Utility panel fields demands

FORT WORTH (AP) — About 20 Texas residents have written the Public Utility Commission asking for "caller ID," a device that plugs into a telephone and displays the originating phone numbers of incoming calls.
"In regards to caller ID telephone concept, (we have) been waiting for a two-year period for this to take place," Fort Worth truck driver Alan Copeland and his wife wrote in a letter to the PUC.
"We are extremely tired of all the junk coming into our telephone service. Harassment, obscene, 900, and computer junk et al.," he wrote.

New policy will severely restrict alcohol consumption at park

By GARY SHANKS Staff Writer

Individual citizens will face the brunt of restrictions with the new alcohol policy for Big Spring's parks.
"Essentially, this will mean no alcohol can be consumed at city parks without a specific permit," said Assistant City Manager Tom Decell.
The final reading of the new ordinances occurred at Tuesday's Big Spring City Council meeting. The city code will be changed immediately and Decell expects to have signs up by Monday.

Alcohol sales and consumption will be allowed at the amphitheater, the Old Settlers Pavilion and the Dora Roberts Community Center, but only with permits approved by the council and the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.
Alcohol can still be consumed at the Municipal Golf Course and Moss Creek Lake, as these areas are not affected by the new ordinances.
The areas of Comanche Trail

Park where alcohol will be allowed with permits are to be delineated with orange posts along the perimeter. The rest of the park will be equipped with signs forbidding alcohol consumption.
The ordinances also establish a $150 fee to be paid before a permit is issued.
The sale and/or serving of alcoholic beverages will be suspended one hour before the scheduled end of an event.
No alcoholic beverages or coolers can be carried into scheduled events, and the ordinances state that alcoholic beverages must be dispensed from a bulk delivery device into biodegradable paper cups or in aluminum cans.

The ordinances are the result of a committee made of council members, community members and League of United Latin American Citizens members.
U.S. Department of Justice official Richard Sambrano worked with the group to assist in forming a solution acceptable to all parties, he said.
The dispute, which led to the changes in the city code, began last spring when LULAC filed suit against the city for discriminatory practices in allowing alcohol at the Municipal Golf Course, but not at the amphitheater where a number of Hispanic-oriented concerts have been scheduled.

Sambrano said at the time the code did appear to be discriminatory on the surface saying, "How many Hispanic women play golf?"
Prior to these new ordinances, citizens were allowed to bring alcoholic beverages to the park for their own consumption.

Trimming the tree

Jim Clements trims branches from a Christmas tree recently brought onto the lot of the Big Spring Optimist's Club tree stand at the intersection of 10th and Gregg streets this morning. The trees will go on sale beginning at 5 p.m. tonight.

102nd Congress ends on quiet note

WASHINGTON (AP) — The just-concluded first session of the 102nd Congress started in a rush, the rush to war. Then it sputtered.
The cries for change, for better health care, for better education, for protection from crime, went unheeded. The recession went unanswered, except for extended unemployment benefits and the jobs created by a renewed federal roads program.
"Everyone knows there's a lot of trouble out there, yet there's very little happening to combat the problems," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

In the words of one Republican aide, it was: "The Behind the Curve Congress."
But Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said it's unfair to judge this Congress now. Next year's session will be the one to watch, he said.
"Just as no football game is ever decided at halftime ... no full, fair and final evaluation of a Congress can be made until the end of the (two-year) Congress," he said.

He said Congress next year will act on what's important to the public "and (issues) that affect their daily lives."
Last January, when the president finally wanted authority to use military force to drive Saddam Hussein's army from Kuwait, Bush won the vote and then, in short order, the war, even though Democratic leaders favored continued economic sanctions.
Riding a postwar groundswell of public support, Bush demanded that Congress give him a crime bill and a highway bill within 100 days.

Lawmakers were unmoved. They passed veterans benefits. The economy remained frozen.
At mid-session, the recession finally spurred the political debate, if not the legislative pace, and talk of a tax cut began to emerge.
First, though, the Senate gave itself a pay raise to catch up to the House at $125,100 a year.
When it was revealed House members had been enjoying free

Baker's Chapel turns 62

By MARTHA E. FLORES Staff Writer

Baker's Chapel African Methodist Episcopal Church, 911 N. Lancaster St., celebrated its 62nd anniversary this past Sunday. The theme of testimonials was "On Christ the Solid Rock We Stand."
Area churches joined in the rejoicing. Members of the Perkins Memorial Church of God in Christ, Mt. Bethel Baptist, Mt. Rose Baptist, St. James Baptist, Mt. Zion Baptist and Allen Chapel A.M.E. were present.

The choirs from the area churches joined in the musical testament by singing a number of gospel songs each. The pastors of each church gave a brief statement on the love of God and the prosperity of the community in the spiritual and material world.
The Baker's Chapel was founded in 1929.
Throughout the years, the church has grown in size and membership. It was first located at the corner of First and N. Trade streets. In 1963 Baker's Chapel was erected at its present location. The structures include a chapel and a meeting hall.
"The church was founded by nine people and throughout the years it has grown, but recently the membership is down," said Rev. Floyd Green Jr., pastor of Baker's Claudette Green is accompanied on the piano by Sandra Green as she sings "I'll Fly Away" at the 62nd anniversary of Baker's Chapel. The song is a spiritual that dates back before the Civil War.

Chapel. "We are trying to build membership especially within the younger people. We are focusing on how to attract them."
The Young People's Department meets twice a month. The meetings consist of Bible study and discussions of the problems youth face today.
Another program is the Missionary Society. The society consists of a group of parishioners who go out to visit the elderly and shut-in, Green said. They also provide food and clothing for those in need.
The American Methodist Episcopal church was founded in 1787 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. It was started to allow African-Americans an opportunity for self-expression and fuller involvement in the service of worship.

"It was the answer to a cry for social recognition as human beings, and the means through which a group of people started on a program which gave them a sense of dignity and self-respect," according to the African Methodist Episcopal church manual.
The name of the church is significant in the respect that it gives an identity to its congregation and denomination.
"The word 'African' means that our church was organized by people of African descent and heritage. We proudly recognize this fact," the manual states. "Our church is a member of the family of Methodist churches. The word 'Episcopal' refers to the form of government under which our church operates."

The episcopal form of government means that the chief executive and administrative officers of the denomination are the Bishops Council, according to the manual.
"Our purpose as a church and congregation is to help the people of the community, not just the members of our church," Green said.

Breaks to have little effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is hailing its extension of a dozen expiring tax breaks, including one for low-income housing projects, as a way to spur the sagging U.S. economy. But economists say the extension is only maintaining the status quo.
"It stopped us from moving in the wrong direction, but it didn't really move us in the right direction," said Martin Regalia, chief economist for the National Council of Community Bankers.
He said the economy is still "perched on disaster."
Before they adjourn Wednesday, the House and Senate rushed through a bill renewing 12 popular tax break provisions through next June 30.

Because Congress and the Bush administration aren't anywhere close to agreeing on a major anti-recession package, supporters of the extension promoted it as a way to boost the economy.
Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, called it "at least a small step forward... to help us move out of recession." Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, went further, saying that allowing the tax breaks to lapse would have caused "a severe negative jolt to the economy."
But analysts said the tax breaks — specifically one that motivates investors to pour money into new rental projects for low-income Americans — won't create any new jobs, but instead will head off job losses.

In a similar vein, Congress hurried to enact a $151 billion highway and mass transit bill that was praised by lawmakers and the Bush administration as creating 4 million jobs over the next six years.

"That's just extending," said Robert Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. "We've had highway spending. If they don't do that, we're going to close down some projects. There is no big push coming."
"It keeps some people employed who are already employed," added Regalia. "Are they likely to go out and buy and house because of it? No. Are they likely to buy a new car because of it? I doubt it."
The housing tax break provides a credit of up to 70 percent over five years for investors who back rehabilitation or construction of rental housing for low-income families. The Senate has estimated the tax break creates 100,000 jobs a year.

Because that tax break has been in place for the last several years, Congress' latest action won't create 100,000 new jobs, but will save those 100,000 jobs from being lost, analysts said.
David Crowe, an economist with the National Association of Home Builders, estimates that the housing tax break creates 60,000 construction jobs for new housing development projects and another 20,000 jobs for renovation projects.
Senate economists probably figured another 20,000 jobs are created as a spinoff, Crowe said.
"You put those construction workers back to work, they in turn will buy something with their wages. That in turn will create another job," Crowe said.

Absence from jury to bring a fine

ODESSA (AP) — When only 85 of more than 300 people showed up for jury duty last week, Ector County Judge Jim Jordan and County Court-at-Law judges Robert Hollman and James Bobo weren't impressed.

From now on, those who fail to appear will be brought to the courthouse and fined a minimum of $50, they agreed.

"We certainly realize that a person's job is important, but unless they have an official exemption, they will be fined at least $50," Hollman said.

Bobo said the public needs to realize that jury duty is not something to disregard.

"It's something we don't want to do but we have to," Bobo said. "It's gotten to the point that we've come up almost short in our (jury) panels."

Officials swamped with complaints

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The state official in charge of investigating alleged improper patient care at private psychiatric hospitals says her agency is being swamped with so many complaints that her staff hasn't even been able to keep a running total.

"I wish we had more hands and minds to work on this," said Sue Dillard, director of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation's Department of Standards and Quality Assurance, which investigates consumer complaints.

"This is just unprecedented. We have to handle it on a day-by-day basis. None of us has been working a normal 40-hour week," Ms. Dillard said.

Her staff is working overtime to tackle the workload, she told the San Antonio Express-News.

Shuttle dodges debris

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Atlantis astronauts became the second shuttle crew forced to dodge a piece of space junk, but NASA attributed the incidents to chance, not an increase in orbiting litter.

Atlantis commander Frederick Gregory steered out of the path of a spent Soviet rocket body Thursday afternoon, about 10½ hours before it would have passed too close to the shuttle for NASA's comfort.

The last shuttle crew also had to veer out of the way of another piece of rocket junk two months ago. However, NASA flight director Phil Engelauf said the two instances did not mean that space flight suddenly has become riskier.

"It's not like this was due to any increase in the amount of (space junk) traffic. It was just sheer coincidence that we've had two of them together," Engelauf said.

Atlantis would have been traveling 3 miles behind the Cosmos booster, and the maneuver was to increase that distance to about 35 miles. A shuttle can fly no closer than 1.3 miles above or beside another orbiting object, or 3.1 miles behind another object, according to NASA flight rules.

A shuttle crew had to dodge another Soviet Cosmos rocket part in September in the first such incident in the 10-year-old shuttle program.

Although he sees no immediate increased risk, Engelauf said the space agency is concerned about space debris as it looks towards building the proposed space station.

But "I don't see it as being an unmanageable problem," he added.

A few hours after the maneuver, the six astronauts gathered for their Thanksgiving meal.

Names in the news

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — World soccer star Pele is reportedly the father of a 27-year-old woman who filed a paternity lawsuit against him.

Sandra Regina Machado contended she was conceived during a 1963 liaison between Pele and her mother, a housemaid in the port city of Santos.

At the time, the 51-year-old Pele was at the height of his career with the local Santos soccer club. He retired from soccer in 1977.

Pele, who took a DNA test in November, said he would abide by the results, which were turned over to a judge on Tuesday. Brazilian newspapers reported that the results confirmed Pele is Machado's father.

Manoel Benevides, one of the owners of the Genomic Molecular Engineering laboratory, which did the tests, declined to reveal the results. But he said Machado was pleased.

Pele, whose real name is Edson Arantes do Nascimento, has three children from a marriage that ended in divorce in 1978.

He was in China for the World Women's Soccer Championship this week and could not be reached for comment.

