Foster parent program scheduled for Thursday

A weekly program for persons interested in becoming foster or adoptive parents will be held from 6:30-9:30 on Thursdays at the Department of Human Services, 707 E. 3rd St.

The training program, entitled Model Approach to Partnerships in Parenting, will be conducted by Elaine Johnson, foster home developer, and Norton Teutsch, foster parent in-service trainer for Children's Protective Services.

For more information, contact Johnson at 263-7671.

Symphony campaign on

The Big Spring Symphony Orchestra's fundraising drive is inching closer to its goal, according to Symphony President Gil Oxendine.

To date, $7,240 has been raised. The drive's goal is $60,000, Oxendine said.

Money raised during the drive will go to help fund the various community programs the symphony produces each year.

Fireworks fund grows

The Fourth of July fireworks fund has grown to the point that less than $1,500 needs to be raised. Eddie Cole is chairman of the project for the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

Few towns in this area will have a fireworks display on July 4, and Cole promises that Big Spring's effort will be as big as ever.

For more information, contact the chamber of commerce at 263-7641.

Red Cross seeks funds, manpower

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

American Red Cross officials from around the state are struggling to rebuild county housing destroyed in the severe weather that began late Thursday.

The Director of Disaster Assistance Services for the local American Red Cross, Paul Hopper, has been working with Terry Kelly, Red Cross field service representative from Dallas, in surveying the damage, planning repairs and finding shelter for dispossessed families.

The $60,000 in damages from the storm includes two completely destroyed homes, 15 homes with major damage, and 288 homes with minor damage, Hopper said.

The 15 buildings with major damage are classified as such because they are uninhabitable until major repairs are made, he said.

A serious toll was taken on mobile homes as eight received major damage and another 45 received minor damage. Four multi-family complexes also received damage from the tornado-force winds.

The total number of buildings damaged, including homes and commercial property, is 362, with many of these being in the Coahoma area, Hopper said.

The primary problem encountered in the disaster relief efforts is the 20-percent insured rate among home owners, Hopper said. "We were taken aback by the low insured rates."

Hopper said, the main things that are needed now are volunteers and money to assist the 117 cases of endangered families in Howard County with which the Red Cross is currently working.

"We are in serious need of monetary contributions. (Some of) these people couldn't afford insurance and they certainly can't afford to fix their homes."

The Red Cross, which is totally supported by voluntary contributions, has set up a temporary office at 400 Main St. in Coahoma, which coordinates with the Big Spring office at 110 Northeast Eighth St., Hopper said. The phone numbers are 394-4011 and 267-3992 respectively.

Donations can be made at either office and volunteers are desperately needed, he added.

Current operations include training volunteers as family service representatives. The primary goal is to return people to their homes or other suitable housing in as timely a manner as possible and with as little disruption to the family as possible, Hopper said.

Looters make their getaway from a liquor store on Chicago's Westside after the Bulls beat Portland to win the National Basketball Association title. Scattered looting and fires broke out Sunday night across the city.

CHICAGO — Firefighters today tended still-smoldering blazes that broke out during a night of looting and arson when fans poured into the streets to celebrate the Chicago Bulls' second straight basketball championship.

Two people were critically burned late Sunday while trying to hide from looters who set fire to a liquor store on the South Side, police and hospital officials said.

RELATED STORY — 5A

Police closed bars early, and officers on horseback cleared streets after the trouble started Sunday night.

More than 1,000 police officers helped restore order, and about 300 people were arrested, police spokeswoman Tina Vicini said.

A police officer was shot in the foot, and another was wounded in the calf, authorities said. Neither was seriously hurt.

Onlookers threw bricks or rocks at firefighters, who responded to several blazes on the West Side and elsewhere, said fire department spokesman Mike Cosgrove. A five-story commercial building was still burning this morning, but the fire was under control.

Bulls star Michael Jordan pleaded for calm.

"Let's enjoy ourselves, but let's not tear up the city. It's our city," he said in a televised interview after the Bulls beat the Portland Trail Blazers at Chicago Stadium.

Looting was reported from downtown Michigan Avenue's chic shops to a four-block strip of stores on the much poorer West Side and a gas station and beauty salon on the South Side.

Windows were shattered on at least 30 buses, but no one aboard was hurt, Chicago Transit Authority officials said.

"On the West Side, looters broke shop windows and carried away carpet, liquor and food as police tried to disperse a crowd of hundreds. Some shopkeepers sprayed fire extinguishers to keep people away."

Dock's, a fast-food restaurant, was looted of frozen shrimp, fish and chicken, owner Randall Dawson said.

"The whole shopping center that I'm in is just ransacked," he said. "This is no celebration. Anybody who's a true Bulls fan would not be engaged in these activities."

Child protection laws may need toughening

DALLAS (AP) — Changes in the state's child protection system may not be tough enough to prevent the crimes that led to the deaths of 97 Texas children last year, advocates say.

An overhaul of all social service and health agencies effective Sept. 1 will turn child abuse investigations over to a new Department of Protective and Regulatory Services. The agency will have authority to remove from their homes children identified as being at risk.

But some worry the new law isn't sufficient.

"Will it make a difference? I am afraid it is window dressing, that it just transfers responsibilities and nothing will change," said Randy Burton, a Houston lawyer who has warred with Children's Protective Services since the mid-1980s.

CPS currently has to prove that the child is in imminent danger, or involved in an immediate crisis, to justify removal.

Ann Heiligenstein, state director of CPS, said the agency investigated 90,601 reports of abused or neglected children in 1991 and confirmed 34,759 cases.

Unconfirmed doesn't necessarily mean the reports weren't true. But they could not be proved, or the people named could not be found.

This year's tally includes 2-year-old Donny Martin of Garland, who died May 16 from "blunt force trauma" to his stomach, an autopsy showed.

For months, the child's father and day-care workers had reported to CPS that Donny might be a victim of child abuse. Donald Martin says he was told his son was not at risk.

The child's common-law father, Robert Morris Rose Jr., remains jailed on a first-degree felony charge of injury to a child.

"They're the only state agency I know of that is allowed to — literally — bury its mistakes," Burton said.

Fred Seale, director of the state

'We have to find a better way to provide treatment of the kids in our care. What we have now isn't working. If we don't, tomorrow's kids are going to be more disturbed than what we have today.'

Fred Seale

Randy Burton

agency's Region 5, which includes Dallas and Tarrant counties, said caseworkers live daily with the possibility that a mistake in judgment could be fatal.

He said he shares some frustrations voiced by critics. Burton, for instance, says child abuse is treated as a social ill, not as a crime. Burton contends that trained criminal investigators, not state social workers, should investigate complaints of abuse.

He also pointed to what he sees as a conflict between the agency's central mission — "to preserve the family unit" — and its responsibility to remove endangered children from harm.

The apparent conflict in goals is supposed to be eliminated when the September changes kick in, state Children's Protective Services officials said.

Death row

Supporters trying to save converted murderer

HOUSTON (AP) — Supporters trying to save Karla Faye Tucker from an execution date only days away say they feel her death row conversion is authentic, and she does not deserve to die for her 1983 role in two grisly pickax murders.

The 32-year-old Houston woman is scheduled to die by lethal injection on June 30. She would be the second woman executed in the United States since capital punishment was restored in 1976. Her attorney, George Secrest, is seeking a stay and a new trial.

"Everybody sees Jesus at the jail house," Sgt. M.B. Rankin told the Houston Chronicle in Sunday's editions. "But this woman isn't just talking. She is genuine. She shouldn't die."

Rankin is a relief officer who was stationed on the Harris County Jail's 12th floor during Tucker's recent stay. Before she was transported back to death row on June 4, Tucker regularly led a Bible study group of female inmates at the jail. The woman who dropped out of junior high school because she failed seventh grade three years in a row got her GED in prison, then 30 hours of college credit through correspondence courses.

She taught herself sign language. "So I could take these two hands that used to hurt and let them help," she says.

"I would expect that many people on death row are doing the same things that Tucker has done, but for some reason which I don't quite understand, Karla Faye Tucker is getting all this support, and it just doesn't seem fair," Joe Magliolo, a former Harris County district attorney who won Tucker's conviction in 1984 and now is an assistant U.S. attorney, said Sunday.

"Is it because she's a woman? Is it because she's young?" he asked. "I don't know."

"She took and pickaxed two people to death," Magliolo said. "I think since the jury said — 12 individual citizens said — she deserved to die for what she did, then that's the verdict."

Tucker says she will be disappointed if she has to die: She's been told she won't be able to donate her organs for transplants because the serum used to kill her will damage or destroy them.

"I had really hoped to be able to give my body to help others," she said. "That way, I could give life back for the life I took."

Her supporters also will be disappointed, but for different reasons. Despite her crime, they say she shouldn't die.

Those advocates include former prosecutors, police officers, and two relatives of the victims.

Many say they plan to write letters to beg for her life, claiming that the Karla Faye Tucker on death row isn't the same person as the prostitute and drug abuser who once bragged to friends that she became sexually aroused each time she plunged the pickax into her victim.

Tucker was convicted in 1984 of the June 13, 1983 murder of Jerry Lynn Dean, 26, of Houston. She also had been charged with capital murder in the slaying of Dean's girlfriend, Deborah Ruth David Thornton, 32. That charge was dismissed after Tucker testified against her co-defendant and former boyfriend, Daniel Garrett.

