Herald plans to publish special history of county

The Big Spring Herald will publish a 128-page pictorial history of Howard County this fall and is seeking old photographs from county residents for possible inclusion in the publication.

"We are seeking old photographs from members of the community," said Herald Advertising Manager Guy Huffman. "This will offer members of the community to opportunity to have photographs published that have never before been reproduced."

More than 250 photographs will be included in the book, which will be printed on archival paper and bound in a leatherette cover.

Huffman said a logging and indexing system developed by the book publisher assures the safeguarding of the photographs.

Pre-publication cost is $24.95 for the first 500 copies. After that, the cost will be $34.95.

A limited edition also will be offered — a one-time printing of a deluxe edition will carry a custom bookplate and will be bound in a genuine leather cover.

For more information, contact Huffman at 263-7331.

Cypert benefit planned

A benefit for Richard Cypert, who will participate in the Paralympics in Barcelona, Spain this summer, will be held from noon-2 p.m. June 28 at the Garden City school playground.

A hamburger dinner will be served, and games will be sponsored for children. Proceeds will go defray Cypert's expenses to and from Barcelona.

For more information, contact John Kinbrugh at 354-2391.

Survey: Middle class supporting lottery

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

State lottery ticket sales per person tends to be lower in counties with higher poverty or unemployment rates, a comparison of the state's six most populous counties shows.

However, that pattern is not necessarily consistent with smaller counties.

Five mid-sized urban counties in Central-West Texas tend to have higher per capita ticket sales where poverty and unemployment rates are higher. But sales in four rural counties around Big Spring match the trend found in the state's largest counties.

The figures, based on first-week sales of the "Lone Star Millions" lottery, help shatter misconceptions that the lottery is a regressive tax on poor people hoping to strike it rich, said lottery spokesman Steve Levine in Austin.

"Just because someone is poor doesn't mean they're dumb," Levine said. "Most studies show that it's the middle-class that supports the lottery."

But, said Weston Ware, associate director of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission, the figures do not show who in each county purchased tickets or what percentage of each personal income was spent. The commission last year lobbied against passage of the state lottery.

"It's very difficult to tell who is buying the ticket," said Ware, who referred to studies that indicate 12-to-15 percent of players in other states buy up to 70 percent of tickets sold and that lower-income players spend a higher percentage of income than higher-income players.

More than 100 million of the $1 scratch-off lottery tickets were sold in Texas the week after sales began May 29. Prizes range from $2 to $10,000 instant wins and $1 million-dollar-weekly drawings being held this summer.

A comparison of the six most populous counties in Texas, using information from the Texas Comptroller's Office and the 1990 U.S. census, show:

- The only two counties with poverty rates above the 18.1 percent state rate, Bexar and El Paso, also were the only counties with below state-average ticket sales of six per person.
- El Paso County, with the highest poverty rate, at 26.8, and the highest unemployment rate in April, had the lowest per capita ticket sales, at 5 per person.

FCI officials quell racial skirmish

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

A racial skirmish Wednesday evening was quickly abated by officers at the Big Spring Federal Correctional Institute.

Tensions between a group of Hispanic and black inmates suddenly became a fist-fighting brawl, but only minor injuries were reported, said Warden Mike Fitzpatrick.

One officer reported a foot injury, but did not leave work for treatment. And one inmate received sutures to close a laceration received in the fighting.

Some of the instigators of the violence were quickly transferred to other institutions, simply because the facility is currently designed to hold only six inmates in separate quarters away from the general population, he said.

Among the current $14 million construction at the center will be more of these types of holding facilities, he said.

Rumors of burning beds and numerous casualties are totally false, Fitzpatrick said.

Deputy Regional Director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons in Dallas, Jim Rich, confirmed that no reports of serious rioting or injuries stemmed from the incident.

"The only injuries are those you might normally expect in a fist fight," he said.

Staff at the facility, including correctional officers and counselors, had the situation defused within a few minutes after it began on Wednesday, he said.

Although the prison has an "incident team" to handle situations such as riots, these individuals were not deployed.

"I was at work that day and I didn't know anything about it," said one employee at the institution.

Bush: U.S. leader on the environment

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — President Bush said Saturday the battering the United States took at the Earth Summit won't deter him from running again as an environmentalist. "We are the leaders, we're not the followers," he said of his record.

RELATED STORY — 3A

Bush acknowledged "an anxiety" about the upcoming presidential election, but denied it was interfering with environmental policymaking. Instead, he cited "a tough, weird political year."

In a wrap-up news conference at his oceanside hotel, Bush said his challenge to other nations to meet again by next Jan. 1 to deal solely with global warming was not intended as a diversionary effort to deflect widespread criticism.

"We will be there with specific plans," Bush said, no matter who else attends.

The United States has been widely criticized for refusing to sign a major treaty to protect animal and plant species and for insisting on watering down a treaty on global warming.

"We're not going to sign up to things we can't do; we're not going to sign up to things we don't believe in," Bush said. "We are the leaders, we're not the followers. And the fact that we don't go along with every single covenant, I don't think that means a relinquishment of leadership."

Bush denied his prestige in foreign policy had been tarnished by the U.S. isolation in Rio or by his tear gas and demonstration-marred visit to Panama.

In Panama City on Friday, Bush was prevented from delivering a speech in a downtown square when agents rushed him off a stage after local police used gunfire and tear gas to break up a crowd of unruly

Secret Service proves its mettle in Panama

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY, Panama — The scene appeared chaotic. Bodyguards, with weapons drawn, leaped to the running board of President Bush's limousine. Agents stormed a nearby building. Others crouched low with gas masks on.

But despite the appearance of confusion, these Secret Service agents were all efficiency as they hustled President Bush from Thursday's outdoor rally that was disrupted by gunshots and tear gas.

Their actions in Panama displayed the finely honed training they rarely need to use. The scene also revealed in televised news footage some of the security measures the Secret Service uses in its 24-hour mission to protect America's leader — methods that range from bulletproof raincoats to guns concealed in luggage and counter-assault agents with military weapons.

The Secret Service routinely denies requests for information about how it carries out its mission.

Before Bush goes anywhere, a Secret Service advance team is dispatched to check out details of every site he will visit. In Panama, the advance team rejected several proposed rally sites as too exposed or too remote. They settled on the small downtown Plaza Porras, a decision which in hindsight appears to have been flawed.

A team of agents stayed behind when Bush left Panama to analyze the Secret Service performance and investigate why demonstrators were allowed so close that Panamanian police had to shoot tear gas and fire gunshots in the air.

Tempers flare at rally, 3 arrested

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — About 50 white supremacists traded insults with about 300 counter-demonstrators during a rally Saturday in support of three supremacist skinheads charged with killing a black man two months ago.

"This is where the white revolution will start. We're gonna make Alabama a white state."

Bill Riccio

Members of the neo-Nazi Aryan National Front, joined by a half-dozen robed Ku Klux Klansmen, carried Confederate battle flags and Nazi flags in a march to a Confederate memorial downtown.

They shouted the Nazi salute "Sieg Heil" and taunted black and white counter-protesters and spectators with racial epithets.

During the march, a line of about 100 police officers in riot gear separated the white supremacists from counter-demonstrators who shouted, "No justice, no peace."

"Sissies go home!" shouted one counter-protester. "You're a joke."

Three men were arrested on misdemeanor charges, said police spokeswoman LaFaree King-Walker. One was charged with harassment and two were charged with disorderly conduct, she said. The three were counter-demonstrators, police said.

At the memorial, chain-link fences and police lines kept spectators at least 50 yards away. A police helicopter hovered overhead.

"This is where the white revolution will start," skuahead organizer and former Klansman Bill Riccio, 34, told the rally. "We're gonna make Alabama a white state."

Riccio's remarks also included a threat, in vulgar language, to castrate any black man who has sex with a white woman.

Skinhead organizers said the rally was to support Malcolm Driskill and Edward Hardeman, both 21, and a 17-year-old youth who were charged in the April 17 stabbing death of Benny Rembert, 36, a homeless black man.

Hardeman's 17-year-old fiancée also is charged in the case, set to go before a grand jury in August.

About 200 of the counter-protesters staged an impromptu march of their own through a nearby housing project.

"I think they stink," Kamal Afrika, 31, said of the supremacists.

"I'm for justice and equality all over the planet. A threat to justice and equality anywhere is a threat to peace and justice everywhere."

Four hours later, about 400 people from the Coalition Against Hate Crimes held its own rally in the park.

Controversial state district judge resigns from bench

HOUSTON (AP) — A state district judge, whose rulings on some cases were sharply criticized by law enforcement officials and victims' rights groups, has announced his resignation.

Judge Norman Lanford, who lost in the Republican primary in March to Caprice Cosper, said in a resignation letter Friday he will leave the bench effective July 3, six months earlier than required.

Lanford's exit from the 339th district court paved the way for Gov. Ann Richards to appoint a Democrat to the bench, prompting Ms. Cosper to accuse Lanford of leaving early for political reasons.

"It appears to be Lanford's attempt to choose his successor and an attempt to thwart a law-and-order candidate like me," said Ms. Cosper, former Harris County assistant district attorney.

Lanford, 44, said he is not resigning out of bitterness for a lost election. The judge said he is disgusted with prosecutors' manipulation of his docket since campaigning began, stalling cases and compromising his court's efficiency.

"I resigned because people in the system were playing politics with the people in my court," he said. "I don't want to be a party to what is taking place in my court since the election."

However, Lanford said the likelihood that Democratic challenger John Ackerman would be appointed to finish out his term "played in the equation" when he decided to resign.

Betsy Lake, the Harris County Republican Party chairwoman, said she was shocked to learn of Lanford's resignation.

"This really surprises me that a Republican judge would give the governor an opportunity to appoint a Democrat," she said. "I'm very sorry he did this."

The judge, who has been on the bench since 1985, became the center of controversy in August 1991 when he ordered the acquittal of a man accused of murdering a sheriff's deputy.

He also drew protesters outside the courthouse when he granted probation to a man charged with killing a 3-year-old child — despite the admission by prosecutors that they offered the plea agreement on the 10-year-old case because it was flawed.

In addition, Lanford was maligned for his position that possession of less than a gram of cocaine — the equivalent of one rock of crack — should be a Class A misdemeanor, no matter how many times a defendant has been charged with the offense.

Attorney Randy Burton, founder of the organization Justice for Children, said many crime victims felt Lanford wasn't tough enough.

Critics blast management practices

HOUSTON (AP) — Some officials are questioning the management of the Harris County Sheriff's Department following a series of incidents that includes the incident of five boot camp guards.

Last week, drill instructors at the county's new boot camp for first-time offenders were accused by a grand jury of using excessive force against the young inmates.

The guards, provided by the sheriff's office, were fired.

The indictments have prompted some members of Commissioners Court to consider giving the county's adult probation department complete control of the camp.

Paul Day, the Democratic hopeful running against Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen, on Friday asked the sheriff to resign.

But the sheriff's chief deputy, Tommy Thomas, defended the operation of the department and noted that the county's adult probation department is responsible for managing the boot camp.

"The Sheriff's Department does not manage the camp," Thomas told The Houston Post in Saturday's editions. "The money and everything else comes from the state of Texas. We just provide the personnel as drill instructors."

A grand jury that investigated the boot camp noted that tension exists between the sheriff's department and the probation department, and that one person needs to be in charge of the camp.

