NAACP chapter hosting program

The Howard County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is looking for talent locally to participate in the Black History Month program. It will take place Feb. 29 at the Howard County Municipal Auditorium. "Let Freedom Ring" will be the theme for the evening. The winner of the Black History Month essay contest will also be announced. "We are asking people between the ages of junior high to college to please sign up and join in what we think will be the largest performance in honor of black history in the West Texas area," said NAACP public relations coordinator Liz Smith. "We would like everyone to become part of the magic that will ring out the message of freedom and unity of all colors."

Scheduled for the evening will be a musical prelude by the Howard College Night Hawk Jazz Band. Renditions of musical pieces of black performers of the big band era will be performed by the band. A salute to contemporary black music entertainers will follow the introduction.

"We are auditioning for impersonators of such performers as En Vogue, Oleta Adams, McHammer, Michael Jackson and L.L. Cool J.," Smith said. "But there are many more opportunities where people of all ages may join in. "People who are interested may help with setting up props, helping with costumes, acting out dramatic pieces and ushering."

For more information contact Liz Smith at 263-0757.

Chairman calls for file release

WASHINGTON (AP) — The public needs access to all classified documents on President John F. Kennedy's assassination if it is to give informed consideration to theories about the shooting, Sen. David Boren says.

Boren's comments Tuesday were directed in part at the Central Intelligence Agency, which he oversees as Senate Intelligence Committee chairman, and came amid renewed discussion of the assassination prompted by the movie "JFK." "I have no information or knowledge that would lead me to believe that our government agencies were involved in any kind of plot in relation to the death of President Kennedy, but it is time to find an appropriate way to clear the air."

UW celebrates successful drive

By MARSHA STURDIVANT Staff Writer

United Way board members and member agencies celebrated a successful 1991 campaign with an awards presentation Tuesday evening at Garrett Hall of the First United Methodist Church. In addition, incoming president Jeff Morris outlined goals for the 1992 campaign.

"I have a pleasant surprise. We have exceeded our goal and raised $242,107," Morris said.

The 1991 goal was for the board of directors to raise $235,000 to benefit 10 organizations in Big Spring — The American Red Cross, Northside Community Center, Boy's Club, Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America, Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, Girl Scout Council, the Salvation Army, the Westside Community Center, the Westside Day Care Center and the YMCA.

"And I intend to call back the old allocations committee to decide how the extra $6,000 (will be divided)," Morris said.

Area businesses worked to make the 1991 campaign a success, he said, adding that many local companies have increased their donations during the past four years.

Big Spring State Hospital increased its donations to the organization by 433 percent since 1988, he said. Winn-Dixie increased its contribution by 229 percent, while employees at the Fina Refinery increased contributions 170 percent. The Big Spring Independent School District increased by 52 percent during the past four years.

Past-president Murray Murphy said, "I put this challenge to any other community our size. We've had a heck of a good year and we're very fortunate with the current economic climate."

Morris said much of the success

Activists on both sides say abortion rights in danger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Activists on both sides of the volatile national debate over abortion say the Supreme Court, in accepting a key case from Pennsylvania, is poised to undermine the constitutional right it established 19 years ago today.

The court's timing — a decision is expected by July — likely will ignite a political powder keg in the midst of the 1992 campaign season.

"One of two things will happen and either will be good," said Douglas Johnson of the National Right to Life Committee. "They may use this case to re-examine and overturn Roe. Or they may stop well short of that but still uphold the Pennsylvania law's provisions."

"The days of safe, legal abortion are now numbered," Kate Michelman of the National Abortion Rights Action League said.

The justices said Tuesday they will rule on the Pennsylvania law, substantially upheld by a federal appeals court, that restricts women's access to abortions.

At least five of the justices have indicated a willingness to allow states to place some restrictions on that access. The question is whether they will use the Pennsylvania case to reverse the 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling that made abortion legal.

President Bush has called for a reversal, and the Republican party's 1988 platform included a strong "pro-life" anti-abortion statement.

Abortion rights advocates believe a decision reversing Roe vs. Wade would spark a "pro-choice" backlash in this year's elections. But they also fear that a murky ruling might gut the 1973 decision without saying so directly, leaving voters confused.

There is widespread agreement among activists on both sides that the court's decision will make abortions more difficult to obtain — even if the court stops short of overturning Roe vs. Wade.

Georgetown law professor Susan Low Bloch said she doubts that the court would use its review of the Pennsylvania law to reverse Roe vs. Wade because "the case doesn't require it."

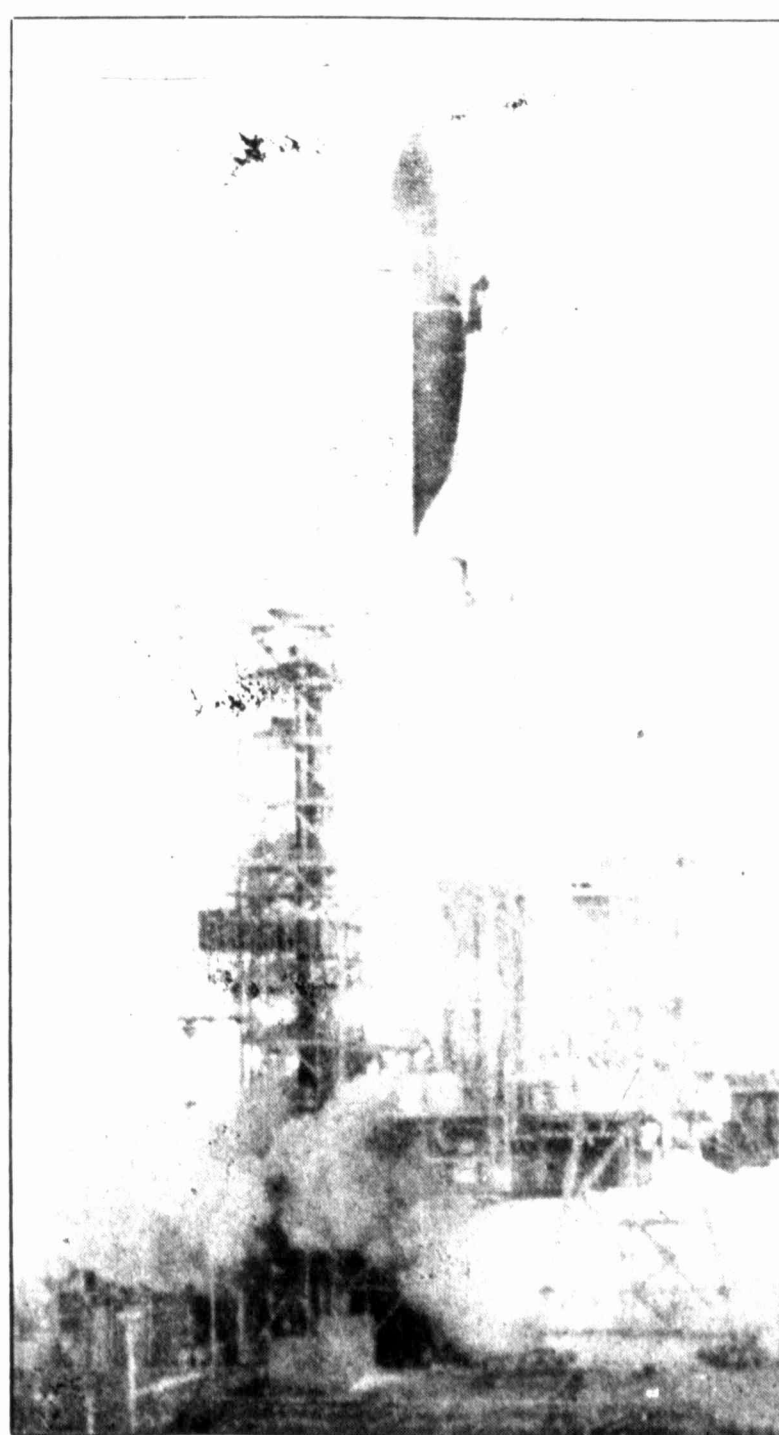

"There are cases from Guam, Utah and Louisiana that will reach the court in which revisiting Roe will be unavoidable," she said. "I don't think the court wants to reach

Thief escapes 911 trap

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

More than two weeks after a misunderstanding in an emergency 911 telephone call concerning a stolen $500 cellular telephone, police are still searching for an unidentified suspect.

A local business owner who had arranged with the sheriff's office to nab the suspect when he came to retrieve the phone following repair work said he will ask police and 911 officials sometime this week why a police officer was sent instead and why it took at least 10 minutes to arrive.

"Why would 911 not specifically forward a call to the sheriff's department?" asked Dave Murphy, owner of Permo Two-Way Inc. "I don't expect for them to decide that they've got jurisdiction and then ignore me."

Murphy has been ill and had been unable to gather needed records prior to this week.

Big Spring Police Sgt. Lee Everett said the call was not transferred to the sheriff's office because it came from within city limits.

Everett said the 911 operator had no knowledge of the arrangement with the Howard County Sheriff's Office and, although a dispatch went out for a possible wanted suspect, the call was not considered an emergency.

"It's just one of those things that in hindsight should have been a little bit different," Everett said.

"The whole thing was a disaster," said Murphy's wife, Mary Murphy, who had called 911 believing that she could simply have the call transferred to the sheriff.

"I think she thought we knew what she was talking about," Everett said. "Of course we had no idea what she was talking about."

The call, made Jan. 2 from Permo at 204 Donley, was transcribed from a recording as follows:

Murphy: Send ah, ah, Sheriff, ah, ah, R N or whatever his name out to 204 Donley Street.

911 operator: 204 Donley.

Murphy: That's right.

Operator: What's the problem ma'am?

Murphy: Well, this is... we've got a man up here that they're looking for.

Operator: Oh, you have a man.

What's his name?

Murphy: I don't know what his name is. I can't go out there and ask him, he'll leave.

Operator: 204 Donley Street?

Murphy: That's right.

Operator: OK.

The call came in at 8:17 a.m., was dispatched seven minutes later and an officer arrived six minutes after receiving the dispatch, according to police records. Police officers patrolling the city were busy when the call came in, which accounts for the delay in dispatching the call, Everett said.

Meanwhile, no suspect has been identified in the case, said a detective with the police department in Lovington, N.M., which is also working the case.

Discovery roars into space to begin research mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery thundered into space from its seaside pad today on a research mission with seven astronauts and a slimy assortment of flies, worms, frog eggs and mold.

Payload Specialist Roberta Bondar, from Ontario, Canada, throws her arms up for photographers after leaving with the rest of the crew heading for Launch Pad 39-A early today. The shuttle Discovery was preparing for launch this morning.

NASA's 45th shuttle flight and the first of eight missions planned for 1992.

The international crew consists of commander Ronald Grabe and fellow Americans Stephen Oswald, William Readdy, David Hilmer and Norman Thagard; German physicist Ulf Merbold; and Canadian neurologist Roberta Bondar.

Already safely tucked away were boxes containing billions of organisms prepared by researchers from around the world. Scientists want to measure the effects of weightlessness and space radiation on plants, insects and humans.

The cargo includes 72 million roundworms, 32 million mouse bone cells, 3 billion yeast cells, 180 oat seedlings, 95 wheat seedlings, and 360 oat seeds and 120 wheat seeds to be planted in orbit. There also are stick insects, fruit flies, frog eggs and sperm, slime mold, lentil roots, bacteria and human blood cells.

More than 225 scientists from 14 countries are involved in the experiments.

"It is the most international mission that we have ever undertaken," said Lennard Fisk, NASA's chief scientist.

During the flight, the crew of six men and one woman will submit to a battery of medical tests, some of them dizzying. The test equipment includes a rotating chair and a sled on tracks that lurches astronauts back and forth.

Shuttle science mission

The space shuttle Discovery carries a wide variety of plants and animals for its mission to study the effects of space on life. Included:

Cordova executed for '82 slaying

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A convicted burglar once portrayed by his attorneys as crazy when drunk was executed early today for killing a stranded motorist in Houston nearly 10 years ago.

Joe Angel Cordova, 39, received lethal injection for the Feb. 27, 1982 abduction and shotgun slaying of Mase Williams, who was abducted while calling for help on a telephone after accidentally locking the keys inside his car. At the time of the shooting, Cordova, who authorities said habitually carried a sawed-off shotgun under his coat, was on parole after serving just a year of a five-year prison term for burglary.

He was pronounced dead at 12:18 a.m., seven minutes after the lethal drugs began flowing into his tattooed arms.

The unseasonably cold weather, in the 50s overnight, also posed no problem. NASA initially had been worried about the possible formation of dangerous slivers of ice on the external fuel tank.

There was one last-minute technical problem. A brief voltage surge was detected in a fuel cell during pre-launch equipment checks, but the trouble was resolved, NASA said.

Discovery's twin solid rocket boosters dropped empty into the ocean as planned two minutes into the flight. The shuttle continued toward a 187-mile-high orbit on the thrust of three main engines.

The space agency established stricter rules after the Challenger disaster. The temperature that morning — six years ago next Tuesday — was 36 degrees. Investigators blamed the cold for the failure of an O-ring seal in a joint in one of the solid rocket boosters. The booster joints now have heaters.

Today's launch was the 20th successful shuttle send-off since the accident.

Lewis reportedly to offer plea on ethics charges

DALLAS (AP) — The two-count indictment on misdemeanor ethics charges against House Speaker Gib Lewis may be resolved without the case going to trial, according to published reports.

Reports in The Dallas Morning News and the Fort Worth Star-

Telegram today indicated that lawyers for both sides have been attempting to work out a plea bargain that could be reached in time for a scheduled court appearance today.

The Dallas newspaper reported that Lewis plans to plead no contest to the charges.

The Fort Worth Democrat scheduled to go to trial Monday in Austin on charges that Lewis, 55, violated state ethics laws. District Judge Bob Perkins will preside at the pre-trial hearing. The newspapers did not reveal details of the agreement, but the Dallas newspaper said Lewis is not expected to receive any jail time.

Sources close to the case told the Fort Worth newspaper that lawyers have been trying to come up with a deal that would avert Lewis's often-delayed trial.

Defense lawyer Tim Evans declined comment Tuesday when asked if today's pretrial hearing for Lewis would be the forum for an announcement of a deal. "Just be there," Evans said, hinting that the proceeding would not be routine.

Names in the news

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A judge says he thinks a lawsuit filed against impersonator Rich Little by his former magician fiancée should disappear.

U.S. District Judge Lloyd George on Tuesday said it's "a bit disparaging to the whole human race for this thing to go on."

Melinda Saxe, 28, claims Little videotaped them having sex in 1988 without her knowledge. Little said she knew their encounter was being recorded.

Ms. Saxe's lawyers said they will press on with the lawsuit.

The judge also found Ms. Saxe's brother, Dave, in contempt of a gag order and ordered him to pay $2,000. Saxe had talked about the case on television's "Hard Copy." George then dropped the gag order.

"It's stupid," Little, 53, said of the dispute. "It's bogging down both our careers."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three dancers in Madonna's "Truth or Dare" documentary are suing the pop star, claiming they weren't paid for their work and that they didn't know the movie was for commercial purposes.