Garrett also got the death penalty and remains on death row. The attorneys who prosecuted Garrett in 1984, Rusty Hardin and Charley Davidson, say Tucker's testimony is crucial to convicting Garrett if he receives the new trial he's appealing for.

But they also say Tucker should live because she has changed.

"This is a caring, alive person who never forgets to ask about my new daughter when we talk," Davidson said. "When I was sitting up at (Harris County) jail the other night visiting her, I think I was closer to crying than she was."

Historians challenge Houston rumors

HOUSTON (AP) — Several historians say they know of no factual basis for allegations by California firefighters that Texas hero Sam Houston engaged in slave trading and was responsible for atrocities against Mexican women and children.

Some Palo Alto firefighters are protesting the use of a fire helmet named for Houston. Assistant Fire Chief Ruben Grijalva says the protesters think the helmets "would create a hostile work environment for some minorities."

"I think these people should pick somebody else to body slam," Historian Walter Buenger of Texas A&M University said. "For his time and even for ours Houston was a fairly authentic hero."

Grijalva said the issue surfaced when the fire department recently decided to buy a plastic helmet known as "The American." However, some preferred leather helmets and sought permission to buy The Sam Houston, designed to Houston Fire Department specifications.

Thousands of Sam Houston helmets have been sold since the model's introduction in 1987.

The department has referred the matter to the firefighters union, which will investigate the allegations about Houston.

"There is some controversy within the ranks, and I'm trying to prevent it from becoming a big issue," Grijalva said.

Tony Spitaleri, president of the Palo Alto firefighters union, said the union is obligated to look into grievances raised by its members, but no "findings, results or conclusions" have yet been reached.

Houston's life, which ended in 1863, was marked by controversy. He abruptly gave up the governorship of Tennessee after his first marriage fell apart, then went to live with the Cherokees.

Many suspect that Houston, acting as Andrew Jackson's agent, helped foment the revolution that freed Texas from Mexico. As president of the republic and a leading figure in Texas thereafter, Houston constantly was embroiled in bare-knuckle, political brawls.

Scholars still debate the merits of his military leadership during the Texas Revolution, but his courage, wisdom and eloquence have made him among Texas' greatest heroes.

He also, however, was an egotist, drunk and philanderer.

But Buenger noted Houston was ousted as governor of Texas in 1861 because he opposed the state's secession from the union.

Historian Thomas H. Kreneck, who wrote his doctoral dissertation on the Texas leader, said Houston permitted free blacks to continue living in Texas after Texas gained its independence even though the new republic banned free blacks.

Although Houston owned about a dozen slaves, he never was involved in slave trading, said Kreneck.

South Texas deformities speed action from Texas lawmakers

AUSTIN (AP) — State lawmakers who have been slow to fund a birth defects registry could move more quickly now that an alarming number of spinal and brain deformities have surfaced in South Texas, an aide said.

The Texas Department of Health said high rates of spinal deformities and anencephaly, in which the brain fails to develop, might have been detected earlier under a system for collecting and analyzing statistical information.

"It's something people can easily understand," said Vick Hines, legislative aide to Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi. "It's very clear something is wrong when you have such an unusual number of neural-tube disorders."

The neural-tube tissue in an embryo later develops into the brain and spinal cord. If the tube does not close during fetal development, anencephaly or spina bifida occurs.

A federal surveillance system for birth defects is also under consideration. Since 1986, doctors have identified dozens of such cases in Cameron County along the Texas-Mexico border.

Still uncertain of the cause, state health officials had been unaware of the problem until a group of hospital nurses reported about a year ago that six babies were born with anencephaly in a six-week period — several times the normal rate.

"The whole idea behind a centralized listing is to provide the information necessary to characterize the distribution of these birth defects," said Dennis Perrotta, director of the Health Department's epidemiology division.

He said more than 30 states already have such registries, with California spending about $7 million a year tracking birth defects. He proposed a pilot program in South Texas as a first step in developing a statewide program.

Hines said Truan supports giving the Health Department authority and funding to monitor birth defects in the state and plans legislation for a registry during the upcoming legislative session in January.

Tilton lashes back at Morales

DALLAS (AP) — Robert Tilton on Sunday lashed back at Attorney General Dan Morales, saying he has taken legal action as Morales vowed to continue investigating the television evangelist.

Morales had made the comment Friday after U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks harshly criticized him for ignoring an agreement made with Tilton's lawyers not to release a videotape to the news media.

But in a 20-minute segment of his sermon, Tilton delivered a stinging attack on Morales.

"He has no legal right to criminally or civilly investigate us, and we have by the way filed a suit against him for contempt of court. It has already been filed. We're not going to let him get away with his mouth," Tilton told a cheering congregation.

Tilton's Tulsa, Okla. attorney, J.C. Joyce, said a contempt citation was filed against Morales Thursday in Sparks' court, which earlier issued a permanent injunction against the attorney general.

The minister's Texas attorneys planned to supplement the motion Monday with the comments Morales made Friday.

Morales was appealing Sparks' order, which prevents his office from investigating the televangelist under state deceptive activities laws.

"Permanent injunctions mean nothing if they are to be violated," said Joyce.

"This church is going to protect itself," he said, adding that a hearing would be scheduled later on the contempt citation.

Morales has an unlisted Austin home phone number, according to directory assistance, and could not be reached Sunday by The Associated Press.

"Robert Tilton is raping the most vulnerable segments of our society, the poor, the infirm, the elderly — those who are so ignorant as to believe his garbage," Morales said Friday.

But Tilton, who showed television viewers the congregation at his suburban Dallas church, disagreed. The Farmers Branch-based ministry also showed its version of the Austin hearing.

"I want everybody at home to look at these people who are considered so messed-up in their brains," Tilton told his TV audience Sunday. "This is what's been said about you."

He contended most media coverage of the Austin hearing made him — not Morales — appear to be at fault.

"And he has a bigger problem than he realizes when he comes to the size of our God. Amen?" said Tilton.

Morales has been investigating Tilton's Word of Faith World Outreach Center after allegations that contributions were solicited under fraudulent circumstances.

Tilton has denied the allegations.

LOS ANGELES — Comedian Jerry Seinfeld says he was outraged by the Rodney King verdict, and he plans a benefit to help victims of the riots.

"I felt like doing a little rioting myself when that happened," he said. "I was extremely frustrated with the racist, social ignorance that caused that to happen."

Four white policemen were acquitted in the videotaped beating of King, a black motorist.

Seinfeld, 38, star of the NBC series "Seinfeld," is scheduled to appear Thursday with comedian George Wallace to raise money for riot victims.

"I thought this would be the best thing I could do as far as making a dent in the problem — probably not a dent, just a scratch. If I was Ross Perot, I could send a check," he said.

STANLEY, Falkland Islands — Hundreds of Falkland Islanders crammed the town hall to honor Margaret Thatcher for sending troops to retake the British colony from Argentina 10 years ago.

The former prime minister spoke Sunday at a thanksgiving church service, then laid a wreath at a memorial.

Argentine troops surrendered on June 14, 1982, after 10 weeks of fighting. Argentina had claimed sovereignty over the islands, which are off its coast, and invaded in April 1982.

More than 600 people attended a reception for Mrs. Thatcher. She was presented with a painting of Port Stanley's harbor.

Mrs. Thatcher became prime

CLAREMORE, Okla. — "Death Valley Days" star Dale Robertson is in the Oklahoma Military Academy's hall of fame but admits he was anything but a model student.

The 68-year-old actor said he wasn't too good at making a bed and received demerits for wearing his hair too long. He was sent on long walks as punishment.

"Every so many demerits, you had to go walk it off," he said. "There were several of us who needed the exercise, I suppose."

He was inducted Saturday into the Rogers State College-Oklahoma Military Academy Hall of Fame.

Robertson left the school in 1943 to serve in World War II. He went on to make 63 movies and star in several TV shows, including "Tales of Wells Fargo" and "Death Valley Days."

WASHINGTON — Rita Moreno, Vikki Carr, comedian Paul Rodriguez and Mambo king Tito Puente were among those entertaining President Bush at a fundraiser for the National Hispanic Scholarship Fund and Ford's Theatre.

The hosts for the show were Jimmy Smits of "L.A. Law" and "Fantasy Island" star Ricardo Montalban.

ABC will air the show July 11.

Bush seemed to have Congress in mind when he addressed the audience.

"Actually, Ricardo... we have our own fantasy island right here in Washington," he said to Montalban.

He turned to magician David Copperfield and described him as "a man who can make just about anything disappear."

"I wonder, David... do you free-lance?" he asked.

Ford's Theatre was dark for more than a century after the assassination of Abraham Lincoln there in 1865.

Clinton defends his criticism of rapper

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Clinton stuck by his criticism of a black rap singer today, saying her comments were an example of "how profoundly alienated and divided some of us are."

"I wouldn't call it an attack. I just disagreed with her remarks," the Democratic candidate said on "CBS This Morning." He was defending his weekend criticism of singer Sister Souljah, who was quoted after the Los Angeles riots as saying blacks should consider killing whites for a week rather than each other.

Clinton said his remark, which drew fire from Jesse Jackson and raised eyebrows among some of his own rank-and-file supporters, was not an appeal to white, suburban voters.

