Monday break leaves residents without water

Areas of the city near Dixon and areas south of the city were without water early today because of a break in a 12-inch water main.

The bell flange on the pipe separated in early this morning, said Public Works Director Tom Decell. City crews shut supply off to the area and had exposed the pipe by 7 a.m.

Barring unforeseen delays, the cutting away and replacement of the damaged section should be completed sometime this afternoon, Decell said.

Death row center under fed scrutiny

HOUSTON (AP) — The group that coordinates legal counsel for Texas' death row inmates has serious credibility problems with prosecutors, some attorneys have charged.

Harris County District Attorney John Holmes Jr. and Texas Attorney General Dan Morales have written a federal panel to support the concept behind the Texas Resource Center, but complain about the current system.

They allege that center attorneys have misrepresented trial records in appellate papers, argued frivolous claims in lengthy 11th-hour appeals and manipulated court procedure for the sake of keeping their clients alive.

"The obvious consequence of this loss of credibility is that the Resource Center is no longer in a position to effectively represent its clients, if those individuals and institutions with whom it has to deal no longer trust their lawyers," Holmes wrote in a March 23 letter.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans is studying the complaints, the Houston Chronicle reported in Sunday editions.

The criticisms are dismissed by Edna Harrington, executive director of the federally funded center.

"Lawyers are victimized by the system perhaps as much as our clients," Ms. Harrington said. "Piecemeal filings are submitted, and last-minute litigation occurs. That is not in the interest of anybody — not lawyers, clients or courts."

The Texas Resource Center has 13 lawyers who focus on the lack of centralized oversight in the state's capital punishment system: Trial courts have no guidelines for when to set execution dates; deadlines for filing court papers are driven by execution dates instead of court schedules; execution dates are set before inmates have appellate attorneys.

Wallace still gets benefits

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Deputy Sheriff Jimmy Wallace, unsuccessful sheriff candidate on administrative leave without pay, received county health benefits another month.

Wallace, who lost the March 10 primary election to Sheriff A.N. Standard by 1,825 to 1,033, can either be put back on regular duties, fired or he can resign. He was placed on administrative leave the day he filed for office in January.

For the second time since the primary, the county paid a $506 monthly cost for Wallace and his family to remain on health and dental benefits, according to the county treasurer's office.

"As far as I know there's been nothing changed (on Wallace's status)," said County Treasurer Bonnie Franklin, who said she conferred with County Judge Ben Lockhart before completing payroll.

Lockhart said any public comments should come from Standard. "He's the one that's supposed to know about that."

Standard, who said Friday that Wallace's job status has not changed, said he was unaware that Wallace was again kept on county health benefits. "I know nothing about that."

Wallace has reportedly met with Standard several times in March and several more times in recent weeks to discuss job status. Two registered letters were sent to Wallace from the sheriff's office to invite negotiations.

Standard said in early April that a decision on Wallace's status may be made in the "near future." On Friday, Standard said, "There's nothing new."

Wallace, a deputy for eight years, maintained shortly after his defeat that he is in effect fired from his $25,416 a year job. Wallace is married and has three children.

Standard, a 28-year incumbent, has maintained that the door is open for negotiation. Standard, who faces a Republican opponent in the Nov. 3 general election, has in the past required new employees to promise allegiance to him and the office.

In November, Standard faces Neel G. Barnaby Jr. Barnaby, facility administrator for the Big Spring Correction Center, says that if elected he would implement changes and that he is a more effective community leader than Standard.

Golf policy aims at 'fence jumpers'

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

A new policy at the Big Spring Municipal Golf Course is designed to reduce the numbers of "fence jumping" golfers.

The Big Spring Parks and Recreation Board voted to initiate the new policy, which will require golfers on the course to obtain and carry a dated player's receipt.

"From time to time, players will be asked by the course marshal for their dated player receipt. Failure to produce the receipt could result in the player being requested to return to the pro shop and obtain the necessary receipt," according to a memorandum from the board to the Big Spring City Council.

If this is not successful, however, future measures could include having police write citations to those found using the city property without a receipt, said Parks and Recreation Board member Max Coffee.

Mayor-elect Tim Blackshear begins the swearing-in process today and he will take the helm of the Big Spring City Council at Tuesday's meeting.

"The first order of business is to start advertising for a new city manager," Blackshear said of the surprise notice of resignation by City Manager Hal Boyd.

New Precinct 2 council member Charles Beil also will be taking the oath at the meeting, according to the agenda. "I think it's important to sit down with the council so we can get to know each other again. Since we have a new member, we need to air out any differences and start with a clean slate," Blackshear said.

Gorbachev visits Reagan ranch

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev, wearing a white cowboy hat given him by his host, rode shotgun around Ronald Reagan's ranch in a Jeep as the former superpower leaders renewed their friendship.

"I'm very happy they're here. We've been waiting a long time for this," Reagan said Sunday as he and his wife, Nancy, posed for photographs with Gorbachev and wife Raisa.

Gorbachev, on a two-week U.S. tour, was to visit Reagan's presidential library in Simi Valley today to receive the first Ronald Reagan Freedom Award.

On Sunday, Reagan, 81, took the former Soviet leader on a spin around the 688-acre Rancho del Cielo in a Jeep bearing the license plate GIPPER.

Both men wore white cowboy hats as Reagan wheeled around, bouncing over a rock, shifting with one hand and waving with the other.

Later, the foursome went 30 miles south to Santa Barbara for a private dinner. Their host was Arco Chairman Lodwick Cook.

Gorbachev, 61, was smiling and energetic four months after he resigned as president of what was left of the Soviet Union.

The Reagans gave Stetson hats to the Gorbachevs, who in turn presented an 1882 book of Russian proverbs.

"Good, I've been using them quite a bit," Reagan said. "He needs some new ones," Mrs. Reagan added. All four took a one-hour walking tour of the mountain ranch, which overlooks the Pacific Ocean.

At one point Mrs. Gorbachev, wearing black high heels, found a boulder and sat beneath an oak tree for a rest. Mrs. Reagan, wearing athletic shoes, joined her. They talked about real estate prices.

Gorbachev and Reagan aides played follow-the-leaders and were stunned at how chatty the couples were.

Tilton says plaintiffs should blame God, not him

DALLAS (AP) — Televangelist Robert Tilton says the people that are suing him should direct their anger toward God — not him.

Eight lawsuits have been filed against Tilton since February and many of the plaintiffs have sued because his promises of help through miracle healing failed.

"If you want to be mad at somebody, get mad at God; don't sue me," the preacher said Sunday during the morning service. "We base our healing and our prosperity on faith, and faith is something you cannot see. And you cannot see something you cannot see.

"If anybody ought to sue anybody, you folks ought to sue somebody trying to steal your church," he said.

Tilton is being criminally investigated by the Texas Attorney General's office. Also, the U.S. postal inspector, the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service have been conducting inquiries into Tilton and his ministry. Tilton denies any wrongdoing.

"You know we got some folks right now that are real aggravated because they didn't get their prayers answered that they sent in to me," Tilton said Sunday.

"Basically ... they are being taken advantage of by glory-seeking attorneys, and when the dust settles, everyone will know it."

Tilton encouraged his supporters to give extra money to help support the operations of his Farmers Branch-based Word of Faith World Outreach Center Church.

"If money is the root of all evil, then you need to get all evil, then you need to get all of it out of your pockets right now," he said Sunday. "Not a bad idea."

He said it costs about $250,000 each month to keep the church and its projects afloat.

Tilton's ministry recently purchased all of the broadcast time on KLDT-TV (Channel 55) in Lewisville. His ministry plans to present religious programming on the station 24 hours a day.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warm temperatures and little precipitation have left water supply conditions for many Western states below average, the Agriculture Department says.

However, reservoir storage ranges from near average to well above average for most states, USDA's Soil Conservation Service said in a recent news release.

"Warm temperatures and a lack of precipitation throughout much of the west in March caused snowpack to melt sooner than usual for the month," said William Richards, chief of the service.

"It appears that spring and summer streamflows will be below- to well-below average for most of the West, resulting in limited water supplies for some producers," he said.

which will not become permanent until public comment is evaluated. Such comment may be submitted until May 29.

"This interim rule will not have a significant impact on the economy, increase costs to U.S. consumers or adversely affect U.S. competition," said H. Russell Cross, FSIS administrator.

"FSIS will continue to review the meat inspection systems of all three countries to ensure equivalency to U.S. standards," he said.

By law, all countries eligible to export meat to the United States must have inspection standards at least equal to U.S. standards.

Richards said spring and summer streamflows are forecast to be near- to well-above average in Alaska, parts of the Columbia River Basin in British Columbia and areas in southern Utah, southern Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico.

Western states depend on snowmelt for about 75 percent of their water supply.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food Safety and Inspection Service is amending its regulations to allow meat products to be imported from the newly independent countries of Croatia and Slovenia.

Both countries were in the Yugoslavia federation, which already was approved to export meat products to the United States.

