JSEC sets seminar on harassment, ADA

A seminar on how to prevent sexual harassment in the workplace, and how to best implement the Americans With Disabilities Act, will be presented Tuesday at Howard College.

Registration for the seminar, presented by the Big Spring Job Service Employer Committee, begins at 7:30 a.m. in Room A-8 at the college. Registration fee is $20, which includes a continental breakfast.

The seminar begins at 8:30 a.m. and concludes at noon.

Seminar speakers include Jerry Kendrick, staff attorney for the Administrative Support Department of the Texas Employment Commission, who will explain how to prevent sexual harassment in the workplace. Facts on the ADA will be presented by Cindy Counts of the Governor's Committee on People With Disabilities.

Fans being collected

About 20 fans are being sought for distribution to aged and disabled members of the community who have no means of cooling their homes.

Laura Sickles, social worker with Aged and Disabled Services, said the persons affected have no means with which to keep their homes cool as the weather continues to get hotter.

Persons who have fans to donate may call Sickles at 263-9651.

Also, persons who have fans to donate but need them picked up may call Mike Couch at First Baptist Church, 267-8223. Couch will make arrangements to have the fans picked up and distributed through Sickles.

Abilene woman wins first lotto million

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Annabel Huerta's birthday present was a day late but well worth the wait.

The Abilene bingo parlor worker, who turned 24 Wednesday, struck it rich Thursday when she won the first million-dollar cash prize in the Texas Lottery.

"I guess I got my birthday gift," said Mrs. Huerta, who was surrounded by about 15 family members singing "Happy Birthday" as she hoisted the grand-prize check over her head.

A glitzy 30-minute ceremony, complete with ice skaters and neon lights, culminated with State Comptroller John Sharp presenting the mother of two with an $800,000 cashier's check. The remainder of her winnings go to the Internal Revenue Service.

"I had this feeling that it was going to be her," said Mrs. Huerta's mother, Norfelia Reyes. "Yesterday was her birthday and we didn't have time to celebrate, but we're going to celebrate tonight."

Mrs. Huerta said she has some specific plans for her winnings, including a home for her parents.

"I'm going to buy a ranch for my dad with plenty of acres so we can all buy houses out there," she said. "And my husband wants a new truck."

Both Mrs. Huerta and her husband, Edward, said they were breathless when she opened a fake safe and saw the lighted sign blinking $1 million.

"I didn't know whether to faint or not," said Mrs. Huerta. "My heart was beating so fast."

"I just jumped up and screamed," added her husband.

Mrs. Huerta was one of seven finalists selected from among thousands who qualified for the $1 million prize.

None of the seven walked away a loser. The second through seventh finishers won from $10,000 to $50,000. "I'm happy for everyone," said Juanita Saldivar, the $50,000 winner.

Louise Rabe, one of two $15,000 winners, said she, too, was just happy to win.

Thursday night attendance at the West Texas Center for the Arts' grand opening was representative of community support the center has received since the first plans were drawn, said Doris Vieregge, president of the center's board of directors.

People filled the former J.W. Charde building on West 3rd Street to see the artwork displayed and to tour the center while enjoying wine, hor d'oeuvres and Adolph Labbe's musical ensemble. The Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce underwrote the grand opening, said Vieregge.

"There is not a person who I have talked to who is not excited and enthusiastic about the center's opening," she said.

The center is a non-profit organization and is described as an educational center offering instruction in the visual, performance and literary arts for adults and youth. It will have fully equipped studio areas and art displays, Vieregge said.

During the evening, the center received a $750 donation from Chevron USA to purchase tables and chairs for students. Big Spring residents and Chevron employees Ron Phinney and Rob Keith petitioned for the money. The company contributes money each year to community oriented organizations that its employees are involved in, said Phinney.

A kiln also was donated to the center during the grand opening festivities, Vieregge said. Throughout the previous months, people have donated other

Plans being made for state cookoff

If successful, the officially sanctioned State Championship Barbecue Cookoff could be an annual bonanza for the local economy, according to coordinator Bettie Wilcox.

Wilcox holds a proclamation from Gov. Ann Richards proclaiming the cookoff as the official state championship cookoff. The event will be held July 18-19 at the old Webb Air Force Base golf course.

Wilcox said she was already reserving motel rooms in the city because some of the contestants are expected as early as July 15.

Because of the size of the state, the grand champion of this barbecue cookoff is guaranteed a place, representing Texas, at both the Kansas City American Royal Cookoff and the Jack Daniels World Championship Barbecue Cookoff in Lynchburg Tenn., where only 35 teams are allowed to compete, Wilcox said.

"I already have the invitations, all I have to do is put the names on them."

Although she has been approached by groups and officials from Midland, Odessa, Abilene, Lubbock and Sweetwater to move the state championship cookoff, Wilcox is determined to have the event here. "I wouldn't have to do anything (if Wilcox allowed the other cities to host the event), but I want to have it here — I like Big Spring," Wilcox said.

Forces are gathering to make the cookoff a success. The city has provided the land and a water supply for the event.

Mel Prather has organized an arts and crafts fair to coincide with the event, as about 10,000 people are expected to attend the two-day affair, she said.

Currently involved in the cookoff are the local Shriners, the Evening Lions Club and Big Spring Main Street, Inc. A number of individual volunteers are getting involved as well, said Wilcox.

Wilcox said Texas Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, was instrumental in securing the state proclamation and that Johnny Rutherford of the

Perot proud to buy election

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — Ross Perot has a simple answer to Democratic and Republican critics who say the billionaire Texas businessman is trying to buy his way into the White House: They're absolutely right.

"I'm buying it for the people because they can't afford it — you made it too expensive," Perot said Thursday in California as he opened a three-day campaign swing that included Colorado today and Boston on Saturday.

Perot's direct assault on those who rebuke his wealth and largely self-financed campaign is part of a stump speech that's both folksy and funny, with a good dose of criticism for both President Bush and Democrat Bill Clinton.

But it contains few specifics on how Perot would handle the nation's problems.

Instead, the speech is a series of slogans and cliches promising change: quotations from Winston Churchill and Lech Walesa mixed with the credo of the fictional Three Musketeers, "One for all and all for one."

Perot's road show, unusual for a candidate who has campaigned mostly through television, is taking him to states where volunteers say they have gathered enough petition signatures to place him on the November ballot. At the events in California and Denver, Perot had a film crew gathering material for television commercials.

He is over the 20-state mark now, counting the states celebrating the end of their petition drives next week. And although he has still not formally announced his candidacy, Perot took time Thursday to urge supporters not to let up.

"You have sent the two parties a message," he told California supporters who gathered more than 1 million petition signatures even though they needed just 135,000. "You in California have changed politics in this country — I hope permanently."

As he tries to pre-empt others from using his wealth against him as an issue, Perot is trying to turn the tables on Bush and Clinton.

He tells audiences they should closely watch every minute of the party conventions this summer — not because of any support for Bush or Clinton but because their tax dollars are paying for them.

And Perot tries to play down spending his own money on the campaign by saying that Bush and Clinton have spent $17 million apiece so far to his $1.4 million. "And we're ahead," Perot said with a smile in California's heavily Republican Orange County. "So if they want to say we bought it, I say we bought it wholesale."