"I fail to see how that's pandering. That's bringing the people together," Clinton said.

"I have constantly in this campaign spoken out against divisiveness. I did not go to some group of white conservatives" and criticize the singer, Clinton said.

His weekend remarks were made to the Rainbow Coalition — which is why they raised the ire of Jackson, since the group had embraced Sister Souljah the day before when she participated in a youth forum.

'I have constantly in this campaign spoken out against divisiveness. I did not go to some group of white conservatives' and criticize the singer.

Bill Clinton
Presidential candidate

Clinton said that celebrities with influence should be preaching "harmony, not discourse."

"We don't have a lot of time to pull this country back together... I thought that was a good example of how profoundly alienated and divided some of us are," Clinton said, adding that he thought a lot of people had overreacted to the comment. "I stand by what I said."

He passed up a chance to attack likely rival Ross Perot, declining to comment on whether he is a "temperamental tyrant" as Republicans have said.

"It's hard to know because he hasn't said much about what he believes," Clinton said.

Clinton used the opening to jab, instead, at Republicans. Clinton said the "Perot phenomenon" has been caused by voters' disgust — much of it deserved — with both political parties.

But, Clinton said, "If you want to be president, if you want to be the lead dog in the hunt, the Republicans have craved the White House for these last two and a half decades, and they have to take primary responsibility for the country."

He dismissed gloomy predictions about his chances for the fall.

"My campaign was long before Ross Perot... It's an eternity between now and November," Clinton said.

Today's two-hour appearance on CBS was the latest in a series of talk-show appearances that Clinton is using to take his message straight to voters. He has two other shows this week — an MTV appearance and another go-round with CNN's Larry King.

Unlike the usual call-in format, today's show was a discussion with viewers in studio audiences in New York and by satellite from five other cities — Tulsa, Okla.; West Palm Beach, Fla.; Detroit; San Diego and New London, Conn.

Clinton was asked about his Sister Souljah remark right at the start by anchor Harry Smith before he started fielding questions on child care, welfare reform, deficit reduction and other issues from voters.

On Sunday, Jackson challenged Clinton to focus on plans for rebuilding America rather than engaging in "diversions" such as his criticism of the rap singer.

At a Manhattan fund-raiser Sunday evening, at least some of Clinton's supporters said they didn't think Clinton should have made the remarks.

"It was irrelevant," said Natalie Cave, a black social worker from Brooklyn who was at a $250-a-plate fund-raiser for Clinton. "I wonder if it's a political move... Let's talk about the issues that matter — savings and loan bailout, poor women and children."

Still, she said she remained a steadfast Clinton supporter because she thought he was the best candidate for solving the nation's problems.

Although the Clinton campaign has reportedly been divided over whether Clinton should challenge core Democratic constituent groups, the candidate said his remark was "absolutely not" a calculated move to appeal to whites and anger Jackson.

Setting sail

Tall ships are seen as they set sail for New York City from San Juan Sunday. The Esmeralda from Chile is leading the ships as they parade past the city. The ships will make landfall in New York in late June. They will be on hand there for the July 4th celebration.

Conferees say stage set for reform

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The Earth Summit, two years in the planning and 12 days in the running, produced the largest assembly of world leaders in history.

For what? Its biggest backers don't predict stupendous results, though they insist the stage is set for fundamental environmental reforms and, perhaps, for economic development in the poorest countries.

"After the summit, the world will never be the same," said organizer and chairman Maurice Strong, a Canadian oilman, in closing the meeting on Sunday. "Now we have a certain momentum and we've got to keep it up, for we are on a course that is leading us to tragedy."

But most critics stop short of calling it a failure. The summit established the environment as a central political issue and the two treaties oblige signing countries to develop plans and programs to protect it," said T.J. Glauthier of the World Wildlife Fund.

Of the countries attending, 153 signed the biodiversity convention, a legally binding treaty committing them to protect endangered plant and animal species. The same number signed a global warming treaty.

If nothing else, the U.N. Conference on Environment and Development boosted the environment as a major international issue. It linked its well-being with that of the international economy. It confirmed, if confirmation were needed, that developments in either area inevitably impact on the other.

"Much more than 12 days ago, the world today is aware that the questions of environment and development cannot be treated separately," said President Fernando Collor de Mello of Brazil.

Virtually all 178 U.N. member countries sent delegations and the presence of 118 heads of government — including President Bush, President Francois Mitterand of France, Prime Minister John Major of Britain, and Chancellor Helmut Kohl of Germany — attracted huge media and public interest.

It seems certain that more people know about significant topics such as global warming and its link with carbon dioxide emissions, and have become aware that 100 to 300 plant and animal species are extinguished every day.

The summit wasn't all public relations. The two treaties were signed, along with three general statements of principles on the environment and economic development.

All the good intentions could be disregarded, but some may be carried through. Signs are mixed.

For one, the United States did not sign the biodiversity treaty, claiming it did not contain adequate protection for the patents of U.S. biotechnology companies.

The global warming treaty, at U.S. insistence, did not oblige countries to reduce carbon dioxide emissions — largely produced by burning fossil fuels — by specific amounts or deadlines. Nevertheless, Europe and Japan pledged to cap emissions at the 1990 level by the year 2000.

Malaysia did not sign the treaty to protest the lack of specific targets.

The Alliance of Small Island States claimed that global warming could lead to the melting of polar ice, causing a rise in sea levels that could literally wipe them out.

Only about $2 billion in additional development funds were pledged by "rich" nations, notably Japan. But Germany and France pledged to raise their annual contributions in overseas aid to the benchmark figure of 0.7 percent of gross national product. Strong estimates the cleanup cost at $125 billion.

Spain said it tripled its development aid during the 1980s and would do so again in the 1990s.

Energy conservation measures were adopted Sunday over the objections of major oil producers Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

However, many environmental issues were barely touched, such as nuclear energy and toxic waste disposal.

But Strong voiced a common opinion when he said the summit must be measured by what happens from now on, not by what happened during the past two weeks.

"We have the basis of change, but we've got to push like hell to make sure it takes place," he said.

"This was a complete, unmitigated disaster," he said.

Most of those arrested were charged with failure to disperse, Pringle said.

The disturbances were quelled by late evening, after four hours.

Burglars disagree about Watergate

MIAMI (AP) — Twenty years after their botched break-in brought down a president, some of the Watergate burglars sell cars, write books or just enjoy the Miami sunshine with their families.

But each nurse old wounds from the events of June 17, 1972. And, like many Americans, the men who made Watergate a household word are divided over what it means — and who's to blame.

Their attitudes range from the cool defiance of CIA agent-turned-author E. Howard Hunt, to the pride of Frank Sturgis and Bernard Barker, to Eugenio Martinez's sense of shame.

"We were responsible for one big hell of a thing, and it really screwed up the country," said Sturgis, now 67, a Philadelphia-born former cop.

"But it made our government a little bit stronger. I feel the laws that came about after Watergate didn't give the president — whether it was Nixon or anybody else — the free rein to do what a dictator would do."

Hunt, as a CIA agent, helped organize the Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961. He used his Cuban contacts 10 years later to recruit the others.

Now 70, he writes spy thrillers, lives comfortably in a canal-side home with his schoolteacher wife and younger children, and believes the United States learned "very little" from Watergate.

"I was astonished a few years ago when the Iran-Contra hearings took place," he said. "Again, we have a situation in which men of assumed probity and character were acting on what they believed to be the desires of the commander in chief."

"And then the roof falls in, and they look around, and there's nobody there to back them up," said Hunt, who spent nearly three years in prison.

Barker, 75, a retired city code inspector who recently brought his childhood sweetheart from Cuba and married her, recalls his days as a World War II bomber crewman over Germany — and says Watergate was the same.

"I see no difference between this and being a bombardier in World War II — I was doing my duty," he said.

The day of the Watergate burglary was bad in more ways than one for Martinez, 69, who now sells cars in Miami's Little Havana neighborhood. He received a pardon from President Reagan in 1983 and is the only one of the burglars to be pardoned.

The morning of the break-in, Martinez received his final decree after a bitterly contested divorce, then raced to Washington. After his arrest that night, he learned that the judge in his divorce case died without signing the decree, and his wife was contesting its validity.

"You don't know how bad it was," he sighed.

The conspirators don't agree on why they went into the Democratic National Committee offices at the Watergate hotel and office complex.

Hunt said they needed to replace a malfunctioning electronic bug. Barker is certain it was to photograph the contents of 40 mysterious file cabinets. Sturgis thinks the White House wanted sexual blackmail material against Democratic politicians. Martinez said he was told to photograph financial records.

Barker insists he has no regrets about what he did and says

Watergate is a badge of honor in Miami's conservative Cuban-American community. But he hates being called a burglar.

"To me, a burglar is a guy who goes into your bedroom at night and steals your family jewels," he said. "I could never do that."

Martinez is the most contrite. "I was ashamed to be part of the 'whole thing,'" he said. "I did not want myself to be involved in the downfall of a president of the United States."

Disturbance breaks out at MTV sports festival

BELMAR, N.J. (AP) — Fans at an MTV sports and music festival smashed store windows and hurled rocks and bottles after the town ordered a rap concert cut short. Twenty-eight people were injured and 28 arrested, authorities said.

