Commission to hear grant applications

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Drug and alcohol rehabilitation programs for Howard and surrounding counties will be addressed by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission when it meets Wednesday.

The PBRPC board of directors will vote to endorse grant applications from the Big Spring Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse and from Recovery Solutions Inc., also of Big Spring.

The council is hoping to receive a $95,000 grant from the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse to fund an intervention and referral program. The program, if funded, will provide outpatient counseling for an estimated 2,000 persons in Howard, Borden, Glasscock and Martin counties, said Clyde Alsop, a member of the Big Spring Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

"This kind of service is long past due in Big Spring," Alsop said.

Recovery Solutions Inc. is requesting $315,180 and $17,168 in local matching funds to initiate a "Children and their Mothers" program (CHAMP). According to their request, RSI hopes to provide services designed to identify and serve at-risk youths and their mothers - to provide assessment, referrals, education and other services.

According to the PBRPC agenda, $250,200 of the funds will be used for salary and benefits, $27,400 for contractual services and $9,700 for travel. The remaining $27,400 will be used for supplies, equipment and operational costs.

"The target population typically is women who are single heads of households with little or no parenting skills and their children," according to the RSI request.

Also to be discussed at the PBRPC meeting is a request to the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse from the Rock Alliance for Drug Awareness and Resistance (RADAR) Tower Inc.

This request is for funding of the RADAR Tower Inc.'s Rapunzel Program, which provides drug awareness education at about $10 per student. This program will provide services in Borden, Gaines and Dawson Counties.

Wal-Mart's founder dies

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - Sam Walton, who built Wal-Mart into the nation's biggest retail chain and became one of America's richest men without losing his penchant for pickup trucks and bargain haircuts, has died of cancer at 74.

Walton died Sunday at the University of Arkansas Medical Sciences Hospital. He had been treated for leukemia in the early 1980s and was diagnosed with bone cancer in 1990.

A shrewd, ebullient businessman who made a habit of popping into his stores unannounced, Walton built his empire on low prices, customer service and employee loyalty. In 1991, Wal-Mart Stores Inc. dethroned Sears, Roebuck and Co. as the nation's largest retailer.

"He was a great merchant, a great leader and a great competitor," said Edward A. Brennan, Sears chairman and chief executive.

Walton opened his first Wal-Mart in Rogers 30 years ago. Now there are 1,735 Wal-Marts in 42 states and 212 Sam's Wholesale Club warehouse stores. In 1991, Wal-Mart earned $1.6 billion, up 33 percent from a year earlier.

In October, Forbes magazine ranked Walton and his four children third through seventh on its list of the richest Americans. The Walton's net worth was put at $4.4 billion each.

An unpretentious man who avoided interviews, Walton occasionally drove his pickup from his home outside the Ozark Mountain city of Bentonville to the town square to shop for groceries and get a haircut.

Walton's stores undercut competitors because they use a high-tech distribution system that gets merchandise to stores within two days, compared with an average of two weeks among rivals.

During surprise visits to his stores, "Mr. Sam," as he was known to employees, led workers and customers in a cheer of "Give me a W, give me an A ..."

Walton also wandered the aisles of his competitors' outlets, checking prices, service and stock. Once, he had a fender-bender because he was counting cars in a competitor's parking lot rather than watching the road.

Clinton campaign acknowledges draft notice

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - Bill Clinton's presidential campaign said Saturday night the governor received a draft induction notice in 1969 before he joined the ROTC program at the University of Arkansas.

The disclosure came one day after a purported letter surfaced in which a Little Rock lawyer, who said he was a friend of Clinton's in the '60s, wrote to a dean at Auburn University saying Clinton had received a draft induction notice while a Rhodes Scholar in Oxford, England.

The lawyer now opposes Clinton politically and the university professor also said he opposed Clinton's presidential candidacy.

The Associated Press queried the Clinton campaign about the letter Friday evening.

"Gov. Clinton recalls receiving an induction notice while at Oxford, in late April 1969," said a statement delivered to The Associated Press in Little Rock shortly after 10 p.m. EST Saturday.

The induction notice was a formal directive to report for active military duty.

County parties choose delegates at meetings

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

The economy was on the mind of about 100 Republicans and Democrats who recently met to choose delegates to state conventions and propose state platform planks.

The two local parties met a week ago and discussions went along typical national party lines: Democrats want wealthy Americans to share more taxing responsibility and Republicans want less government restrictions on business.

The Republicans, who elected Everett Bender as the new county chairman, also endorsed 26 resolutions from the state 1990 platform. Bender, elected by popular vote in the March 10 primary, replaced Spencer Wolfe, who stepped down because of time constraints.

Resolutions include a pro-life stance; abstinence-based sex education; required reporting of AIDS as are other serious venereal diseases; homosexuality should not be presented as an acceptable lifestyle in public school curricula; it should be taught that sodomy is illegal; passage of a balanced budget amendment; and enacting term limitations.

"These were just an emphasis more than an addition," Bender said. The biggest concern, he said, were "economic issues and government regulations that hinder development and growth of new businesses."

Democrats approved two resolutions for consideration in the state

Officers allegedly attack deputy

HOUSTON (AP) — Law enforcement agencies are investigating whether three Houston police officers in Point Blank on a fishing trip extensively beat a San Jacinto County sheriff's deputy and her husband.

"They were gonna go into the backwoods of some town and kick some butt, and that's what happened," said Lon Watts, who was at the Hill Top Icehouse in Point Blank, about 75 miles north of Houston.

The names of the officers were not released.

Deputy Edna Kennedy and her husband, Dennis, were taken to Huntsville Memorial Hospital Friday night after the attack.

Dennis Kennedy's eyes were swollen shut and his face was cut, while the back of Mrs. Kennedy's head and her face and lip were split open.

Mrs. Kennedy said a Houston policeman put a gun in her mouth and told her "you're fixin' to bite the bullet," as her husband lay beaten a few feet away in the parking lot.

"I thought my husband was already dead," she told the Houston Chronicle in Sunday's editions. "I started doing my Hail Mary prayers. I said my children's names. I just felt like they were fixing to kill me."

Four injured in refinery fire

TEXAS CITY (AP) — A 36-year-old man remains in fair condition today with burns from one of several fires at adjacent Texas City petrochemical plants.

Fires erupted Sunday at the Amoco Oil Co. refinery, Union Carbide and Enron Corp. Three other men were injured.

Brenda Placette, a spokeswoman for Mainland Hospital Center, said Amoco contract worker Sam Kirk was burned as he was driving past the plant. He was transferred to the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston for burn treatment.

Three others were treated and released late Sunday: James Sanderson, who was driving by the plant; and Amoco workers Joe McCoy and Joe Rubio.

Authorities said they received reports of flames spreading across floodwaters at the Amoco refinery at 6:17 p.m. Union Carbide's fire was reported about a half-hour later.

Company firefighters extinguished the Amoco blaze about 20 to 40 minutes after it erupted, and Texas City and plant firefighters extinguished the others by 11 p.m.

LUBBOCK (AP) — Even prosecutors sometimes wondered about Dr. Ralph Erdmann's bizarre work habits — after all he once lost a head. But they still used the pathologist's testimony to send people to prison, some to death row.

Erdmann's recent indictment on charges of falsifying an autopsy and accusations that he performs "made-to-order" autopsies for police have defense attorneys scrambling to see whether his work led to false convictions.

"You are going to hear Dr. Erdmann's name a lot in the future," said Steven Losch, attorney for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund-

Capital Punishment Project in New York. "I know I will be looking into as many capital murder cases involving Dr. Erdmann as possible."

Losch said he will review at least 23 of Erdmann's cases in 41 counties.

On Friday, Losch won the right to exhume the body of 72-year-old murder victim Hilton Merriman, claiming Erdmann botched the autopsy.

In the hearing on their request, Erdmann invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination 200 times in response to questions about the autopsy.

In the motion to exhume Merriman's body, former Dallas County assistant medical examiner Linda Norton was quoted as saying Erdmann routinely performs "made-to-order autopsies that support a police version of a story."

Ms. Norton said some of Erdmann's findings are "so wrong as to be an insult to the intelligence of an average human being."

Erdmann, 65, was indicted in February by a Hockley County grand jury on charges of falsifying an autopsy on a 41-year-old man. A few weeks later, he resigned his $140,000-a-year job performing autopsies for Lubbock County, saying he was overworked.

Erdmann said he performed an autopsy on the 41-year-old man in which he weighed the man's spleen. But family members noted the spleen had been removed several years before.

The state then indicted Erdmann on charges he billed the county $650 for the autopsy, which it said he never performed. An investigation showed the body was never cut open.

Names in the news

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Entertainment Tonight" host John Tesh and actress Connie Selleca married at sunset in a ceremony attended by 250 friends and relatives.

The wedding Saturday was held at a rented 19-home mansion. It's the second marriage for both.