In a lawsuit filed Tuesday, Oliver Crumes, Kevin Stea and Gabriel Trupin claim they were told the non-performance footage was for Madonna's home movies and that Trupin was told he could edit scenes he felt invaded his privacy.

When Trupin asked that a scene be cut, Madonna shouted: "Get over it. I don't care," the lawsuit alleges. The movie shows Trupin kissing another male dancer during a game of "truth or dare," according to the lawsuit.

"When we heard 'documentary' we thought PBS — like whatevs. We didn't think it would be anything of this magnitude," Crumes said.

A call to Madonna spokeswoman Liz Rosenberg at her office in New York went unanswered Tuesday evening.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cher, known for revealing her body, is going to reveal her soul.

She's writing a book that will cover such topics as tattoos, breast implants and Sonny Bono. It also will discuss sex, music, children, movies, politics and exercise, her publisher, Simon & Schuster, said Tuesday.

Security Council demands suspects

UN resolution on Libya

The Security Council passed a resolution urging Libya to surrender two Libyan nationals for trial. The men are sought in connection with the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 and French UTA Flight 772.

Key points of the resolution, sponsored by the United States, Britain and France:

- Condemns the destruction of Pan Am Flight 103 and UTA Flight 772.
- Deplores Libya's failure to establish responsibility for the terrorist acts.
- Urges immediate cooperation with such requests.

AP/Wm. J. Castello

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council has demanded that Libya hand over intelligence agents wanted in the downing of Pan Am Flight 103 and a French airliner, and could impose sanctions if Libya does not comply. Libya tried to dissuade the council from passing the resolution, claiming British and U.S. indictments charging two Libyans with the Pan Am bombing were baseless. It said the matter should be submitted to international arbitration. But the 15-member council voted unanimously against Libya. It was believed to be the first time the Security Council has taken sides in a legal dispute among member states. Although Tuesday's resolution did not use the word "extradition," that was clearly its intent. It condemns the 1988 bombing of Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, which killed 270 people, and the 1989 bombing of a French airliner over West Africa in which 170 people died. France seeks four Libyans in the second bombing. "The resolution makes clear that neither Libya nor any other state can seek to hide support for international terrorism behind traditional principles of international law," said U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering. "We now hope that Libya will respond effectively and do so rapidly." Libya indicated it would not turn the suspects over, but did not explicitly say so. The United States has long accused Libya of sponsoring terrorism, and there is also concern in the international community over Libya's chemical weapons program. Last week, CIA Director Robert M. Gates told a Senate hearing in Washington that Libya has stockpiled up to 100 tons of chemical weapons, dispersing them from its weapons-making facilities at Rabta to other locations around the country in order to avoid detection. Security Council resolutions are considered legally binding. However, Tuesday's resolution on the plane bombings contains no enforcement measures. The United States and Britain have said that if Libya defies the resolution, a resolution imposing economic sanctions will be taken up within two weeks. These could include denying landing rights to the Libyan airline and prohibiting sales of aircraft and parts to the airline. It cites U.S., British and French requests that Libyan suspects be turned over for trial, and "urges the Libyan government immediately to provide a full and effective response to those requests so as to contribute to the elimination of international terrorism." "There is a tremendous feeling of satisfaction at this moment," said Aphrodite Tsairis, spokeswoman for the Flight 103 families. She hoped for "a stronger resolution down the road for economic sanctions against Libya." Tsairis' 20-year-old daughter, Alexia, a student at Syracuse University, was killed in the bombing.

L.A. schools will dispense condoms

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The nation's second-largest school district narrowly approved giving condoms to all high school students except those whose parents object in writing. The 4-3 vote by the School Board late Tuesday followed seven hours of heated testimony from parents, religious leaders and activists. The board rejected the idea of dispensing condoms to students in junior high school. Los Angeles joins at least five other U.S. cities distributing condoms to help curb AIDS: New York, Chicago, Baltimore, Cambridge, Mass., and Martha's Vineyard, Mass. In Los Angeles, parents will be sent letters asking if they object to condoms being given to their children. Parents who don't want their children to receive condoms must respond in writing. Failure to respond amounts to consent. Opposition to the condom giveaway was led by Roman Catholic Cardinal Roger Mahony, who said it would contribute to teen-age promiscuity.

Clinton on sax

Marcos tries to drum up supporters

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — As the band played "I Want To Be Rich," a bejeweled Imelda Marcos discoed to music of a 1 and featuring one of the country's best known transvestite entertainers. The 62-year-old widow of former President Ferdinand Marcos wanted to celebrate. Hours earlier, she had filed papers to run for president in the May 11 election, pledging to heal "the suffering of the Filipino people."

Victory in the polls, or even a strong showing, would help vindicate the image of the Marcos family, which was driven into exile by President Corason Aquino after a 1986 popular uprising toppled the 20-year Marcos administration. Mrs. Aquino has ruled out a second term. Many urban Filipinos view Mrs. Marcos' candidacy as a political parody, as testimony to the immaturity of Philippine politics.

Former officer testifies before panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union's secret police interrogated American prisoners of the Vietnam War years after the conflict ended, hoping to persuade them to work as spies, says a former KGB officer. Oleg Kalugin, a onetime major general, told a congressional panel that in 1976 or 1978 he sent a subordinate to Vietnam "to recruit Americans to work for the Soviet Union in the United States." "At least one gave a definite (answer) to cooperate with the Soviet Union," Kalugin told the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs, which is investigating the fate of 2,273 Americans missing in the war. Kalugin, who has written a book and says he has a British literary agent, claimed earlier this month that Soviet agents questioned at least three American prisoners in Vietnam in 1978. Kalugin said one of the agents was Oleg Nechiporenko. Earlier this month, Nechiporenko disputed Kalugin's statements, saying he only interviewed a single American in 1973.

Group says 1,500 have been killed

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — More than 1,500 people have been killed in a campaign of political repression since the military coup in September, Amnesty International said today. The London-based human rights group issued a lengthy report that blames security forces for massacres in Haitian slums, political arrests, torture, disappearances and regular attacks on grass-roots labor, community and church organizations. "Reliable information indicates that over 1,500 civilians have been killed, and the number of arrests reported to Amnesty International exceeds 300," the report said. These estimates may be low, the report says: "Problems in communications and the climate of fear and repression have meant that many human rights violations go unreported." Several reports of widespread human rights abuse have emerged since the coup. An interim prime minister, Jean-Jacques Honorat, has denied the charges.

Bush urges Democrats to work with him on economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today his economic revival proposal will "target growth of jobs" and urged Democrats to work with him to "get this country back to work." He avoided reporters' questions about whether his proposal would include tax cuts or break spending ceilings. "Our proposal will try to avoid that kind of politically popular approach but we'll focus on those things that encourage jobs and investment," Bush said. Bush's State of the Union speech is scheduled for Jan. 28, the day before he unveils his fiscal 1993 budget. The president's popularity has fallen as the recession deepened, and his advisers hope the proposals laid out next week will revive the economy as well as Bush's re-election prospects. As Bush put the finishing touches on his budget, Congress' top economist was ready to tell lawmakers that the economy will probably begin a recovery by mid-year — but only a mild one. Robert Reischauer, director of the Congressional Budget Office, was scheduled to tell the Senate Budget Committee that he believes the economy shrank by 0.6 percent during the last three months of 1991. The president acknowledged that he is "getting hammered" on his economic policies. "I think the American people see there's blame to be spread all around by this," Bush told reporters. "I will make the strong view that this is a tough one, but let's try to get something done that will get this country back to work and create jobs." On Tuesday, administration and congressional sources said the president would take on Congress in his State of the Union speech, challenging legislators to enact his anti-recession tax cut package without sitting down to a summit as some lawmakers had hoped. The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Bush had all but decided against calling for a summit with legislators to craft a compromise package, a plan some lawmakers and aides have said would be the only way to avoid a protracted fight over the economy with Democrats this election year. "I'm confident it will be well received by the American people," the president said, vowing that "we're transcending politics" and "we're going to eschew some of the pure political approaches." Regarding some incendiary comments from Japan recently, Bush believe the economy will begin to revive by the spring or summer. A similar prediction by Reischauer could be encouraging news for Bush. Reischauer based his optimism on lowered interest rates, which he said seemed ready to spark more spending and hiring by businesses. Reischauer's comments were not without caveats, however. He based his caution on economic weaknesses that include excess housing and office space, restrained spending by the federal, state and local governments, and job cuts by businesses. He said the recovery will be "lackluster" compared to most recent post-recession periods, when growth typically ranges around 6 percent. He projects that annual growth will be 1.6 percent in 1992 and 3.6 percent in 1993. Many economists have said they

Israeli army rounds up Palestinians

JERUSALEM (AP) — The army arrested dozens of Palestinians in the occupied West Bank today as part of a widening campaign to halt attacks on Jewish settlers. The raids came a day after the army said it increased troops in the West Bank by 20 percent and was seen as another gesture to appease the settlers. Five Israelis have been killed in shooting attacks in the past three months. In response, settlers have rampaged through Arab villages, blocked roads and demanded the resignation of Defense Minister Moshe Arens. Settlers are key players in Israel's political crisis. They are the main backers of two far-right parties that pulled out of the coalition government Sunday over the Mideast peace process, wiping out the Cabinet's parliamentary majority. In today's predawn raid, hundreds of soldiers, secret service men and police raided homes. Most of the detainees are sup-

U.S. business deserves aid

Jingoistic attitudes aside, we believe it is time that our Congressmen and Senators do something to protect America's economic interests abroad.

Normally, we would not support a measure that would restrict free enterprise. Things, however, are far from normal.

For example:

- Recent Japanese claims that no firm promises were made to President Bush in regards to auto import goals.
- The statement made this week by Yoshio Sakurauchi, speaker of Japan's House of Representatives, who said the U.S.-Japan trade imbalance is due to laziness among American workers and that one-third of America's work force is illiterate.
- South Korea's decision to not allow the importation of rice from the United States.
- The decision by the Los Angeles County, Calif., Board of Commissioners to award a multi-billion dollar contract for a rail system to a Japanese firm despite the fact that Idaho-based Morris-Knutson submitted a lower bid. The project will be funded by federal tax dollars and paid for by Americans from across our country, including Howard, Martin, Glasscock, Mitchell and Borden counties.

We think the solution is simple... if we can't sell American products to our trade partners on an equal basis, then it's time to rewrite the rules.

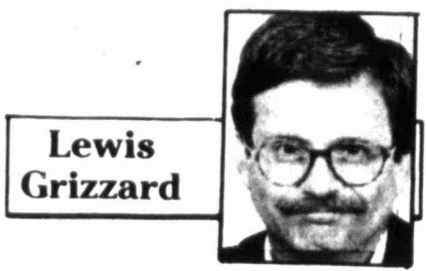

It's time to stop speaking softly and carry a big stick... a big economic stick.

The fact remains that while the United States has certainly taken a tumble worldwide, there are many countries that would be nothing more than Third World clearing houses if it weren't for the dollars generated by the sales of products exported to the United States.

Those same countries, however, want to protect their industry and do so quite well by restricting imports from the United States.

When the rules are equal, free enterprise works. But when the rules are written so that Americans can't compete on equal terms, it's either time to rewrite the rules or close the trading door.

Think about it.

Looking back on Gulf war

The television reporter was talking to a few good kid-Marines in Saudi Arabia as The Deadline neared.

What an appropriate term I was thinking. Dead-line.

One young man had this to say: "I've never had a bullet fired at me, and have never fired at anyone else. I've been through training, but I've never been in the real thing."

"I just hope when it all starts I'll be able to do my job and be just as ready to die as the Iraqi soldier I'm fighting."

What the young man was saying was he hoped when the shooting started, he wouldn't be a coward.

How many times I've thought that myself. Combat must be the ultimate test of courage, the ultimate gut check.

Facing that test, would I scream and cry and run the other way? Or would I stand and fight?

A physical problem kept me out of Vietnam, and I'm too old for the Persian Gulf. I'm not complaining, but I'll never know the answer.

But still that question lingers. Bombs exploding around me. Bullets whizzing through the air. Noise. Blood. Death. Hell. Could I have hacked it?

I know a man who is a few years older than I am. I consider him to be one of the strongest individuals I've ever met.

I've seen him handle countless adversities with amazing courage. He remains calm in the midst of madness. His is always the voice of reason. If ever I had to follow someone into battle, I would want it to be him.

But he told me this once: "I really wanted a career in the service. I went into the army out of college, a few years before Korea."

"But when my father died, I had to leave and go back home to take care of the family. A million times since, I've wondered if I'd stayed in and had been sent to Korea how I would have handled it."

"Until you've been in combat, you'll never know the limits of your courage. I might have just turned tail and run."

So I sit and watch the television and see those kids. I think about my own father.

He was in World War II and then went back to Korea. He passed the test. In two wars. I have his Silver Star and his Purple Heart framed on my wall as proof.

But can courage be passed on genetically? I've gone into two heart surgeries without screaming and crying and kicking.

That's a big deal? Nobody was trying to kill me. They were trying to save my life.

"This 'support for our boys' is a nice thing. Tie your yellow ribbons and wave your flags."

But also know and appreciate and pray that deep in hundreds of thousands of minds, souls and hearts in that godforsaken desert that unsettling question is repeating itself over and over.

How will I handle it when they start shooting real bullets?

The strain must be overwhelming, the anxiety a mountain.

May God help them all. Wrestling with such a hideous unknown must be a hell all its own.

Seeking balance in ups, downs

As each old year ends and the new year begins, I have a compulsion to try and find some semblance of balance in the state of things as they exist in general. This year it has been a little harder than usual but I think I'm getting there. Let me illustrate.

Recently, in Chicago, for two days running, nine thousand people stood in line for before dawn, for hours, to apply for one thousand service type jobs created by the construction of a new hotel. One chance in nine of getting a job is about like the odds on a slot machine. And, things being like they are, I can't help but wonder who's gonna' have money to stay in the hotel. I don't think there will be many from Texas.

Take heart. There is a plus side of the ledger. There has been a recent exciting scientific breakthrough in shaving technology. I saw it on the tube. Gillette now has a razor with a blade so flexible it can actually bend to fit the contour of a bowling ball. So, if any of you bowlers have a bowling ball that has suddenly grown a beard, your troubles are over. No more failing to pick up a 6-10 split because of beard stubble on your bowling ball. Phooey to those who say America is falling behind in technology.

Closer to home, when President Bush was candidate Bush, I thought he promised no new taxes and that jobs in the metropol were safe. I obviously misread his lips. I thought he said, "No new taxes." I finally realized that what he really said was, "No more Texas." Want proof? We have Carswell AFB being closed in the near future. And, on the other side of the runway from Carswell, F-16 production is going to be cancelled at the General Dynamics plant. Now, it's LTV taking a hit in Grand Prairie and General Motors is blackmailing Arlington. This will take billions out of the local economies and have a huge statewide impact.

Now, on the plus side of the ledger. When Carswell is finally closed, the facility could become a super minimum- or medium-security prison which will be sorely needed to handle the increase in the crime rate that always accompanies huge losses in employment. Another positive spin-off, Carswell, when it is closed, is probably large enough not only to serve as a prison, but it can also provide homes for some of the new group of homeless persons resulting from the economic chaos.