The regulations are being amended through an interim rule,

WASHINGTON (AP) — Respiratory and digestive problems were the leading killers in the nation's cattle and calf herds last year, the Agriculture Department reports.

A total of 4.37 million head of cattle and calves were lost to all causes last year, in every state but Alaska, at a cost to ranchers and farmers of $2.11 billion.

USDA said respiratory problems lead the list of causes, accounting for 31.1 percent of the total deaths. Digestive problems accounted for an additional 20.6 percent.

Predators were responsible for 2.4 percent of all losses, or 106,000 head.

Coyotes were the largest cause of cattle and calf predator losses, at 61.9 percent of the total. Dogs were the second leading cause of predator losses, accounting for 18.4 percent. Other predators include mountain lions, bobcats, bears and wolves.

Dinosaur tracks on display

AUSTIN (AP) — Kathy Scherer has seen firsthand the footprints that dinosaurs left in Texas more than 100 million years ago. And like thousands of others, she too, is amazed.

"I think it's pretty fascinating," Ms. Scherer said as she panned the rare geological find discovered in January just below the Zilker Botanical Gardens. "Just seeing evidence that dinosaurs existed, and seeing where they actually stepped. You can actually see their strides."

The more than 100 footprints were unveiled to the public recently during an annual floral show at Zilker Park's garden center.

Thousands of visitors of all ages have gone to marvel at the tracks of several different dinosaurs.

Most of the tracks were made by theropods, which were similar to ostriches but had stubby front legs instead of wings and long tails. They lived largely off the eggs of other dinosaurs. There also are a few, less distinct tracks of the huge brachiosaurus.

The discovery of the tracks in several layers of limestone was purely accidental. Just as a huge storm probably preserved the tracks before they could disappear, the winter storms in Central Texas flooded away the brush and trash that had kept them covered.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Former "Charlie's Angels" star Kate Jackson says she's cancer-free and making a comeback.

"Twenty-some years after coming to Hollywood, I feel happy. Really happy. I feel like I'm 20 years old again," the 43-year-old actress said in the latest issue of People magazine.

In 1987, while starring in the TV series "Scarecrow and Mrs. King," Jackson was diagnosed with cancer in her left breast and underwent a lumpectomy. Two years later, a mammogram detected cancer in her left breast, and she underwent a partial mastectomy and reconstructive surgery.

"I was forced to face, squared up, my own mortality," she said. "I had to decide whether I wanted to live or die. And if you choose life, as I did, it's never the same."

She said the CBS movie "Black Death" this spring served as a kind of comeback.

"The phone rang. I got notes," she said. "It got me really excited about my career."

NEW YORK (AP) — They keep their composure during the most intense of interviews, but acting is another matter for TV anchorwomen such as Katie Couric, Joan Lunden and Paula Zahn.

They agreed to play themselves on the CBS series "Murphy Brown," at a baby shower for Candice Bergen's character, a TV journalist herself. The episode airs May 11.

"We were fine all day, and then all of a sudden, five minutes before we were supposed to go on, everybody was pacing in all different directions," said Faith Daniels of NBC's "Today" and "A Closer Look."

HOUSTON (AP) — Turkey's President Turgut Ozal is expected to remain in the hospital another week following surgery to remove his cancerous prostate gland.

Ozal, 64, underwent surgery Saturday at The Methodist Hospital. He was in good condition Sunday.

"He was up walking around the halls," hospital spokesman Russell Johnson said Sunday.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Bob Hope is in town taping a TV special at AmeriFlora '92, and producers aren't worried about a weather forecast that includes a chance of showers.

"It never rains on Bob Hope," said Tim Kiley, who has directed Hope specials for eight years. "I had some doubts the night before AmeriFlora opened, but when Bob showed up, the rain went away."

Experts: Kids learn racism in the home

WACO (AP) — Jeri Campos learned firsthand the absurdity of racism while growing up in a multiracial military housing project in the 1950s.

"My parents didn't preach about it," she said. "They taught me by example. As a result I learned how ridiculous it is to get hung up on the pigmentation of people's skin or how much money they make."

Campos, now a fifth-grade teacher at Lorena Elementary School, said it was through her parents' actions that she became prejudice-free. She has chosen to raise her own children in a prejudice-free environment.

years, Sandy Davis, director of Tennyson Playcare, said racism is definitely not innate.

"I work with babies as early as newborns, and they are not born with biases," she said. "Babies of different races play together, and they don't really know any difference. It is something their parents teach them."

Keith Blevens, a clinical psychologist, said children will model and adapt to what they see in their homes.

"The key to helping children is helping their parents," he said. "Parents have to learn how subtle racism is and how they contribute to their children's beliefs."

Local specialists agree it is through their parents' influence that children become prejudiced. However, parents can dispel cultural biases by setting good examples and teaching their children about different cultures.

Campos said she still has memories of her parents doing both.

"As a child, I remember being awakened in the middle of the night by a black woman who lived next door," she said. "She knocked on the wall and told my mother she was in labor and that she needed help."

Blevens said prejudice or negative thoughts about people who are different is mentally unhealthy and morally objectionable.

"People are racist because they don't understand," he said. "They think they know something about people and they form a conclusion. As a result, it limits their world and makes it more scary, hateful and negative."

"My mother helped her without thinking twice. Later, the lady sent a letter to us thanking us. It was as if she thought we wouldn't help her because of her race."

"The letter really saddened my mother because the lady wasn't accustomed to being treated fairly by white people."

Campos said she teaches her children a non-racist attitude by being a good role model.

"I don't participate in racial slurs or jokes," she said. "And if I hear someone else saying one, I don't tolerate it."

"Parents have to learn how subtle racism is and how they contribute to their children's beliefs."

"People are racist because they don't understand," he said. "They think they know something about people and they form a conclusion. As a result, it limits their world and makes it more scary, hateful and negative."

"The philosophy I have passed to them is that we are all God's children, and he is color blind, physically handicapped blind, etc. He loves all of his children."

At one point in every child's life, the realization that everybody is not the same race, religion or color will surface. It is at this point that parents either cultivate or dispel racial biases.

Robert Gamboa, director of development at the Texas State Technical College, said television and newspapers also play a big role in cultivating cultural biases.

He said he counteracts these biases by teaching his children and grandchildren not to believe everything they see in the media.

"When it concerns teen pregnancy and drugs, there is always a diet of minority individuals," he said. "Children should be taught that this is misleading."

"The actual figures show that Anglos have a higher rate of drug addiction and teen pregnancy than blacks and Hispanics combined."

Also to help dispel these myths, Gamboa said, it is important that parents help their children understand other cultures.

"It is important to understand all people," he said. "If you learn about other cultures, you honor that person or family by making an effort to understand them."

The comic began taping the special, "Bob Hope's America: Red, White and Beautiful — The Swimsuit Edition," on Sunday at AmeriFlora '92, an international flower show. The special airs May 16.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Tony Bennett fondly recalls appearing on Johnny Carson's first "Tonight Show" episode.

"I remember that at the end of the show he got up from the desk and said, 'Well, that's the first one. I hope this works,'" Bennett said in the latest issue of TV Guide.

The other guests were Groucho Marx, Mel Brooks, Joan Crawford and Rudy Vallee, he said.

Carson is retiring May 22 after 30 years with the show.

"When it concerns teen pregnancy and drugs, there is always a diet of minority individuals," he said. "Children should be taught that this is misleading."

"It is important to understand all people," he said. "If you learn about other cultures, you honor that person or family by making an effort to understand them."

Frequent guest Teri Garr said she once had a terrible review on a day she was scheduled for Carson's show.

"I was devastated," she said. "I called the show and canceled. I couldn't even answer the phone. Eventually, a messenger came to say, 'Answer your phone, Johnny is trying to call you.'"

"So I did. He gave me a big pep talk — 'What does one crummy review matter? Come on the show and we'll make fun of the review on the air.' It was a real fatherly talk. I'd never thought of him that way."

Top officials summoned to White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush summoned top domestic Cabinet officers to the White House today to tackle long-range problems pushed to the forefront by last week's deadly riots in Los Angeles.

The president planned a brief session with Attorney General William Barr and senior military officers.

Afterwards, Bush was huddling with Barr, Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp and Labor Secretary Lynn Martin to discuss approaches to rebuilding Los Angeles and other ailing cities.

Sunday's relative calm in Los Angeles was shattered when National Guardsmen shot and killed a motorist who tried to run them down, bringing the death toll to 47. It was the first shooting by troops sent to Los Angeles to quell unrest that erupted Wednesday when a jury acquitted four white police officers in the beating of black motorist Rodney King.

Otherwise, only sporadic violence had been reported Sunday, and Bush had said he was "pleased that things have calmed way down."

"I think our actions helped," the president said Sunday as he returned to the White House from Camp David, Md. He plans to visit Los Angeles on Thursday.

