelines with a leg injury, Rob Leonard got the call and his attempt couldn't get past Lincoln.

week's game against Notre Dame by pummeling Maryland 47-7, and No. 10 Iowa took over sole possession of second place in the Big Ten with a 38-21 victory over No. 25 Indiana.

No. 11 Nebraska outscored Kansas 59-23 and No. 14 Colorado shaded Oklahoma State 16-12 to maintain a first-place tie in the Big Eight. The Orange Bowl, which gives its host berth to the Big Eight champion, has indicated it would take the higher-ranked team if the race ends in a tie.

In other games in the Second Ten, No. 16 East Carolina beat Southern Mississippi 48-20, No. 24 Virginia beat No. 18 North Carolina State 42-10, No. 19 Ohio State beat Minnesota 35-6, and No. 20 Oklahoma beat Missouri 56-16.

In later games, it was No. 15 Clemson at North Carolina and No. 22 UCLA at Stanford.

No. 1 Florida St. 38, S. Carolina 10

Finally, Florida State doesn't have to act as if it isn't looking ahead to playing Miami. Casey Weldon, who missed last week's game against Louisville with strained ligaments in his left knee, completed 19 of 28 passes for 184 yards and three touchdowns before retiring early in the final quarter at Tallahassee.

Weldon threw a 4-yard TD pass to Shannon Baker on the opening play of the second quarter to give Florida State a 10-0 lead. The touchdown was set up by Terrell Buckley's ninth interception of the season. A muffed punt gave Florida State another opportunity, and Weldon passed 18 yards to Amp Lee for a 17-0 lead. Weldon finished his day with a 20-yard scoring pass to William Floyd for the 38-10 margin with almost 14 minutes left in the game.

No. 2 Miami 27, W. Virginia 3
At Miami, the Hurricanes (8-0), averaging 37 points a game, had their first three possessions ended by an interception, a punt and a failed fourth-and-one run at their own 42. The Hurricanes finally broke through with a 70-yard touchdown drive capped by Gino Torretta's 12-yard pass to Lamar Thomas on third and goal.

No. 2 Washington 14, USC 3

At Los Angeles, Beno Bryant ran for 158 yards and two touchdowns and the defense came up with big plays for Washington (9-0). The Huskies' defense, the stingiest in the nation, gave up 305 yards to the Trojans, but stiffened each time after USC had driven to the 3, 15, 38 and 9.

No. 4 Michigan 59, Northwestern 14

At Ann Arbor, Mich., Desmond Howard caught four passes for 102 yards, one a 64-yard TD pass from Elvis Grbac, ran once for 18 yards, returned two kicks for 56 yards and returned three punts for 25 yards. Michigan (8-1 overall, 6-0 Big Ten) scored three touchdowns on its first seven plays, the first two coming just two minutes apart and requiring only 43 seconds.

No. 6 Florida 45, No. 23 Georgia 13

At Jacksonville, Shane Matthews threw for 303 yards and four touchdowns and Errict Rhett rushed for 124 yards and one TD for Florida (7-1), which three times before had the best record in the SEC but each time forfeited the title because of NCAA probation. Florida wins the title outright, and a trip to the Sugar Bowl, by beating Kentucky next week.

No. 7 California 27, Oregon St. 14

At Corvallis, Ore., Lindsey Chapman, playing in place of injured Russell White, rushed for two touchdowns as Cal improved to 8-1. White bruised a thigh in the first quarter and didn't play again. Chapman, a sophomore, carried 18 times for 110 yards, with TD runs of 2 and 13 yards.

Hawks

an 8-4 run with five minutes left on the clock. But the Hawks got back on track offensively and scored 15 to make it 46-26 at the half.

Murray State spent all of halftime in the locker room as the Hawks came out with about four minutes left in the intermission to warm up. The time in the locker room seemed to do the Aggies some good as they opened the second half with six straight points, keeping Howard College scoreless for the first two minutes.

The Hawks rebounded from this run by the Aggies to form one of their own, going on an 11-1 run to bring the score to 57-33 with a little over 13 minutes left in the ballgame.

Murray State then incorporated their pressure-style defense at this point and made the scoring a trade-off for the next five minutes. But with eight minutes left, Murray's head coach Dean Weaver had his team revert back to man-to-man, a mistake that he would later regret.

The Hawks exploited the change in the Aggies' defense — scoring the next nine points of the ballgame. Showtime soon followed for the fans as Mark Davis brought the house down with two straight break-away slams and six straight points for Howard College.

The Hawks ended up scoring 30 points after the change in defense came about as the Aggies could only muster nine, sending Murray State back to Tishomingo, Okla. with a 98-58 defeat.

Coach Kidder felt that the margin of victory was not what he expected his team to win by. "Well, I think the score was deceptive. They lost an emotional game last night to Midland and I think they were flat and they know they have a long trip home. We took the fire out of them the first half, stayed and competed hard and did a good job."

Howard College returns home Tuesday to face Ranger Junior College. Game time is 8 p.m.

MURRAY STATE (58) — Russell Ponds 4-13, 0-0; Chad Burden 5-8, 1-2; Cal Clinton 4-17, 1-2; T.J. McMillan 4-9, 1-2; Derrick Drew 4-12, 0-1; Jimmy Johnson 2-6, 0-4; Rick Jones 1-4, 1-1; Jim Stevenson 1-6, 0-0.

HOWARD COLLEGE (98) — Will Macon 9-16, 2-4; Chuckie Robinson 9-15, 1-2; Reco Burt 7-9, 3-6; Markee James 5-10, 2-2; Mark Davis 5-7, 2-3; Jason Hodges 4-9, 0-0; Ronnie Williams 3-3, 0-0; Marcus Iverson 1-3, 0-2; Andrew Tillman 0-3, 0-0.

HALFTIME — Howard College 46, Murray State 26.

Cowboys, Oilers set for Texas showdown

IRVING — Phoenix Cardinals wide receiver Ricky Proehl (87) fumbles the ball as Dallas Cowboys linebacker Jack Del Rio (55) makes the tackle in first quarter action in an earlier game. Today the 6-3 Cowboys battle the 7-2 Houston Oilers.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers play in the Astrodome Sunday in a Texas shootout that really isn't a shootout.

The Cowboys once called themselves America's team, and former coach Bum Phillips retaliated that the Oilers were Texas' team. They've competed for attention in the state, but no intense rivalry has developed over the years.

The Cowboys have a 6-3 record for the first time since 1986. Houston is 7-2 and has a seven-game Astrodome winning streak.

"With both teams in the same state, there's a natural rivalry because of the fans," Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman said. "Over the last few seasons we haven't played too well and that takes away from a rivalry. Hopefully, that part will change."

They've played only six times in regular season with the Oilers winning the last meeting 25-17 in 1988. Dallas leads the series 4-2.

The two teams play for the Governor's Cup in preseason and they scrimmage twice during training camp, but it's hard to get intense about a game that doesn't count, Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said.

"It hasn't been what you'd call a heated rivalry because we don't play each other every year except in the preseason," Johnson said. "I know the Cowboy people have tremendous respect for Houston over the years and what they've done this year."

The rivalry may mean more personally to Houston coach Jack Pardee, who battled the Cowboys as a player for the Los Angeles Rams and the Washington Redskins.

"They were called America's Team and they were the first with the computers and we had the work ethic," Pardee said. "We wanted to beat the computers."

The Cowboys have won all three games played in the Astrodome. The Oilers are 4-0 at home this season.