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — The people who played actor Jon Voight's students in the movie "Conrack" 18 years ago said they weren't surprised to learn he thought it was time for a reunion.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rhythm guitarist Izzy Stradlin has left the hard-rocking, often controversial band Guns N' Roses, says the group's leader, Axl Rose.

The band and Stradlin were "going in separate directions," Rose said in a statement released Thursday by Geffen Records.

"Izzy and I have been together 15 years so it's kind of a shock to my system," he said.

Gilby Clarke of the band Kill for Thrills will replace Stradlin and join Guns N' Roses on its upcoming tour, the statement said.

Stradlin could not immediately be reached for comment. Geffen spokeswoman Bryn Bridenthal was not in her office Thursday, and an answering-service operator said no comment beyond that in the statement was planned.

Stradlin wrote much of the material and did some lead vocals on Guns N' Roses' new albums, "Use Your Illusion I" and "Use Your Illusion II."

Guns N' Roses, known for its angry, sometimes sexist lyrics, sold 14 million copies of its 1987 debut album "Appetite for Destruction."

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Francis Crick, who won a Nobel Prize in 1962 for helping discover the structure of DNA, was named to the Order of Merit by Queen Elizabeth of England.

"The Order of Merit is a personal honor of the monarch," said Edwina Iredale, librarian for the British Consulate in Los Angeles. "They are so distinguished. There are only 24."

Membership in the order is open only to British citizens and is limited to 24 people.

PELE VOIGHT

"He really cared about us," said Margaret Perry Collier, now a hospital administrator in Augusta. "Every day on the set, he showed us in his interactions that he cared."

The group got together Thursday for a Thanksgiving reunion, and Voight said he was as anxious as the rest to renew old friendships.

"We were a team," Voight said. "I haven't kept up with any of them — we've all been busy with our lives — but I still have vivid memories of an area and a people filled with playfulness and loving energy."

The 1973 film is about a young white teacher and his black students at a rural school on the South Carolina coast.

Agency gives residents week to leave projects

DALLAS (AP) — Residents of a West Dallas project have until Monday to decide where they want to move.

The Dallas Housing Authority has told 26 families they must leave their lead-contaminated apartments. The families can move to another apartment project or to other low-income housing.

The agency will pay their expenses.

But Elizabeth Garner refuses to leave the George Loving Place apartments, where she's lived for 11 years. She said she's not worried by new soil tests showing dangerous levels of lead contamination.

"I'm going to remain here until they physically throw me out," Ms. Garner said.

The Environmental Protection Agency did tests revealing lead seeping throughout the project. The Dallas Housing Authority told the residents they were in danger and set a Dec. 8 move-out deadline.

Dallas Housing Authority Executive Director Alphonso Jackson told residents in a meeting Wednesday that he only learned of the contamination about a week ago.

"DHA did not just find out about this," Ms. Garner retorted. "If they were so concerned about our health, they'd have done something way before now."

Some residents argue that the moving deadline comes too soon with too little warning.

"I'm just so undecided and confused. I'm really upset," said Sharon Wallace. "That's some timing with Christmas coming and the holidays."

Environmental officials in the past found numerous sites of lead contamination on nearby properties. But this is the first time tests have shown high lead levels at the projects.

Nation's flu vaccine almost depleted

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation is about to run out of flu vaccine just as the winter flu season arrives early, even though more than usual was produced in anticipation of heavy demand, vaccine distributors say.

Vaccine makers refused to say how much they produced, but said they have sold virtually all of it. The federal Centers for Disease Control estimated that vaccine production this year was enough for 30 million people.

The shortage was reported in today's editions of The New York Times.

General Injectables and Vaccines Inc. of Bastian, Va., which describes itself as the nation's largest flu vaccine distributor, was expected to run out of vaccine today, said company spokesman Joseph Gregory.

"Everyone is wiped out," said Bob Bessie of Bessie Medical in Cincinnati, which calls itself the second-largest distributor of the vaccine.

Flu seasons vary by region, but typically do not begin in force until December.

Senate perk extended four months

WASHINGTON (AP) — A perk that allowed senators to use campaign funds for official business won't die Jan. 3 as originally planned. Congress decided this week to continue the practice until May 1.

Lawmakers insisted, however, that the policy really will end in May and no more extensions will be granted.

The Jan. 3 expiration was set in legislation approved a year ago that would have made Senate policy compatible with a House ban on use of campaign money for official purposes.

Senators pleaded for more time — and got it — when the four-month extension was inserted into an emergency spending bill.

The chairmen of the Senate and House appropriations subcommittees for the legislative branch both went along with the extension during conference committee deliberations.

Man gets light sentence in rape case

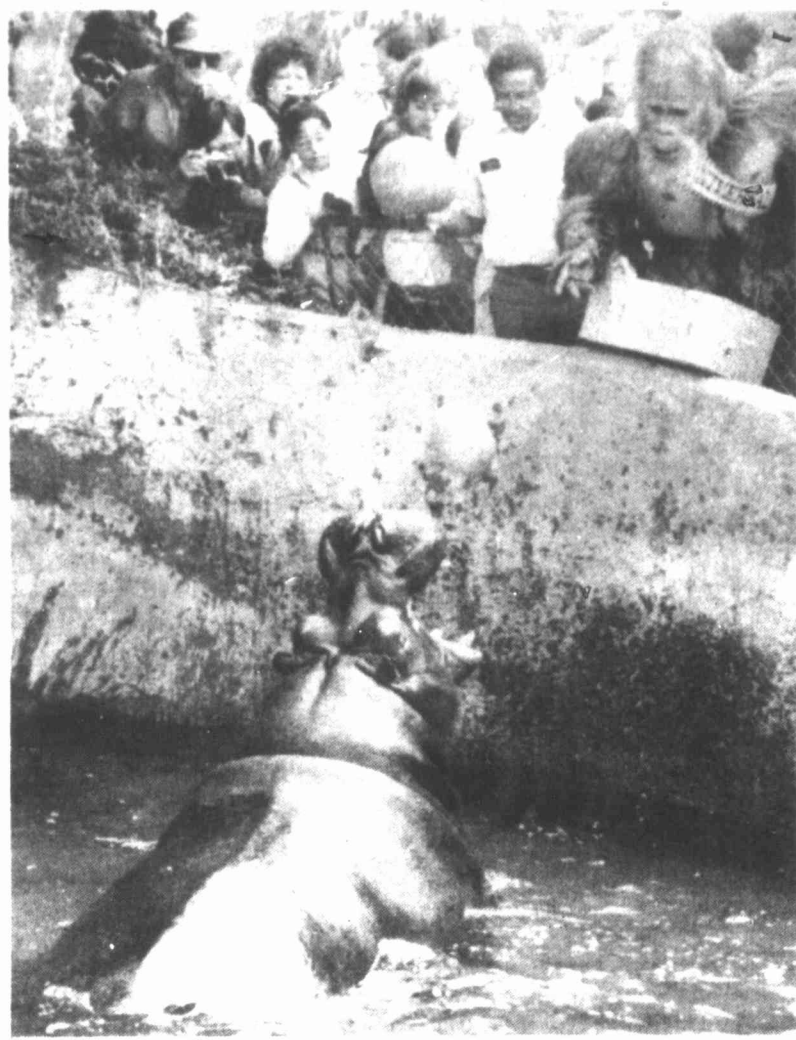

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A man who videotaped his rape of a 13-year-old girl was sentenced to 30 weekends in jail by a judge who admitted the punishment was light but said it was aimed at keeping the man's children out of foster care.

"He was saved from what people would ordinarily get for that behavior because we were at wits end on what to do with his family," said acting State Supreme Court Justice Mark Dadd.

The judge also sentenced Bruce Kuhn, 44, of suburban Tonawanda, to five years probation and ordered him to stay away from alcohol. In the hearing this week, Dadd also ordered Kuhn to apologize.

Yugoslav army leaves key barracks

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Serbian-led federal army began withdrawing from one of its largest barracks in Croatia today, but new fighting was reported elsewhere in the secessionist republic.

A convoy of several hundred federal army vehicles began leaving the Marshal Tito barracks near the Croatian capital, Zagreb, this morning, Croatian defense officials said. A European Community spokesman, Ed Koestal, said the convoy was not being interfered with.

The withdrawal of federal forces from the republic has been a key element of truce efforts in the past, and if it continues without problems this time could go a long way toward reducing tensions.

Also today, Croatian and federal army officials held talks with the International Committee of the Red Cross on exchanging political prisoners and getting humanitarian aid to the fallen city of Vukovar and the blockaded port of Dubrovnik, Koestal said.

Shamir insisting on delay in talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today insisted on a five-day delay in Middle East peace talks scheduled next week in Washington, but he also said he was open to American compromise offers.

"The decision taken by the government of Israel... exists and stands. As this point, I don't see any reason to change this decision," Shamir told reporters.

But Shamir said, "Talks are continuing in Washington. If something new will come up, it could be that something new may come up here also," he said.

Israel's ambassador to Washington, Zalman Shoval, was to meet today with U.S. administration officials.

Israel wants the talks to resume on Dec. 9, five days after the U.S.-set starting date. The Arab states and the Palestinians have accepted the American offer.

Libya questions bombing suspects

ROME (AP) — Facing increasing Western pressure, Libya said today it has questioned two Libyans accused of carrying out the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 and that it is promising a thorough investigation.

The statement by Libya's Foreign Ministry contrasts with comments a day earlier by Col.

Moammar Gadhafi, who rejected as "laughable" the charges by the United States and Britain.

Washington, London and Paris turned up the heat on Libya this week over the matter. U.S. officials have not ruled out military action to retaliate for the bombing over Lockerbie, Scotland, that killed 270 people.

Children who live on the streets of Rio de Janeiro carry a companion on a cross Thursday during a protest Thursday against what they say is the systematic murder of poor children by death squads. The procession of about 6,000 children was organized by human rights groups, UNICEF, the Roman Catholic Church and the mayor's office.

Children march to protest murders

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Filling the streets where they live and die, thousands of raggedy, homeless children protested the alleged death squad murders of poor youths.

A boy lying on a wooden cross carried by four companions led the procession Thursday of more than 6,000 people, including a group of mothers whose children were slain.

"The police are mean animals. When they beat you, they hit to kill," said 13-year-old Alex Rosa dos Santos, barefoot and shirtless in the march organized by human rights groups, UNICEF, the Roman Catholic Church and the mayor's office.

Murders of children living on their own on the streets have tripled in the past year in major cities, according to studies by social and church groups. Brazil has about 12 million street kids, compared with 5 million in 1985.

The National Movement of Street Boys and Girls says more than three children were killed every day in Brazil during the 12 months ending in June.

But the government of President Fernando Collor de Mello says the number of murders is exaggerated and actually has declined since last year.

"We want to live, but Brazil condemns us to die!" the youngsters chanted, as office workers in the banking district threw confetti from windows on the procession.

People working to aid the children believe many killers are retired or off-duty police officers hired by local merchants to "clean up" high-crime areas.

"These murders are the work of death squads and police officers, and they continue because of the impunity of the killers," said Lucia Regina Campista, a lawyer with the Defense Center for Children and Adolescents.

This month, six children ages 9 to 17 were killed in the Baixada Fluminense slums north of Rio. A seventh victim, a 16-year-old girl, escaped with a head wound by playing dead.

About 20 mothers of murdered children marched in the parade, their heads covered by black shawls.

"My son was innocent, a worker," said Denilda Ribeira de Souza, whose 15-year old boy was grabbed by two men and shot to death Sept. 6. "They mixed him up with someone else. Now, we want justice."

Another mother, Bernadette Pedro Moreira da Silva, said her son Luiz Carlos, 15, was killed because he was peddling marijuana.