Bush federalized the National Guard and ordered 4,500 Army soldiers and Marines to back them up Friday night. He declared Los Angeles a major disaster area Saturday night, opening the way for a variety of federal financial assistance.

Volunteers Karin Liljegren, right, and Marilyn Johnson, students from UCLA, are assisted by a helper as they assemble donated relief packages for waiting south central Los Angeles residents Saturday. Unity House of the Community Presbyterian Church organized the distribution for those affected by several days of violence.

"He is fully engaged and fully committed to addressing not only the immediate problems of law and order, but also the other problems in our cities," Sullivan said Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation."

But his political rivals have begun to criticize Bush's response to the violence.

Ross Perot, a prospective independent presidential candidate, said if he had been president he would have flown to Los Angeles and ordered federal charges filed against the policemen as soon as the verdict was returned.

"Immediately, immediately — because that sends people the signal that justice still lives," Perot said on NBC's "Meet the Press." Perot also suggested that Bush's campaign tactics have strained race relations.

Democratic contender Bill Clinton arrived in Los Angeles Sunday night after saying he hoped to offer the Bush administration ideas on how to address the causes of the destruction.

"There's some chance if we come out with an agenda the current administration will adopt it," Clinton said.

Torie Clarke, Bush's campaign spokeswoman, said: "These guys are playing politics with a very serious situation. It doesn't help."

Bush's two-day trip to California on Thursday has been planned for weeks, but the White House was scrambling to revise his schedule in the aftermath of the riots.

At a Sunday chapel service at Camp David, Bush heard a Navy chaplain, Lt. John Frusti, pray for "healing of hatred" and "a future wherein empty rage does indeed give way to hope."

The White House released the chaplain's prayer in a statement, and added a call from Bush for all Americans to pray for reconciliation and healing.

Americans hired to find missing money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia has hired an American company to track vast sums of cash and commodities spirited out of the country and into secret bank accounts and investments in the United States and elsewhere.

Estimates of the sums involved run as high as $100 billion.

"We've already found apartment buildings, hotels, ships, art collections, physical assets of various kinds," said Jules Kroll, head of the New York company hired by Boris Yeltsin's government.

Yegor Gaidar, Russian deputy prime minister, said in Moscow in March that the government was determined to track down "privatization by officials for their personal benefit." He said the campaign would seek out "capital concealed abroad by individuals and Soviet organizations."

Igor Oleynik, a Russian economist living in the United States, wrote in December that "the Communist Party and KGB set up special business departments that over 20 years enabled them to accumulate and invest abroad at least $100 billion and probably much more."

Kroll declined in a recent interview to put a figure on how much was involved.

"There's all sorts of wild speculation," he said.

He said his investigation has uncovered bank accounts around the world set up for Russian officials taking bribes to give favorable deals to private companies.

"You have them (bank accounts) in the United States, in England, Greece, Cyprus, Germany, Switzerland, Holland, Luxembourg, Hong Kong," he said. "They're everywhere. This is not just a few corrupt officials. You're talking about hundreds of people who are engaged in conflict of interest and who are accepting bribes."

Kroll said his company was examining transactions by the state enterprises that controlled all of Soviet industry, as well as joint ventures that often are set up to move commodities and cash out of the country.

Kroll Associates gained international recognition for its role in tracing the assets of former President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines, President Jean-Claude Duvalier of Haiti and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Kroll said he is receiving full cooperation from the Russian government as well as from Western governments "quite anxious to help the Russians make it." The West has sunk $15.6 billion into aid to Russia in the past two years.

The company also gets information from individuals who know of illegal transactions.

"They come forward for a variety of reasons," Kroll said. "Some of them come forward just out of desire for doing the right thing."

Students counseled after fatal shootings

OLIVEHURST, Calif. (AP) — Hundreds of students received counseling at a rural high school where a dropout angry over a failing grade killed his former teacher and three students, wounded nine others and held scores hostage.

Not long after Eric Houston surrendered to police outside Lindhurst High School after the 8½-hour siege Friday, counselors were ready to help youngsters, teachers and families grieve.

Houston, 20, told his captors the shootings were revenge for a failing grade three years ago from history teacher Robert Brens, according to Cory Dawson, 16, one of 80 students taken hostage. Houston blamed his failure to graduate on Brens, who died in the shooting spree.

Houston, who dropped out in 1989, was to be arraigned Tuesday on four counts of murder.

"I had to go see the counselors because I couldn't deal with it," said Lisa Robinson, a 17-year-old junior, whose friend Judy Marion Davis was killed in the incident. She was among hundreds of students and others who took advantage of psychological help.

"It's going to take some time to get over this," she said. Investigators believe the wounding and all but Brens' slaying were random, said Yuba County Sheriff Gary Tindel, who said he would urge the death penalty for Houston.

A 20-year-old man who said he was Houston's best friend and asked to be identified only as "David," told the Sacramento Bee that Houston said at least three times in recent months that he wanted to shoot people at Lindhurst High.

"He used to say he would just walk in the front door, pop off some people, leave out the back door, cross the baseball field in back, climb the fence and take off." David said he had dismissed Houston's talk as fantasy. But as soon as he learned of the hostage siege, David "knew it was him," he told the paper.

At the high school in Olivehurst, a town of 10,000 people 40 miles north of Sacramento, the flag flew at half-staff. School was canceled until later in the week.

Teppi Long, 12, also lost a friend, 16-year-old Beamon Anton Hill.

"I kept telling myself it wasn't true," Teppi said. "That he was going to call me, and it was all going to be all right. Every time my brother tried to make me laugh today, I felt sad because Beamon wasn't here to laugh, too."

People also joined in mourning 50 miles southwest of Sacramento in Clayton, Brens' hometown.

Lindhurst High was the first teaching job for the 28-year-old Brens, who loved both history and teen-agers, said a former neighbor, Walt Hoffman.

"When he was with teen-agers he always treated them like equals," Hoffman said. "He never talked down them. All my kids loved him."

Philippine campaigning emphasizes entertainment

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The crowd appeared listless as a Senate candidate enumerated his qualifications for the May 11 election. But the audience came alive when he said: "And now, I'll sing you a song."

Entertainment plays a large role in the Philippine campaign as thousands of candidates stump for votes in more than 17,000 contests ranging from successor to President Corazon Aquino down to village council seats.

Candidates are barred by law from buying ads for radio, television and newspapers, so public rallies — heavy on glitz and glitter — afford the best way of reaching voters in a country with poor communications and an underdeveloped national media.

Most of the seven presidential candidates bring along popular Filipino entertainers to draw crowds, especially in sleepy provincial towns short on local attractions.

As the big names from politics and show business descend on small communities, the atmosphere is similar to the hoopla and hyperbole of the traveling circus of bygone years.

"It's one-upmanship," said Tony Gatmaitan, a political strategist for presidential aspirant Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco. "Every candidate knows I'll have to have better stars or I'll lose face.' Filipinos love elections for their fiesta quality."

Even the candidates get into the act. Imelda Marcos, widow of the late President Ferdinand Marcos and a presidential contender, sings to her audiences and even sheds a few well-timed tears when supporters crowd around her.

At a rally Sunday in the Manila suburb of Las Pinas, Guillermo Carague, running for the Senate on presidential candidate Fidel Ramos' ticket, warmed up the audience with a snappy rendition of the U.S. Marine Corps hymn on his harmonica.

"Remember me at election," said Carague, the former budget secretary. "I'm the one who played the harmonica."

His fellow Senate candidate, former Solicitor General Francisco Chavez, thundered to the crowd about the pursuit of justice. But the applause came when he belted out "When You Tell Me That You Love Me," popularized by Diana Ross.

There is little reluctance to harp on a candidate's physical attractiveness.

"He is very handsome, isn't he?" comedian Bert Marcelo said while introducing Senate candidate Mario Leviste during a recent rally for Cojuangco on Mindoro island.

Dozens of young women, barely old enough to vote, giggled as Actress Kris Aquino, youngest daughter of Philippine President Corazon Aquino, reaches out to the crowd during a campaign rally for presidential candidate Fidel Ramos in Cabanatuan City Friday. Entertainment plays a large role in the campaign because candidates are barred by law from buying ads for radio, television and newspapers, so public rallies, heavy on glitz and glitter, are used to reach voters.

Leviste took the microphone.

This style may do little to enlighten voters on such issues as the $29 billion foreign debt, stagnant economy and unemployment.

But political strategists say voters will not attend rallies limited to staid speeches, especially those delivered in English, which few Filipinos understand well.

Officials try to salvage peace talks

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Small-arms fire echoed throughout Sarajevo today as officials tried to salvage peace talks endangered by the bloody ambush of a military convoy that had been promised safe passage.

Fighting also was reported in several other Bosnian towns and 10 people — eight children and two women — were reported killed in a Yugoslav air force attack Sunday on the Croatian-Bosnian border.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, freed Sunday night by the federal army after being held 24 hours, was to have met today for peace talks with Gen. Milutin Kukanjac, the local federal army commander.