Even before the boot camp indictments, the sheriff's department was hit with some highly publicized incidents, including a publication in April by two female guards that some male guards in the jail spearheaded an act of sexual misconduct involving prisoners.

In late May, state Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, called for an FBI probe into reports of brutality at the jail, specifically a complaint leveled by the mother of an inmate who was struck by a deputy for sleeping during a period when inmates are not supposed to sleep.

In addition, charges of racist policies that have resulted in inadequate representation of minorities on the sheriff's command staff have been leveled by the Afro American Sheriff's Deputy League.

A federal lawsuit filed by several black deputies that includes those accusations is scheduled to go to trial this summer.

Problems will persist because of the nature of running a big-city law enforcement agency with jails bursting at the seams, Thomas said.

Ex-Republican addresses Libertarians

ARLINGTON (AP) — New Hampshire state Rep. Finlay Rothhaus, who bolted from the Republican Party, on Saturday urged Texas Libertarians to see themselves "as the movers and the shakers" in state politics.

Rothhaus, the freshman representative who switched parties after being elected as a Republican in 1990, made his remarks during his keynote address at the Texas Libertarian state convention.

He told about 100 convention delegates the strong organization that has spurred the Libertarian Party's growth in New Hampshire can produce the same results in Texas.

"We in New Hampshire have dared to succeed," he said. "I offer the same challenge to the Texas party. You have to see yourselves as the movers and the shakers."

Rothhaus said he first became disillusioned with the Republican Party because of what he said were shortcomings by the Reagan administration.

He said the switch was completed after he entered the New Hampshire House and found Republicans seeking to implement a state income tax and other broad-based taxes.

Libertarians advocate the abolition of taxation.

"They say if you love sausage or law you should watch neither being made," Rothhaus said. "When I became a lawmaker, my opinion of the Republican Party's commitment was changed."

While Richards is the ultimate authority on use of the troops, she usually follows the recommendation of the adjutant general, said Lt. Col. Ed Komandovsky, spokesman for the adjutant general's department in Austin, which oversees the national and state guard units in Texas.

"If we help the political convention of the Republican Party, then we would have to do it for anyone else, too. And we're not prepared to do that," Komandovsky said.

Harris County officials had hoped the volunteer unit could substitute for paid county law enforcement, cutting the county's financial burden during the Aug. 17-20 convention. The cost of paying the $2 million to $3 million tab for GOP convention security has caused considerable friction between Houston and Harris County officials.

Harris County Commissioner Steve Radack said Friday the county still will ask Richards, a Democrat, for permission to use the guard because the convention has been sold as an economic development event, not as a political deal.

Names in the news

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music phenom Garth Brooks wants to keep his face to himself.

A federal lawsuit filed Thursday goes after the unauthorized sellers of T-shirts, sweatshirts and other products bearing the singer's name and likeness.

The lawsuit was filed on behalf of Brooks, Blue Rose Inc. and New Generation Inc., both authorized to make and sell Brooks products.

Gilbert Paysinger and his wife, Marie Paysinger, were named as defendants, but Paysinger said they have stopped selling Brooks items.

"The Paysingers, who operate two stores in Nashville, are 'only two of the multitude of defendants who have been identified' as unauthorized dealers in Brooks products, the lawsuit said.

S. Ralph Gordon, who filed the lawsuit, said: "We're in the middle of exploring to what extent we can streamline the process without having to file a lawsuit in each individual jurisdiction."

Later, crowds at Buckingham Palace cheered and waved flags as the royal family assembled on the balcony to watch Royal Air Force jets fly past.

It was the first time Prince Charles and Princess Diana appeared together in public since The Sunday Times published excerpts from a book that quotes friends as saying Diana is so unhappy with her husband she has tried to kill herself.

MIDDELBURG, Netherlands (AP) — Former hostage Terry Waite said Saturday a biography of Franklin D. Roosevelt helped him make it through.

Waite was given the Freedom of Worship award by the Franklin and Delano Roosevelt Institute in Hyde Park, N.Y., which has a satellite campus in this southern Dutch town, near the home of Roosevelt's forebears.

He said he got the biography from his captors in Lebanon.

"It was a book full of interest and wisdom... material to meditate on the meaning of freedom," Waite said. Most of all, "It was an extremely thick book. And any prisoner is glad to get a large book."

Waite was on a mission to free other Western hostages when he was kidnapped by Muslim militants in 1987 and held for nearly five years.

NEW YORK (AP) — A two-week trial that attracted dozens of teenyboppers ended with a jury deciding two members of New Kids on the Block were innocent of copyright infringement.

Fans who couldn't get seats in a small federal courtroom camped out in a hallway for hours each day, hoping for a glimpse of Jordan Knight and Danny Wood.

The two and a friend, Tommy Page, were accused of stealing the chorus of "I'll Be Your Everything," written by George Soule and recorded by Percy Sledge in 1974, for a song of the same title recorded by Page.

Northside Partners, which holds the copyright to the Soule song, sued for at least $3 million in damages. The young singers were found innocent Friday.

Japan pledges billions at summit

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Japan took a leading role Saturday at the Earth Summit by pledging to spend up to $7.7 billion in environmental aid and to reduce its emissions of carbon dioxide.

Japan's pledges, which were in line with European moves, left the United States alone among industrialized nations in not making substantial new offers at the summit.

France's president, Francois Mitterrand, pledged to increase development aid by the year 2000 to 0.7 percent of his nation's gross national product — a target the Third World had demanded and that Germany has promised it would meet. France now provides aid at about 0.56 percent of its GNP.

But President Bush defended the U.S. environmental record as the best in the world and said his offer of an additional $150 million to protect forests demonstrated his continued leadership. Many countries at the summit, however, saw Germany in that role.

"We're the leaders, we're not the followers," Bush told a news conference. "The U.S. fully intends to be the world's preeminent leader in protecting the world environment."

Delegates and more than 110 world leaders at the 12-day summit were working Saturday to finish major summit documents before they were to be adopted on Sunday, the gathering's final day.

The documents include the so-called Rio Declaration on environmental principles, a statement on forestry protection and Agenda 21, a blueprint for environmental protection. These documents are non-binding and would be adopted over any objections. As of Saturday, 150 countries had signed the summit's two legally binding treaties. Malaysia refused to sign the climate control pact, while the United States refused to sign the biodiversity convention, which protects plant and animals species. Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa said in a written statement distributed at the summit that Japan's contribution of $7 billion to $7.7 billion represents an increase of $400 million per year over the next five years. That would be a total of $2 billion in new aid.

Miyazawa was forced to cancel his trip to the summit because of domestic political problems. He had planned to deliver his statement live by satellite, but the broadcast was canceled, Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello said, without elaborating.

In his statement, Miyazawa also said Japan would try to reduce its carbon dioxide emissions to 1990 levels by 2000, a goal that the 12-nation European-Community has also accepted.

He also promised that by 1996 Japan would eliminate its use of chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, which trigger destruction of the Earth's protective ozone layer.

The carbon dioxide emissions targets were written out of the climate control treaty at U.S. insistence before it would agree to sign, even though its own studies show it could meet the requirement at little or no cost.

The United States is the single largest source of carbon dioxide emissions, which trap the sun's heat and are considered a major cause of global warming.

The United States also refused to sign the biodiversity treaty because it says the pact would require additional U.S. aid to poor countries and would harm America's biotechnology industry.

Bush on Saturday tried to switch the focus to U.S. environmental protection policies already in place, citing clean air legislation, restrictions on offshore oil drilling and other measures taken since he became president.

"In many areas, the U.S. does have the strongest laws, but it's no credit to Bush," said T.J. Glauthier of the World Wildlife Fund. "He and (former president Ronald) Reagan have consistently opposed them."

Candidates looking at 50-state election

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot's challenge has turned the Electoral College into an intriguing jigsaw puzzle, forcing both President Bush and Democrat Bill Clinton to rethink the traditional strategies for capturing a majority.

Perot not only leads early polls in several major states, including electoral giants California, Texas and Florida, but shows enough strength virtually everywhere to confound conventional wisdom.

A case in point: Minnesota. It's the one state Walter Mondale won in 1984 and one of the 10 Dukakis carried in 1988. Indeed, Minnesota last voted Republican five presidential elections ago, in 1972.

But a mid-May poll showed Bush ahead there, because Perot and Clinton split the anti-Bush vote.

Polls in Massachusetts and West Virginia were similar, and Republicans say New York could look much the same this fall if Perot holds support among conservative Democrats and independents.

"If I'm George Bush or Bill Clinton, I basically have to throw out my Electoral College strategy that I spent the last two years working on because it's all meaningless now," said Republican pollster Neil Newhouse. "It literally becomes a 50-state race."

Newhouse gets little argument from the Clinton and Bush campaigns.

"Nobody in our lifetime understands how to do a real three-way race," says Bush campaign political director Mary Matalin. "Everybody is scratching their heads... Try to tell me with a straight face that you thought a year ago we might end up looking at places like Minnesota, Massachusetts and West Virginia for electoral votes."

Perot leads polls in four big states that went Bush's way in 1988: California, Texas, Florida and Ohio. While it's too early to know whether Perot can hold such strength through a summer of scrutiny, the numbers if nothing else prove Bush vulnerable.

The Perot factor also could bring into play, for either Perot or Clinton, Southern states that have voted Republican in the last three or more presidential elections, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Georgia among them.

Because of this, many Democrats are urging Clinton to move away from his early strategy of targeting so-called Reagan Democrats and middle-class, suburban voters in favor of trying to energize the party's traditional base of urban, blue-collar workers and minorities.

"A three-way race changes the arithmetic substantially," argues two-time Democratic candidate Jesse Jackson. "Perot's candidacy creates a more competitive race and therefore makes votes that are being dismissed or taken for granted very valuable."

Donations of food drying up for riot-ravaged Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Laverne Cummings sat on a bench at a relief agency for two hours the other day, waiting with a neighbor for free food.

"If you want to accomplish anything you have to be patient," she said. "There's food out there. You just have to get out and find it."

Hunger is stalking riot-ravaged South Central Los Angeles.

Before the riots, going hungry was common enough for the neighborhood's poor residents. Then three days of fiery mayhem after the Rodney King verdict on April 29 laid waste to supermarkets, corner groceries — and about 40,000 jobs.

Markets spared in the riots lost supplies when power outages spoiled refrigerated and frozen goods.

At first, donors rushed in with food. But that largesse is drying up and greed may be taking its place in the form of inflated store prices.

Relief workers worry about what will happen to the disaster area when the donations stop.

"I really fell apart ... worrying whether we can keep it up," said Rita Russo, executive director of The Seedling, the agency where

Mrs. Cummings, 52, exercised her patience to help a friend with two small children to feed. "I have my doubts right now. It makes you want to cry."

South Central is a sprawling district near the heart of Los Angeles. More than 30 percent of area families lived in poverty in 1990, census figures show; four in 10 households earned less than $15,000 a year.

Without a car, the daunting geography and a complicated bus system makes shopping for food elsewhere a trial. Even getting to relief centers around South Central can take all day. The fortunate have neighbors who share cars and child care.

At The Seedling's narrow office, they find a clutter of cartons of Froot Loops, pasta, tuna, oats, butter and other staples. Volunteers break into a sweat slicing open the cartons, stocking shelves, taking information from the needy and packing food boxes.

The Seedling served 1,238 families in May, up from its usual 900 families a month.

One frustrated man who was denied food — recipients may come only once a month — beat up a volunteer, Ms. Russo said.