"The police have to arrest kids involved with drugs, but it's insane to kill them," she said.

Behind her, kids in torn, filthy clothes sang church hymns, danced to a samba beat throbbing from a sound truck. Dozens of schoolchildren in neat blue-and-white uniforms marched alongside in support.

Some children carried signs saying "Killing Is Not a Solution" and "We Want To Live in Peace."

Luciano Chagas lives on the street, shining shoes and stealing to help support his mother, brother and sister.

"Yesterday, a policeman hit me and said, 'If I see you again, I'll have to kill you,'" Chagas said.

New U.N. chief faces tough job

Butros Ghali, Egypt's deputy prime minister, is an appropriate choice to become secretary general of the United Nations. His record of public service makes him at least the equal of all those considered for the post by the U.N. Security Council, and his personal, ethnic and geographic background makes him acceptable to a wide range of member states.

Ghali is a diplomat with long experience in senior posts and a scholar in international law. A Coptic Christian from an Islamic country, educated in France and married to an Egyptian Jew, he could hardly be more cosmopolitan. As an Egyptian he represents both the Middle East and Africa, and although black African governments would have preferred one of their own, they have welcomed his selection with enthusiasm.

Best known in the West for his key role as Egypt's acting foreign minister in laying the groundwork for the Camp David accords with Israel in the late 1970s, Ghali also has mediated a number of African disputes and helped secure the release from prison of Nelson Mandela, South Africa's principal anti-apartheid leader.

Once he is confirmed by the General Assembly, considered a formality, Ghali will replace Xavier Perez de Cuellar when the Peruvian diplomat retires on Dec. 31, after 10 years in the post.

The challenge Ghali faces are as formidable as any ever confronted by a secretary general. Indeed, if there's any doubt about his suitability, it's that at 69, and having been sidelined for months by a liver ailment a couple of years ago, he may find the task unduly arduous. But he is said to be energetic and eager to tackle his new job.

It will be a tough one. The United Nations needs leadership to deal with regional crises that, in the Cold War era, either were the province of the superpowers or were submerged by their standoff, a thorough streamlining of a bureaucracy whose makeup still largely reflects the Cold War stalemate and a major infusion of funds, starting with the payment of huge backlogs in unpaid dues by a number of members, including the United States.

Ghali will require all of his skills to cope with that agenda, and somehow manage to satisfy 160-odd masters in an institution whose potential as a problem-solver and peacekeeper has barely been tapped. We wish him well. Sacramento, Calif., Bee

Nicknames can say a lot about a person

I did an autograph party for a new book the other day and had three requests for nicknames that caught my attention.

I've always liked nicknames, especially ones that say something about certain characteristics of the person who has the name.

There was a boy in my school who walked with each foot pointed slightly outward. The football coach called him "Ten-to-Two."

There was a policeman who would follow the bread delivery truck around each morning and after it dropped off a couple of loaves on someone's porch (you could get that kind of service back then) he would steal the bread.

He eventually was caught and was forever known afterwards as "Crusty," which reminds me of a former colleague who was renowned for doing as little as possible at work.

We deemed him "Colonial," the name of a bread company that advertised its product as, "The eight-hour loaf."

I had a guy walk up and ask that his book be signed to "Hogpen."

"Is that you?" I asked. "That's me," he said. "I used to work at Billy Carter's service station in Plains."

"Billy give you that name?" "My daddy did," he replied. "And Charles Schulz heard about it, I presume, and has his Pigpen character in "Peanuts."

I didn't have time to discuss the nickname any further with the man, but you do wonder what he did to earn such a tag.

Did he sleep with hogs? The possibilities are endless.

Next, I got a "Frog." "It's for a friend of mine," the lady with the book said. "All anybody has ever called him is 'Frog.'"

There was another boy in my school we called "Toad." He actually looked like one. We also had a teacher named "Froggie." She looked like one, too. Her classroom was known as "The Pond." So when Toad was in her class, there was old Toad sitting in Froggie's Pond. That was really great stuff when I was 16.

The other nickname I got was "Goathead."

"You're not 'Goathead,' I hope," I said to the lady with the book.

"Goathead's a friend," she answered.

"How on earth would a guy get

a nickname like 'Goathead'?" I asked. It's not a guy, it's a girl," said the lady.

Before I could get a further explanation the lady took her book and was gone.

A girl named "Goathead"? Wouldn't that set her social life back a ways?

"I've got a great blind date for you, Harold."

"Oh yeah? What's her name?" "Her friends call her 'Goathead.'"

"Sure. I'll go out with a blind date named 'Goathead.' Where are we going for dinner? The garbage dump?"

I had a nickname when I was young. It was "Skipper." My father was a basketball coach in the army and his players called him "Skipper." So, when I came along . . .

I always hated that name, and when I was 10 I pulled a knife on my family and said, "Anybody calls me 'Skipper' again, I'll cut 'em."

My grandmother was the only one who didn't or couldn't comply. She continued to call me "Skipper" the rest of her life, and who would cut his grandmother?

But at least "Skipper" wasn't "Hogpen," "Frog" or "Goathead." For that I am immensely thankful.

In the future people might wind up with numbers for names.

"Hi, I'm 16733."

"Nice to meet you. I'm 22841, but my nickname is 9."

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

WHERE IN THE HISTORY BOOKS DOES IT SAY THAT PILGRIM WOMEN SPENT THE DAY AFTER THE FIRST THANKSGIVING DRAGGING THEIR HUSBANDS AROUND THE MALL?

Mental floss

Insulted, beaten up and spit on

By GARY SHANKS Staff Writer

Men who dress like Opra, sleep with space aliens, but have not slept with Geraldo, on the next Donahue.

I have had all of this daytime talk-show nonsense I can stand!

Lord knows I have tried to be tolerant. I know there are some people who find this bilge fungus entertaining, but there is no way I can, in good conscience, refrain from speaking out against this electronic lobotomy!

Apparently, some corporate minion put a computer to work and found that no other topic can draw an audience like deviant sex.

So now all the talk-show droids are locked in fierce competition to find or invent the most twisted, degenerate scum bags to tell us all about themselves on network television.

I finally lost it the other day when Donahue brought out three men in diapers and baby bonnets, who touted themselves as baby crossdressers.

That is such utter — well, I can't print the word meaning male bovine excrement, but that's what it was!

Anyone with an IQ greater than say, a grapefruit, could tell the whole thing was staged!

Being a student of human nature, I feel confident saying any man, emotionally distorted to the point of wearing diapers and drinking formula from a nipple, would be incapable of standing before an audience and answering questions!

These pinheads looked more like junior advertising executives, or accountants, but were probably struggling actors trying to get any work they could lay their hands on.

I'd had my intelligence insulted before, but this was more like having one's intelligence beaten up and spit on!

This, of course, was a coup for the Donahue show.

The standard fare for these talk-show atrocities is someone with a grotesque sexual perversion and whoever was dumb enough to marry them before finding out!

As if we're supposed to feel sorry for this woman who's denied to know her husband was a bestial necrophiliac until the day the dog died!

Oh, I suppose I could feel sorry for some woman who found out her husband was dressing up like Margaret Thatcher and turning tricks downtown — if I believed it for one second!

What really burns is that these ratings-hungry weasles try to present this trash as pertinent social commentary!

Oh right! I'm sure the world is just teeming with transsexuals who cross dress as men! Like, how could we have lived all these years without that information!

And the smut competition is still going on! It's not going to get any better!

Now I don't usually consider myself prudish in any way, but in a few years, what are they going to have to shock us with?

I can just picture it:

Heterosexual pederasts who marry out of their species, on the next Geraldo!

Tally Ho!

The writer's art Of writers and their readers

In discussing writers and their readers, I believe the word I am after is "symbiosis." Its meaning in biology involves "the relationship of two or more different organisms in a close association that may be but is not necessarily of benefit to each." That's it, all right.

In communication that matters — I am not talking about junk mail — the relationship between writer and reader has to be close. Ordinarily we meet in silence, just the two of us and the written word. I the writer am attempting to amuse, inform, persuade or provoke you the reader. We have to have shared communities of interest, information and vocabulary. If things go well, the relationship is indeed beneficial. But if things don't go well?

We have talked in this space about a writer's use of classical allusions. These are fine as long as the reader understands what the writer is getting at. Not much is gained if one's readers never have heard of Cerberus, Sisyphus, Atlas or Tantalus.

Let me pursue the point. In Winter Haven, Fla., a health center asked in its advertisement, "Will this be the summer of your discontent — again?" The proprietor was thinking of potbellies and fat thighs. How many readers, I wonder, recognized the paraphrase of the opening lines from Richard III? "Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer by this sun of York." Do many lovers of Shakespeare work out on parallel bars?

Allusions ought to be reasonably apt. Last year the Seattle Times/Post Intelligencer twice spoke in headlines of a "prodigal son." The allusion was to the parable told in Luke 15:11-32 of the sinful son who wasted his substance in a far country but returned to seek forgiveness from his father. Old dad happily rewarded the wastrel with a fatted calf. (I always regarded the story as a shabby turn of events for the industrious older brother, but never mind.)

The two articles in the Seattle paper had nothing in common with the prodigal son. One piece, by a black newsman, had to do with his trip to Senegal. The other had to do with a cook who began his career at the Chateau Ste. Michelle winery, worked in Seattle restaurants for 15 years, and then returned to Chateau Ste. Michelle to become the winery's principal chef. The story of the prodigal son offers fine opportunities for allusion, but these weren't the right opportunities.

What about fig leaves and olive branches? After the Gulf War, several Arab nations began making tentative overtures toward peace with Israel. A TV commentator referred to the gestures as "fig leaves." Well, the allusion stems from Genesis 3:7, where their purpose of the fig leaves was to cover the private parts of Adam and Eve. They had just discovered they were naked and ashamed.

Did the commentator mean "olive branches"? The olive branch appears in Genesis 8:10-11 in the mouth of Noah's dove. It signaled that God had suspended his wrath against man; the flood waters were abating; soon things would be better. I dunno. I still don't know whether the Arabs are donning fig leaves or waving olive branches, but I would find another allusion somewhere.

Cassandra. Is everyone straight on Cassandra? Several years ago a columnist in the Chicago Sun-Times had a fine time denouncing a number of experts whose gloomy economic predictions had been invariably wrong. He called them Cassandras. But the gloomy predictions of dear old Cassandra were invariably right.

In these areas symbiosis fails. The proximity of writer and reader is the same, but something has been lost. The relationship falters. Inapt allusions are probably the least of a writer's worries. What of vocabulary? Are we speaking the same language?

A writer on medical topics spoke learnedly of desquamation of the scalp. He was talking about dandruff. In The Wall Street Journal, a movie critic looked at "When Harry Met Sally" and described Sally as "a smugly perky anal compulsive." You could have fooled me. Vanity Fair let us know a few years ago that all the divine people in New York were eagerly awaiting the vernissage of the work of Robert Mapplethorpe. I haven't been to a vernissage in just years. A federal circuit judge ruled last spring that "on this chiaroscuro record" no reasonable conclusions could be reached. That's right, your honor!

Know your audience! Visualize your readers! Then write for them in ways most of them will understand.

Club news

1905 Hyperion Club

The 1905 Hyperion Club met Nov. 21 in the home of Mrs. Coy Nalley. Mrs. J.D. Elliott was cohostess.

Mrs. Harlan Huijbregtse, vice president, presided and presented Melinda Anderson, Art Instructor at Howard College. She has a B.A. and M.S. in Fine Arts from Tulsa University.

Ms. Anderson's topic "How Art Impacts Society" began with slide of the Parthenon, the Doric temple built in 5th century on the Acropolis in Athens.