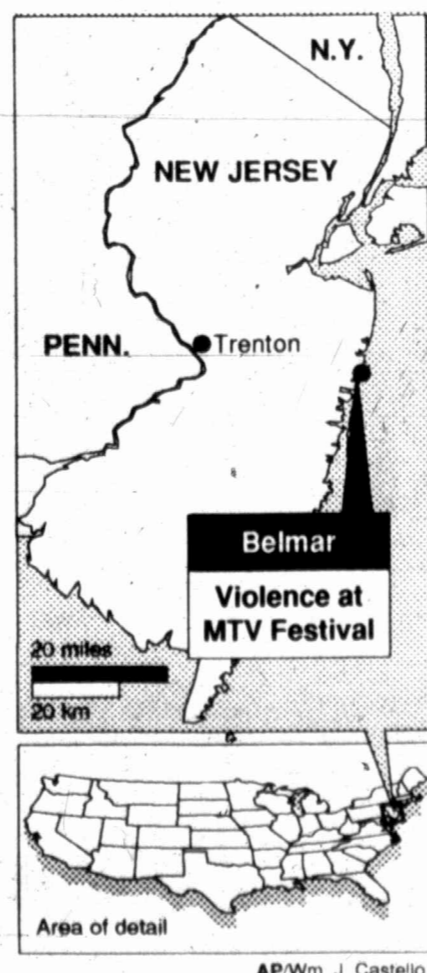

About 75,000 people turned out for the beachfront festival Sunday.

Mayor Kenneth Pringle said town officials asked MTV to cut short a performance by the rap group Kriss Kross and close down an hour early because of reports of people vandalizing cars.

As the crowd left, scuffles broke out and rocks and bottles were thrown at police and residents.

Authorities said 28 people suffered minor injuries, including the mayor, who was hit by a bottle.

Opinions from across the U.S. Deal with the crazy aunt What's the most important issue facing Americans in this election year? The deficit — soaring to $400 billion with no sign of decline.

With prospects of a constitutional amendment to balance the budget dimming, it's more urgent than ever that something be done. Federal spending is consuming more than 25 percent of America's gross national product, up sharply from two years ago when the "budget deal" was supposed to trim $500 billion over five years.

It didn't work — and Ross Perot says the deficit has become "the crazy aunt in the attic nobody talks about." The billionaire businessman promises "fixing the deficit" will be at the top of his agenda if he runs for president. Good; but Perot hasn't been any more forthcoming about how he intends to "fix it" than the other two candidates who all but ignore it.

Let's end the gridlock and deal, finally, with that crazy aunt in the attic.

The Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle

British yellow journalism

It is commonly known that we are an aggressive, impolite people lacking in traditions and manners. The English, by contrast, are restrained, polite and traditional.

These cliches do not always stand up to reality. The Israeli public's relationship to the Israeli presidency is more honorable than the relationship of the British public displays towards its royal house. And this is not just because we lack a Fergie or a Lady Di. Our presidency (a ceremonial position that roughly corresponds to royalty) has been through its difficult times. Nonetheless, it still earns respect.

The difference lies in the journalism. Israeli journalism, although it has lowered its standards in recent years, still respects the privacy of the individual — even when the private individual is public. In order for the private life of a politician to turn into a scandal, he has to be a scoundrel.

British yellow journalism is merciless: it peeps, gossips, damages, exposes, destroys careers, tears families apart. It seems as if the disease is catching: the story of Diana's five suicide attempts was published in an important and respectable newspaper, the Sunday Times.

But there is no reason to worry: Great Britain will not become a republic. Charles III will, sooner or later, take Elizabeth II's place as ruler of Great Britain. Experience teaches that scandals do not easily rock the throne: the last Charles, Charles II, had 14 illegitimate children. Three hundred years have passed and God still watches over the empire.

Perot is not so different

It is bizarre that a large part of Ross Perot's appeal as a presidential candidate is that he obfuscates when asked directly about what he would do as president. The issues, he says, he can study later.

But when reports broke that he was consulting with the usual inside-the-Beltway crowd to formulate a platform, he still wouldn't take a stand. Position papers are for the media, he said. "The people want action."

There is some truth to that statement, since the media offer the main avenue to disseminate the candidate's positions. But the central question in electing a president is, exactly what sort of action?

Little by little, a picture is emerging of Ross Perot, and it is not one of an "outsider" who is going to "shake up" Washington. For example, he has profited handsomely from the construction of Alliance Airport near Fort Worth. It was built at taxpayer expense and it just happens to sit amidst a 17,000-acre commercial development owned by Perot's family interests. This was not accidental. It came about as a result of the very sort of aggressive, insider lobbying Perot now campaigns against.

Such boondoggles cost money, which may explain his contradictory answers on the issue of taxation. . . . (I) separately taped television interviews, he said he is "absolutely against raising taxes," and, "If we've got to cough up more, we cough it up. . . ."

Behind the outsider's facade is a calculating politician who tells different audiences entirely different things about the same issues.

His positions are settled, for the most part, only on periphery issues, such as whether he would tolerate a known adulterer in his Cabinet. His populism is little more than warmed-over conventional wisdom.

And that means that as president he would be unlikely to change much about how government works, except perhaps to have it take more of your paycheck.

The Inter-Mountain, Elkins, W.Va.

Lewis Grizzard

President by name of Pea-rot

H. Ross Perot could become the next president of the United States. The latest polls indicate if the election were held today, H. Ross Perot and President Bush would be neck and neck.

Democrat Bill Clinton, meanwhile, would be on his way back to Arkansas with his wife, Hillary. Li'l Abner and Daisy Mae limp back to Dogpatch.

I certainly have no problem with H. Ross Perot becoming our next president.

I realize he's been a little fuzzy on issues so far, but perhaps he is doing something rare for a person considering running for political office.

Perhaps he's waiting until he's thought of some ideas that might actually work instead of blithering off the top of his head and tap dancing, as most politicians do.

What I would like to know most about H. Ross Perot is exactly how to pronounce his last name.

This stems from the fact that a lot of people have made a big deal about how I pronounce my last name.

"Do you," I've been asked a million times, "pronounce your name GRIZ-zard, as in 'lizard,' or Griz-ZARD, as in 'tub of lard?'"

OK, one last time. It's the one that rhymes with tub of lard.

There are people who spell their last names as I do, but they pronounce it the other way, which sounds, as far as I'm concerned, too much like a chicken part.

Those of us who pronounce Griz-zard as "tub of lard," don't have anything to do with those who pronounce it as something you can get at Kentucky Fried Chicken.

"Which sounds better to you, The-Back Bay GRIZ-ZARDS, or the Trailer Park GRIZZARDS?"

There are also those who have accused me of changing the pronunciation of my name from the ugly one to the pretty one.

Not true. It's been GRIZ-ZARD for 45 years. My distant cousin, George Grizzard, went from ZERD to ZARD after becoming a famous actor, but that's his problem.

OK, so to H. Ross Perot. Now, we are pronouncing it Pah-ROW, but I heard a guy on television wondering if the actual pronunciation is Pear-rot, which is close to a well known species of birds.

I can go with either of those, but I was wondering if H. Ross, before he became a billionaire might have pronounced it Pea-rot, as in: my garden was going real good until the pea rot set in. Imagine having a president named Pea-rot?

President Pea-rot said today, "Read my lips . . . no more federal deficit. I've paid it off myself."

What the press should do is stop pestering the man about where he stands on the issues and find out whether or not he was a Pea-rot before he became a Pah-ROW.

If so this could indicate some sort of ego problem for him or the fact that once elected president, he might go back to Pea-rot, and I'm not so certain a president whose last name sounds like something that needs to be sprayed with an insecticide can get a lot done.

Mr. Griz-ZARD, meanwhile, will go out to his yard and sit in a tub of lard and ponder this further.

Perot idea is worse than wacky

Ross Perot, the Texas tornado, continues to stir up a mighty wind. A nationwide sampling by The Washington Post and ABC News, taken during the first week of June, came up with Perot 38 percent, George Bush 30 percent, and Bill Clinton 26 percent. Remarkable.

Remarkable, but not much more. Political contests often offer a voter no more than a choice among perceived evils. If the major-party candidates were Democrat Edward Kennedy and Republican Jesse Helms, the pollsters might find 38 percent for unwed mama Murphy Brown. The sentiment in early summer is not so much pro-Perot as it is anti-everybody else.

This will change over the next four months. Clinton will get a boost from the Democratic convention in July. Bush will pick up points following the Republican convention in August. Perot will announce his candidacy formally on June 27, but after that it will be downhill all the way.

That prediction rests in part upon the only novel idea the Texan has produced so far. He would be guided, or at least strongly influenced, by his electronic town meetings. I don't mean to be critical, but in advancing this loony proposition the gentleman is nuts.

The general idea is that President Perot would ask the major TV networks for a regular hour of prime time. This month the issue might be gun control, next month the tax on capital gains. Above a certain level, should retired persons pay taxes on all their Social Security benefits? Yes or no. Other issues come to mind. Agricultural subsidies for croplands and irrigation cost billions of dollars. Should these be curbed or abolished? More billions could be saved by abolishing funds for Space Station Freedom. The Seawolf submarine is a big item. So is the super-accelerator in Texas.