The 36-year-old Miss Selleca appeared in the series "Hotel" and starred this season on CBS' "P.S.I. Luv U."

Tesh is host with Mary Hart of "Entertainment Tonight."

TESH SELLECA

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Jay Leno says he's softened his jokes because the biting humor popular in nightclubs doesn't work on TV talk shows.

"People who say that my comedy doesn't have as much edge, as much bite, are right. When you're on 'Letterman' once every six weeks for 10 minutes, you can come on and bark and rat-ta-tat with outrageous material. Then you leave," the incoming host of "The Tonight Show" said in the latest issue of TV Guide.

"But when you are on TV every night for an hour, that aggressive edge is too much. You've got to soften it a bit so you're not intolerable to a regular audience."

Leno takes the helm from Johnny Carson next month.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Arnold Schwarzenegger says couch potato kids aren't born, they're made by working mothers.

The body builder-turned-actor is chairman of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports. He said he and his wife, TV journalist Maria Shriver, watch television selectively and control the viewing of their two young daughters.

"I am so little at home that if I turn on the TV, when do I talk with my wife? When do I play with my kids? But that's what people do. That's how they create the couch potatoes. I don't see TV as the villain here. The villain is the economic situation and women's equal rights," the "Terminator" star said in the latest issue of TV Guide.

"Women go out and get jobs and the husband has a job. ... When does this leave the children? When they come home they sit down in front of the TV set, so communication breaks down and the kids don't talk with their parents."

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Eudora Welty, the grande dame of Southern letters, is helping put together a collection of some of her most striking Depression-era photographs.

Welty, 82, is approving the master prints used in 60 portfolios, each of which will contain the same 18 photographs. Most of the portfolios will sell for $7,500.

Welty shot the pictures while working in Mississippi for President Roosevelt's Works Progress Administration. She went on to gain fame as a writer and won the Pulitzer Prize in 1972 for "The Optimist's Daughter."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop star Phil Collins bought an $8.5 million Beverly Hills mansion once owned by composer Cole Porter.

The 14,000-square-foot, Tudor-style home, which includes a dining room that seats more than 60, was built in 1926. Former owners also include record producer Phil Spector, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

Collins, 41, plans to live there with his wife, Jill. They also have a 14-acre home in England.

NEW YORK (AP) — Macaulay Culkin is just a signpost away from earning at least $5 million to star as rich-kid comic-book character Richie Rich, People magazine says.

The magazine said agents for the 11-year-old presented "Richie Rich" distributor Warner Bros. with a plan that calls for the studio to pay the "Home Alone" star bonuses beyond his $5 million salary.

The unusual part of the deal is that the bonuses would be pegged to the box-office success of Fox's "Home Alone 2: Lost in New York," which also stars Culkin. The movie comes out in November.

SAN BENITO (AP) — Vera and Russ Eckert didn't have much time to talk. They fidgeted in their seats and began to get up during the slightest lull in the conversation.

After five months in South Texas, the Eckerts were anxious to return to the "ice and snow."

"We're not happy you understand," said Mrs. Eckert, a Cincinnati resident. "We better get back to business. The tax man wants us. They can't run the state of Ohio without our money apparently."

Then they were gone, back to the north. Dwindling in the distance on the road behind them was the RV park they call home during the winter months.

The Eckerts are "Winter Texans," that roving breed of retirees that chases the comfortable climates: going south for the winter, north for the summer. The seasonal residents visit the Rio Grande Valley by the thousands every year.

An estimated 84,000 Winter Texans were living in RVs, mobile homes, apartments, condos and hotels at the height of the season last year, according to a study conducted at the University of Texas-Pan American. They contributed more than $200 million to the economy during the 1990-91 tourist season, the study said.

So understandably, merchants are sorry to see them go. "Every year, once the Winter Texans leave, our sales drop almost in half," said Joe Rodriguez, a stocker at an HEB grocery store in nearby Harlingen. "When they're here, our sales never drop."

Retirees head north as weather warms

The temporary Texans begin rolling into the region about mid-October, their fishing poles and square-dancing duds, tennis rackets and golf clubs in tow. They reverse the process a few months later, going north in the spring. Most, like the Eckerts, are usually gone by mid-April.

What lures them, they say, is the weather, the comfort, the friendliness of the Valley. And that down home feeling.

"I always say we have the best of two worlds," said Thelma Robertson, a retired nurse from tiny Elizabethtown, Ill. "I'm always anxious to get here. I look forward to going back, too."

Mrs. Robertson and her husband, Rex, are what those in the know would call "six-sixers," folks who spend six months up north, another six down south.

The Robertsons and the Eckerts make their homes among hundreds of other Winter Texans just outside San Benito, at an RV park called Fun N Sun, which the facility's activities director Ray Raleigh once termed a "mini-country."

The term fits. The park, like the hundreds that dot the Valley, are geared for these long-term visitors. Fun N Sun has a library, a post office and an enormous rec hall.

For winter residents, the parks provide a feeling of security, entertainment — "If you get bored down here it's your own fault," said winter Texan Richard "Rip" Pash — and, most importantly, a feeling of community.

"I'd be willing to make this our permanent home," said Helen Bottoroff, who, along with husband Joe, lives in a suburb of Fort Wayne, Ind., during the rest of the year.

"I wouldn't want to move down here and buy a home outside of a park," Mrs. Bottoroff said. "I like to get out and holler at my neighbors and ride my bike down the streets."

The attraction of South Texas living has led many to forsake northern homes entirely.

Peru's congress dissolved

LIMA, Peru (AP) — President Alberto Fujimori announced Sunday that he was dissolving congress and suspending the constitution. Troops in armored personnel carriers took to the capital's main thoroughfares.

Peru is mired in a deep recession and beset by the hemisphere's most violent guerrilla insurgency. Fujimori has been hamstrung in his reform efforts by a hostile congress.

Fujimori announced the moves in a surprise 22-minute television address, saying he was ordering them as commander and chief of the military in the name of guaranteeing order and preserving democracy.

Fujimori said he intended to reorganize the government "for an honest and efficient administration of justice."

Radio stations said additional troops were placed at the congress and judicial palaces and the attorney general's office. They were also posted at offices of domestic and foreign news organizations including The Associated Press. They did not interfere with AP operations.

Lima's streets were quiet but the announcement came to late to gauge public reaction.

Fujimori was elected to a five-year term in 1990 at the head of a hastily organized party that is now in disarray, and governs largely by decree because he lacks a legislative majority.

He has relied heavily on the military, which last held power from 1968 to 1980 and is a potent force in Peruvian politics. The military has apparently been reluctant to take power again because of the chaotic situation.

Some analysts say paramilitary violence — the rightist response to the rebel Shining Path — poses as great a threat as the Maoist-inspired movement.

"The country should understand that the temporary and partial suspension of the existing legality is not a denial of real democracy," Fujimori said.

A soldier waves a tank through a street in front of the congress building in Lima, Peru early Monday. On Sunday night, President Alberto Fujimori closed congress, claiming the legislative body opposed his reforms.

He called the changes he intends to make "the starting point of an authentic transformation to assure a legitimate and effective democracy, which will permit all Peruvians to participate in building a more just, more developed and more respected Peru."

Fujimori has taken drastic steps to control inflation and try to heal a shattered economy in a country where more than half the people live in poverty. He has removed price controls and subsidies, lowered trade barriers, freed the foreign exchange market, begun selling off state businesses and severely reduced government spending.

Fujimori's leftist opponents in congress contend that by cutting social spending the president is aiding the Shining Path in its recruitment efforts.

They have also accused him of seeking to curb freedom of expression and limit congressional oversight of the military.

The Shining Path has in the past year made inroads from its base in the Andes to Lima and other coastal cities. Nearly 25,000 people have died in political violence since the Shining Path took up arms in 1980.

Isaac Asimov dies at 72

NEW YORK (AP) — Isaac Asimov, the prolific writer of science fact and fiction who laid down the literary laws of how robots must behave, died today, his brother said. He was 72.

Stanley Asimov, a vice president of Newsday, said his brother died at 2:20 a.m. at New York University Hospital of heart and kidney failure.

Isaac Asimov

He had slowed him down and he was cutting back on his writing. He also suspended his monthly column in Fantasy and Science Fiction magazine, to which he had contributed some 400 columns and articles over 33 years.

Publishing 10 or more titles in a year was no big deal for Asimov, and his production had continued after a heart attack in 1977 and triple bypass surgery in 1983.

Among the nearly 500 books Asimov wrote, three early novels known as the "Foundation" trilogy were honored in 1966 with a special Hugo Award as the best science-fiction series ever.

Asimov promulgated the three "Laws of Robotics" in his second book, "I, Robot," a 1950 collection of connected stories about the introduction of sentient machines into human society.