Next picture was Pont du Gard in southern France. It was a Roman-built gravity flow aqueduct. This 50 mile water source to the city delivered 100 gallons/day for each inhabitant. It was constructed of uncemented blocks each 2 tons, 82 ft. span.

Next slide shown was Roman Colosseum, also called Flavian Amphitheatre, which Romans built in full circle with 3 stories built over ground story where animals were kept and later humans for gladiatorial combats etc. Greeks built in half circle.

The following slide was of the Pantheon, which was dedicated to all gods and Romans built for public use. This unusual building has a concrete dome with a 30 ft. oculus (opening) and convex floor to carry away rain water to drain pipes. It is 144 feet from floor to ceiling and its an architecture study of space.

Another category that influenced society was Period of Persecution. The drawings in the Catacombs show Christ as teacher and shepherd with open hands and arms. This was followed by period of Recognition in which Christ was viewed as King, Ruler seated in a throne of Roman design and Christianity was the official religion.

"Pest House at Jaffa" by Antoine Jean Gros was a painting of Napoleon Bonaparte. This was a propaganda painting to persuade the French public to continue their support of the French wars with ax money, supplies, enlisted and drafted men in spite of the homefront depression and poverty.

Of the 19th and 20th centuries art, cubist style painting by Picasso called "Guernica" was to protest bombing of an innocent town to test results of bomb efficiency.

Architecture/Art impacts society: Empire State Building, Eiffel Tower, Space Needle (Seattle), Guggenheim Museum (N.Y.).

In today's society art's impact is seen in television, automobiles, fashion designs, advertising, marketing, furniture, toys, food etc.

During the business meeting, it was announced $25 had been sent to V.A. Hospital, Big Spring State Hospital and $25 to each nursing homes (3).

Next meeting will be Dec. 19th at First Presbyterian Church.

Rosebud Garden Club

The Rosebud Garden Club met at the home of Betty Wrinkle at 2919 MacAuslan. Ozella Long was the cohostess.

The program was 'Eating the Garden of Eden Way' presented by Millie Cunningham.

The next meeting will be at Ruth Opegards at 2700 Navajo. It will be a pot luck luncheon. The program will be Christmas Crafts-Show and Tell.

We are having a booth at Highland Mall on Dec. 6, 7, & 8. Dec. 6 will be a mini sale and on Dec. 7 we will have a bake sale. Everyone is welcome.

Hispanic Women for Progress

Hispanic Women for Progress will do holiday gift wrapping at Wal-Mart on Nov. 29-30 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. They will also sell baked goods, which will include brownies, cookies, krispie treats and traditional Mexican pastries.

The event's proceeds will go to HWP's 1992 scholarship fund.

The organization has awarded six scholarships in the last two years. The group gave out two $500 scholarships in the first year. In its second year, the women awarded four $300 scholarships.

HWP's commitment to the community focuses on education for youth and adults. The scholarships given are available to all college students, including non-traditional students.

Other programs that the group has implemented since their conception in 1988 include tutoring sessions, parenting skills seminars and back-to-school refresher course for elementary students.

"Through our different programs and scholarship awards, we want to emphasize to the Hispanic community as well as the community as a whole the importance of education and the importance of family," said Margaret Trevino, a founding member.

NAACP

The 8th Annual Banquet of the Howard County chapter of the NAACP will be held on Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. at the Brandin Iron Restaurant.

The guest speaker will be Ms. Renetts W. Howard of Lubbock. Call Liz Smith at 263-0757 for details.

Drunk runs halfway house for drunks

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the United States there are more than 6,400 treatment facilities for the nation's estimated 9 million alcoholics. One of them is Hedrick House in Tucson, Ariz., a place run by drunks for drunks. The rules at this halfway house are simple. Take a drink and you're at the door.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — At the outset, there are two things to know about Jack Downey.

He's a drunk. And he's an environmentalist.

He recycles other drunks. "I'm not a recovered alcoholic. ... I refer to myself as a drunk," says Downey, 65, who has kept booze from his lips for 24 years. He insists he's never met an alcoholic who wasn't a drunk first.

In the last 15 years, through Hedrick House, which Downey calls "a halfway house for drunks," he has recited in more than 1,300 alcoholics from the brink, much as he was tossed a lifeline when he was a ringout-swilling lush.

"I was one of the original recyclers in the country," Downey says. "I recycled drunks, if you will."

Officially, in the eyes of the Arizona Department of Behavioral Health Services, Hedrick House is a residential rehabilitation facility for recovering alcoholics.

It gets by mainly on private donations and the $10 a day each resident pays. It has operated on a budget of about $79,000 to $89,000 a year, quite a ways from the $10,000 or more an inpatient might be charged for a monthlong stay at some full-scale alcohol treatment centers.

A self-described cowboy with an ever-present Stetson, a colorful, sometimes salty vocabulary and a bull-sized dislike for anything smacking of governmental bureaucracy, Downey took over Hedrick House in 1977.

The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism's latest available figures show 707 halfway recovery houses for alcoholics nationwide among 6,493 alcohol treatment facilities. That 1989 total includes 1,261 alcohol treatment and general hospitals, psychiatric and other specialized facilities, 906 community mental health centers and 2,414 outpatient centers.

Other NIAAA figures point out the scope of the problem. It estimated 9.1 million Americans were alcoholics in 1980; an additional 5.9 million were abusers. And alcohol cost the United States an estimated $65.8 billion in lost productivity, $4.3 billion in crime and $2.6 billion in motor vehicle accidents as of the last available projection — for 1988, based on 1985 data.

A Tucson expert says there were 100,000 alcohol-related deaths in the country last year.

Hedrick House, named for the north side residential street where it's located, accommodates up to 30 men at any one time.

It differs from full treatment centers such as specialized hospital programs, which typically detain a person for three or four weeks for medical therapy and monitoring.

"The medical model programs are designed for people who are more physically debilitated and require more intensive medical monitoring," says Tom Downey, acting director for ADAPT, a county consortium dealing with drug abuse, alcoholism prevention and treatment.

Hedrick House, he says, "is a highly effective program for the recovering alcoholics who are willing to fully commit themselves to Jack's program."

Downey, who emphasizes his disdain for percentages, says Hedrick House's known success rate is 41.6 percent, based on those with whom he and his staff have had physical contact.

Since Thanksgiving 1965, Birdwell Lane United Methodist Church has worshipped and fellowshiped together. Many changes have taken place since this church was created. Actually the history of the church goes back further than 1965. Although there is only four United Methodist congregations presently in Howard County, Birdwell Lane United Methodist has the histories of three former congregations. In 1948, the Susanna Wesley Sunday School Class of First Methodist, Big Spring started a mission Sunday School at the West Side Community Center. The Sunday School took root and grew into a church named Park Methodist Church. 1952 was an important year for another church, called Center Point Methodist Church for it was that year that they merged with Park Methodist. The two churches melded into a new larger congregation with continued life and ministry in the following years. For the next twelve years the church remained in the area, which became increasingly commercialized. But tragedy was to befall the church. In the Fall of 1964, Park Methodist Church burned. This though did not spell the end of the church but only a temporary setback. Approximately two acres of land on north Birdwell Lane was given to the church. The first building to be constructed on the property was the parsonage in the Spring of 1965. Later that year the congregation set about rebuilding their church facilities. The new building consisted of an A-frame style sanctuary, and classroom and fellowship hall areas. The first services were held on Thanksgiving Day 1965. The present structure was completed in 1967 with the completion of additional classroom space. Another important year in the life of Birdwell Lane United Methodist Church took place in March of 1974. Kentwood United Methodist Church was merged with Birdwell Lane. This final union brought in financial assets that made for the early pay-off of the mortgage. January 5, 1975 was the formal dedication of the church called North Birdwell Lane United Methodist Church. Currently, the church is under a charge status with First United Methodist in Coahoma. One of the great things about this church is its diversity in history and membership. We still have members that were parts of the three former churches. They have come together into a common body of believers with the history and life of Park Methodist Center, Point Methodist and Kentwood United Methodist churches. Today, although the membership is older there is still much vitality and life left within this small church. I have been the pastor for nearly three years and I have enjoyed the worship services which are relaxed and informal. The congregation is loving and caring. We have a good time with our monthly fellowship dinners and weekly quilting bee. The church worship service is held Sunday morning at 9:30 A.M. with Sunday School following at 10:30 A.M. Nearly every Tuesday from 1:00 P.M. to 5:00 P.M. the ladies of the church gather to quilt and fellowship. We want to invite all to come and participate in our activities and fellowship. The East Fourth Street Baptist Church will focus on missions this Sunday at both the morning and evening worship services. Guest missionaries for the day will be Bob and Olga Nyberg. Bob is the director of language missions for the Colorado Baptist General Convention. He is a native of Stockholm, Sweden. Olga is a native of Ibague, Colombia. Golden Agers host covered dish luncheon

The Golden Agers of the First Church of God in Big Spring met for a covered dish luncheon Nov. 16, in fellowship hall. The theme, was reminiscing. Twenty-one members and two guests participated. Jean Kloss, Big Spring and Ed Hickson of Dallas were guests. Truett Thomas led the singing of "He Lives" followed by an expression of thanks to the congregation for all the prayers, cards, flowers and well wishes during Kathryn's recent critical illness. He stated "one of the most critical times was when she almost didn't make it, and the whole church knelt at the altar and prayed that evening. The next morning she was much better." He continued, "I picked up the Bible of a dead man in Lubbock and turned to the passage in Ecclesiastes that read, "There is a time to be born and a time to die, and added to it, "that's all the time you have so you should do all the good you can do to everybody you can."

Charles Harrington played some tapes of Jimmy Dean. One of them was about some I.O.U.'s found in his billfold that were years old. They contained thanks to mom for being my night watchman — waiting up for me all night many a night. Thanks for doing my cookin' and bakin' for doing my washin' and ironin', bein' my body guard — fixin' up my scratches, and my bumps and bruises and for dustin' my pants when they needed it — thanks for bein' my physician, nursin' me through spring fever and bein' my vet and takin' care of the many stray dogs I drug home on a rope and for healin' the pains of puppy love. Thanks for bein' in entertainment committee at Christmas time, Thanksgiving and birthdays and my construction foreman for kites, comforts etc. These were a very few debts that were long overdue and added up to more than I could ever repay I know she'll mark the bill paid in full through for one kiss and four little words, "Mom, I Love You."

Betty Reagan and Truett then sang, "Maggie". Charles Harrington then told a tale about Sam Cook of Coahoma coming in the blacksmith shop and asked the boys to help him find his old metal framed glasses. He had one earpiece hooked over an ear and the other in his mouth. The boys dutifully looked every place and went home by the time he found them.

Charles then sang, "I Will Talk To My Father For You" and "Every Need Supplied" after stating that "There's not a problem that prayer won't solve."

Eddie Hickson voiced the closing prayer.

Living Christmas tree is ready for song

By MARTHA E. FLORES Staff Writer

The 12th annual Living Christmas Tree performance at the First United Methodist Church, 400 Scurry St., will be December 7-8 at 7:30 p.m.

More than 250 people are involved in organizing and producing the event that has become a holiday tradition in Big Spring.

The choir, called Steeple People, consists of 88 singers who sing a combination of traditional and contemporary Christian music. The group is accompanied by a 35-piece orchestra. The other participants focus their efforts on the technical details and staging of the production.

The living tree is 40 feet in height and 30 feet in width. The technical crew will spend 8 to 10 hours setting up the tree. The superstructure is made of steel and wooden platforms, consisting of 11 tiers. Eighteen inches are given to each singer for space.