Do the people favor a federal law against gambling on sports events? Should employers be forbidden to replace striking employees with non-union workers? What of aid to Israel? Should billions be spent to help the former Soviet Union? Day care, tuition vouchers, election reform, a plan of national health insurance — the list goes on and on.

Under the Perot plan, a neutral moderator would first state the question of the month: Should the federal tax on gasoline be increased by 20 cents a gallon? Experts pro and con would explain the impact. Such an increase would produce an estimated $20 billion in new revenues. It would increase the cost of living also. The moderator might question the debaters.

Listeners would then vote. This could be done by telephone, by computerized postcards or by interactive TV devices. Electronic wizardry would instantly count the yeas and nays. President Perot and the Congress would not be required to abide by the plebiscite, but they would be hard put to oppose it.

In the 14th century, an archbishop of Canterbury used as his text, "Vox populi, vox Dei," the voice of the people is the voice of God. Commentators explain that the maxim does not mean that the voice of the people is wise, but only that the voice is irresistible.

Applied to contemporary political issues, the scheme is implausible, impractical, deeply misleading, violative of fundamental political principles, and subject to manipulation by demagogues and special pleaders. Besides that, it is a wacky way to run a government.

After the novelty wore off, Perot's Vox Populi Hour would command about the same slim audience that now listens to talk shows on Sunday morning. This would be a well-educated, politically active audience. Would Perot hear the voice of the people? The voice of the lobbyist would be heard in the land.

This past January, following Bush's State of the Union address, CBS asked viewers to express their opinions by an 800 number. Time magazine reports that viewers made 25 million calls, a fairly incredible number, but only 315,000 got through. The technology will improve, of course, but the plausibility will not.

The big difficulty, which Perot seems not to understand, is that big issues are never simple issues. An increase in the gas tax is not a yes-or-no matter. A hundred factors affect the calculus. Well-heeled pressure groups would find it no problem to roll out a manipulated vote. The emotional appeal of a skilled debater would carry inordinate weight.

Any more ideas, Perot? If so, trot them out. Meanwhile, suppose we put this piebald maverick back on the range.

Second time around even better for Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — It was better. Somehow, even though they didn't crush their opponents, even though they won ugly more often than not, even though they bickered with each other along the way, NBA Title No. 2 was better for Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls.

Maybe, just maybe, it was better because they had all that adversity to overcome.

With almost every player contributing, the Bulls staged the greatest fourth-quarter rally in Finals history Sunday, beating the Portland Trail Blazers 97-93 and winning the series four games to two.

"I feel very joyous," said Jordan, who smiled broadly as he glistened with sweat and champagne but didn't caress the trophy as he did in 1991.

"It was an unbelievable season. We went through a long test of adversity and trials, me as an individual and us as a team. It might not have all been pretty, but today we stand tall.

"Last year, it was more for the city and the organization and the fans. This year, it's a little more selfish. This one is for my teammates and me."

Jordan scored 33 points, giving him 215 in the series, and earned his second successive playoff MVP award. But he wasn't even in the game when the Bulls started to rally from the 79-64 deficit they faced after three quarters.

Once dubbed "Michael and the Jordanaries," the Bulls showed their leader isn't the only Chicago player with extraordinary talent and tenacity — one of the many reasons this title was sweeter to most of them.

"It's a lot more gratifying," said Scottie Pippen, the much-maligned second-best player on the Bulls and the only starter on the floor when they began the fourth period with a 14-2 run. "I know I personally got a lot of criticism, but we were able to stay together. Tonight was very sweet. We battled from behind against a very good club."

Pippen finished with 26 points and little-used center Stacey King led the key surge with five points.

"This ring means a lot more than the first," King said. "Down 15 points in a championship game, you're playing teams too good to think you can come back. It meant a lot to me, personally, to perform like this."

Jordan re-entered with 8:36 to play and the Bulls down 81-78. He scored 12 points in the last 6:01 to reaffirm his status as "the best player on the planet," according to Portland's Danny Ainge.

"Michael's just too good. The Bulls made the big plays," Ainge said. "I'm satisfied that we gave a good effort. They outplayed us. The best team won."

Clyde Drexler and Jerome Kersey led Portland with 24 points each. Drexler, second to Jordan in regular-season MVP voting, finished a distant second in his personal duel with his future Olympic teammate.

Regularly matched man-to-man with Jordan, Drexler averaged 24.8 points on 41 percent shooting. Jordan shot 53 percent and scored 35.8 points, the best average ever for a winning player in the Finals; he became the first to receive regular-season and postseason MVP honors in consecutive years.

Portland, a favorite to win the title the last three seasons, lost in the Finals for the second time. Last year, they were upset in the semifinals by the Los Angeles Lakers, who were routed in a five-game series by the Bulls.

"Chicago's a very fine team. They have a certain arrogance and I see why," Buck Williams said. "They got the baskets when they needed them. They won when they needed to, like the third and fifth games at our place.

The Chicago Bulls' Michael Jordan holds up two fingers as he holds the NBA trophy in the locker room after the Bulls defeated the Portland Trail Blazers 97-93 to win their second straight NBA title Sunday night in Chicago.

"There's only one winner. We sent a lot of teams home, the Lakers and Phoenix and Utah. Today, we got sent home. In life, there has to be a second-place team."

Jordan, Pippen and the bench made sure that Chicago remained second to none. The Bulls' rally topped San Francisco's 12-point, fourth-quarter comeback against Philadelphia on April 23, 1987.

Chicago's victory was clinched when Kersey missed a 3-pointer with 4.7 seconds left. John Paxson, the smallest player on the court, scrambled for the rebound, dribbled out the remaining few seconds and set off a jubilant celebration that continued for almost a half-hour.

Texas falls again

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mark McGwire's bat continues to make the biggest noise for Oakland, although some other quiet moves have let the Athletics open a 3½-game lead in the American League West.

"Guys are putting the ball in play in the right direction," is how A's manager Tony La Russa described the way his team swept the Texas Rangers over the weekend. Bob Welch (3-3) and four relievers combined on a five-hitter in Sunday's 6-1 victory.

McGwire's first grand slam of the season broke open a close game Saturday, just hours after the A's grinded out a 14-inning, 6-5 win Friday night. They jumped on Texas ace Kevin Brown (9-4) for a 5-0 lead after four innings Sunday and spoiled his bid to become baseball's first 10-game winner.

The A's patiently waited it out at the plate, drawing five walks from Brown after getting six from Bobby Witt on Saturday. Nolan Ryan walked five on Friday. In all, Ranger pitchers walked 22 batters in three games. Once the plate was set, the A's delivered the key hits.

"We had a lot of walks, but when it was time to be aggressive, we were aggressive," Oakland's Jose Canseco said.

"Coming into the series and looking at those matchups, we knew we were going to have our hands full," La Russa said.

But Texas turned cold at the plate. Welch, making his first start since returning from the disabled list with a sore knee, allowed only one run and two hits in 5 2-3 innings. Dave Stewart held the Rangers to one run and four hits Saturday.

"It was really exciting to see the way our pitching just shut them down," Canseco said.

The A's bullpen has thrown 20 consecutive scoreless innings, giving La Russa and pitching coach Dave Duncan more room to maneuver.

"It's nice to know when you're starter's in trouble you can replace him with somebody in the bullpen before you get buried," Duncan said.

Texas manager Bobby Valentine must focus on keeping his Rangers from being buried in the middle of the AL West pack. They slipped to third behind Minnesota, four games in back of Oakland.

"I don't worry about getting swept," Valentine said. "Maybe we'll put together a streak of our own. There's no doubt we would rather have beaten them, but we've got to look at it as only three games."

"We've got to play better offensively and get geared up for these kinds of games," Texas first baseman Rafael Palmeiro said. "So what if we lost three games? What if we win the next 10?"

"If me and Ruben (Sierra) start hitting, we're going to win this thing. They just caught us at a bad time."

Brown broke a four-game winning streak and lost for only the second time in seven road starts.

The A's went up 2-0 in the second on Willie Wilson's RBI single and a bases-loaded walk to Jerry Oakland Athletics' second baseman Mike Bordick is caught off-balance after jumping over Texas Rangers' Geno Petralli who was forced out at second base during the fifth inning of American League action at the Oakland Coliseum, Sunday. The Athletics defeated the Rangers 6-1.

Browne, the third bases-loaded walk in three innings given up by Rangers' pitchers.

Canseco doubled in the third, went to third on a grounder and scored on Terry Steinbach's fielder's choice ground out for a 3-0 Oakland lead.

Brown walked two more batters in the fourth as the A's scored two more runs. Walt Weiss walked to lead off and scored when catcher

Geno Petralli threw the ball down the right field line trying to throw out Browne on a bunt single. Browne went all the way to third and scored on Randy Ready's two-out single to right for a 5-0 A's lead.

The Rangers scored a run in the sixth. Palmeiro singled with one out, and Juan Gonzales walked with two out, forcing Welch out of the game. Reliever Vince Horsman gave up an RBI single to Kevin Reimer before Jeff Parrett came on to strike out John Russell and end the inning.

Against reliever Danny Leon, Bordick led off the Oakland eighth with his second homer of the season. He went 2-for-4 to raise his average to .342.

Inky lifts Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Pete Incavaglia had been in a slump because he had been overswinging. So he decided to let the bat do the work.

And, boy, did it work. The Houston outfielder had two homers and drove in seven runs Sunday to lead the Astros to a 15-7 victory over San Francisco Giants.