Now here's the really good part. Maybe the people who used to work at GD and Carswell can now live at Carswell and get food stamps instead of paychecks. That's not all either. There's another positive aspect to the problem of all this money leaving the area. At least it won't be going into a crooked savings and loan to be stolen by the likes of Charles Keating or into some shaky bank, about to go under and then bailed out by those of us who pay the taxes.

Sometimes you really have to look hard to find that ol' silver lining but it's there.

Lest you think it is all roses, we must look at the whole picture. Internationally there's a down side. We continue to export our raw materials to Japan for which we receive a pittance and then turn around and pay a premium for the goods produced from them.

On the up side, President Bush did recently go to Japan on a trade mission and vomit on a high ranking Japanese official. Hey! It's not much but it's a start.

On the "not so hot" side of things, our elected representatives (including our own Honorable Mr. Stenholm) voted themselves a huge pay raise, to the tune of one hundred twenty-nine thousand per year, while thousands of the people they supposedly serve are uneducated, illiterate, penniless, jobless, homeless, cold and hungry.

Sadly, however, the pay raise wasn't enough. Many of our elected representatives (including our own Honorable Mr. Stenholm) were reduced to writing hot checks at their own little private bank in the capitol building. No doubt they'd still be doing it if somebody hadn't blown the whistle on them.

Can you believe this? These big shot politicians can't manage on their bloated salaries, can't balance their personal checkbooks and we put them in charge of the national treasury? Shame on us!

On the bright side, let me tell you about another scientific breakthrough. This time it's in the field of oral hygiene. (Who says TV isn't educational?) With this new toothbrush you can reach places you wouldn't even want to talk about. And, how about that new treatment for those pesky yeast infections? While we're at it, let's not forget that we can now completely restore the natural color in a man's hair in just five minutes. Do we lead the world in technology or what?

Speaking of leading, recently, President Bush came right out and admitted that we are in a recession. And that he's going to go to work on the problem. At least he has a job. Actually, I thought that was a very courageous thing for him to do. It does worry me a little that he was the last of us to hear about it.

On the dark side, I have gained about twenty pounds. On the bright side, I think it'll be O.K. Just the other day, I saw Joan Lunden on TV and she said that I would lose about a billion or so skin cells in the length of time it took her to tell me about it. I wonder how many skin cells it takes to weigh twenty pounds?

Another downer. A friend of mine had his sixtieth birthday today and he's obviously having feelings of being over the hill. Always the positive one, I told him to take heart. There's been another breakthrough! June Allyson recently announced that Depends Adult Diapers have been improved and can hold twice as much liquid as before. Now he can get a hug without anyone hearing him squish.

Ain't science great?

Voting for Gorbachev

It will be another eight years before the pollsters tally the votes and give us, with a flourish of trumpets, the Man of the Century. I would close the nominations now. The one person who has done most to alter the course of history in this century is Mikhail Gorbachev. Let him depart in peace.

Both Carlyle and Emerson made the same observation: History is mostly biography. We might nominate Josef Stalin or Adolf Hitler, but Stalin was a rather ordinary villain and Hitler did little more than start a war. Collectively, the scientists who harnessed the atom might qualify. A case could be made for the teams that put Sputnik into orbit.

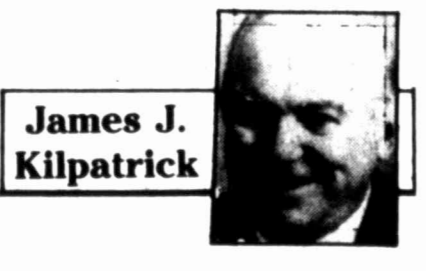

Gorbachev's claim to the title has its ironic aspects. His great achievement was to destroy an idea, and in the end the idea destroyed him. He was a communist. He never renounced the tenets of his political religion. True, he resigned his party offices, but nothing in his statements suggests that he ever fully accepted the rottenness of the system he brought effectively to an end.

This is the stuff of great biography, and thus the stuff of great history. We look back to the rise of the Bolsheviks and the fall of the czars, and whole peoples simply disappear from the pages of our textbooks.

It was Churchill who spoke of the Iron Curtain, and the metaphor was apt. Behind that curtain a billion human beings lived and died under conditions of indescribable oppression. The West rarely penetrated the mists of Soviet life. There was no penetration of the Soviet mind.

Then, in the spring of 1985, came Mikhail Gorbachev. In the winter of 1991, he departed. Six and a half years! That was his brief hour upon the stage. He did certain specific things that will take up a paragraph or two: He extricated Soviet troops from the war in Afghanistan. He made no effort to prevent the toppling of the Berlin Wall. He played a major role in ending civil conflict in Angola. Relatively speaking, these were minor events.

This is what mattered: He inroduced glasnost — the concept of openness. He fathered perestroika — the concept of reform. Freedom and democracy. He evoked the fable of the sorcerer's apprentice. Gorbachev said the magic words, and the irresistible waves came rolling in.

It was Gorbachev alone who loosed these powerful forces. When we see his memoirs, we may learn if he fully anticipated the consequences of the steps he took. Probably not. Virtually no one, inside the Soviet Union or outside its borders, accurately predicted the implosion that would bring down an empire.

With disintegration of the empire came the crumbling of an idea — the idea that a totalitarian state could indefinitely control masses of humankind through fear. This was, it still is, the key to communism. The idea survives in China, in North Korea, in Cuba, but the idea is done for. Even in the remaining communist states, the winds of freedom are freshening. Gorbachev released those winds.

The word from Moscow is that Gorbachev left his Kremlin office an embittered man. He felt the anguish of rejection as painfully as Churchill felt his summary dismissal after World War II. This will pass. Unpopular leaders have a way of climbing back to public esteem. Gorbachev may be the object of ridicule in Russia today, but the judgment of history will be more generous.

This man was a catalyst, "a person or thing that precipitates an event or change." Gorbachev started an enslaved continent on the road to freedom. Who is better qualified to be remembered as Man of the Century?

Senate debates education

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative Republicans are lining up behind a long shot bid to incorporate in school spending legislation President Bush's plan to give parents more legal and financial freedom to choose where their children are educated.

The battle over the school choice issue is sure to include a GOP attempt to create an experimental program enabling some poor families to send children to private and parochial institutions at taxpayer expense.

The vehicle for the debate, scheduled to begin today, was a Democratic bill providing $850 million in federal grants for improvements of public schools.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said Tuesday that while he can support many of the bill's features, "The president has proposed meaningful reforms in education, and these ideas deserve to be incorporated in this bill."

The measure is sponsored by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., whose Labor and Human Resources Committee approved it in November. The money involved would be in the form of block grants to state agencies for the improvement of neighborhood public schools.

The bill would allow parents the leeway to send their children to public schools outside current boundaries, but would not subsidize tuition at private institutions.

"The reform we need is not superficial, cosmetic change developed by bureaucrats, public relations experts or policy-makers in Washington," said Kennedy. "It cannot be administered from above, or inspired from the top down. 'One size fits all' is the wrong approach and could well be a disastrous prescription for continuing decline."

Hatch, pushing for elements of Bush's America 2000 program, readied an amendment to spend $30 million for up to six demonstration projects to finance tuition vouchers for low-income parents who want to send their children to private schools. The GOP plan also calls for the creation of a new, experimental public school in each congressional district.

Lea Whitehead laughs as she is presented a pair of red suspenders from Murray Murphy in recognition of her work as publicity chairperson during the semi-annual United Way meeting Tuesday evening.

United Way

The campaigns have experienced during the past four years was the result of Murphy's work and dedication.

Murphy was a board member his first year with the organization. Last year he was campaign chairman before becoming president.

"This successful accomplishment is the highest three years ever in Big Spring. That's three years consecutive and that's indicative of your leadership," Morris said to Murphy.

Morris vowed to continue the improvement his predecessor began. He plans to expand the summer kickoff luncheon that begins the local donation drive each year, as well as maintaining good management techniques. And he said he will control operating costs for the fundraising program.

Many volunteers throughout the community were honored by the United Way in appreciation of the time and efforts put forth.

Officers and board members for the coming year include Morris, campaign chair John Toone, 2nd vice president Joe Cook, secretary Gloria Hopkins and treasurer Martha Hernandez.

Persons elected to three-year board terms include Toone, Margaret Trevino, Larson Lloyd, Suzanne Haney, Chuck Condray, Gail Knous, Gloria Hopkins, Jamie Phillips, Mike McBride, Pattie Hill, Libby Uribe, Julie Miller, Phillip Welch, and Albert Alvarez.

Board members elected to two-year terms included Cook, Tom McCann, Cheri Sparks and Rodney Phillips. Elected to serve one-year terms were Jane Thomas, Dean Fleharty and Ed Moughan.

Appreciation certificates were presented to individuals and companies in the area, including Lea Whitehead, the Big Spring Herald, KBST and KBYG.

Whitehead received an official pair of red United Way suspenders for her efforts as publicity chair.

The Allocations Committee, responsible for determining how monies will be distributed, was also recognized. Members included Morris, Troyce Wolf, Jean Broughton, Karen Fraser, Jim Shelton, Carl Bradley and Conrad Alexander.

Jeanie Lockhart was recognized for her duties. Campaign volunteers included Steve Fraser, Mark Morgan, Roxie Rutledge, Carl Bradley, Gloria Hopkins, Troyce Wolf, Jim Purcell, John Toone and Don Richardson.

Board members with expiring terms included Ruth Leubner, Joyce Crooker, Betty Condray, David Turner, Steve Fraser, Tim Blackshear, Roland Atkins, Steve Smith, Jim Purcell, Hardy Wilkerson, Conrad Alexander and Whitehead.

"For those of you who are going off, we'll miss you. For those of you who are coming on, we'll love you to death. Without you, we don't exist," said Jacque Mauch, director of the Westside Community Center.

Bush pledges $600 million in new aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today he will ask Congress for $600 million in new aid for the shattered Soviet Union and challenged other countries to provide assistance to "give these people a reason to hope."

Bush said the new aid would put American assistance over $5 billion, most of which is in the form of agricultural credits.

He announced his proposal at the opening of a conference of 47 nations exploring strategies for speeding food, medicine and other assistance to the former Soviet republics known as the Commonwealth of Independent States.

The administration, in hosting the aid summit, said it is not meant to be a pledging contest, insisting that the primary goal is to coordinate aid. Nevertheless, the United States would welcome donations, particularly from oil-rich Arab kingdoms, and has been under pressure from Germany and other Western European nations to boost the U.S. contribution.

Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin saluted the participants in a message declaring "humanitarian and other forms of assistance by the international community will no doubt help alleviate the difficulties our population is facing as we move to a market economy."

Yeltsin offered assurances that Russians have made an irrevocable decision to create a civilized, democratic state. "However," he said, "one has to pay dearly for past mistakes and delusions."

Bush, in his address to the visitors at the State Department, said: "A new day has dawned throughout the Commonwealth of Independent States, with hope for a fundamental transformation in the way people live and work and think."

He challenged the conference to "bring equal commitment to the challenge of helping to build and sustain democracy and economic freedom in the former USSR just as we did to winning the Cold War."

Responding to critics who say the United States has not provided enough aid, Bush said all nations should work together "in a spirit of partnership, avoiding sterile debates over which of us has done the most or the least."

Bush said the new U.S. funds would be devoted to technical assistance and humanitarian aid. Previously, the United States had committed about $4.1 billion, most in credits for farm purchases. Last month Congress approved a $500 million package — $100 million in humanitarian aid and $400 million to help dismantle tactical nuclear weapons in the old Soviet Union.

The State Department, in a breakdown of Bush's aid proposal, said it would total $645 million in additional assistance for this fiscal year and the next one.

It said $585 million would be used for humanitarian and technical assistance, $25 million for medical assistance, $20 million for training in private farming and farm businesses and $15 million for development.

Bush faces pressures from opposing sides.

On the one hand, many recession-weary Americans — 35 percent in a Gallup poll last month — say they feel the United States is giving too much to the ex-Soviets.

On the other hand, some critics say the nation that leads the free world must do more.

out unnecessarily in this case. The way review was granted confirms that intuition."

Harvard law professor Laurence Tribe also predicts the court "may well avoid the ultimate issue" and instead adopt a new standard under which "most restrictions enacted by the states would be allowed."

In competing appeals, Pennsylvania officials and abortion clinic operators in the state invited a broad high court ruling. The court, however, passed over their sweeping legal questions and said it will focus on specific provisions of the state law. The justices could go further, if they choose, when they rule.

At issue are provisions in the Pennsylvania law that, among other things, require:

- Doctors to tell women seeking abortions about fetal development and alternatives to abortion.
- Women to put off an abortion for 24 hours after receiving such information.
- Doctors to keep detailed information, subject to public disclosure, on all abortions performed.
- Minors under 18 years old to first get one parent's consent or judicial approval.

—Married women to tell their husbands about a planned abortion.

Except for spousal notice, the 3rd Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals upheld all of the provisions.

In 1986 the Supreme Court struck down virtually identical Pennsylvania regulations, ruling by a 5-4 vote that they violated women's constitutional rights as defined by Roe vs. Wade.

Since then the court's cast has changed, and in 1989 the justices gave states far greater leeway to regulate abortions.

The 3rd Circuit panel of judges said the Supreme Court in essence already has turned its back on the 1986 ruling that threw out that state's earlier abortion regulations.

A key to understanding how the appeals court reached that conclusion can be found in one of the pillars of Roe vs. Wade — that abortion is a "fundamental right" which states may not impinge on without a compelling interest.

In recent years, at least five of the high court's current members have said they're willing to allow state interference with something less than a compelling interest. Although those justices have never been united in a single, definitive majority opinion, one of them — Sandra Day O'Connor — has favored allowing any state regulation that falls short of being an "undue burden."

In a series of abortion rulings, the only burden O'Connor has found to be "undue" is a Minnesota regulation that required young girls to notify both parents about a planned abortion. The state law did not allow girls ever to bypass such notification by getting a judge's permission.