In the areas on each side of the tree, an original play will be performed. It is a drama with 24 actors that tells a story with a Christmas theme. This year playwrights, Ron and Pam Moss, have co-authored the script, which is based on the theme "Christmas is calling me home."

"We remember Christmas through our childhood things," said Gil Oxendine, music director. "This beckons us home. The home which is important in the material world, and the home in the spiritual world."

The chorus enhances the storyline with a song after each scene, he said.

Some of the Christian songwriters whose work was chosen by Oxendine for the performance include Paul Johnson, Pedro Yon and Krogstad.

The actors, musicians and singers started working on the performance as early as Nov. 9. They will continue to practice throughout the week prior to the performance.

"We have had a steady stream of people coming in to get tickets," Oxendine said. "It is best to go as soon as possible. And if there are no tickets available for your performance of choice, please leave your name and number. Some people who have tickets, and then are not able to go do return them."

The performances are free but a ticket is needed for admission. Tickets are available at First United Methodist Church.

Rural poverty Welfare mother lives on edge

EMPIRE, Mich. (AP) — Darlene Irish is 26, unemployed and single, with an 11-month-old daughter.

She depends on the state to live, and most of that state aid still is making its way to her, despite big cuts in Michigan's welfare programs.

But even the $66 a month the state has taken away is a hefty chunk for a woman living on the edge.

"When you get cut, you don't have the money for shoes, for clothes," Irish says. "You take out money for the diapers. You take out money for gas to get into town."

In a week, the money is gone. Irish is not among the 82,614 Michigan adults whose $200-a-month General Assistance benefits were cut off Oct. 1 by order of Republican Gov. John Engler. Instead, she's one of the 676,263 covered by the state family aid program.

They have lost emergency needs money, adult dental care, about 2 percent of their general checks and all of their allowances for winter heat.

Irish has a high school diploma but little training. She can't afford child care for Dixie Lynn. The baby's father is in prison.

She doesn't show hopelessness.

Nor does she show resolve to get a better life. She just talks about surviving.

"I could go out and get a job, but you don't get the satisfaction of a decent wage," she said. If she does work, she said, she will lose so much welfare she will be unable to afford to live.

With her baby girl to mind, she can't even scrape together the extra cash she used to get by scavenging ditches and Lake Michigan beach for dime-deposit returnable bottles.

Irish lives in Empire, a Lake Michigan bed-and-breakfast town filled in summer with tourists. Her rented house trailer is so small beds barely fit in the bedrooms. It is almost impossible to touch the front and back walls in the same reach. The living room furniture consists of two chairs held together by tape.

Dixie Lynn giggles and plays inside a hand-me-down pen, passed along by neighbors. The mesh netting on the sides is mended with bits of string and wire ties from bread bags.

Irish gets $195 a month in food stamps and a Medicaid card for health care. The state Women, Infants and Children program provides cereal and formula and juice for her daughter. Michigan Aid to Families with Dependent Children now gives $374 a month instead of $440 to pay the rent, electricity, put fuel in the furnace and gas in the car, buy clothes and shoes and provide anything else the family needs.

"You've practically got to spend one week and not the next," Irish said, speaking slowly, softly. "I get by. Sometimes the refrigerator is bare, but I get by."

The budget cut ate into the cushion that keeps her from the edge, she said.

Basically, Darlene Irish has been on that edge all of her life — fetching pop cans for dimes, carrying in the landlord's firewood and washing dishes for rent money.

"It's so hard to keep your head above water, on or off welfare."

She can't understand the rationale of the governor's cuts:

"Why cut where it already hurts? I don't know if he's aware of what he's doing. If he could live in poor people's shoes, he would realize how hard it is to get by."

Irish had her chance earlier this month. She sought out the governor at a local market during his three-county swing through northern Michigan.

With Dixie Lynn on her hip, she told him about the cuts, about having no money for baby shoes.

Welfare cuts strip woman of hope

DETROIT (AP) — A drug addiction, a stint as a prostitute and four children out of wedlock didn't strip Patricia Wilson of hope.

Gov. John Engler did that, she says, when he cut General Assistance welfare benefits for her and 82,613 other Michigan residents last month.

Evicted from her rented home, she has sought refuge in a shelter on Detroit's seedy Cass Corridor.

"It's a living nightmare," said Wilson, 31, whose new home is in a neighborhood infested with prostitutes and crack dealers.

"This is America, land of money and opportunity. This is Detroit, the Motor City. Engler took all the dreams away."

Homeless people have long endured the streets of the nation's seventh-largest city, where the winters can be as bitter as the crime. But despair is more evident lately at Wilson's temporary home, the Detroit-Wayne County Homeless Union shelter.

Filthy flystrips twirl slowly in cigarette smoke wafting through a large room crammed with 100 cots, most occupied by young men.

Strangers bound by poverty exchange high-five hand slaps, but few smile. Many watch television; others doze or lose themselves in music from stereo headsets.

"Please, No Knives, Guns or Paraphernalia in the Drop-In Center," one flier admonishes. Another explains "Why Engler Must Go."

The Republican governor's populist pledge to reduce state spending — resulting in cuts to welfare, among other programs — has caused a curious role reversal in metropolitan Detroit.

Residents of the usually detached suburbs have responded with food and clothing donations. But Detroit landlords have evicted dozens of former GA recipients and threaten to oust thousands more in coming weeks.

"They didn't waste time," said Wilson, who was evicted within seven days of Engler's cancellation Oct. 1 of payments to able-bodied, childless adults.

Wilson said she had qualified for benefits when her mother assumed legal guardianship of her daughter, Katie, 15, and sons Mardell, 12, Laydell, 4, and Nidell, 8 months.

The family agreed to the arrangement until Wilson could recover financially and overcome a drug addiction.

"All the landlords heard on television was that these cuts were coming, and they were prepared," said Wilson, a former barmaid and clerk-typist who hasn't worked in three years. "I left one day for a few hours. When I came back, there were new locks."

Life even with the monthly $200 General Assistance checks was a struggle for Wilson, who said she often didn't receive payments because state computers frequently malfunctioned. She turned briefly to prostitution to survive.

Monthly rent on her former three-bedroom brick bungalow cost $200, forcing her to make ends meet with $183 in monthly food stamps and a personal-needs allowance.

"You eat a lot of chicken," she said. "You can bake it, fry it, stew it, boil it. You eat a lot of rice and potatoes. Then there's the almighty beans: lima beans, pinto beans."

Though she's trying to conquer a cocaine addiction, Wilson scoffs at the suggestion that some homeless people may have used General Assistance to finance drug and alcohol habits.

"You can't even afford to buy a bottle of wine," she said. "It wasn't enough, but I made ends meet with it. It covered the bills in the summer. In the winter, you're always in debt because you have to pay for heat."

Parents teach compassion

BALTIMORE (AP) — What began as a lesson for their children has grown into a weekly outing for a couple who travel from their suburban home each Sunday to hand out bag lunches to the poor.

"We didn't really do it for this," said Anthony Franquelli, pointing to the people in a downtown park he and his family had just given nearly 400 bag lunches. "We did it to teach our children compassion."

The lesson has lasted since April and fed hundreds of the city's poor. The project, named Simple Sacrifice for the Homeless, began as a kitchen table discussion about what the family could do for those less fortunate.

"We came up with a couple of ideas, and I didn't want to visit nursing homes, so I suggested this," said Anthony Franquelli Jr., 11.

The parents — Franquelli is a 47-year-old manager in the printing department at the University of Maryland, and his wife is a 45-year-old homemaker — have profited from the lesson, too.

"The greatest thing we have learned is that it happens to all kinds of people," said Angie Franquelli. "There's one woman who has an apartment, but doesn't have enough money for food."

The family paid for the lunches, which cost about $1 each, until August, when they started giving out hundreds of sandwiches a week. They now accept donations.

"I'd just like to see more families do this. It's not scary, it's not all drunks and drug addicts like people think," Mrs. Franquelli said. "Most people are two paychecks from the street."

Mrs. Franquelli said her family spends an average $100 a week on the lunches, not including donations. Their son has donated money he raised selling lemonade. Daughter Jill, 13, contributes money earned baby-sitting.

"How would we eat if we did not have people like her?" Tony Clay said as he waited Mrs. Franquelli's visit. "Most people would be begging, stealing and panhandling."

Clay said he has a job but is homeless because he cannot afford the security deposit and other costs needed to rent an apartment.

"Someone here does care about us," he said.

Mrs. Franquelli said her family spends several hours on Saturday afternoons making the sandwiches and bags them on Sunday mornings before driving the 11 miles into Baltimore from their Severn home.

She said her family plans to continue the giveaways even though she has been diagnosed with a terminal liver disease that eventually will require a transplant.

"I would rather have my terminal illness than be on the street, if you could have a choice," Mrs. Franquelli said.

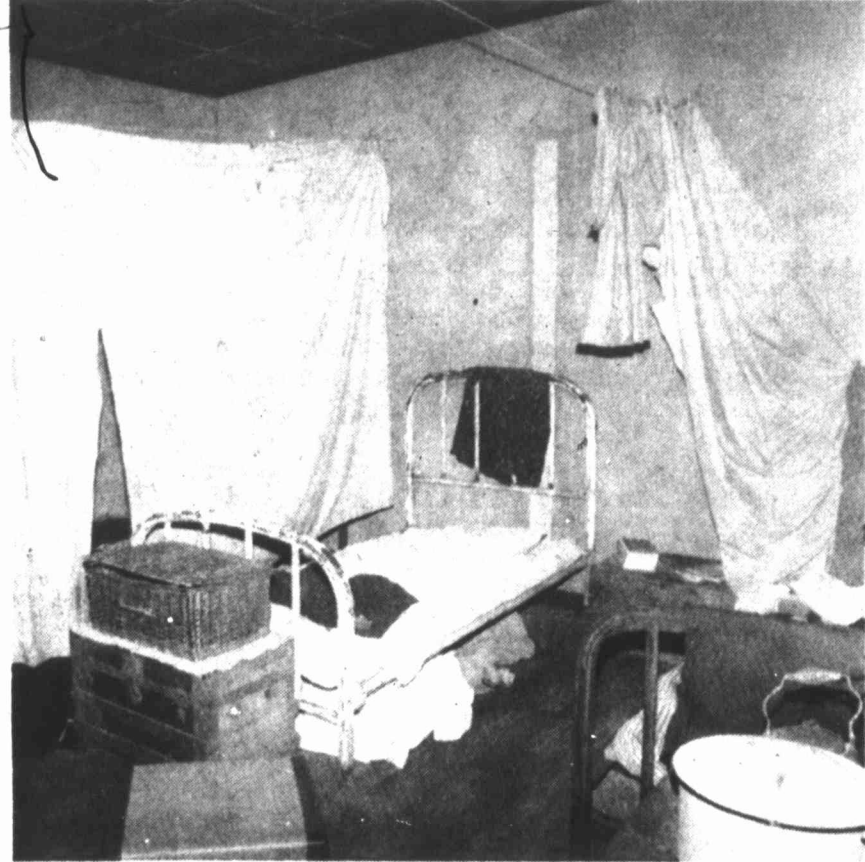

Her husband said his family's problems pale beside what he sees every weekend.

"There are people crawling up to us on crutches in the cold," he said. "I complain when I have to walk the dog in the cold."

Soaring high

A bald eagle soars across the Penobscot River between Bangor and Brewer, Maine, recently. The eagles have found the area a good feeding ground due to the increase in Atlantic Salmon in recent years.

On exhibit for the next six months at the Museum of the City of New York is "Remember the Children: Daniel's Story," which depicts the Holocaust through a child's eyes. This is a ghetto room where an entire family would be allocated one of two beds, little food and no privacy for months, awaiting deportation and almost certain death.