He required that each robot brain be programmed with these immutable commandments: Robots may not injure a human or, by inaction, allow a human to be harmed; robots must obey humans' orders unless that conflicts with the first law; robots must protect their own existence unless that conflicts with the first two laws.

Robots as conscienceless marauders and implacable killing machines were a cliché of pre-Asimov pulp sci-fi.

But the logic of Asimov's laws had been largely acknowledged by other writers and, "Terminator" movies notwithstanding, they changed the image of fictional robots from the malign to the solicitous.

The Foundation books, set in a future galactic empire, featured another engine of the imagination that Asimov called "psychohistory," a wedding of mathematics, history, psychology and sociology that almost unerringly reveals what the future holds.

Robot and galactic empire themes eventually expanded and intertwined in 14 novels. Taken together, they formed a picture of humanity in millennia to come — spread through the stars, with earth itself still but forgotten, but the people still in the thrall of human nature.

Asimov was a biochemist by training and a hallmark of his fiction was that the science, sometimes mindboggling — like faster-than-light travel — was nonetheless convincing.

One book in which Asimov conceded his science was not so hot was the popular "Fantastic Voyage" in 1966, about a medical team being miniaturized and injected into the bloodstream of a dying man. The microscopic-sized characters were so small that a molecule of oxygen would be too big to breathe, Asimov said.

In hundreds of books of science fact, Asimov was a master explainer of the abstruse and complicated, a plain-English guide for the young or the scientifically semiliterate.

He could put an intelligent but ignorant reader at ease with everything from the mysteries of mathematics to the keys to the genetic code.

His work also ranged through history, the arts and humor, as indicated in such titles as "The Sensuous Dirty Old Man" in 1971 and "The Shaping of France" and "Asimov's Annotated Don Juan" in 1972.

His most recent entry in "Who's Who" said he was the author of 467 books and actually lists 249 titles.

A not untypical year for Asimov, 1977, included such books as "Familiar Poems Annotated," "The Collapsing Universe," "Asimov on Numbers," "How Did We Find Out About Outer Space?" "Still More Lecherous Limericks,"

"The Hugo Winners, Vol. II," "The Beginning and the End," "Mars, the Red Planet," "The Golden Door," "The Key Word and Other Mysteries" and "Asimov's Sherlockian Limericks."

Asimov once told an interviewer about a time he was saddened at the prospect of dying and having his brain decay. But then he cheered himself with the thought, "I don't have to worry about that, because there isn't an idea I've ever had that I haven't put down on paper."

Contemplating his output and popularity, Asimov called himself "the beneficiary of a lucky break in the genetic sweepstakes."

He was born in Petrovichi in the Soviet Union Jan. 2, 1920, and brought to the United States when he was 3. His parents ran a candy store in Brooklyn and at age 9 Asimov, helping out in the store, began reading the stock of science-fiction pulps.

He majored in chemistry at Columbia University, but also put his hand to storytelling. His first short story, "Marooned Off Vesta," after a dozen rejections, ran in the October 1938 issue of Amazing Stories.

One of the rejecting editors, John Campbell of Astounding Science Fiction, said years later that the 18-year-old Asimov was "lean and hungry and very enthusiastic. He couldn't write, but he could tell a story. You can teach a guy how to write, but not how to tell a story."

Asimov said a watershed of his writing career came at age 21, when Campbell paid him $150 for his 12,000-word story "Nightfall." That was a cent-and-a-quarter per word rather than the then-standard one cent a word and Asimov exulted over the bonus, saying later, "I had never, till then, received so huge a payment for any story."

Asimov earned advanced degrees in chemistry at Columbia.

He became a biochemistry teacher at Boston University Medical School in 1949 and there co-wrote a textbook on human metabolism. That set him off on writing science books for laymen and led to his quitting his academic post in 1958.

Arizona execution first since '63

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP) — A triple murderer made an obscene gesture as he was put to death in the gas chamber today in Arizona's first execution in 29 years.

Donald Eugene Harding, 43, was executed just after midnight following a flurry of appeals. He was pronounced dead 10½ minutes after cyanide pellets were dropped into a bowl of sulfuric acid beneath his chair to release the gas.

As he waited, Harding gestured as if to urge the executioner to get started. At least twice — once while in the throes of death — Harding extended his middle finger. At the time, he had straps across his forearms and wrists.

Among the witnesses was Attorney General Grant Woods.

Harding was sentenced to die for the 1980 murders of businessmen Robert Wise of Mesa and Martin Concannon of Tucson, who were robbed, hogtied, beaten and shot in a Tucson hotel in 1980.

He also was convicted of killing a man in similar fashion a day earlier in a Phoenix motel and was linked to at least three other slayings, one in Arkansas and two in California.

It was the first execution in Arizona since 1963, when Manuel Silvas died in the gas chamber for fatally shooting his estranged pregnant girlfriend.

Harding became the 168th person put to death since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed states to resume use of capital punishment in 1976.

Arizona becomes the 19th state to make use of the death penalty since then. Delaware had its first execution in nearly 46 years on March 14. On April 21, California is scheduled to carry out its first in 25 years.

Late Sunday, the state Board of Pardons and Paroles refused to recommend Gov. Fife Symington grant Harding a reprieve or commute his sentence to life in prison.

Late-hour appeals were rejected in turn by the state Supreme Court, a federal judge in Tucson, a federal appeals court and the U.S. Supreme Court.

Defense lawyers had told the parole board that Harding suffered brain damage at birth that prevented him from restraining violent impulses.

UAW ignores Caterpillar threat

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Chanting "Once a scab, always a scab," striking members of the United Auto Workers threatened to ignore a Caterpillar Inc. ultimatum to return to work today or risk the loss of their 13,000 jobs.

Trying to crush the strike now in its sixth month, the world's largest maker of earth-moving equipment said it would open factories around the country today to employees willing to accept its final contract offer. Caterpillar said it may permanently replace workers who stay on picket lines.

"We're going to get our facilities up and running," said Wayne Zimmerman, Caterpillar vice president. "I think there's a lot of people out there who are unemployed and will recognize our offer as an excellent package."

UAW officials urged strikers to stay put.

"Crossing the picket line is a traumatic experience that will gnaw at you forever," UAW secretary-treasurer Bill Casstevens told about 300 cheering union members in East Peoria on Sunday.

"Scabbing is like a tattoo — you can never wash it off," he said as union members chanted, "Once a scab, always a scab."

Casstevens said few of the UAW workers in Illinois, York, Pa., Memphis, Tenn., and Denver would cross picket lines. Caterpillar has about 16,000 UAW workers, but some aren't striking.

Analysts called Caterpillar's strategy a huge gamble because it could poison labor relations. No other major manufacturer has ever attempted to break a union the size and strength of the 900,000-member UAW, labor experts said.

Farmers need more help

Thumbs down to our federal government for not providing enough funds for struggling farmers whose crops were washed away by floods or parched by drought in 1990 and 1991.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has only $995 million to divide among thousands of farmers, nurseries and orchards that lost crops to bad weather.

The revenues are far short of what it will take to cover the losses.

Farmers can expect only 10 cents to 50 cents for every dollar lost.

Most checks are expected to be an average of 30 cents on the dollar.

Farmers experiencing devastation in previous bad-weather years received much more generous reimbursements.

Farmers have a reason to be upset when a nation as rich as ours can send millions of dollars in aid to other countries for similar hardships, but can't care for its own during difficult times.

The federal government should be ashamed of itself.

Tyson has found his match

Mike Tyson finally found an opponent he couldn't intimidate, bully and pummel into submission: the law.

Even as Tyson stood in the courtroom and apologized for his assault against 19-year-old Desiree Washington, his statement betrayed the fact that he still doesn't comprehend the nature of his offense.

"I didn't hurt anybody," the boxer said. "No black eyes, no broken ribs."

What he so obviously refuses to acknowledge is that rape is by its nature a crime of violence, not a matter of sex, and a victim need not sustain visible physical injuries in order to suffer deep emotional scars.

With Tyson facing an uncertain fate behind bars, Americans are justified in feeling both satisfaction in the performance in the justice system and deep sadness at the tragic denouement of what could have been an inspiring story of triumph over adversity.

Tyson is probably in for the fight of his life in a maximum-security prison.

His downfall should serve as a cautionary lesson for anyone who foolishly thinks his wealth, power or fame somehow places him above the law.

Worst fears not realized

When observing the travails of the Commonwealth of Independent States, the three-month-old association of former Soviet republics, it might be well to begin noting that the worst fears for the winter were not realized: Massive food riots, crippling labor strikes, generalized ethnic strife, insurrections by the armed forces, further attempted coups by the communist old guard.

Merely avoiding such developments would not be considered a great accomplishment under ordinary circumstances, but it is more than might have been expected in view of the unprecedented vacuum left by the sudden collapse of the communist system, which provided the sole unifying authority over this vast aggregation of disparate people for some 75 years.