"People's tempers are short. There's still a lot of anger and sometimes we end up being the butt of that," she said.

Ms. Russo and others say some merchants have jacked up prices since the riots.

"One woman came in angry that a market was charging $5 for 15 chicken wings," Ms. Russo said. "Another went to the liquor store across the street and was charged $1.82 for a pint of milk. She was in tears when she told me that."

Much of the donated food comes through the Los Angeles Regional Foodbank, a conduit for private, corporate and government donors.

Foodbank Executive Director Doris Bloch estimated it has fed hundreds of thousands of people since the riots.

"The initial donor response has been overwhelming," Ms. Bloch said. "But by July, all the private businesses that want to donate will have done so."

Waning contributions at Greater Bethany Community Church shrank its food distribution from six days a week to one.

All are needed to spur growth

Big Spring's economic development effort continues to grow.

Work continues on the new, 42,500 square foot HEB Grocery Store and has resumed on the much-smaller-but-no-less important Subway Sandwich Shop.

The folks who own Kentucky Fried Chicken are in the final stages of planning before beginning work on their new facility and things sound positive out of Austin in regards to Wright Fibers.

Economic development is a job that's not just reserved for the folks at Moore Development or the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce — it's a job that belongs to all of us.

The person you greet and welcome to our community could be the person that's looking for a location for their respective business. And while you might think of yourself as one person — somewhat insignificant in the overall scheme of things — collectively, the 22,000-plus of us carry a little more weight.

We are the ones responsible for our own future. Yes, decisions may be made in Austin or San Antonio or Washington but ultimately it's you and I who make the difference.

We can cry when something goes wrong or we can pick ourselves up off the ground, dust off the dirt and go about our business.

That's the way to get things done.

That's the attitude we like to see in our Big Spring neighbors — taking care of business in Big Spring where the west is best.

"There's no way I'm trying on that glass slipper. Haven't you heard how unhappy Princess Di is?!"

Graduation ceremonies are getting nauseating

The more I read about high school graduation ceremonies this year, the more it turns my stomach!

Story after story — from Abilene to Midland to Odessa and elsewhere — you read about disruptions of high school graduation ceremonies.

In Abilene the ceremony for Abilene High seniors was highlighted (?) by the igniting of a smoke bomb that damaged the floor at Abilene Christian University's Moody Coliseum and could have resulted in serious injury.

Abilene Cooper's graduation became so rowdy a year ago that many persons vowed never to return.

Midland High's ceremony was disrupted by a beach ball being batted about. And when school officials collected the sphere, the crowd let loose with a round of boos.

A few years ago, my youngest niece graduated from Arlington Sam Houston. It bothered me to no end the number of persons who had so little regard for others that they stood in front of them so as to be able to film the entire event.

One woman was berated by a seemingly endless barrage of four-letter words when she asked another woman to please move — the woman in the way was standing in front of the front row despite the fact school officials asked everyone to remain seated.

The caper to all I've heard came this year at Houston Memorial when a female principal terminated the graduation ceremony after two students handed her condoms in exchange for their diplomas.

And to think I was pushing my luck back in 1968 when I wore cutoffs under my gown — which we rented and turned back in!

Now, for some good news. There were no problems at Big Spring High School.

To some people, that news might not be noteworthy... we feel it is, however, especially when you consider the way graduations are turning at other schools.

In Big Spring, West Texas, U.S.A., our seniors walked across the stage and picked up their diplomas. They switched the tassel from one side to the other, they thanked the person that handed them their diploma and they made a dignified entrance into the post-high school world.

Perhaps their collective demeanor was in deference to the president of Rotary International, who keynoted the evening — after all, how many high school seniors are addressed by the same person who addressed the United Nations just a few months earlier?

Maybe it was because their teachers and administrators threatened them with their lives if they misbehaved.

But maybe, and we tend to favor this one, it was because of the manner in which our seniors were raised. That it was the fact they were taught to understand that there are times for rowdy celebrations and times for celebrating in a more solemn manner.

Regardless of the reasons, the fact remains that our seniors thought enough of themselves and the hard work they had put in not to let childish foolishness put a black mark on the name of the Class of '92.

Clinton, Jackson: Team that could win together

The Rev. Jesse Jackson and Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton have two interesting decisions to make. On their shoulders could rest the outcome of this year's presidential election. As it now stands, H. Ross Perot's candidacy will remain viable through the fall and the election. If it remains a three-way affair, the election could give any of the candidates an opportunity to win.

Clinton can dramatically improve his chances of winning if Jackson energizes the vote of the African-American community on the governor's behalf. But will he? Bad blood has already flowed between the two, most noticeably in the New York primary, when Jackson all but endorsed former California governor Jerry Brown. Brown, in turn, all but named Jackson his running mate should he win the nomination.

Brown's ploy blew up in his face and while Brown is on his way to becoming another interesting footnote in American history, Jackson remains a part of the 1992 political chemistry that still has a few explosions in store for us before it is spent.

Jackson's decision is difficult because he no doubt will not be Clinton's choice to be his vice presidential running mate. Spurned, Jackson could freeze Clinton in his current third-place position in the polls.

The task before Clinton's campaign team is how to get Jackson in the fold. In other words, what can Clinton promise Jackson, who aches to play a national role in the affairs of the country? One top Democrat suggested to me that Jackson would make a tremendous appointment to head the massive infrastructure program the country needs to repair its roads, bridges, and water and sewer systems and to get its tunnels and railways back in shape. Clinton has given the idea of a national reconstruction program tentative support.

If Clinton were to win based in part on Jackson's support, he would owe at least that to the most visible black leader in America today. And such a position would make Jackson the single most powerful black in the country — able to dispense largess, jobs, contracts and payrolls.

The position would also help build the kind of organization Jackson needs for his own run at the presidency. Lyndon Johnson used the National Youth Administration to set up a run for the U.S. Senate, why can't Jackson?

The Clinton camp knows that the popular Jackson is one of the keys to a Democratic win in November. Jackson can not only bring new voters into the process, he can also get them out to vote in November.

The task is how to entice Jackson to endorse Clinton and then back him with real support. It will not be an easy thing to do. Jackson would have to swallow his pride and roll up his sleeves and go to bat for someone who has claimed the nomination that he covets.

But Jackson knows that if Clinton loses and Perot elbows the Democrats out of the White House, Jackson's future takes on a dimmer light.

Jackson should also know the value of a larger-scale reconstruction program. It would mean the jobs for the black community that Jackson has been advocating for 10 years.

A multi-billion-dollar program would infuse the black community with much needed work. It would rebuild the critical elements that past administrations ignored. And such a program would even strike at crime — to which many frustrated teens turn when there is no alternative.

By taking on the mission of, first, helping elect Clinton and, then, if successful, of administering such a program, Jackson could at least knock down one of the criticisms that haunt him: that he has never proven he is a leader capable of anything other than a penchant for fiery rhetoric.

Hill rat kisses and tells

By BOB MITCHELL

Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — If John Jackley is right, everyone's worst fears about Congress are true. Jackley, a former press secretary to a Texas congressman, has written a tell-all memoir of his days on Capitol Hill entitled "Hill Rat: Blowing the Lid Off Congress."

Part jeremiad and part gossipy reminiscence of the House during the 1980s, Jackley's book offers an insider's look at how members of Congress go about the business of government. The view is relentlessly depressing. Most of the book concerns Jackley's work as a press secretary for Rep. Ronald Coleman, D-Texas. Coleman came to town with a reputation for standing up to special interests in the Texas legislature, Jackley writes, but in Congress it was a different story.

For example, an early test issue — the nuclear freeze vs. the MX missile — foreshadowed the difficulties in the years to come. Confronted with polling data that showed voter opposition in his district to the nuclear freeze, Coleman voted for MX funding and against the freeze, even though he wanted to do the opposite after a speech by President Reagan that questioned the patriotism of Americans who supported the freeze.

Jackley writes that "there was something disturbing about the way our decisions were made with little thought that maybe this one was different, that too much money and too many lives were potentially at stake for fundamentally political judgments."

Preoccupied by fears of a conservative challenge from back home, Coleman once ordered Jackley to write a press release with the headlines saying he voted to support cuts in legislative appropriations.

"But you didn't vote to reduce legislative branch appropriations," Jackley responded. The lawmaker was not amused: "Coleman glared and told me I just needed to figure it out."

During the pay raise debacle of 1989, Coleman ordered Jackley to write a speech defending House Speaker Jim Wright, a fellow Texan. The resulting oration laid it on pretty thick, even by congressional standards. It praised

Capitol report

Wright's "uncommon courage" and "high degree of personal loyalty" in supporting the ill-fated 1989 pay raise proposal.

Another preoccupation of Coleman's staff involved efforts to persuade the Air Force not to send sonic boom-producing jets flying over sheep ranches whose owners were concerned that the noise would discourage reproduction, although no one was sure of the truth of the claim.

So it went until June 1990, when Jackley quit to go back to school and become a full-time writer.

Jackley is bipartisan in his scorn. Observers rarely compare House Speaker Thomas Foley of Washington and Majority Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri with Republican firebrand Newt Gingrich of Georgia, but Jackley sees a common quality: "Their beliefs start and end with what they see every morning in the bathroom mirror."

Jackley brings a sense of conviction to his chronicle of his years on Capitol Hill. He said he made a promise as his newborn son struggled to stay alive "to tell the truth," and this book is the product of that vow.

Yet there is reason to be skeptical that the portrait Jackley portrays is entirely accurate, simply because it is so unrelentingly grim in its portrayal of Congress.

Undoubtedly Congress is a haven for the arrogant, the egotistical and the ambitious. But many on Capitol Hill — men and women of both parties — bring a sense of seriousness to the job. These lawmakers — and the "Hill Rats" who work for them — get short shrift in Jackley's book.

But Jackley saw something different — the absence of principled political debate and the corruption of representative government by "men and women who were willing to pay any price, bear any burden and oppose any foe to assure their personal political survival."

It's small comfort that the best one can say is things aren't quite that bad.

Biologist tracks elusive polar bears

OVER THE ARCTIC PACK ICE (AP) — A gun at his feet and a visor shading his eyes, Steve Amstrup scans the frozen Beaufort Sea from a helicopter.

He is 70 miles off the north coast of Alaska, and the world below looks like a cracked eggshell: dazzlingly white, veined with black water and ridges of churned-up ice.

Prime polar bear country — and Amstrup's laboratory.

There's no land, no landmarks — just a floating desert constantly being remade by wind and currents. But as usual, the 42-year-old federal wildlife biologist finds what he is looking for.

"Bear tracks at three o'clock," he says suddenly, and the pilot circles down to pick up the chase, following a trail of foot-long tracks that leads across snowy ice floes and outcroppings of glacier-blue ice.

In a minute, the bear comes into view — a shade blonder than the ice and fleeing across it, glancing back at her pursuers. Behind her run two tiny cubs, struggling to keep up and looking from the air like dust bunnies swept along in the helicopter rotor wash.

"Back off so she doesn't lose the cubs," Amstrup says.

He measures and loads a tranquilizer dart into his rifle, then harnesses himself to the back seat of the helicopter and steps out on a skid. The helicopter comes to within 6 feet of the running bear, and Amstrup tires.

"Got her — upper left shoulder," he shouts, stepping back into the aircraft. Then, making sure to steer the bear away from any open water or rough boulder patches, the helicopter waits for her to go down.

