Task force sets BSSH inspection for July 20

The task force conducting inspections of state psychiatric hospitals will visit the Big Spring State Hospital July 20.

The five-member task force, created by the Texas Legislature to recommend whether any state schools or state hospitals should be closed, will visit eight state hospitals during July, according to published reports.

Earlier this year, the task force recommended the closure of state schools in Austin and Mexia. Gov. Ann Richards decided later to keep the Mexia facility open.

The schedule for hospital inspections is: Vernon, July 14; Wichita Falls, July 15; Terrell, July 16; Rockwall, July 17; Big Spring, July 20; Austin, July 22; San Antonio, July 23; and Kerrville, July 24.

Sadowski slams Stenholm budget plan

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A proposed Constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget pushed by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, was criticized by his Republican opponent, who says it is not strong enough.

Jeannie Sadowski of Eastland says a provision allowing a 60 percent vote of Congress to authorize deficit spending to continue should be eliminated except in times of declared war.

"Under Stenholm's amendment, deficit spending would continue if 60 percent of Congress voted to continue deficit spending," said Sadowski, who supports the idea of a balanced-budget amendment. "I believe that would happen every single year as Congressmen tried to protect their favorite programs."

Not so, said Ed Lorenzen, a Stenholm aide in Washington. "That would only happen in extreme circumstances," Lorenzen said. "Getting 60 percent of Congress to agree on anything is going to be very difficult."

The 60 percent override provision, widely supported by Republicans and Democrats, is needed for such emergencies as recessions and national disasters, he said. Also, an override would require a separate bill forcing Congressmen to go on record supporting deficit spending.

But Sadowski said the provision would make the amendment "ineffective."

"I urge Stenholm to eliminate that 60 percent loophole — by allowing deficit spending only in the event of a declared war," she said.

The proposed amendment is scheduled to come to a vote in the House June 11. So far 278 House Representatives support the resolution. Only 290 votes, two-thirds of the House, are needed to pass it.

Stenholm and other supporters of the proposal were able to bring it to a House vote — after bypassing committees where additions could have been made — by getting 218 members of Congress to sign a petition. The needed signatures were reportedly gathered in nine hours.

The last time votes were taken on a proposed balanced-budget amendment, the measure lost by seven votes in the House in 1990 and by one vote in the Senate in 1986.

Weseloh, a Midland developer, said he plans to sell the 62-year-old hotel to Settles Project Inc. for $295,000, making a "small profit." He said he will offer free consultation for renovation of the 15-story building and will stipulate in a contract that it be used for low-rent senior citizen housing.

"Everybody seems to work better with a non-profit corporation than they do with an individual," said Weseloh, who reported numerous problems getting grants for construction as well as permission from the Texas Historical Commission to install air conditioners in individual apartments.

Weseloh assumed ownership of the building, vacant for a decade, in January after paying local taxing entities $100 and undisclosed amounts to a former owner and an interim owner.

Settles Project hopes to have state not-for-profit status "in a week" and federal non-profit status within a year, said Director Tim David, 42, president of Timken Associates in Midland, a firm he says handles electronic and computer contracts.

Outsider taps insiders

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The man running for president as a can-do outsider is pinning his White House hopes on two blunt, controversial insiders who have flouted the political establishment even as they've been pillars of it.

"This is the first step in the normalization of Ross Perot," Georgia Rep. Newt Gingrich, the No. 2 Republican in the House, said after the Dallas tycoon on Wednesday hired Republican Ed Rollins and Democrat Hamilton Jordan to manage his independent presidential bid.

Perot, expected to declare his candidacy this summer, has made a point of avoiding politics as usual. When he needed experienced hands, he turned to two men who are as outspoken and unconventional as he is.

Rollins "has been kind of a free spirit in the Republican Party," said former Carter White House press secretary Jody Powell, who once considered going into business with Rollins.

As for Jordan, he said, he's been gone from Washington for a dozen years "and even while he was here, he was mostly damned for not being enough of an insider."

Rollins and Jordan have spotty electoral track records and backgrounds filled with conflict. Both were accused Wednesday of signing on for the money, said to be in the $1 million range. But both said they were taking pay cuts to help Perot and suggested that, like Perot and his supporters, they are Americans, they are not by government

Center receives OK for TWC grant

By GARY SHANKS

The Big Spring Federal Correctional Center, Airpark Unit, has received approval for a $100,000 grant from the Texas Water Commission.

The City of Big Spring originally submitted the request about a year ago to the then Bureau of Solid Waste Management. In the interim, however, this entity was absorbed by the TWC, said Mid-Tex Detention Business Manager Johnny Rutherford.

Rutherford and Public Works Director Tom Decell were unaware that the funds had been granted until formal contracts were received from the TWC earlier today. The contracts included some minor changes from the original proposal due to the differing bureaucratic structures of the Bureau of Solid Waste Management and the TWC, Rutherford said.

The grant is to provide a yard-waste composting center that one day could process all leaves and grass clippings in Big Spring, thereby reducing the landfill volume by 20 percent, Decell said.

"The Correctional Center, in conjunction with the City of Big Spring Public Works Department, is in the process of completing a final review of the contracts, as well as a couple of amendments proposed," Rutherford said.

Rutherford and the city will have representatives at a pre-award conference in Austin Monday, he said. This will give the entities an opportunity to clarify any part of the contracts.

"We are really looking forward to the implementation of the program," Rutherford said. The program will be the first of its kind in Texas and will provide vocational training to inmates of the prison, he said.

"We hope to have the process worked out sufficiently (within one year) to seek an amendment granting another year's funding," he said.

State, hospital group announce lawsuit settlement

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials say the investigation of private psychiatric hospitals will continue despite the settlement of a lawsuit against a hospital chain.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said Wednesday that the settlement between the state and National Medical Enterprises Inc. may form guidelines for the Legislature to establish new policies to regulate the industry.

"Though work on this issue is far from finished, we have made great strides in curbing the abuses that have plagued this industry," Bullock said.

State District Judge Jon Wisser approved the agreement between the state and NME, one of the nation's largest health care service companies, which admitted no wrongdoing.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, who accused the hospital chain of overcharging and paying illegal kickbacks for patient referrals, called the settlement as "revolutionary." He said it would help clean up allegations of abuses in private psychiatric hospitals.

The order will ensure that patients at NME facilities receive proper care and that people are not wrongfully admitted to the hospitals, the attorney general said.

Morales also said loopholes in the law prevented him from seeking criminal penalties, but added he was more interested in correcting problems.

Court blocks execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court will consider hearing a claim by attorneys for convicted killer Kenneth Granviel, who avoided the Texas death chamber early today when the high court granted him a stay.

Granviel, 41, had faced lethal injection before dawn for a Fort Worth killing spree in which seven people were fatally stabbed nearly 18 years ago.

He was convicted of killing 2-year-old Natasha McClendon, one of five members of her family slain in October 1974. Two other women were killed in a similar fashion in Fort Worth four months later.

Attorneys for Granviel contended their client was mentally incompetent and insane and should not be executed.

In the writ ruled on by the Supreme Court about six hours before Granviel was to be put to death, Granviel's attorneys said the competency hearings to determine whether he could stand trial was unfair.

The Supreme Court is considering the same issue in another case involving a California claim and agreed to consider a request to hear Granviel's claim.

Schools replace water fountains

DALLAS (AP) — One of the country's largest water-cooler manufacturers has replaced 179 fountains found to be adding lead to drinking water at Texas colleges and universities.

Halsey-Taylor Co. of Freeport, Ill., a subsidiary of Household International Co., admitted during a Congressional investigation in 1988 that it used lead solder between 1978 and the last weeks of 1987.

Since then, the company has mailed 16,000 notices to customers and has replaced more than 2,700 coolers nationwide. The Dallas Morning News reported in Thursday editions.

Texas schools requesting replacements last year included the University of Texas-Arlington, Texas A&M University, Angelo State University, Hardin-Simmons University, Lamar University and Trinity University, said Stephanie Cruz, coordinator of Halsey-Taylor's water cooler replacement-refund program.

Other Texas schools that replaced fountains because of high lead levels were Kilgore Junior College, Tyler Junior College and Tarrant County Junior College, she said.

kidney and brain damage. Children are most at risk because their brains are still being formed.

However, lead from water coolers did not pose a health hazard unless a person relied on them solely for drinking water, said David Bary with the Environmental Protection Agency in Dallas.

In releasing results of a survey of manufacturers, the health and environment subcommittee of the U.S. House Energy and Commerce Committee said in February 1988, "It is not possible to evaluate with certainty how much additional lead contamination might result from the contact of drinking water with lead solder in these coolers."

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ted Koppel says he won't stay on as host of "Nightline" if stations continue to bump it for other shows.