Officials urged to reconsider abatement

To the editor:

The purpose of this letter is to strongly urge our county commissioners to carefully consider the abatement for American Petrofina's Big Spring, Texas, plant.

I am certain that you are hearing the rumors concerning the closing of the Big Spring plant. Both, my wife and I are very concerned about the loss of any existing business in Big Spring. This is especially true of any business the size of the Cosden Refinery.

Prior to the time this issue is again addressed by the commissioners, I strongly urge each of you to consider the following items:

1) American Petrofina is the largest employer in Big Spring. I believe that we could never replace those jobs in this community should Fina elect to close the refinery.

2) If the refinery were to be closed, what would the economic impact be for this community? There is not one business entity in Big Spring that would not be affected, whether it is a retail outlet, restaurant, entertainment business, service business or a real estate entity. In addition, we cannot escape the impact that this would have on our public and private school systems.

I am a member of management with the Union Pacific Railroad here in Big Spring. We currently employ approximately 120 employees. I can assure you that approximately 60 percent or more of our local business is directly related to Fina. If the local refinery is closed, there is no doubt in my mind but that our work force would be seriously reduced, further impacting the economic environment of Big Spring.

3) I am absolutely pro-active in any way to attract new business entities to locate in Big Spring; however, at the same time I am adamant that we do not lose any business entity that we currently have. It would be wonderful to be awarded one or more of the state prisons that we have applied for; but at the same time, if that does not become a reality and we lose the largest employer in the community we will lose much more than one business entity.

Thank you for your time and attention to my letter, I remain, a very concerned citizen for Big Spring.

Aw, George, why can't Pat be you-oo?

Pat Buchanan sent me a letter the other day. Nothing personal. It was a form letter, seeking funds to continue his campaign to get George Bush back on track. I looked at the letter for a while, and sighed, and thought of Patsy Cline. Patsy was one of the all-time great country singers. She often sang a ballad, "Why Can't He Be You?" She might have been singing to George about Pat. To paraphrase the song, Pat promises to take conservatives where they used to go. Pat gives them love "I never get from you." Pat's love is true. Aw, George, why can't Pat be you-oo?

The thing is that over on the right side of the political spectrum, Pat Buchanan makes many hearts go pitty-pat. If only he were not quite so truculent! If only he had some of Bush's encompassing experience! Buchanan goes too far, but clearly he heads in the right direction.

The Buchanan letter dwells upon 10 points that most Americans support. This is Buchanan's Point No. 1: "Phase out foreign aid. Americans will always be first at the scene to help the victims of natural disaster, from Kurdistan to Peru. But the steady siphoning of $300 million in foreign aid — every single week — from a depleted U.S. Treasury, by Third World and socialist regimes, must end. Charity begins at home." What's so terribly wrong with that?

Point No. 2 deals with trade: "We will demand reciprocity. Nations that adopt a closed-door policy to America's exports should not expect an open-door policy to America's markets."

"Defend America first," says Pat Buchanan. "It is time that rich and prosperous allies, like Germany and Japan, start paying bills for their own defense." I say hooray for Point No. 3.

Point 4 deals with the kind of tax cuts that will spur investment and create jobs. Point 5 is a promise to veto tax increases if Congress approves them. Point 6 pinches a painful nerve: "Freeze federal spending. Under George Bush, social spending has soared faster than at any time in 60 years, and America has run the largest deficits in her history."

Buchanan's Point 7 goes to the need to keep America strong, not only in national defense but also in industry, manufacturing and standard of living.

Point 8 should be quoted in full: "Equal justice for all. If discrimination is wrong when practiced against black men and women, it is wrong when practiced against any man or woman. All quotas in federal agencies and programs will be abolished — and the ideas of excellence and merit will be restored."

In Point 9, Buchanan comes out for limiting the terms of members of Congress. His final point deals with the pollution of our culture by the sex and violence that permeates our movies, television programs and magazines. His platform hits a lick in favor of a constitutional amendment "to restore voluntary prayer in the public schools." Pat will lead a fight against abortion.

I have problems with some of this. Buchanan is right-to-life; I am pro-choice. He wants a constitutional amendment on school prayer; I won't tinker with the Constitution. He is upset about cultural pollution; so am I, but I would be awfully careful about infringing upon freedom of expression.

On matters of foreign aid and trade policy, Buchanan is quite sound. Though much foreign aid comes back in purchases of arms and agricultural commodities, much of it is no more than a costly habit. I don't read Buchanan's Point No. 2 as all-out protectionism; any such trade policy would be indescribably stupid. But Buchanan is plainly right in insisting that our principal trading partners abide by the fairplay rule of quid pro quo.

Freeze federal spending? Not all federal programs, certainly, could be frozen, but hundreds of outlays, large and small, could be kept at current levels. Buchanan is not asking any more of Congress than millions of American families ask of themselves. Hold the line! Learn to say no! The bloated budget for agriculture surely could be kept in line. Space exploration can wait. Increases for energy, environment and research do not have to be granted.

George Bush can't be made over into a friendlier Pat Buchanan. The president is no slugger, nor was meant to be, but his re-election hinges upon convincing disillusioned conservatives and independents that he loves us, too. Bill Clinton is waiting upon the doorstep, and he has flowers in his arms.

Georgia's spring is on my mind

Why is it the older you get the more you begin to pay attention to things you never thought about before?

Quiet things. Natural things. It's been that way for me, for instance, with flowers. When I was growing up in Moreland, Ga., my Aunt Jessie's yard was the flower capital of the county.

People drove from as far away as Grantville, Corinth and Smith City to gaze at the color show Aunt Jessie's yard put on each spring.

I never paid much attention to her flowers, myself. The only time I ever thought about them was when Aunt Jessie would berate me for trampling through her flowers in search of the baseball I just hit from my yard to hers.

"Get out of those flowers, young man!" she must have screamed at me a million times.

I never understood her concern. There I was practicing to grow up to be Gil Hodges, and how could I continue without my baseball.

Now flowers sly me. The azaleas will be blooming in Atlanta soon. So will the dogwoods. Their beauty decorates the city in pinks and whites and takes an ol' flower stomper's breath.

This week there have been days that were certainly whippers of spring. It was warm and still and it chased away the dreariness of winter.

I spent one afternoon on the golf course. On one hole the sprinkler system was wetting the grounds around it.

I smelled a smell I hadn't thought of in years. The smell of water upon dry soil.

I can't describe that smell in words but I remembered it from when the rain used to hit the dusty dirt road in front of my grandmother's house.

Also, I remembered it from when I would be in my grandfather's fields, following him as he followed his plow and his mule, and it would "come up a cloud," as the old folks used to say, and the rain pelted down upon the freshly plowed earth and produced that smell again.

I looked up at an absolutely clear, blue sky this week. Its brilliance was remarkable. Up there somewhere was a hole in the ozone layer, but I couldn't see it.

All I saw was a blue so clear and so bright it was like looking into eternity.

It's also difficult to describe the feeling of warmth. It's a secure feeling, somehow. I just sort of stood out there on the golf course and revelled in it.

When chill turns to warm it reminds me that Winter's discoment has been sated.

This was my 45th introduction to spring. But it was only the last several years that I began to take a few moments to relish the season.

I vividly remember the first time I really noticed and appreciated the coming of spring. I was on a golf course then, too. Augusta National. I had just turned 30.

I was covering the Masters golf tour for the Chicago Sun Times.

It was a spectacular April Sunday. Warm and cloudless. There was the green of the turf, the blue of the sky, the pink of the azaleas.

I would be catching a flight in a few hours, back to Chicago. I'd called the office earlier. They said it was snowing.

I stood out there and soaked it all in, down to my soul. It also did something to my future.

I vowed at that moment, I'd never miss another Georgia spring. Twenty-two days later, I was back home in Atlanta with a job as a typer of words upon blank sheets of paper.

Fifteen years later I am still taking the time to smell and feel the glory of spring.

Sorry about the flowers I stomped, Aunt Jessie. I never learned to hit a curve ball anyway.

Stanford women waltz to title

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In what was supposed to be a down year for the Stanford women's basketball team, Molly Goodenbour and her 1992 Cardinal teammates went all the way to the top.

Goodenbour, a 5-foot-6 junior guard who was a reserve on the Cardinal teams that won the NCAA tournament in 1990 and was the runner-up a year ago, led Stanford to its second women's championship Sunday, a 78-62 victory over Western Kentucky.

Stanford won the title with a team that has only one senior and had lost five key players, including three starters, off its 1991 team.

Stanford coach Tara VanDerveer credited Goodenbour with helping transform a team that was supposed to be rebuilding into national champions.

"The point guard has to be the quarterback of our team," the coach said after Goodenbour scored 12 points against Western Kentucky in the NCAA title game. "We tailored our game to fit Molly. She has to get the ball and go. She likes to move the ball quickly up the court."