Viewing Holocaust through child's eyes

NEW YORK (AP) — Faint photographs of children with faraway eyes hang on the museum's walls. Schoolchildren are asked to touch one of the 1.5 million dots making up the photographs and give it a name, as if it were a real child.

That simple exercise holds a message of tolerance for American youngsters that reaches powerfully across five decades.

The 1.5 million tiny photographic dots represent the 1.5 million very real children whose lives turned from normalcy to death in Nazi concentration camps — for no other reason than that they were Jewish, Gypsies or others deemed by their oppressors to be "undesirables."

It's part of a unique traveling exhibit, "Remember the Children: Daniel's Story," which depicts the Holocaust through a child's eyes. It began a six-month stay this month at the Museum of the City of New York.

Developed by the federally mandated U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council, it has previously appeared at Chicago's Field Museum and the Natural History Museum in Los Angeles.

It is scheduled to travel next spring to Albany, N.Y., and then on to New Orleans in October — where David Duke, a former Klansman who has expressed Nazi sympathies in the past, ran unsuccessfully for Louisiana governor.

A permanent version will be housed at the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington. It is scheduled to open in April 1993.

"Daniel's Story" invites children of all backgrounds to draw lessons from the Holocaust for their own lives.

The exhibit tells the story of a 6-year-old German Jew in 1933. "Daniel" isn't just one child, but an accurate historical composite of what many children like him experienced from the rise of Nazism until the end of World War II. Daniel and his father survive a concentration camp; his mother and sister do not.

Daniel's story may be about European children who died 50 years ago — but the lessons about prejudice, stereotyping, put-downs and bigotry take on very contemporary meanings for American children.

One simple, poignant question Daniel asks in the five-minute opening video seems to resound with young audiences: "Have you ever been punished for something you didn't do?"

"The story made me feel very sad because the Jews did not do anything," said Ebony Bell, a sixth-grader from P.S. 149 in the impoverished East New York section of Brooklyn who was among the first to view the exhibit. "They should have the same rights as the Nazis. There should have been peace."

"I don't think you could find a more timely exhibit for this city," said Robert Macdonald, director of the New York museum.

The exhibit manages to be graphic while omitting the most harrowing aspects of the Holocaust. It's geared for children 10 and older, but even some 8-year-olds might grasp its meanings, said Sara J. Bloomfield, executive director of the Holocaust Council.

Kids pass through a simulation of the comforting living room that might have been home to a German Jew like Daniel during the 1930s. An old-fashioned radio plays Robert Schumann's "Scenes of Childhood." Family pictures and a menorah, a ritual Jewish candelabra, sit on a wooden mantelpiece. A white picket fence completes this cozy setting.

White picket becomes barbed wire in the next exhibit room, showing the mind-crushing changes the Nazis forced on its victims.

Posters suddenly show storm-troopers and their snarling dogs, and sad-faced children forced to wear yellow stars with the German word "Jude," or Jew.

The exhibit then simulates a ghetto room, where families from all over Europe were penned into tiny rooms with little food, few earthly possessions and no privacy for months awaiting deportation to concentration camps and almost certain death.

Buyers lured with sales

NEW YORK (AP) — Having digested millions of pounds of turkey and trimmings and sated themselves on football games, Americans turn today to the next order of business for Thanksgiving weekend — hitting stores and malls for the start of the Christmas shopping season.

Some will be lined up, waiting for stores to open. But consumers are expected to browse more and buy less this year, analysts said.

"There are some good buys out there, but people don't have the wherewithal to take advantage of them," said Susan Tiffany, managing editor of Everybody's Money, a quarterly consumer magazine published by the Credit Union National Association in Madison, Wis.

Retailers will attempt to lure consumers with special sales and markdowns on merchandise before Christmas Day — a phenomenon virtually unknown in retailing until the late 1980s.

Markdowns began showing up several years ago as consumers began shopping later and later in December, giving storeowners a large case of the jitters.

Then, in 1989, several big department store chains, all owned by the Campeau Corp. of Canada, slashed prices in a vain attempt to avert bankruptcy proceedings. Other retailers, trying to stay competitive, cut prices too.

Consumers got used to the idea and held off their purchases until prices came down.

Unlike past holiday seasons, markdowns showing up this season generally will be part of plans drawn up by retailers months ago.

Dayton Hudson Corp. Chairman Kenneth Macke said his battle plan was set, but declined to divulge details.

Thomas J. Tashjian, an analyst with First Manhattan Co., said some retailers — especially those in the Southeast and Midwest — will escape heavy discounting. But in California and the Northeast, where the economy has been most sluggish, retailers will be forced to cut prices to bring in sales, he said.

Consumers don't appear to be in the mood to spend this year. The Commerce Department said Wednesday that consumer spending dropped 0.3 percent in October, the biggest decline in six months.

"People are hunkering down... We still find ourselves in a recessionary setting," said Janet Mangano, a retail industry analyst with Burnham Securities Inc.

"I'm not going to buy a lot," said Barbara Shaw, a 32-year-old teacher's aide who was interviewed on a recent trip to a Milwaukee mall.

Shaw said she's more concerned about putting food on the table than about putting presents under the tree for her three children.

"When you finish paying rent and utility bills and other kinds of bills, there's nothing left," she said.

In Detroit, General Motors Corp. said it was canceling bonuses this season for salaried workers in a move expected to save more than $60 million.

About 100,000 GM employees in the United States and another 7,000 in Canada won't get the $600 holiday bonus, company spokesman John Mueller said.

GM's 300,000 hourly workers, covered by the United Auto Workers, will get their bonuses, Mueller said. The bonuses will be paid next week.

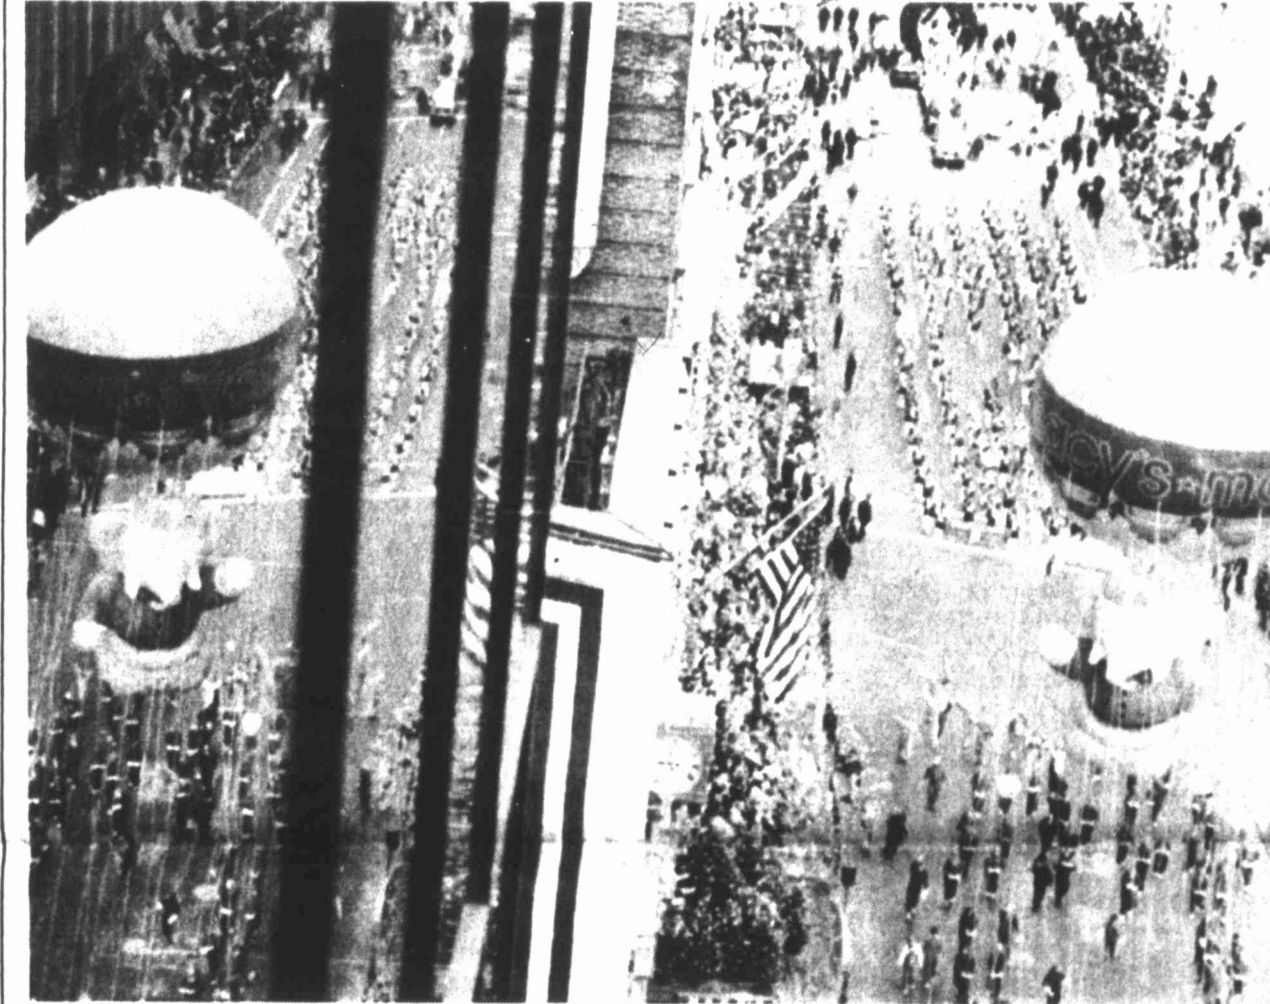

GM, which is facing one of the worst economic slumps in its history, has lost more than $2.2 billion through the first nine months this year.

Babar seeing double

NEW YORK — Babar, King of the Elephants, is reflected in a building window on New York's 34th Street on the way to the end of the route in the 65th annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. Babar, a classic children's storybook character, makes his debut in the 1991 parade.

Court upholds refusal to rent an apartment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A state appeals court ruled the religious rights of a couple would be violated if they were forced by fair housing laws to rent an apartment to an unmarried man and woman.

The state Court of Appeal in Los Angeles ruled Wednesday that landlords John and Agnes Donahue violated state discrimination laws by refusing to rent to Verna Terry and Robert Wilder in January 1987.

But the court said the Donahues, who described themselves as devout Catholics, were entitled to an exemption because of their "sincerely held religious belief that fornication and its facilitation are sins."

The court's 2-1 ruling said that the state's interest in protecting unmarried couples from discrimination was not so paramount as to outweigh the Donahues' right to free exercise of religion under the state Constitution.

The court overturned a ruling by the California Employment and Fair Housing Commission that the Donahues violated two state laws by refusing to rent to Terry and Wilder, who were awarded $7,480 in damages in 1988.

"We felt we were perfectly within our rights," said Donahue, 71. "If it had gone against us, we were prepared to appeal to the state Supreme Court."

In 1987, after Terry and Wilder filed a complaint, the housing commission ruled the Donahues had violated state laws prohibiting "marital status" discrimination and the Unruh Civil Rights Act, which prohibits arbitrary discrimination.

The commission said it couldn't rule on the Donahues' religious freedom claims because the state Constitution prohibited it from doing so.

The landlords appealed, and a Superior Court judge ordered the commission to reconsider its ruling. The commission appealed the judge's order, leading to Wednesday's decision.

overdrafts for years on their accounts at the House bank, Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., was forced to shut the place down and launch an ethics committee investigation.

During all this, the unemployment rate climbed, and Democrats promised a package of bills to serve as an economic stimulus. These would include a tax cut for the middle class, extended benefits for the long-term unemployed and the highway bill.