Oilers defensive coordinator Jim Eddy calls the Cowboys' offense the most improved in football.

"They've got the No. 1 receiver, the top runner, the tight end Jay Novacek and the quarterback is the up-and-coming quarterback in all of football," Eddy said. "He's passing the ball at a 65.9 percent clip. We've got our work cut out for us."

Dallas running back Emmitt Smith leads the NFC with 82 rushing yards on 186 carries and eight touchdowns. Aikman is third in the NFC with a 86.3 quarterback rating and Michael Irvin has 74 receiving yards to lead the NFL.

The Cowboys also have a difficult assignment against the Oilers' defense, vastly improved from last year. The Oilers defense ranked first in the AFC and seventh in the NFL in total defense. The Oilers have an AFC high 15 interceptions.

Houston quarterback Warren Moon leads the NFL with 213 completions, 349 attempts and 2,533 yards. Moon has thrown 13 interceptions this season compared to 13 for all of last season.

"I know I've got to be more consistent with my passing," Moon said. "They are taking away our deep routes and forcing us to go underneath. You have to throw a perfect pass to get it downfield."

Haywood Jeffires leads the NFL with 53 catches for 614 yards and four touchdowns. Drew Hill is the team's all-time receiving leader with 6,915 yards.

Raiders need win over Broncos to get back into divisional race

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

There are plenty of good teams in the NFL this season. Problem is, there aren't many good races.

Washington, Buffalo, Houston and New Orleans each lead their divisions by three full games. No real suspense there.

Then there's the AFC West. Denver is one game ahead of Kansas City, with Seattle and the Los Angeles Raiders just two games back.

On Sunday, the Broncos (7-2) will be home for the Raiders (5-4).

"We're in first place and we have a chance to put the team that won the division (last year) three games back," Denver coach Dan Reeves said. "That doesn't happen very often. It doesn't matter whether it's the Raiders, Kansas City, Seattle or San Diego — when you've got a chance to bury somebody, that's what you have to do."

Chicago is the other division leader, one game ahead in the NFC Central after beating second-place Detroit last week.

Otherwise, the chase is for wild-card spots.

This week, Washington, the only undefeated team in the NFL, will try to move to 10-0 when it plays host to Atlanta. Elsewhere, it's Kansas City at the Los Angeles Rams, Detroit at Tampa Bay, Dallas at Houston, Buffalo at Green Bay, Seattle at San Diego and Philadelphia at Cleveland.

Also, the winless Indianapolis

Colts, without suspended Eric Dickerson, play at the New York Jets, the New York Giants are at Phoenix, San Francisco is at New Orleans, Pittsburgh is at Cincinnati and New England is at Miami.

On Monday night, Chicago is at Minnesota.

NFL Roundup

The Broncos will try to run away from the Raiders, and have a lot of players ready to rush.

Gaston Green, who leads Denver with 554 yards, is expected back after missing three games because of an injured thigh muscle. Bobby Humphrey, who has carried only six times since ending his holdout, also should see more action.

That means rookie Greg Lewis is now a third-stringer. He ran for 111 yards last week in a 20-13 win over Pittsburgh.

"They've got guys who can really run the football now," Raiders coach Art Shell said. "They've got this kid Lewis, who's really running well, and Gaston may play this week, and now they've got Bobby Humphrey back in the fold. So they've got an abundance of running backs, and John (Elway) is still making big plays."

Elway is the AFC's fourth-ranked passer, having thrown for 1,919 yards, seven touchdowns and three interceptions. He also has run for four touchdowns, double the Raiders' entire total.

Rookie Nick Bell has the Raiders' only two rushing TDs, but was put on the injured reserve list last week with a rib injury. Veteran Marcus Allen was expected to be activated off the injured list to face Denver; he's been sidelined since he sprained a ligament in his right knee in the season opener.

Dickerson, fourth in NFL career rushing, won't be running anywhere soon. He was suspended by the Colts for four weeks on Thursday, a day after he left practice.

"He took himself out and, basically, it was a refusal to finish practice," Colts coach Rick Venturi said. "I don't have a ton of rules. The important thing to me is how you play when you come to work, which is in practice."

Dickerson was suspended without pay and fined an additional week's pay. All told, the penalties could cost him almost $600,000 of the $2 million he was due to earn.

Dickerson was suspended for six weeks last year for refusing to take a physical exam.

At 0-9, the Colts are the only winless team. The Giants, at 4-5, are doing better than that, but don't look anything like the team that won last season's Super Bowl.

The Giants lost 30-7 in Philadelphia on Monday night, their worst non-strike loss since 1980. The week before, they lost 17-13 to Washington.

VETERANS REMEMBER

By LINDA CHOATE
Lifestyle Editor

Veterans Day means many things to many people.

The meaning of this day runs deep for the veterans. The memories are bitter-sweet and some things are better off forgotten.

A few veterans at the VA Medical Center in Big Spring shared some of their recollections on the eve of Veterans Day.

Mr. J.B. Ward was born in Eufaley, Okla. and came to Big Spring in 1952. Prior to his move here, Ward served for four years in the United States Army during World War II.

"I was an anti-aircraft machine gunner in the 420th Field Artillery Unit," said Ward.

He trained in the United States and Hawaii and then went on to serve in the South Pacific. "Our mission was to go onto an island and take it back from the Japanese," said Ward. "Every time we moved on to another island, I was just sure that I wouldn't make it off this one alive. I wasn't a Christian then, but I sure prayed a lot."

Ward stayed in the South Pacific until August 1945. Upon his arrival back in the states, Ward and his buddies were not met with fanfare. "When we got home there were no bands, just a bus, a camp, and a steak waiting for us. But that was enough. We were real glad to be home again," he said.

Ward doesn't keep up with the politics of war anymore. "I never was much interested in any of it after the war. I figured Al Capone was out of business so nobody needed a machine gunner anymore," he said.

73-year-old W.H. "Bud" Frink served 22 years in the Navy. He was involved in WWII and the Korean War.

Frink was center gun captain on the No. 1 gun turret on the USS Indianapolis during the bombing of Pearl Harbor. "On the morning of Dec. 7 we were 150 miles away from the harbor on Johnston Island. We were teaching the civilians how to set up a radar station there," said Frink.

"The minute we heard the news of the bombing we turned around and headed back. It took us a day to get there. When we arrived everything was on fire. It was our duty to go and help retrieve the dead and wounded."

During war time the USS Indianapolis could carry as many as 1,300 troops. "After we left Pearl Harbor we went to San Diego to pick up troops and transport them to Melbourne, Australia to clear out the Japanese in the northern part of that country," said Frink.

In 1944 Frink went to deep sea diving school and then went on to work as a diver for the Navy. Frink and his fellow divers were trained to rescue men who had become trapped in sunken submarines. Using a diving bell, which would attach to the sub and create a vacuum, the rescuers could bring up as many as seven men at a time.

When the Korean War came along, Frink worked as an underwater demolitions expert.

"One of our jobs was to clear away the obstructions put there by the enemy so our ships could make it onto the beaches. Another task was to destroy the enemies food supply," said Frink.

"We would dive and wire explosives to the massive nets they used to snag seafood. When we blew up these nets that would stop a major source of food coming in."

Frink still attends the annual reunion of the USS Indianapolis in Indianapolis, Ind. "It was the last big ship to be sunk in WWII. We lost 1,100 men," recalls Frink. "If there are any men around from the Indianapolis I'd like to tell them to come visit anytime."