Goodenbour was named the tournament MVP and joined teammates Val Whiting and Rachel Hemmer on the all-tournament team. Filling out the team were Western Kentucky's Kim Pehlke and Virginia's Dawn Staley.

A native of Waterloo, Iowa, Goodenbour had 28 points and 12 assists in the Final Four, making four key 3-pointers in a 66-65 victory over Virginia in the semifinals.

Three other Stanford players scored in double figures for the Cardinal in the championship game.

Junior center Whiting had 17 points and 13 rebounds; freshman forward Hemmer had 18 points and 15 rebounds; and sophomore guard Christy Hedgpeth added 17 points.

Stanford (30-3) secured its third consecutive Final Four appearance by rolling past UC Santa Barbara, Texas Tech and Southern Cal. The Lady Cardinal advanced to the title match with the narrow victory Saturday over Virginia, the nation's top-ranked team most of the season.

Playing on consecutive days proved advantageous to the well-conditioned Stanford team, which trains with Cardinal track coach Brooks Johnson. Forcing a fast tempo, Stanford ran up and down the court for almost the entire 40 minutes, wearing down the Lady Toppers.

He said the 23-hour turnaround between games seemed to hurt both teams.

PECOS — The Big Spring Lady Steers scored 84 points and finished fourth at the West of the Pecos Relays Saturday.

Odessa Permian won the meet with 116 points. The Lady Steers got first place finishes from Syretta Shellman in the shot put, Hope Martinez in the 800 meters and Anne Rodriguez in the 400.

"We left two people at home who would've helped us. They were sick," said Lady Steers coach Jay Kennedy. "We kind of had to put together a sprint relay. I was a little disappointed with the mile relay. We had three people who ran good. Anne Rodriguez ran a 57.2 on her leg."

The Lady Steers will be competing in the Big Spring Relays Saturday at Blankenship Field.

Blue Devils seeking repeat

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Hurley probably would be lost if he weren't playing championship basketball this late in the year.

"I don't know what I would do if I wasn't playing in that last game to end the season," he says. "That's something I've always done. I just hope I can continue to do that."

Hurley was a champion as a senior at his Jersey City, N.J., high school, where he played for his father, Bob. Since he's been at Duke, Hurley has been in two games for the national championship. The third is tonight against Michigan, a team he helped the Blue Devils beat last December.

But how about a spring in the sun and fun of some beachfront location, doing what most of his Duke classmates did last month?

"When my roommate came back with a tan, I was a little jealous of him. But I wouldn't trade that for what we're doing. That's crazy. It has crossed my mind that all my friends are going to Cancun and Florida and everywhere else. But they can't match what I'm doing," — Bobby Hurley, Duke guard.

"I didn't invest as much. I didn't know how much needed to be invested to win a national championship," Hurley says, adding that despite being a starter and the team floor leader, the role was a tough fit to make.

"I don't know in my freshman year if I ever felt totally in control of my team," he says. "I was playing with Phil Henderson, Alaa Abdelnaby and Robert Brickey as seniors. I believed they had more control over the team than I did. When I got to the Final Four, I'd always had success all my life. There was no success then. Hurley almost didn't have any this season, either."

Sometime during the loss to North Carolina in February, Hurley suffered a broken bone in his right foot.

"I feared I would be out for the season, being as how I had never felt something like that in my life," Hurley says. "I was really scared. When I knew I'd be able to get back for at least the ACC and the NCAA tournament, that gave me something to look forward to," he says.

Now, Hurley is back in the familiar territory of the postseason, and the unique position to capture a second straight national title for Duke. It hasn't happened since UCLA did it in 1972 and 1973.

Wolverines, Hurley has a 16-1 NCAA record. As a rising senior in Durham, he has a 90-17 mark. Experience has taught him to treat tonight as just another outing to calm his nerves.

"I'm not going to come into this situation in awe of it," Hurley said. "The thing is, I need to bring a lot of intensity and enthusiasm and a willingness to work hard."

Success, Hurley admits, might actually have spoiled him in his freshman year in 1990. After the Blue Devils beat Arkansas to reach the title game, they lost to Nevada-Las Vegas.

Birdless Celtics ride Bulls

The Birdless Boston Celtics soared against the Chicago Bulls.

Larry Bird couldn't play because of back spasms, but Kevin McHale filled the void with 20 points as the Celtics beat Chicago 97-86 Sunday and blocked the Bulls' bid for a club-record 62nd victory.

The win also prevented Chicago from gaining a four-game sweep of the Celtics, who lost their first three games to the Bulls by lopsided margins.

McHale scored 10 points in the fourth quarter as the Celtics got their eighth victory in nine games. The loss snapped a five-game winning streak for Chicago, which suffered only its second defeat in 15 games.

Michael Jordan led the Bulls with 26 points and Scottie Pippen added 22, but the two Chicago stars were a combined 21 of 51 from the field.

Cavaliers 97, Knicks 93
At Richfield, Ohio, Brad Daugherty scored 22 points, including two clinching free throws with 1.3 seconds left.

Clippers 97, Bucks 96
At Milwaukee, Ron Harper scored the go-ahead basket with 1:19 left as the Clippers overcame a 16-point deficit and handed Milwaukee its eighth straight loss.

Timberwolves 93, Jazz 91
At Minneapolis, reserve Tony Campbell scored 22 points and Minnesota made eight free throws in the final minute to win its third straight game. Pooh Richardson added 17 points and Felton Spencer had 16 points and a season-high 16 rebounds for the Timberwolves, who have defeated Denver, Dallas and the Jazz after losing a team-record 16 in a row. Karl Malone led Utah with 33 points and 13 rebounds.

Nets 128, Pacers 120
At Indianapolis, Drazen Petrovic scored 38 points as New Jersey defeated Indiana and moved up to seventh place in the Eastern Conference playoff race. Derrick Coleman had 22 points and 10 rebounds for the Nets, while Mookie Blaylock added 21 points and 14 assists. New Jersey has won four straight, moving past Atlanta in the playoff hunt with a 35-39 record.

Detlef Schrempf led Indiana with 26 points and 12 rebounds.

Spurs 90, Nuggets 87
At Denver, Terry Cummings scored 24 points as San Antonio handed Denver its seventh straight loss. Denver cut an 11-point deficit to 73-72 at the end of three periods, then opened the final quarter with a 7-0 run to take a 79-73 lead. But San Antonio countered with an 11-1 burst to take an 84-80 lead with 3:53 remaining.

Pistons 104, Heat 80
At Auburn Hills, Bill Laimbeer scored 17 of his 19 points in the second quarter as Detroit broke out of an offensive slump. The Pistons, who had lost six of their previous seven and scored over 100 points just twice in 10 games, matched their biggest victory margin of the season.

Kings 103, Mavericks 89
At Sacramento, Lionel Simmons scored 23 points and tied a career high with 19 rebounds as the Kings handed the Mavericks their 24th straight road loss. Mitch Richmond added 18 points for the Kings, who held an 18-point halftime lead and increased their advantage to as many as 27 points in the third quarter.

Ryan gets nod on mound for baseball's opening day

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Neither Nolan Ryan nor President Bush made their best pitches to start last year. Today, they both got another chance.

In a season marked by new faces, new chases and new places, Bush was to begin a new era of baseball in Baltimore with a ceremonial toss this afternoon at Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

Later in the evening, Ryan, 45, was to begin his 26th season in the majors when he started for the Texas Rangers in Seattle.

"In all likelihood, this will be my last season. I'm ready. I've had all the spring training I want," — Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan.

"In all likelihood, this will be my last season. I'm ready. I've had all the spring training I want," — Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan.

President Bush will try to bring his best motion to the first game at Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

The new ballpark in Baltimore, featuring odd dimensions and the city's skyline as a backdrop, already has gotten rave reviews. In fact, so many that Orioles manager Johnny Oates held a team meeting last week, telling his players not to let the publicity about the new building overwhelm them.

"I don't want to downplay the beauty of the stadium, but nobody's asked me one question about the team since I got to town. If we don't win some games, in two years we'll all have to buy tickets if we want to get in here to see a game," Oates said.

The last four teams to open a new stadium — the Chicago White Sox, Toronto, Minnesota and Montreal — all lost the first games in their new parks. The Orioles, with free agent Rick Sutcliffe pitching, have the right team in town to beat in the Cleveland Indians, who lost a franchise-record 105 games last season.

The Cincinnati Reds, meanwhile, again will play host to the National League opener when they face San Diego. The two teams made one big trade during the winter, with Big Brother going to the Reds for Randy Myers, and Cincinnati will present a lineup that now includes Tim Belcher, Greg Swindell and Dave Martinez, among others.

San Francisco will be at Los Angeles later in the afternoon, and the other NL openers feature Montreal at Pittsburgh and New York at St. Louis in night games. In AL night games, Texas is at Seattle and Kansas City is at Oakland.