Governor announces programs for youth

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards is challenging businesses to hire young people this summer after meeting with religious and community leaders who were called together in the wake of the Los Angeles riots.

"The kids of this state are the future of Texas," Richards said Thursday, "and the business community well knows it."

She urged businesses to each hire at least one young person, and announced a toll-free state hotline that's meant to connect prospective employers with job-seekers between the ages of 14 and 21.

Richards also announced state-backed projects in Houston, Fort Worth and El Paso targeted for young people considered drop-out or lawbreaker risks.

Such projects are "only a beginning," said Richards, who met with about 100 people from around the state who have been asked to work on solving racial discord and developing ideas for summer youth programs.

Richards asked the local leaders to send her their community goals, their plans to implement them and how the state can help.

She also asked them to report on their successful summer programs.

Richards urged the ministers and others to contact local businesses and lobby for summer job programs. She told them to ask their elected officials to do the same and stressed the importance of working with local law enforcement officials, judges and others.

Employers can call the state's toll-free number — 1-800-JOBS-YES — to give the Texas Employment Commission a job listing. The TEC, which has offices around the state, will work to match up young job-seekers with the jobs.

Businesses that hire a young person through the program will get a window decal, Richards said.

"I think in communities where those stickers are in the window it identifies someone who is friendly to the community," she said.

Collider supporters ponder next move

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Backers of the super collider are mapping their strategy to rescue the $8.25 billion giant atom smasher, which fell victim to the House's sudden thirst for budget cuts.

There seems to be only one road to take. "All signs point to the Senate," said Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, who as a member of the House Appropriations Committee battled hard to spare the project from the chopping block.

In a stunning vote late Wednesday, the House pared $450 million from the House Appropriations Committee's approval of $483.7 million for the project in fiscal 1993, leaving only $34 million to shut down operations.

"I've picked myself up, kind of dusted myself off trying to get the tire tracks off my chest, looked around and cleared the cobwebs from my head," Chapman said Thursday.

Even though the 232-1 vote to kill the project was unexpected — and exceeded even the collider foes' wildest dreams — Chapman and others said all hope was not lost.

"I expect the Senate to save us," he said.

But the path through the Senate won't be without its pitfalls.

Senate opponents will make their own case that the super collider is too costly in an era when federal spending needs to be reined in.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., will reintroduce an amendment he offered last year to kill funding. It failed 62-37.

"I think the vote in the House of Representatives last night measurably increases our chances of success this year," Bumpers said Thursday. "While I am not going to predict the final outcome in the Senate, I am certainly more optimistic."

But supporters also remain optimistic they can spare the particle accelerator, which is being built in Waxahachie, south of Dallas.

Rep. Martin Frost, whose district includes a portion of the super collider site, pinned his hopes on Texas' two senators, Lloyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm.

"Sen. Bentsen is very able and I know Sen. Gramm is going to work on it too," said Frost, D-Dallas.

In a sign of bipartisan unity, Bentsen and Gramm held a news conference Thursday.

"I think we can win this fight," said Bentsen, D-Texas.

"It's going to be a tough debate, but I am that hopeful that we can prevail, that we can restore the money in the Senate, that we can go to conference, that we can fund the SSC," echoed Gramm, R-Texas.

Both senators reached out Thursday within their parties to pivotal members, phoning for support.

Bentsen called the chairman of the Senate energy appropriations subcommittee, Sen. Bennett Johnston, who also chairs the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

In his dual roles, the Louisiana Democrat is one of the key voices in the collider's future.

Gramm, meanwhile, called the ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee, Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon.

Both Johnston, who has long been a staunch supporter of the project, and Hatfield pledged their support, the Texans reported.

"It will be an uphill fight, but this is a program that should be continued," Johnston, D-La., said.

Lubbock officer killed

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUBBOCK — Lubbock police veteran Kenneth Fowler could have retired from the force 10 years ago.

FOWLER

But the 59-year-old sergeant decided to put in one more year.

On Thursday, the 36-year police veteran was making a call on a shooting as he had done hundreds of times before when he was shot and killed at a Lubbock apartment.

Mental patient James Kevin Voyles, 35, has been charged with capital murder in Fowler's death. Voyles also was charged with murder in the death of James Edwin Haliburton, 48, a part-time community aide for the Lubbock Regional Mental Health Mental Retardation Center.

Fowler's death marked the first time a Lubbock police officer has been killed on duty since Jack Stevens was shot by a robbery suspect Feb. 9, 1973.

The shootings apparently erupted after Voyles walked out of a doctor's appointment and Haliburton went to check on him, police said.

Police were called to the Moonflower Apartments early Thursday by neighbors who reported hearing gunfire. Upon arrival at 9:26 a.m., officers found Haliburton lying between two apartments that faced each other.

Fowler and officer George Ace were covering Haliburton's body with plastic when Voyles apparently opened his apartment door behind the officers and fired several shots at Fowler, said Lubbock police chief Don Bridgers.

"There was nothing they could do," Bridgers said.

Justice of the Peace Jim Hansen set bond for Voyles at $500,000 for the murder charge and denied bond on the capital murder count.

WASHINGTON — A new wheatgrass for grazing that could result in more pounds of steers and more money for cattlemen is the legacy of a long-dead Soviet scientist.

Seeds for the new wheatgrass were donated to the United States in 1936 by Nikolai Ivanovich Vavilov, a Russian germplasm pioneer who died in a Siberian labor camp in 1943, according to the Agriculture Department.

Called Manska, the wheatgrass is being released by the department and the state agricultural experiment stations of Nebraska and North Dakota.

Tests have shown that cattle can digest a higher percentage of forage from Manska wheatgrass than from the popular Oahe and Slate varieties grown in the central and northern Great Plains, the department said.

The increase in digestibility, though less than 5 percent, could cause cattle to gain almost a half-pound per day more on Manska, said Agricultural Research Service plant geneticist Kenneth P. Vogel.

"In 30 days, these steers could gain an extra 15 pounds," said Vogel, who works at the ARS wheat, sorghum and forage research unit at Lincoln, Neb.

Certified seed growers can obtain Manska foundation seed from the Bismarck Plant Materials Center run by USDA's Soil Conservation Service in Bismarck, N.D. Commercial seed should be available to farmers by 1993.

NEW IBERIA, La. (AP) — Dennis Quaid and Kathleen Turner spent a long, hot day in a salt mine — and they hadn't even started working yet.

The actors, who plan to begin shooting the movie "Cloak and Dagger" in New Orleans on Monday, scouted the mine at Avery Island on Wednesday as a possible setting.

The heat apparently got to Turner, whose movies include "Body Heat," and "Romancing the Stone." When a photographer wanted to take her picture later, she said, "Do we have to do this? We've been in the salt mines all day."

Quaid, star of the "The Big Easy," kept his cool.

"Oh, I knew about the heat," he said. "I grew up in Houston."

NEW YORK (AP) — Melissa Gilbert, who starred in TV's "Little House on the Prairie," says her real home in California is more like "Wild Kingdom."

"We have seven dogs and three cats, and two rabbits that just had five babies, and two cockatoos and a pony," Gilbert, 28, says in Sunday's Parade magazine.

The actress is married to Bo Brinkman, an actor and writer. They have a 3-year-old son, Dakota.