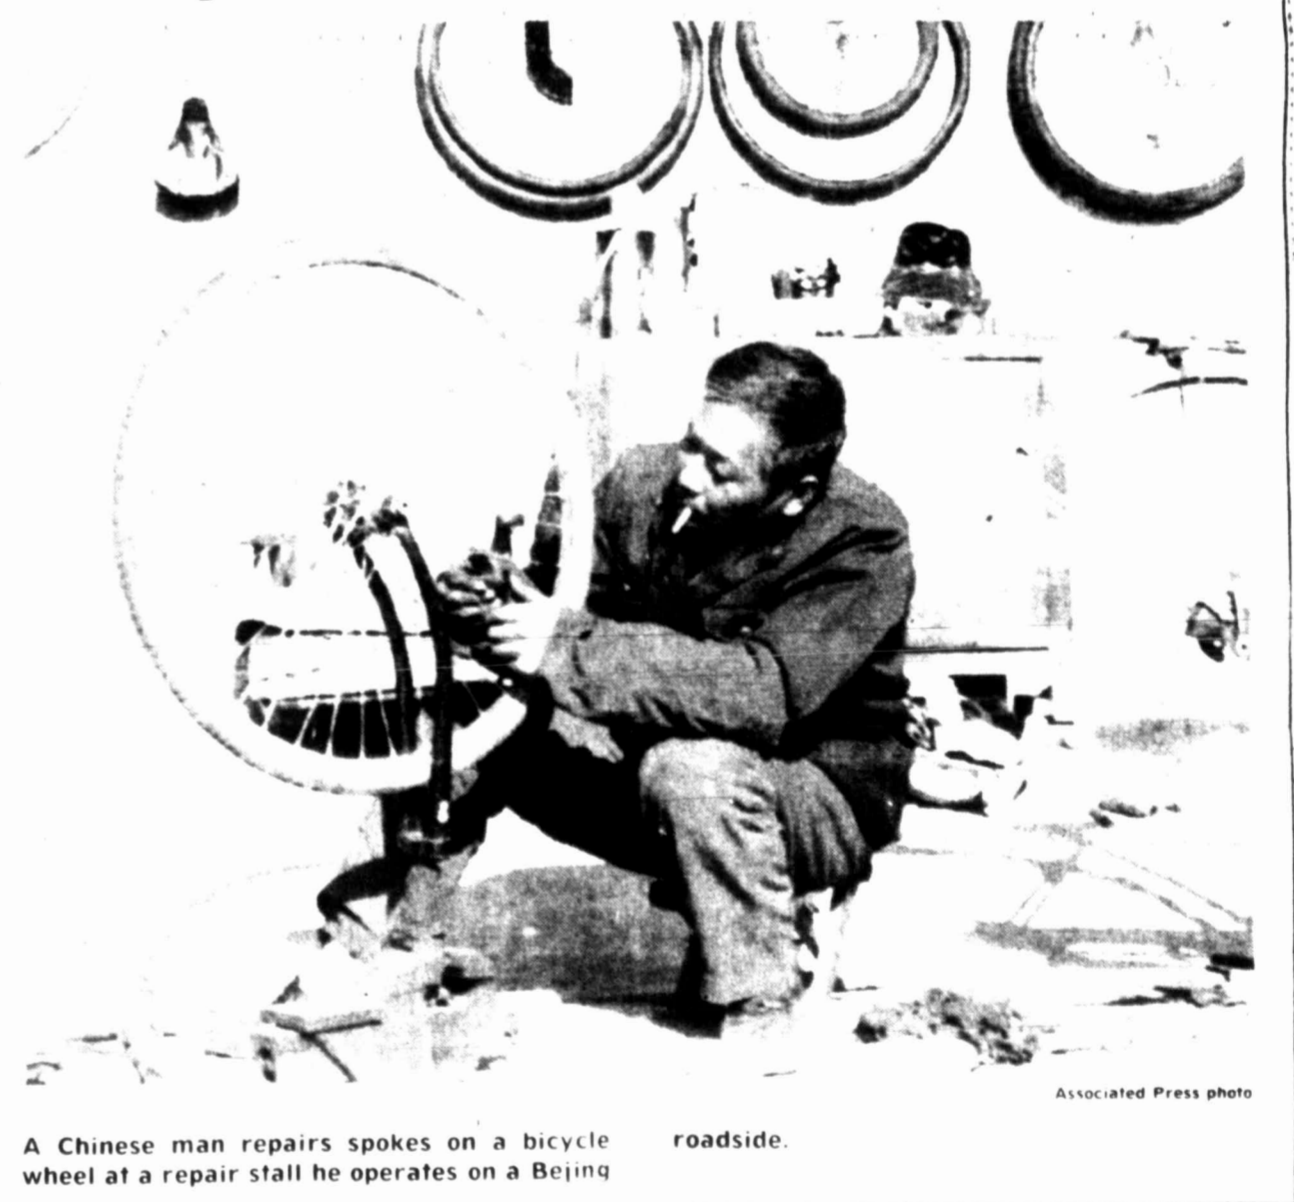

O'Connor was one of the four court dissenters in 1986 who voted to uphold the Pennsylvania regulations.

The 3rd Circuit court said O'Connor's "undue burden" test is the best that abortion rights advocates can hope for from today's high court, and used that test to uphold most of the Pennsylvania law.

A barometer of how far the justices are willing to go may be Pennsylvania's spousal notification requirement.

The 1973 ruling said unequivocally that in the first three months of pregnancy a woman's decision to abort is between her and her physician.

Mayors call for more federal help for cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States won't be able to pull itself out of the recession unless the federal government increases its aid to cities, according to a report commissioned by the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

"We're the only country that ignores its cities," Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn, president of the conference, said at a news conference Tuesday. "Japan would not think of ignoring Tokyo. Germany would not think of ignoring Bonn."

Those nations, Flynn said, "understand the link between strong cities and a strong national economy."

Metropolitan areas generate the overwhelming bulk of income in the United States, economists Joseph Persky, Elliott Selar and Wim Wiewel said in their study. In 1989, they said, those areas housed 75 percent of the population and accounted for 83 percent of all income.

"Urban America is not just a panhandler looking for a handout," Persky said. "Urban America needs tools; a basic program of investment."

The study said the government could hasten economic recovery by, among other things, rebuilding urban infrastructures and developing a work force through basic education and training.

"We can't have a healthy America and a healthy American economy if the cities are dying," said Jeff Faux, president of the Economic Policy Institute, a non-profit, non-partisan research group that conducted the study.

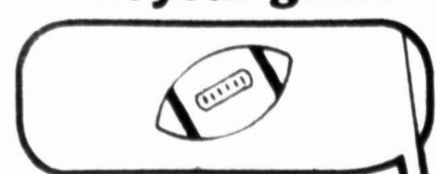

"It is up to the federal government to provide the stimulus," Faux said, contending that tax cuts won't put the economy back on track.

Flynn agreed, saying that "tax breaks for the wealthy and tax cuts for the middle income are not the solution for getting people back to work."

Buffalos take over first place

Forsan hoopsters making their move

Could it be a changing of the guard in Crossroads Country girls' basketball?

For years the area girls hoop powerhouse has been the Coahoma Bulldogettes. The Bulldogettes have been a picture of consistency for the eight years under Bill Dennis and then Truman Meissner. Twenty-win seasons and trips to the playoffs were nothing unusual for Coahoma.

The Bulldogettes are still a team to be reckoned with under first-year coach Phillip Ritchey. The Bulldogettes finished third in the first half of District 6-2A play with a 5-2 district record and 16-7 overall mark. Wall finished first with a 7-0 record and the Forsan Buffalo-Queens are second at 6-1.

The Buffalo-Queens are trying to take Coahoma's place for area basketball supremacy. The Queens are 15-7 overall and have their sights set on a playoff appearance.

Wall is the definite favorite in the race. Wall beat Forsan 53-37 in Forsan and beat Coahoma 41-32 in Wall. Forsan defeated Coahoma 48-41 in Forsan.

A Forsan win over Coahoma in Coahoma Jan. 24 could mark the changing of the guard in area girls basketball.

There is a good girls race going on in 16-A with Borden County, Sands and Klondike battling for playoff spots.

Klondike, which has four starters back from last year's team that made it to regionals, went in as the district favorite. But Borden County is leading with a 6-0 league record and 10-5 overall mark. Sands, the surprise of the district, is second at 5-1, and 9-10 overall. Klondike, which has a 17-3 record, is 4-2 in district play.

In its meeting with Klondike, Borden County rallied from a 20-point halftime deficit to win by six. Sands played its best game of the season and defeated Klondike by five points.

Last but not least is the Big Spring Lady Steers, who get my vote as the most improved team. The Lady Steers are hardly playing like a team that went 5-21 last season.

Currently the Lady Steers are first in District 3-4A lead with a 4-1 record and 14-7 season mark.

Sands Mustangs basketball coach Jerry Gooch must feel like the basketball gods are against him.

After last year Gooch had very high hopes for his team that went 21-5 last year, losing to Grandfalls 77-74 in the area round of the state playoffs.

But then bad luck started happening. First, two of his starters, who happened to be his two best players, moved away.

Junior post player Felix Rodriguez moved to San Angelo and sophomore guard Wes Hughes moved to Big Spring. That's not all, however. Sophomore Torbin Lancaster, another key player on the team, moved to Big Spring.

Rodriguez is a starter at San Angelo Lake View, Hughes starts for the Steers and Lancaster starts on the Big Spring junior varsity.

"Before they (Hughes, Lancaster and Rodriguez) left, I figured we wouldn't even get challenged until the semifinals of the regional tournament," said Gooch.

But don't count the Mustangs out just yet. The Mustangs are currently tied with Dawson atop District 16-A with a 4-1 record. The Mustangs are 10-3 overall.

Rodriguez and Hughes got the chance to play against each other last week when Big Spring beat Lake View 73-57. Hughes made five-of-eight field goals and scored 13 points. Rodriguez made one of two shots and finished with two points and five rebounds.

COAHOMA — The Stanton Buffalos are the District 6-2A basketball leaders by the slimmest of margins.

In a battle of district unbeaten, the Buffalos hung on for a 60-59 win over the Coahoma Bulldogs Tuesday night. The win gives Stanton a 5-0 record in the first half of district play, while Coahoma falls to 4-1. Stanton is 15-5 overall and Coahoma falls to 16-6.

In girls action, the Coahoma Bulldogettes downed the Stanton Lady Buffalos 51-34.

The Buffalos threatened to turn the game into a rout late in the third quarter, grabbing an 18-point lead. Using a fullcourt press, Coahoma battled back into the contest, pulling to within two points with just over two minutes left.

"We got behind early, we were cold and they were outrebounding us," said coach coach Kim Nichols. "We told them to chip away at it (the lead), not to expect to get it all in one quarter."

First year Stanton coach Doug Gordon said he was happy just to win, especially since his team lost to Coahoma earlier this season in a tournament. "They beat us by nine points in this gym in their tournament," said Gordon. "This is a good rivalry. I'm real pleased with the kids, they kept their composure at the end. Eighteen-point lead or not, if I can come away with a one-point win in Coahoma, I'll take it."

The game featured the scoring antics of Coahoma guard Mark Arguello and Stanton forward Kenny McCalister, who both scored 25 points and made three three-pointers.

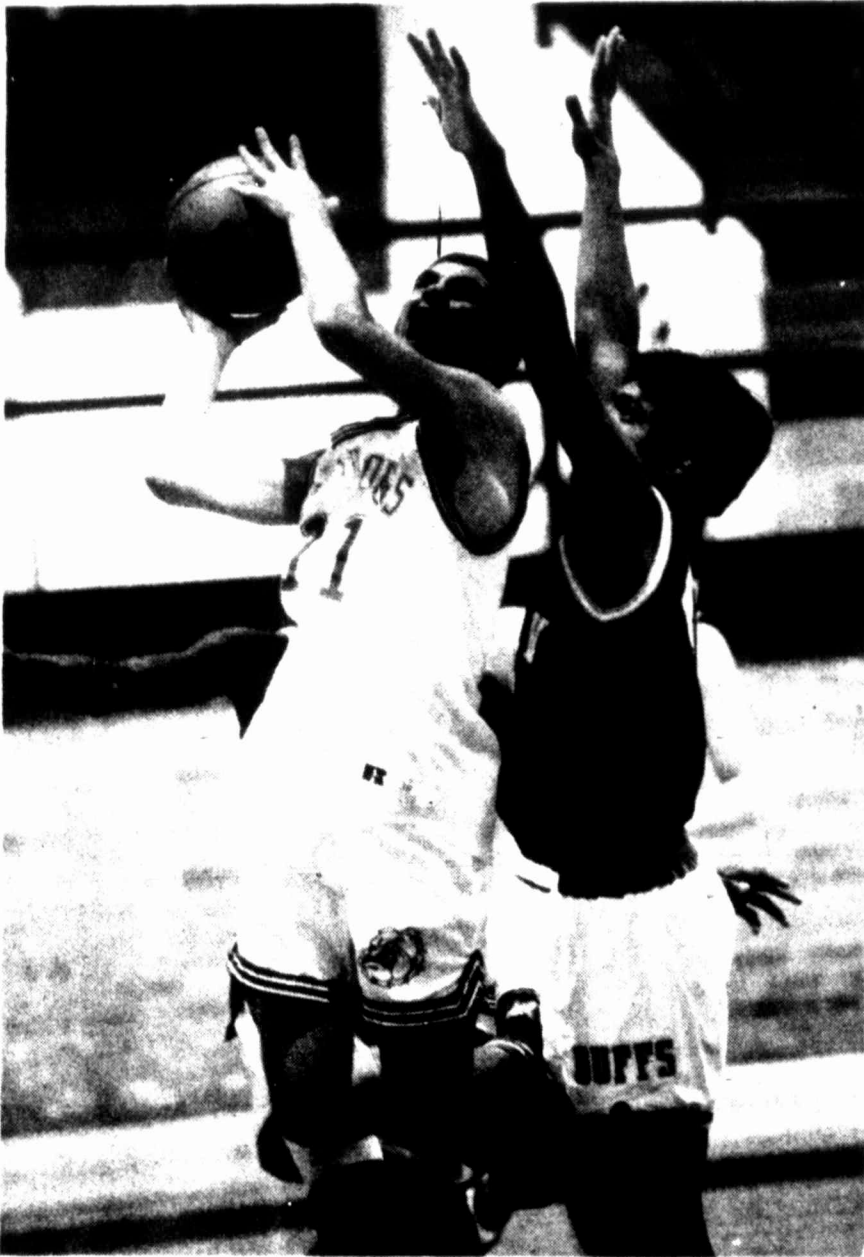

McCalister got in foul trouble early, but was picture of consistency throughout. He hit 9 of 15 field goals.

Arguello had a harder time scoring, thanks to the defense of Jeremy Stallings. Arguello scored 18 points in the second half, but was 8 of 24 from the floor.

Leading 15-12 after the first quarter, the Buffalos went on a 10-4 run the first four minutes of the second half, taking a 25-16 lead. Stallings hit a three-pointer from the top of the key to give Stanton a 30-20 lead with 1:40 left in the half.

Coahoma cut the lead to 30-23 at the half when Arguello converted a three-point play, giving McCalister his third foul of the game.

quarter to take a 44-25 lead at the 2:58 mark. Baskets by Bryan Sledge and Mike Mendez helped pull Coahoma to within 48-33 going into the fourth quarter.

The Bulldogs went on a tear, which was only countered by a couple of Stallings jumpers, at the start of the fourth quarter. Arguello scored a basket and a three-pointer, Mike Mendez and Sledge each made a pair of free throws and Juan Ruiz got a steal, followed by baskets by Brent Elmore and Matt Coates. Arguello picked off a pass and scored, cutting the Stanton lead to 54-52 with 2:11 left to play.

Stanton then got a break when McCalister was fouled, putting him on the line with a on-and-one situation. The referees singled that he would get two shots however.

By the time Nichols had gotten the referees' attention, McCalister had missed the first foul shot. The referees said that shot shouldn't have been taken and McCalister was in the one-and-one situation again. This time he made his first shot and missed the second, giving Stanton a 55-52 lead with 1:21 left.

Coahoma came down and Arguello was fouled. He made the first shot, missed the second and Mendez rebounded. Mendez's shot attempt was blocked by McCalister.