It would be months, however, before these tasks would begin to be addressed.

Bush fought Congress' attempt to reverse a series of Supreme Court rulings that made it more difficult to sue for job discrimination. He called it a quota bill. Only months later, after his stubbornness began to anger some Republican senators, did Bush agree to compromise.

The nomination of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court was moving along as scripted until someone leaked that the committee was told of a sex harassment accusation against Thomas from a former underling, Anita Hill, and the panel decided to hold public hearings.

In the end, Thomas won his lifetime seat on the high bench and Hill became a darling of the feminists. But the public opinion polls showed Congress had never been held in lower esteem.

The annual spending bills had to get done, and they were, but only after another round of vetoes from a president stiff-arming abortion rights provisions.

The president insisted that the recession was over and vetoed two bills to extend the jobless payments before agreeing to a third.

The $151 billion highway bill was five years in the planning and was supposed to be done by Oct. 1. But House Democrats mistakenly thought lawmakers would support raising gasoline taxes, and the bill had to be redrafted. It passed on Wednesday, the final day.

Cavs block 76ers, 107-97

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Cleveland Cavaliers, certainly not the best team in the NBA, could be the best on the block.

The Cavaliers rejected 17 Philadelphia shots Wednesday night and beat the 76ers for the second time in two nights, 107-97.

Larry Nance, who blocked five shots in the Cavaliers' 95-91 victory on Tuesday, came back with eight more in the rematch, while John Williams blocked six.

"A lot of times we're not shooting well, but our defense is carrying us through," Nance said. "I think that (blocked shots) is from good positioning."

Brad Daugherty scored 31 points for Cleveland, and his one blocked shot gave him 25 for the season, just 21 fewer than he had all of last season.

Lakers 89, Heat 87
Los Angeles extended its winning streak to nine when Sedale Threatt hit a 17-footer as time expired in Miami.

The Heat's Grant Long stole the ball from Byron Scott and scored with 8.6 seconds left, tying the score 87-87. Then Threatt's shot bounced high off the rim and went in for the Lakers.

Scott finished with 23 points and James Worthy 22 for Los Angeles. Rony Seikaly had 17 points and 11 rebounds for Miami, which has averaged just 84 points while losing three straight games and falling out of first place in the Atlantic Division.

Celtics 101, Magic 92
At Boston, Larry Bird scored 10 of his season-high 32 points during a 23-5 third-quarter rally against Orlando.

Trailing 48-40, the Magic outscored Boston 14-3 in the last 1:10 of the second quarter and the first 3:03 of the third, and a 3-pointer by Scott Skiles gave Orlando a 54-51 lead.

Pistons 100, Hawks 91
Isiah Thomas scored 15 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter as Detroit won at home to complete a two-game sweep of Atlanta.

The Hawks led 87-79 with 8:10 left before Thomas scored nine straight points, including a 3-pointer that gave the Pistons an 88-87 lead with 6:07 remaining.

The game was tied 90-90 with 1:59 left when Thomas was flagrantly fouled by Kevin Willis while driving the lane. Thomas made two free throws, then hit a jumper on the ensuing possession to make it 94-90 with 1:27 remaining.

Spurs 106, Nets 100
David Robinson had 31 points, 15 rebounds and seven blocked shots at San Antonio, which beat visiting New Jersey despite 26 turnovers.

The Nets trailed only 91-90 with 4:23 remaining, but the Spurs used a 9-1 run, including two jumpers by Robinson, to make it 100-91 with 1:01 remaining.

Suns 141, Kings 100
The Suns reversed a 15-point loss at Sacramento a day earlier by routing the Kings in Phoenix.

Tim Perry, in just his third start of the season, scored a career-high 25 points and helped the Suns hold Lionel Simmons to one point, 18 under his average. Kevin Johnson had 22 points and 13 assists and Jeff Hornacek added 20 points for Phoenix.

Mavericks 113, Pacers 106
Rodney McCray scored 20 points, including a decisive 20-foot jumper with 53 seconds left, as Dallas won at home against Indiana.

McCray's shot gave the Mavericks a 108-103 lead, sealing their fifth victory in six starts.

Two free throws by Chuck Person closed the Pacers to 103-101 with 3:07 left before Fat Lever hit a 20-footer with the shot clock running down, boosting Dallas' lead to four with 1:59 remaining.

Jazz 113, Hornets 107
Karl Malone had 31 points and 15 rebounds and Jeff Malone scored eight of his 26 points during a decisive 16-5 run, leading Utah over Charlotte in Salt Lake City.

Timberwolves 101, Nuggets 92
Minnesota won its second straight game after a 1-9 start as Sam Mitchell and Gerald Glass scored 22 points each.

Beuerlein leads way for Cowboys

IRVING (AP) — A year ago the Dallas Cowboys curled up and died after Troy Aikman was injured.

This season they are flourishing without their starter and making a wild-card playoff surge thanks to a quarterback Al Davis didn't want around.

Steve Beuerlein, who started 15 games for the Los Angeles Raiders and was 8-7, paid another dividend on Jimmy Johnson's quarterback insurance policy.

Beuerlein, obtained in August for a 1992 fourth round draft pick, hit Michael Irvin with a 66-yard touchdown pass that gave Dallas a 20-10 Thanksgiving Day victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"Troy and Steve are both good quarterbacks," said Irvin. "Troy has a stronger arm but look what a fantastic job Steve did with just a short week. The more we work together the better we will get."

The Cowboys wilted last year when Aikman was injured and backup Babe Laufenberg couldn't produce victories in the final two games, keeping the Cowboys from the playoffs.

Which is why Johnson got rid of Laufenberg in training camp and traded for Beuerlein.

"Beuerlein did just a great job filling in," Johnson said. "He executed the game plan, didn't make any turnovers, then hit the big play."

Aikman suffered a knee injury against Washington last week that will keep him out at least three weeks. Beuerlein came into that game and threw a touchdown pass to Irvin in a 24-21 victory.

"This year it doesn't matter whether we have Steve or Troy back there because they both can move the team," said center Mark Stepanoski.

The Cowboys (8-5) are in a favorable position in the wild-card race. The Steelers (5-8) were virtually eliminated from contention in the AFC.

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys running back Emmitt Smith (22) hits a high five with teammate Alfredo Roberts (87) after scoring a first quarter touchdown against the Pittsburgh Steelers on a six-yard run Thursday.

Irvin caught eight passes for 157 yards. On the touchdown pass from Beuerlein with 7:22 to play, he shook off tackles by safety Gary Jones and cornerback Rod Woodson.

Beuerlein, making his first NFL start in two years, found Irvin cutting across the middle. Jones missed and then Irvin shook off Woodson at the Steelers 15-yard line to score standing up.

"The 'playmaker' made the play," said Beuerlein, who was limping on a sprained left ankle. "He beat the safety to the ball. I was hoping he was get there first. It's the kind of play you expect him to make and the kind of play we needed to break the game open."

Dallas led only 13-10 when

Lions move into first place tie with Bears

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — To a man, the Detroit Lions feel it was the most important game the team has played in over 20 years. And who could argue?

The Lions took advantage of six Chicago turnovers Thursday and moved into a tie with the Bears for first place in the NFC Central with a 16-6 victory.

Not only did the Lions (9-4) beat the Bears (9-4) at their own game, they also may have planted doubt as to which team now is dominant in the division. The Bears had beaten the Lions 20-10 in Soldier Field on Nov. 3.

"We beat them by 10 and they beat us by 10," said Chicago quarterback Jim Harbaugh, who hurt himself with four interceptions. "We'll have to prove who is the better team on the field. We have to suck it up and play the last three games and fight it out."

Detroit began the day with a one-game lead over the rest of the teams still in the wild-card race. Thursday's victory added a half-game to that cushion, in addition to giving the Lions a chance to be being divisional champions.

The Lions, who have yet to win outdoors, host the New York Jets on Dec. 8 in the Silverdome, then finish the regular season at Green Bay and Buffalo.

The Bears, who had won their three previous dome games this season, play the Packers and Tampa Bay in Soldier Field, then finish the regular season at San Francisco.

Detroit hasn't qualified for the playoffs since 1983, when Murray missed a last-second field goal that let the 49ers off with a 24-23 victory.

"This is a big win, and hopefully bigger wins will come as we go along," said Lions quarterback Erik Kramer, who completed 9 of 27 passes for 108 yards, including a 9-yard touchdown toss to Robert Clark.

It was an emotional victory for the Lions, who were playing their second game since offensive guard Mike Utley was paralyzed from the chest down after a freak injury against the Los Angeles Rams. Before the game, offensive tackle Lomas Brown read a message to Utley on national television.

In the dressing room afterward, Lions coach Wayne Fontes said, "Mike, if you're still watching, God bless you. Have a happy Thanksgiving."

Chicago controlled everything in this game except the mistakes. The Bears gained 319 yards, holding Detroit to 208. Chicago also had an 18-11 advantage in first downs and controlled the ball 33-50.

Harbaugh, setting a team record for completions, completed 27 of 47 passes for 244 yards. Harbaugh has 235 completions this season, breaking the previous record of 225 set by Bill Wade in 1962.

Harbaugh has thrown at least one touchdown pass in each of the Bears' nine victories. When he hasn't thrown a scoring pass, the Bears have lost.

Kevin Butler kicked field goals of 27 and 22 yards, but missed one from 37 yards out when Detroit was leading 13-6 in the fourth quarter.

Aggies gig Longhorns, 31-14

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M's offense had trouble scoring against the Texas defense, so linebacker Marcus Buckley and punt returner Kevin Smith decided to help out.

Buckley intercepted Texas' first pass of the game and returned it 19 yards for a touchdown and Smith broke open a rugged defensive duel in the third quarter with a 73-yard punt return, leading the No. 10 Aggies to a 31-14 victory Thursday night.

The Aggies, who clinched their 16th SWC title last week in a 65-6 victory over Southern Methodist, accepted the Cotton Bowl's week-old invitation to play No. 3 Florida State in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 1. The Aggies improved to 10-1, 8-0 in the Southwest Conference.

"We accept it, the race is officially over," Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "We felt if we could hang in there, the defense would win us the game."

"I was prepared to go into the fourth quarter and win with defense."

But Smith's return and a pair of second-half touchdown runs by Greg Hill helped the Aggies to finally wear down the stout Texas defense, ranked fourth in the nation.

"I thought Greg Hill ran hard all night," Slocum said. "He took some shots but kept getting back up for more."

Texas A&M's defense, ranked first in the nation, held Texas (5-6, 4-4) in check in the first half and eased to a 10-7 halftime lead. The Aggies extended it to 17-7 on the first drive of the third period on Hill's 2-yard run.

On his big return, Smith fielded the punt, made a move to his right and darted 73 yards for the touchdown. He also had a 71-yard punt return for a touchdown against Rice earlier this season.

COLLEGE STATION — Texas defenders Bubba Jacques (25) and Boone Powell work to stop Texas A&M running back Doug Carter (32) during first half action Thursday.

"I'll never forget this," Aggies linebacker Jason Atkinson said. "It's a family feeling the way we pulled together this year. We started celebrating after Kevin's punt return."

The Longhorns capitalized on an 18-yard interception return by Grady Cavness with a 3-yard touchdown run by Rodrick Walker with 8:44 to play.

Hill got his second touchdown on a 2-yard run with 3:03 to play.

"This win tonight was a team effort," A&M quarterback Bucky Richardson said. "The defense played great, we played good and the special teams played good."

Reds trade Davis to LA Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers may have lost first baseman Eddie Murray to the New York Mets, but they traded for another big name to join Darryl Strawberry in the outfield — Eric Davis.