Brinkman underwent treatment for a drinking problem several years ago. Gilbert says "everything's OK now."

"We have a white picket fence and a white picket life, after all the fires we walked through," she said. She stars in a new Fox sitcom, "Stand by Your Man."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack Palance got down on his knees before a Senate committee — but just to show off his left-handed push-ups.

The 72-year-old actor appeared before the Senate Select Committee on Aging Thursday to testify about the benefits of art and dance therapy for older Americans.

Before making his speech, Palance, who won a best supporting actor Oscar for "City Slickers," reprised his Oscar-night acceptance and dropped to the floor for nine left-handed push-ups.

"I felt I had to do these here as I didn't get the opportunity to use each hand at the Oscars," he said.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano, now an analyst for ABC and ESPN, has cancer, ESPN reported.

The sports network did not specify the type of cancer Thursday, or give details about the 46-year-old Valvano's condition except to say that he was at home "in excellent spirits."

Valvano could not be reached for comment; his telephone number is unlisted.

An ESPN spokesman refused to elaborate on the report. Valvano coached 10 seasons at North Carolina State, leading the Wolfpack to the college championship in 1983. He resigned in 1990 after a probe concluded players sold game tickets and tennis shoes.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Michael Keaton returned to his hometown for a premiere of "Batman Returns," but ducked out early to go watch a baseball game.

After introducing the movie Thursday, the actor headed to Three Rivers Stadium, where he saw his favorite baseball team, the Pittsburgh Pirates, lose 4-0 to the Montreal Expos.

Earlier Thursday, Keaton, who is also a hockey fan, was presented with a Pittsburgh Penguins sweater and did his best Mario Lemieux impersonation, pumping his arm as the Penguins star does after scoring a goal.

In the sequel, Keaton, as Batman, battles the evil Penguin, played by Danny DeVito. Michelle Pfeiffer plays Catwoman.

WASHINGTON — Card shoppers need more than the interest rate before signing up for a consumer group. The complex maze of fees and charges, which can amount to $15 a year, is very disruptive, said the American Consumer Credit Card Association, a non-profit group based in Reston, Va. "Our study, prepared by Abraham Rabinowitz, a professor at Columbia University, attacked the common industry practice of offering a 0% introductory rate, but the American Consumer Credit Card Association, the nation's largest trade group, said the tactic is deceptive and clearly not in the consumer's best interest. The association said the tactic is very disruptive to the whole tone of the market, and it is very unfair," said Virginia Heston, the association's executive director.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Guardian Angel, a vigilante group that has become a household name in New York, was founded by Curtis Siwa, a former Big Spring resident who was shot and seriously injured during a robbery in Manhattan.

Siwa, 38, was born in Big Spring, Texas, and moved to Manhattan in 1978. He was a member of the Guardian Angel vigilante group, which was founded by Siwa and other former Big Spring residents. The group was formed in 1978 to protect a neighborhood in Manhattan that had a high crime rate.

Credit card users warned of secret fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Credit card shoppers need to check more than the interest rate and annual fee before signing up, according to a consumer group that says a "complex maze of secret billing tactics and fees" cost credit users $2.5 billion a year.

The tactics and fees also drive up effective interest rates on some credit card loans to 30 percent or more, the Bankcard Holders of America, a non-profit group based in Reston, Va., said Thursday.

Its study, prepared with help from Abraham Raviv, a professor of finance at Columbia and Rutgers universities, attacked a variety of common industry practices.

But the American Bankers Association, the nation's biggest banking trade group, rejected the criticism, saying all the practices it labeled deceptive and secret are fully and clearly disclosed in literature soliciting credit card applications and on the applications themselves.

The whole tone of the study is very disturbing and very unfair," said Virginia Stafford of the association. "If people don't read the information on the application, they may not be aware of it. But to imply it's secretive is very unfair."

Bankcard Holders, which examined the terms offered by 35 card issuers serving more than 60 percent of the credit card market, was particularly critical of what it called "phantom grace periods."

Most card issuers offer users 25 days to pay a bill before interest charges are incurred. If the customer makes only a partial payment, however, the grace period usually is eliminated for new purchases until the account is paid in full.

"Thus a customer who pays half of a $1,000 balance and then makes $1,000 in purchases could wind up with an interest charge on the next bill applied to both the $500 old balance and the $1,000 in new purchases.

The group also:

- Condemned fees, averaging $2.50, on top of the interest charged for cash advances.
- Criticized what it called nuisance fees, which average $11 for exceeding a card's credit limit and $8 for making a payment late.
- Warned that some banks were beginning to charge interest starting on the date of purchase rather than on the date the purchase is posted to the customer's account.

"The complex maze of secret billing tactics and fees ... means that millions of consumers are ... paying effective rates of 30 percent or more," said Gerri Detweiler, director of the consumer group. "This is out-and-out loansharking of the worst kind."

For instance, a customer taking the average cash advance of $300 and paying a $2.50 fee plus interest of 18.5 percent will end up paying an effective interest rate of 33 percent if the advance is repaid with the next bill, the study said.

Also some banks have reduced their minimum payments to 2 percent of the amount owed, in effect stretching repayment out to longer than 30 years and greatly increasing total interest costs.

The group calculated that the practices it criticized cost card users $8.5 billion last year — $3.5 billion from misleading ways of calculating interest, $284 million for cash advance fees, $1.1 billion for late fees and over-the-limit fees, $1.7 billion for interest charged from the purchase date rather than the posting date and $2 billion through the reduction of minimum payments.

Stafford said the consumer group's $8.5 billion figure was "pulled from the air" and accused it of trying to confuse consumers as a way to drum up business for its list of low-interest and no-fee cards, for which it charges $4.

She said the association supports disclosure of credit card terms.

Boston police officers restrain members of a large crowd that became unruly when the music and comedy concert they were attending at City Hall Plaza in Boston was cancelled Thursday. Eleven people were taken to nearby Massachusetts General Hospital after stabbings and gun shots were reported.

Rampage begins when free concert cancelled

BOSTON (AP) — Concertgoers rampaged downtown after police stopped a free outdoor show that officers feared was getting out of hand. At least two dozen people were injured and about 20 were arrested, police said.

"Everyone just went crazy," said Mike Martin, 19. "The emcee on stage said, 'This isn't L.A., don't be like L.A.' ... People were running everywhere. It was like a swarm of people."

Police decided to stop the comedy and music concert Thursday night at City Hall Plaza after the "unruly crowd" of about 20,000 ignored orders to quit surging toward the stage, said police Superintendent William Bratton. Several minor fights had broken out by that time, he said. Martin, who was visiting from Houston, said people, many of whom had been drinking alcohol, threw milk crates and bottles upon hearing that the show was done. Three acts had already performed.

Several hundred people spilled out into a nearby neighborhood, smashing the windows of cars and stores and setting fires in trash cans and mailboxes, police said.

An athletic store was looted and a convenience store was ransacked by a mob of about 30 people. The store manager was hit in the face, said store clerk Nahusenay Kassa, 18.

Irish claim victory for referendum

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Irish leaders claimed victory today in a referendum for a new European Community treaty on economic and political union, and said the vote put the accord back on track after its rejection earlier this month by Danish voters.