Scott Erickson, a 20-game winner last season, pitches for Minnesota against Bill Wegman. In Erickson's last two starts in spring training, he gave up 12 earned runs on 17 hits and six walks in 12 innings.

"The numbers matter a little bit, sure, but I think the main thing is that I feel good," Erickson said. "My motion is still a little bit off, but I think it can be worked out by Monday."

Fence maker arrested in torso murder

HOUSTON (AP) — A 36-year-old fence maker was charged with capital murder Sunday in the slaying and dismemberment of 24-year-old Cecelia Reyes. Gerardo Ruz Marquez, a Cuban national who's lived in the U.S.

about 14 years, was being held without bond on Sunday, a Houston Police Department spokeswoman said. A highway crew last week found Mrs. Reyes' mutilated torso and right arm stuffed in a cardboard furniture box. Shortly after his arrest on Friday, Marquez led police to the woman's missing head, left arm and legs, about a mile from where her dismembered body had been recovered, homicide Sgt. Mike Peters said. The body parts found Friday were in two taped cardboard boxes, in a ditch. Mrs. Reyes was last seen the night of March 26, when she left her job at the Fiesta Beverage Mart for the short drive home.

Those passed include one stating taxes reduced the last 12 years for wealthy Americans should be restored and another opposing hazardous waste facilities in this area. Companies producing such waste are urged to do more research and develop more economic use or safe disposal of hazardous material. "Our feeling was we would try to restrict our resolutions to what affects our area," Hardesty said of the resolutions approved. On taxes, he said, "I think the general feeling is the middle class is absorbing most of the tax (burden)." ## Clinton

"The notice had been sent by surface mail and arrived after the induction date. Gov. Clinton immediately sought guidance from his local draft board about the induction date that had passed. He asked whether he could finish his current term at Oxford." "As was routine procedure, the request was granted and his induction was postponed. Gov. Clinton completed the spring term and returned to the United States, in late June or early July." The statement went on to say that Clinton then joined the ROTC program at the University of Arkansas. Clinton has not denied receiving an induction notice, but did not volunteer that he received one in previous explanations about his draft status during the Vietnam war, which has been an issue in his campaign.

Perot

The maverick electronics industry magnate took additional steps last week toward making such a run, filing papers with the Federal Election Commission to set up a campaign committee. He also named a Vietnam war hero as his interim running mate to satisfy requirements in 27 states that independent candidates have a vice presidential running mate. Perot, who is in Europe until the end of this week, said last week that he didn't think his candidacy "would happen because I thought the process was too complicated. ... But they are making it happen."

"The phone rang all day yesterday" with requests about Perot, said Patsy Casey, a worker in the secretary of state's office in Kentucky. Her remarks were typical of those of other state elections officials. Perot's prospective candidacy appears to be arousing remarkable interest in all regions of the country. "We have a movement of the disenfranchised and angry citizens," said Thomas O'Neil, a business consultant who is running Perot's New Jersey petition campaign from his home in Lawrence Township.

Another step in the right direction

Coronary artery disease remains the number one cause of death and disability in the United States, responsible for approximately 550,000 deaths each year. Preventing coronary artery disease remains the leading challenge of the medical community today. On the average, almost 3 Americans will suffer a heart attack every minute of the day, adding up to almost one and a half million heart attacks each year.

Healing hearts require careful assessment and management — a progressive program of exercise and a new look at nutrition and lifestyle.

After your physician's referral and then your entry evaluation, eligible participants begin a 12-week program of prescribed exercise and education.

The goal of our program is designed to meet your individual needs. We encourage you to make a total commitment and to learn more about heart disease and cardiovascular risk factor modification.

This is your opportunity to choose the quality of your lifestyle.

Program for migrants marks 20 years

AUSTIN (AP) — In 1960, the documentary "Harvest of Shame" reported that no child of a migrant worker had ever graduated from college.

In 1992, Solomon Torres is two months from an Ivy League law degree — thanks to his own smarts and ambition, and to a program at a small, private university that has provided first-year scholarships to nearly 2,000 other migrant children over 20 years.

For those students, St. Edward's University's College Assistance Migrant Program has bridged the gap between farm fields and fields of education, offering them a way out of poverty and rootlessness.

"Crazy voyage? It certainly felt that way a lot of times," Torres said.

Ten years ago, Torres was merely the youngest of a migrant family's eight children. Every six months, his parents would move them all from their home in the Rio Grande Valley to Wisconsin, where they worked in a vegetable cannery.

This young man wanted to do more than put food on the table. He considered the Air Force, but "God or somebody looked down and said that was not right."

Instead, he listened to a high school guidance counselor and applied to St. Edward's CAMP, one of seven such programs across the nation which were inspired by the acclaimed CBS documentary.

To high-school graduates who worked in the fields for at least 75 days over the past two years — or whose parents were seasonal or migrant workers for 75 days — CAMP offers free first-year tuition, room and board, books and other necessities including monthly spending money.

But CAMP is much more than a cash cow. The program, says program director Sarita Rodriguez, aims "to help students with migrant backgrounds to complete that first year of college, which is traditionally the most difficult."

Ms. Rodriguez also serves as an academic adviser and occasional surrogate mother; CAMPers mill around Ms. Rodriguez's third-floor office, the "home base," as she calls it, waiting to be tutored or kibitzing with friends.

"We're really a family, if you think about it. We're all here with them in mind. So, we have kind of a unified vision of what we want for the students. And it shows," Ms. Rodriguez said.

Students comfort each other in common struggles — homesickness, family pressures, time management and making the most of a monthly $65 "allowance."

To reduce first-year jitters, students ease into the program with a "week of enrichment" — a sort of orientation before the regular college orientation. And during the year, students have access to tutors, counselors and personal academic advisers.

This year, a mentor program gave CAMPers real-life experience. About 50 Austin-area specialists have volunteered their time, offering students a chance to be, for example, a doctor for a day.

Ms. Rodriguez says CAMPers tend to select practical majors — accounting, teaching, social work or criminal justice — that need no postgraduate study.

The only course requirements for CAMPers are freshman English and math. Students usually take other typical first-year courses such as psychology, sociology, economics and computer-oriented classes, Ms. Rodriguez said.

This is a foreign world to many of

St. Edwards University student Leticia De La Cruz, left, works on math with her tutor Willia Bailey recently in Austin. De La Cruz is in the university's College Assistance Program, which gives qualifying first year students free tuition, room and board, and books to migrant worker's children.

their parents. "Their parents' level of education is, on the average, maybe elementary school. They don't understand why it takes four years (to get a degree) and why their children have to take biology when they're going to be an accountant," Ms. Rodriguez said.

Torres' parents were no exception: "Going through higher education and through law school is certainly a world that I can only share some with them because they can't appreciate everything that I've been through," he said. "To them, higher education means a six-month technical program to become a nurse or to be an electrician, which is fine. But I tried to explain to them that my eyes were looking in another direction."

The program — which is funded by the federal government, St. Edward's and private donors — is an unqualified success. A 1990 study found that nine of 10 participants eventually graduated; 78 percent went on to earn at least $20,000 a year, and more than 30 percent went on to earn in excess of $30,000.

Torres' experience is illustrative. Having whetted his appetite for education at St. Edward's, Torres applied for more grants. Eventually, he went to Harvard and to Columbia Law School.

"Graduating from high school, looking at starting college, I had never heard of Harvard. The counselor might have mentioned some of the Ivy League schools, but I didn't know what that meant," he said.

Book portrays Anne Frank's prewar childhood

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Previously unpublished photographs of Anne Frank have been compiled in a scrapbook-style book for children telling of the diarist's life before the Holocaust.

"Anne Frank," published recently by the Anne Frank Foundation, mixes snapshots, postcards, letters and school report cards to give young readers a chronological account of the Jewish girl's life.

"Anne's life story has never been fully told," said co-author Rian Verhoeven, who said she "tried to make the book as much like a family album as possible."

Anne died in March 1945 at the Bergen-Belsen death camp in Germany. She was 15.

The 64-page book contains 20 photos given to the foundation recently by Elfriede Frank, the second wife of Anne's late father Otto, according to photo editor Yt Stoker.

The photos, never before shown in print, were found among Otto's papers, Stoker said. Otto Frank died in 1980.

Snapshots show Anne as an infant, at the beach, at school and at play in the years before her family took refuge in the cramped hiding space referred to as "The Annex" in "The Diary of Anne Frank."

In her world-famous diary, Anne recounts her family's two years' in hiding, confessing her emotions and fears in letters to an imaginary friend, Kitty.

Anne and her family hid from Nazi occupiers in the rear apartment of an Amsterdam house, now run by the foundation as a museum.

The new book is in Dutch, but Stoker said versions in French and German are planned and the foundation is looking for publisher for an English translation.

Verhoeven said the book is a response to "hundreds of letters and calls every year from children asking about Anne's early childhood and what happened to the family after World War II."