Incavaglia credited Astros hitting coach Rudy Jaramillo for helping him break out of a slump.

"Rudy and I have been looking for film for three days," Incavaglia said. "He noticed that I've been overswinging. When I do that I get in trouble because it causes you to pull off the ball."

"Today I didn't overswing, I let the bat do the work," he said.

Besides Incavaglia's third and fourth homers, Eric Anthony had two doubles and a triple and the Astros' 15 runs were a season-high and surpassed the total of 13 runs they had scored in six previous games.

"Incavaglia's a great fastball hitter and he's strong," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "You saw what happens when you get a fastball up in his zone."

Craig had a bad day that wasn't even over when the game was over. Their plane was late and their scheduled departure had to be set back.

"We can't buy a break." Other problems for the Giants manager during the game involved starting pitcher Dave Righetti, who allowed nine earned runs and reliever Dave Burba who allowed five.

The Giants have now lost eight of their last 12 and are 5-11 since they were 26-18 on May 27. At the time they were in first place by a game and a half. They travel to Cincinnati in third place, four games behind the division-leading Reds.

"The only good thing about today is Righetti got some extra work so his arm strength should be stronger for his next start," Craig said.

The Astros blew the game open with a six-run third against Righetti (1-4).

There he'll go again: Steinbrenner back

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Fay Vincent was expected to announce today that George Steinbrenner will be able to run the New York Yankees again at the start of the 1993 season.

The commissioner and representatives of Steinbrenner were scheduled to meet to go over final wording of the decision before making it official. The New York Times reported in today's editions that the decision might be delayed while Vincent investigates the matter further.

Vincent, only saying that "something came up," indicated in the Times report that his decision on Steinbrenner may be postponed. The Times said Vincent would not say what came up regarding Steinbrenner or even if the commissioner would hold off his decision.

The Times, also citing anonymous sources, said several current and former Yankees officials feel there are many signs Steinbrenner had violated his agreement with Vincent by talking to club officials since the ban.

Vincent was asked if he knew of any communications between Steinbrenner and team officials which would violate the agreement.

"There are matters that we're pursuing," Vincent told the Times.

The New York Daily News, citing anonymous sources, reported Saturday that Vincent will not let Steinbrenner return until next year as a penalty for his behavior in the last two years.

Steinbrenner agreed in July 1990 to what amounted to a lifetime ban. Vincent said Thursday that he planned to announce a decision today on Steinbrenner's appeal for reinstatement.

Vincent initially was going to suspend Steinbrenner for two years for the owner's dealings with and $40,000 payment to gambler

Howard Spira, who gave him information about former Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield. But Steinbrenner objected to the word "suspension" and accepted what amounted to a ban.

Last two hostages may be free soon

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A German official said today he expected two German hostages in Lebanon would be freed within 48 hours, ending an eight-year saga in which scores of Westerners were kidnapped.

Bernd Schmidbauer, an envoy for Chancellor Helmut Kohl, said the hostages would be turned over to officials in Beirut rather than Syria, as had been the practice in previous hostage releases.

Heinrich Struebig, 51, and Thomas Kempner, 30, are the last Westerners held by pro-Iranian Shiite Muslim kidnapers in Lebanon.

"We expect to have a good chance, a good result, within the next 48 hours," Schmidbauer said today after meeting with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa.

"I believe we're going to Beirut tomorrow... to take them (the hostages) home with us," he said. "I believe the handing over will take place in Beirut. That is part of the deal."

A Lebanese security source said the Germans were moved to a basement jail in southern Beirut last week in preparation for their release. The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they earlier had been held separately at a sheep farm in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and in a southern Beirut fishermen's slum.

Iranian officials said Sunday that the hostages' release was expected no later than Wednesday and also speaking on condition of anonymity. Picco was instrumental in freeing the last American and British hostages in Lebanon last year.

Struebig and Kempner were working for the German humanitarian group ASME-Humanitas at Palestinian refugee camps when they were kidnapped May 16, 1989. Unlike most of the other Westerners who were abducted for political reasons, the Germans' captors wanted to exchange them for two Lebanese Shiite brothers jailed in Germany on terrorism convictions.

The Beirut newspaper As-Safir, which is close to both Syria and Iran, said an Iranian envoy went to Beirut last week and conveyed to the kidnapers "positive proposals regarding the future of the Hamadi brothers."

The report said Germany has "raised the possibility that they (the Hamadi brothers) could be held in the same prison, their treatment could be improved and their families be allowed to visit them regularly."

Mohammed Ali Hamadi is serving a life sentence for the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner to Beirut and the killing of U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem. He is being held in Schwalmstadt prison in central Germany.

His brother, Abbas Hamadi, is serving a 13-year sentence at Saarbrueken prison in southwestern Germany. He was jailed in 1987 for the kidnapping of two other Germans who were freed in Beirut in 1989.

The group that kidnapped Kempner and Struebig is believed to be headed by Abdul-Hadi Hamadi, elder brother of Mohammed Ali and Abbas. He is security chief for Hezbollah, a pro-Iranian group that has served as an umbrella for Lebanese kidnapers.

In their most recent statement nine days ago, the kidnapers dropped their demand for the release of the Hamadis, but insisted on unspecified "assurances" from Germany.

At least 92 foreigners were abducted in Lebanon between 1984 and 1991. Most were freed or said they escaped, but eight died or were killed in captivity and three others are believed to be dead.

Shots were reported on Kenny Road.

EC unable to ignore rejection

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Like a family with a dark secret, European Community officials at first chose to ignore Denmark's rejection of their European Union accord and press ahead with the plans anyway.

That strategy has not worked. The Danish vote against European unity has clouded the outlook for the 12-nation trading bloc, raising fears of more rejections and questions about its future.

"The European Community is certainly in turmoil," said Jan Rood, EC specialist at the Clingendael Institute for International Affairs in the Hague, Netherlands.

Ireland is the next testing ground for the historic agreement to create a political, economic and monetary union, with a common foreign policy and a single currency, by 1999.

Irish voters will cast their ballots Thursday on the treaty negotiated last December in the Dutch town of Maastricht.

Since June 2, when Denmark became the first nation to reject the pact, surveys in Ireland have found support for the treaty to be slipping, making the outcome uncertain.

Some actions by the EC bureaucrats have not helped. Standardization and health regulations affecting unpasteurized cheese and sausage, for instance, have caused resentment in France and Britain.

All 12 nations must ratify the Maastricht treaty for it to go into effect in 1993.

"If Ireland votes 'no,' then we'll have a real crisis on our hands," said Stanley Crossick, a veteran consultant in Brussels.

EC officials and analysts tend to attribute the Danish loss to voter reluctance to give up some national sovereignty to a fledgling EC federal government.

They also note recent electoral setbacks for governments in France, Germany and Italy uncovered voter unhappiness with parties in power.

As a result, there is unease about a French referendum expected next fall on the treaty. Some fear voters could use it to express displeasure with President Francois Mitterrand.

Germany's 16 states, worried about losing power to the community, have renewed threats to block ratification unless they are given more influence over European affairs.

More than 60 prominent German economists have criticized plans for a monetary union, declaring that it could lead to rising unemployment in poorer communities.

Rejection of Maastricht by France or Germany, the cheerleaders for European Union, would be fatal.

"The treaty would be dead," Rood said.

To help ease worries, Britain proposed adding a declaration to the accord placing limits on the powers of the EC executive agency and spelling out that the community could act only on matters national governments cannot handle.

Germany and the Netherlands ruled that out.

Jacques Delors, EC chief executive, tried to mend fences on Wednesday by accepting part of the blame for the Danish debacle.

"We need to redouble our efforts in explaining ourselves," he told the European Parliament, the community's 518-seat legislature.

"The debate on national sovereignty has to be cleared up."

Even so, he refused to back down from a request for a 31 percent increase in the EC's budget over the next five years to pay the costs of union. Without more money, he said, there could be "stagnation or even crisis."

Filings in Howard County courts indicate the following:

David Wayne Hurley, 23, Summerville, Ga., pleaded guilty to burglary of a vehicle and was sentenced to four years probation.

Big Spring Symphony Association enters 13th season

By LEA WHITEHEAD
Staff Writer

A symphony orchestra in West Texas? It's almost a contradiction in terms.

In an area dotted with cotton farms and dusty ranchland, it seems more likely that local tastes would run to country rather than classical.

And yet the Big Spring Symphony Orchestra is now entering its 13th season. Taking into consideration that Big Spring is the smallest city in Texas to field its own symphony ensemble, this has been no small undertaking.

The small cluster of volunteers ters, according to the association's records.

"It was time to move on and create our own destiny," said Sam Woodward, another early member of the group. Woodward is credited with being one of the major forces that helped bring the association into being.

A professional cellist who had appeared with many of the nation's orchestras, Woodward was formerly business manager of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra, and at the time served as director of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce Arts Council.

Worthy credits LeRoy Tillery, former executive director of the who met in 1981 to take the first steps were short on experience with symphony orchestras. But their enthusiasm and optimism were boundless.

Sam and Linda Ainsworth were the early supporters who first talked about the possibilities, Jerry Worthy recalls. They rounded up a few businessmen, a local piano teacher, some who had never seen a live symphony performance, and others who simply thought a symphony orchestra would be a good thing for the community.