Ralph Brooks was in the United States Air Force for 22 years. He served as the right wingman in the elite flying team of the Thunderbirds from 1961 to 63.

Brooks also fought in the Vietnam War. Stationed in Da Nang, he served as the squadron commander and flew 135 combat missions in an F-4 Phantom jet fighter.

"We helped the ground troops by providing close air support. Our mission was to keep the enemy off their backs," said Brooks. "These planes carried 520-millimeter cannons that were capable of shooting 30,000 rounds per minute. That could mow a hole in a building, and it could sure make the trees fall."

"The best thing I can remember about the war was the camaraderie and integrity of the men that I served with. We lost some good people."

Brooks keeps a close eye on the current activities of the political arena. "I thought our men did a marvelous job in the Persian Gulf. They should have kept on pushing towards Baghdad to clean house," he said.

92-year-old George Neubrough was the youngest of 11 children. He graduated with the very first class at the Texas Military Academy in San Antonio in 1920 and went on to study at Stanford and Harvard.

Neubrough was professor of the English Department at Norwich University in Vermont for 37 years. "When the war (WWII) broke out, the military had plenty of troops but very few men to lead them. This caught the war department by surprise. At Norwich we trained these men," he said. "We taught them how to lead others."

"It's hard for some people to get up and speak in front of others. We taught them public speaking skills and other things that would help them lead their troops."

Neubrough still hears from many of the students he taught through all those years.

Howell Gerhard spent three years in Hawaii and the South Seas, and was at Hickam Field the day the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

Gerhard had just come off guard duty and gone to bed at 6 a.m. He was awakened two hours later by the terrible noise of bombs.

"The barracks were on fire and the screens were burning. A bomb had come down through the roof. We had taken a direct hit," said Gerhard in a recent interview for 'M' magazine. "Looking out the window I could see the Rising Sun on the planes and the smiles on the pilot's faces."

Gerhard would later have the grim task of helping retrieve the dead and transport them to the gymnasium, which served as a temporary morgue.

What the flag means to me

The flag means a sign of freedom to me. It makes me proud to live in this fabulous country of the United States of America. It reminds me of the brave soldiers who fought to make this country as wonderful as it is.

The flag also means a sign of bravery to me. It makes me remember all of the bravery that this country has had when it has gone into wars or conflicts.

Sometimes I should think about what the colors of my flag mean. Red stands for the courage and bravery of the soldiers who fought and died for this country. Blue stands for the truth of this mighty country. White stands for the purity and innocence that my country has.

My pledge of allegiance has a meaning of great significance, too. "I pledge allegiance," means to honor and respect my country. "To the flag," means to the great symbol of freedom. "Of the United States of America," means to this wonderful country we live in. "The Republic for which it stands," means and to every person in this country and his or her moral values. "One Nation under God," means one nation whose thoughts are of God. "Indivisible," means which cannot be divided. "With liberty and justice for all," means with freedom and courage for every fine person of this country.

My flag has thirteen stripes — seven red and six white. There is one stripe for each of the first thirteen colonies. There are fifty white stars on a field of deep blue. Each star represents one of the fifty states.

Each time I see my flag, it makes me proud to be an American. My country may not be perfect, but it is still the best in the world. It makes me very angry when I see or hear of people burning the flag. People like that should have more respect for the veterans who fought and died to give us the freedom that we have in this country. After all, the flag is a symbol of freedom.

English relations visit Big Spring

Visitors from Manchester, Eng., must have felt right at home here Thursday as they packed up on one of Big Spring's uncommonly gray, misty days to catch their return flight.

Dorothy Binns and her son, Kevin, had been visiting her sister, Lynn, and Jack Thorpe.

The Thorpes met their British kin in Dallas last week to see the sights there, including Billy Bob's and the new JFK Museum, and dine at some of the fine restaurants.

When they returned to Big Spring, Hazel Jones hosted a dinner party at K-C Steak House in honor of the visitors.

In addition to the honoree, Dorothy and Kevin, others attending were Jack and Lynn; their daughter, Carol, and Rory Speaker with young Nicole; and Hazel.

Kevin, a chef in Manchester, had kudos for Texas' food, and in fact, said he'd like to return here to pursue his profession!

The famous First Monday Trades Day in Canton was the destination last weekend of four Big Spring residents and a visitor.

Penny Hollar, Maureen Haddad and Elizabeth Williams drove to Canton and met Kaye Davidson and her sister, Carrol Sawyer, who has been visiting from Sheridan, Ark.

It was the first trip to the "world's largest flea market" for Kaye, and she says "I just loved it!"

Tidbits

Even though "it was a freezing day, we had a wonderful time," reports Penny. She bought some handmade decorations for the upcoming holidays.

Dee and Bobbie Thomas were houseguests last weekend at the Lake LBJ home of Bill and Muriel Barmore near New Braunfels.

The two couples took in the UT-Tech football game in Austin.

Bill and Muriel have retired to their lake home after living in Pasadena for many years. The former Muriel Floyd is a 1946 graduate of BSHS.

Wade and Sandy Burroughs have been hosting visitors from St. Louis, Mo.

Sandy's brother, Ray Virgen, and his wife, Charlene, and son, Andy, 10, left Wednesday after a five-day stay.

The group booked a condo on Canyon Lake for a few days and took in the annual Wursthfest festival in New Braunfels.

Walter and Frances Wheat went sight-seeing in Washington, D. C., recently after attending the annual furniture market in High Point, N. C.

It was Walter's first visit to the nation's capitol. The Wheats toured the national monuments and the Smithsonian Institute, and drove by the White House.

"We couldn't get in to see the White House," says Frances. "There was a state dinner underway."

Walter and Frances went out to dinner one night with our town's Denise Crenwelge, press aide to Cong. Charles Stenholm. Denise is the daughter of Joe and Elizabeth Crenwelge.

Gus and Phyllis Graumann have been showing the town to their granddaughter, Betsy Hoven, Minneapolis, Minn.

"The time passed so fast," said Phyllis, "that we really had to hurry up the last day to crowd in all the places and friends we wanted her to see."

Betsy was to spend a few days in Dallas visiting Beth Graumann Kitzman before returning home. Betsy heard that the weather awaiting her in Minneapolis was freezing temperature and snow, with traffic moving "about 10 blocks per hour!"

Oral history preserves more than words

Snowbird is a first class ski and summer resort just outside Salt Lake City, Utah. It sits at 8,000 feet in the Wasatch Range where the air is clean and the mountains offer excellent scenery.

Since the area gets more than 500 inches of dry light snow per season, skiing is offered at Snowbird from mid-November to mid-June.

Deep, light powder is available for the more experienced skiers, but novices and intermediates can be accommodated on machine-worked runs which offer easy cruising.

Chairlifts take skiers up the steep slopes. An aerial tram is another option.

I was at Snowbird the second week of October and on the ride from the airport to the resort I was treated to an array of color that rivals any fall scene in New England.

The aspen were quaking in the mountain breeze, their yellow and gold leaves brilliant in the sunshine. Sumac provided a rich, deep red while other trees displayed autumn shades of rust and orange. Entire mountainsides were covered in color.

I was at Snowbird to hold a workshop during the annual meeting of the National Oral History Association. Nearly 300 people from all over the US, Canada, India, Australia and other places on the globe attended. One woman from Moscow told about recording interviews with women political prisoners in the Soviet Union.