The so-called Maastricht treaty was comfortably ahead in all districts, ranging from 57 percent in central Dublin and Limerick west to 69 percent in Kerry north and Dublin west. Sketchy counts in other districts indicated the treaty was passing by 70 percent or more.

"It is a tremendous victory for Ireland," Foreign Affairs Minister David Andrews told reporters. "It's putting out a very strong message that the ratification process is still on the rails."

If the trend continued in the count from Thursday's referendum, Ireland would be the first of the 12 European Community nations to ratify the treaty.

The treaty, negotiated in December in the Dutch town of Maastricht, would bring the member states closer together through a European central bank, a common currency and coordination of foreign and defense policies.

Ireland was one of only three countries to put the treaty to a vote of the people. Though it is the second-smallest of the 12 European Community nations, its referendum took on added weight after the Danes voted down the Maastricht treaty on June 2.

European Community leaders hope to work out a solution with Denmark to save the accord. Another rejection could make a rescue effort too complicated to succeed.

The treaty awaits a referendum in France and ratification by legislatures of the other nine countries. France's National Assembly today followed the Senate in approving changes to bring the country's constitution in line with the treaty, a victory for backers of the pact.

Irish leaders appeared to have convinced voters that despite giving up some sovereignty under the treaty, they would gain from billions of dollars in subsidies from the EC.

In Paris, the chief executive of the 12-nation European Community, Jacques Delors, said approving the treaty and being a part of a unified Europe was vital for Ireland.

"Europe is a long-term project," said Delors. "The choice is simple. It's a choice between survival, prosperity or decline."

In Brussels, the head of the European Parliament welcomed the Irish vote. "This result confirms my determination that we have to continue the way to ratify this treaty ... before the end of the year," Dr. Egon Kelsch said.

Currency and stock markets reacted calmly to the favorable vote in Ireland.

In Dublin west, Dublin southwest, Carlow-Kilkenny, Kildare, Longford-Westmeath, Sligo-Leitrim, Tipperary and Waterford the yes vote was running 70 percent or more in early tallies, the state broadcasting service RTE said. The closest counts at midday were in central Dublin, where the "yes" vote was under 55 percent.

RTE did not specify what percent of votes had been counted in the districts. The vote count was expected to be largely completed by this afternoon.

It estimated the turnout at slightly more than 50 percent of Ireland's 2.5 million eligible voters.

Curtis Shiwa, founder of the Guardian Angels, and his wife Lisa, share a laugh in May 1991 on their daily morning talk show in New York. Shiwa was shot and wounded early today.

Founder of Guardian Angels shot

NEW YORK (AP) — The founder of the Guardian Angels crime-fighting group, Curtis Shiwa, was shot and seriously wounded early today while riding in a cab, police said.

Shiwa, 38, was hospitalized in serious but stable condition with gunshot wounds in the lower abdomen and the leg, police said. Bellevue Hospital administrator Ross Anglin said the wounds did not appear to be life threatening.

It was the second attack on Shiwa, who founded the controversial crime patrol 13 years ago, in less than two months.

Police officers on patrol found Shiwa lying in the street in the East Village neighborhood, near Manhattan's Tompkins Square Park shortly after 5 a.m. He had crawled out of the cab after it had traveled only a couple of blocks.

Shiwa's wife, Lisa, said her husband was shot by someone else riding in the cab. "There's no question it was a setup," she said on WABC radio, where she and her husband are hosts of an early-morning radio talk show.

Dad: Man of strength, character

The earliest memories of my father were of a man coming in the door from a hard day at the refinery, smelling faintly of sulfur and sweat; and my older sister and I running up to greet him.

That was "daddy." Daddy was a man so huge that as long as you were in his arms, nothing in the world could ever hurt you. No closet monster would think of grabbing you if "Daddy" was in the room.

"Make a muscle Daddy!" I remember my three-year-old hands trying to squeeze his biceps muscle made it look the size of a basketball.

When I was a child, William Howard Shanks stood a good six feet, two inches tall, with shoulders so big, I could sit on one side and have room to spare — the floor looked a mile away. I remember an instance when dad (he became dad after a few years) held an entire water well's depth of two-inch galvanized pipe suspended in a hole while I placed some wooden blocks in place around the pipe. I don't know how many hundred pounds of iron that was, but I was impressed.

The point of all this, though, is that Howard Shanks could stand five-foot-one with a withered leg and still be the biggest man in the world. My father's real strengths were (and are) not as apparent as his physical size. Dad raised three kids in a good Christian home. There was plenty of love to go around, and all three of us were taught right from wrong. (Of course, marrying Charlene Perkins was the best decision Dad ever made). If he made any mistakes, it certainly wasn't out of apathy. Dad always tried to do what he thought was right. That fact, more than any other, defines the character of Howard Shanks.

Compared to the average Shanks, I'm "hooked up differently." (I'm adopted, you see.) I've got this craving for knowledge and just a general weirdness that Dad probably doesn't understand at all.

I had to go out and learn all I could about the world, society and the human being in general. And, of course, I made plenty of mistakes along the way.

As inherently strange as I am, without his guidance, the realities of the world probably would have driven me to predation of some sort. But I've never hurt anyone that didn't hurt me first. I'm proud of that, and I owe it to Dad.

I could never accept that life just isn't fair. I guess I probably still haven't. Every injustice I encounter makes me want to strike out — to take some kind of revenge. My dad's teachings are the only reason I control this urge at all.

Thinking back, it seemed Dad could take every sucker punch that life had to offer and just shake it off. Oh, he'd get mad and gripe, blame it on people — he wasn't Superman after all. But I never saw him throw his hands up and surrender. If he couldn't fix a problem through sheer determination, he'd lie on the couch at night and read the Bible until he found the answer or at least found comfort.

And I learned things from dad that he didn't even know he was teaching. He taught me that violence was not a part of strength. He taught me that bad choices can be put behind you. He taught me that nothing comes between you and your family. I could go on, but you get the idea.

We had our ups and downs as I grew (I don't handle discipline well), but I still don't regret the fact that Dad and I are so different. Rather I find that the fact that two such disparate people as Dad and I can love and share so much... it's almost like there is hope for the world.

In society, there are men with power, money. Men that step off airplanes to cheering crowds. But when the real meaning of life becomes apparent, I truly believe these men won't mean anything. The best men are the Howard Shanks's of the world — fathers who remain good and honest and true in a world that isn't any of those things.

Nowadays, his hair is turning white and his muscles aren't as powerful as once they were, but he is a man among men — and I truly believe that we'll never see his like again.

You're a heck of a man, Dad. I don't know if I ever told you how much I love and respect you. Maybe this, in some way, might let you know.

Happy Fathers Day.

Joan wants ex-hubby to get a job

Joan Lunden, co-host of ABC's Good Morning America is in the process of getting a divorce from her husband.

Joan Lunden, because she's a big TV star, makes buckets of money. Her husband, identified in a news article as her former producer, Michael Krauss, apparently doesn't.

So a judge ordered wife Joan Lunden to pay husband Michael Krauss $18,000 a month in temporary alimony. Here's what Joan Lunden had to say about that: "Why the courts don't tell a husband who has been living off his wife to go out and get a job is beyond my comprehension."

All you fellows-in-divorce might want to go back and read that statement again. Joan Lunden can't believe the court didn't just say to her husband, "Look, buddy, get your lazy butt out of here, you're not getting a dime."