Over the next hour and a half, the three bears would be tranquilized, poked for blood samples, measured and weighed. The cubs would be eartagged and tattooed, as their mother was years ago.

With colleagues in other arctic nations, Amstrup is gradually building the first comprehensive population data on the elusive animals, the largest nonaquatic predators in the world.

Amstrup and other researchers say polar-bear numbers in Alaska are stable and healthy at about 3,000 to 5,000. The worldwide population is estimated at between 25,000 and 40,000 — most of them off the coasts of Canada and Russia.

They hope to gather enough baseline information to gauge how well polar bears handle potential threats: the increasing number of people and human activities in the arctic, proposals for more arctic oil development, possible global environmental changes.

"This is literally ends-of-the-earth fieldwork, and there's very little support system out there," said Bruce Batten, a spokesman for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which employs Amstrup.

The difficulty and danger for humans of getting around in polar-bear country has helped protect the bears. But the bears' inaccessibility also has taken a toll on his research in time, money — even human life.

In 1990, two of the program's researchers and a pilot died when their plane disappeared over the ice cap while scouting for bears.

That disaster, along with spiraling costs and budget declines — a day on the ice costs about $3,500 — have led Amstrup to cut back on fieldwork, from two visits to the ice to just one, in the spring.

"There are relatively few animals that are as logistically difficult and expensive to study as polar bears, and that's one of the reasons why we know so little about them," Amstrup said.

"Just getting basic population data isn't easy if you're working in the arctic and you're paying 25 cents a whop for a helicopter and you're covering an animal where each one has a range the size of Montana."

Amstrup's base camp is BP Exploration's Endicott facility, a drilling operation a few miles offshore east of Prudhoe Bay. The oil company provides logistical help — room and board, office space, ground transportation. Amoco and Arco provide money for radio collars and other program needs.

High winds or temperatures lower than 30 below zero kept Amstrup off the ice for two of the four weeks he spent on the North Slope this spring.

Pilot Paul Walters of Trans-Alaska Helicopters in Anchorage calls his Bell 206 aircraft the "Hotel Bell," and adds it's none too comfortable on an arctic night. Still, he has returned to help Amstrup since 1989.

"I've done work with grizzlies, wolves, moose. But this is the most exciting," said Walters, who also helps weigh the bears.

"It doesn't get old looking at them."

Amstrup, tall and blond like the bears, has captured more than 1,000 in the 11 years he has gone out on the ice. They range from 11-pound cubs to 1,400-pound males; by now, there's a growing number of animals he has been monitoring for years — the ones he calls "old friends."

The cubs' mother is one.

"It's really neat to see them again and say, 'By God, she's 23 and she's got another litter,'" Amstrup said.

He lifts the sow's heavy head gently to move her chin off a piece of jutting ice.

"How you doing?" he asks as she blinks and sighs at him, licking canine teeth as long as his thumbs. "That's a healthy bear."

Then he begins spreading green tattoo ink on the inner lip of one trembling, snoring cub.

Clinton condemns singer's racial comments in speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Clinton on Saturday condemned racial remarks from an entertainer following the Los Angeles riots as "the kind of hatred we do not honor" and drew a chilly reply from civil rights leader Jesse Jackson.

The Democratic presidential candidate, speaking to a meeting of Jackson's Rainbow Coalition, said that "we have an obligation, all of us, to call attention to prejudice wherever we see it."

Clinton's comments came amid reports that his strategists were divided over how far to go in embracing the issue demands of Jackson and others in the Democratic Party's traditional constituency.

Clinton was sharply critical of comments by Sister Souljah, a rap singer, in an interview with The Washington Post following the Rodney King verdict in Los Angeles and the riots that came afterward.

The black singer — who appeared as a guest at the Rainbow

Coalition meeting on Friday — was quoted as saying: "I mean if black people kill black people every day, why not have a week and kill white people?"

Clinton said that if the words black and white had been reversed, "you might think David Duke was giving that speech."

"Her comments before and after Los Angeles were filled with the kind of hatred we do not honor today and tonight," Clinton said.

Jackson told reporters afterward that Clinton's statement "was not helpful at all."

"It was unnecessary," Jackson said. "It was a diversion."

"I do not know why he used this platform to address those issues," Jackson said.

Jackson has not endorsed Clinton but praised his views on the economy and other issues. The two were meeting privately later.

Clinton aides denied that there was a faction in the campaign that wants to distance itself from Jackson out of fear of accommodating him would alienate white, suburban voters. They said Clinton, who won support from numerous black elected officials during the primaries, has met with Jackson several times before.

In his remarks, Clinton also confessed that he had been wrong in playing golf at an all-white country club, something that has drawn sharp criticism from blacks despite his strong support for numerous civil rights goals.

He also was sharply critical of Vice President Dan Quayle, saying that in his speeches he has acted as "a hit man."

"I'm tired of people on trust funds telling people on food stamps how to live," Clinton said.

Before addressing the Rainbow Coalition, Clinton met first with four Democratic mayors who have endorsed his candidacy. He promised an updated version of his economic plan for American cities at the U.S. Conference of Mayors meeting June 22 in Houston.

Vice President Quayle raps Perot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle turned up the heat on undeclared presidential challenger Ross Perot, saying the "temperamental tycoon" would worsen Washington's governmental gridlock.

"There's no doubt that he has tapped into a deep well of frustration in this country," Quayle said Friday in a speech to a group of conservative lawyers.

"But electing Ross Perot wouldn't fix the deadlock between the elected branches," he said. "It would make things worse. A president cannot get something done just because he criticizes stalemate. Ross Perot is a false solution to our problem."

At a news conference in Rio de Janeiro, President Bush declined to echo his vice president's criticism of Perot or his suggestion that it would even be better to have Democrats in power than to face the gridlock of a Perot presidency.

Bush said he wants Americans "to elect a Republican president and a Republican Congress," but that he would keep to his pledge "not to go after either of the opponents until after the convention."

Quayle also contended that Perot has suggested the United States needs to rewrite its Constitution and gave the administration's antagonist a sharp, personal tweak.

"My friends, it would be a very bad idea to replace a genuine statesman with some temperamental tycoon who has contempt for the Constitution of the United States," Quayle said.

He quoted Perot as saying last year, "Germany and Japan are winning. Why are they winning? They got new constitutions in 1945."

"Mr. Perot, we do not need a new Constitution. Our Constitution has

Arsenio Hall no fan of president

WASHINGTON (AP) — Call it Arsenio's revenge.

After weeks of ceding the television talk circuit to Democrat Bill Clinton and independent Ross Perot, President Bush last week decided to open his schedule to more television appearances.

But while White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the president was open to most any invitation, he said Bush would not appear on "The Arsenio Hall Show."

You might remember that Clinton recently appeared on the late-night program, sunglasses and all, to play his saxophone and talk about the issues.

Well, Hall last week fired back at Bush on the air, saying the president wasn't welcome, anyway.

"At least I'm in good company,"

Hall said. "Now I've joined the ranks of the homeless, the unemployed and the middle class. So I don't feel so bad. I guess Mr. Bush, he won't do my show. Maybe he'll do "Donahue" when the topic is relatives of people involved in the savings and loan scandals."

"... Bush will not do my show. So I guess that's two houses he won't be in: My house, and come November, he won't be in the White House. Get with that, George Herbert Bush."

Near the close of his salvo, Hall joked: "I know I'm gonna get audited."

In a pitch for publicity before next month's Democratic National Convention in the Big Apple, New York's Carnegie Deli sent political reporters a sampling of its political menu. Sandwiches named for political luminaries.

A Bill Clinton? Corned beef and mayonnaise on white bread. Jerry Brown? A ham and baloney combo.

Non-candidate Mario Cuomo? Tongue and pastrami on Italian bread.

On the Republican side, Carnegie owner Milton Parker's creation for George Bush: tuna, chopped egg and mayo on white. "No meat, just like the economy," Parker says.

Pat Buchanan? Rare roast beef, American cheese and onion on rye. "About as conservative as you can get," Parker says.

"And don't forget Ross Perot. The Carnegie creation: turkey with coleslaw and Russian dressing. Says Parker: "A gobbler who says a lot of nothing."

Accompanying Bush on his trips is his armor-plated limousine and other equipment, including a bulletproof lectern if he plans to make a speech.

When the first pops were heard from tear gas fired by Panamanian police, agents could be seen bolting from behind the scenes with their rifles at ready and donning gas masks they normally carry on their belts. Some stormed into the foreign ministry building behind the square, after getting a report — apparently false — that a shooter was lurking inside.

Meanwhile, bodyguards on the platform with Bush whipped out a bulletproof raincoat and held it up behind him.

person. Bexar County, with a 19.9 percent poverty rate, averaged sales of 5.7 per person.

• Travis County, which has the third highest poverty rate, at 16, led per capita ticket sales with 7.6 but had the lowest unemployment rate of all six counties.

• Following Travis County in per capita ticket sales are, respectively, Dallas, Tarrant and Harris counties. Per capita sales were 7.5, 7.2 and 6.4 while poverty rates are 13.5, 11 and 15.7.

There does not appear to be a consistent pattern between per capita sales and population concentration. Rates vary widely in the two smallest counties, El Paso and Travis, and vary some in the two largest, Harris and Dallas.

In smaller counties, patterns in per capita ticket sales and poverty rates vary.

• Urban counties of Lubbock, Ector, Tom Green, Midland and Taylor had per capita sales of, respectively, 10.8, 9.7, 6.5 and 6.1, and have poverty rates of 19, 20.4, 17.3, 14.5 and 15.4. Lubbock and Taylor counties have the largest populations while Tom Green and Midland counties are smallest.

• Rural counties of Borden, Mitchell, Howard and Martin had per capita sales of 12.5, 5.1, 2.5 and 2, and have poverty rates of 15, 23.3, 20.4 and 23.9. Borden and Martin counties have the smallest populations.

Studies of lotteries in other states show that spending by different income groups tends to be uniform.

But that means poor people spend more of a percentage of their income, say Charles Clotfelter and Philip Cook in the 1989 book, "Selling Hope." A 1986 California survey indicates that an average low-income player spends 2 percent of household income compared to one-half percent by those in households with over $40,000 a year income, the book says.

But not all studies show that poor classes participate proportionately in comparison to other classes.

A 1981 study of 6.5 million lottery winners in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Michigan and New Jersey concluded that a smaller percentage of poor participate than the percentage of poor to the general population.

However, Public Gaming Research, a private pro-lottery organization, also maintains that independent research generally shows that lottery player demographics "very closely" match general populations where games are played. But that means, a release says, the "lottery is most often played by the middle class."

Bulls one win away from second title

CHICAGO (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers have spent most of the NBA Finals trailing the Chicago Bulls. So the wall they must scale to win the NBA title and deny the Bulls a repeat championship should make them feel right at home.

To overcome its 3-2 deficit, Portland would have to win the sixth and seventh games at Chicago Stadium on Sunday and Wednesday nights. Five teams have rallied from a 3-2 deficit to win the Finals, but none of them have done it by winning twice on the road.

The Blazers also face a Bulls team that appears incapable of playing poorly two games in a row. Eleven times in the last three seasons, Chicago lost a playoff game, only to win the next game. The Blazers won Game 4 despite falling behind 10-0, then lost the fifth game 119-106 Friday night after another 10-0 run by the Bulls in the opening minutes.