McCalister was fouled and missed the front end of the one-and-one. Coahoma came down and Ruiz's pass was intercepted by Jim Bob Kelly, who in returned traveled, giving Coahoma the ball back.

Stanton got the ball back when Stallings picked Mendez's pocket, resulting in a Grant Woodfin basket at the other end. Stanton led 57-52 with 29 seconds left.

Arguello was fouled on the other end. He made both free throws and Stanton led 57-54 with 24 seconds left.

Stanton's Kelly was then fouled. He made made one of two, giving Stanton a 58-54 lead with 21 seconds left. Coahoma pulled to within 58-56 when Arguello scored on a uncontested layup.

McCalister was quickly fouled in the backcourt. This time he made both free throws, giving Stanton a 60-56 lead with nine seconds left. Arguello then made a three-pointer with three seconds left. Stanton never rebounded the ball and the Buffs had come away with a narrow victory.

Coach Nichols didn't have much to say about the "extra free throw"

McCalister got. "It was a big point, I don't think it was the right call. But what beat us is we got to far behind too early."

In junior varsity action, Coahoma won the game 53-37.

OZONA — The Forsan Buffaloes and Buffalo-Queens each garnered wins against the Ozona Lions and Lady Lions in District 6-2A basketball action Tuesday night.

BUFFALO-QUEENS 39, OZONA 37

The Queens finished the first half of district play with a 6-1 record and in second place. The Ozona Lady Lions finished at 2-5.

Forsan led for the first two quarters, 8-6 and 17-14. Ozona then made a run into its own, taking a 26-24 lead going into the final quarter.

Forsan quickly regained the lead in the fourth, thanks to a three-pointer by Pattie Howard. But Ozona answered with a two basket of its own, taking a 30-27 lead.

Forsan tied the contest when Barbara Mitchell was fouled on a three-point attempt. Mitchell sank all three foul shots, tying the game at 30-30. The two teams traded baskets before Forsan's Mickie McAdams hit a three-pointer, giving Forsan a 35-32 lead.

Jenny Conaway scored a basket for Forsan and Ozona answered with two baskets, cutting the Forsan lead to 37-36. With five seconds left, Ozona went to the line and made the first free throw and missed the second. Conaway rebounded and was fouled. She iced the game by making the last two free throws,

BUFFALOES 65, OZONA 49

The Forsan Buffaloes improved their first half district record to 3-2 with a win over the Ozona Lions Tuesday night.

"This is a big road win," said Forsan coach Kurt White. "Ozona is always well-coached and hard to beat at home. All seven of our players played real well offensively and defensively. Our kids handled their press well for most of the ballgame. Manny Munoz (Ozona player) hurt us inside early but we made some adjustments to slow him down and that helped win the ballgame."

Leading the win for the Buffaloes was Joey Conaway with 16 points, 12 rebounds and two blocked shots. Chris Evans followed with 14 points and four assists. Rounding out a balanced scoring attack were Jacoby Hopper, Josh Wooten and Micah Epley with 11 points each.

Brown no longer Spurs' coach

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — First he was fired, then he wasn't, then he was.

Whatever the blow-by-blow details, one thing was certain Tuesday night: Larry Brown was no longer head coach of the San Antonio Spurs.

Brown was terminated at his own request earlier in the day, and Spurs vice president Bob Bass stepped into the position for the rest of the season.

For many Spurs fans at Tuesday night's game, the change was inevitable.

"Larry Brown was an excellent teacher but failed to motivate his players," said Dr. Joel Rutstein, 45. "His biggest fault was he couldn't get along with David Robinson. You have to get along with the top players, and David and Larry didn't get along."

Although Brown and Robinson never publicly acknowledged a rift, some observers long speculated it was there.

ships, are 22-17 this season before a 114-100 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers on Tuesday night.

Spurs players reacted with shock to the news of Brown's departure.

"We're sad to see coach go," forward Sean Elliott said. "I think he did the best job that he could."

Brown said he was fired in a meeting with Spurs owner Red McCombs on Monday. But Brown reportedly was told he could keep his job later that day after a team meeting and practice.

McCombs, in a hastily called news conference Tuesday, said Brown failed to show up for another meeting Tuesday and then requested the termination. McCombs said Brown felt McCombs had lost confidence in his coaching.

"Larry has made a great contribution here," McCombs said. "We're all the better for it. I wish it was the kind of thing that could have gone on forever."

Bass said he would be making some strategy changes as coach, but declined to give specifics.

Super bad people converge on Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Super Bowl fans are being warned to be on their guard against pickpockets, prostitutes and "Rolex women" expected to converge on Minneapolis-St. Paul for Sunday's game.

Along with room service menus and activity guides, hotels and motels in the Minneapolis suburb of Bloomington are stocking their rooms with little cards warning guests to guard their valuables and "just say no" to prostitutes.

Bloomington police are on the lookout for "Rolex women," so-called because they pick out men wearing expensive jewelry, seduce them, drug them and make off with their fancy watches after they pass out.

"If a good-looking lady comes up and starts to take the lead and asks you what time it is, be careful," said Bloomington police detective Rich Klingeman. "If it looks too good to believe, it probably is."

There's nothing obvious about the Rolex bandits, who have made periodic appearances in Bloomington for conventions and sporting events over the years, Klingeman said.

"You won't suspect them," he said. "You won't have any idea."

They wear classy clothes and tell convincing life stories. They usually don't mention sex at the outset, and they count on the fact that many of their victims are married and loath to report how they lost their watches.

Equally crafty pickpockets will infiltrate the crowds. Police in Tampa, Fla., said they identified 21 teams of three to 12 well-dressed people — men, women, even children — working the fans at last year's Super Bowl.

"I was amazed at how fast they got wallets out of pockets," said Tampa police Sgt. Danny Long, who headed the pickpocket detail. "I wouldn't even carry a wallet to the stadium."

"They were inside the stadium and they were outside the stadium," he said. "They were at the airport before and after."

Police advise fans to keep their money and credit cards in their front pockets. They also suggest leaving valuables in hotel safe deposit boxes rather than in rooms, and in car trunks, not on the seats.

Prostitutes, scalpers and official-souvenir counterfeiters also will be on hand, police predict. Details of officers have been assigned to watch out for them.

Still, many predict the weekend will stop short of getting out of hand.

The taps shut down at 1 a.m. Minneapolis bars with special permits can stay open until 3 a.m., and Bloomington establishments that serve food can stay open all night. But liquor service stops promptly at 1, and in many cases even earlier.

Police don't expect the early cutoff to be a problem.

Veronica Espinosa looks through her book of NFL football cards as teacher Cindy Howell questions the class at Leila P. Cowart Elementary school in Dallas. The cards are part of an education program designed to teach youngsters about fitness, drugs and environment and encourage them to stay in school.

NFL program makes learning about drugs easier for elementary students

DALLAS (AP) — Cindy Howell tells her fourth grade class at Leila P. Cowart Elementary School to put away their books and get out their football cards. It's time for a lesson on drugs.

Drugs? What do football cards have to do with drugs?

"Everything," says Howell. "Watch."

Name some drugs, she says. Hands go up.

"Cocaine," says one girl.

"Ice," says another. "Crack."

"And these are fourth graders," Howell says.

She continues, asking the children to look at their cards and tell her what they like. The children leaf through their cards, stored neatly in plastic sheets.

Among them, Denver linebacker Karl Mecklenburg, Dallas tight end Jay Novacek, Minnesota linebacker Mike Merriweather, Chicago safety Mark Carrier.

The helmets, the uniforms, the muscles come the answers. They're handsome. They're healthy. They're strong. They're athletic. They're smart.

Howell chalks the answers on the blackboard, circling "helmets" and "shoulder pads."

"OK, this is their protective equipment," she says. "This protects their heads from harm, their bones and muscles from injury. What can protect you from drugs?"

"Thinking," says a student. "Knowing to say no."

Howell's 20 students are among 200,000 underprivileged inner-city youths in all 26 NFL markets who received a total of 20 million football cards this season as part of NFL F.A.C.T. (Football & Academics: A Championship Team). More than 1,200 schools participated, the NFL said.

The education project, sponsored by Mobil Oil and Pro Set Inc., is designed to teach youngsters important lessons in life and encourage them to stay in school.

Teamed with in-classroom education materials and posters, the program consists of six monthly lessons. It is divided into six themes: Stay in Shape; Stay Off Drugs; Stay In Tune (environment); Stay Healthy; Stay True to Yourself (be your best); and Stay In School.

Each child receives NFL merchandise as incentives and rewards each month.

The children get 17 cards on each topic. The cards are not available to collectors or investors, and instead of usual player statistics on the back, they contain questions and facts on the theme.

Carrier's card, for instance, asks: "Why are marijuana, tobacco and alcohol called 'gateway' drugs? Answer: These drugs are often the 'gateway' to other, more dangerous drugs."

"Can steroids make you stronger?" asks another card depicting Indianapolis' Clarence Verdin. "Yes, steroids can increase muscle strength and weight. But steroids can also cause severe damage to your kidneys, liver and bones. They can also cause depression."

The cards also contain questions for a fantasy football game the children can play. Verdin's card says: "For 6 points, name two ways you can get stronger without using steroids. Name one for the extra point."

Other cards ask them to: Name five things you'd rather do than smoke; Name two people you can ask for help with your problems; Name two healthy ways to lose weight; Name three disgusting things about tobacco.

"These cards have stats on the back that are important to the kids' lives, not stats that are important to our careers," said Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon, who has filmed commercials for the project.

NFL F.A.C.T. was developed last season as a pilot program in Cincinnati in conjunction with Pro Set and ex-Cincinnati Bengals linebacker and city councilman Reggie Williams.

"What I like most about F.A.C.T. is it's fun for the kids," says Williams, now vice president and general manager of the New York-New Jersey Knights in the World League of American Football.

"They're already collecting. They're already impressed with their heroes and their favorite teams. So, combining that with education only enhances the message that learning can be fun."

Williams says the commercial aspect doesn't bother him. He said free cards are the only ones some children can afford.

"Quite honestly, all you have to do is look at one Saturday morning of cartoons and the advertising that goes on there and you should feel good that advertisers are taking a positive approach to reaching kids rather than manipulating their appetites," Williams says.

"I haven't found any drawbacks," says Howell, the Dallas teacher. She says fourth grade is now the watershed year in which children make decisions about drugs, health, school, life.

"It used to be eighth grade," she says. "They grow up a lot faster nowadays. They'll tell you stories that you wouldn't believe. And these cards help teachers reach them."

"The program is aimed at a key age group prone to the pressures of dropping out and experimenting with drugs," says Jack Sutton, an educational and health consultant who coordinates F.A.C.T. in the Dallas area.

Howell says at first she had reservations about the program because she didn't think girls would be interested in football cards.

"But I've been really surprised," she said. "The girls are just as excited about it as the boys."

Diana Hernandez, 10, bought her first package of football cards after seeing what fun they were in class.

"All my friends in other grades say it isn't fair that we get to have so much fun," she says.

Linda Guzman, 10, said she talked about them so much that her father asked her to bring them home one night so he could have a look.

"And he likes them more than I do," she says.

Howell says she also thought the program would have a hard time succeeding because teachers are already strapped for class time to teach reading, writing and arithmetic.

"My first thought was this is another thing to teach, and we don't have time enough as it is," Howell says. "But the lessons become integrated, in science, health, reading, just about every topic. It really works well into math."

"Sometimes you're sneaking learning in on them and they don't know."

PORTALES, N.M. (AP) — Don Carthel said Tuesday he was resigning as Eastern New Mexico University head football coach to become a farmer because he wanted to spend more time with his wife and children.

"I'm not burned out on coaching at all," the 40-year-old Carthel said. "The only reason I'm retiring is to spend more time with my wife and kids. I've got 14- and 15-year-old kids and I don't want to miss seeing them grow up."

He said he planned to move to Friona, Texas, to join his father in farming.

Carthel didn't rule out a return to coaching after his children graduate from high school in four years.

"But right now I'm excited about farming," he said. "It's a good life and I'll enjoy the new challenge."

Assistant head coach Howard Stearns has been named acting head coach at ENMU through March 1.

Carthel compiled a 44-28-1 record in his seven seasons as ENMU head coach. The Greyhounds won the school's first Lone Star Conference championship this past season with a 5-1 league record. The team was 7-3 overall.

Eastern is the only non-Texas school to win an LSC championship.

Among the eight Eastern coaches who have coached at least three seasons, Carthel has the best winning percentage at 611.

Carthel began his coaching career at Eastern as a graduate assistant in 1974.

Browns, Carson reach settlement

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Browns and former coach Bud Carson reportedly have reached a $200,000 settlement.

The Akron Beacon Journal reported Tuesday that sources it did not identify confirmed the Browns have agreed to honor what was to have been the final year of Carson's contract, covering the 1991 season.

Carson, now defensive coordinator of the Philadelphia Eagles, was fired as head coach of the Browns during the 1990 season, when the Browns went on to finish 3-13, their worst record. His last game was a 42-0 home loss to Buffalo, when the Browns' record fell to 2-7.

The Browns later informed him he would not be paid the final year of his contract because of critical remarks he made about the organization.

Carson's first year as Cleveland's head coach was 1989.

Dear Big Spring,

Words cannot express our appreciation to the many people in the Big Spring area who gave generous amounts of money, gifts, time and prayers to us after our recent fire. Your acts of compassion have touched our lives and will never be forgotten. The way you lovingly took us in, as if members of your own family, has made us proud to be part of this community.

Cuba at war with dissidents

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuba declared war on its domestic opponents Tuesday, a day after a firing squad shot an exile accused of leading a Miami-based infiltration team.

"We will not give the squalid and wretched ranks of the internal fifth column the slightest opportunity to raise its head," declared a front-page editorial in Granma, the voice of the Cuban Communist Party.

It also warned opponents abroad that Cuba would give "no quarter" in its defense of the revolution — officials for President Fidel Castro's one-party Communist state.

The warning came a day after the official news agency Prensa Latina said a firing squad had executed Eduardo Diaz Betancourt, 38, the alleged head of a three-man commando team that planned a series of terrorist bombings.

It said Castro's government would not allow the internal opposition to "mobilize in order comply with the anti-national, anti-patriotic role" that the United States has scripted.

"We will fight them without quarter, with the force of the masses and the law, in the political field and in the ideological field, with every means and in every arena," Granma said.

Prensa Latina provided the text of the Granma editorial in a dispatch from Havana that was monitored in Mexico City.

It said the United States had no "direct responsibility" for the commando team but is at fault for encouraging anti-Castro exile groups and dissidents on the island.

"As long as this policy exists there cannot be the slightest tolerance or flexibility," Granma said.

The government has said the commandos planned to make contact with Cuban dissidents. It has also long insisted dissidents are tools of the CIA.

The crackdown comes as Cuba confronts its worst crisis since the 1959 revolution. The fall of Soviet Communism has left Cuba politically isolated and without most of the imports on which it depended.

U.S. aggression has been the government's rallying cry in its effort to keep Cuba's 10 million people united behind Castro in the face of nearly crushing hardship.

The capture of Diaz Betancourt and his companions has given the government a dramatic, concrete example of the "counterrevolutionary" threat it has warned against.