The 12-year-old program follows the local news in 62 percent of the country. In other markets, affiliate stations carry syndicated shows at 11:30 p.m. and bump "Nightline" to midnight or later.

ABC News' President Roone Arledge said Wednesday the show might be on its way out because of the defections.

Koppel said he is hoping the show will pick up a few stations now that Johnny Carson has left NBC's "The Tonight Show."

If not, Koppel said, "It will never die a death of attrition with me at the helm. If I see that these folks continue to run reruns of 'M-A-S-H,' then I will have to take that into consideration."

"Nightline" began as a temporary news program in 1980, covering the holding of the American hostages in Iran.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Ricky Skaggs, whose current album is "My Father's Son," has invited his father to perform with him next week.

Robert Skaggs, a country musician in Cordell, Ky., plans to perform with his 37-year-old son at the annual Fan Fair country music festival on Wednesday.

Ricky Skaggs' hits include "Country Boy," "Highway 40 Blues" and "Crying My Heart Out Over You."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — W. Axl Rose, the lead singer of Guns N' Roses, is tired of running and plans to turn himself in to face charges stemming from a riot in St. Louis last summer, a spokeswoman for his recording label says.

It's not clear when Rose will surrender, Bryn Bridenthal of Geffen Records said Wednesday.

"We're in the process of trying to settle it," Guns N' Roses guitarist Slash said in an interview from Germany, where the group is on tour. "I don't want to see us walking on stage and being walked off by the police."

The band canceled concerts in Chicago and Detroit this spring after a prosecutor threatened to have Rose arrested.

Dan Diemer, an assistant St.

Louis prosecuting attorney, said Rose won't have to go to jail on the misdemeanor charges but might face a fine or community service.

Witnesses said the riot began after Rose plunged into the audience to stop a photographer from taking pictures, then cut short the band's show. Forty fans and 20 police officers were injured.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms was reported in stable condition after nine hours of surgery for a quadruple heart bypass.

The 70-year-old senator underwent the operation Wednesday at Rex Hospital.

Helms, a conservative four-term North Carolina Republican, also has prostate cancer and Paget's disease, a rare bone disorder.

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashion model Beverly Johnson says she tried to dissuade her daughter from following in her footsteps.

But in the end, Johnson appeared with Anansa on the girl's first cover, Essence magazine, two years ago. Anansa is now 13.

"It's a very tough business. I didn't want that for my honey," Johnson, the first black model to appear on the cover of Vogue, said in the upcoming USA Weekend magazine.

Denmark backs off demand

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Denmark backed off today from its demand that the treaty on European unity be modified, accepting the European Community leadership's refusal to reopen talks on the hard-won plan.

"I am not going to ask for a renegotiation," Danish Foreign Minister Uffe Ellemann-Jensen told reporters on arrival at a NATO foreign ministers' meeting.

Ellemann-Jensen did not elaborate on what Denmark's plans are two days after its voters stunned the community by narrowly rejecting the so-called Maastricht treaty in a referendum.

Pulling out of the treaty, which aims to closely integrate the economies and government policies of the bloc's 12 member nations, could freeze Denmark out of the world's richest market, with 330 million potential consumers.

The Danish envoy said the EC and Denmark will need "a long time for reflections and considerations, after all the final answer does not have to be given until the end of the year," when the treaty is to take effect.

European Community foreign ministers were to meet today in special session in the margin of the NATO gathering that is considering allowing deployment of alliance troops as peacekeepers in European conflicts.

Ahead of the European Community session, Denmark's partners expressed determination to press ahead with political and economic union despite the Danish public's rejection of the idea.

"Europe has always proceeded by a series of hiccups and this is another one," Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd of Britain told reporters. He said the "purpose of the meeting will be to listen to the Danes and see how they see it."

But pledges by community officials Wednesday to stay the course could not hide the fact Danish voters upset the trading bloc's best-laid plans by voting "no" on the treaty to give it a common currency and foreign policy by 1999.

The treaty was reached in December in a Dutch city of the same name.

"We have to take stock of the situation," Ellemann-Jensen said. "And I want to make it very clear to my partners that the Danish 'no' was certainly not a 'no' to Europe." But Denmark's vote shook confidence among other governments.

It led France to announce plans for its own referendum on the treaty. Ireland is the only other member holding a public vote; the other members plan only parliamentary ratification.

The Maastricht treaty was adopted after a year of difficult and at times rancorous negotiations and is to take effect next year — after ratification by all member states.

Denmark's partners have said they will go down the road toward a single EC currency and an embryonic foreign and security policy, possibly even a defense policy, without Copenhagen, if necessary.

"There is strong unanimity that the 11 should go ahead without hesitation," said Foreign Minister Joao de Deus Pinheiro of Portugal, who was to preside at today's meeting.

The Danish referendum result reflected the fear of many Danes that a more integrated Europe will require Denmark to surrender significant national sovereignty and dilute Denmark's strong environmental and social welfare policies.

Young Elvis chosen to be featured on stamps

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — America has chosen its presidential nominees, and now it's picked its King. The young Elvis Presley of "Heartbreak Hotel," "Hound Dog" and the Ed Sullivan Show has been elected by fans for the new U.S. stamp.

The Postal Service today announced that the design outpolled the "old Elvis" by a 3-to-1 margin and will adorn the 29-cent stamp to be released next January. More than 1 million votes were cast.

"Elvis loved his fans very, very much, and I think that he would have just been totally overwhelmed by all of your support," said Presley's former wife, actress Priscilla Presley.

The results were announced at Graceland, the late singer's home in Memphis that draws more than 650,000 tourists a year.

The vote, which was announced by former Postmaster General Anthony Frank, was 851,200 to 277,723. Frank had approved the stamp before retiring, after years of lobbying by Presley fans.

It was the first time the Postal Service has asked the public to select postage stamp art.

The stamp will come out Jan. 8, the anniversary of Presley's birth, at a post office in a shopping center across the street from Graceland. Presley, who died in 1977, would have been 58 on that day.

The first issues will be single sheets of 40 stamps each. He also will be part of a booklet that will include seven other music figures. Those stars haven't been chosen.

Sam Phillips, founder of Sun Records who discovered Elvis in the 1950s, attended the ceremony.

WINNING ELVIS DESIGN

...saying, "This is almost like the flag — the next thing to the flag to the people around the world."

Voting was conducted by mail April 6-24, and postal officials received more than 1.1 million votes by prepared ballot or post card. Most of the more than 5 million ballots prepared apparently ended up in Elvis fans' scrapbooks, officials said.

Officials commissioned two portraits, the winning one that showed Presley in his "Hound Dog" years, cradling a '50s-style microphone, the other representing him in his later years as a Vegas showman.

Critics objected to the project's $300,000 promotional costs, but the Postal Service said it expects to make money on the stamp as a collector's item.

Wave of women nominated for Senate seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wave of women nominated for Senate seats in big states appears likely to come crashing down, one way or another, on the three men contending for the White House.

Since the female Senate candidates are almost all Democrats, including nominees in California, Illinois and Pennsylvania, Democrat Bill Clinton would appear to have an opportunity to boost his chances by striking alliances.

"I think this is very good news for us," said Clinton campaign manager David Wilhelm. "Those candidates have injected real enthusiasm into their races and they also happen to be in key showdown states for the general election."

Republicans, however, argue that Clinton will find it hard to gain any "reverse coalition" effect, from the female candidates, even as many Republicans concede that women will be appealing in a year when voters are demanding change.

"I think it's going to be very difficult for him to latch onto it unless he names a woman vice president," Republican pollster Neil Newhouse said Wednesday.

A wild card in the debate is independent candidate Ross Perot, who has drawn more support from men than women in exit polls but whose outsider's message of change is a match for the female Senate contenders.

Democrats argue that Perot has limited appeal to women, and cite such statements as his saying the country cannot afford a family leave law. But it is an untested question.

Newly elected Democratic Senate nominees, Dianne Feinstein, right, and Barbara Boxer, left, triumphantly raise clasped hands over California State Treasurer Kathleen Brown at a luncheon Wednesday in San Francisco. Feinstein and Boxer referred to Brown as the next Governor of California after Brown referred to them as the next new Senators from California.

"The men who are running for president must recognize that once again women will be the majority of voters, outvoting men by probably several million votes," said Ruth Mandel of the Center for American Women and Politics. "This has particular potential for a Democrat because traditionally the gender gap in voting has favored Democrats."

This is no traditional year, however, because of the three-way presidential race and the emergence of so many female candidates. In California alone, both Senate nominees and 18 House nominees are women.

While that level of success would suggest higher turnout among women, not all analysts believe the female candidates will get all those votes, never mind suggestions that Clinton should also benefit.