"We're coming out of the dressing room slow," the Blazers' Danny Ainge said. "It's tough to keep running up the mountain." Portland guard Terry Porter added, "We need to come out and be a lot more focused in the first quarter. We have to continue to work hard, stay aggressive and try to create something."

Porter scored 17 points Friday night, one of six Trail Blazers in double figures, but he missed his first six shots and didn't even attempt a 3-pointer. His 2-for-11 long-range accuracy in the series contrasts sharply to the NBA-record 18 3-pointers he made against Utah. "We're a little stunned," Porter admitted about the Bulls' winning two of three games at Portland. "Chicago just came in and did the job."

Doing the best job Friday night were Michael Jordan, who scored 46 points, and Scottie Pippen, who had 24 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists. "Michael is a special kind of player," Portland's Buck Williams said. "He wasn't going to be denied. He does what has to be done to win. He put his team on his shoulders and carried them for 48 minutes." Jordan and Pippen, the NBA's highest-scoring duo in the regular season, combined for 25 points in the first period when the Bulls took a 39-26 lead they never surrendered. "We work hand-in-hand together when we're both playing well because the defense can't key on both of us," Jordan said. "Scottie was really big for us."

Miller dethrones three-time national champion

BALTIMORE (AP) — Shannon Miller staked her claim as America's finest female gymnast, edging three-time national champion Kim Zmeskal to win the women's Olympic gymnastic trials on Saturday.

Miller and Zmeskal will almost assuredly renew their rivalry in Barcelona, Spain during the Olympics. But for now they are merely two of the eight women on the training squad that will work out in France next month.

Six will make the final squad, one will be a traveling alternate and the other will go home.

In addition to Miller (79.056 points) and Zmeskal (78.916), Kerri Strug (78.175), Dominique Dawes (77.908), Michelle Campi (77.860), Kim Kelly (77.801), Wendy Bruce (77.381) — at 19, the oldest member of the squad — and Betty Okino qualified for the training squad.

Campi's score was derived solely from last month's U.S. Championships, in which she finished third. She didn't compete this week after dislocating her elbow during practice Tuesday and undergoing surgery.

Okino, who finished second behind Zmeskal in the 1991 World Championships, missed the trials because of a stress fracture in three vertebrae. She petitioned successfully for a spot on the Olympic training squad, and is expected to be completely recovered by next month.

The men's competition was scheduled Saturday night.

Saturday's optional events comprised 40 percent of the competitors' overall scores. In addition, scores were weighted to include the nationals, which counted for 30 percent.

Zmeskal, 16, won the nationals and Miller missed them because of an elbow injury, so her scores in the trials counted 100 percent. Miller established control on Thursday during the compulsories and maintained that lead, even though Zmeskal opened Saturday's competition with a perfect score on the vault — the only 10 of the trials and the eighth of her career. Miller rebounded with a first-place 9.937 on the uneven bars. Zmeskal got a 9.812 on the bars after losing her grip with one hand during her routine, then fell further back when she twice wobbled ever so slightly on the balance beam.

She got a 9.737 to Miller's 9.90. Miller capped her day with a 9.762 on the floor exercise after going out of bounds on her first jump. Although Zmeskal got a 9.95 on the floor, it was not enough to overtake Miller, a ninth-grader from Edmond, Okla. "This means a whole bunch," Miller said. "All my work paid off." Zmeskal, a double gold medalist in the 1992 World Championships, won't have long to wait for an opportunity to beat Miller — and the rest of the world's gymnasts, for that matter. The Olympics begin July 25.

Rebels bounce Coahoma Lions from playoffs

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Editor

On this particular night in the Little League city tournament, it was David vs. Goliath. And just like in the story, little David got the best of the giant.

In this case it was the International League Rebels' pitcher Maurice Martinez getting the win over Coahoma Lions' pitcher Jeremy Meeks as the Rebels defeated the Lions 5-1 Saturday night.

It was the second time in the tournament the Rebels had beaten the Lions; the Rebels won 10-9 on Wednesday. The loss eliminated the Lions, the third place finisher in the Coahoma league, from the tourney. They end the season with an 8-8 record. The Rebels, the second-place finisher in the International League, stay alive with a 13-5 mark.

Martinez, all 4-foot-4 of him, pitched a smooth game. He went the distance, scattering six hits, walking three and striking out three.

The 5-foot-6 Meeks lasted three innings. He was lifted in favor of Cade Park in the fourth after Meeks had surrendered a double to Martinez and hit Eric Hansen with a pitch. Meeks allowed five runs on five hits, striking out four, walking five and hitting three batters.

Both pitchers were backed up by splendid defense as the Lions didn't commit an error and the Rebels committed two errors. Shortstop Steve Prater, second baseman Jeremy Green and catcher David White played strong defensive games for the Lions. For the Rebels, third baseman Aaron Boodie, shortstop Alex Rodriguez and right fielder Nicky Sanchez turned in

Eagle helps Davies pull into deadlock with Palli

SOMERS POINT, N.J. (AP) — Laura Davies used a 3-wood to roll in an eagle putt in fashioning a 4-under-par 67 that gave her a share of the second-round lead with Anne-Marie Palli in the $400,000 ShopRite LPGA Classic on Saturday.

Three of the four players who shared the first-round lead — Hiromi Kobayashi, Ayako Okamoto, winner of last weekend's McDonald's Championship, and Betsy King, winner of the LPGA Championship — were in a group of five one shot behind heading into Sunday's final round at the Great Bay Country Club.

Sherri Steinhauer and Dana Lofland were also one shot out of the lead at 3-under-par 139 and one shot ahead of Meg Mallon, Caroline Keggi, Susie Berning and Lauri Merton.

No one else in the field was under par, including Linda Hunt, the other first-round leader who shot a 6-over-par 77 and was at 1-over for two rounds. What made the score remarkable was that Hunt was 7-under after eight holes, but had two double bogeys and four bogeys in the homestretch.

That created a scramble at the top and the leader board had a very international flavor after 36 holes.

Davies, the 1987 U.S. Women's Open champion, is from England, Palli is from France and Kobayashi and Okamoto are from Japan.

"Maybe all the Americans took the week off," said Palli, who now lives in Arizona. "I don't know."

Davies, who had missed the cut in six of 14 events and had only one other sub-70 round in 43, got her game going at the par-5, 435-yard eighth hole with an eagle that resulted from something she saw on television.

She hit a 3-iron over the green and the ball came to rest 12 feet behind the pin, in a fluffy lie of grass. There were a foot of grass to the fringe, two feet of fringe and then nine feet to the hole.

Davies took out her 3-wood and used it to putt the ball into the cup.

"I saw it on TV at the TPC; I think it was Davis Love. I don't know," Davies said. "But the next week I practiced it at Las Vegas and I tried it."

The eagle got Davies to 1-under and she followed that with a 5-foot birdie putt on the ninth hole. Over the next seven holes, she saved par five times and then closed out her round with two 20-foot birdie putts.

Davies hit only eight greens but saved her round by using only 23 putts, her best putting round ever.

"To shoot 4-under and hit only eight greens is ... " Davies said. "When I hit only eight greens I usually score 80."

Forsman holds one stroke advantage

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dan Forsman continued his steady play in the third round of the $1.1 million St. Jude Classic on Saturday, shaving three more strokes off par for a round of 68 and a one-shot lead.

One shot off Forsman's 15-under score of 198 through 54 holes were hot-shooting Mike Sullivan, Jay Haas, Rick Fehr and Jim McGovern.

Forsman shook off a bogey 5 on No. 1 and then methodically worked his way back to the head of the pack.

Birdies at Nos. 2, 4, 7 and 8 allowed Forsman to make the turn at 3-under 33 and 15-under for the tournament. He added a birdie-2 at the 11th, but then took bogey-4 at No. 14 to fall back to 15 under.

Sullivan, who matched the course record with a 9-under 62, and Haas, who had a round of 64, kept the pressure on Forsman throughout the round.

Haas trimmed five strokes off par on the front side and charged into contention with birdies at 11 and 13 that put him 14 under. Haas then matched par on his final five holes.

Fehr shot 66 and McGovern 67. U.S. Open champion Payne Stewart birdied the first five holes, and a birdie at No. 9 left him at 13-under heading for the back nine. But he managed only eight pars and a bogey-5 at the 13th that dropped him to 12-under with Dan Halldorson. Stewart shot a 67 and Halldorson a 68.

British Open champion Ian Baker-Finch was at 9-under 203 after a 64.

Russ Cochran from Paducah, Ky., chips into the ninth green during Saturday's round of the Federal Express St. Jude Classic in Memphis, Tenn.

Gil Morgan turned in the day's top shot, recording an ace at the 168-yard fourth hole. Morgan used a 6-iron to become the 16th golfer on the PGA Tour to record a hole-in-one this year. He stands at 9-under 204 after 54 holes. He finished with a 68.

Sullivan's nine-birdie, no-bogey round was a surprise birthday present for his daughter, Rebecca, who turned 7 Saturday.

"I was more interested in the process than in the product," said Sullivan, who started on the back side and began a string of five straight birdies with a 6-foot putt at the par-4 13th.

"I was hitting the ball the right distance for a change. I was hitting it close and making putts. Some people call it the zone and I haven't been there often. It was nice."

"I'm excited to be playing well for a change," Sullivan said. "I'm looking forward to going out (Sunday), putting it under the heat and playing the best I can."

Haas has made only one bogey and missed but three fairways in three rounds.

"I've been playing well all year. I've been really consistent," Haas said. "I feel more comfortable each week. I step up to the tee and I feel like I'm going to hit a good shot."

Seventy-seven golfers were forced to finish second-round play Saturday morning after lightning and rain stopped play late Friday afternoon.

Seventy-nine players made the cut of 3-under 139.

Heads and Horns find a home

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

A large piece of America's outdoor heritage now has a permanent home in Cody, Wyo.

The Boone and Crockett Club's National Collection of Heads and Horns, which includes nine world-record trophies, is now part of the Cody Firearms Museum.

The big game trophies are located in a 19th century Adirondack-style lodge 50 miles east of Yellowstone National Park. The 31 trophies are considered the finest available specimens of their kind. Any trophy may be replaced by a better one if it becomes available.

The collection includes the L.S. Chadwick stone ram, considered by the Boone and Crockett Club as the finest North American trophy ever taken.

Faustastically assembled to provide examples of the finest of North American big game animals, the collection was without a home in recent years, after the New York Zoological Society (Bronx Zoo) in New York, changing its focus, converted the rooms where the heads were displayed into office space. At first it couldn't give the collection away.

Now it is part of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center, which also includes the Whitney Gallery of Western Art, the Buffalo Bill Museum and the Plains Indian Museum.

Perhaps the most striking trophy in the lodge is the Robert Swan wapiti, or American elk, taken in 1912, which spans 5 feet, 1 inch between the tips of the antlers.

William T. Hornaday began the collection in 1907, believing Americans' great big game resources eventually would be wiped out by advancing civilization. Events, however, proved him wrong as new world-record animals are recorded by Boone and Crockett Club scorers regularly.

He and other club members and funds raised money to build a building at the Bronx Zoo which would house the collection.

In 1977, Lowell Baier, a sportsman and member of the Boone and Crockett Club, dropped by the zoo to see the collection and, angered by its condition, began a letter-writing campaign to save and display it.

He met with William H. Nesbitt, manager of the National Rifle Association's Hunting Activities Department, who later would become executive director of the Boone and Crockett Club.