"Anne Frank" begins with her birth in Frankfurt, Germany, in 1929 and follows the Frank family's flight to Amsterdam when she was four and the Nazis had taken over in Germany. German forces invaded the Netherlands in May 1940, and the

"Anne Frank" also picks up where the diary left off, telling of the Franks' deportation to Nazi death camps, and how Otto was given the diary after the war by Miep Gies, the Dutch woman who had brought food to the hideaway.

Otto Frank was the only member of the family to survive the Holocaust.

Female thugs on rise in big cities

EDITOR'S NOTE — They're street toughs spoiling for a fight, teen-agers armed with knives, guns and razors, dealing drugs and looking for someone to mug. But those prowling punks today are often wearing lipstick and skirts. In New York in recent months there has been a dramatic increase in the number of young girls arrested for violent crimes.

NEW YORK (AP) — Aida, who was suspended from high school last fall after she threatened to kill her reading teacher, is known as the toughest girl in her neighborhood on the Lower East Side.

She's the one her friends seek out when they need somebody who "really knows how to fight." Like almost all her girlfriends, Aida, 17, always carries a razor blade and can get a gun when she needs it. But thanks to her older brothers, she can handle herself with her fists too.

Aida is now enrolled in a special, year-round school for troubled students in Manhattan. She wants to be a lawyer. But she still gets into street fights with both other girls and boys near her home.

The teen-ager chewed thoughtfully on ketchup-soaked french fries at a McDonald's, pausing occasionally to wash them down with a large-size Coke, as she described how it feels to stab someone in a fight.

"It's like cutting meat," says Aida, a pretty, stocky girl who wears bright red lipstick and distinctive smudges of eyeliner on her top lids.

"It's like you start in and you want to keep on stabbing them."

Aida is not an isolated case in the inner-city neighborhoods of New York. Crime and violence, long the province of males, is becoming increasingly common among girls. Police statistics show felony arrests of girls has almost doubled over the past five years.

In 1986, 690 girls 17 and under were arrested for felonies, according to police. For the first 11 months of 1991, the figure jumped to 1,100.

Aida says the counselors at her new city-funded school program "always ask me how I feel after I hit someone or cut them. I tell them I feel good!"

"When you're upset it just feels good to get a whole lot of anger out of your system," she adds. "I always carry a blade with me. I usually fight clean but if I see a girl is beating me, I pull it out and cut her."

In recent months, headlines about juvenile mayhem on New York streets have come with a twist: girl gangs, girls jumping each other and girls attacking boys.

Last September, a pack of girls surrounded Maribel Feliciano, 15, on a subway train and demanded her gold hoop earrings. When she refused, one of them stabbed her to death.

In December, a 14-year-old girl from the Borough Park section of Brooklyn fatally stabbed her 15-year-old boyfriend in the heart with a kitchen knife during a fight.

In January, a group of black girls kicked and punched an Hispanic social worker in the Bronx in what police called a bias attack. Mercedes Liz, who's 1-foot-11, told police she had stopped to phone home after leaving her job at Phoenix House when the gang attacked without provocation, yelling racial epithets.

In 1990, a gang of teen-age girls roamed the Upper West Side of Manhattan, scaring women in a series of pin-prick attacks.

Experts blame the disintegrating family and the escalation of drugs and violence in poor neighborhoods for the increasing toughness of girls. They say more girls have become involved in selling drugs and, like boys, they often want the kind of material possessions only drug money — or robbery — will get them.

"These girls are troubled, neglected, abused and reared in violent neighborhoods," says Jewelle Taylor Gibbs, a professor of clinical psychology at the University of California, Berkeley, where she studies urban teen-age girls. "The girls who are true antisocial delinquents usually come from a background of such abuse that they grow up feeling no one loves them. The only way they can get back at the world is by aggressive behavior."

Aida lives at her father's apartment on the Lower East Side during the week and her mother's place in the South Bronx on the weekends. She says she is not particularly close to either of her parents, both of whom are on welfare. Two of her brothers are in jail.

"My father's hard to talk to," she says. "My mother's kind of like in jail."

her own world."

Her parents know about her street fights and expulsion from school but have little to say about it, she says.

"I've always been like this," she says. "I was a bully when I was real little. They know I got an attitude and I ain't going to change."

Even on winter nights during the week, Aida stays out late on the street with her friends. During the February school vacation, she stayed in the South Bronx with a gang of girlfriends.

Her weekend turf is a rough corner in the South Bronx ringed by abandoned buildings, liquor stores, and competing drug dealers. Skeletal crack addicts pace nervously down the crumbling sidewalks alongside young mothers pushing strollers.

None of this bothers Aida or her friends. There is no phone at her mother's apartment nor at her friends' homes so she keeps in touch with her friends and family in the Lower East Side via beeper, also used for dealing drugs.

The fights they frequently get into have a jargon of their own. When someone has a "beef," Aida says, she and her friends will either go "head up," or yell "let's shoot five!" to each other. Both phrases mean punching someone out, shooting "five," refers to the five knuckles you make with a fist.

"We're pretty much troublemakers," she says. "We have a lot of fun in the Bronx. I might move back here full time some day. But I also like my friends on the Lower East Side."

Experts cite a number of reasons why urban girls are becoming more violence-prone than before. Federal funding, after all the ambitious programs of the 1960s, has evaporated in the inner city. The loss of much of the city's manufacturing base, and with it thousands of working-class jobs, has further hastened the breakdown of inner-city families.

"Funding was virtually dismantled in the 1970s and '80s and that left a tremendous void," says Deborah Baskin, a sociologist at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, who specializes in the study of girls charged with violent crime. "Neighborhoods have lost jobs and role models. Drugs took over. These girls see violence ever present in a way it wasn't in the past."

According to data Baskin gathered, the number of robberies committed by girls 15 and under jumped 161 percent between 1987 and 1990.

"They need lots of fancy clothes and jewelry and they're not going to get it sitting in a classroom," Baskin says. "They'll go out and rob someone, just like boys."

But many of the girls themselves do not regard their violent young lives as tragic. Even allowing for ghetto bravado, many of them act as though they sometimes relish it. They speak freely and in detail to a visiting reporter.

Standing outside the high school she attends in Manhattan's gritty Hell's Kitchen, Charmaine rolls up the sleeve of her black leather jacket and displays the scar from an old bullet wound as proudly if it were an engagement ring.

Charmaine, 18, giggles with her two friends as she talks about getting shot near her Brooklyn apartment in 1988. All three are wearing makeup, their hair is carefully coiffed and they are sporting expensive, trendy clothes.

"I was just standing around and these friends of mine were shooting at each other. The bullet hit me," Charmaine says. "It was no big deal. I went to the hospital and then I came out."

But most of the time, Charmaine and her friends make sure they're not the victims. They rarely leave their homes without a weapon — razor blades are the most popular, but they all own guns — and they can handle themselves in fights.

"If you make trouble for me, I'm going to go all out," says Charmaine's friend, Yani, 17, of Brooklyn, recalling a fight she, Charmaine and their friend, Tyisha, 17, had on the subway several years ago.

"There were only three of us and seven of them. This one girl, she was jealous of us. She says, 'you wanna fight?' and Charmaine hit her. The girl fell and Tyisha grabbed her. Then I hit her with a combination lock. I hit her on her face, back, anywhere that was available. She had two knives, Mace and a blade. All I had was a lock."

Charmaine and Yani, who has a 2-year-old daughter, were arrested after the incident. Tyisha, who stands just a little over 5 feet tall, was arrested last year for assaulting a police officer near the high school.

"These boys were playing dice on the corner. This cop starts messing with them and then he says to me, 'Get in school.' I got mad and pushed him and he fell back. He arrested me. But he didn't press charges. Him and me ended up good friends."

Charmaine, Yani and Tyisha all carry Mace in their bras at school and razor blades, but not guns. "I only carry a .22-automatic when I go out to a party or a movie," Yani says.

Despite the turbulence in their lives, Charmaine maintains a C-plus average in school and Yani and Tyisha both have B averages.

"We're nothin'," Charmaine says. "If you want hard-core girls who'll kill you, go to Brownsville."

Standing on a corner in Brownsville, deep within one of the bleakest sections of Brooklyn, Ivelisse, 13, and her friend, Marja, 15, agree with that assessment.

Ivelisse has a black eye which she says she got in a fight with a boy that ended up as a fight with a girl. She was just suspended from school for a week.

"These girls who are in (foster) homes, they aren't with their parents and they'll do anything," says Ivelisse, who has spent her whole life in Brownsville. "They don't have people who care about them. Some of the girls in my school will go up to you and say, 'I hear you was talking about my mother' and start beating up on you for nothing."

Marja says she always carries a razor "and my boyfriend supplies me with his .32 when I need it."

Rare find gives scientists three generations to study

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Six mummies, three generations buried side by side 4,200 years ago, are giving experts a rare look at the genetic makeup of an ancient Egyptian family.