"It is much too early to tell," said Curtis Gans of the Center for the Study of the American Electorate, which monitors voter turnout. "I don't think Clinton benefits, but I don't know. Nor do I think that it is necessarily the case that women will vote for women. I can see an election with an enormous amount of ticket splitting."

In all of the big-state Senate races with female Democratic nominees, change is a dominant theme.

In California, former San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein and Rep. Barbara Boxer are favored over appointed Sen. John Seymour and conservative commentator Bruce Herschensohn, respectively.

Senate panel considers trimming tax breaks for big pay to top executives

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel is studying a proposal to limit the tax benefits for corporations that pay their top brass more than $1 million a year.

The provision is included in House legislation to extend unemployment benefits. A similar measure was included in the tax bill President Bush vetoed in March.

Scheduled hearing witnesses today before the Senate Finance Committee include Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman Richard Breeden; Graef Crystal, a controversial expert on executive compensation; and Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., who has introduced legislation to help curb big-pay excesses.

In written testimony, Levin said hearings he conducted last year and earlier this year on pay packages for corporate chief executive officers "showed that CEO pay in America is out of whack — it is out of line with corporate performance, out of line with the pay of other workers and out of line with CEO pay in the rest of the world."

While corporate profits fell 7 percent in 1990, executives' pay rose 7 percent, said Levin, adding that CEO pay went up another 4 percent last year although corporate profits were off 15 percent.

He also noted that "U.S. CEOs typically receive twice as much pay as CEOs in Japan and Germany — even though many of their companies are beating our socks off."

Levin's bill stops short of giving shareholders veto power over pay raises. But it would give them more input in corporate policy changes on executive compensation and require better disclosure of who is paid what.

Another provision of Levin's bill would require companies to carry on their books the expensive stock options granted top executives.

Stock options give executives a right to buy their company's stock on a given date — often years later — at a predetermined price. If the stock does not go up, the options aren't exercised.

But if the price rises, executives with options to buy millions of shares at a lower price can make hefty profits by reselling.

Stock option plans allowed UAL Corp. Chairman Stephen Wolf to earn a total of $18.3 million — $14.5 million of it in stock options — in 1990, a year when profits for the parent company of United Airlines fell 71 percent.

Last year, Wolf, like many other executives, took a substantial pay cut — 97 percent, dropping his pay to $575,000.

Levin calls stock option pay plans "stealth compensation" because current accounting rules allow companies to keep the true value of the option plans off the bottom line.

Rich giving at lower rate

The thousand points of diminishing light: A Treasury Department study on charitable contributions by millionaires has good news and bad news. The good news is that because of the rapid growth in the number of very rich people, total charitable giving in America increased to record levels in the 1980s.

The bad news is that the rich are giving a far smaller percentage of their income. In 1980, people making $1 million or more gave 7 percent of their after-tax income to charity. In 1991, that figure, measured in constant dollars, had declined to less than 4 percent.

No one is certain why. Giving may have declined because the new millionaires were still in the acquisitive rather than the charitable mode, or maybe because marginal tax rates (and hence the amount of tax saved per dollar contributed) are down.

Whatever the cause, it's cause for concern, in part because charitable giving is lagging behind the need, and in part because of what it may say about our collective commitment to community and social needs.

What's certain is that the reduction of tax rates for the rich has not enhanced their propensity to give some of it to the poor or for the enhancement of the community. If anything, revisions in the tax code may be discouraging it. That's not what's supposed to happen when government leaves the rich with more disposable income.

God judges indifference to sin

To the editor:
I've lived in West Texas nearly all of my 81 years, and I have never seen it rain like this. People are unable to keep their yards mowed or those unusual weeds under control. I've asked myself, "Why all this?"

Then I remembered God's warning to Moab through His prophets that they would be judged because they had "settled on their lees". Did they not care about the sin going on all around them? Were their children growing up in schools where the 10 commandments were not even allowed to be posted on their walls? Did they go to their knees and confess to God how they had sinned against Him in allowing their nation to become what it was? I think not, because God said, "I will judge Moab" because of their indifference to the sin going on all around them. But they did not care.

Oh, they probably complained about the rain ruining their crops, about the filth coming over the TV, about the fact that their leaders were promoting the instruction of children in all kinds of sexual perversion, etc. But they knew that whatever happened, the government would take care of it.

But where were the people of God? God wants to heal our land of the riots, the disasters, the rains which ruin and do not help, etc. But His message to us is: "If my people, who are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." God grant that His people, today, will heed and respond to this message of II Chronicles 7:14 before it is too late.

Woman defends right to abortion

To the editor:
I am a thirty-one-year-old single, white female. I have been registered to vote since I was 18. I have never had an abortion thanks to birth control, but were I to need one, it should be my right as an American citizen to retain the liberty to do so. As an American woman, I am entitled to complete control of my own body. I believe abortion should be legal under all circumstances. It is my right to have an abortion until the third trimester of pregnancy if my doctor and I agree to it.

I will oppose any legislation that prohibits health care professionals, hospitals, and clinics from performing or assisting with abortions. The adoption and foster home system cannot handle this crisis. Few people want to adopt minority children. Also, the potential for abuse of these unwanted children is staggering.

The majority of pro-life people are men! Ask most men to use a condom or have a vasectomy and they will tell you that "birth control is the woman's responsibility." I believe that a woman's reproduction system is her personal, private business and she should maintain complete and total control over it. This is war against the women of this country!

I know women who are opposed to abortion and they have a right to their own opinion. It is one of the things that makes this country great. I do not want to force them to have an abortion, nor should they try to force other women to bear unwanted children. It should be up to the individual.

Are you ready to pay the cost of the birth, feeding, clothing, housing, and education of these children? Do our conservatives want their taxes raised to cover the cost?

I will work politically at every level of government to prevent this catastrophe. I will actively campaign against any politician who is pro-life, anti-choice, and, in my opinion, anti-American. This is an outrage and we as American women will not tolerate it! We are ready and willing to do battle for our right to control our own bodies and our destinies!

Time for the Shark Attack

Random thoughts while wondering whatever happened to the Brat Pack:

Summer means a slew of things to different people, but at the Reagan household, it means it's time once again for the Shark Attack.

The Shark, as faithful readers will recall, is my pet name for my boy Jeremy. I nicknamed him the Shark because, just like his namesake, Jeremy is forever in motion, searching for something to do.

My boy the Shark is I suppose, like almost every other 8-year-old on the planet, but I'm sure I will be forgiven for thinking him somewhat unique. After all, there may be tons of 8-year-olds, but we've got this 8-year-old.

Not having any experience in this fatherhood thing until a couple of years ago, I've made more than enough mistakes as far as the Shark goes. I have screamed, sulked and pulled countless bone-headed stunts because of some of his actions, but he hasn't held a grudge, so I guess I'm doing OK.

Anyway, every summer his mother and I play host to this pre-teen force of nature and, without fail, he provides us with more than a fair share of amusement, wonder, aggravation, love and confusion — not necessarily in that order.

Like I said — just like any other 8-year-old. Jeremy never fails to expand my horizons, and this year has been no different. His vehicle this year has been Walt Disney movies.

In the few short days since he arrived, I have watched "101 Dalmatians" more times than I can remember, plus I'm starting to hear the song "Cruella DeVille" in my sleep. Nothing personal against the Disney folks, but I hope to all that's holy that nobody ever has the bright idea to make a sequel to the movie.

I have suffered enough. I really shouldn't gripe though; Jeremy's fascination with Disney movies gave me the opportunity to see "Beauty and the Beast." To those who, like a certain city editor, thought Disney movies were strictly kid stuff, I highly recommend the film. It's a gem.

Another movie favorite of Jeremy's is anything starring John Wayne. I thought that would be OK, but you can't believe how many bad movies the Duke starred in. I'm talking about the old black-and-white oaters that Wayne made back in the '30s before he really made it big.

Watch a few of them sometime. They'll make you wonder how in the world he ever became a star. I don't want to give you the impression that the Shark has turned into a tiny couch potato. On the contrary, Jeremy still is blessed with a seeming over-abundance of energy. Fortunately, his favorite activity is riding his bicycle, which I can safely supervise from the shade of the front porch.

All in all, I think it's safe to say that our summer will be a full one, with plenty of material for future columns.

I think I'll save the trip to Six Flags for that book I've always wanted to write.

The bashing season is now

The buzzword for this year seems to be "bashing." People don't attack other people any more — they bash them.

The other day I received a call from a woman physician accusing me of bashing doctors because I made fun of those who owned their own labs. Not long before that I heard from a spokesperson with an automobile company who wanted to know why I bashed American cars instead of German ones. I replied that I had bashed German cars until I found out that Pat Buchanan drove a Mercedes Benz.

No one knows when serious bashing in America started, although it's generally agreed that the first victims were mothers.