While they worked on a plan to save the collection, the zoo and the American Museum of Natural History in New York agreed the museum would keep the heads in storage.

They brought the problem to Sam Webb, who led the effort to design the club's current scoring system and got the zoo and museum to turn the collection over to the Boone and Crockett Club in 1978.

It subsequently went on temporary display at the NRA Museum in Washington and later at the Buffalo Bill Museum. It found its permanent home in June, 1991.

The Boone and Crockett Club was founded in 1887 by Theodore Roosevelt and other sportsmen. Throughout its history it has encouraged wildlife conservation and promoted enforceable game laws, hunter ethics programs and fair chase in hunting.

Rain slows down area fishermen

Inclement weather kept fishermen and boaters off area lakes in droves last week, but this helped long-range prospects.

For instance, Lake J.B. Thomas has now gained slightly over 12 vertical feet and increased surface area by 2½ square miles. It's 75,000 ac. ft. is 4,000 ac. ft. more than twice the content before the rise. At mid-week, there was still some inflow.

Lake E.V. Spence gained 5.5 feet and had nearly 220,000 ac. ft. content, a gain of over 40,000 ac. ft. Lake temperature was 74, and water muddy to murky in the upper reaches. Fishing out of Paint Creek Marina, Dee and Lil Anderson, Robert Lee, hooked a 44-lb., 5-oz., yellow catfish on their trotline. Black bass were biting well around the Wildcat Marina where C.M. Riggs, Odessa reeled in 6½-lb and 8-lb. bass with top-water lure; also James Hayes and Rocky Wooley, Austin, had a stinger of eight good channel catfish, the largest 7½-lbs., caught with minnows.

Lake Ivie continue to catch the big volumes of water, where four gates were opened one foot temporarily over the weekend. It was estimated that as much as two feet of water were released before the lake levelled to 1551.50, the maximum, at mid-week. The main body was clear, although the upper tributaries were muddy. Water temperature was 72.8 top and 60.5 bottom in the main body.

There were 262 entries in the Coleman Bass Club tournament, and there were 21 catches over the 18-in. minimum limit. Over 250 boats were on the waters, and Bill Smith, Odessa had the biggest bass at 3.96 lbs. and Joe Mills, Early, the over-all winner with two bass a 7.76. Otherwise, small bass and crappie fishing were good, yellow catfish fair; walleye catches poor.

Negro League players have some stories to tell

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Benson had a story to tell at Shea Stadium a couple of hours before the San Francisco Giants played the New York Mets.

Benson played 15 years in the Negro Leagues, mostly with the Philadelphia Stars. He never became famous, but he helped someone who did.

"Yes, Willie Mays learned his basket catch from me," Benson said. "I did it all the time, but Willie made it look better. He got there faster, too."

Benson was one of 27 Negro League stars, including Hall of Famers Monte Irvin and Buck

Leonard, who were honored Tuesday night. Six of them came in wheelchairs. They all showed up with a smile.

It would be understandable if these men were bitter. But they're not. Each has a story, to tell, and most have a happy ending.

Ted "Double Duty" Radcliffe is now 90 years old. He was given his nickname by sportswriter Damon Runyon after the 1932 Negro League World Series in which he caught Satchel Paige in Game 1 and pitched a shutout in Game 2.

"Satchel was the best pitcher I ever saw in any league," Radcliffe said. "Look what he did in the ma-jeor leagues, and he was an old man by then."

Mays and Irvin both got their start in the Negro Leagues. Manager Piper Davis signed the 16-year-old Mays in 1948 to play for the Birmingham Black Barons. In his first game against the Cleveland Buckeyes, Mays had two hits off the legendary Chet Brewer.

Mays and Irvin got their chance to play in the major leagues because Jackie Robinson opened the door in 1947 with the Brooklyn Dodgers. Some of the former players said Robinson was not the best player in the Negro Leagues.

"I was a better hitter than Jackie," said Bill Wright, who played in seven Negro League All-Star games. "Also, I was a better outfielder than he was a second baseman."

Irvin and Mays were teammates on the Giants, helping New York to win the pennant in 1951 and the World Series in 1954.

"I saw the best of the Negro Leagues and the best of the major leagues," said Irvin, who worked in the commissioner's office after retiring. "I feel very fortunate."

Irvin would like to see Leon Day in the Hall of Fame, too.

"Leon Day could pitch, hit and was a fast runner," Irvin said. "I would compare him to Bob Gibson."

Day's career in the Negro Leagues started in 1935 when he signed with the Brooklyn Eagles. He was a consistent .300 hitter and set a league record with 18 strikeouts in one game.

An association of former players from the Negro Leagues has been formed and they're trying to raise $1 million to help those in need. The players in the Negro Leagues never got rich.

They traveled in cars — usually their own — and got less than a dollar a day for meal money. Even in the 1930s it was hard to eat three meals on a buck.

"We had fun, though," said Bill Cash, who played for the Philadelphia Stars and in the Chicago White Sox organization until 1955.

The greatest player in the history of the Negro Leagues was probably Josh Gibson, who was often compared to Babe Ruth. Gibson hit some of the longest home runs ever, including one that reportedly went completely out of Yankee Stadium. Ruth never did that.

"There were a lot of great things that people never saw or heard about," said his son, Josh Gibson Jr., now 64 and a former player himself. "I wouldn't know where to start."

Former pitching star handles life's changeup well

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Former pitcher Jon Peters has a steady answer for those who try to put a tear in his eye.

Peters set a national high school record of 53 consecutive victories at Brenham High School and tried to continue his career at Texas

A&M before four arm surgeries and the prospect of another forced him to end his pitching dreams.

But there's no need to zoom the camera in for an emotion-choked closeup of his farewell from the pitcher's mound.

"When I was 12 years old my first goal was to be a professional athlete," Peters said. "My second goal was to coach high school and college baseball. Pitching beyond high school just wasn't meant to be for me."

Peters accepted a scholarship to Texas A&M but never pitched for the Aggies. He underwent elbow surgery in February, 1990, and transferred to Blinn Junior College in January 1991.

He pitched two games for Blinn and finished his pitching career with a 1-1 college record. He had elbow surgery last March and had a second shoulder surgery in April. And doctors wanted to do more.

Peters has returned to A&M, where he is majoring in kinesiology, which includes the study of the mechanics of human movement. He's working as a student assistant to the baseball team and hopes to be graduated in 1993 and begin work on a masters degree in education administration.

Peters may be his own research project for his Analysis of Movement class coming up in the fall.

Rodeo days

When it comes to competition, Ruby's a gem

Cecial and Ruby Allred pose for a photo in 1963. Ruby, an 80-year-old great-grandmother, has had a life-long love affair with riding and rodeos.

By JEAN WARREN
Prime Writer

Ruby Allred is making plans for another rodeo. Since 1942, she has helped select the trophies to be presented at the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo.

Riding and rodeos have long been an important part of the life of this 80-year-old great-grandmother, who is the oldest member of the Howard County Sheriff's Posse, and the first woman to become a member of the organization.

"I rode before I ever walked," laughs Ruby. "Papa (P.O. Hughes) ran a Wild West show that appeared in Cross Plains, Coleman, Putnam, and other small towns. Papa always began the show with this invitation, 'Ten dollars to the man who can stay on this horse for three minutes.'"

There were always several contenders because $10 was a tidy sum in the year 1913. One by one, aspiring riders were bucked off the brown and white paint named Teddy.

Then Ruby, just a baby, was lifted to the back of Teddy; to the surprise and delight of the audience, she sat safely on the formidable horse that, moments before, had sent grown men sprawling to the ground.

So began Ruby's life-long love affair with horses. She has great respect for a horse's intelligence. "Teddy knew I was a baby; that's why he never bucked when I was on his back."

When her family settled on a farm north of Big Spring, Ruby had to ride seven miles to attend school at Knott. Pet, the bay mare she rode, would allow her to open and close the seven wire gates on her route, without dismounting.

"Pet was a great horse," Ruby recalls. "When I went hunting, I could shoot from horseback, and the little mare would never flinch."

By the time Ruby was 10, she was helping with farming operations. She remembers climbing a plank fence or standing on a feed trough in order to buckle the horse collars.

In 1933, Ruby was a contestant in a Boy-Girl Rodeo staged in Big Spring on the site of Howard College. The entry fee was 25 cents, and the prize for girls was a pair of step-ins and a pair of silk stockings. Modesta Good (Stokes) came in first in the girls' horse race, but Ruby was a close second.

That same year, she rode in the Ladies Free-For-All Race at the Abilene Fair. Her mount was a big horse named Wet Rope, and her sponsor was Harte-Hanks newspaper chain. Entry fee was $2.50, and the purse was $50.

In 1934, Ruby was a sponsor representing Stanton at the Stamford Cowboy Reunion. The local press described her as "one of the classiest young lady riders in West Texas."

Ruby Hughes and Cecial Allred were married July 25, 1934. During their courting days, Cecial would ride 11 miles to the Hughes' farm home west of Knott. Many times the two of them would then ride to Stanton to participate in goat roping contests. Ruby's mount was Prince; he was part-Shetland, small and fast and able to anticipate the goat's moves. Often, other riders would offer Ruby their "winnings" to borrow her horse.

In the early days of their marriage, the couple had no washing machine. Ruby recalls tying the laundry behind her on the saddle and riding over to visit her mother-in-law who had a washing machine powered by a gasoline motor. When Ruby had finished the laundry, she tied the clothes carefully in a sheet and made her way home.

For five years, prior to the birth of their daughter, Ruby and Cecial were on the race track. Through the week, Ruby exercised the horses while Cecial farmed. In the early days of the race track at Ackerly, she rode Bay Wood, a horse purchased from Jesse Slaughter, who considered him "not fast enough to rope a calf." But Bay Wood was wonderful on the track. "That horse fed us and our farm team," says Ruby. In 1936, the couple participated in the opening of Midland Downs.

Daughter Joan (Mrs. Derwood Blagrove) shares her parents' love of horses. She grew up with Skeeter, a blaze face horse the same age as Joan herself.

Ruby broke Skeeter. She says, "To break a horse, you have to think like a horse." Grandsons Stan and Steve Blagrove learned to ride on Skeeter; he was part of the family for 27 years.

Ruby and Cecial have ridden in many events as part of the American Association of Sheriff's Poses and Riding Clubs. For two years they were members of the "Rhythm Riders" who did square dances on horseback. "It was beautiful," recalls Ruby. "The horses learned the calls. It was fast and exciting."

In 1967 and 1968, Ruby and Cecial were judges of the grand opening parade for the Southwest Exposition and Stock Show in Ft. Worth.

They participated in the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train, driving two wagons from Lamesa to O'Donnell. Great-granddaughter Shelli Blagrove accompanied them.

Ruby served as a director of the Heritage Museum from 1981-85. The Allreds donated the buggy that is now on display at the museum. At their farm home near Knott, they have many memorabilia of the early days in West Texas, including a chuck wagon, a buggy, a surrey, and a chair and settee fashioned of horns covered with heavy, hand-tooled leather.

One year they invited the first graders from Sands School to a chuck wagon dinner at their home. Then they took the students for a ride in the surrey "with the fringe on top."

The Allreds' charming farm home north of Knott has grown from the original two-room house they built in 1934. Ruby laughingly recalls how she and Cecial sold their saddle horses to pay for wood for the house. The lumber was green, and cracks in the walls became apparent as the wood dried. In the living room are two kerosene lamps — wedding gifts from neighbors.