The other men — Daniel Santovenia Fernandez, 36, and Pedro de la Caridad Alvarez Pedrosa, 26 — were also sentenced to death.

The sentences were commuted to 30 years in-prison on the grounds that they had grown up in Miami, where their thinking had been twisted by anti-Castro exile groups.

The Council of State said Diaz Betancourt, who fled Cuba nine months ago, deserved to die because he had enjoyed the fruits of the Cuban revolution, then betrayed it.

His execution sparked anti-Castro demonstrations in Miami, where exiles have been pushing the United States government to declare they have a "right to belligerency" against Cuba.

Cuba brushed aside an international campaign to stop the executions. The United States, Spain and numerous Latin leaders and cultural figures had issued calls for clemency.

Granma also made a surprising bitter attack on Cuba's Latin American neighbors, whom Castro has been trying to woo since the end of Soviet communism left him stranded.

"We witness with amazement and repugnance the imputations of leaders in (Latin American) countries where human life isn't worth a cent, where paramilitary bands have assassinated tens of thousands of people," Granma said.

Demos renew jobless battle

Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Wasting no time renewing their battle with President Bush over unemployment compensation, House Democrats today proposed 13 more weekly checks for unemployed workers who exhaust additional benefits approved last fall.

The Democrats' generosity would cost taxpayers an additional $4.5 billion and would probably spark an election year fight with the White House. Bush has not taken a position on the new legislation, but a White House spokesman said last week the administration does not plan to endorse a benefit extension.

The Democratic plan includes no revenue increases to pay for additional unemployment compensation. The administration insisted throughout last year's battle that additional benefits must not increase the federal budget deficit.

House Ways and Means Committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., has put unemployment compensation extension on a fast track, scheduling a hearing Thursday.

Rostenkowski's proposal would delay from June 13 to Oct. 3 the expiration of the unemployment compensation extension Congress approved and Bush signed into law before Thanksgiving. That measure provided 20 additional weekly checks for unemployed workers in nine states and 13 additional checks in all other states for workers who exhausted the regular 26-week benefit program after last Feb. 28.

The new proposal would add another 13 weeks for unemployed workers who exhaust their regular benefits or extended benefits June 13.

Pushing health care reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats, eager to tap into voters' anger over the cost and availability of comprehensive health insurance, are pushing their reform bill forward before President Bush can lay out his election-year plan in his State of the Union address.

Democrats have put health care at the top of the agenda, mindful of the high public consciousness on the issue that helped Sen. Harris Wofford, D-Pa., defeat former Attorney General Dick Thornburgh last fall.

Wofford took health care off back burner, where it has long simmered as a someday matter, when he won his Senate race last November by insisting that access to a doctor is a right and not a privilege.

If criminals should be guaranteed the right to a lawyer's services, he said, citizens should be assured of a doctor's attention. His underdog victory sent a message.

The Senate Labor Committee was meeting today to put the final touch on "HealthAmerica" legislation, sponsored by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and others, just a day after the Senate returned from its winter recess.

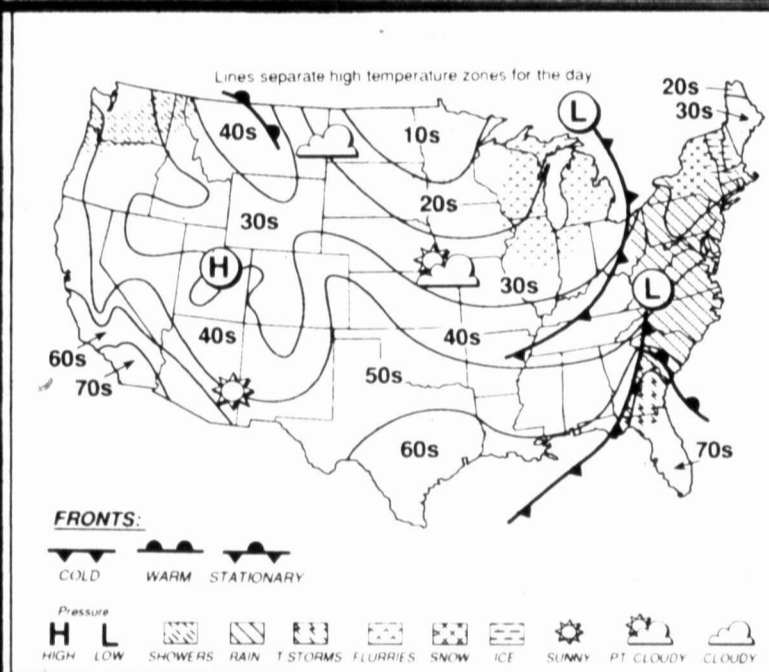

"The demand for change is not just from the poor but the middle class," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House health subcommittee. "The call for reform is growing louder."

Information about the state — and cost — of the nation's health care cast the issue in new clarity this year.

• More than 35 million Americans are without health insurance, a third of them children.

- Insurance premiums have risen an average 15 percent or more a year, far greater than inflation.
- Businesses, which typically pay 80 percent of a worker's insurance costs, have seen health insurance for their employees explode as a cost item.
- Interest groups that once opposed change — health providers such as doctors and hospitals, and groups representing corporate employers and small businesses — now see change as inevitable and want to play a role in shaping it.

Weather was chilly; but the chili was hot

By LYNN HAYES
For the Herald

More than 100 chili fans braved the snow and ice here Saturday to attend the sixth annual Boss H.O.G. Chili Cookoff.

Nine participants vied for the coveted title of best chili cook.

Although competition was stiff, amateur cook Ben Douglas walked away with the first place trophy. Veteran competitor Al Scott placed first in showmanship.

"This was my first competition," Douglas explained. "I've been to several of these things but I never entered."

With a little coaxing from his friends, Douglas decided to try his luck at chili competition.

"They kept after me to enter, so I did," he said.

Douglas, who admitted he has no special ingredient for his "Opposum Chili," offered some advice for chili cookoff competitors.

"Just cook something all the judges like."

Proudly displaying his trophy, Scott said "It's my second year in a row to win at the H.O.G. cookoff. Of course I'm pleased."

However, because he didn't win the chili cooking competition, he was a bit disgruntled with the judges.

"My chili should've won, especially over Mayor Max's. CPAs can't cook chili," he said.

Mayor Max Green worked diligently throughout the contest to ensure his "Burpless Chili" lived up to its name.

"It's so exquisite you don't have to take Tums, Galvescon or whatever, after you eat it," he explained.

Although this was his first chili cookoff, 16-year-old John Klein wasn't intimidated by the much older veteran competitors, entering his "Sneaky Pete Chili."

"I just like to cook chili," he said.

Apparently there are no rules as to what you can cook in a pot

John Huckabee, left, holds a gun on Cecil and Teresa, center, as they were married in a weekend wedding ceremony during the Sixth Annual Boss H.O.G. Chili Cookoff. Performing the ceremony was Judge Roy Frijole. Several couples were united in the mock ceremonies to raise money for charity.

Ben Douglas, left, and Al Scott took away top honors at the Boss H.O.G. Chili Cookoff. Douglas won first place for his chili and Scott took the prize for showmanship.

"Lonesome Dove Chili" are a guarded secret.

"This recipe is from my great-great-grandfather," he said as he threw away an empty package of 2-Alarm Chili Mix.

Judging the competition were Jon Hope, Scott Simpson, Landon Sturdivant, Kenneth Carson and Lynn Hayes.

In addition to chili, competitors cooked steaks and sausage, and whipped up some homemade snow cream in hopes of bribing the judges.

AL SCOTT'S BASIC CHILI

- 3 pounds meat (coarse or cubed)
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 3 tablespoons comino
- 5 tablespoons commercial chili powder
- 2 tablespoons cayenne pepper
- 2 tablespoons oregano
- 1 1/4-ounce can tomato sauce
- 6 tablespoons (Heinz hot) ketchup
- 2 or 3 large garlic cloves, minced
- 3 or 4 onions, chopped fine
- Salt and pepper

Grease inside of large kettle or soup pot. Sear meat until it turns gray; add onions, garlic, tomato sauce, oregano and ketchup. Bring to a boil, adding some water. Keep water about a 1/2-inch above meat.

Simmer at moderate boil for one hour; stir occasionally after about an hour. Add chili powder and comino and cook for another 20 or 30 minutes. Add cayenne pepper during last 10 minutes of cooking.

"A tablespoon or two of paprika will brighten up this recipe."

BURPLESS CHILI

- Brown in pot 1 pound ground meat; drain if possible
- 1 small onion
- 1 clove garlic or instant garlic
- 1 4-ounce can tomato sauce
- 1 4-ounce can water
- 1/2 tablespoon cumin
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1/6 cup chili powder
- 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon salt.

Cook for a few minutes; add small can chopped green chiles. Simmer for 1 hour 15 minutes; may add 1/8 cup flour and meal. Mix with small amount of water; simmer until done. May need to add red chili pepper.

chili, as long as it's not beans or macaroni. And, it wouldn't hurt to have a strong stomach to try Tommy Tilley's "Road Kill Chili."

"This recipe is experimental. We were all starving to death and had to come up with something," Tilley explained.

Tilley's cooking team included Roland Gore, Dave Jones and Terry Smith.

Pat Porter, John Huckabee and Mary Lowe were positive their "Hole in the Wall Chili" was a sure winner. Each cook added his or her own special touch.

"I lit the fire," Porter was quick to note.

Lowe, who served as head cook, said she uses beer and bourbon in her chili.

"It doesn't matter what kind of beer or bourbon you use, just your favorite," she added.

The team stressed the impor-

lance of chili without beans.

"Anybody that cooks beans and chili together doesn't understand chemistry. They're incompatible. You can put beans on the plate and chili on the plate, but you don't cook the town together. If you do there's a chemical reaction," Porter said.

John Hooper, who won showmanship at the World Championship Goat Cookoff and second in the event two weeks ago at the West Texas Rehabilitation Cookoff, has been competing for 10 years.

"My chili's called 'Juan and Only Chili' and it's basically the same as Mary's, but no bourbon and add onion soup," he said.

Using an old recipe for the old Fort Worth jailhouse, Carl Wyrick entered "Carl's Best Jailhouse Chili."

"I've been messin' around and cookin' in this contest for about three years. ... But I've been cooking chili for a long time," he said.

At the West Texas rehab cookoff, Wyrick placed sixth in the chili competition and fifth for his barbecued ribs.

Wyrick said he entered the local cookoff to benefit charities.

"It's crazy coming out here in the cold, but it's for a good cause. ... It's a lot of fun and there's a lot of characters out here," he said with a laugh.

Howard Walker, who hosted the event at his Harley-Davidson shop, said certain ingredients for his

John Cline prepares a special recipe to challenge the elders of the competition.

Texas beef cook off expanded

Changes in consumer lifestyles have generated changes in the 1992 Texas Beef Cook-Off — including more opportunities to win more prize money than ever before.

Entries are now being accepted up to Mar. 1 for this annual event that will be held Apr. 23-24 at the Ramada Inn in Wichita Falls. All persons entering the contest will also receive a coupon good for $3 off any beef purchase.

"The Texas Beef Cook-Off has traditionally sought out the best beef dish in Texas from amateur cooks," Leigh Kimbell, chairman of the 1992 Texas Beef Cook-Off, said.

"Yet the daily lifestyle of consumers doesn't always allow them to prepare the best dish. They want good nutrition for their children, they want less calories, they want convenience, they want tasty dishes for parties, and they want to stretch their food dollars. The 1992 Texas Beef Cook-Off will reflect all these consumer needs."

This year, 15 contestants will compete for a total of $10,000 in prize money. First place overall will win $3,000, second place overall will win $2,000, and the winner of each of the five categories will win $1,000. The five categories will be: Beef Meals Kids Like; Best Under 300 Calories Per Serving of Beef Recipe; Most Convenient Beef Recipe; Beef Recipes for Entertaining; and Budget Beef Meals.

"One recipe can fit several categories," Kimbell said. "The more categories a recipe fits, the more opportunities a contestant has to win the overall prize."

Entries may include oven or range prepared recipes, microwave recipes and outdoor barbecue recipes in the five categories.

Only the highest ranking oven or range prepared recipe will advance to the National Beef Cook-Off for a chance at the top prize of $15,000. However, all microwave and outdoor barbecue recipes will advance to the national competition for a chance to win the Southwest Region. All recipes should include suggestions for a complete meal featuring the beef dish.

Anyone 18 years of age or older who resides in Texas and is not a food professional or a beef producer may enter the 1992 contest. Each contestant must have an original, innovative beef recipe.

The entries will be judged by a five-member panel of national food experts. Dishes are rated on taste, appeal, ease of preparation and appearance.

Contestant entries must be postmarked by March 1, 1992. For an entry form and information, contact the Texas Beef Cook-Off, 8310 Capital of Texas Hwy. N., Ste. 440, Austin, TX 78731-1081; (512) 345-3531.

The Texas Beef Cook-Off is sponsored by Texas Cattle Women in cooperation with the Texas Beef Industry Council.

- Mushrooms (1 can-save liquid)
- Egg Noodles (1 pkg.)

After you have your ingredients together, cut the steak into one inch cubes. Sauté in the vegetable oil. When the meat has brown, add the onion and cook until tender. Now add the mushrooms with liquid. Then add the mushroom soup and garlic salt to taste. Cook over a medium to low heat for one hour, stirring occasionally. When the meat is tender, serve over the cooked noodle or if you want to, serve over rice. Remember you are the artist at work. Only you have the power to do what you want to do. Don't let some egg head mess up your thinking.

Now men, I'm going to share with you a recipe that I have never seen outside the Reed family. This is special with our family. We have on every special occasions, such as birthdays, Thanksgiving and Christmas. I know your family will enjoy as much as ours has for the past 60 years. It's a simple dish that mother just called a:

PORK 'N BEAN SALAD

- Bell pepper (1-small chopped)
- Tomato (1-chopped)
- Salt (1/2 tsp.)
- Pork 'N Beans (1 can)
- Onion (1 small-chopped)
- Vinegar (1 Tbsp.)
- Sugar (1 tsp.)

Mix the bell pepper, onion and tomato together with the vinegar, salt and sugar. Stir well and let it marinate for about ten to fifteen minutes. Then dump in the Pork 'N Beans and stir well. I tell you men, this is a salad that is absolutely delicious. With this meal you will be the hero of the house.

Papa Joe's Kitchen Tip: Don't like to cook cabbage because the smell it leaves in the kitchen? Just put a heel of bread on top of the cabbage before putting the lid on the pot — there will be no odor. Works for broccoli and brussel sprouts too.

If you would like a copy of Papa Joe's Cookbook, "How To Open An Egg," just send $5.95 plus $1.00 postage to Papa Joe Reed, 1425 E. 6th St. #39, Big Spring, Texas, 79720.

Jiro, a 6-year-old Japanese monkey who has reached stardom through his antics, does an imitation of President Bush's collapse during a performance at the Foreign Correspondents Club of Japan in Tokyo Tuesday. "Bush-san, Bush-san" trainer Taro Murasaki, left, calls and Jiro closes his eyes and keels over in a convincing swoon.