Most of the people at the conference are associated with a University, museum or library. One lady I met who works for the Chicago Art Institute was doing extensive interviews (ten to twelve hours long) with architects in Chicago from the turn of the century until the outbreak of World War Two.

One of the participants from New York, an anthropologist, has a company called "Your Life Story" and takes people on a journey through their lives, getting the interviews to recall their experiences. She videotapes the interviews, transcribes them into a written oral history and presents both the tape and the written material to the customer.

A twenty-three old computer whiz from the University of Alaska demonstrated a program he designed to store and retrieve the taped interview, the transcribed script and photo of the subject being interviewed.

I was impressed with the various things being done in oral history around the country and the world. I noticed, however, that most of the talk was centered around the best way to get the recorded material off the tape and onto paper.

In an exhibit room, there were approximately fifty companies selling things. Most of them were publishers offering books on oral history. There were only three exhibitors selling tapes. One firm, Marantz, demonstrated a line of cassette tape recorders.

Oral histories serve a purpose. They preserve not only the memories of people from different cultures, but the accents, colloquialisms, expressions, idioms, rhythms and flavors, those subtle qualities that form the pattern and texture of American speech.

I was shocked to learn that most of the recorded interviews were transcribed onto paper and the cassettes were put in a drawer or on a shelf and forgotten. Then the written transcript was put on a shelf and forgotten.

The world of Academe seems content enough to just have the interviews. Whether they are ever used seems unimportant to most of the PHD's doing all of the cataloging and storing of the taped interviews.

So who is benefitting from all this work being done in oral history?

Oral historians need to realize that in the rush to get the taped words onto paper they are missing the whole purpose of getting recorded interviews. The interviews themselves need to find an audience.

Radio is the perfect medium for oral history. So is the theater. I was glad to see that some groups in Kentucky were recording interviews with older people and presenting on stage vignettes of life based on the interviews. Some complete plays are being written based on the recorded oral histories.

Oral history should be the same age as the tape recorder, which was developed a hundred years ago. Some primitive recordings were made in 1930. The first recordings on magnetic tape came during World War Two.

It was an entrepreneurial spirit that got the recording business where it is today. I think that same spirit needs to be applied to oral history.

Residents celebrate reunions

Twenty-three relatives attended the J.F. Hechler family reunion on Oct. 13 at noon in the home of James Hicks, Sand Springs. Clara Black, 85, was the eldest and Robert Conway of Big Spring the youngest at four years.

Melvin and Lorraine Hechler of Wenatchee, Washington, traveled the furthest to attend.

Family members attended also from Brownwood and Luther. Dominoes were played after supper namely 84 and 42.

Lennis Couch and daughters, Martha and Annette of Lubbock, attended the Ross family reunion in Sweetwater on Oct. 6 in Sweetwater at the Holiday Inn.

Luther Mikkie Harrington

Asa and Louise Couch of Birmingham, Alabama, traveled the furthest to attend.

The Asa Couches then visited Lennis while attending Asa's 40th Big Spring High School class reunion. Asa was in the homecoming parade with his former fellow classmates, sitting on a bale of hay one of which covered an 18 wheeler. The couple attended reunion activities climaxed by a banquet for the alumni in the Howard College Tumbleweed Room.

After attending church services in Big Spring and meeting Lennis Oct. 13 for lunch, Asa and Louise left for home. They stopped at Breckenridge due to an illness and finally started back home the 15th.

Arriving home the 16th, and receiving news of the death of a relative, returned to the area for Mary Lou Couch funeral the 18th after which they returned home.

Sewell and Betty Couch of Kansas City, Missouri, visited Lennis Saturday afternoon October 19 following his mother's funeral.

Neva has been employed at the

MR. AND MRS. ROY SHAFFER

Kid's Shop since 1982. The Shaffer's are active members of Trinity Baptist Church. Neva has been secretary of the auditorium Sunday school class for 45 years.

The couple commented that they have a good marriage that includes a lot of give and take.

Homecoming '91 notes

By BARBIE LELEK

October 25 was a special day for many as it was Homecoming 1991! The excitement, however, started Thursday with a car caravan and parade. Each class entered a float which was judged and revealed Friday evening at the football game. The CHS band also performed. A bonfire was held immediately following the parade. Friday morning an exciting pep rally started the day that many will remember for a long time. The Homecoming Queen were introduced, they were Jennifer Munoz, Brenda Espinoza, Tracy Hoover, Jodi Ellis and Rachel Coronado.

Friday night the lucky young lady was crowned queen. She is Tracy Hoover. The winners of the float contest were also announced. First place, junior class, their float had a huge glue bottle with the quotation "make glue out of the Broncos"; second place, senior class; third, sophomore class and 4th place, freshmen class.

Two teen-age vigilantes armed with submachine guns prepare for a nightly patrol in the slums of Medellín, the second largest Colombian city, earlier this year. The girl at left is 14 years old. The vigilantes say they have killed 200 gang members.

Teens with machine guns patrol against gangs

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP) — Vigilantes armed with pistols and automatic weapons prepared for their nightly patrol in slums where gangs once raped, robbed and murdered at will.

A frail brunette shoved a clip into an Ingram submachine gun, pulled the bolt back, released it and smiled as it slid forward, rammng a bullet into the chamber.

She is 14, one of the youngest. Some in the squad are as old as 17.

Police and other government agencies largely ignore the poor neighborhoods of Colombian cities. The Medellín vigilantes began operating a year ago and now number about 8,000.

"Almost every day at any time, morning, afternoon or late at night, gangs struggling for control of our neighborhood would fight it out in the streets," Luz Marina Torre, 30, said in an interview. "Bullets would be flying all over the place."

Girls were raped in the streets in daylight. Store owners who resisted extortion were shot in front of customers. Doors and windows were slammed shut at sundown. Streets were virtually deserted at night.

National police say 4,637 people were murdered last year in Medellín, where 40 percent of the 2.5 million people live in slums. Most of the murders involved gangs.

Slum areas appear safer now. Residents of one neighborhood visited by The Associated Press said there were no more gun battles in the streets, robberies were fewer and merchants were not being extorted by the gangs.

The leader of the vigilantes said in an interview that gangs still controlled about 25 percent of the Medellín slums.

Generally, the city is more violent than ever. No official statistics are available for this year, but a ranking police official said the rate of killings is about 25 a day, roughly twice that of last year.

Most of the deaths occur in battles between vigilantes and street gangs and among leftist guerrillas, right wing death squads and drug traffickers fighting for supremacy.

Mrs. Torre, like thousands of others, is a victim of the gangs.

Her brother was shot to death in 1989 for his watch and sneakers. Then on June 19 of that year, Father's Day in Colombia, robbers shot her husband down in front of the neighborhood as he walked home from work at 7 p.m.

Several years ago, police tried to patrol the slums. When a policeman was killed, other officers would take revenge on an entire neighborhood.

Drug traffickers offer youngsters jobs in their armies or as contract killers and the boys also use their guns to rob, Perez said.

Small stores were subjected to weekly extortion for years, he said, and added: "A boy growing up in a slum has two choices now, joining the gangs or the vigilantes."

Where will it end? Perhaps it won't.

So far this year, the vigilantes have killed about 200 criminals, said their leader, who would not identify himself for fear of arrest.

After a year of study, the government came up with this solution: Create the job of adviser to the president on the situation in Medellín and get the poor neighborhoods organized to do more for themselves.

"Over the river and through the woods" for many children of divorced parents signifies where he child will be spending the holidays because of visitation arrangements.