In the winter, sandhill cranes gather to feed in the wheat field. The nearest neighbor is three miles away. And at night, the lonely call of a coyote breaks the stillness.

But their lives are far from isolated. Ruby and Cecial continue to be active in church and community affairs, and in the preservation of their West Texas heritage.

Ruby Hughes, as she was known before her marriage to Cecial Allred, rides her horse in the company of her friend, K. Brooks in this photo taken in 1928.

Ruby shows her talent as she rides a bull many years ago.

Low-fat fare in the air

For those concerned about finding meals that fit into a low-fat, high-fiber diet when traveling, a little pre-planning may be in order.

Airlines are making attempts now to meet consumer demands for more nutritious, low-fat fare. The major airlines offer a wide variety of special meals, ranging from Kosher to diabetic, to meet particular dietary needs. Calling at least 24 hours ahead is required to select the type of meal that suits your eating preference. If you desire a low-fat meal with adequate fruits and vegetables, the choices most likely will be low-fat, low-cholesterol, fruit plates and cold seafood plates.

Special meals are served according to a rotating menu. The low-cholesterol meal will include something along the order of lean meat or skinless chicken, vegetables, tossed salad, and fresh fruit. Fresh fruit, cottage cheese, crackers or bread (look out for that buttery croissant, however) usually make up the fruit plate. The seafood plate itself will be low-fat, but the dessert may not be. First-class special meals include food served more formally than in coach, but the dietary specifications remain the same. Your reservation agent can give you more specific information about the menu for your flight.

Confirm your special meal 24 hours prior to departure. Specify your special meal selection with your travel agent so when ticketing your flight, the agent will alert the airline of your special meal request. In the event of last-minute flight change or departure delay, don't expect your special meal to make the plane. To prepare for emergencies, such as unplanned layovers, takeoff delays, or a snack-attack when you reach your hotel, always fortify your carry-on bag with a few good edibles such as a piece of fruit and a package of instant oatmeal or bran cereal.

Other suggestions for carry-on foods include:

- A baggie of dry cereal such as oat-squares or popcorn or fruit-filled miniature shredded wheat squares.
 - Pretzels.
 - Dried fruit such as prunes or apricots.
 - A bagel or low-fat muffin.
 - Raw vegetables in a zip-lock bag.
 - A sandwich of lean meat or low-fat cheese (if you will be eating it within two hours of the time you removed it from the refrigerator).
- Remember, enjoy a nutritious diet at any altitude by carrying a few healthful snacks or ordering your meal in advance. It's only a phone call away.

Montford speaks at luncheon Politicians have learned some new rules campaigning this year, Sen. John Montford quipped at this week's Chamber of Commerce Community luncheon.

"For instance," he said. "Don't fly first class, and don't campaign in a foreign car!"

The senator was keynote speaker at the event which saluted our town's state and federal employers.

The luncheon was part of the training for the current Leadership Big Spring class, including LaNelle Witt, Jerry Edwards, Glen Carrigan, Shelley Hacker, David McWherter, Pat Atkins, Linda Brasel and Charlie Marmolejo, among others. For several Leadership candidates, it was their first time out at a community luncheon.

Al Valdes barely made it back from Florida in time to attend. He and Lillian have just returned from a six-week vacation there, visiting friends and the family of Al's late brother and former Big Spring resident, Danny Valdes.

Tommy Churchwell said he was planning a family vacation to Houston soon, with NASA, Astroworld, and an Astros game on the agenda.

Marae Brooks got a surprise when she went out to get into her car that morning. The torrential rain the night before was all her driveway could stand, and her car had sunk into the ground!

The event's $100 door prize, a gift certificate with local merchants, went to Dr. Jerome Hutchens. He just moved here six months ago from Houston.

Dining on baked chicken were Jerry Worthy, Jim Weaver, Jean Rountree, Julie Shirey, Marie Hall, Sandy Wright, Dr. P.W. Malone, Bob Riley, Linda Conway, Cliff Chapman, Mayor Tim Blackshear, Oliver Cofer, Hooper Sanders, Harold Davis, James Welch, Marie Hall, Police Chief Joe Cook, Downtown Coordinator Paul Hopper and many others, including contingencies from the honorees — VA Medical Center, the U.S. Post Office, the Federal Corrections Institute, and Big Spring State Hospital.

Sherrie Bordofski's sister, Lea Porter, Danville, Calif., flew in for a visit.

The two picked up their mother, Clara Brown, in Sweetwater and drove to Baton Rouge, La., to see Clara's sister Mary Belle Hill.

A third sister, Lovella Stuart, Sylvester, met the other family members in Baton Rouge.

Joe and Donna Wennik and son, Hank, visited her parents, June and Carl Marcum, in Maybank recently.

Hank stayed on to visit a friend in Canton.

Donna is looking forward to the return to the United States of her cousin, Dana Fossett, and her husband Kevin and son Rian. The Fossetts have been living in Kenya, where Kevin was stationed with the Marines, for the past 2½ years.

"We'll expect to see her at our family reunion in Kerrville July 4," says Donna.

Bob and Ann Moore were hosts recently to her brother, Henry Reynolds, and his wife Margaret, Long Island, N.Y.

The two couples drove to Shreveport, La., to celebrate the 81st birthday of Martin Reynolds, who is the brother of Henry and Ann.

Another brother, Edward Reynolds, with his wife, Lucy Jane, drove in from Baton Rouge for the family gathering.

"We just visited and caught up on family news," Ann says.

Former Big Spring resident Marj Carpenter has recently received a Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Austin College, Sherman.

Marj was a popular columnist and reporter for the Big Spring Herald from 1972-1979. She's now director of News Services for the Presbyterian Church (USA), and current president of the National Federation of Press Women.

Former Navy lieutenant Debbie Shroyer will enroll at Stamford University in September to complete a master's degree in business administration.

The daughter of Sonny and Shirley Shroyer, Debbie is currently living in Berkeley, Cal.

Debbie, a graduate of Big Spring High School, attended the U.S. Naval Academy and served in the Navy almost seven years.

"Sometimes I have to pinch myself, I am so proud of Debbie's accomplishments," says proud mother Shirley.

To pay or not to pay

DEAR ABBY: A few days ago, I gave a bridal shower for "Sally," who has been my best friend since junior high school. I invited 44 women, which included our mutual friends and all the women in Sally's family — even her great-grandmother, who just celebrated her 88th birthday.

Without my knowledge, Sally's future sister-in-law (I'll call her Carole) surprised me by hiring a male stripper to entertain at my shower. In the course of his dance, this male stripper removed every stitch of his clothing. Several women walked out in the middle of the performance. Sally's elderly great-grandmother was so embarrassed, she hid her face in a napkin.

Of course, several women hooted, laughed and applauded loudly and thought it was wonderful. The help even came out of the kitchen to have a look.

Well, the day after the shower, Carole called to say that she was short of money to pay the stripper, and would I mind chipping in $25?

Abby, I can afford the $25, but the stripper was not my idea, and I don't think I should be asked to chip in to pay him.

I've asked a few of my friends, and some thought I should chip in to pay for the surprise entertainment, and others thought I shouldn't. What do you think? — PAULA (NOT MY REAL NAME)

DEAR PAULA: Since you didn't hire the stripper, you shouldn't have been asked to "chip in" to pay him. You paid for everything else, and you should not have to help pay for entertainment you neither planned nor enjoyed.

DEAR ABBY: For the last year and a half, I have been in an exclusive relationship with a very fine widower. He has three grown children. His wife passed away seven months before we became involved. (My husband had been dead for eight years.)

Ours is a strong, loving relationship that I am sure will eventually end in marriage. We both had good marriages. His lasted for 23 years, mine 10 years.

Now the problem: Not only does he still wear his wedding ring, he also wears his wife's high school graduation ring on a chain around his neck. He never takes it off — not even to shower. This makes me uncomfortable in certain situations — for example, when we make love and the ring is dangling in my face.

I've mentioned this, but he continues to wear it. Since he has proclaimed his love for me, why is he still wearing those items?

Also, when he marries me, where will the wedding band I intend to give him be worn? We aren't just going steady; we have a lifelong commitment. — IN LOVE WITH A "MARRIED" MAN

DEAR IN LOVE: The man who has proclaimed his love for you, and with whom you believe you have a lifelong commitment, may not be as committed to this relationship as you are.

He's still wearing "those items" that symbolize his attachment to his deceased wife because he is not yet ready — or able — to let go.

DEAR ABBY: Please suggest a polite way to correct someone's grammar. That "someone" is a middle-aged man with whom I am romantically involved. He has a fine character and is wonderful in every way — but unfortunately, he did not have the advantage of a high school education. — ARIZONA LADY

DEAR LADY: First, ask that "someone" if he would appreciate a few corrections in grammar — privately, of course. If he's as wonderful as you say he is, he should welcome your help.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long (business-size), self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Refinery woes: Rising costs, weak demand

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press

BIG SPRING — Fina oil refinery manager Jeff Morris is trying to ensure his plant in the heart of West Texas oil country will survive.

The gush-to-slush trend the U.S. energy industry has suffered in recent years, along with tougher environmental rules, have raised doubts about the future of many refineries.

Chevron Corp., Amoco Corp. and Unocal Corp. are already trimming refinery operations and others are looking to cut.

Morris didn't need a crystal ball to begin scouring for economic incentives for his facility, which cranks out about 60,000 barrels of low-sulfur diesel a day and employs about 260 people.

The costs to upgrade the Big Spring plant to meet Clean Air Act provisions in 1993 and 1995 are forecast in the tens of millions, but the plant will not see any increased profitability or new jobs, Morris said.

To ease that onslaught, Morris went to Howard County commissioners seeking a $38 million tax abatement.

The commissioners, some voicing anger that local gasoline prices

Jeff Morris, manager of the Big Spring Fina Refinery, poses in front of the facility recently. The refinery has sought a tax abatement from Howard County in an effort to keep costs down.

weren't getting any lower, voted 3-2 in April to grant only a $6.4 million abatement.

"They give you the song and dance about how all the oil refineries are going to fold and yet the gas prices here are among the most expensive I've seen," said commissioner John Stanley, who voted against the abatement. "I am tired of the taxpayers pulling up their bootstraps to pay for big businesses' bills."

While Morris works to secure the Big Spring facility's future, experts say the industry's current condition makes every refinery a target.

Small refineries, those producing 50,000 barrels a day or less, will be hit hardest because they don't have the capital to cover the upgrades mandated by the 1990 Clean Air Act and state regulations, experts say.

But even the larger refineries are not immune. When Chevron announced 500 layoffs at its oldest and largest refinery in Port Arthur in January, it sent a cold chill through the industry.

"The communities really haven't understood the impact (of the environmental regulations) and costs on the refineries," said Lance Gyorf, plant manager of Chevron's Port Arthur facility.

The 315,000-barrel plant on the Texas Gulf Coast was facing $1.1 billion to keep the refinery running at full capacity under new environmental emission and wastewater treatment rules, company officials said.

It costs half that amount to run the plant at reduced capacity.

"It's this time where the demand isn't keeping up with supply that those with the lowest operating costs can sustain themselves," Gyorf said. "The poorer cost competitive refineries will go away, and the balance of the refineries will make money."

"We think the Clean Air Act is going to cost $30 billion to $50

Fina officials debate proposed tax abatement

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Fina Oil & Chemical Co. officials are still debating whether to accept an approved tax abatement on 30 percent of allowable abatement on a $27.5 million plant improvement project.