The article quoted Michael Krauss's lawyer as saying his client and Joan Lunden, spent a lifetime together. They earned a lot of money together. "He (Krauss) shouldn't have had to make a motion to get some of it."

A male friend of mine pointed out the article to me and said, "It made me mad as hell to read what she (Lunden) had to say. My divorce cost me over a million dollars in property and alimony. So why didn't the judge tell my ex-wife who lived off me for over 15 years to go out and get a job? It doesn't work that way, Joan."

It doesn't. Where has Joan Lunden been? Surely a woman who has accomplished what she has accomplished would know the drill. She would know when a man gets a divorce from his wife and he's been the breadwinner, he usually gets stuck with a bundle to pay in alimony.

Did she think the judge was going to say, "Well, let's see, if you were a man (Mrs. Ms. Miss, whichever is appropriate) Lunden, I would make you pay alimony out the wazoo because that's the way this deal works. But since you're a woman, I'm going to ignore all that and order your husband to get a job. You don't have to pay him a dime."

Women have come a long way, baby. They demand equal pay and equal opportunity and even I'm not sexist enough to think if a woman can do the same job as a man she shouldn't be allowed to do it and be paid the same as a man. I'm still having a hard time dealing with women on golf courses, but that's a story for another time.

So when the traditional roles are reversed and it is the woman in a marriage who has brought home the bacon, shouldn't she expect to have to share some of it with her husband?

Absolutely. It comes under the heading of: You Can't Have It Both Ways. To be perfectly honest about it, all three of my ex-wives were pretty decent when they split. I lost a stereo here and there, a dog, and a popcorn popper, and they probably had more coming.

But a lot of ex-wives and their lawyers went for the juggler, as in the case of my friend.

So I think I can speak for those victims in saying, "Quit your bitching, Joan, and pay up."

Oh, sweet worm, how nicely you occasionally turn.

The writer's art

Arguably, dumbest cliché is...

Bill Clinton, if you read USA Today, has displayed what is arguably the most important attribute for a politician. Certain tax increases, if you read The Washington Post, are arguably the most defensible features of the recent ill-fated tax bill. The Post also tells us that Connecticut is arguably the nation's most liberal state.

James J. Kilpatrick

People magazine says the federal penitentiary in Marion, Ill., is arguably the toughest prison in the United States. The weekly Human Events says Tom Wolfe's "Bonfire of the Vanities" is arguably the most important novel of the 1980s. The New Republic says our political system arguably undermines minority influence.

The New York Times reports from Moscow that an address by Anatoly Sebchak, mayor of St. Petersburg, was arguably the most eloquent speech of a day in parliament. The Times reports from Izhevsky that the AK-47 rifle is arguably one of the best-known products of the former Soviet Union's vaunted military-industrial complex.

Closer home, the Times suggests that agent Michael Ovitz is arguably the most powerful man in Hollywood. In New York, no lover of the dance should miss Tina LeBlanc, arguably one of the world's best ballerinas.

Had enough? I have 40 more, but will spare you. Is there a dumber, staler, more hackneyed cliché than "arguably"? Well, yes, as a matter of fact there is. Shall we contemplate the beauties of "it remains to be seen"?

USA Today says that what AT&T will do to your monthly phone bill remains to be seen. Time magazine says in its section on art that the price of a Van Gogh remains to be seen. Time says in its law section that the extent of minority participation in municipal contracts remains to be seen.

The Wall Street Journal says the success of a line of men's sportswear remains to be seen. The Journal remarked editorially, at the time of war in the Middle East, that the response of our allies remains to be seen. The Journal wondered on May 14 if artists would continue to behave like spoiled brats. This remains to be seen.

In March The Washington Post let us know, after deep thought, that "it remains to be seen if the president can rouse himself to present a real blueprint for the future."

Why do professional writers do these things? Is it laziness? Are they not aware that, arguably, "it remains to be seen" is the most stupid pronouncement a writer can make? Everything under moon or sun after this very instant remains to be seen. Grumble, grumble.

A columnist in Florida looks back at Mikhail Gorbachev. He was a "dyed-in-the-wool Communist." A columnist for The Washington Post says that Vanna White dolls "sold like hotcakes" when they first appeared. The New York Times, coining a phrase, says that Rep. Theodore Weiss "has long been a thorn in the side of many."

The chief executive officer of Centel Corp. discusses the future of cellular technology. "I think the proof is in the pudding," he says. The National Law Journal headlines a story in March, "Fifth Circuit Ruling Throws Major Fly in MCorp Ointment."

Let me tell you about Achilles' heel. The Eugene (Ore.) Register Guard quotes OSU coach Jim Anderson after a loss in February to the Ducks, whoever they are. The most brilliant Duck was Antoine Stoudamire. "He was our Achilles heel the entire evening." The great Greek recently turned up in the Jack Anderson column. If I have it straight, Rep. Newt Gingrich thinks that Speaker Tom Foley is the Democrats' Achilles heel.

All right. Surely, if we worked a little harder, we could find a fresher allusion than poor old Achilles' worn-out heel. We could think of some simile for brisk business that is hotter than the hotcakes that have been selling like hotcakes for a couple of millennia. No one since the Run of '89 has known what it is to stake a claim, but claims still are staked all the time.

I have voiced this plea before: May we please have some new clichés? Some new adages, new proverbs, new maxims, new sayings? I want quips that will pass muster! Or as The Palm Beach (Fla.) Post recently put it, pass mustard. Citations of lively epigrams will be welcome indeed.

Morgan takes early Open lead

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Except for Gil Morgan, nobody thinks this kind of scoring can continue.

So who are you going to listen to — the guy leading the tournament or all those other guys blinking in disbelief, trying to remember that this is Pebble Beach and this is the U.S. Open?

With its greens soft and its ocean winds still on Thursday, Pebble Beach played more like it was hosting the Phoenix Open than its third U.S. Open, doling out birdies and low scores with unprecedented generosity.

"The course was absolutely there for the taking this morning," Mark McCumber said. "There was never more than a 2- or 3-yard wind, and the course is in perfect condition."

"Pebble Beach will get its due before it's over."

Round One went to the players, 45 of whom shot par or better in the opening round.

Morgan made eight birdies and shot a 6-under 66, the lowest first round in any of the three U.S. Opens played over the scenic oceanfront course. Curtis Strange made seven birdies and was one back at 67.

Andy Dillard, a qualifier playing in his first Open, birdied the first six holes of the championship and was one of three golfers at 4-under 68. Phil Mickelson, playing in his first tournament as a pro, and Steve Pate also shot 68s.

"This is June and this is a pretty docile time for the weather," Pate said. "I think you're going to see a lot of single-day good scores, but nothing terribly low for the tournament."

There were 29 sub-par scores in the opening round. In addition to 419 birdies, 11 eagles were made, including Ted Schulz's 183-yard 7-iron for a 2 on the 464-yard, par-4 ninth hole, considered Pebble's toughest.

According to Nick Faldo, this kind of scoring just cannot continue.

"It's the U.S. Open. You can't hit it anywhere and get away with anything," said Faldo, who birdied four holes between 9 and 14. "Guys are going to take a run, and progressively it's going to get tougher and tougher as the week goes on."