But prospects for the talks being held were weakened by the Sunday ambush of a military convoy by Bosnian territorial forces in which two colonels and several soldiers were reported killed.

The convoy had been promised safe passage out of Sarajevo in exchange for Izetbegovic's release. The president was taken by the army on Saturday evening, after Bosnian forces attacked a military club in Sarajevo.

That attack prompted a ferocious overnight shelling of the city.

The two-month-old fighting pits Muslims and ethnic Croats who support Bosnia's secession from Yugoslavia against ethnic Serbs and the Serb-dominated federal military.

Town ready for a change

It seems to us that members of the local community are ready for a change.

Tired of doing business as always for no other reason than "We've always done it that way," we believe Big Spring and Howard County voters sent a message to our elected officials in Saturday's elections.

Be responsible and be responsive or we will find someone to take your place.

We the people, in essence, will fire you.

We believe the election of Tim Blackshear as mayor and Adrian Randle to the Howard College Board of Trustees speaks loud and clear in regards to the will of the people.

No more business as usual. No more turning a deaf ear. No more bully-boy tactics.

Manage professionally or move on.

We believe Blackshear brings a breath of fresh air to the helm of the city and we believe he will work — just as he promised during the campaign — to pull our community together.

We believe the people are ready for the healing process to get under way.

We already know that Randle has done much more than many board members, simply by visiting the campus and students of SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

And with the announcement that city manager Hal Boyd will leave his post this summer, we believe city officials have the luxury of time to be able to go outside this community to find a capable, qualified manager to manage the day-to-day affairs of the city.

We say go outside the community because we believe it is imperative to the progress of this community that the next city manager not have ties to this community other than wanting to be here and do as good a job as possible.

We believe an outsider can best look at the day-to-day operations and evaluate them fairly... making policy changes as needed and personnel changes as warranted.

We the people are ready for change and it's time to make certain those people — we the people — who must deal with city personnel are met with concern, consideration and a helpful attitude... and not made to feel like they are bothering someone.

We believe it's time to keep city money at home and to utilize the services of local businesses and professional firms.

Don't give us lip service any more... give us service. Period. And use locals to help provide that service.

It's time for the city to work with Moore Development, the Industrial Foundation and the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce to make certain we are working together to help promote growth.

It's time to use some of the funds earmarked solely for airport development to bring the former Webb Air Force Base buildings to a state of readiness that allows prospective tenants to be shown places they can locate and build a business and hire local people to work.

Instead, the buildings at the base are in such a state of disrepair that persons are uncomfortable about taking prospective tenants to see available buildings.

It is time for a change. It is time to move ahead. We the people spoke loudly on Saturday... we told you what we wanted... now, let's work to bring new blood into this community... let's work to move forward.

Salute to those who protest abortions

To the editor:

I am appalled at the issue of abortion. It is terrifying to me. At first I thought it was simply what was chanted — women who wanted control of their own bodies. I literally sneered at that because they obviously had no control over their own bodies, or they wouldn't be pregnant with unwanted babies in the first place. I surmised they wanted the fun and none of the responsibilities of motherhood, and they also wanted the openness of legality to hide behind.

I watched news reports of these large groups of people barring abortion clinics, but it all seemed so remote from life in a small quiet town. But then I considered all these people as individuals and realized they had such deep devotion to their cause that they had literally put their lives on hold — their families, their jobs, everything. I admired them greatly, but was still mystified how they could gamble so much on the abortion issue. Now I know! Sometimes living in a small, quiet town prevents the knowledge of the real issues. These dedicated people knew all the time. Thank God for them! They pressed and pushed until the "women's rights" armour cracked to reveal the real issue. It's not approval vs. disapproval of abortion. That's just the cover-up. The real issue is belief vs. disbelief in God. That's why I'm shocked, stunned, and terrified. The realization that our good old U.S.A. has sunk to such depths that citizens can stand in gangs and chant "God is a Dyke" (and other things) is sickening and frightening.

I salute the people who have had the courage to stand their ground and bring this to light. I am proud to be a Christian and proud to be an American. May God help us!

Texas Tornado brings life to campaign

James J. Kilpatrick

He's running. Ross Perot, that is. He's gone too far to back out now. The most lackluster campaign since Roosevelt licked Landon is about to come to life, and a good thing too. Bill Clinton and George Bush were providing more intellectual excitement than the voters were up to.

Perot may not get on the ballot in New York, but it looks as if he will qualify in the other 49 states. If the election were tomorrow he would get an astounding vote. He might carry Texas, with its 32 electoral votes, and he might win other states also. Many Republicans are unhappy with Bush; many Democrats are unhappy with Clinton. The people are fed up, and here comes the Texas Tornado. CHAAARGE!

As a newspaperman, I love it. We ink-stained wretches of the press were getting bored with Bill and George. Perot's candidacy gives us someone new to pick on. A hundred substantive questions are waiting to be asked.

In his interview the other night with David Frost, this well-heeled neophyte mentioned a few problems facing the country: curbing violent crime and drug abuse, rebuilding the cities, getting the country back on track, stopping the deterioration of the job base, and reforming the complicated code of federal taxation.

"If the people don't want action, if they don't want these problems solved, if they don't want aggressive programs," he said, "they don't want me."

This is fighting talk, and a weary people are bound to love it. It is the kind of talk that ignites a crowd, but soon now, if Perot's candidacy is to be taken seriously, there must be more than talk. We have to ask, specifically, mister, what would you do as president? What would you ask of Congress?

The gentleman mentioned violent crime. It presents an appalling problem. The FBI reports a 5 percent increase last year in murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault. The National Crime Survey, conducted separately by the Bureau of Justice Statistics, says the increase is more like 8 percent. In many cities law-abiding people are prisoners in their own homes. They dare not go abroad at night. Violent criminals hold us hostage.

What exactly would President Perot do about it? President Bush and the Congress are doing nothing. An omnibus crime bill has been bottled up for months. Opponents of gun control object to putting gun buyers to the inconvenience of a week's waiting period. Civil libertarians object to any weakening of the rule on excluding good evidence that police have badly acquired.

More than 90 percent of violent crime is local crime. The power of the federal government is limited. Part of the pending bill would apply to crimes committed with guns. These would become federal offenses. Is this a good idea, to load local crimes onto federal courts?

What aggressive action against crime would the gentleman recommend? What is the "action" he talks about? Two Dallas newspaper reporters say that in 1988 Perot talked of sealing black neighborhoods in South Dallas and conducting house-to-house searches in order to confiscate guns and drugs. That would be radical action, all right. But are we ready to suspend the Fourth Amendment? The amendment dates from the Magna Carta. It protects us against searches and seizures that are conducted without probable cause. Forget it?

The Texas Tornado promises aggressive action against the federal deficit. What aggressive action? Waaal, he would save $100 billion by "eliminating waste and extravagance." Surely a no-nonsense candidate may be asked for specifics. Would the candidate name just 10 programs where substantial savings could be made by eliminating waste? If not 10 programs, five programs? Four?

It is the easiest thing on earth to oppose federal waste and extravagance. I could name you 100 senators and 435 representatives who positively oppose waste and extravagance. Franklin Roosevelt campaigned on that plank 60 years ago. I have never met a man in public life who favored waste and extravagance. The feeling is unanimous.

Again I say, it's great to have this billionaire aboard. Maybe Ross Perot is exactly what the nation needs. My guess is that he underestimates the complexities of politics. My guess is that by Nov. 3 the incoming tides of approval will have receded. Maybe not. Maybe he will overwhelm the skeptics by the sheer force of his personality and $100 million in TV commercials. His immediate task is to persuade the country that the Texas Tornado is more than just a great big wind.

Yacht racing doesn't hold water

I ask you to join me in a vigil, but not for some bloodthirsty child killer waiting for the gas chamber. My stance on capital punishment remains: Not a single person executed for murder ever killed again.

I'm asking we join together and hope and pray the American's Cup Yacht Race will be over some time before the turn of the century.

No, I am not a large fan of yacht racing. When I was growing up, my family didn't have a yacht, believe it or not.

As a matter of fact, the closest body of water from my house, not counting the bathtub when it was full, was a pond, about a mile away.

I don't think that pond was big enough to hold a yacht race. It was big enough for us to swim in, if you didn't mind swimming in muddy water where there might be a turtle to bite you on your big toe.

How long is this thing going to go on? There are gestation periods for some large animals... that don't last as long as the America's Cup.

And just how many of us can relate to yacht racing?

I asked a friend of mine, "Can you relate to yacht racing?" He said, "No, but I did have a girl cousin who was shaped sort of like a canoe."

I don't understand who pays for all this yacht racing. And how do those people on those yachts get off work for this long?

And then I don't understand why they can't figure out one thing, however. There are actually two races involved when two yachts go at it. One is around a 20.03 nautical mile course. The other is to the starting line.