Holiday visits and the accompanying disruptions can cause children anxiety and stress. Communication is the key to helping families get through these anxious times.

A child may need to discuss certain subjects with one or both parents before he leaves home, including his feelings of abandoning the parent back home, travel plans (both the child's and the absent parent's), sleeping arrangements, how and where the holiday will be celebrated and who else (including stepfamily members) will be present during the visit.

Help preschoolers start their own holiday calendar several weeks prior to holiday separation to let them know how many more days they have before leaving, make how long the visit will be and identify the day of return. Time and order are important to some children and tend to eliminate some anxiety of holiday visitation while providing a "comfort zone within which to operate."

Allow a child to call home. Set limits on the number or the time allowed to talk if the calls become excessive. On the other hand, constant calling may be a cue to discuss with a former spouse problems you can identify.

children want to be involved in their children lives. Holiday visits are an excellent way to show children that both parents still love them and are still there. Many step-families enjoy having the "other kids" there too.

Even though other families seem happier or less complicated than your own family, it's never too late to create good memories together. As the Holiday season nears, traditions from our past, present and future begin to surface. Traditions can have a stabilizing influence, even during periods of great change.

Traditions are normally things that happen on some cycle because they are important. They usually evolve from an already established event. Holidays and special family anniversaries are peak times for starting or continuing family traditions.

Because every family is special, it is unique in the expectations of the people in various roles, its history of development and its relationships with other families. A bond that families from generation-to-generation share is a family tradition. Getting together for reunions, holiday dinners, birthday or religious celebrations, camp outs or barbecues, calling home on holidays and watching ball games with assigned seats for opposing teams. Traditions emphasize the uniqueness of a family and create a warmth and closeness that outsiders may not understand nor practice.

There are traditions in every family. If you think there aren't any in yours, it's probably because you call them something else. Traditions don't just make your family traditional; traditions make your family special.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

The visited parent should avoid the temptation to provide a "magical holiday" and squeeze too much into one short visit. Feeling obligated to have a "good time" tires everybody out. Sharing everyday activities, like fixing breakfast, allows special time together for parent and child.

Grandparents also need to heed the warnings about over-indulgence when the child-of-divorce is with them for the holidays.

Good genes, good sense give long and happy life

DEAR ABBY: This upbeat piece was written by my aunt, Marie R. Beatty of Denver. She wrote it for her family, but I think it deserves a wider audience. I hope you can find the space to use it. — MARCIE THOMPSON, PEPPER PIKE, OHIO

DEAR MARCIE: I MADE the space, and thank you for sending it. PLUS — SO WHAT!

"People ask me how I can be so contented living alone. I am almost 84. First, I never really feel alone. There's so much life around me, I don't even eat alone. I have a tiny television set on my breakfast table, and I still live in the same house I lived in when my husband was alive.

"I find life very interesting. I can hardly wait to read my daily newspaper and the magazines I get. I want to live forever — just to see what will happen!

"A bridge game now and then helps to keep my mind alert. So does keeping a diary and a scrapbook.

"I have a new project, a la Grandma Moses. I'm writing stories. It's fun, whether they're published or not.

Dear Abby

"I think a person's attitude has more to do with staying young than genes. Of course, it's important to eat sensibly. (Even George Burns drinks prune juice!) And a little daily exercise is also necessary. I have an arthritic knee, so I can't take long walks. Instead, I exercise in bed just before I get up in the morning. First, I thank God that I'm alive, then I concentrate on the GOOD things that will happen that day. Is there a better way to start the day?

"I think older people should do their share of entertaining — even if it's only homemade cookies and tea.

"Sometimes the rain gets in my way; then I remind myself that others may need it, so I put on my red raincoat and go out.

"Family is important. And how wonderful to have a grandchild call you a 'good sport.' "It doesn't bother me if I forget something. Children are the best forgetters in the world.

"I consider getting older a triumph, but I want to keep on learning. There is so much to learn!

"At night I say, 'Thank you, God, for everything. If I didn't accept all the good things I was offered, it wasn't your fault; they were there. I'll be around tomorrow.' Then I fall asleep. — MARIE BEATTY

"P.S. Perhaps I should have waited until I was 90 to write this, but I just couldn't wait to express myself. I expect to be around for a while; my mother lived to be 96."

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think that this is a dumb question. My mother serves fish all the time and tells us that fish is brain food. I told her that it isn't true — it's only a myth. I have asked everyone in our family and they say that Mother is right, but I still think she's wrong. Tell me, Abby, is eating a lot of fish going to make a person smarter? — A KID IN ROSWELL, GA.

DEAR KID: First of all, there are no "dumb" questions — only people who remain ignorant because they haven't the courage to ask questions.

It is not true that fish is "brain food." According to The Dictionary of Misinformation by Tom Burnam: "Perhaps the myth that fish is 'good for the brain' arose from the fact that the nerve tissue which forms a part of the brain is rich in phosphorus, and fish do provide phosphorus-containing compounds. But so do meat, poultry, eggs and milk."

I know of no food that will make people smarter. Fatter, yes. Smarter, no.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (Postage is included.)

DENNIS WALSTON DOES THE LIMBO

'King Limbo' gets recognition

FEDERAL WAY, Wash. (AP) — After a seven-month wait, Dennis Walston has won official recognition for what he does best — dancing under a flaming bar just 6 inches off the ground.

Walston, 46, whose professional name is "King Limbo," believed he had smashed an 18-year-old limbo dancing world record in March. But to find out for sure, he had to wait until last week, when the 1992 edition of the Guinness Book of World Records arrived in book stores. His name is listed on page 184.

"I thanked God with my hands up in the air and I cried. I'm still so excited," Walston said Monday as he practiced his limbo act in his apartment in Federal Way, about 25 miles south of Seattle.

Walston stages a show featuring Latin, African and Caribbean styles of dance. His finale is to limbo beneath a bar aflame with lamp oil.

Walston is working on getting dance lessons going for children. "Any time you have a special gift like this, you have to share it with others," he said.

Walston, who is 5 feet 7 1/2 inches tall and weighs 142 pounds, is able to pass under a bar barely higher than a soft drink can by waddling on the inside of his feet and sucking in his chest. His record was set at the annual Kent Kids Day on March 2.

The previous record of 6 1/8 inches was set in Toronto in 1973 by a 15-year-old girl.

Walston said he has limboed as low as 5 1/2 inches. But he won't attempt that height in public until someone beats his official record.

"This is a big world, so you never know who is going to go after what you have done," he said. "I'm just going to make sure they have to work hard for it."

Rover rip-off

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — He's cute. He's cuddly. And he's a kleptomaniac.

No one knows the name of the stray dog that began showing up last week at the Anchorage home of Dennis and Nancy Downs.

They named him Rover and put a blanket outside their front gate, along with water and dog food.

In return, the wayward mutt with no identification has retrieved the newspaper every morning since last Wednesday.

Problem is, the Downs don't subscribe. "I guess he feels like everyone else gets a paper and we should, too," Dennis Downs said.

Sometimes, Rover brings back more than one. On Friday morning, he piled three newspapers next to the gate.

"We called around to see if anyone was missing their paper, but everyone had theirs," Nancy Downs said. "When you reach down to pick them up, he looks at you like he's just done you a favor."

The Downs already have a dog, so they're looking for a home for Rover.

Neighbors, meanwhile, are keeping an eye on their newspapers.