In the '70s and '80s stand-up comedians started to bash their mothers, and this brought tremendous laughs from the audience. The tragedians realized that there was gold in those hills, and they started telling mother-bashing jokes as well.

Once bashing became popular, anti-bashing organizations sprung up to fight them — such as the Mothers Anti-Defamation League, NOW, The Polish American Society and, recently, the Organization to Eradicate Japanese Sumo-

Art Buchwald

Bashing in America. While bashing is as American as apple pie, it reached new heights during this political year. Every candidate has a bash consultant on the payroll whose sole job it is to plant damaging stories about his opponents.

Gov. Bill Clinton has had the worst of it. From the moment he gets up in the morning to the time he goes to bed, professional hit men are at work throwing eggs at him. He is not only getting it from George Bush's bashers but Jerry Brown's as well.

Clinton's mistake in the past was to deny all the charges. He did this so much that he lost his voice, but the opposition's mistake was to lacerate the governor early in the campaign so by now the country has become accustomed to the attacks and the voters want to go on to other issues.

While Clinton was being knocked about, his people kept saying to the press, "Why don't you bash Bush as much as you bash our boy?"

The press corps, which listens to everybody, started writing negative stories about Bush. This infuriated the President who had had a free ride until the recession.

The White House responded by bashing members of the media. The reporters didn't mind because if they are not being bashed by somebody they feel as if they're not doing their job.

Unless something untoward happens — such as Gov. Mario Cuomo descending with wings from the heavens on a flying white horse — the presidential candidates will be George Bush and Bill Clinton. Dan Quayle will probably be the vice presidential candidate on the Republican ticket.

Since all the bashing material on Clinton, Bush and Quayle has been used up by now, the political bashers will have no one to hit over the head except the independent candidate. But I'm ready for him. If you can't bash a Texas billionaire, who can you beat up on?

Bulls ride Jordan to 1-0 lead

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan's shots reached the basket so quickly, they didn't seem to have enough air time to qualify for 3 points apiece.

Larry Bird rainbows they weren't. Nor were they the high-arching one-handed pushes popularized by Magic Johnson and Michael Adams.

They were line drives, like arrows shot from a bow. Six of them. And they pierced the hearts of the Portland Trail Blazers as surely as they pierced the middle of Chicago Stadium's nets Wednesday in the Bulls' 122-89 victory in Game 1 of the NBA Finals.

Jordan scored 18 of his Finals-record 35 first-half points on 3-pointers. He finished with 39 points and 11 assists and gave Chicago the edge going into Game 2 here Friday night.

"You've got to give the guy credit," said Clyde Drexler, the Portland All-Star who was supposed to be Jordan's near-equal but who was no match for his Airness this night. "We left him open for the 3s and he buried them."

And so Michael Jordan has done the impossible, finding yet another way to bury an opponent. This time, with what both Drexler and Chicago coach Phil Jackson called a "barrage" of ballistic 3-pointers. Jordan claimed that he was simply operating "within the framework of our offense."

But there's no way that offense calls for Jordan to shoot from downtown Chicago. Jordan is a career 28 percent 3-point shooter and has averaged only 1.2 attempts per game. In his first 16 games of this postseason, he was 5 for 16 from long range.

Perhaps lack of practice explains why he launches 3s with the same flat trajectory as his 10-foot fadeaway jumpers. And why Portland was so unprepared for Wednesday's 6-for-10 outburst.

"Those are the shots we want Michael to take," said Drexler, who scored only 16 points on 5-for-14 shooting in his one-on-one duel with Jordan. "Those shots will be available to him in Game 2. And in Games 3, 4 and 5."

Jordan will take them if the situation is the same as it was Wednesday, when his six 3-pointers set a one-half Finals record and tied the single-game mark.

"My shot was falling from everywhere," he said, "so I ran to the 3-point line and let them go." Nice and flat. Just over the rim. Smack into the net. Rip City, as they say in Portland.

Actually, the game was close for a while. Portland made its first seven shots and 11 of its first 14 to take a 25-17 lead. Jordan had 8 points on 3-for-7 shooting and had missed two of his three 3-point attempts.

Jordan scored the Bulls' next 10 points on two 3-point liners and two drives around Drexler to give his team momentum.

Jackson rested Jordan at the start of the second quarter. When Jordan returned 6:43 before halftime, Chicago led 45-44.

Then... "We couldn't stop him," Portland's Danny Ainge said, simply.

Jordan from 15 feet. Jordan for 3. Jordan steal and 15-footer. Jordan from 15. Jordan for 3. Jordan with an emphatic, two-handed rebound jam. Jordan from 3 again.

Meanwhile, Portland was handling the ball like it was a live grenade, committing four turnovers late in the first half and shooting two airballs.

It was 66-51 at halftime. "They tried to get back in the game and they started to force shots," Jordan said. "That's what teams do when they fall behind."

Unbelievably, it got worse for the Trail Blazers, even though Jordan went from shooter to dishmaster. He took only six second-half shots, making two, but set up seven baskets — including four in the first 3½ minutes of the half. The Bulls led 104-68 after three, the biggest margin ever at that stage of a championship round game.

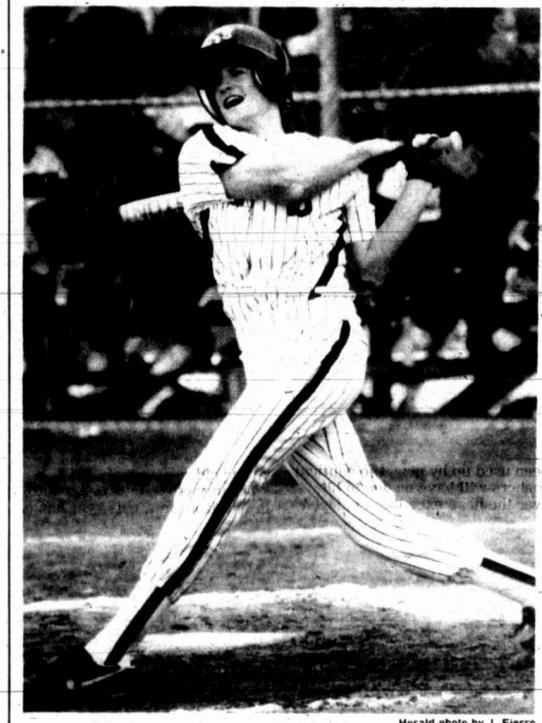

The Trail Blazers are comforted by the fact that even their second-worst playoff defeat ever still counts as only one loss.

Boston beat Los Angeles 148-114 in Game 1 of the 1985 Finals, one of the largest victory margins ever, but the Lakers rebounded to win the series. Why, just last season, the Bulls lost Game 1 of the Finals before routing the Lakers in four straight for the title.

"It's hard to bounce back from a loss like this," Portland's Terry Porter said. "We just have to throw this one out and say, 'The heck with it.'"

The Chicago Bulls' Michael Jordan shoots over the Portland Trail Blazers' Clyde Drexler in game 1 of the NBA Finals in Chicago Wednesday. Jordan had 35 points in the first half as the Bulls beat the Trail Blazers 122-89.

Steers at bat tonight

Big Spring left fielder Todd Parrish takes a swing in a game at Steer Park earlier this season. The Steers take on Lamesa tonight at 6 at Midland's Angel Stadium in the Class 4A Region I championship.

PARIS (AP) — Petr Korda, in the best Grand Slam showing of his career, reached the semifinals of the French Open with a 6-4, 6-7 (7-3), 6-2, 6-4 victory over Russia's Andrei Cherkasov today.

The seventh-seeded Czechoslovak's opponent will be crowd favorite Henri Leconte of France, who rallied from two sets down to win his quarterfinal Wednesday against Nicklas Kulti of Sweden.

In the other semifinal Friday, defending champion Jim Courier faces No. 11 seed Andre Agassi in a rematch of last year's all-American final.

Korda, who never before had gotten past the third round of a Grand Slam, split the first two sets with Cherkasov late Wednesday before darkness forced suspension of play.

Today's schedule also included the women's semifinals, a repeat of last year's pairings.

Two-time defending champion and top seed Monica Seles faced No. 3 seed Gabriela Sabatini. Second-seeded Steffi Graf, the champion here in 1987 and 1988, faced fourth-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

Leconte, who underwent back surgery last year and is ranked 200th in the world, has been buoyed throughout the tournament by euphoric, foot-stamping crowds. Center court literally shook Wednesday as he rallied from behind to beat Kulti 6-7 (10-8), 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3.

If he reaches the final, his American opponent will have to contend with partisan bedlam similar to that which propelled Leconte and Guy Forget to a stunning upset of the United States in the Davis Cup final last year in Lyon.