They don't just say, "Gentlemen, start your yachts," and everybody takes off. They float around and do something called "tacking around" to see who can get to the starting line first at the given time the race is supposed to begin. This takes a long time, too, and it's sort of like making jockeys fight for gate positions from the barn in a horse race.

At this writing, two American yachts are left in what is called the "defender final." One is "Stars and Stripes" with Dennis Conner at the helm (that's yachting talk), and the other is "America," which Bill Koch helms. "America" leads "Stars and Stripes" three races to none, but it's a long way from being over. It's best of 13 races.

Yachts from New Zealand and Italy are racing to see who meets the winner of "America" and "Stars and Stripes." Which means the pro basketball playoffs will be over first and an elephant can give birth about three times while that is going on.

If any of the yachts sink or anybody gets bitten on the big toe by a sea turtle, which are about the only two exciting things I can think of that could happen in a yacht race, I'll let you know.

Lakers, Pistons exit from playoffs

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Detroit Pistons and Los Angeles Lakers, two teams synonymous with playoff success, are starting their summer vacations. The LA Clippers, on the other hand, are still playing.

The Pistons and Lakers had their seasons end early on Sunday while the Clippers, making their first playoff appearance since 1976, pushed their opening-round series to a fifth and decisive game tonight by outlasting Utah 115-107. Sunday's game was postponed from Thursday and moved from the Los Angeles Sports Arena to the Anaheim Convention Center due to the civil unrest in LA.

"I thought there were a few guys on our team who just didn't want us to lose," Clippers coach Larry Brown said. "We didn't have great practices (since the rioting began on Wednesday). But I noticed on the bus coming here that we were ready to play."

Game 5 is tonight in Salt Lake City. Detroit, which won the NBA title in 1989 and 1990, was ousted by the New York Knicks, who beat the Pistons 94-87 in Game 5 at Madison Square Garden.

"The game went pretty much the way the season went offensively," said Pistons coach Chuck Daly, whose team set an NBA record for the fewest points scored in a five-game series.

New York begins its Eastern Conference semifinal series in Chicago on Tuesday. The other Eastern semifinal series resumes tonight, with Cleveland playing host to Boston after routing the Celtics in the opener on Saturday.

The Lakers, who won five NBA titles in the 1980s and were losing finalists last spring, were routed 102-76 by Portland in a game played in Las Vegas due to the unrest in Los Angeles.

"It's been disaster after disaster," veteran guard Byron Scott said of the Lakers' misfor-tures this season, which started with the loss of Magic Johnson, who retired after testing HIV-positive, and ended with a forced shift of a playoff game. "Adversity is a situation we've been in all season long."

The Trail Blazers advanced to a Western Conference semifinal meeting with Phoenix, beginning Tuesday night in Portland.

Clippers 115, Jazz 107. Though their game was moved 35 miles to the south, the Clippers did have the home-court advantage — they were playing on their own floor, which was transported from the Sports Arena, and had the backing of the crowd of 7,148 at the cozy Convention Center.

Danny Manning had 33 points and 10 rebounds to lead the way as the Clippers tied the series. Only three teams have ever overcome a 0-2 deficit in a best-of-5 NBA series. But that doesn't seem to matter to the Clippers.

"We're not going to go away," Manning said. "We're going to go to the Delta Center and play hard. All the pressure is on them. There wasn't supposed to be a Game 5."

The Clippers won by outscoring the Jazz 11-2 in the final 1:44. Doc Rivers, who had 11 of his 17 points in the fourth quarter, made two free throws with 54 seconds remaining and a three-point play with 24 seconds left to extend a one-point lead to six, clinching the victory.

LA won despite an outstanding performance by Utah's Karl Malone, who scored 14 of his career playoff-high 44 points in the fourth quarter and had 11 rebounds.

"We came here to do a job, we didn't get it done," Malone said.

Knicks 94, Pistons 87. The Pistons failed to make it past the first round for the first time since 1986 as the Knicks advanced.

Patrick Ewing had 31 points and 19 rebounds for the Knicks and got scoring help in the second half from Gerald Wilkins, who scored nine of his 13 points in a five-minute span, and John Starks, who scored seven of his 10 in the last 2:39 of the game.

Isiah Thomas, with 21 of his 31 points in the fourth quarter, made sure the Pistons died hard, scoring their last 19 points.

"I just wasn't going to give up," said Thomas, who averaged just 9.8 points in the first four games of the series. "I wanted to play hard. I didn't want to leave the court without making my last shot."

New York held the Pistons to 42.4 points, an average of 84.8, which broke the previous NBA low for a five-game series. Kansas City scored 431 in 1981 against Houston.

"The Knicks played Piston-style ball," Detroit guard Joe Dumars said. "They were physical. Their front line was powerful and their guards made some big shots."

Trail Blazers 102, Lakers 76. The Lakers, who opened the exhibition season in Paris, closed up shop just off the Las Vegas Strip, forced there by riots that turned much of central Los Angeles into a war zone.

Portland, which lost 4-2 to Los Angeles in the Western Conference finals last year, took control by limiting the Lakers to 33 points in the first half. Clyde Drexler led the Blazers with 26 points, 10 rebounds and seven assists and reserve guard Danny Ainge added 19 points.

The Lakers had been 32-2 in first round games since 1982, and hadn't lost a first-round series since 1981. But playing without Johnson and a number of injured regulars, they won only Game 3 in overtime at home against Portland.

Ainge was impressed by how well the Lakers did this season despite their many hardships. "They turned what has been a nightmare into a pretty successful season," he said.

Cone fires another shutout

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

For Eddie Murray, Howard Johnson and David Cone, it was pretty much just another day at the park.

Murray hit his 400th career home run, Johnson stole his 200th career base and Cone pitched a five-hitter for his second straight shutout as the New York Mets beat the Atlanta Braves 7-0 Sunday.

They were all pleased, just not ecstatic.

"It's a pretty decent number," Murray said. "It (the ball) is something to keep in the house with me."

When Murray connected in the eighth inning off reliever Marvin Freeman, he became the 24th player in major league history to reach 400 homers.

Murray is also the second all-time leader in home runs by a switch-hitter. Mickey Mantle is first with 536.

The first baseman, who signed as a free agent with the Mets, has 1,489 career RBIs and 2,527 hits. In major league history, 15 players have reached 400 homers and 2,500 hits. Twelve are in the Hall of Fame, with Reggie Jackson, Dave Winfield and Murray not yet eligible.

"It's something I thought about during the winter," Murray said of reaching 400. "But there's been no pressure. I've just been going out and trying to hit the ball. All that

National League

Johnson became only the 16th major leaguer with 200 steals and 200 homers.

"I think mine is small compared to what Eddie did," Johnson said. "That was a big one."

Cone (3-1) struck out eight and walked four in recording his third straight victory. He also singled home two runs in a five-run fifth inning against loser Charlie Leibrand (2-2).

After allowing leadoff singles in each of the first two innings, Cone did not give up another hit until the sixth, when he survived a bases-loaded jam. In his last start, Cone pitched a two-hitter to beat Houston 4-0.

"The best part for me was being able to keep my composure," Cone said. "I gave up a hit to the first batter and then let them load the bases in the sixth. But I was able to keep my composure both times. Not being able to do that has been my problem in the past."

The victory was the Mets' fifth in six games, including three shutouts, and their 13th in 17.

Astros 1, Pirates 0. At the Astrodome, Steve Finley hit a home run with two outs in the eighth inning off Roger Mason (1-2) to lift Houston over Pittsburgh.

Al Osuna (3-0) pitched one-third of an inning for the victory. After Cecil Espy led off the ninth with a walk, Doug Jones relieved and finished for his seventh save in eight opportunities.

Both starters, Doug Drabek and Butch Henry, pitched scoreless ball for seven innings.

Reds 7, Cubs 1. At Riverfront Stadium, Bill Doran and Paul O'Neill homered off Shawn Boskie (3-2) as Cincinnati beat Chicago in Jose Rijo's return from the disabled list.

The Cubs lost for the eighth time in 10 games and completed a miserable week that included four consecutive shutouts.

Cardinals 7, Padres 1. At Jack Murphy Stadium, Bob Tewksbury pitched a six-hitter for his first complete game of the season as St. Louis beat San Diego.

Felix Jose had three hits and two RBIs, including a run-scoring triple, and Gerald Perry hit two run-scoring doubles for the Cardinals, who staked Tewksbury (3-0) to a 7-0 lead with three runs in the first inning and four more in the second.

Phillies 12, Giants 3. At Candlestick Park, Mariano Duncan went 5 for 5, including a home run, as Philadelphia routed San Francisco.

John Kruk and Dale Sveum each added three RBIs for the Phillies, who had 15 hits.

Dave Stieb keeps mastery over Milwaukee Brewers

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dave Stieb had been waiting a long time for this one, and when it came, the surroundings were very familiar.