Sam served as interim president of the organizing board.

Worthy was elected the first full-term president of the new Big Spring Symphony Association. The first order of business was contracting with the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra to present three concerts each season in Big Spring.

After two seasons, the fledgling association decided to strike out on its own. Members felt they needed more control over appearance dates and ticket sales, as well as financial and programming matter, according to the association's records.

Marianna Gabbi, conductor of the Las Cruces (N.M.) Symphony Orchestra was hired as director and music librarian. Attorney Rick Hamby became the second president of the organization.

The Big Spring Symphony Guild was organized under Woodward's guidance to give a wide range of volunteers an opportunity to work in fund-raising activities for the orchestra's support.

From the very outset, the symphony association aimed for quality orchestral programs, featuring internationally acclaimed soloists. In November of 1983, the board voted to sponsor an appearance by the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra, and thus began an annual visit by this orchestra as part of the regular season. Included as part of the visit, the Fort Worth Orchestra presents an educational concert for area schools. This program is now funded in part by the Texas Commission on the Arts.

Soloists have included internationally acclaimed classical guitarist, Javier Calderon; classical saxophonist James Cunningham (who, incidentally, is a Big Spring native); and pianist Christopher Riley, a Van Cliburn Competition award-winner.

The orchestra performed at Big Spring High School Auditorium and at Howard College Auditorium during the early years; its home base has been Big Spring's luxurious Spanish-Gothic Municipal Auditorium since its renovation was completed in 1987.

Creative programming has included scheduling a series of "Big Spring Natives Concerts," featuring soloists who began their musical training in Big Spring. In 1987, the Big Spring Symphony appeared in a free July 4th concert at Comanche Trail Park, an event the association hopes to sponsor annually.

Pranks highlighted college years

My college alma mater, Baylor University, has asked former students to send in stories about their campus experiences. Pranks, fun stuff—the things college memories are made of.

I think I slept a total of 13 hours my entire freshman year. I was afraid to close my eyes for very long for fear of missing something.

I had fun. We guarded the campus during homecoming week, as is customary for freshmen to do. During the 3 a.m. to 6 a.m. shift, we staged a huge auto wreck at the main intersection on campus. We had bodies scattered everywhere.

When a big truck came through and saw the obvious carnage, it took the driver about a block to stop his rig. When he finally arrived on the scene, we quickly got up and sang, "Good morning to you. We're all in our places with bright shiny faces and this is the way to start a new day."

Pretty soon the cops put a stop to that.

Guarding the campus proved futile. Somebody painted TCU on our stadium walls. It had to be sandblasted off and we felt responsible. So we went to Ft. Worth and painted BU in front of TCU's administration building. Some more patient guys planted a big BU in rye grass on their football playing field.

At Christmastime our dorm had a decoration contest. Our wing won second place using decorations from downtown Waco.

We once found a dead dog on the street and instead of leaving it there we picked it up and sneaked it into a bathroom in a girls' dorm. We carefully placed it into a toilet tail first, with the head and front paws showing.

We'd load up the car with anybody who was in Kokernot Hall and head for Lake Waco. We practically lived there during the spring.

When we saw a bunch of Scouts, we'd go over to their campfire, pile out of the car, form a line, stand at attention, play taps on a trumpet, get back in the car and drive off.

We used to sit on Judge Baylor's statue and smoke.

We had fun. We had so much fun I had to take an accounting course over in the summer. That was okay with me. I didn't want to leave the campus anyway.

During the summer we lived in Brooks Hall in a large room just over an archway. One complete wall was windows. We used to hit golf balls out those windows toward downtown Waco.

We had watergun fights. Sometimes we'd put ink in the guns and guys who got shot with ink would have purple or blue on their faces and then we'd go eat. We wouldn't tell them how horrible they looked. They wondered why everybody stared at them.

A couple of older guys, Harry and Rod, had been soldiers in Korea. One night, filled with school spirit, they travelled down to a rival school campus and painted a revered statue with green paint.

We put a dead shark under our wing director's bed one time and it stank for a week before he discovered it.

One religious guy was always bothering people trying to save their souls. One night while he was asleep, we sneaked into his room, sprayed a ring of lighter fluid around his bed, lit it and chanted, "You're in hell!"

We once took a guy's bed, desk and personal belongings from his dorm room and set them up in the shower room. When he walked in, the record player was playing one of his favorite tunes.

A couple of Chinese students rebuilt a Model A in somebody's room over the holidays.

We once spent about $12 dollars in a photo machine taking silly pictures of ourselves. We put those pictures in our wing director's clothes, shaving kit, shoes, under his pillow, in his books, everywhere.

There was a guy in our dorm who was a carpenter and stayed up all night sawing and hammering. One weekend while he was gone we glued his door shut and he had to saw a hole in it to get in.

One inventive student got a camel from a visiting circus and put it on the third floor of the library building.

We built a small fire in the back of an economics classroom once. Some people on the front row smelled the smoke, turned around and noticed the fire, but the teacher never did.

We carpe diem'd around the clock.

Sensational roach art

Michael Bohdan, coordinator for Quest For The World's Largest Roach Contest, holds an entry for the Sensational Roach Art category recently at his office in Plano. The entry, titled "Roach Olympics," is just one of thousands that may capture the $1,000 prize for the most creative presentation of a cockroach. For the largest cockroach over 2.09 inches, the prize will be $50,000.

Mother finds she really enjoys shopping after all

I am a woman who hates to shop, especially for clothing for myself. Peculiar, isn't it? I don't know what's wrong with me. I guess I'm hopeless.

I wasn't always this way. There was a time when, on the night before a clothes-shopping trip, I'd lie in bed, listening to the sound of my heart thudding in my ears. "Tomorrow I shop, thud-thud, tomorrow I shop."

And then, one day, it all went away. I think it started when I went forth and multiplied... and multiplied... and multiplied.

You know how it is: When the first baby comes along, you begin to make concessions. By the time the stork's made several drops on your doorstep, the first words out of your mouth in the morning are, "I concede already, leave me in peace!"

Whatever it is you think you need to buy for yourself, your children's needs are more immediate.

Because one of my kids—the tall one (I can never get her name right, but distinctly recall she was the one who insisted on being born feet-first because she was having a bad-hair day)—needs new hightops with glow-in-the-dark laces. I can't possibly see my way clear to blow $1.69 on a pair of pantyhose.

So I wear old ones to the PTO meeting. I just put them on backwards so the run is behind my kneecap. Then when someone whispers, "Did you know there's a run in the back of your hose?" I act completely surprised and reply, "Oh no, and these were my last good pair!"

It takes training, but after a while you can look anybody straight in the cleavage and lie like a rug.

I think I hate to shop for myself because I'm out of practice. For years now, I've done my personal shopping by picking through lawn and leaf bags. When my friends clear out their closets and wonder what to do with the castoffs, an image of me covering my nakedness in last year's flour sack pinto tops into their heads. Because I happily ac-

Skating firms the flab

By BETTER HOMES and GARDENS
For AP Special Features

Lace up the skates and head for a smooth patch of cement. Across the country, in-line skating is the latest low-impact way to burn off calories and firm up flabby legs.

Also known as "blading," in-line skating is closer to ice skating than it is to traditional roller skating. An in-line skate has four hard rubber wheels lined up in a row that functions like the blade on an ice skate. For most, that makes in-line skates faster — and more fun — than roller skates.

Since the first pair of modern in-line skates rolled off the assembly line in the early 1980s (barmaids in the early 1880s wore crude models), 5 million people have taken up the sport, according to the International In-Line Skating Association in Minneapolis.

One sleek step beyond those old-fashioned roller skates of the 1970s, today's "blades" are the coolest new activity for kids. Older folks, on the other hand, are focusing on the sport's cross-training and fitness advantages.

For example, in-line skating can improve aerobic conditioning, reduce body fat, and, potentially, burn 300 to 500 calories per hour. It's also an excellent way to strengthen the muscles in the hips, thighs, and legs. The push-off phase that starts each stride works the buttocks and outer thighs. The gliding phase takes care of the inner thighs and hip flexors.

Best of all, in-line skating is less likely than some other activities to result in such overuse injuries as stress fractures and tendinitis. Running, for instance, causes excessive pounding that can take its toll on an aging body.

For safety's sake, stay in low traffic areas when in-line skating, and wear full protective gear, including knee and elbow pads, wrist guards, and a helmet.

Some of the companies that make in-line skates include Bauer, Rollerblade, Ultra-Wheels, and Switch It. A good pair usually costs between $100 and $500.

Japanese seek surrogate mothers

TOKYO (AP) — Infertile Japanese couples desperate for children are looking across the Pacific for help, to American surrogate mothers.

Some Japanese couples are willing to spend up to $75,000 for a foreigner to carry their baby. The subject has attracted public interest and prompted debate on whether the procedure should be allowed in Japan.

It is a particularly sensitive issue in this ethnically homogeneous society, where mixed-race marriages are frowned upon and infertility is considered a shameful physical handicap.

Clients at Tokyo's only advertised surrogate service fiercely guard their anonymity and have demanded only Asian-American surrogates.

"They're paranoid," said Yuki Sumi, director of the Tokyo branch of the Infertility Center of New York. She said some clients have even asked that the group's letterhead be removed from documents sent to them.