Morgan, who one-putted 10 greens in the first round, thought differently.

"If conditions remain the same, I think the Open record will be broken," Morgan said. "I think that would be possible. The guys are so good out here."

The record for four rounds in the Open is 8-under by Jack Nicklaus in 1980 at Baltusrol, site of the 1993 Open.

No one has ever even reached 10 under at any time in the Open. Morgan, though, could be forgiven for getting a little carried away.

He did most of his scoring on the easiest part of the course with birdies on five of the first six holes.

"I was able to put the ball below the hole most of the time," Morgan said.

Strange, who won consecutive Opens in '88 and '89 but has not won a PGA Tour event since, did his best scoring on the toughest part of the course.

After failing to make a birdie on the first six holes, Strange began his charge with a birdie on the 107-yard, par 3 No. 7, hitting a pitching wedge within a foot.

"It got me going, sure," Strange said. "The first six holes, I'm watching Lanny (Wadkins) go 4-under, Sandy (Lyle) was 2- or 3-under. I think, and I've struggled a couple of times for par."

Strange birdied the eighth hole, parred the ninth, then reeled off four consecutive birdies, making putts from 5 to 25 feet. He went to 7-under with a birdie at 15, but limped home with bogeys at Nos. 16 and 17.

Mendoza hurls, hits Panthers to LL final

By MIKE BUTTS
Staff Writer

No one watching the International League Panthers beat the National League Yankees 1-0 Thursday at the National League Park had a right to complain about the heat.

There was more than enough breeze created by all the bats flailing away at the pitches of Panther Gabriel Mendoza and Yankee Luis Lopez, who combined for 29 strike outs in the one hour and 11 minute contest.

The only hit in the Big Spring Little League City Championship Tournament semi-final was a first inning home run by Mendoza. The win sends the losing-bracket Panthers against the winning-bracket IL Indians tonight at 7 at the International Field in the championship playoff. A win there would give the Indians the city championship. The Panthers will have to beat the Indians tonight and again Saturday to take the crown.

Except for Mendoza's center field shot in the first, both pitchers breezed through opposing lineups all evening.

Mendoza tossed a no-hitter and missed a perfect game when Yankee third baseman Taylor Johnson reached first on an error in the bottom of the last inning. The Panther ace, using mostly an overpowering fastball, faced the minimum number of batters, 18, and struck out 15. Only two Panthers, Kason Anderson and Lopez, put the ball into play against Mendoza.

At game's end the score book for the Yankees had more zeroes in it than Madonna's contract with Warner Brothers: no runs, no hits, and nobody left on base in any of the six frames.

Meanwhile Lopez was mowing down the Panthers on one hit and 14 strike outs. His only mistake came on a one-and-two delivery to his counterpart on the Panthers, and cost the Yankees the game. "He just threw him a let-up curve and we should have stayed with the fastball," Yankees coach Bill Mims said. "But Gabriel is capable of hitting any kind of pitch."

Lopez walked two Panthers but neither got past first base. After Johnson got to first on the sixth inning boot by Panther second baseman Michael Baldwin, catcher Freddy Hernandez threw him out at second when he tried to move up on a wild pitch.

Baldwin and Michael Cervantez were the only other batters besides Mendoza to put the ball into play against Lopez.

Panthers' manager Abel Cruz's decision to go with Mendoza against the Yankees means he will have to start the team's number two pitcher, Hernandez, against the Indians. But the way Lopez handled Panther batters Thursday it's a good thing Cruz went with his ace.

"We were debating whether or not to use him tonight, but if we beat the Indians we still have to play them again (Saturday)," Cruz said. "We can throw Gabriel then."

The Panthers, third place IL finishers to the Indians first place, have played the Indians four times this year. They won one, tied one and lost two of those games.

The IL champions last defeated the Panthers in the first game of the tournament, 8-7, in seven innings. Hernandez was on the mound for the Panthers in that game.

But Mendoza started in the last game of the regular season and struck out 17 as the Panthers beat the Indians 4-2.

"We know them pretty well and they know us pretty well," Cruz said. "They're a good hitting club and we need to play good defense against them. Hopefully we can pull it off tomorrow and Gabriel can pitch the final game."

Holmes has new attitude

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

In his seven-year reign as heavyweight champion, Larry Holmes fought with an attitude.

A brooding, combative champion who had the misfortune of fighting in the shadow of Muhammad Ali, Holmes never felt he got his proper due.

"You probably didn't like me then," Holmes admits. "If I talked to you it was with an attitude. Things were a lot harder for me then than they are now."

When he caps his improbable comeback tonight by fighting Evander Holyfield for the undisputed heavyweight title, the 42-year-old Holmes is not only older but finally seems at peace with himself.

"I'm having fun," Holmes said. "I had fun fighting Ray Mercer and I'm going to have a good time fighting Evander Holyfield."

Holmes, a 4-1 underdog to capture the title he held from 1978-85, has been relaxed to the point of being almost gregarious in preparing for what will be his 25th heavyweight title fight.

During a sparring session a week ago, Holmes joked with writers between rounds and later crooned "Old Man River" while skipping rope.

"Bet you guys never thought you'd see me here at 55," he shouted.

Whether Holmes can still fight at the level needed to beat Holyfield, however, is another question.

His vaunted left jab still looks razor-sharp, but the reflexes have slowed with age. His ring savvy was enough to beat the inexperienced and one dimensional Mercer, but Holyfield presents far more problems.

Cooper, however, forced Holyfield to take the first eight-count of his pro career when he knocked him into the ropes and had him in trouble in the third round.

Carl Lewis and Gail Devers begin pursuit of difficult triples and doubles as the Olympic track and field trials open today. Jackie Joyner-Kersey balked at trying an unprecedented quadruple that would include the grueling heptathlon.

Fireworks, a 300-member gospel choir and two-time Grammy award winner Rita Coolidge headlined the first-ever opening ceremonies for the trials Thursday night.

Meanwhile, off-track drama threatened to eclipse the competition on the field.

A federal judge in Columbus, Ohio, was to rule today whether Butch Reynolds, the world record holder and 1988 Olympic silver medalist at 400 meters, would have to observe a two-year suspension by the International Amateur Athletic Federation's for alleged drug use.

Reynolds has vowed to show up for the trials, if he wins an injunction against enforcement of the ban. The IAAF has said anyone who runs against Reynolds will be tainted and ineligible for the Olympics.

Michael Johnson, top ranked in the 200 and 400 meters, had asked for an Olympic schedule change that would allow him to compete in both events. On Wednesday, seven months later, the change was made but Johnson had already committed to run only in the 200 at the

Reds turn Atlanta miscues into win

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Cincinnati Reds can do no wrong. They even can make the best opposition mess up.

The Reds won their seventh straight and 19th in 23 games, extending their NL West lead to 4½ games over the Atlanta Braves with a 7-5 victory Thursday night. Atlanta had won seven in a row and are on a 16-3 streak.

"The way we've been playing, when we get an opening, we take advantage," Reds manager Lou Piniella said.

First, the Reds took advantage of three errors for three runs off John Smoltz. After Atlanta rallied to tie it 5-5, pinch hitter Glenn Braggs hit a two-run homer in the 10th for the victory.

"The fans came out expecting two good teams to battle it out and that's exactly what they got," Piniella added.