Stieb, coming back from arm problems and back surgery, won Sunday for the first time in nearly a year, leading the Toronto Blue Jays over the Milwaukee Brewers 4-1 with a three-hitter at County Stadium.

Stieb hadn't won since last May 11 against the Chicago White Sox, and he hadn't pitched a complete game since an eight-hitter at Milwaukee on April 19, 1991.

"I've always fared out pretty well here," said Stieb, who lost his first two decisions this season. "Last year I was 0-2 and came here and won my first game, a complete game. It's nice to duplicate that this year."

Stieb had problems with his shoulder last season and developed lower back problems after going on the disabled list June 1. He had surgery Dec. 4, 1991, to trim a herniated disc.

"It's difficult when you've been out a year to go out and throw every ball where you want to," Stieb said. "I'm pleased, yet it was no masterpiece."

He walked four and struck out two Sunday in a 96-pitch effort that made him 11-5 in Milwaukee, where he's won six straight starts.

"I just wanted to give a good, solid performance," Stieb said. "They got me some runs. The thing was I kept runners off base and was able to stick around until the end. I still want to be more consistent."

In other games Sunday, Kansas City beat Boston 5-2, Minnesota beat New York 4-2, Detroit beat Oakland 8-4, Chicago beat Texas 5-3, Baltimore beat Seattle 8-6 and California beat Cleveland 6-3.

Joe Carter homered twice for the Blue Jays, who avoided getting swept in the four-game series. He tied the score at 1-1 in the sixth, then put Toronto ahead with a two-run homer in the eighth. Dave Winfield followed with his fifth home run, the 411th of his career.

Bill Wegman (2-2) allowed all four runs and 11 hits in 7 1/3 innings.

Royals 5, Red Sox 2. Kevin Appier (1-2) allowed both runs and 10 hits in eight innings at Fenway as Kansas City won for only the fourth time in 23 games.

Kevin McReynolds hit a solo homer, his fourth, in a two-run seventh for the Royals, who stopped Boston's four-game winning streak. Joe Hesketh (0-1) allowed six hits in seven innings in losing his first decision in four starts.

Twins 4, Yankees 2. Scott Erickson (1-3) won for the first time in six starts this season as Randy Bush broke a 2-all tie in the fifth at Yankee Stadium with an RBI groundout, sending New York to its fourth loss in five games.

American League

Tigers 8, Athletics 1. Tony Phillips hit a three-run homer in a five-run fourth inning and drove in four runs as Detroit won despite Mark McGwire's major league-leading 13th home run, his 18th in 36 games in Tiger Stadium.

Eric King (2-3) allowed two runs and five hits in seven innings and Mike Henneman got four outs for his fourth save. Mike Moore (4-1) lost for the first time in nine decisions since Aug. 26, giving up seven runs and seven hits in 6 1/3 innings.

White Sox 5, Rangers 3. Visiting Texas took a 2-2 lead in the eighth on Ruben Sierra's single off Scott Radinsky (1-1), but Frank Thomas singled in the tying run off Kevin Brown (4-2) in the bottom half and Kenny Rogers forced in two runs by walking Craig Grotbeck and Tim Lincecum with the bases loaded.

Orioles 8, Mariners 6. Tim Lincecum hit a bases-loaded triple to cap a five-run first and Baltimore held on to win its fifth straight. Randy Milligan and Cal Ripken homered for the Orioles, who have 11 homers during their last four games in Camden Yards.

Mike Mussina (4-0) allowed five runs in seven-plus innings and Gregg Olson got five outs for his fifth save. Rich DeLucia (1-3) gave up six runs and six hits in two innings.

Angels 6, Indians 3. Alvin Davis and Gary Gaetti hit consecutive RBI singles off Derek Lilliquist (1-1) during California's three-run ninth at Cleveland.

Scott Bailes (2-0) retired the only two batters he faced in the eighth, and Bryan Harvey finished for his eighth save.

Russians survive the bleak winter

MOSCOW (AP) — Maj. Sergei Yevdokimov, a tank commander who came to Boris Yeltsin's defense in last year's coup attempt, was dazed by the economic hardship that followed.

But at the end of a winter of privation and anxiety, his faith in reform is still strong.

For Yevdokimov, his wife and their two daughters, it was a winter of frighteningly high food prices that used up much of their savings and of long lines for what food was available.

The frustration was compounded by the embarrassment of accepting food aid from the West.

"Sure it was hard, and we felt it," said the major, who led six tanks to defend Yeltsin during the coup attempt. "I cannot recall when we last bought clothes. We just wear old ones. But... we did not despair."

Prices rose more than 350 percent after controls on most goods were lifted Jan. 2. Industrial production dropped by 13 percent, and production of oil and gas declined.

Although the economy is still in desperate straits, at least the gloom of the long Russian winter has finally lifted.

The grimy snow is gone and the skies are frequently blue. And Russians can bask in the knowledge that the unrest that was widely predicted to accompany the economic reforms did not materialize.

Nevertheless, Russians face staggering economic problems. An estimated one third of Russia's 150 million people live below the poverty line, which is defined as 1,200 rubles a month per person.

The Yevdokimovs are among those unfortunates.

Yevdokimov, 37, brings home 3,500 rubles and his wife, Lyuba, earns 600 rubles as a nurse.

Their lives are slightly easier than many Russians' because the army supplies the family with two kilograms (4.4 pounds) each of meat, fish and butter a month.

Still, "nearly everything is spent on food. We deny ourselves such delicacies as good sausage, fruits like oranges and tangerines, sometimes coffee," he said.

Provisions they stockpiled last fall, in anticipation of shortages and price hikes, made the difference for the Yevdokimovs and many other Russians this winter.

"I would not call it a warehouse, but we had supplies, like any other family," the major said. "We had enough meat and butter to last us for two or three months, as well as groats, buckwheat, rice, millet and spaghetti."

The Yevdokimovs and other Russians changed their eating habits, cutting back on protein-rich food, and lived off their savings. Western humanitarian aid — food and medicines worth hundreds of millions of dollars — helped out, despite pilfering and bureaucratic chaos.

Widespread grumbling about Yeltsin's government did not translate into widespread unrest. Threatened strikes did not take place. Pro-Communist rallies in Moscow and other cities rarely exceeded 50,000 people.

Yevdokimov and many of his countrymen are optimistic. He does not regret his decision to lead his tanks to Yeltsin's defense on the night of Aug. 19, expects no gifts from the government and wants it to move ahead with reforms.

"Many people curse the economic policy... but there is something definite about it after years of marking time," he said. "I think that deep inside, everyone is optimistic, and in spite of everything it will still change for the better."

Golf

"There are courses around here where this is done," he said.

Other regulations effecting the municipal course include the use of "tee times" seven days a week. To secure a tee time, a player is asked to reserve the time two days in advance. Council member Corky Harris found this disturbing as he and many other users of the course rarely have any notice of when time will be available for golfing, and never have two days notice.

Coffee clarified the intent of the regulation saying, if a time is open, players will still be able to tee off without prior notification, but priority will be given to those with reservations.

These regulations are essentially unchanged from current regulations regarding play at the municipal course, Coffee said. These were presented to the council for discussion as the parks board plans to begin enforcing the rules in the future, if accepted by the city council.

Cart path rules maintain that all golf carts must remain in the cart paths. A 90-degree turn from the path to the location of a ball would be allowed, but the cart must then be returned to the nearest path, according to the memo.

From the 100-yard marker to the greens, all carts must remain on the path. No crossing over between paths is allowed.

The memorandum also included a draft of a letter to golfers which says:

Each year your golf course has improved from what it was 10 years ago.

With good greens, fairways and tees, it is only natural that more and more golfers are playing at Comanche Trail. This increased use places greater demands on our facility and equipment. In an attempt to help us plan our growth and secure the necessary equipment, the Parks and Recreation Board has appointed a Golf Course Subcommittee to work in concert with the staff on golf course related activities.

Cost vs. care Does utilization review lead to a sicker society?

EDITOR'S NOTE — Increasingly, insurance benefits are restricted by a new layer of control called utilization review, and perhaps nowhere has it had a greater impact than on people seeking treatment for mental illness or addictions. "Cost vs. Care?," examines how people can be denied care they believe they pay for and their doctors contend they need.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY and FRED BAYLES
 Associated Press Writers

A Marine staff sergeant on duty in the Middle East received a troubling call from relatives back home. His 21-year-old wife had gotten hooked on drugs and booze while he fought in Desert Storm.

amount of care — and save money. When this approach works properly, everyone benefits. Even the strongest critics concede the majority of utilization review firms try hard to provide adequate, reasonably priced care.

The reviewers say they are reinventing a profession that grossly overspent and overtreated.

"You have to understand how much waste is in the system," said Travers Wills, president of MCC, one of the nation's largest utilization review companies. "Just the presence of a managed care company will cut costs in half."

But many believe some review companies go too far in their zeal to save. They complain the bad apples use phone networks of nurses and social workers to deny expensive but required care to people

The sergeant rushed back to upstate New York, sure insurance would pay for her recovery. But that was before he heard of something called utilization review.