Davis went to the Los Angeles Dodgers on Wednesday night as part of a four-player deal that sent right-hander Tim Lincecum to the Reds. Cincinnati also got reliever John Wetteland and sent reliever Kip Gross to the Dodgers.

A native of Los Angeles, Davis leaves the Reds after six-plus seasons, including their World Championship season in 1990.

"I'm happy about going home, but it's tough leaving the city of Cincinnati," Davis said. "I have a lot of great memories there. I won a world championship there."

He is going home to play with Strawberry, his boyhood friend, after a career that has been plagued by injuries. Davis, 29, played in only 89 games last season, hitting .235 with 11 home runs and 33 RBIs.

He fell out of favor with Reds manager Lou Piniella when he decided to sit out most of the second half of the season because of what Davis called chronic fatigue resulting from his kidney injury in the 1990 World Series. He lacerated the kidney while trying to make a diving catch in Game 4.

Davis has never played more than 135 games in a season, but the Dodgers said that after talking to Cincinnati's team physician they are convinced the outfielder is healthy.

Other outstanding defensive players for Runnels were Amada Taylor, Marissa Hilario and Charlene Bargainer.

The win evens their record to 1-1 for the season.

The girls just couldn't get it going offensively as they could only muster a whole 10 points for the game. Leading scorer for Runnels was Stacia Lofton with four points. Stephanie Jones, Teri Gonzales and Nikki Zertuche were the other scorers for the ladies. The shots were there but the Runnels girls just could not convert. Reporter quits over rewritten story

SEATTLE (AP) — Former KIRO-TV reporter Mark Sauter said his story on arrest warrants against several University of Washington football players was intended "to raise some tough questions about the Huskies."

Sauter's story was pulled, and he resigned on Tuesday, accusing KIRO chief executive and president Ken Hatch of "cronyism" with university officials.

KIRO management did air a version of the story on Wednesday night, but Sauter said: "The intent ... was to do public relations damage control."

He said his own version essentially died last Friday, when Hatch gave information on the warrants to school officials. Hatch officially killed Sauter's story on Monday, after criticism from the public and the university.

The decision to air the story came after Hatch met with members of the station's news operation, anchorwoman Susan Hutchison told viewers.

OSU Cowboys in NIT finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Byron Houston had one of those nights big men usually fool around about at practice or can only dream of.

The 6-foot-7, 250-pound power player went outside to help No. 11 Oklahoma State advance to the championship game of the Preseason NIT.

The senior matched his career total for 3-pointers with five during a 34-point, 15-rebound effort in the Cowboys' 74-63 semifinal victory over No. 24 Pittsburgh on Wednesday night.

Oklahoma State (4-0) will play No. 18 Georgia Tech in Friday night's championship game. The Yellow Jackets advanced with a wild 120-107 victory over Texas.

Elsewhere, Michigan State upended No. 2 Arkansas 86-71 to win the Maui Invitational. No. 6 North Carolina beat Houston 68-65, ninth-ranked Louisiana State took Middle Tennessee State 96-65, No. 16 Alabama defeated Tennessee Tech 105-85, No. 17 Georgetown downed Hawaii Loa 101-76 and Minnesota routed No. 25 Arizona State 69-37.

"I think people that don't know Byron think of him only as an inside power player and I was glad he had a chance to take some shots from the perimeter because he is an outstanding shooter," Oklahoma State coach Eddie Sutton said. "I was happy with the way he broke it open from 3-point range when he seized the opportunity."

While Houston was most of Oklahoma State's offense, the whole team deserved credit for the defense which held Pitt (2-1) scoreless for 7:39 in the second half during a 14-0 run.

"We got the ball to our main man and we played very good defense," Sutton said. "We did a good job on the defensive boards."

There were plenty of chances for defensive rebounds as Pitt shot just 37 percent (24-for-64) including a 3-for-14 effort from 3-point range.

"We missed some easy shots and some shots from the foul line and their swarming type defense took us out of our patterns," Pitt coach Paul Evans said.

The Panthers were within 54-53 with 10:05 left when Eric Mobley scored down low.

Houston had been 5-for-15 from 3-point range in his 97-game career until making it 10-for-21 against Pitt.

"You never know if your shots, long or short, are going to go down," Houston said. "My teammates got me the ball when I was open and I hit the shots."

Darren Morningstar led Pitt with 15 points.

Georgia Tech spread its scoring around as Malcolm Mackey had 28 points and Matt Geiger and Jon Barry added 25 each. The Yellow Jackets took big leads three times, but Texas (2-1) just couldn't rally a third time against the more physical frontline of Georgia Tech.

"We lost our composure but we didn't lose our guts," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "When they cut it to two Malcolm and Matt got the big baskets."

Texas was within 70-68 with 14:56 to play after having trailed 15-2 after 3 minutes and 50-30 with 6:05 to play in the first half. But the Longhorns ran out of comebacks when the Yellow Jackets broke from the two-point lead with a 19-7 run.

"I'm satisfied from those reports and from talking to Eric today that he will be healthy, that he will be happy, that he will be extremely productive in a Dodger uniform," Dodgers executive vice president Fred Claire said.

Davis said that leaving the artificial turf of Riverfront Stadium for the natural grass of Dodger Stadium will help him avoid injury.

"It's not fair to say I'm injury-prone because I've never injured myself playing offense," he said. "I've always been a courageous defensive player. I've always been able to make things happen defensively as well as offensively. I run into walls, I dive on artificial surface."

Under terms of Davis' contract with the Reds, the Dodgers were one of six teams to which he could be traded without his approval. Davis will make $3.1 million in 1992 and be eligible for free agency at the end of the season.

Talk that Davis would eventually be a Dodger began as soon as Strawberry moved West last year. Davis said his buddy applauded the trade.

Brown defends WBC title

LAS VEGAS (AP) — James "Buddy" McGirt thinks he and Simon Brown are just the fighters to restore some lost glamour to boxing's welterweight division.

They plan to try to do that Friday night when Brown defends his World Boxing Council 147-pound title against McGirt, a former junior welterweight champion in a scheduled 12-round fight.

"Since Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns have left, the welterweights haven't had much attention," McGirt said. "It took Simon and me to prove there are good little fighters."

These two fighters aren't just good, they're superb.

Brown, a Jamaican native who lives in Germantown, Md., has lost only once, and that was six years ago, while McGirt is riding a 16-fight winning streak and has lost only twice in 57 fights.

Still, neither have gotten the recognition that might go with their records, fighting in a division devoid of big names.

"I haven't gotten the big fights I deserve," said Brown, who has held portions of the welterweight title for 3½ years.

Brown's lack of recognition is easy enough to understand, even for a fighter many boxing experts rate as one of the best around, in any division.

One look at his title fight record is all that's needed.

Brown's title defenses were basically against a bunch of no-names such as Mario Matreli and Jorge Maysonet, in places like Rochester, N.Y., and Springfield, Mass.

Not until he stopped Maurice Blocker in Las Vegas earlier this year on the undercard of the Mike Tyson-Donovan "Razor" Ruddock fight to unify the WBC and International Boxing Federation crowns has he had a name opponent in a big-time boxing atmosphere.

"I have been mismanaged in the past," said Brown, who now manages himself.

Hard filling in for LT

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Ray Handley and Sam Wyche aren't the only ones worried whether Lawrence Taylor will play Sunday when the New York Giants go against the Cincinnati Bengals.

So are Bobby Abrams and Corey Miller. They aren't as well known as the coaches of the Giants and Bengals. However, they might be the guys faced with the job of filling in for Taylor at outside linebacker for the Giants.

Taylor has missed only one game because of injury in his 11-year career. No. 2 could come this weekend because of a sprained left knee sustained Sunday as the Giants beat Tampa Bay 21-14.

Handley has listed the perennial Pro Bowl linebacker as doubtful. Taylor just doesn't know. He has a history of being able to play in pain. He has played with broken bones in his foot, torn ligaments in his thumb, badly pulled hamstrings, a sprained arch, a chipped ankle and an assortment of other bumps and bruises.

"If I want to play, I'll play," Taylor said Wednesday. "It all depends on how I feel. Game days do certain things for injuries. Playing football makes you feel a lot better."

Still, there is a chance Taylor won't play. He has a second-degree sprain of his medial collateral ligament, meaning the ligament is stretched and slightly torn.

And that has Abrams, a second-year pro from Michigan, and Miller, a sixth-round draft choice from South Carolina, working at Taylor's right outside linebacker spot.

The position is difficult to play because Taylor actually plays like a fourth lineman in the Giants 3-4 defense, often rushing the passer.

After Taylor was hurt in the second quarter against Tampa Bay after being blocked on his knee, Abrams took over on most downs, with Miller replacing him in passing situations.

Abrams, who started a game earlier this year at left outside linebacker in place of injured Carl Banks, said he doesn't mind the uncertainty of playing. He said he will treat it like any other game.

"When I go in there, I don't try to be Lawrence Taylor or Carl Banks," Abrams said. "I just try to play the way I know how. I don't think I have to make this play because Lawrence would have made this play. If I make that play, it's because Bobby Abrams made that play and not because I was trying to be like Lawrence or Banks."

Giants defensive coordinator Al Groh said Abrams filled in nicely against Tampa Bay. Abrams said he played OK.

"I am very critical of myself," Abrams said. "It could have been a lot better in my eyes. People have come up to me and said you played well, keep up the good work. I am out there thinking about one or two plays that I didn't play right and what can I do about correcting that the next time."

Miller, who was a pass-rushing lineman in college, seemed just happy with the prospect of playing. He, like Abrams, has spent most of the season playing on special teams. He also doesn't worry about doing the things Taylor does.

"I can't fill his shoes," Miller said. "I just go out there and do the best I can. I don't have his quickness and his finesse."

Cary Grant's 'meditation' is as full of grace as he was

DEAR READERS: Five years ago today, Cary Grant died — just seven weeks before his 83rd birthday. Not a bad score. He couldn't have written a better ending himself.

Gary Grant was a superstar in every sense of the word. He wore his stardom with grace and dignity, and for all his fame and adulation, he remained incredibly unspoiled.

In his later years, he made occasional appearances in theaters around the country, billed simply as "A Conversation with Cary Grant." He didn't need much advertising; one small ad would appear in the local newspaper, and the house was immediately sold out.

Everywhere he appeared, he received a standing ovation simply for walking out on the stage. He had no routine; he just sat perched on a long-legged stool in the center of the stage with a spotlight beamed on his famous face, and for two hours he answered random questions from the audience. They loved it. And so did he.

He closed his "conversation" with a piece he called "A Meditation," saying he didn't know who wrote it, but it expressed his own sentiments about growing older. It also expresses mine. And here it is:

"Now Lord, you've known me a long time. You know me better than I know myself. You know that each day I am getting older and someday may even be very old, so meanwhile please keep me from the habit of thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion.

"Release me from trying to straighten out everyone's affairs. Make me thoughtful, but not moody, helpful but not overbearing. I've a certain amount of knowledge to share; still it would be very nice to have a few friends who, at the end, recognized and forgave the knowledge I lacked.

"Keep my tongue free from the recital of endless details. Seal my lips on my aches and pains: They increase daily and the need to speak of them becomes almost a compulsion. I ask for grace enough to listen to the retelling of others' afflictions, and to be helped to endure them with patience.

"I would like to have improved memory, but I'll settle for growing humility and an ability to capitulate when my memory clashes with the memory of others. Teach me the glorious lesson that on some occasions, I may be mistaken.

"Keep me reasonably kind; I've never aspired to be a saint... saints must be rather difficult to live with... yet on the other hand, an embittered old person is a constant burden.

"Please give me the ability to see good in unlikely places and talents in unexpected people. And give me the grace to tell them so, dear Lord."