Coahoma has new correspondent

By NOEL HOWELL

Hello, I am glad to introduce the new Coahoma and Sand Springs news column which I will be writing. We will be looking forward to you letting me know about weddings, anniversaries, reunions, vacations, special trips, awards or anything else which may be of interest to our readers.

The Coahoma High School Class favorites for 1991-92 were recently chosen and they are Mike Knowles and Angela Henry for the senior class; Greg Atkinson and Janet Sherman for the junior class. Eric Gang and Eva Hernandez were selected from the sophomore class with Justin Wood and Elizabeth Hernandez picked as favorites of the freshmen class. Congratulations!

Drew Bell and Denise Walker have been chosen to receive the Optimist Youth Appreciation Award at a breakfast on Nov. 13. Four FFA members from Coahoma will be going to Kansas City, Kansas on the week of Nov. 11-15. They are Katie Cobb, Jimmy Hobdy, Jason Grigg and Cody Wells. We are looking forward to hearing of their trip. Our hat is off to these fine young people.

Also at Coahoma High School, the junior class is selling M&Ms to raise money for the prom and the FHA is selling cookbooks as a fundraiser. Your support of these young student is always appreciated.

Rob and Marie Ethridge recently returned from a trip to Branson, Mo. They were accompanied by Rob's brother Joe and his wife. Rob said it was a great trip which he would recommend to everybody. They took in 12 Country and Western Shows which were performed by Ray Price, Glen Campbell, Moe Bandy, and Ray Stevens to name a few. Another Coahoma resident, Mildred Menser and her sister, Bonnie Mims of Big Spring were also at who have never played basketball. Plans are underway and any group wanting to enter should contact Doyle Fowler, Howard College Hawks, it's time to worry.

The meeting ended with a program by Buddy Anderson, some said on a rather sour note (a musical note, that is), who attempted to get all of the fellow Lions to join him in singing several songs. Apparently there were not many singers in the group, but they had fun trying.

Guy Teague, secretary of the Sand Springs Lion's Club reports that the Lion's Club District Governor, Mr. Paul Palmer will visit them at their building on Scout Hut Road on Nov. 18 at 6:30 p.m. A Lion's Club Zone Meeting will be held there on the following Tuesday, Nov. 19.

Call and let me know what is going on so I can pass it along. My deadline is Wednesday at noon. I'll be looking forward to hearing from you and have a great week.

Breaking bread with one's own children

Why would scads of employees all need to ask their bosses for extended lunch hours at the same time? Why would entire school systems allow their schedules to be thrown into chaos? Why would an elementary school principal willingly moonlight as a maitre d'?

The answer of course, is because of National School Lunch Week. During that week, parents, grandparents and significant others are invited to break bread with the children at the school cafeteria.

Believe it or not, this week of celebration has been known to pass with only a minimum of fanfare. For this reason, I decided to play inquiring reporter. Positioning myself on a busy street corner, I asked passersby the following question: "What do you consider to be the most meaningful aspect of National School Lunch Week?"

Of those interviewed, 26 percent said, "Duh, I dunno," 73 percent told me to get out of their way, two elderly gentlemen asked if there were any more at home like me and one cop told me to move it or lose it.

Christina Ferchalk

There has to be a reason for National School Lunch Week. It would be logical to assume that its purpose is to familiarize parents with the fare served in school cafeterias. Will all those who attended American schools during the last half of this century and are unfamiliar with cafeteria food please raise your hands?

There has to be another reason. Maybe the purpose is to enlighten parents about the changes that have taken place in the school lunch program.

There have been changes: They serve tacos now.

Whatever the reason for its being, it is of great importance to the children. Because I have three kids in elementary school, I had to put in an appearance on three consecutive days. My kids informed me that failure to be present on any of those days would be considered grounds for my dismissal.

I don't get it. I sit down to the evening meal with those kids every blessed night. More often than not, they ask if they can eat in front of the TV, out on the porch or with the cat. But during school lunch week, my company is not only welcome, it's mandatory.

My kids found it necessary to prep me before my visit.

"Don't go asking for the salt shaker, Mom," my daughter warned. "We don't get stuff like salt and pepper. You wouldn't believe what we had to go through before they let us have ketchup."

My son issued an edict: "These are the rules, Mom. No hugging, no kissing and no sweet talk. I'm in fourth-grade now, so don't go callin' me your little buttercup and junk like that."

I assimilated all information and did my children proud. I only slipped up once, when I asked another parent if she had any concealed secutive days. My kids informed me that failure to be present on any of those days would be considered grounds for my dismissal.

I assimilated all information and did my children proud. I only slipped up once, when I asked another parent if she had any concealed salt packets she'd be willing to share. Actually not that much was required of me. All I had to do was show up, stand in line and eat. I can do that.

Such was not the case for our elementary school principal, Ken Letso. He had to supervise the whole shebang. Every day for five days, he showed parents where to sit, cautioned us about talking with our mouths full and advised us on proper tray-dumping procedures. By week's end, he had that rode-hard-and-put-away-wet look.

The cafeteria workers were real troopers. Talk about grace under pressure! Along about Wednesday, their eyes started to glaze over. I don't think the poor dears were able to register pain after that.

Please note that not once in this column did I do a school cafeteria rubber chicken joke. This was not an oversight. I've been putting food on the table for my family for more than 20 years, and as far as I'm concerned, any meal I don't have to cook or clean up after is a good meal!

Food drive begins

The Boy Scouts of the Lone Star District will conduct their annual "Good Turn Food Drive" in Big Spring, Coahoma, and Sand Springs on Nov. 16, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Please place your contribution of non-perishable food items in the plastic bag (labeled Don's IGA) found in today's Big Spring Herald; hang it on your door or place it on your front porch by 9 a.m. Donations also may be dropped off anytime between 9-3 at the big white horse trailer (courtesy of Lee's Rentals) located on the old Box parking lot. Should we miss your contribution, please call 263-3752.

All food collected in this drive will be divided equally between the Salvation Army and the Northside Community Center. Boy Scouts believe hunger is unacceptable in our society, and they want to help people in our city.

Clem Jones, project chairman, said, "The Boy Scouts collected 5,200 cans of food last year. Let's make it 7,000 this year."

A motorized coffin, spotlighted by a colorful laser and followed by the bereaved, glides slowly across a hall toward a cascade of dry ice fog. High-tech rites are replacing centuries-old Japanese funeral services in the face of Japan's rapid industrialization.

High-tech burials signal changing Japan

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Sentimental synthesizer music from loudspeakers drowns out the sniffles of the bereaved as a motorized coffin glides slowly across a long hall under a laser spotlight.

Seated before the coffin is a Buddhist priest in ceremonial dark robes, his hands clasped in prayer. A procession of family members follows as mist from dry ice billows all around. Green and orange lights shine eerily from the ceiling.

Finally, the marching mourners disappear into the darkness behind a cascade of foaming white smoke. Theatrical rites such as those at the Gyokusenjin, a bowling alley turned funeral parlor, are replacing centuries-old Japanese funerals, steeped in ancestor worship and organized by the community.

The traditional funerals are disappearing as the cohesiveness of neighborhoods and the extended family unravel in the face of Japan's rapid industrialization, according to Hajime Himonya, chief editor of Sogi, a funeral trade magazine.

In the rush to fill the void, modern funerals are becoming big business. Manager Nobuyoshi Tomikawa said the Gyokusenjin had performed 700 of the laser-lit processions in six months.