But Agassi, after beating No. 3 seed Pete Sampras in straight sets, predicted the winner of his match with Courier will capture the title.

"If I had to bet, I'd certainly bet on that," he said. "I think the final is the next round."

Courier beat Agassi in five sets in last year's championship match. Overall, the two have split eight matches, but Courier has won two out of three at Stade Roland Garros.

Agassi is still without a Grand Slam title, and was asked if it troubled him that other young Americans — Courier, Sampras and Michael Chang — had won Grand Slam crowns.

"It's a bit ironic that I can stay in the top three or four in the world, and have a few shots at it and then not do it, and they come in and just do it," said Agassi, who has reached the semifinals in seven of his 14 Grand Slam tournament appearances.

Agassi denied he sought revenge for last year's loss in the final, but made it clear he craves the title.

"It's a tournament I've wanted to win for three years," he said. "It doesn't matter if I'm playing Jim Courier... it doesn't matter to me if I'm playing Bjorn Borg out there."

Courier won his 21st straight match Wednesday, ousting Goran Ivanisevic in four sets. The eighth-seeded Croatian ventured a prediction for the Courier-Agassi showdown.

"It's going to be an interesting match. They are going to hit like crazy," Ivanisevic said. "I think Courier, for me, has a little bit more chance than Agassi."

Agassi said he respected Courier's game, yet he described himself as more gifted.

"I rely more on my ability than Courier does," Agassi said. "I think he relies on fighting it out, because I don't think he has a lot of natural ability to fall back on."

"I really can't be hitting the ball much better. He will prove to me that he is unbeatable if he beats me."

Rangers win in 13

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — It was hard to tell the heroes from the goats, but the ending was strange to say the least.

New York's Shawn Hillegas made an errant pickoff throw after Jeff Huson put Texas in position to win through his own failure, and the Rangers beat the Yankees 4-3 in 13 innings Wednesday night.

Hillegas (0-2) was attempting to pick pinch-runner John Cangelosi off third base with none out, but fired the ball wide of third baseman Charlie Hayes. Cangelosi came home with the run that ended a 4-hour, 31-minute game, giving the Rangers their 17th victory in the last 19 games against the Yankees.

"He (Cangelosi) was stunned," Hillegas said. "I hesitated but I still had time to get him. It was a set play. I took the order from my manager and it didn't work out."

It was a chance to be sure, New York manager Buck Showalter said.

"I went out to the mound to set up the play," Showalter said. "With a runner on third and nobody out, you have to roll the dice. He's out if he (Hillegas) makes the throw and Charlie (Hayes) is there."

"The way you usually set it up is to fake to third and throw to first. You wouldn't do it with two outs but if the throw's on the money and the guy is there, he's definitely out." Hayes refused to comment about the play.

Kevin Reimer opened the inning with a single. Huson was unsuccessful in trying to sacrifice before moving Cangelosi to third on a hit-and-run single. Hillegas faked to third, faked to first and then wheeled and double-clutched before throwing the ball away.

Huson was relieved over the outcome. "After I fouled the two off, I was just hoping to get a base hit," he said. "I knew if I at least put the ball into play, we'd have a chance. I got a little jumpy on the bunts and then I had to settle down."

Kenny Rogers (1-2) pitched 1 2-3 innings of perfect relief.

The Rangers' Kevin Brown failed to become the first nine-game winner in the majors. Brown, 8-3 this season and 8-1 lifetime against New York with six straight victories, left after eight innings with the game tied 3-3.

Brown, trying for his fourth straight win and third consecutive complete game, gave up seven hits, struck out five and walked two.

"This is about as bad as I pitched," he said. "You learn to have good games and bad games. This was one I felt I little control. Sure, I was angry at myself but I yelled at myself in the dugout and then I went back out there."

The Rangers, who got consecutive homers from Dean Palmer and Julio Franco in the fifth, tied the game in the sixth when rookie Russ McGinnis scored from third on Dickie Thon's hit off the glove of reliever John Habyan. He walked McGinnis to start the inning allowed Kevin Reimer's double.

After Habyan hit Palmer to load the bases, he struck out Franco and got Ruben Sierra to ground out to first.

Greg Cadaret allowed two runs on seven hits, struck out four and walked two in five innings for the Yankees.

New York took a 3-0 lead in the fifth after Brown hit Mike Gallego and Andy Stankiewicz to start the inning. After Don Mattingly erased Stankiewicz with a grounder that moved Gallego to third, Danny Tartabull doubled in Gallego.

Mattingly scored on Mel Hall's grounder that sent Tartabull to third. He scored on a single by Kevin Maas.

After Palmer hit his 10th homer, Franco, brought off the disabled list on Monday, followed with his first.

Notes: Rangers rookie catcher Russ McGinnis singled in the fourth for his first major league hit. McGinnis became the second Ranger catcher injured in as many nights when he left the game in the seventh with a bruised right shoulder after being struck by a foul tip. Team trainers do not consider the injury to be serious. Geno Petralli replaced McGinnis. Ivan Rodriguez was lost to the Rangers for four to five days when he suffered a slightly broken left thumb Tuesday night. Back-to-back homers by Dean Palmer and Julio Franco in the fifth marked the second time this year that the Rangers accomplished the feat. Rafael Palmeiro and Ruben Sierra had back-to-back homers on May 13 against Baltimore. Franco's homer was his first since last Oct. 2 against Seattle. Texas is 14-5 in one-run games and 6-1 in extra-inning contests.

Astros defeat Expos, 5-3

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thanks to a long first inning, a long home run by Jeff Bagwell and a long, effective performance by the Houston bullpen, Astros pitcher Pete Harnisch's long winless streak is over.
 The Astros batted around in a four-run first inning, got a 408-foot home run from Bagwell in the fifth and four scoreless innings from relievers Joe Boever and Doug Jones in beating the Montreal Expos 5-3 Wednesday night, earning Harnisch his first victory since May 1.

Harnisch, winless in six starts, was thrilled to end his drought on a night when he admittedly wasn't very good.
 "I never found my rhythm tonight," he said. "I was never in control. I've been struggling all year, but tonight we score four in the first inning and that salvaged it."
 "I can't say enough about the bullpen. They didn't even make me squirm about winning this one. DJ (Doug Jones) had great stuff again. As ugly as I pitched, they bailed me out."

Harnisch (3-5) allowed three runs and five hits while walking four and striking out four in his five innings. Boever came on and threw three scoreless innings, then Jones pitched a perfect ninth for his 13th save in 16 chances.
 In other games, Cincinnati outscored St. Louis 8-7, Pittsburgh beat Los Angeles 6-5, Philadelphia beat Atlanta 4-1, and San Diego topped Chicago 5-1.

Houston manager Art Howe said Harnisch deserved the easy victory.
 "Pete has probably pitched three or four games better than this one, and lost," Howe said. "He finally got a 'W,' but he struggled the whole time. His command wasn't there, but he still got us out of there with the lead."

Montreal got on the board quickly when Moises Alou hit his second major league homer — both against the Astros — in the first inning. But Expos starter Ken Hill (4-3) had more trouble than that in his first inning of work.
Reds 8, Cardinals 7
 Cincinnati overcame a 6-2 deficit with four runs in the sixth and two more in the seventh to win for the eighth time in its last nine games. St. Louis lost its third straight and sixth in seven outings.

Barry Larkin and Chris Sabo started the four-run sixth with consecutive home runs off Donovan Osborne, and Paul O'Neill and Reggie Sanders added run-scoring hits.
 Glenn Braggs, 7 for 43 going into the game, hit his second double to score Sabo with the go-ahead run in the seventh, and pinch-hitter Bip Roberts singled for an insurance run.

Scott Ruskin (2-1) pitched one perfect inning for the Reds, and Norm Charlton got the last two outs for his 12th save in 15 chances. Kris Carpenter (2-2) took the loss.

Pirates 6, Dodgers 5
 Jeff King drove in three runs with two singles and Pittsburgh withstood another pinch-hit home run by Los Angeles to win its fourth in six games.

King rapped an RBI single in the first and a two-run hit in the third to erase a 2-1 Dodgers lead, and Steve Buechele, Mike LaValliere and Cecil Espy added RBIs to make it 6-2.

Dave Anderson followed a walk to Dave Hansen with the Dodgers' fourth pinch-hit homer in six games against the Pirates this season, and Los Angeles scored once in the ninth on a throwing error before Stan Belinda retired the side for his seventh save, giving Jerry Don Gleaton (1-0) his first NL victory.

Pirates pitchers have now allowed six pinch-hit homers this season. Ramon Martinez (3-2) allowed five hits and three earned runs in just three innings, his shortest start since opening day.
Phillies 4, Braves 1
 Curt Schilling pitched seven shutout innings and Darren Daulton homered for his first hit in 20 at-bats against John Smoltz (5-5) as Philadelphia ended Atlanta's five-game winning streak.