He learned, as have thousands of other Americans, that seemingly generous insurance benefits cannot be collected unless approved by examiners they never knew existed.

These people, called utilization reviewers, are free to ignore the judgment of doctors and the wishes of patients. Their mission is simple: Pay for the lowest acceptable with serious mental problems and addictions.

While there have been no systematic studies of how often people are denied needed care, prominent psychiatrists, addiction experts and patient advocates contend the cases are distressingly common. Some have had disastrous results — even suicide.

"Lots of people are being harmed," said Dr. Lawrence Hartmann, president of the American Psychiatric Association. "Many people are not getting treatment they absolutely, clearly need . . .

Dr. Israel J.D. Nelson poses at St. Jerome Hospital in Batavia, N.Y. Nelson, program director of the hospital's alcohol treatment center, felt that he could not ethically send a patient home when a utilization review company under contract with the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services refused to pay.

because of these reviewers and their red tape. The consequence is a sicker and more dangerous society."

Those who agree point to such cases as Esther Evancho, the sergeant's wife in upstate New York.

According to a hospital report, she was taking drugs, writing bad checks, blacking out while driving drunk. She even abandoned the couple's 15-month-old baby for a week. She was depressed, anorexic and had high blood pressure.

First, her husband drove her to an outpatient drug treatment center. Too sick for this program, the people there told him. Take her to the hospital, they said. He did, and she was admitted.

The next day, a utilization review company under contract with the federal Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, or CHAMPUS, refused to pay. Its decision: She was not sick enough to be in the hospital. Outpatient care would suffice.

But outpatient care hadn't worked in the past.

"I'd go to outpatient and an hour or two later I was using again," Evancho said.

Often at such junctures, patients simply are sent home. But at the alcohol treatment center at St. Jerome Hospital in Batavia, N.Y., program director Israel J.D. Nelson felt he could not ethically do

Male day-care workers offer kids a fresh face

FORT WORTH (AP) — Brittany Washington, who is almost 2 years old, comes home almost every day telling her mom about Mr. James.

"See, I'm a single parent," said Andrea Washington, 19, as she got Brittany out of the car for another day at Bee and Bell Educational Center. "and it's good that she has someone else to talk to."

For many children at the center in south Fort Worth, the presence of office manager James McGilveary and three other male employees is more than a mere comfort.

Ms. Washington, a stock clerk at Allied Electronics, enrolled her daughter three weeks ago after she heard it was a good learning school.

"We deal with a lot of single mothers because of the area we are in," said McGilveary, 26, as he bustled about the office organizing papers and fielding phone calls. "It's (the center is) important for the ones growing up without a father. And that's not taking away from the mother."

Lynette Freeman, a shipping clerk, is raising two sons without a father. One son, Demetrius, 3, has been going to Bee and Bell for almost two years.

A friend of Ms. Freeman's was sending her child to Bee and Bell and told her about it. Ms. Freeman said she decided her son could use the extra positive reinforcement that she says a male presence provides.

"My 17-year-old is in a world of his own and there's no other man in the house," Ms. Freeman, 35, said in a telephone interview. "I can see in a school with all females that the boys might be rebellious and try to overthrow them."

McGilveary agreed: "It's important for them to see male role models. Especially boys, it helps if they know somebody else is watching them, too."

Marrying a con man

ST. PETERS, Mo. (AP) — Madge Montgomery thought she'd found the perfect husband.

Jerry Wayne Montgomery was charming and generous and loved her three sons like a father. She married him after a storybook two-week courtship because it just felt right.

But six weeks later, Mr. Wonderful was gone, creditors were calling about unpaid bills, the police were knocking on her front door and divorce papers arrived in the mail from her dream man's other wife.

Since then, Madge slowly has been working her way out of bankruptcy and rebuilding her shattered life. And now, after waging a publicity campaign that led to the capture of the man authorities say left bad checks and broken hearts in five states, she's waiting to see justice done.

"I would like to see it be over," she said.

Madge's efforts and her appearance on the "Sally Jessy Raphael" television talk show helped lead to Montgomery's arrest. The show featured Madge and two other women who said Montgomery had married them and then disappeared, leaving them in financial ruin.

He's being held in the St. Charles County Jail on charges of forgery, stealing more than $150 and bigamy. No trial date has been set. He faces similar charges in Tennessee, Texas, Oklahoma and Virginia.

His attorney is David Kenyon, an assistant public defender. Kenyon said Montgomery would be pleading innocent, but he declined to discuss details of the case.

"It's a very complicated case," he said. "We're still trying to sort through everything ourselves."

"I guess the cliché is he swept me off my feet," said Madge, 39. "He was quite a charmer. He knew all the right things to say."

That's the same story three other former wives told, said Shirley Blankenship, a detective with the St. Peters Police Department who had been on Montgomery's trail since he left Madge in March 1991.

Unlike other so-called sweetheart swindlers, Montgomery victimized women who weren't financially well-off, Blankenship said. Instead, he used them for their credit, set up joint checking accounts and then wrote thousands of dollars of bad checks, she said.

He met women through church groups or dating services.

"He tends to pick Christian women because they are very trusting," Blankenship said. "He wines and dines them for a couple of weeks and within a matter of weeks they are married. Six weeks later, when all the bad checks come in, he's gone."

The whole experience was humiliating to Madge, who has gone back to using her old last name but asked that it not be published. Gradually she decided to go public with her story, hoping it would prevent other women from being duped.

'I guess the cliché is he swept me off my feet. He was quite a charmer. He knew all the right things to say.'

Madge 39

"What I really wished I could do was just find a hole somewhere and crawl in it and never come out," she said during an interview in her suburban St. Louis home. "But I knew that wasn't the way to handle it."

The "Sally Jessy Raphael" show first aired in November. It didn't turn up Montgomery, but it led to a fourth wife, whom he had left just days before.

In February, the show was aired again, and Montgomery was arrested within hours in suburban Minneapolis, where he had been working as a mechanic.

"I thought it would be very hard to trust someone, but I trusted him," said Madge, who was divorced after an abusive first marriage.

Not long ago, Madge went to the jail to confront Montgomery, hoping the meeting would help her put the experience behind her.

"He was very quiet when I talked to him. I did most of the talking. I just said things that I had been wanting to say to him about what we, my family, had gone through," she said. "He didn't really offer much of an explanation, just that he was very sorry for what he had done to us."

"The only thing he asked me is if I would pray for him, and I told him I already had been."

Vanishing second world raises doubts on third

National Geographic AP Special Features

First, Second, Third, Fourth worlds — are they now on a geographic collision course?

With the communist Second World crumbling, is the Third still the Third? Will the Fourth disappear?

From the First to the Fourth, they have been — in a word — the capitalist, communist, developing and undeveloping countries, says geographer Harm J. de Blij of the University of Miami.

More specifically, they have been defined as:

- The First World of industrialized, market-economy countries, broadly the capitalist or Western world.
- The Second World of centrally planned economies, the communist bloc or socialist camp, including the former Soviet Union, Eastern European countries, China, Cuba and North Korea.
- The Third World of poorer countries, many of them former dependents of colonial powers, including the economically developing nations of Africa, Asia and Latin America.
- The Fourth World of hopelessly poor countries such as Haiti, Mozambique and Bangladesh or stateless peoples, among them the Kurds, Eritreans and Palestinians.

"The Second World is shrinking quickly, if it still exists," says geographer William Wood of the U.S. State Department. "The Soviet sphere is fragmented, China, Cuba and North Korea are the only notable communist countries left. Clearly, there's not a First or Second World for the Third to be aligned against. These terms — ambiguous shorthand — will fall into greater disuse."

"What do we call the Second World now, the ex-Second World, the First-and-a-half World? This raises a problem in counting," says geographer Joseph E. Schwartzberg of the University of Minnesota. "Maybe it's time to drop the designation 'Third World.'"

The concept of a Third World first emerged in Europe in the early 1950s. From the French "tiers monde," it was originally a political label for countries not aligned with either the communist or the free world.

At the 1955 Bandung (Indonesia) Conference, delegates from 29 African and Asian nations formalized the use of Third World, declaring their determination to speed the end of colonialism and to remain neutral in the Cold War.

By the early 1960s, the term took on economic characteristics and encompassed Latin America as well. Third World was preferred over more derogatory descriptions for have-not countries, but eventually it too was considered insulting to some and confusing to others.

But what's a good substitute? "Developing world" would seem to be the single best thing, but it's really not adequate," Schwartzberg says.

"Count Fourth World out now," de Blij says. "We'll still need general categories, but two is too few and four is too many."

"The First World will stretch from Vancouver to Vladivostok (the Euro-Atlantic community envisioned by U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker). The Second World may become countries in political transformation such as the Slovenias, Scotlands and Macedonias, and those in economic transition, the Brazils. The Third World will be those of lowest economic growth and least political influence — the Bolivias, Zaires and Nepals."