Primate performer hits stardom in year of monkey

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's latest heartthrob is only three feet tall, wears diapers and enjoys chewing his toes.

He's Jiro, a 6-year-old Japanese Macaque who has reached stardom through his antics in television commercials, street performances and theater acts.

One of his new show-stoppers is an imitation of President Bush collapsing at a Tokyo state dinner last week.

"Bush-san, Bush-san," the trainer calls and Jiro closes his eyes and keels over in a convincing swoon.

This being the Year of the Monkey on the Japanese calendar, Jiro is particularly hot and is preparing for a hoped-for tour of the United States.

Jiro's popularity recalls the 1,000-year-old art of "sarumawashi," or "spinning the monkey." In olden days, sarumawashi performers went from door to door with a trained monkey, offering entertainment in return for a small payment.

Jiro, however, does not come cheap.

A live performance can earn

30-year-old trainer Taro Murasaki about $2,400. Jiro's greatest hit is his guilt-ridden pose in a television commercial for stomach medication. Head bowed, he stands mournfully in the snow wearing a trenchcoat, the standard attire of the Japanese "salaryman," wishing he hadn't overindulged during his night on the town.

For other occasions, he's dressed in colorful costumes and performs tricks that show off his natural agility.

But sometimes he misses his mark or refuses to follow orders on purpose, adding a tinge of suspense to the act.

He also displays intellectual prowess by answering questions on Japanese politics. He holds up a sign with a circle mark for yes or an X for no.

"Does Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa's administration have much of a future?" asks Murasaki.

Jiro holds up a card with an X.

A theater piece starring Jiro as the famous 12th-century warrior samurai Yoshitsune was even recognized as quality art when Murasaki was awarded the prestigious government Art Festival Prize.

Newspapers ran photos of a yawning Jiro next to an awed Murasaki as they appeared at a post-ceremony news conference wearing matching formal kimonos.

Murasaki is defensive about criticism he abuses Jiro. He says he no longer uses punitive training methods of beatings and withholding food. Instead, he bites the monkey's back — an act that shows in monkey language who's in charge.

Jiro receives a daily bath to keep his fluffy brown fur clean and is not denied his favorite food of rice balls wrapped in fried bean cake.

"I don't want the monkey to be used opportunistically," said Murasaki.

But Murasaki acknowledged he sometimes feels sorry for Jiro, who has been denied a life of running free in the mountains.

"But I'm in the same spot, too," he shrugged. "Maybe I could have had another kind of life. You can feel sorry for the average worker."

Arctic TV network launched

IQUALUIT, Northwest Territories (AP) — Here's something for Arctic couch potatoes: a Canadian TV network offering everything from Super Shamou, the tundra Superman, to the latest wrinkle in caribou-skinning techniques.

With a flick of a switch, Television Northern Canada on Tuesday will link 100,000 people in 94 communities as it beams across five frozen time zones from the Alaskan border to the Atlantic. More than half the potential viewers are Indian or Eskimo.

Instead of Miss Piggy and Kermit puppets, children from the Yukon to Labrador who have never seen a pig or a frog will watch Johnny the Lemming and Tulu the Raven in a dozen native languages and English.

Johnny the Lemming, always hungry, always complains in a happy sort of way. And Tulu the Raven is every bit as popular with Eskimo children as Big Bird was to the kids back in Peoria.

When television first came to the Canadian north in the 1970s, one of the big hits was Sesame Street.

Said Meeka Kilabuk, director of the Baffin Regional Council, "You ate dinner, washed up, then the whole family watched Sesame Street."

Popular though it was, Sesame Street wasn't really relevant to northerners in this place of ice and snow, polar bears, arctic wolves and seals. And of course, it wasn't in Inuktitut, the language of the Eskimos, who are also known as the Inuit.

So, rather than listen to accounts of the latest homicides from "Action News" in Detroit that are piped in by satellite, people will get information they really care about.

"What's most important is that whether you are Dene or Inuvialuit from the western Arctic or Inuit from Labrador, you are going to see programs about the north in your own language," said TVNC chairman Pat Lyall.

TVNC is a consortium of six aboriginal broadcasting organizations, the Northwest Territories government and educational institutions.

The non-profit, publicly funded network, based in this eastern Arctic metropolis of 3,500, will broadcast 12 hours a day seven days a week.

Tuesday's gala kickoff includes a three-hour live broadcast showcasing the best in northern entertainment — contemporary singers Charlie Panigoniak and Susan Aglukark, the Inuktitut band

Uvagut and traditional throat singers performing here on Baffin Island.

In Yellowknife, the territorial capital, fiddlers and dancers will do their thing. And in the Yukon capital of Whitehorse, there will be traditional dancing.

"Our language is being wiped out, and (southern) television has a lot to do with it," said Kilabuk. "Television is powerful, and there are a lot of couch potatoes out there."

The 10-year-old Inuit Broadcasting Corp., the most experienced of the consortium members and the driving force behind TVNC, will feature such popular staples as Takuginai, a puppet show that teaches children cultural values, and Qaggiq, IBC's flagship news and current affairs program.

And of course there is Super Shamou, the balding, mustachioed superhero in cape and rubber boots who is a takeoff of Superman. He is champion of the good, flies to the rescue of the innocent and is a hero to children.

George award unveiled

Comedians Alan King, left, and Henny Youngman move to smooch a bust of fellow funnyman George Burns at the unveiling of the "George Award" at the Friars Club in New York last week. The first award, which is a tribute to Burns' decades of comic performances, will be presented to Burns himself on his 96th birthday Jan. 24 and then awarded annually to an outstanding comedian.

Rap video assassinate make believe officials

NEW YORK (AP) — Public Enemy has released a rap video in which make-believe public officials responsible for thwarting creation of an Arizona state holiday in honor of Martin Luther King Jr. are assassinated.

"It's a trip into the fantasy world of Public Enemy. You know, the big payback," Chuck D, the group's lead rapper, said Tuesday.

The video, "By the Time I Get to Arizona," begins with "a David Duke-type character as governor of Arizona" denying he is racist, Chuck D said. Throughout are reenactments of civil rights struggles from the 1960s.

By the end of the video, a senator falls to his office floor after eating poisoned candy and the governor's car is blown up after he steps into it. The killings are interspersed with re-enactments of King's assassination.

Douglas Cole, spokesman for Arizona Gov. Fife Symington, called the video "extremely unfortunate." He said Symington, who became governor in March, campaigned on a promise to work to make Martin Luther King Day a state holiday.

Cole said the assassination fantasy clashed with the understanding "that our society works by the ballot box, not through violence."

At his news conference, Chuck D was asked if the group's violent fantasy clashed with the philosophy of non-violence that King preached.

He noted that King was shot to death and said, "We've got to be able to say ... 'If I get hit ... you're going to get hit back.'"

Jewish groups criticized Public Enemy two years ago, claiming its record "Welcome to the Terro-dome" was anti-Semitic.

MTV spokeswoman Carol Robinson said the cable music channel would show the video, but each time "in a context where it is discussed prior to airing."

"The message we're concerned about is that 'if you don't see things my way we're going to kill you,'" she said. "We respect Public Enemy's passionate position, but we do think it warrants discussion."

In the groove; record reviews

"On Every Street" (Warner Bros.) — Dire Straits

Depending on how well you like a musical smorgasbord, the Dire Straits' first album since 1985 is remarkable either for its diversity or lack of focus.

No one is going to accuse leader Mark Knopfler of being stuck in a rut, that's for certain. "On Every Street" includes rockabilly ("The Bug"), MTV rock ("Heavy Fuel"), cocktail-lounge jazz ("Fade to Black"), folk music ("Iron Hand"), country ("How Long"), lush strings ("Ticket to Heaven") and swinging horns ("My Parties"). The band spares us any rap.

Pulling this potential mess together are Knopfler's laid-back singing, jaw-dropping guitar licks and wry humor — "My Parties" and "Heavy Fuel" are Strait-faced satire more worthy of a bookshelf than a record rack.

Knopfler sometimes shifts gears too abruptly (from lonely dobro to full orchestra at one point). Many of his ideas are recycled from earlier albums, and this one would have benefited from tighter editing. The opener "Calling Elvis" runs on for more than six minutes — did Elvis ever cut a six-minute song?

Still, "On Every Street" explores more stylistic avenues in 12 songs and 60 minutes than many major pop groups cover in an entire career.

— By Steven Wine, Associated Press Writer.

uptempo rock 'n' roll songs and six low key songs with a spare combo accompanied by a full orchestra.

Cole's songs, which largely explore themes of love and loss with literate, vivid writing, is what pulls this together. Although not without its problems, this is the most mature work by Cole, who's now a New Yorker.

The orchestrated songs linger longer in the memory than the often limited melodies on the rock side. The country-flavored "Weeping Wine" — whine is more accurate — is the best of the rock side. The intricate and lovely arrangements of such songs as "Margo's Waltz" and "What He Doesn't Know" make the second side shine. The sound recalls Prefab Sprout in its less precious moments.

Contrast, for example, the rocking "She's a Girl and I'm a Man" to the gorgeous "There for Her," which both concern men who don't have a clue why they're messing up relationships. The former is summed up by its title and quickly wears thin. The narrator aches with loss in "There for Her," but can't grasp how his inattentiveness cost him. "If you don't know by now, then you never will, is what she said," he sings.

It's the best singing on record by Cole, who has such limited range that his voice is reduced to a croak when he tries to exceed his grasp. Cole advances to the point where his voice is no longer a distraction.

Sudden thought: What kind of juggernaut would you have if Michael Bolton ditched his empty songs and bloated arrangements for the more meaty material Cole has to offer?

By David Bauder, Associated Press Writer

"Brand New Man" (Arista) — Brooks & Dunn

There's enough talk of honky-tonkin' and whiskey drinking on this debut album to send you home with a little hangover. But what a beat that headache has to keep time with.

Kix Brooks and Ronnie Dunn are two singers-songwriters who linked up to see what they could turn out, and they didn't wait to show off their abilities.

The first song on the album, the title tune "Brand New Man," made it to No. 1 on the country single chart in September with the timeworn story of a fire and brimstone carouser reformed by the love of a good woman. The duo's smooth vocals, however, lift the tale well above average.

"My Next Broken Heart" is climbing the same chart with a similar beat of a man looking forward to his next failed love affair.

The two showcase their humor in "Cool Drink of Water" about a man whose woman hocks her engagement ring for a party dress and could just be "the devil's daughter."

Brooks and Dunn slow it down on Dunn's "Neon Moon," a tune that sounds like a country tribute to Elvis Presley's "Heartbreak Hotel."

For two guys new to the duo scene, Brooks & Dunn are proving that they are more than capable of putting a new twist on the beer joint sound with some well-written lyrics and driving music.

Doctor's dedication leads to specialty

LUBBOCK (AP) — In the beginning, they were the untouchables — the patients no one wanted to treat.

And still, with the mountains of research available on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, those who have it remain outcasts. Only a handful of Lubbock physicians have agreed to treat AIDS patients in a town that's blessed with hundreds of doctors.

That's an improvement over six years ago, when only one local physician — Dr. Jose Garces — was willing to treat the city's first AIDS patient from a northern South Plains county.

As late as 1989, Garces remained the sole practitioner to care for AIDS patients. But the emotional toll of treating patients who never got well began to haunt his soul. He sought therapy and stopped accepting new AIDS patients.

He said he did it to save himself and his career.

Then, after much cajoling and urging, Garces enlisted the help of several other physicians to carry what had become an unbearable load. He now believes he can leave Lubbock with a clear conscience.

Garces shut down his practice last week to take a position with the University of Texas Southwestern Parkland AIDS Clinic in Dallas.

It is the only way he can devote his career to treating AIDS patients without putting his practice in jeopardy, he said. He may return to Lubbock one day, but this is what he feels he needs to do now.

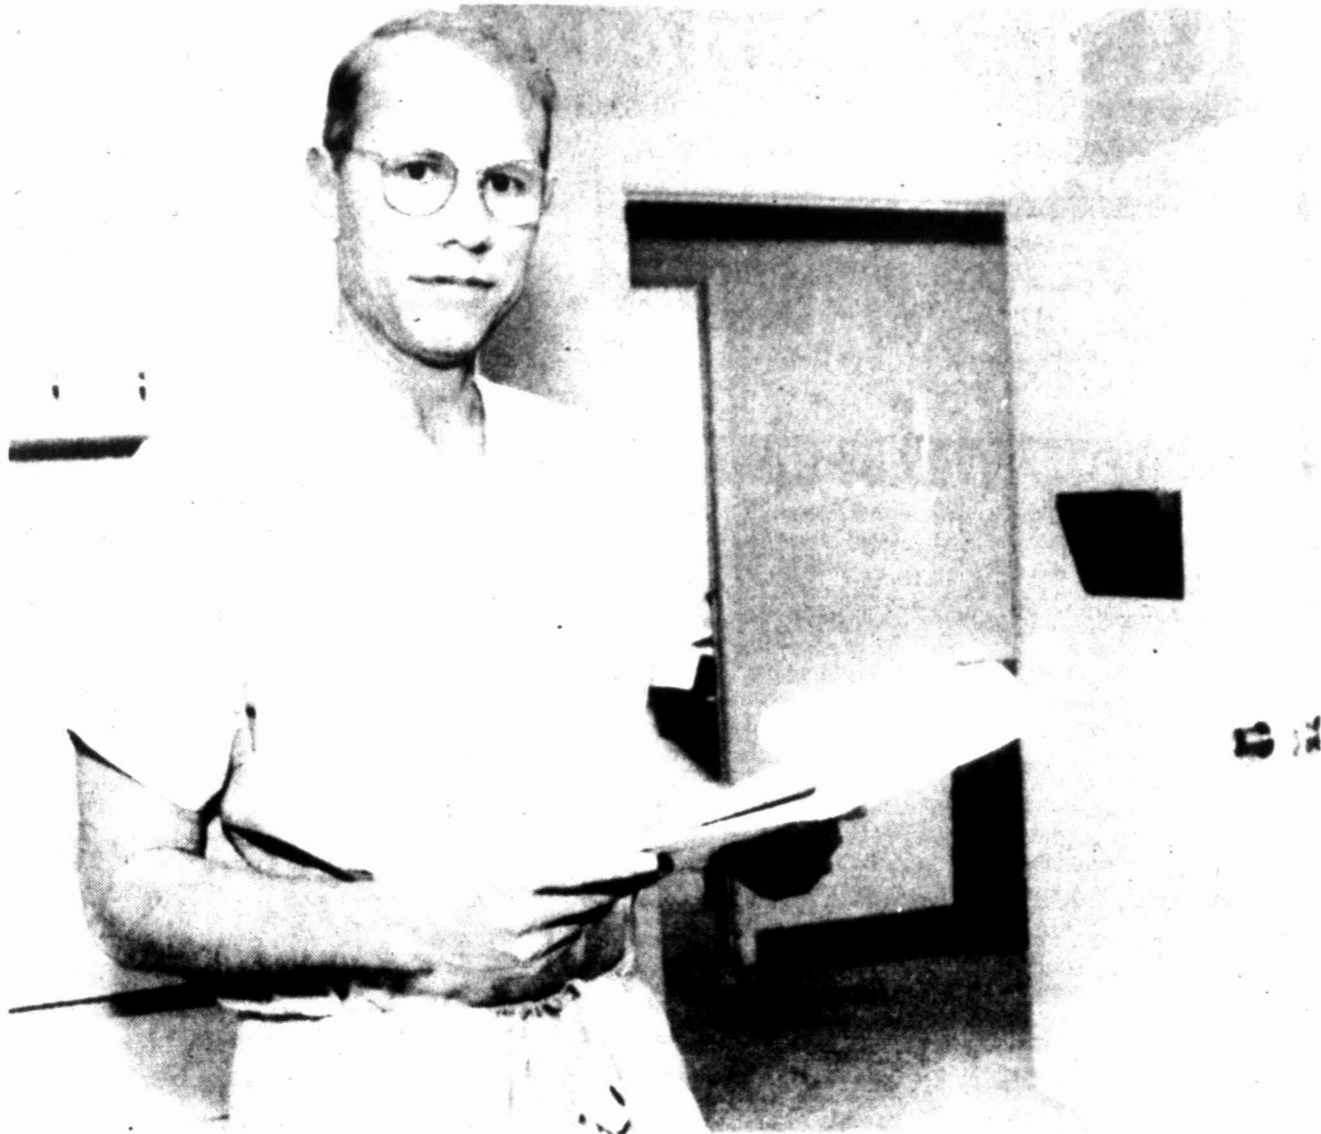

Garces' moved to Lubbock from Cuba in 1962 — a year after Fidel Castro seized control of his homeland. Garces' parents did not want their three sons brainwashed by communist beliefs, he said.