The mummies are so important they were left in their previously unviolated tomb for three years after they were discovered in January 1989. Archaeologists wanted time to assemble a special team to examine the mummies. They appear to be grandparents, a son and daughter-in-law and two children, perhaps 10 or 12 years old.

Experts from Egypt and Britain looked at them for the first time in January and took tissue samples for DNA research. Their main objectives are to determine for sure who the family members were and how they died.

Only four other mummies are known to have survived intact from the same early period of Egyptian history.

"They're unbelievable," said Egypt's leading mummy expert, Nasry Iskander. "They're so old."

The mummies were found on the west bank of the Nile at Al-Hagarsa, 250 miles south of Cairo.

Iskander, keeper of the royal mummy collection in Cairo's Egyptian Museum, said each mummy lay in a heavy wooden coffin with hieroglyphic inscriptions etched on the outside. The adults' faces and shoulders were covered with painted plaster masks, common for high officials of the day. The children curiously were in coffins much too large for their bodies.

Ancient Egyptians believed in the afterlife and that they would need their bodies to be able to enjoy it. Therefore, they started the mummification process.

Experts date the six mummies to the Old Kingdom's eighth dynasty, a time of chaos and civil war that ended in 2134 B.C. Egyptians were already trying to preserve their dead, but it would take at least another 500 years for the mummification process to reach its peak.

Early mummifiers used simple embalming methods. They replaced flesh with mud, covered the mud with plaster, then shaped the plaster around facial features like a mask. They painted on details such as wigs, beards, moustaches, eyeliner, jewelry, breasts and the familiar wide-eyed stares.

The six mummies now join an elite fraternity of only three full mummies surviving from the Old Kingdom.

Rosalind David and her team from England's Manchester Mummy Project, a wing of the Manchester Museum, will use the samples of DNA, the substance that transmits hereditary patterns, to learn more about the family members and how they died.

Tests on the samples will confirm sex, family relationships and whether the people were diseased. David said she should know the sex of the mummies by early April, and other results by summer's end.

She said DNA research normally is difficult on mummies, because most have been mishandled somewhere along the way. But the Al-Hagarsa mummies haven't been, she said, so the results should be excellent.

Doctors and scientists gather to examine one of the six mummies discovered in January. The scientist hope to get a better understanding of ancient Egyptian life by examining an entire family of mummies.

Medicaid mother of quadruplets causes bitterness

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Mom is home and her quadruplets are still in the hospital. But Julie Salazar has done more than give birth to four tiny sons struggling to survive.

She's made people bitter because she's a 22-year-old unmarried mother who took fertility drugs to get pregnant and because her Medicaid-covered bill could reach $1 million-plus in a state that's trimming its welfare rolls.

"I just don't see it," said Clemmie Gonzales, a mother of five who called the state Human Services Department to complain. "If the money's there for the quads, it should be there for the mentally ill and the homeless."

Ms. Salazar, 22, had private insurance when she sought treatment for infertility, said her physician, Dr. Lance Mikkelsen. After she got pregnant, he recommended she quit her convenience store job and get plenty of rest to prevent premature labor, the most common complication of multiple gestations.

"Then she applied for Medicaid, and the state — which has a high interest in prenatal care — appropriately accepted her," he said.

That means the federal-state medical program for the needy will pick up most of the hospital tab for the quadruplets, who were born 10 weeks premature on March 16, weighing 2 pounds each. They could be hospitalized two months.

Ms. Salazar was released from Presbyterian Hospital in Albuquerque recently. One boy was breathing on his own and the others were helped by ventilators.

Mikkelsen said Ms. Salazar is being used by the news media to draw attention to the problem of the high cost of medical care.

"I think there is a real problem with that. But ... we should address the problem and not use her. She should be able to enjoy her babies," Mikkelsen said.

Publicity about the cost of the quadruplets' care prompted up to 20 calls a day to the hospital last week, most of them negative. They had tapered off last week.

"They're asking questions like: 'What is a 22-year-old doing taking fertility drugs?' 'Will my hospital bills go up because of this?'" hospital spokeswoman Anne Kircher said.

Albuquerque interior designer Roberta Miller was among those who called the Human Services Department to complain.

"I think it's so irresponsible to go ahead and plan to have a family when you're of limited means and have no husband," she said. "Somebody else has to pick up the tab, and obviously it doesn't bother them in the least."

Ms. Salazar and the babies' father, Rafael Salazar, 42, a drywall contractor, live together near Espanola, 25 miles north of Santa Fe. Although they have the same name, they are not married.

Another Albuquerque resident, Wayne Hughes, said Ms. Salazar put "the cart before the horse" by taking fertility drugs before she was married.

"Now, when we don't have money to take care of socially responsible people, and we're taking needy people off the rolls, we have to spring for this kind of money for someone who is not married," Hughes said.

The Human Services Department, hit by increasing caseloads and rising health care costs, is projected to spend more on Medicaid this year than the $469 million in federal and state money it budgeted.

The department has proposed $5.8 million in cuts in an effort to break even, including eliminating a program for the disabled. The cuts would not affect pregnant women or children.

Carmen Salazar answered the phone at her sister Julie's house on Monday and said Ms. Salazar was resting and unable to come to the phone.

Ms. Salazar's mother, Cristerna Salazar, said she's upset by criticism of the babies' cost. "I've been working a long time, and I've paid taxes — and we have never used the state for anything," said Mrs. Salazar, a nurse's aide.

"My family all works. That's why I was so angry about all this."

Friends and neighbors in Espanola have been supportive, Carmen Salazar said. "Everybody says they're willing to pay their $1 ... for these babies to survive," she added, referring to the possible $1.2 million cost of the quadruplets' care divided by New Mexico's population of about 1.5 million.

Julie and Rafael of Espanola N.M. spend time visiting their son Ezekiel recently at an Albuquerque, N.M. hospital's newborn intensive care unit. The child is one of a set of quadruplets born March 16. Doctors say the children will remain in the hospital for two to three months at the expense of Medicaid.

End of marriage is painful by death or divorce

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, you had a letter in your column written by "Myra" — a woman whose husband had died of cancer three years ago, at the age of 39. I've been wanting to write to you about this for a long time, but I never had the guts.

My husband died of cancer three years ago — he was 35. I also encountered people who compared death with divorce. I had one person tell me that I was "lucky" because my love had just died — but her love was "murdered" when her husband found somebody else. I was devastated! I didn't feel "lucky."

I've had to deal with people who think I am a rich widow because I've started to redecorate the house so there wouldn't be so many memories to haunt me. They didn't see it as a way of coping with my loss — they saw "the rich widow" out having a wonderful time with the insurance money.

I could write a book. Maybe one day I will, but I think I've said enough. Thank you, Abby, for letting me have my say. — I DON'T FEEL LUCKY

DEAR DON'T FEEL LUCKY: Myra's letter inspired a bale of mail from widows and divorcees. None felt "lucky." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the woman who lost her 39-year-old husband to cancer, and didn't know what to make of the remark, "It has to be much easier losing your husband through death than losing a mate by divorce."

Not only is divorce the death of a dream that was too short-lived, or didn't work out, it is also the death of an intimate relationship, the death of a family and the death of financial support.

Few outsiders allow a divorcee time to grieve. Nobody attends the "funeral," nobody takes up a collection to see her through the rough spots, and there is no available life insurance.

When one is a widow (or widower), there are no fights over child custody, living quarters or possessions acquired during the life of the marriage — and friends and relatives on both sides are still glad to see you. They invite you to weddings, graduations, baptisms, etc. Your memories of a wonderful marriage are yours forever, to be treasured for a lifetime. — FAMILY COUNSELOR IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

Timely home repairs in late fall will increase your property's resale value. Put your loved ones' needs first in November. A holiday family gathering is well worth the trouble and expense. CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: director Francis Ford Coppola, actor James Garner, TV host David Frost, singer Janis Ian.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unfamiliar and distant locales hold the promise of adventure. Postpone major business and career moves until more information is available. A favorable verdict is announced.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be careful not to plunge into anything. A hasty announcement could gum up the works. A secret love affair could alter your life forever. Confide in your friends before going public.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Long-range financial planning is essential now. Someone at a distance could become a benefactor. Keep a low profile. A run-in with someone in authority could jeopardize career progress.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Allies both near and far are at your disposal today. Team up for a fruitful collaboration. You are poised to win support from those holding the money cards.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Away from the limelight, your spirits might wilt. Be adventurous and explore new territory; you could wind up center stage after all! Keep up with your studies if still in school.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have a tendency to splurge in the name of fun. Ask yourself, "Is it worth the cost?" Great things happen when you get reacquainted with a former co-worker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use the phone, mail or fax machine to get your ideas on the table. A timely discussion is essential. Be bold. Romance intensifies when you reveal what is in your heart.