Schilling (4-3), making only his fourth start in 20 appearances, struck out six and walked one. Mitch Williams pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

Daulton's fifth homer capped a three-run first inning and Kim Batiste singled home the Phillies' other run. Ron Gant homered off Barry Jones in the eighth inning for the Braves' lone run.

Padres 5, Cubs 1
 Bruce Hurst threw a six-hitter for his first career victory over Chicago and San Diego took advantage of sloppy play by the Cubs to salvage the final game of a three-game series.
 Hurst (5-4) struck out seven and didn't walk a batter for the second consecutive start in winning for the fourth time in his last five games. He has three complete games and a 1.93 ERA in 42 innings over that stretch.

Frank Castillo (3-5) gave up five runs and six hits in 6 1-3 innings, struck out five, walked five and threw two of the Cubs' four wild pitches.
 Gary Sheffield singled twice and doubled for three of the Padres' seven hits, while San Diego got one run on a wild pitch and another on a passed ball and error — by Joe Girardi.
 Kurt Stillwell and Tony Fernandez had RBI hits for the Padres, and Ryne Sandberg accounted for the Cubs' only run with a first-inning sacrifice fly.

Puckett slams Jays

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some nights ... make that weeks ... no, months ... there is just no stopping Kirby Puckett. Juan Guzman realizes that, and doesn't mind being less than perfect because of one of the greats of the game.

"I can't win them all," Guzman said after Puckett's second grand slam in six days helped the Minnesota Twins hand the Toronto right-hander his first loss this season, 11-3 Wednesday night. "After the grand slam, I said, 'Well, today's not my day. I think I'm going to lose this one.'"

Puckett has been hot for more than a week. Puckett, the American League player of the month for May, is hitting .432 with six home runs, 23 runs scored and 27 RBIs in his last 22 games.

Athletics 7, Red Sox 6
 Jose Canseco homered twice, Mark McGwire added his major league-leading 20th and Terry Steinbach broke a sixth-inning tie with a two-run single as Oakland swept visiting Boston in three games.

Canseco hit a two-run homer in the first off John Dopsos and added a solo shot in the third, his 12th. McGwire also homered in the third.

Dopsos then threw behind Jamie Quirk, who charged the mound, leading to both being ejected. Steinbach, who got his winning hit off Mike Gardiner (3-4), replaced Quirk. Jeff Parrett (5-0) won.

Dennis Eckersley got his 20th save in 20 chances and his 24th in a row to stand one short of Tom Henke's major league record for consecutive saves.

Angels 4, Orioles 3
 Pinch-hitter Lee Stevens' first RBI this season at home — an infield grounder in the 10th inning — capped a comeback for run-starved California.

The Angels, scoring more than three runs for the only time on their nine-game homestand, tied it in the seventh on Gary DiSarcina's first big-league homer, a two-run shot. He also made a run-saving play at shortstop.

California loaded the bases in the 10th against Alan Mills (2-1). Stevens, who had gone 59 at-bats at Anaheim Stadium without an RBI, batted for Luis Sojo and hit a slow roller up the first-base line. Jose Gonzalez beat the throw home from charging first baseman David Segui to win for Scott Bailes (3-0).

Tigers 10, Brewers 4
 Cecil Fielder hit a pair of two-run homers, driving in five runs as visiting Detroit cooled off Milwaukee to end a six-game losing streak.

Fielder, with just one homer since April 23, hit an RBI single in a five-run first and homered in the fourth and the sixth innings, giving him 10 this season.

Kevin Ritz (1-1) worked 5 1-3 innings for his first victory in 30 appearances since Sept. 5, 1989. Bill Wegman (5-5) gave up four unearned runs in the top of the first. Robin Yount hit his fourth homer for Milwaukee, which had won five of six.

Indians 8, Mariners 3
 Sandy Alomar hit his first career grand slam to cap a seven-run fourth inning, giving Cleveland its seventh victory in eight games.

Some donations may be goodbye gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political action committees are finding to their dismay that much of the money they thought they were investing in a friendly 1993 Congress has gone to lawmakers who won't even be in the race for it.

Many incumbents have been defeated in primary battles. But even more maddening for the special interest groups is a record number of them who took their contributions and since decided to retire.

And some PACs want their money back, rather than leaving it to the politicians to reassign it. Among the outgoing incumbents are at least 30 House members who legally could put it in their own pockets, though most say they won't do that.

"We are a membership organization of more than 60,000 members," said Nathaniel Lack, political director of the pro-Israel National PAC. "Many are retired and contributed $5 or $10. The last thing they want is their money thrown down the drain."

Others PACs say they won't seek refunds — that their money was given without conditions. Others still are debating what their position should be. After all, the retiring incumbents still will be casting votes on a flock of key issues yet this year, and nobody is eager to offend them on the money issue.

"If we cut a check today and someone dropped out tomorrow, I expect we might consider developing a (refund request) policy," said Dan Nadash, political director of the National Association of Realtors. "With record retirements this year I can see a situation where that might occur."

The National Rifle Association's Political Victory Fund won't ask for refunds. "When we give a financial contribution it doesn't have any strings to it," said fund director Terri O'Grady.

Several of the 43 House members and seven senators who voluntarily announced retirements have made the decision easy. They've already written to contributors offering refunds or other choices, such as moving the money to a state political party.

Meanwhile, Rep. George Gekas, R-Pa., has proposed a plan to make sure that no House member leaving office this year can convert any leftover campaign money to personal use.

All remaining contributions for this year's retirees would go to the U.S. Treasury under Gekas' proposal. Without the legislation, at least 30 departing House members — those elected before Jan. 8, 1980 — would be eligible to use the leftover money to line their wallets.

Gekas has been unable to even get a hearing on his proposal from the House Administration Committee. "The silence is deafening," said his spokesman, Brian Sansoni. Retiring senators are not eligible to convert campaign cash to personal use.

Congress voted in 1979 to prohibit future House members from pocketing excess campaign money, but the lawmakers then serving exempted themselves. A 1989 law ended that benefit for those veterans after this year.

Federal law requires contributors to specify whether they're donating to a primary or general election. A member of Congress who retires or is defeated during the primary season must, under federal law, return any contributions that were earmarked for the general election.

A political action committee can give a maximum of $5,000 per candidate for the primary and another $5,000 for the general election.

Climbers underestimate McKinley

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Alaskans call it Denali, Athabaskan for "The Great One." Climbers call it big and dangerous, and this year Mount McKinley — North America's tallest peak — has proved deadlier than in any year on record.

Eleven climbers — including four Canadians who perished Sunday after falling more than 3,000 feet — have died on the 20,320-foot peak so far this year.

Since 1932, 75 people have died on McKinley, 34 of them since 1982. Most die in avalanches; some disappear into deep crevasses; others freeze to death.

Ten of this year's fatalities resulted from falls. One climber succumbed to acute high-altitude sickness.

"The mountain is just devouring people, eating them up," said Dr. Peter Hackett, a high-altitude specialist, mountain climber and emergency room physician in Anchorage who treats many climbers brought down off the mountain.

Why do so many climbers die on Mount McKinley?

"It's a true polar mountain, colder than anywhere else other than Antarctica, colder than Everest in the Himalayas," Hackett said.

"I think it's been a mixture of bad weather in some instances, just bad luck in others, and certainly bad judgment in some cases," said John Quinley, National Park Service spokesman in Anchorage.

Residents near McKinley expressed shock at the high number of deaths this year.

"It's just been a tragic year. They are our boys. It's real personal," said Lynn Terstegge, co-owner of the Talkeetna Roadhouse. The roadhouse is where the Canadians stayed before they attempted the summit.

Talkeetna, about 30 miles southeast of the mountain, is used by most climbers as a jumping-off point.

Snowstorms on McKinley can dump shoulder-deep snow in a few hours. Winds of 50 mph to 60 mph are routine at 14,000 feet, and higher up they gust to 200 mph. Whole tents are carried away.

This is a 1978 file photo of 20,320-foot Mt. McKinley, the tallest mountain in North America, which so far this year has claimed the lives of 11 climbers.

"It's a wind chill that is off the chart," Hackett said. He has spent most of the past 10 summers at a camp at 14,000 feet studying the effects of the altitude on climbers. He has reached McKinley's summit seven times.

Climbers underestimate the mountain because of the reputed technical ease of reaching its summit, he said. Denali's latitude (62 degrees north), its altitude and resulting lack of oxygen, and the arctic weather atop the mountain at all times of the year make climbing McKinley surprisingly difficult, he said.

Scaling McKinley is "a survival experience," he said. The climbers who did not survive this year mostly were foreigners, including three Koreans, two Italians and one Swiss climber. Three other Koreans were saved

May 18 in a daring helicopter rescue.