The five-minute service, culminating in a cremation, tacks an extra $300 onto the basic funeral, which includes flowers, meals for the guests and temple fees.

"We began this service because people traditionally used to walk and accompany the coffin to the graveyard. Our service just takes less time," Tomikawa said.

The new breed of funeral emphasizes the personality of the deceased. Showing home videos or playing favorite music is popular. Sometimes the departed is shown enjoying "karaoke," the singing of popular tunes to the accompaniment of canned music.

The modern rites also reflect the rapid urbanization of Japan, where business acquaintances are as likely to be invited as family, friends and neighbors.

Your money

Business or hobby?

By JOHN PAYNE

Question: Although my wife and I both work, we have a distribution business we operate part-time out of our garage.

We haven't made any money over the last year, and have deducted the loss on the business. We've heard that the IRS sometimes considers a part-time business to be a hobby and disallows the deduction. What should we look for to avoid this? Joe D.

Dear Joe, The thrust of your question is whether your business would be classified by the IRS as an ongoing business or a hobby.

If the IRS classifies your business as a hobby, then any deductions you may have claimed in past years or in the current year may be disallowed.

To determine whether your loss will be allowed depends on your ability to prove that you intended to make a profit. If your business had income in any three of the past five years preceding, then the burden of proof shifts to the IRS.

Joe, since you've been operating the business for a year, I don't think you are at risk yet to have your business classified as a hobby.

I would definitely work very hard, though, to at least show profits in three of the next four years to meet the IRS criteria.

It will also help to keep the following points in mind. The IRS uses the answers to the following questions to help determine if you have a business or a hobby:

- Do you carry on the activity of the business in a businesslike manner?
- Do you maintain complete and accurate books and records?
- Do you and your advisors have expertise and knowledge in the business?
- How much time and effort do you spend in the business?
- How successful were you in prior business ventures?
- Is there an excessive amount of recreational value to the business?
- Have there been any profits and if so, what were their size in relation to the losses you have claimed previously?

Joe, your question tells me I don't think you have a problem yet. If you're still concerned, hire a qualified CPA who can look further into your business. Of course, if you make the business profitable, you'll have no problem.

Freeze puts damper on cotton harvest

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Freezing weather two weeks ago will cut Howard County cotton yields this year from 30 to 50 percent, a loss of up to $12.5 million, said county agriculture agent Don Richardson.

"Hopefully, we'll get 50,000, maybe 60,000 (bales of cotton) out of all this," said Richardson, who last week was surveying cotton fields for damage from hail and freezing temperatures. Bales are selling for about $250 each right now, he said.

More than 95,000 acres of cotton were planted in the county this year. Richardson said farmers typically hope to harvest a bale of cotton per acre.

"Overall, we lost about 30 percent," Richardson said Friday. "It may range all the way up to 50 percent. Some of these fields I looked at today, I don't even think they'll get a stripper out there."

Late-blooming cotton in the Plains area was hurt the most, according to Texas Agricultural Statistics Service. "Statewide cotton condition is rated at 68 percent of normal compared with 79 percent last year," says a report from the Statistics Service.

Some cotton in Howard County and the Plains area was planted late following heavy rains that washed out seeds planted early in the season.

Dry, warm weather is needed now to dry and open cotton bolls that were far enough along when the freeze came, according to the Statistics Service report. Cotton must be defoliated before harvesting.

"Just like we're having right now," Richardson said of desired weather conditions. "For the next six weeks."

Cotton harvesting in the area resumed last week and is expected to accelerate rapidly in the next few weeks because the killing freeze helped to dry cotton that already opened.

Less than 5 percent of cotton in Howard County has been harvested, Richardson estimated.

Harvest usually lasts through the end of the year, but how long it will take depends on weather conditions.

More cotton was produced per pound of fertilizer applied in the past five years in the United States than at any time since record keeping began in the 1960s, according to the National Cotton Council.

Fertilizer efficiency on cotton in 1990 increased 26 percent since 1980, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Resident offers errand business

By MARTHA E. FLORES
Staff Writer

At one time or another everyone wishes they had a few extra hours in the day to run errands.

Unfortunately, we cannot have a 28-hour day replacement, but Big Spring residents may increase the free time in their day by retaining Loma L. McKinnon's services.

McKinnon has recently opened Taking Care of Business, Etc., an errand service.

"When I was working (at medical facilities) I found myself with little time to my own and having to make arrangements to have personal tasks taken care of," McKinnon said. "I wanted to have more time to do those errands, but also find a way to keep working."

In June of this year, McKinnon found a solution: She began running errands for other people.

"I do a little bit of everything," she said. "I have clients that I run to the grocery store. I also take one of my clients to the hairdresser, and I do some light dusting for another."

Leona Ebersole, an 88-year-old Big Spring resident who retains McKinnon's services at least twice a week finds, that using the services gives her a sense of independence.

"I don't drive anymore so I need someone to take me to the beauty shop or to the doctor's office," said Ebersole. "And I hate for my daughter to take off from work to take me places. It is very nice to have someone to take me places."

"I also offer to my clients transportation to Midland and other surrounding cities if they need to go shopping or for whatever reason," she said.

McKinnon has two business trucks, a Chevrolet S-10 Blazer and Dodge Ram Charger truck.

"I use the Ram Charger for shopping trips to Midland or whenever I need more room. I am considering buying a van if the business continues to grow," she said.

Loma L. McKinnon, right, opens the door for one of Taking Care of Business, Etc.'s clients. The services provided by the McKinnon include transportation, grocery shopping and other similar errands.

How to test your plants for prussic acid

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent-Ag

This article may seem like shutting the barn door after the horse got out, but due to the importance of livestock to the economy of the county and the threat of prussic acid poisoning to the animals, I felt that this information would still be timely.

Some plants, particularly sorghums, are capable, under certain conditions, of producing prussic acid. Prussic acid is extremely toxic. Concentrations exceeding 750 mg/kg (that equals 0.08 percent) are considered dangerous.

Prussic acid causes asphyxiation at the cellular level. Accumulations of prussic acid can occur following plant damage such as wilting, freezing, drought, cutting, etc.

Ask the agent

Young plants usually produce more prussic acid as compared to older plants. Prussic acid concentrations are usually higher in the morning and decline through the afternoon.

Prussic acid is one of the most rapidly acting poisons known. Sign of illness may start within five minutes of the time the animal starts eating the plants. Death may occur within 15 minutes.

Bright red blood, salivation, labored breathing, muscular tremors, incoordination, bloating and convulsions are all symptoms of prussic acid poisoning. Due to the rapidity of poisoning, often the only symptom is a dead animal, although the bright red blood persists for several hours after death.

Our Extension Livestock Specialist, Dr. Rick Machen, Ft. Stockton, informed us that he had ran across a prussic acid test that livestock owners may wish to try.

The first step is to dip strips of filter paper in an aqueous solution containing 5 percent Na₂CO₃ and 0.5 percent picric acid.

Second, place a crushed sample of the forage you wish to test in a test tube (moisten with water if dry). Add 3-5 drops of chloroform to the sample (10 drops of vinegar can be used in an emergency).

Place moistened test paper in the test tube so it does not touch the sample. Stopper the test tube tightly. A color change from the original yellow to orange or brick red indicates prussic acid. The amount of HCN is related to the rapidity of color change.

This test is no guarantee and I seriously advise anyone that suspects prussic acid poisoning to contact their veterinarian immediately.