The game drew a crowd of 47,896, the largest regular-season turnout since 1983, and there are no tickets available for the three weekend games.

Elsewhere, it was San Diego 9, San Francisco 4 in a brawl-marred game; St. Louis 8, New York 3; Montreal 4, Pittsburgh 0; and Philadelphia 4, Chicago 3.

Braggs hit his first home run of the season off Mike Stanton (1-4) following a one-out walk to Hal Morris.

"It looked like a pretty good pitch, a sinker down," Stanton said. "I'm making a mistake here and a mistake there, and it's costing me. They've been jumping all over it."

Earlier, Paul O'Neill had a two-run homer that put the Reds ahead 5-3. It snapped a 1-for-32 slump and was his first-ever homer in Atlanta and his first this season with a runner on base. Deion Sanders, with a homer for the Braves, raised his average to .355.

Padres 9, Giants 4
At San Diego, Gary Sheffield hit two homers, one a grand slam, and Frank Seminara got his first major-league win.

But the spotlight was stolen by a fourth-inning brawl as both benches emptied.

Fred McGriff, the next batter after Sheffield hit his grand slam, was hit in the leg by Trevor Wilson. McGriff dropped his bat and charged the mound. Wilson threw his glove at McGriff and the two tumbled to the ground.

Within seconds, players and coaches from the two sides mixed it up in an all-out fight. Wilson and McGriff went at it again after peace apparently had been restored. Both were ejected, as were San Francisco batting coach Dusty Baker, Padres third base coach Bruce Kimm, bullpen catcher Ron Ogelsby, and pitcher Jose Melendez.

"I was getting knocked around a little bit," said Wilson, whose face was puffy and red from the scuffle. "Fred's a great hitter and I was trying to come in and hit him in the leg. That was the best strike I threw all night. I wasn't going to take what he was going to dish out."

Cardinals 8, Mets 3
At New York, the Cardinals climbed back to .500 and the Mets continued to sink. Omar Olivares pitched seven shutout innings and sparked a three-run rally with a double.

Both teams entered the game having lost 14 of their previous 19 games. New York has lost six of the first seven games of a season-high 14-game homestand and its players called it meeting after the game.

"It was a little get-together," said Bobby Bonilla, who did not start because of a shin bruise. "We're frustrated. We had a discussion and a lot of good came out of it."

Expos 4, Pirates 0
At Pittsburgh, the Expos got going early and the Pirates never got going.

Moises Alou, Larry Walker and Tim Wallach had run-scoring doubles in the first inning. Chris Nabholz and Jeff Fassero three-hit the Pirates.

Nabholz (6-5) had a two-hitter when he walked the bases full with one out in the sixth. Fassero relieved and got Don Slaught, who was 3 for 4 and has 10 hits in his last 15 at-bats, to ground into an inning.

"I was hoping for a long outing from Fassero. He was very fresh and most of the people on their bench were left-handers," Expos manager Felipe Alou said. "I wanted to keep a left-hander in there."

Phillies 4, Cubs 3
At Philadelphia, Lenny Dykstra again displayed his ability in the clutch, a spot he says he enjoys.

Dykstra's two-run double with two outs in the eighth inning snapped the Cubs' six-game winning streak.

Brewers' ace three hits Cleveland, 4-1

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Milwaukee manager Paul Molitor worried before the game that all Wegman would leave his best pitchers in the bullpen.

It turned out that Garner had nothing to be afraid of. Because of a 34-minute rain delay, Wegman started warming up three times and threw at least 130 pitches in the bullpen before tossing the first three-hitter of his career, defeating the Cleveland Indians 4-1 Thursday night.

Wegman lowered his earned run average to 3.01 while improving his record to 7-5 and helping the Brewers win for the fifth time in six games.

"When he gets the ignition turned on, he's ready to go," Garner said. "When I saw the tarp come out, I called the bullpen and said, 'Let's slow down a little.' Wegman started three times in the pen."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Detroit 14, Toronto 10; Minnesota 3, Kansas City 1; Seattle 5, Chicago 4 in 11 innings; and New York 5, Boston 4.

Wegman retired the first 12 batters he faced before Albert Belle hit Wegman's first pitch of the fifth inning for his 15th homer.

"I said before game that the one player I didn't want to hurt me was Belle. He's a good hitter," Wegman said. "He guessed right. I threw him a curveball and he smoked it."

New York, which had 3-2 leads in the previous two games only to lose 4-3 both times, held on to salvage the finale of the four-game series at Boston.

Mike Gallego's homer sparked a three-run seventh inning before Melido Perez (7-4) and Steve Farr struck out seven of the last eight Red Sox batters.

American League

The Yankees trailed 4-2 before Gallego led off the seventh with his second homer of the season. Andy Stankiewicz then was hit by a pitch and took second on Don Mattingly's single that chased Danny Darwin (3-3).

Tigers 14, Blue Jays 10
Detroit outlasted Toronto in a 31-hit slugfest at SkyDome.

Travis Fryman drove in a career-high five runs with a double and a triple for the Tigers, and Cecil Fielder's sacrifice fly snapped a 10-10 tie in the eighth inning.

Dan Gladden and Lou Whitaker opened the eighth with singles off Mike Timlin (0-1), and Fryman advanced both runners with a sacrifice bunt, setting the stage for Fielder's go-ahead hit in the game that lasted for more than 4 hours.

Twins 3, Royals 1
Scott Erickson showed signs of recovering from a year-long slump, allowing one run on seven hits in seven innings as Minnesota won at home against Kansas City.

Erickson (4-5) was 12-2 with a 1.39 ERA on June 24, 1991. From then until Thursday, he was 11-11 with a 5.37 ERA.

Mariners 5, White Sox 1
At Seattle, Harold Reynolds, singled with the bases loaded in the 11th inning, giving the Mariners their first ever four-game sweep over Chicago.

Reynolds, who also had a home run and triple, singled to right field, bringing home pinch runner Jeff Schaefer from third with the winning run in the Mariners' first extra-inning game of the season.

Seattle won its fourth in a row, while the White Sox lost their 10th straight and 17th in 23 games.

Networks may buy cable systems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The commercial television broadcast networks will be able to expand their holdings into cable systems under a new ruling by the Federal Communications Commission.

But they're not exactly jumping for joy.

And local affiliates and independent broadcast stations are outright chagrined, worrying that their survival could be at stake.

"It is progress, but CBS is committed to making our core business — free, universal, over-the-air television — viable," said Martin Franks, CBS' Washington vice president.

For that, he said the networks need government support in their battles with Hollywood over financial rights to syndicated programming and a requirement that cable companies negotiate for broadcast programming instead of taking it for free as they do now.

Franks said the networks don't need "to be told that our only hope is buying into another business entirely."

The FCC voted Thursday to relax its 22-year prohibition against network ownership of cable systems as a way to help the networks compete better in today's diverse video market.

It means that ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox Broadcasting can buy the companies that provide cable service directly to consumers.

The news preceded a sharp rise in stock prices for two of the networks. At the close of trading Thursday, CBS was up 1.25 to $198 a share and Capital Cities-ABC Inc. rose 1.625 to $467.37 a share. General Electric, owner of NBC, was unchanged at $76.