Foreign climbers are the ones most at risk because they are least familiar with the mountain's weather and unpredictability, Hackett said. He added, "It's the trip of a lifetime, they are summit-oriented and tend to stick their necks out more often."

About a thousand mountaineers a year attempt to scale McKinley, and about 60 percent succeed. Forty-three percent last year were foreigners, including 51 Germans, 50 Koreans, 47 Britons, 29 Austrians, 29 Japanese, 25 Canadians and smaller numbers from 20 other nations.

Stephen Jones, 25, of London, said Tuesday that climbers try their hand at McKinley because of its fame. But he said many come ill-prepared, with limited experience on smaller peaks in Colorado or on Washington's Mount Rainier.

"It's completely different up here and people have got to realize that," he said.

Because there often are many climbers on the mountain during the May-to-July peak climbing season, some believe that if they run into trouble they will be helped, he said. But because of the altitude and weather, that's often not the case.

The Park Service, which maintains rangers on the mountain and a $200,000-per-year rescue helicopter on standby at Talkeetna, said it will try this year to better educate foreign climbers, particularly Koreans, about the dangers of scaling McKinley.

Unlike most foreign teams on the mountain, Korean climbing parties often have no one who speaks English, and thus they don't easily get advice from other climbers on the mountain, Quinley said.

Nevertheless, the Park Service has no plans to change its "open-access-to-all-comers" policy for McKinley climbers, Quinley said.

"Access to the mountain is at your own risk and pleasure," he said. "That is for the most part a policy that stretches across the National Park system."

Mad Magazine publisher dies Wednesday at age 70

NEW YORK (AP) — William M. Gaines, whose Mad magazine poked fun at everyone and everything and gave America the gap-toothed "What, me worry?" kid, Alfred E. Neuman, has died at 70.

Gaines, who died Wednesday at his home of undisclosed causes, founded Mad in 1955 and was its sole publisher, running it with the sort of merriment celebrated in its pages.

A 240-pound, 6-foot figure with Santa Claus-like hair and beard, he took his employees on yearly trips all over the world, once leading a group of 20 to Haiti to persuade the only subscriber there not to cancel.

Mad did elaborate sendups of hit movies and satirized everything from celebrities to suburbia — in words, comics and song.

A spoof of the Boy Scouts proposed a merit badge for divorce survival; a satire of Reader's Digest, called "Reader's Disgust," featured articles such as "The Most Unforgettable Character I've Ever Met" by "Your Baby."

Freckle-faced Alfred E. Neuman nearly always appeared on the cover. Mad promoted him as a presidential candidate in every election since 1956. Gaines once managed to leave an "Alfred E. Neuman for President" poster atop the Leaning Tower of Pisa.

WILLIAM M. GAINES

Gaines sold Mad in 1961 to Premiere Industries. After a series of mergers and acquisitions, Mad wound up the property of Time Warner Inc. But the corporate owners always let Gaines do as he pleased.

Gaines is survived by his wife, Annie, and three children. No funeral was planned.

British actor Robert Morley, 84, dies of stroke

LONDON (AP) — Robert Morley, a witty heavyweight of stage and screen, died Wednesday after suffering a stroke over the weekend. He was 84.

One of the actor's sons, Sheridan Morley, a theater critic, journalist and biographer, said his father died peacefully at a hospital in Reading, west of London.

"He... suffered a severe stroke at home on Sunday afternoon," Sheridan Morley said in a statement.

He said the actor's wife, Joan, son Wilton, daughter-in-law Margaret and grandchildren were at his bedside.

Recognizable for his shaggy eyebrows and multiple chins, Morley made a specialty of playing bombastic but often self-mocking characters. "I am, you know, the most colossal snob," he once said.

In his later years, the portly character actor and playwright used his primary English accent to encourage Americans to fly to London on British Airways.

He was also insouciant about the prospect of death.

"You always look at a script to see if you are being written out too soon. You look at the last few pages to see if you are there at the end," he said in an interview with London's Daily Mail two years ago.

"It's the same with life. You want to make sure you are there at the end and have the last line."

He was born in Semley in Wiltshire, the son of Maj. Robert W. and Gertrude Morley. Although Morley senior was extravagant and the family frequently faced financial crises, Robert had a typical Edwardian upbringing. He went to Wellington college, which he claimed to have hated.

His father wanted him to enter the diplomatic service — "because it would look good in Who's Who," Morley once said — but he rebelled and studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art.

"Showing off has been my profession. I learned all about acting in about three months selling vacuum cleaners door to door. I still tell people that is the best way to become an actor," he said.

His first big success on stage was in the title role of "Oscar Wilde," which he reprised in New York in 1938.

IHM plans reopening of parochial school

By MARTHA E. FLORES
Staff Writer

Immaculate Heart of Mary Church congregation has formed a committee to investigate the possibilities of reopening IHM School. The school originally closed in 1984 after 23 years in operation.

Established about six weeks ago, the committee consists of seven people with Ruth Salazar as an advisor at the Rev. Michael Dwyer's request. Committee members are as follows: Richard Light, Mark Williams, Danette Landin, Joe Landin, Francis McKiski, Mary Jo Malone and David King.

To begin the assessment, committee members have visited the surrounding area private parochial schools. They have also distributed a survey to Sacred Heart Church, 508 N. Aylford St. and St. Thomas Catholic church, 605 N. Main St., to assess their congregations' interest.

During the committee's visit to Sacred Heart School in San Angelo, the principal of the school spoke to committee members about school funding and overhead.

"I recommend to any parochial school starting out to start small with pre-kindergarten and kindergarten classes," said Leslie Myrand, Sacred Heart principal. "The school planners must also define the type of parents and parish support."

The San Angelo school has 214 students registered for the 1992

'One thing in our favor is that parents are looking for parochial quality education. They are aware that the numbers (of religious orders) are getting smaller and lay people are teaching more in the schools. The transition is very positive.'

fall semester. A major portion of the school's funding comes from the two local parishes, Myrand said. The school also has a small endowment which was established two years ago, she said.

With Myrand's recommendations, the IHM committee is concentrating on reopening the school with pre-kindergarten and a day care center, committee advisor Ruth Salazar said.

"We are hoping to reopen with pre-kindergarten through third grade classes, but we may not be able to do that," she said. "We are hoping to open in September (1992) but we may have to wait another year."

The school will be funded primarily through tuition and parish support, she said.

The survey distributed by the committee asks questions concerning the interest of parents, the financial burden that could be taken by the parents, interest in uniforms and interest in having a religious order teaching at the school.

Surveys are due back June 15. The committee will then meet to discuss the responses and make conclusions based on the community interest, Salazar said. Lay people may be the dominant teaching force at IHM school without the presence of a religious teaching order.

"It is very difficult to get nuns because of the decreasing numbers," committee member King said.

Myrand said that a trend is forming in parochial schools where lay people are more visible and take on more responsibility.

"Things are changing," she said. "Lay people are taking charge because sisters and priests are not going to be there in the numbers they once were."

"One thing in our favor is that parents are looking for parochial quality education. They are aware that the numbers (of religious orders) are getting smaller and lay people are teaching more in the schools. The transition is very positive."

This will be the first year Sacred Heart will not have a member of a religious order on the teaching staff, she said.

When IHM School opened in 1961, the Sisters of Mary of the Immaculate Conception order in Patterson, N.J. operated the school. The sisters left in 1976. Between 1976-1980, the school administration consisted of lay people. David King (who is on the committee to reopen the school), Virginia Ross and Adrian Saldivar were principals of the school at that time. In 1981, Sister Lucy Keene of the Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word of Houston returned the school's administration to an order. Keene was followed by Sister Kavina Keating of the Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word in 1983 until the school closed in 1984.

The question of having or not having a religious order to operate the school is one of many questions the committee is working on answering.

"We are very much in the tentative stages at this time," Salazar said.

"A question that has been raised by at least one congregation member is that of the area's economic stability and ability to maintain a parochial school. "I am not sure the city's economic base is strong enough to have the school," said Bill Sneed, IHM church member. "If we could get it going, it would be fantastic."

Rev. Michael Pfeifer OMI, bishop of the San Angelo diocese that encompasses the local parishes, says before a Catholic school is open it must meet certain conditions set by the bishop's office and have his approval.

"To be recognized as a Catholic school of the diocese we must have a guarantee of a certain number of students, parents must take on long-term responsibilities and qualified teachers must be present," Pfeifer said. "I definitely believe in Catholic school education, but it can be a great struggle if the support is not there."

The number of educational grants are very limited for private parochial elementary schools, he said. Schools do receive assistance through food programs, but the brunt of the responsibility falls at the feet of parents and church members.