His father, who was a surgeon, knew a doctor in Lubbock who would care for his three boys — then ages 12, 17 and 18. So the boys were put aboard a plane to the United States. Each was allowed to pack 44 pounds of belongings.

Garces remembers being very lonely and cold. He wore two coats to stave off winter's chill. He spoke no English.

Once here, he worked odd jobs at Wolfe's Nursery and Furr's supermarkets and as a custodian. The family who cared for him and his brothers, Richard and Sue Rodgers, provided a garage apartment. The boys paid for their own food.

Eventually, Garces' parents joined their sons. By that time, Garces was finishing high school and soon attended medical school in Spain. He completed his residency at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Dr. Jose Garces is shutting down his practice after 15 years to take a position with the University of Texas Southwestern Parkland AIDS Clinic in Dallas.

Afterward, he became chief of emergency services at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital, even though he vowed he would not stay in the "Dust Bowl."

He first heard of AIDS — then known as the "gay plague" — in the early 1980s. He read with interest about the disease that was killing primarily gay men in New York City, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Houston.

"It became an interest to me because it's the challenge of diseases," he said. "I knew it was really going to explode."

He let it be known that he wanted to see AIDS patients and his first one arrived in Lubbock in 1986. Four years later, he questioned whether he had made the right decision.

When that first patient was brought in — wheelchair-bound and fitted with a chest catheter — Garces was shaken by the patient's emaciation.

The word spread among patients that there was a doctor who would care for them. And they flocked to his office.

"It was a rough, rough two years (1989-1990). What I thought should be a primary care physician's disease (AIDS) had become a nightmare. I found myself overwhelmed," Garces said.

When he became known as the "AIDS guru" in Lubbock, some of his other patients switched doctors. They were afraid of the disease, he said. They also were the patients keeping his practice financially afloat.

Patients with AIDS — the end-stage of the Human Immunodeficiency Virus — typically have exhausted their finances. Many of the patients were without insurance, but Garces continued to treat them.

"I had bitten off more than I could chew. I wasn't growing in general medicine. And it's hard to survive with many AIDS patients. Also, I felt like the Lone Ranger. If I didn't treat them, no one would. If I did, the medical community wasn't enthusiastic about the influx of patients to the area. I'd lose either way.

"I was the black sheep of the medical community because I treated a disease of the unwanted children of society."

For advice, he had to call physicians in larger metropolitan areas.

"I felt shunned," he said. "I still feel shunned."

The refusal of other doctors to treat AIDS patients infuriated Garces. "I can't be a convenience for colleagues who aren't fulfilling their Hippocratic Oath. We can't selectively pick the diseases we can treat."

When AIDS patients were admitted through an emergency room, on-call physicians would call Garces, he said.

Physicians told him they were unable to cope with death and that they didn't want to treat intravenous drug users and homosexuals, Garces said. Others said they didn't have the knowledge.

High-tech detector helps archaeological search for cannon

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An ordnance-detecting device used in the Persian Gulf war is helping archaeologists determine conclusively whether a cannon used in the 1836 siege of the Alamo is buried under the San Antonio River.

But Alton Briggs, the archaeologist in charge of the search, said if and when the cannon is unearthed, it likely will have to be reburied until funds can be raised to preserve it.

"The artifacts we've been finding down there are in excellent condition and pretty much intact. But as soon as an artifact like a cannon is exposed to the air, it will start corroding and deteriorating very rapidly," Briggs said.

"I'm just not willing to do that to a cannon that was used at the Alamo. We'll resolve the location, rebury it and get the finances to recover and preserve it."

Briggs, owner of the Austin-based Lone Star Archaeological Services, and his associates have unearthed artifacts from beneath the river for the past four years.

Their investigation is being conducted under the auspices of the National Underwater Marine Agency, a non-profit corporation whose primary purpose is searching for ships with historical significance.

Samples of their finds are on display in the lobby of La Mansion Del Rio Hotel — including medicine bottles from two of San Antonio's early druggists, Conrad Schasser and Leonardo Orynski; European tableware from the 1840s; and American Indian tools dating to the 1750s.

Artifacts recovered in the current search included mid-19th century bottles, ceramics and tin enamel wares dating to the Spanish colonial period.

Briggs said pieces of metal from the bridge and construction of the Hyatt Regency also were recovered but that the ordnance detector still continued to register a large metallic object beneath the excavation.

Anthony "Thumper" Miller of Earth Measurement Corp. in Houston — a subcontractor on the project — said the device, called a ferrous ordnance locator, is the most sensitive of six instruments his company has provided for the search.

"Essentially, it's a mine detector. It was used during the war to find mines, unexploded shells and other types of buried ordnance," Miller said.

"It's the best instrument we have for pinpointing. Some of the others have been helpful in eliminating false targets, such as chunks of metal construction material thrown into the river," he said.

"What's so exciting is that four different instruments say there is something big down there."

He said the team is "only working off a theory. There is no real proof the Mexicans did drop a cannon here after the Alamo siege."

"But if it is here to be found and it's where we can get to it, we ought to be able to find it."

"We're talking about a piece of cast iron weighing 400 to 1,200 pounds — exactly what this device was made to find," Miller said.

Briggs said the detecting instruments have found "magnetic anomalies" at about six different sites between the Crockett Street bridge and La Mansion Del Rio Hotel.

"Some turned out to be lids of 55-gallon drums or reinforcement bars from construction of the Hyatt Regency and things like that."

"A 'rebar' looks just like a cannon on our instruments," he said.

Briggs said the river bottom has a tremendous amount of trash — about a foot deep — and a layer of gravel and gley on top of the artifacts.

"We're down to the gravel now, but we haven't seen the anomaly," he said.

Briggs and his team believe the area beneath the bridge is a good site to look for the cannon because an 1836 diary entry by Dr. J.H. Bernard says that in May 1836 — two months after the Alamo fell and its Texan defenders were killed — Mexican forces evacuated San Antonio and pushed into the river "all the artillery and ammunition that could not be carried off."

PUBLIC NOTICE OF CHANGES IN ELECTION PRECINCTS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, pursuant to Article 42.005, Texas Election Code, of changes in election precincts of Glasscock County, Texas. County election precincts were modified by action of the Commissioners Court of Glasscock County in compliance with duties imposed by the United States Constitution, Texas Constitution, Texas Election Code and Chapter 42 of the United States Code 1973, otherwise known as the Voting Rights Act.

The changes made accomplish numerical balance between the four Commissioners Court precincts, and insure opportunities for minority impact upon electoral offices within the county.

Maps of the modified election precincts are available for inspection in the Glasscock County Clerk's Office, Glasscock County Courthouse, GLASSCOCK, Texas, during business hours of 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday thru Friday, county holidays excluded.

The public is encouraged to review the adopted election line changes prior to any election utilizing said boundaries.

Published once each week for three (3) consecutive weeks, beginning January 22, 1992.

Will 'Skins use Denver defensive scheme?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Was it a fluke? Or was it a harbinger of the Super Bowl?

Did Denver's defensive effort in the AFC Championship game provide the Washington Redskins with the secret to shutting down the no-huddle attack? Have the Skins been given an unmatchable edge against the Buffalo Bills?

Have Jim Kelly and his buddies been exposed?

"Denver caught Buffalo off-guard, I think," Redskins defensive coordinator Richie Petitbon said Tuesday. "I don't think we'll catch them off-guard."

"Denver put great pressure on Kelly, played a lot more man defense and was dogging (blitzing) more than most teams have done."

The Broncos hadn't shown those things that much and the Bills weren't expecting it."

The Broncos were so effective in the AFC title game that they held the Bills to 12 first downs, 213 yards and 10 points. It wasn't enough to get Denver to its fourth Super Bowl in six years, but it was impressive.

"It was surprising," said Pro Bowl receiver Andre Reed, held to two receptions for 19 yards. "It surprised me a lot. Everybody felt we should have scored a lot of points."

"The week before, Denver did not play as well against Houston. They felt they had the No. 1 defense and had a lot to prove against us."

The Redskins have proven to be one of the NFL's stingiest defenses all year. Only New Orleans allowed fewer points.

"Denver put great pressure on Kelly, played a lot more man defense and was dogging (blitzing) more than most teams have done. The Broncos hadn't shown those things that much and the Bills weren't expecting it," — Washington defensive coordinator Richie Petitbon.

Washington comes to the Super Bowl with an entirely different defensive scheme. The Skins substitute like-crazy, even to the point of having a first-down linebacker (Matt Millen), a second-down linebacker (Kurt Gouveia) and a third-down LB (Monte Coleman). They line up differently. They're bigger.

"Denver runs a 34 and we have a four-man front," Petitbon said. "One of the strong points of our defense is we like to use a lot of people. That's hard to do with this offense. That's one of the things the no-huddle does to us and we could be hurt by it."

But the Skins have had no trouble with wide-open attacks. They swept five games with run-and-shoot teams this season.

"We don't view Buffalo as a run-and-shoot," Petitbon insisted. "They run a classic one-back offense similar to us, but they do it from the hurry-up."

The Bills operated the hurry-up and went nowhere in their last game. It has to be a big concern, particularly since Washington is as capable of dominating the ball and the clock as the Giants did in beating Buffalo 20-19 in last year's Super Bowl.

"We didn't lose any confidence in it," Jim Kelly said of the AFC's most prolific offense, second only to Washington's in the NFL. "We kept our poise all season and one game doesn't determine our offense or how we feel about it."

Still, there will be questions, which is ironic. Until the Denver game, it was Buffalo's defense that was doubted. But while the defenders were peaking — the Bills have allowed just 21 points in two playoff games, and the 14 points by Kansas City came after the game was decided — the vaunted offense was stumbling.

"It's kind of crazy, isn't it?" Reed said.

"We missed a lot of assignments, and we're not happy with that," said Thurman Thomas, held to 87 yards total offense by Denver after averaging 136 a game to lead the league for the third straight season. "We're a smart team and we don't make those kind of mistakes."

Beauty beyond birthmark is what mother sees

DEAR ABBY: I have a 6-year-old daughter. She is a beautiful child. "Angie" has long blond hair and beautiful sky-blue eyes. She was born with a brownish birthmark over one eye and down her cheek. I do not consider her "disfigured"; in fact, when I look at Angie, I don't even see the birthmark.

I find it very distressing when people react to the birthmark instead of to the person. Strangers will grab Angie's chin and turn her face, asking, "What's wrong with your face?" Abby, there is nothing wrong with her face. She is beautiful, and we have taught her that God gave her this birthmark to draw attention to her beautiful blue eyes.

Dear Abby

It is too bad more people can't look beyond the surface and see the person within. In this day of diets and plastic surgeries, we seem to have lost respect for nature and reality.

Never have we considered any type of surgery to remove Angie's birthmark. She is not harmed by it in any way. The harm is from well-meaning people who want to "correct" me and her. Any remarks about surgery to "fix" her face are demeaning to her, and telling me that she is not good enough the way she is. People should realize, it's what's on the inside — not the outside — that counts. I am sure you understand. — A LOVING MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I do understand, and I know how you feel, but Angie's feelings must be considered. No child wants to be "different," and Angie's birthmark makes her different — and immediately conspicuous. Ask her if she would like to have her birthmark removed.

A consultation with her teacher, the school nurse, her pediatrician or your clergyman might be helpful. Please consider these suggestions, and be assured there are several options for making such birthmarks less conspicuous.

WORTH CLIPPING: "Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in; forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely and with too high a spirit to be encumbered with your old nonsense."

"This day is all that is good and fair. It is too dear with its hopes and invitations to waste a moment on the yesterdays." (Author Unknown)

FOR THURSDAY, JANUARY 23, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OR YOUR LIFE: Domestic life will become more fulfilling when you let your home reflect your personality and special interests. Joint finances will receive a welcome boost in June. Do not be surprised if family connections lead to a job offer next September. A real estate investment deserves serious consideration in October. A new friendship will teach you a lot about yourself during the winter holidays. Do decide to polish a long-neglected skill.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Randolph Scott and Richard Dean Anderson, actress Susan Lucci, Princess Caroline of Monaco.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Anything goes today, so long as you complete work assignments on time. Donate old furniture to a good cause. You no longer have much in common with certain friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The employment and financial tides shift your way. Emphasize the many benefits of teamwork. You can obtain the support you need today. Do not press your luck by changing investments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The money outlook is bright. A special purchase or fund-raising campaign should prove rewarding. You command new respect. A romantic evening could have its drawbacks. See friends instead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Certain alliances may be weakening. It could be that you appear indifferent to other people's feelings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tuck away your cash and credit cards now and investigate new job leads. Romance has a way of distracting you from work. Let well enough alone where domestic arrangements are concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tact helps you deal with someone's whims or bad temper. A change of scenery will give you a fresh perspective. Step up your efforts to obtain better care for an elderly person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Child-related events prove lucky today. A message from a stranger astounds and delights you. You may not want to carry through with a plan. Seek alternatives. Dine with a loved one tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not pay another person's way today unless you are prepared to be satisfied getting nothing in return. Good fortune lies in creative projects, entertainment and courting the favor of Cupid.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Trouble may lurk behind the scenes at work. Shift into overdrive and show what you can do. Influential people will be impressed by your painstaking attention to detail.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Leave any personal problems at home or your productivity at work could suffer. Be careful with your cash. A relationship started recently can be strengthened. Take the first step.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Cut back on unnecessary spending and explain the situation to family members. Postpone your personal plans if you receive an emergency call from a near neighbor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A relationship you find smothering or difficult can be changed. State your views in a friendly and open way. The social scene beckons tonight. It is time for merrymaking with good friends.