A normal 60-day deadline to sign an abatement contract with county and school elected officials passed June 5 but Fina officials have asked for another extension.

Fina officials are concerned that the abatement is not enough to justify property-tax valuations to be locked at the current level as stipulated by the contract. The abatement — the result of a controversial compromise — is only 17 percent of the amount asked for on $38.1 million in improvements.

Fina could actually lose money by accepting the abatement because the plant may depreciate more than the value increases on which taxes are waived by the abatement, said plant manager Jeff Morris.

"I would like to have probably another 60 days for further analysis," Morris said.

The request will be placed on the agenda of the next regular meeting of the Howard County Commissioners Court, June 22, said County Judge Ben Lockhart.

The abatement policy says that a contract would be "normally" signed within 60 days after all necessary information is received. "It doesn't say it's required," Morris pointed out.

Data to be analyzed includes a preliminary appraisal of the plant that shows the value, not including land and inventory, may increase this year from $65 million to $75 million, which would increase taxes about $200,000, although much of that is abated in previous abatement agreements.

The current abatement, if also approved by the Big Spring Independent School District and the Howard College district, would waive an estimated $444,000 in taxes — $88,000 a year — over five years and Fina would pay $13.8 million in taxes over the expected 30-year life of the projects. The school districts can only accept or reject what the county approved.

The abatement has been surrounded in controversy since it was announced in February. County commissioners in March rejected the whole abatement, which would have cut taxes by $2.7 million over eight years, citing lack of public support, no permanent jobs being created — although about 100 construction jobs will be sustained a year — and high local gas prices. A compromise motion to abate 75 percent of allowable abatement was not even seconded.

Commissioners reconsidered in April after reporting receiving numerous phone calls in support of the abatement. A compromise to abate 30 percent on the low sulphur diesel unit passed 3-2.

Hernandez gets CDA credentials

Erlinda Hernandez of Big Spring, has been awarded a Child Development Associate (CDA) Credential in recognition of outstanding work with young children.

The credential was awarded by the Council for Early Childhood Professional Recognition in Washington, D.C., which represents the early childhood profession.

CDA is the only major national effort to improve child care by evaluating and recognizing the skills of individuals providing care. Although the first credential was awarded just over 15 years ago, 49 states plus the District of Columbia already include CDA in child care licensing regulations. Others are considering similar action.

Mancill, Stallings make round table

Jerry E. Mancill, and Louis E. Stallings of Big Spring have qualified as 1992 members of the Texas Leaders Round Table (TLRT).

Affiliated with the Texas Association of Life Underwriters, TLRT recognizes outstanding achievement in the life and health insurance and related financial services industry.

Mancill and Stallings qualified for 1992 TLRT membership by meeting strict professional and ethical requirements, as well as achieving successful sales production records and rendering continuous service to clients and their beneficiaries. Both are members of the Midland Area Association of Life Underwriters.

Rural values should rise

COLLEGE STATION — Rural land values in Texas should rise gradually throughout the 1990s after decreases in the previous decade, according to a Texas A&M University agricultural economist. "Barring some unforeseen economic problems, it would appear that between now and the year 2000, we're going to have appreciation generally in farm land values across Texas," said Dr. Ivan Schmedemann.

Business highlights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices shot up 0.4 percent in May, the biggest advance in 19 months, as escalating energy costs overwhelmed declines in food prices, the government said.

The Labor Department blamed the jump in its Producer Price Index, which measures inflationary pressures before they reach the consumer, on sharply higher costs for gasoline and other energy products and the biggest increase in tobacco products in a decade.

Analysts were taken by surprise by the sharp price spurt in May.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales rose 0.2 percent in May, the government said, raising new worries about the staying power of the economic recovery.

The seasonally adjusted rise to $158.8 billion announced Thursday was far less than the healthy 0.6 percent gain anticipated by economists. The department also sliced its previous estimate of April sales from a strong 0.9 percent to a modest 0.4 percent. Sales fell 1.2 percent in March.

Analysts warned that until the economy begins generating more jobs, retail spending, which represents a third of the economy, will remain slow at best.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of new claims for unemployment benefits remained at 407,000 for the week ending May 30, the Labor Department said.

Analysts were disappointed Thursday by the failure of jobless claims to show any improvement, especially given the fact that there was one fewer day to file claims because of the Memorial Day holiday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A day before its threatened closing, United Press International said a New York lawyer had agreed to keep the 85-year-old news service going while he considers bidding for its assets.

UPI officials had said the company would go out of business at midnight today unless a buyer could be found.

Steve Geimann, UPI's executive vice president and editor, said the last-minute offer was made by Leon Charney, who described himself as a lawyer specializing in banking, real estate and finance. He heads Charney Communications Network, which produces the Leon Charney Report, broadcast Sundays in New York.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California sought to revoke Sears' license to repair cars because undercover investigators were overcharged an average of $223 per visit during a probe that lasted more than a year, authorities said.

California officials alleged Thursday that the 106-year-old Sears, Roebuck & Co. used its reputation as a reliable American institution to fleece customers.

Sears blasted the investigation as incompetent and seriously flawed, promising a vigorous defense.

There will be a 1993 year Crop Reduction Program sign-up beginning Monday and ending at close of business Friday, June 26.

This will be the only bid application period for the 1993 year. Acceptable bids will go into effect Oct. 1, with the first annual rental payment being due on or about Oct. 1, 1993. 1992 Spring-seeded crops (cotton, hay, etc.), that exist on acres bid into the 1993 CRP may be harvested once. No grazing of 1993 CRP acres may occur after Oct. 1, 1992.

We will be required to measure the prospective bid acres prior to bid submission. If you intend to bid a portion of a field, you will need to put up fence posts (T-post, cedar post, etc.) delineating the proposed CRP acres.

If you have a partial field to bid please go ahead and get your posts as soon as possible. If you are unsure where you want to set your posts this office can perform stake and reference service at a cost of $40 for the first plot plus $20 for each plot after that.

Eligible land for enrollment in the CRP includes cropland that has been planted or considered planted

Fewer Americans living on the farm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer than 1 in 50 Americans live on the farm, and not even half of those who do are living off of it.

The Census Bureau and the Agriculture Department said Tuesday that 4.6 million people resided on farms in 1990, down from 6.1 million a decade earlier.

Moreover, the report said, only 45 percent of farm dwellers derived their principal incomes from farming.

In 1990, four out of 10 Americans lived on a farm. By 1960 that number had shrunk to fewer than one in 10.

While nearly two-thirds of the working men living on farms still make farming their principal occupation, more than three out of four farm women held outside jobs, the joint report said.

The outside jobs held by farm women tended to be the lower-paying kinds. Nearly two out of three women working outside held technical, sales, clerical or service jobs, the study found.

But farm household income increased by 19 percent in the late 1980s, the report said. The average farm household earned $28,824 in income in 1990.

"The contribution of more farm resident women working off the farm adds to the income, and more farmers working off the farm also stabilizes the income," said Laarni Daquiel of the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service.

The number of farm workers fell in the 1980s, as it has for nearly a century. In 1990 there were 2.9 million people in farm occupations, about 46,000 fewer than in 1980 and about one-fourth of the peak of 11.6 million farm workers recorded in 1910.

Other facts from the agencies' report:

- Half of all farm residents lived in the Midwest, and 29 percent in the South.
- More than 40 percent of people living on farms are 45 or older, compared to about 30 percent of other Americans.
- Only one out of 14 rural Americans lives on a farm, defined by the government as a place that in a year sells agricultural products worth $1,000 or more.
- More than a fourth of the nation's farm residents lives in an urban area.
- Nearly 98 percent of farm residents are white.

to produce an agricultural commodity two of five crop years 1986 through 1990 and is physically and legally capable of continued crop production. In addition the person offering the land for CRP must have owned or operated the subject acreage for three years prior to July 26, 1992.

Land also must be determined highly erodible by the Soil Conservation Service. This determination must be made prior to bid submission.

Beginning with the present sign-up, eligible owners and operators will be able to submit separate bids for each tract of land. All producers will submit their bids for acceptance into CRP in a national pool of which only about 1.1 million acres will be accepted.

Applicants' bids will be submitted to Washington for evaluation at the national level. Bids will be evaluated for:

- Environmental benefits per dollar expended by CCC when compared to all other bids submitted for evaluation.
- Reasonableness when compared to cash rental rates for comparable land.

Through CRP Sign-up 11, Howard County accepted 192 bids totaling 35,337.3 acres. Howard County was originally eligible to accept a total of 55,486 acres into the CRP. Based on current CRP enrollment Howard County could accept an additional 20,148.7 acres into CRP.

This spring has certainly seen its share of problems with all kinds of plants. We had such a cool and wet one that a lot of unusual insects and diseases for West Texas appeared.

We had a lot of stem rot (damping off) of young vegetables, particularly tomatoes. The soil-borne organisms that cause this problem are in most soils at any given time and with the right conditions available, usually high humidity, wet soils and cool temperatures, especially at night, this disease is triggered.

All kinds of insects have hit us this spring, but fortunately, the pecan nut casebearer seemed to be not as big a problem as in most years. Keep checking your pecans, however. Our second spray date is around July 1, so watch the activity of this moth as it goes into its second generation of reproduction.

As we move into summer, take a critical look at your landscape. Make notes of how you think it can be better arranged, plants that need replacement, overgrown plants that need to be removed, and possible activity areas that can be enjoyed by family members. These are all good projects to take care of next winter.

Check for insects and disease. Spider mites can be especially troublesome at this time of year. As we experience hotter and drier temperatures, don't forget to supplement irrigation when needed.

Water lawns and gardens thoroughly but not too frequently. As a general rule, soak to a depth of 8 inches. Finish watering by 2 p.m. to lessen the chance of disease.

During summer, water or soil moisture becomes extremely important and essential for good plant production. Because continual watering is often times costly and time consuming, it pays to conserve the moisture around plants.

The best ways to conserve garden moisture is by mulching. A good mulch will not only retain valuable moisture needed for plant growth but will insure several other things as well to improve gardening success.

Mulches are usually applied 2-6 inches deep, depending on the material used. In general, the coarser the material, the deeper the mulch. For example, a two inch layer of cottonseed hulls will have about the same mulching effect as 6 inches of oat straw or 4 inches of coastal bermuda hay.

It is still time to plant some of the more colorful heat tolerant summer annuals. You can direct seed zinnias and portulaca and purchase plants of periwinkle, salvia and marigold.

Just be sure to water transplants as needed until roots become established.

Removing faded flowers from the plant before they set seed will keep the plants growing and producing more flowers. A light application of fertilizer every 4-6 weeks will also be helpful.

House plants can be moved outdoors this month. Sink the pots in a cool, shaded garden bed to prevent them from drying out so quickly. Water pots, container plants and hanging baskets often.

Monthly feeding with a house plant fertilizer will encourage continued growth.

June is a time to select day lily varieties as they reach their peak of bloom.

Continue to spray roses with a good black spot control such as Funginex, Benlate or Manzate.

Fertilize rose beds every 4-6 weeks. Best to apply a high nitrogen fertilizer immediately after a flush of bloom.

Spray lower trunks and limbs of peach trees now with Malathion or Sevin to try to control the peach tree borer. Follow-up next August with a treatment of Dursban on the same areas and then in late October sprinkle some PCB crystals out about 6-8 inches from the trunk. Following this plant should control this pest of peaches.