"If people are serious in reopening the school, they must be prepared to give ongoing support," Pfeifer said.

Establishing an endowment is a long-term plan that decreases the financial burden on the parents, but it must be of considerable size in order for the interest be enough to assist with the finances of the school, he said.

Pfeifer added that studies done outside the church conclude that people are recognizing the great value of parochial schools.

For more information on the reopening of IHM school contact Ruth Salazar at 267-4124.

Thousands of youth are taking to chess

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — David Peterson is 12 years old, a fifth grader from Tempe, Ariz. He practices basketball for an hour each day and has a talent for football. And one more thing. He plays chess — very, very well.

He has won the National Chess Championship for youngsters three of the past four years. Every day, he devotes three hours to chess, going through game openings on a computer. His rating is around 2,200 — master level.

"The only thing that separates him from the average kid down the block is he plays chess," says his father, Richard.

Of course, the average kid down the block may be playing chess, too. The seminal event in American chess — that moment in 1972 when Brooklynite Bobby Fischer dethroned Soviet chess champion Boris Spassky — planted the seeds of a chess boom in 1992. Many of the parents of today's young players were inspired by Fischer's exploits.

The number of youngsters in the game has bloated 20-fold, to maybe 100,000. They play at school, in clubs and on the fall-through-spring scholastic chess circuit that culminates in the "nationals" in April and May. The Chess Federation's membership is now 63,000; one-third are under 21. America has perhaps the strongest cadre of pre-teen chess players in the world.

The seeds have sprouted in unison: — Computers have made chess more accessible to the video generation.

— There has been a proliferation of chess magazines and books, including a 1988 spellbinder, "Searching for Bobby Fischer," in which Fred Waitzkin traced the fortunes of a prodigy, his son Josh.

— Since 1986, the American Chess Foundation has invested as much as $1 million in chess education.

The foundation's Chess in the Schools program, directed at inner cities, is helping to diversify what was once a white male domain. The Raging Rooks, a black team from Harlem, tied for first at the junior high nationals in 1991. And girls are on the verge of a breakthrough in several divisions.

With showcase chess centers opening later this year in New York and Washington, and Garry Kasparov set to defend his world title in Los Angeles in 1993, the chess scene is still on the upswing.

In Knoxville, the three-day championship at the University of Tennessee's Thompson-Boling basketball arena drew a record turnout for any national — 1,201 players from kindergarten through sixth grade.

During each of the seven, pressure-cooker rounds, the only sound at 68 rows of tables checkered with green-and-white chessmats was the clicking of time clocks, like a symphony of crickets.

In-between, when they're not pressed into taking naps, kids as young as 5 worked on openings that reveal the colorful complexity of the game — Pirc's Defense, the Fried Liver Attack, the Ruy Lopez, the Sicilian Dragon.

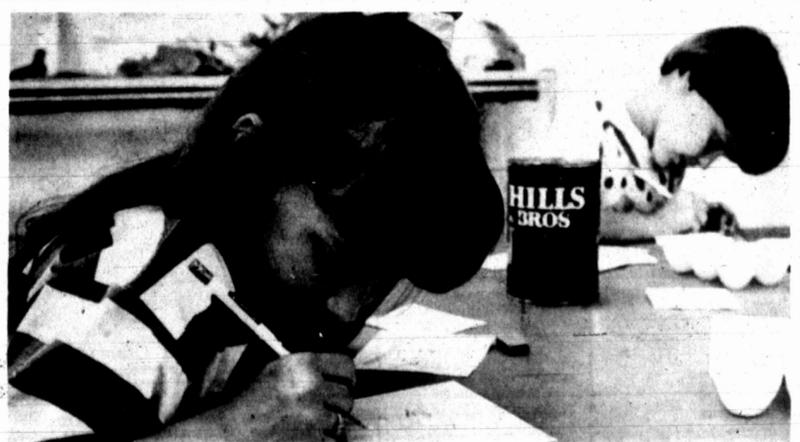

"It's my favorite thing to do — you don't get hurt," said Matthew John, 9, of Memphis, Tenn. "It makes you think," offered Courtney Olson, 7, of Pearisburg, Va. For Aswad London, 6, of New York, the beauty is "you get points, you can't cheat and it's fun."

Richard Peterson reached for the binoculars and leaned forward as David won the elementary championship match. "I made a fake bad move" and opened up a trap that took 10 more moves to play out, David later explained.

Peterson, 40, a financial analyst, stepped into the aisle and punched the air.

They had time for just one bearhug. At the far end of the arena, David's sister, Andrea, 9, was fending off top-seeded Jordy Mont-Reynaud in the final game of the primary section — third grade and under.

Picking State Flowers

The Mini Page state flower chart will help you answer these questions:
What is your state's flower?

I VOTE FOR THE DOGWOOD.

Each state has picked a flower it thinks is special. Most state flowers have been named by state lawmakers.

Kids have also had a say in picking state flowers. The first state flower was suggested by schoolchildren in New York state in 1891.

What flower did they choose?

Mississippi, Rhode Island and Wisconsin also based their choice on a vote by school kids.

Flower Fever

by Lindy Barr
Age 9, Coahoma Elementary

One pretty day in June the second I was walking in my yard and I saw some flowers they were very pretty so I picked them. They smelled so good they gave me flower fever and it also turned me into a flower. I felt awful because I had flower fever. I felt so bad I broke nine roots instead of breaking 1 leg. When I was sick, I smelled good instead of smelling bad. But some strange power changed me back into a human being. I was back into the wonderful day of June.

Stanton/Martin County

Commissioners to vote on interim tax assessor

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The Martin County commissioners on Monday plan to appoint someone to fill the vacant office of county tax assessor-collector.

The vacancy was created by the recent death of Leona Louder, an eight-year Democratic incumbent.

Four written applications for the appointment have been received as of Wednesday, said County Judge Bob Deavenport. The appointee will serve the remainder of Louder's term.

The applicants are: Albert Johnson, a commercial insurance field underwriter; Ronnie Christian, recently retired from Cap Rock Electric; and Kathy Hull and Pam Jameson, tax office officials.

The applicants are: Albert Johnson, a commercial insurance field underwriter; Ronnie Christian, recently retired from Cap Rock Electric; and Kathy Hull and Pam Jameson, tax office officials.

Virginia James, the county Democratic Committee will select a substitute nominee for the Nov. 3 election. Louder, who won the Democratic nomination in March, faced no opposition in the November election. Write-in candidates have until 5 p.m. Sept. 4 to file paperwork for the office with the county judge's office.

The commissioners met in special session Monday and accepted a modified bid on a roller from West Texas Equipment Co.

At their previous meeting, commissioners had decided to buy a used Rex-brand roller from WTEC. The company came back later, however, and offered to sell the county a newer Caterpillar brand roller for the same price, County Judge Bob Deavenport said.

Monday's action authorized the substitution, Deavenport added. The roller will be used by the county for packing caliche.

Synchronized swimmers?

Misty Calhoun, Casey Ireton and Brandie Boswell do a backflip into the pool together as the three were swimming at the Stanton County Club swimming pool Wednesday afternoon. The pool is open from 2-6 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

Man's signs catching on around state

PFLUGERVILLE (AP) — Ron Spell couldn't take the rigid schedule of an accountant's life, so he quit the profession and founded a sign company in 1986.

"It's not a real exciting life, but I had a problem with people telling me when to wake up every morning," Spell said.

Now, however, he may have to hire an accountant of his own to help him handle his trade in distinctive redwood signs, inspired by craftsmen in his native state, Louisiana.

"They're warm and classy. It's more classy to have your logo on redwood than on plastic," he said.

After sandblasting numerous signs for area golf courses, apartment complexes and businesses, Spell entered the "city-limits" business in 1990 with a "Wilkommen" sign he made for Pflugerville.

"I've just found a little niche," said Spell, 35, whose Falcon Signs office is on the outskirts of Pflugerville.

"We liked it because of the distinctive style," said Pflugerville Parks Director Glenn Holzer, who installed a solar collector and lamp on the sign off Farm Road 1825.

That sign caught the attention of Hutto Mayor Jeff Phillips, who lobbied the Hutto Chamber of Commerce to buy two signs featuring the old-west skyline of East Street in Hutto.

"He did a fantastic sign for us," Phillips said. "We've gotten letters from people saying the signs are real nice."

And then Spell heard from Taylor Mayor Don Hill.

"We'd been looking around for signs in a lot of places and we liked what we saw in Hutto," Hill said.

"We think it's great," Hill said of the two "Welcome to Taylor" signs erected last week on the western and northern limits of the city.

Spell estimated he has sold 1,000 redwood signs ranging in price from $75 to $4,500, which he says can last up to 25 years.

Because he's not artistic by nature, Spell relies on a computer to help shape the letters on many projects.