"Third World really doesn't fit anymore," agrees geographer George J. Demko of Dartmouth College. "The world is too fluid. Strange as it seems, the Cold War had created relative stability.

A Haitian slum mother despairs for her infant daughter, whose distended stomach and reddish hair are signs of severe malnutrition. The poorest nation in the Western Hemisphere, Haiti has been ranked as part of a hopelessly poor Fourth World.

Separatist fever is spreading worldwide. It's nationalism gone crazy: long-repressed nationalism that is very uncompromising. We haven't seen the end of these movements yet.

"Since Britain agreed to the independence of others in Europe, some Scots want to get a share of the pie and go their own way," says geographer Ted Dachtera. The Scots-are-Scots-first spirit, which has stirred sporadically, has suddenly surged again, led by the Scottish National Party.

The 15 former Soviet republics have become 15 nations. Czechoslovakia, which in 1990 changed its formal name to Czech and Slovak Federal Republic, remains in danger of splitting in two. So do Somalia and Sudan. The six Yugoslavian republics are already going their separate ways.

At least one of them, ethnically mixed Macedonia, may have to undergo a name change to gain international recognition as a nation. Neighboring Greece adamantly opposes the use of what it claims is a Greek name. Ancient Macedonia is divided among today's Greece, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria.

"Greek Macedonia has been Greek for millennia. Usurping the name implies expansionist designs," says Nicolaos Papaconstantinou, a Macedonian who is the press counselor at the Greek Embassy in Washington.

Even in Africa, the region with the most old Third World nations, the established, once-sacred colonial borders are now in danger of disintegrating, creating more "developing" countries.

The term Third World, which still shows up in today's headlines, will probably die hard, Schwartzberg says, because "most people still don't realize where it came from."

Day Care

educators James and Elizabeth Branch. The Branches opened Bee and Bell seven years ago as a tutorial center.

When they were ready to expand their after-school tutorial center into a full-time day care facility, they began seeking additional staff. In the past four years, Bee and Bell has made three hires who happened to be male.

"It was not necessarily by design," said Elizabeth Branch, an administrator at Tarrant County Junior College. "It just happened that way and I realized it was a good idea."

The Branches' son, James Jr., 28, teaches reading and math at Bee and Bell.

For the music program, they hired Nolan Brooks, 20, a music major at Tarrant County Junior College.

McGilveary, 26, came to Bee and Bell from another youth organization.

The center's tutorial services include Anthony Chris, a math teacher from O.D. Wyatt High School, who comes in the afternoons.

With four male employees out of a total of 12, Bee and Bell has a much larger proportion of men than most other Tarrant County centers, officials say.

John Widner, executive director of the Tarrant County Day Care Association, said that of the roughly 110 child-care workers in the association, fewer than a dozen are men. The focus of the association, partially funded by the city and state, is to provide day care for children whose parents have limited incomes. Bee and Bell is a part of a service network of centers operated by the association, Widner said.

The Texas Department of Human Services, which licenses most day-care centers, does not keep statistics of the gender of the employees, said David Beard, licensing consultant with the child-care licensing division. In Texas, there are 7,000 licensed centers and 14,000 registered private family homes that care for more than three children not related to the care giver, Beard said.

Kay Hollestelle, an accreditation counselor with the National Association for Family Day Care, said that there are at least two major reasons for the lack of men in the child-care industry.

"First of all it's a low-paying industry," she said. "I also think many men are intimidated by a field dominated by women, just as women are in male-dominated fields."

James Branch said that child-care employees could expect to earn between $14,000 and $17,000 a year.

Bee and Bell has about 60 children and charges $45 a week per child. During the day, the children, ages 18 months to 5 years, change classrooms, much like they will do when they get to school, said McGilveary, who is majoring in education at Jarvis Christian College in Hawkins.

Using books and computer software, children learn how to count and read. The younger ones develop motor skills and perform tasks such as lacing and tying their shoes, James Branch said.

In Nolan Brooks' music class, preschoolers learn everything from standard nursery rhymes to an alphabet rap song "to help them get through that L-M-N-O-P section," he said.

Bee and Bell also offers an after-school tutorial program for students through 12th grade, McGilveary said. Through it, employees can keep in touch with students who leave day care for school, particularly those who could use a male role model, he said.

"We don't go to the house or try to run the household," he said. "We just want them to know we are here."

James Branch said that he had never thought of himself as a role model before. But now, he sees how he is one.

In addition to meeting the state's requirements for hiring, the centers also conduct at least two lengthy interviews with each prospective employee and require employees to attend the Bee and Bell Parent Teachers Association meetings, McGilveary said.

"Parents need to know who is dealing with their children," he said.

Hospitals

The hospital kept Evancho three weeks and broke her addictions — without charge.

"There were clear medical reasons to suggest she needed inpatient care," Nelson said.

Evancho said she has been free of drugs and alcohol for nine months. "I don't think I would have made it without the hospital care," she said.

CHAMPUS officials declined to comment specifically on Evancho's case, citing patient confidentiality. But Michael Carroll, a CHAMPUS mental health program specialist, said no one is denied benefits for financial reasons alone. Instead, the program will pay for "the lowest appropriate level of care."

He also denied that utilization reviewers tell doctors how to do their jobs.

"We say, 'Doctor, it is your responsibility to treat the patient. If you disagree with our decision on money, then you do what is best for the patient,'" he said.

Hospital administrators say they would go out of business if doctors admitted mentally ill and addicted patients without assurances the bills would be paid.

According to the psychiatric association, about 80 percent of Americans with health insurance have their cases scrutinized by some type of utilization review.

Dr. Roger S. Taylor, president of the industry's Utilization Review Accreditation Commission, said that's a big increase from the early 1980s, when mental illness represented less than 5 percent of total health care costs.

But in recent years, mental health costs have grown faster than other care. CHAMPUS' charges for mental illness hospitalization, for example, nearly doubled between 1986 and 1989.

"With benefit costs increasing at 18 percent a year, something has to be done," Taylor said. "There is some pain associated with it, but it's effective."

Psychiatrists and hospital administrators are among the most outspoken complainers about utilization review. Those who defend the industry contend there is a good reason: They are the ones hurt financially by reviewers' cutbacks.

Until recently, doctors could treat patients at least until benefits ran out. People were routinely hospitalized for 28 days — the most some insurance policies allowed — when perhaps a week or less might have been enough.

"Why is it that on the 29th day of hospitalization, the patient miraculously responded? That doesn't make sense," said Charles W. Stellar, executive director of the American Managed Care and Review Association.

But medical professionals are not the only critics of utilization review.

"It's ridiculous when a clerk who has never seen a child says the child does not need inpatient treatment, contrary to what a professional has said," said Robert Yacobi, a juvenile court judge in Newport News, Va., who retired in January. "I have seen people refused inpatient treatment who were diagnosed as suicidal and a danger to themselves."

A recent New York state survey conducted by the Legal Action Center, a public interest law firm, concluded that "current utilization review practices are having a devastating impact on the ability of people with alcohol and drug problems to get the treatment they desperately need."

Over a lifetime, the average American throws away 600 times his or her body weight in garbage — more than 90,000 pounds of trash! Recycling just 10 percent of your garbage can reduce that amount by four-and-a-half tons.

Reader's fish story will bowl you over

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter from "Bubbe" and her goldfish, Mahzel and Brocha, I had to write.

Two years ago, when I was 10 years old, I won a small goldfish at the county fair. Not knowing if it was male or female, I named it Fishface. After a while, thinking it might be lonesome, I bought another goldfish as a companion for Fishface, but after a few weeks, I found the companion floating on its side — dead. Three companions died on me, so I gave up.

Fishface must have been a baby fish when I got it because in the 12 years I've had it, I have had to buy a larger fishbowl three times. Fishface seems content and peppy as ever, and shows no signs of aging, but I would like to know how much longer I can expect it to live. Also, forgive the dumb question, Abby, but how can a person tell a male fish from a female fish? — CURIOS IN WATERLOO, IOWA

DEAR CURIOUS: Small goldfish can be expected to live about 15 years — if they are healthy, well cared for and not overfed. Goldfish (like some humans) will continue to eat as long as food is available. It is difficult to tell a male from a female fish — except in the spring, when the male gets little white bumps on his fins and starts chasing females.

Female fish are visibly plumper than males when they are full of roe (eggs) ... in other words, pregnant.

I may be telling you more than you care to know, but my fish expert is a very knowledgeable and patient teacher, employed by The Aquarium Stock Co. in Los Angeles. And when I tell you his name, you will think I'm kidding. It's John Fish!

DEAR ABBY: I also enjoy limericks. Here's one that isn't exactly X-rated, but I wouldn't advise taking it to Sunday school. — WESTPORT PETE

There was an old maid in Duluth
Who wept when she thought of her youth
Remembering the chances
She missed at school dances
And once in a telephone booth.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.