"Japanese couples don't want to hire white women with blonde hair, or blacks," in order to make sure the child does not stand out, she said.

Sumi said she had matched three couples with Asian-American surrogates since October and that two other couples were awaiting selection of surrogate mothers. So far, no babies have been born.

According to news reports, about a dozen other couples may have signed contracts with surrogate mothers in the United States.

Noel Keane of Dearborn, Mich., a lawyer who founded the Infertility Center 17 years ago, said its clinics in Larkspur, Calif., New York City and Indianapolis have recorded 420 births and 32 current pregnancies.

A surrogate mother typically is implanted with a fertilized egg from a couple who cannot conceive naturally.

When the wife cannot produce an egg or it is not healthy enough, however, the surrogate's egg is used. Because of that possibility, Japanese couples insist on Asian-American surrogates.

Although the Infertility Center is the only service in Japan openly arranging surrogate pregnancies, some gynecologists are believed to have performed egg transplants.

The Infertility Center pays surrogate mothers $10,000. The rest of the cost is mainly for the medical procedure, which must be done outside Japan.

No Japanese law prohibits surrogate motherhood, but ethical standards set by the Japan Society of Obstetrics and Gynecology say an egg removed for fertilization cannot be implanted in another woman. The society also limits in vitro, or "test tube," fertilization to married couples.

Toranoshin Ono, director of Ichikawa General Hospital, sees surrogate motherhood as shaking "the very foundation of our social order."

He believes the children would not fit neatly into the mandatory registries that provide basic information about every Japanese citizen, including identities of the mother and father.

"I do not consider it (surrogate motherhood) an infertility treatment," said Yoshinori Kuwabara, a gynecologist at Tokyo University Hospital. "There are so many other things that should be tried first."

Yuriko Ashino, director of the Family Planning Federation of Japan, believes surrogate motherhood demeans women and emphasizes the gulf between rich and poor.

"I think it's a matter of how far people should be allowed to go to satisfy their desire" for a family, Ashino said. "What's wrong with having no children?"

Sumi's response: "Nothing moves forward if we focus only on the negative side of the issue. Instead, I would like to respect feelings of the couples, who want their own children so badly."

Brides-to-be honored at gatherings

Kim Kephart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick R. Kephart, was recently honored at a bridal shower at First Methodist Church. Kim is the bride-elect of Tom Thompson, son of Dr. and Mrs. Hank Thompson, Big Spring.

Hosting the event were Tally Driver, Wanda Driver, Iva Jo Hanslik, Marvis Jones, Peggy Marshall, Cindy Middleton, Jeanette Middleton, Valene MacMillan, Claudie Patterson, Sharon Richardson, Helen Sims and Bobbie Wotten.

The engagement of Melissa (Missy) Baker and John L. Sisk, both of Nashville, Tenn., was celebrated May 30 with an open house hosted by her parents, Don and Sue Baker, Big Spring.

More than 100 family and friends came from Fort Worth, Lewisville, Richmond, Kerrville, San Angelo, and the Big Spring area.

Guests were greeted at the front door by a grapevine wreath with peach flowers and two love birds holding a banner imprinted with the wedding date, Aug. 8.

A special guest was the prospective bridegroom's sister, Sarah Sisk, also of Nashville; Dr. and Mrs. John R. Sisk, Knoxville, Tenn. Parents of John and Sarah were unable to attend the party.

A buffet was served in one room by cousins of the bride-elect while in another room, a smaller version of the wedding cake was served by the bridal attendants.

Melissa and John will exchange wedding vows in Nashville at the West End United Methodist Church in formal ceremonies.

Melissa also was honored at a coffee May 30 from 10 a.m. to noon at 4 Bennett Circle. Hostesses were Jonnie Lou Avery, Lila Estes, Pam Crim, Stella Arnold, Anne Read, Mary Bartlett, Wilma Grice, Ludie Dean, Peggy Grant, Dorothy Grizzard, LaVerne Morris and Joyce Orr.

Bridal gifts were displayed as the honoree and her mother greeted guests.

Approximately 50 people attended the coffee including her bridal attendants from Austin and points in Tennessee.

 cept other people's clothing, I have become a recipient of choice, and my reputation is spreading.
 I was told my name and address are on a notice pinned to a Weight Watchers bulletin board four counties away. "Don't know what to do with your old clothes now that you're a size 10 again?" The notice reads, "Don't despair, there's a fat chick with a bunch of kids over in Revloc who will take anything!"
 When I do buy myself something new, I shop very carefully. My last new dress, bought many moons ago, is still perfectly serviceable. My friend, Maryann, thinks it's time I ditched the dress.
 "But why?" I asked her. "This dress is a classic. It will never go out of style."
 "True," Maryann said, "But for heaven's sake, Chris, it's a maternity dress and the baby's in junior high now. Are you planning on wearing it to the reception on her wedding day?"

I suppose Maryann has a point. For Mother's Day this year, my husband bought me an article of clothing I didn't need. He deliberately bought it two sizes too small and on sale so I couldn't return it, only exchange it. I was forced to go clothes shopping. It was traumatic. The store had carpeting, I had floor and deck paint under my fingernails. I just didn't belong there.

It took a long time, but I finally decided on the perfect item: a versatile, practical, durable, white cotton blouse. With proper laundering, it should last well into the next millennium. I wore my new blouse to church that evening. I'd forgotten what it felt like to wear clothing that no woman had worn before me, clothing to which I held the original title. It was a kick!

After church, my husband asked, "Do you think everyone noticed you were wearing a new blouse?"
 "I'm pretty sure," I said.
 "So," he asked, "did the tags hanging from the sleeve give them a clue?"

regardless of how "irregardless" grates on one's nerves, it has nosed its way into the dictionary. (It means "regardless.") Talk about overusing a word, I nominate "basically." People who start every other sentence with the word "basically" usually have limited vocabularies.

Although "snuck" somehow sneaked into the dictionary, it's not used by people who use proper English. Ask someone to define "hoi polloi," and it's a good bet that he will say "high-tone or upper class." Actually, it means "the masses" - or the general population.

PUBLIC NOTICE

CAUSE NO. 92-06-35839 SHARP IMAGE ENERGY, INC. VS. MRS. R. A. THOMAS, AKA NORMA JEAN THOMAS IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF HOWARD COUNTY, TEXAS 18TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT TO: SHERIFF OF CONSTABLE WITHIN THE STATE OF TEXAS

You are hereby commanded to cause to be published once a week for four (4) consecutive weeks, the first publication to be at least 28 days before the return date thereon, in a newspaper printed in Howard County, Texas, the accompanying Citation: of which the following is a true copy.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

THE STATE OF TEXAS TO: MRS. R. A. THOMAS, also known as NORMA JEAN THOMAS, Defendant in the cause number and styled above.

YOU ARE COMMANDED to appear before the Honorable District Court, 18th Judicial District of Howard County, Texas, at or before 10:00 o'clock A.M. of the first Monday next after the expiration of 42 days from the date of the issuance of this citation, by filing a written answer to Plaintiff's Petition that was filed in said Court on the 2nd day of June, 1992, numbered 92-06-35839 on the docket of said Court, and styled SHARP IMAGE ENERGY, INC. Plaintiff, vs. MRS. R. A. THOMAS aka NORMA JEAN THOMAS, Defendant.

A true statement of the nature of this is as follows: A suit by Plaintiff, SHARP IMAGE ENERGY, INC., complaining of MRS. R. A. THOMAS aka NORMA JEAN THOMAS, who is the owner of an undivided interest in the oil, gas and other minerals lying in, on and under the following described tract of land situated in the County of Howard, State of Texas, to-wit:

164 acres, more or less, out of a portion of the NW 1/4 of Section 156, Block 25, H&C By Co. Sur Howard County, Texas, and being more particularly described by metes and bounds as follows:

A 224 acre tract described by metes and bounds as follows: BEGINNING at a stake at the Southwest corner Wayne Ingram's 100 acre tract of land deeded to Wayne Ingram by Robert Underwood out of the Northeast corner of said Section No. 15 from which a mesquite 4 in. dia. hrs. North 21 degrees West 31 vrs.

THENCE North along the West boundary line of said Ingram tract 972 vrs. to North boundary line of said Section 15.

THENCE West along the North boundary line of said Section 15, 1300 vrs. to the Northwest corner of said Section 15.

THENCE South along the West boundary line of said Section 15, 922 vrs.

THENCE East 1300 vrs. to the place of BEGINNING.

LESS AND EXCEPT the East 60 acres of said 224 acre tract.

and the Plaintiff was unable to locate the above named Defendants, and it is necessary to petition the Court for the appointment of a Receiver under the provisions of V.C.T.A. Civil Practice and Remedies Code Section 64.0017 to execute an oil and gas lease on said lands with proceeds from said lease, if any, to be held in the registry of said Court for the benefit of said Defendant.

If this citation is not served with 90 days after the date of its issuance it shall be returned unserved.

The officer executing this writ shall promptly serve it and made due return thereof according to requirements of law, and the mandates thereof. Issued under my hand and seal of said Court as Big Spring, Texas, this 2nd day of June, 1992. GLENDA BRASEL, District Clerk, Howard County, Texas By: Glenda Brasel 7841 June 8, 15, 22 & 29, 1992