Data collection agency speeds on

DALLAS (AP) — Kmart Corp. is improving the way it tracks inventory with hand-held computers that talk to each other on radio frequencies.

The state of California is issuing drivers' licenses with magnetic strips similar to credit cards.

The Postal Service is beginning to sort third class mail with a computer that reads envelopes and packages on a conveyor moving 500 feet per minute.

These are the latest advances in automatic data collection, a $3 billion industry expected to nearly double by 1995.

Rooted in the 40-year-old technology of bar codes, automatic data collection has grown to include exotic laser tools, voice and handwritten orders to computers and the radio beams that spot freight on moving rail cars or let you pass through a highway toll booth.

The technology is developing so quickly that some fear society hasn't prepared adequately for the intrusion of privacy it can bring. A recent spate of newspaper and magazine articles as well as congressional hearings and bills have focused on the issue.

But that worry seemed far away to the 12,000 manufacturers, vendors and customers at Scan-Tech '91, the industry's largest trade show, at the Dallas Convention Center last week.

"There's a potential problem there," said Joseph Sheppard, a vice president of the Automatic Identification Manufacturers, the industry trade group.

But he said, "We're not creating an ability to get data you can't already get."

Indeed, technological growth should not be slowed down, said

Gary Marx, a Massachusetts Institute of Technology sociologist who has written about privacy issues.

"There must be public awareness and public discussion first so that we don't have decisions made simply on the basis of what technology is capable of doing," Marx said in a telephone interview.

Privacy experts and civil libertarians have expressed concern.

A good month for refinery

October was an excellent month for the Big Spring refinery, according to refinery officials.

The refinery exceeded its production movement plans, had a perfect safety record, exceeded its United Way goal and met volume gain and monthly energy goals.

The refinery moved 270,000 barrels of product through Duncan, Okla. To accomplish this, the product pipeline to Wichita Falls operated at 99.9 percent utilization factor.

No on-the-job or off-the-job injuries were reported in October. Through the first 10 months of the year, the refinery's recordable incidence rate was 61 percent lower than during the comparable period in 1990.

Stores open in mini-mall

Joy Boyd and Lisa Coates have announced the opening of their stores, Joy's Hallmark and the Kid Shoppe, at the new mini-mall on Gregg Street.

Joy's Hallmark is a card and gift store, while the Kid's Shoppe specializes in children's clothing. Both stores opened at the mall Monday.

The businesses have doubled their previous space and added merchandise. There are two entrances to each store and parking on three sides for customer convenience.

VA plans improvements

The VA Medical Center in Big Spring has planned $5 million worth of renovations and improvements to the facility, according to Conrad Alexander, director.

"We are indeed fortunate to secure funding for these needed products," he said.

Included in the remodeling plans will be the nursing home care unit and the construction of a new surgical suite. A new nurse call system and medical gas equipment will be installed in each patient room. Visitor and staff bathrooms will be renovated and lighting protection will be installed.

A computerized axial tomography (CAT) scanner will be installed in the radiology department and the patio at the back of the Canteen will be enclosed.

of Agriculture data, the Council reported. G.W. Wallingford of the Potash & Phosphate Institute, Columbus, Ohio, presented the data at the recent Southern Soil Fertility Conference in Memphis.

Wallingford said nitrogen efficiency increased 14 percent during the 80s, but phosphorus and potassium efficiencies increased by 53 percent and 40 percent, respectively. Cotton's primary nutrients are nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium.

"The primary factor for the higher efficiencies is the higher yields cotton farmers have produced through integration of many best management factors," he said.

Pecan prices are expected to be high again this year, reported a spokeswoman with Texas A&M University.

Supplies may even run short by next fall, given low yields this year and fewer pecans carried over from storage, said Edith A. Chenault.

First projections placed the 1991 Texas crop at 65 million pounds, up from 60 million last year, but that number keeps slipping due to weather, fungus and insects, Chenault said.

The total crop could measure only 50 million pounds unless augmented by native pecans from non-traditional sources, said George McEachern, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Danny and LeRuth Stewart and their children Reed and Rene Stewart were recently given the Excellence in Grazing Management Award, according to Livestock Weekly.

The award is presented by the Texas Section Society for Range Management to pay tribute to ranchers concerned with the conservation of natural resources through good stewardship of the land.

The Stewart family is active in soil and water conservation districts, 4-H, livestock associations, and numerous local and civic activities such as the local school board and county range and livestock committees, said a Livestock Weekly report.

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — National Semiconductor Corp. on Tuesday introduced a new digital answering machines and other devices by simply speaking.

Oil/gas

GLASSCOCK COUNTY
First production figures have been filed for a newly completed oil well in Glasscock County's Calvin Field with Tex-Con Oil and Gas as the operator.

Designated as the No. 1 Reynolds "21," it pumped 28 barrels of oil with 50,000 CF casinghead gas daily on an open choke. Salt water production totaled 13 barrels per day.

The Houston-based operator perforated the Dean Formation for production at 8,101 to 8,267 feet into the wellbore.

The WZB Field will see more developmental drilling when the No. 3 Gumm is spudded about 14 miles west of Garden City. It will be a 3,860-ft. test and will be situated in the T&PRR Survey A-1232. Alleder Inc. of Midland will be the operator.

BORDEN COUNTY
Production in the Strawn Formation will be the target when S&J Operating of Wichita Falls stages a plugback operation in Borden County's Fluvanna Field, about four miles northwest of the Fluvanna townsite. It is in the H&TCRR Survey Section 580 Block 97. S&J will be attempting a completion at a depth of about 8,500 feet.

John L. Cox, independent operator from Midland, has given up on his attempts to make a producer out of the No. 1 Davis, a developmental try in the Von Roeder Field, 13 miles west of Ira. The well bottomed dry at a depth of 6,850 feet in the H&TCRR Survey Section 80 Block 25. The well will be plugged and abandoned.

Meager production prospects were indicated when the No. 1 Santa Barbara was completed in Borden County's South Reinecke Field, 7.5 miles north of Vincent. With Perry Co. of Ackerly as the operator, it pumped a little over two barrels of oil per day plus minor volumes of gas and water daily on an open choke.

Production is from perforations in the Leonard Limestone, 5,536 to 5,544 feet into the hole.

MARTIN COUNTY
Two 4,050-ft. developmental wells are scheduled for spudding in Martin County's Phoenix Field, about four miles northeast of Tarzan. The wells will be known as the No. 1 Barney and No. 3 Abby. Both are located in the T&PRR Survey Sections 8 and 5 Block 36, respectively. RK Petroleum Inc. of Midland will be the operator.

Pumping 20 barrels of oil per day plus about 100 barrels of salt water, the No. 4 Barbara has been completed in Martin County's South Phoenix Field about 3.5 miles northwest of Lenora.

Durham Inc. of Midland is the operator. The company perforated the Grayburg Formation for production at 3,918 to 3,926 feet into the wellbore.

THE HOME FRONT
 By Kay Moore
 New full-spectrum light bulbs produce purer color; the white light doesn't change color temperature with age and shows more vibrant colors. Bulbs cost more but last longer.
 Furnace filters should be replaced periodically — at least every spring and fall. The pay off is cleaner air in the house all year, less dust settling on surfaces, and less trouble with allergies.
 Catch the clearance sale at the local nursery and plant trees and shrubs now. You'll save on younger specimens if you're willing to wait an extra year for them to mature.
 When job transfers loom, smart folks consider living costs in the new location. In many cases, employers can be convinced to make up the difference in home prices and taxes.