The ruling restricts the networks, however, to 10 percent of homes nationwide with access to cable and 50 percent of homes in a local broadcast market.

The commission was divided over the restrictions. Commissioner James Quello wanted a 25 percent cap, while Commissioner Sherrie Marshall sided with the network executives who wanted no caps.

The compromise didn't please the networks.

"When you look at the numbers, even a 50 percent cap would be very burdensome for us to do a major deal with any cable operator — at 25 percent it is impossible," David Westin, vice president and general counsel of Capital Cities-

ABC told Broadcasting magazine. Originally, the networks were prohibited from cable ownership because the government didn't want them to dominate the fledgling industry.

But the growth of cable has reduced network prime time viewership to about 60 percent, instead of the more than 90 percent they enjoyed during the 1970s.

"They've lost tremendous amount of money," said Saul Cohen, senior vice president of Slater, Hanft, Martin advertising agency in New York.

Cohen, who buys television time, says that advertisers typically spend about 20 percent to 25 percent of the television ad budget on cable.

He envisioned many new advertising options that networks could offer if they controlled cable outlets, including selling more ads for prime time programming by rerunning it on a cable channel the day after it aired on an affiliated station.

Despite their complaints, the networks pursued the change in the rules, which also are supported by the National Cable Television Association.

Affiliated stations and independent broadcasters opposed it because they fear the competition from a network-owned cable company and worry that the cable company would discriminate against other broadcast stations when it comes to channel placement.

As a safeguard against that, the FCC established a complaint system for such stations that could lead to FCC action against the offending network.

Quello and Commissioner Ervin Duggan said they would have preferred a rule that required the cable companies to carry all local stations with their over-the-air channel numbers.

The grand opening occurred more than a month after the center opened. Since that time, Vieregge said it has had at least 300 students enroll for the one-week classes offered. She anticipates to double the number of students enrolling by the end of the summer.

A theater class for children ages 8-13 years old will begin next week. It will be taught by Moss Elementary Principal Ron Moss.

Adult classes will begin after July 1. The classes will include a quilt guild, oil painting, silk painting and pottery.

The center's first theatrical production and fund raiser will be "A Maiden's Prayer," a play written by Rick Hamby. All proceeds from the play will go to the center, Vieregge said.

For information on the play or classes call 264-7432.

Inmates rank the top 10 jails in the U.S.

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Cable TV, fully equipped recreation rooms and yards, and every Friday the Captain's Plate: Alaskan king crab, shrimp and scallops.

Such is life at the Fairbanks Correctional Center in Alaska, at least according to inmates who ranked it No. 1 in "Your Guide to America's Top Ten Jails."

"It has amazed me. You ought to be in some of these places," said Joseph Henslik, 41, who is serving eight years for forgery in the Adams County Detention Facility in Brighton, Colo., outside Denver. Henslik and two inmates at other jails, John Shinnors and John Molena, compiled the list of the nation's most luxurious lock-ups based on their own experiences and interviews with more than 100 other inmates.

Their guide appears in July's issue of Playboy, but a magazine spokesman said the ratings weren't scientifically compiled or corroborated. "This is inmate chatter," said spokesman Bill Paige.

Jail administrators from Alaska to Florida said most of the amenities are required by state law or were offered to defuse tension.

"We keep it clean, we keep it orderly, and we treat people like human beings," said L.T. Brown, warden of the 10th-ranked Hernando County Jail, in Brooksville, Fla.

"They get the impression it's a real hotel here, but it's still a jail. It's not easy being in jail," said Capt. Johnny Bowman, who works at the Cabell County Jail (ranked No. 6) in Huntington, W. Va.

Among the runners-up:
• Boulder County Jail (No. 2) in Boulder, Colo., where inmates sleep one to a cell in a guaranteed smoke-free environment, are allowed regular contact visits and use of a videocassette recorder.

• Oahu Community Correctional Center (No. 3) in Honolulu, which offers aerobics classes for inmates and feasts including roast Kalua pig on holidays.

• Clark County Detention Center (No. 4) in Las Vegas, which — according to the inmates — allows unlimited free local phone calls and lets inmates place bets with friends on the outside.

Jim Symbol, superintendent of the Fairbanks Correctional Center, said he hasn't heard much from the public about the Fairbanks jail's No. 1 ranking.

"I did have a woman call who said young people would see this and think jail's not a bad place to be," he said. "I see her point, but I took it as kind of a tongue-in-cheek thing — and it was funny."

He says inmates were served crab only once; Henslik says two inmates reported eating it every Friday.

At the Evans County Jail in southern Georgia (No. 7), Sheriff Eddie Bradley said the inmates were right about the good food, which is catered from a diner.

But Bradley said prisoners don't "lounge on down pillows," as the list claims. "The only down pillows in this jail are the ones that have been down on the floor," he said.

Don Zeller, administrator for the Linn County Correctional Center (No. 9) in Iowa, says the cable TV

Joseph Henslik is pictured in the visitor area of the Adams County Detention Center last week in Brighton, Colo. Henslik and two other inmates compiled "Your Guide to America's Top 10 Jails" on what they consider to be the nation's most luxurious local lockups based on their experiences and interviews with other inmates. Fairbanks Correctional Center in Alaska was ranked the No. 1 jail.

and regular access to telephones makes for "cooler, calmer inmates." Henslik, who has been in prison for 17 of the past 20 years for crimes such as bank robbery and forgery, met his co-authors at a writer's workshop Henslik conducted in a Wisconsin prison. He says he is trying to write his way out of a life behind bars.

But as jails go, his current home is pretty good, he said Thursday: "If there was a No. 11, this would be it."

Yeltsin wins over U.S. citizens and politicians

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — From the peasant villages of Russia to the wheat fields of Middle America, Boris Yeltsin has won over the people with his brand of populism. He even stunned the American politicians who were his hosts.

"I'd like to keep him a week and make him my campaign manager," Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., joked Thursday as Yeltsin departed for Canada after a five-hour visit to Kansas following the summit in Washington.

Dole's fellow Kansas Republican, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, agreed that American politicians could learn a lot from Yeltsin.

"We were saying we all ought to go to his school," Kassebaum said. "He's a natural. He's got great instincts and won a lot of friends."

Yeltsin arrived Thursday night in Ottawa. He was to address Parliament today, meet with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and plead for $2.4 billion in aid.

Earlier this week in Washington, Yeltsin addressed Congress, pleaded for aid and was hailed as a world-class statesman for negotiating landmark nuclear missile reductions with President Bush.

In Kansas, he proved himself an outstanding showman.

And winning the support of the American people is important. Yeltsin is trying to prod Americans, and Congress, to back a $24 billion package of Western aid and credits to Russia. The package is stalled in Congress, which is preoccupied with domestic spending.

He used a mixture of charm, down-to-earth humor and even slapstick, as when he insisted the chairman of Hormel Co. take his suit jacket as a gift in exchange for a leather jacket.

Yeltsin stuck pretty much to official events in Washington. But in Wichita, he plunged into a crowd at McConnell Air Force Base, donning four hats offered by well-wishers, signing autographs, offering compliments and gifts of his own, shaking hands and picking up a toddler.

And in what is sure to be an enduring image of his trip, Yeltsin got behind the wheel of a combine and helped cut wheat on a 2,000-acre farm, gesturing broadly for people to get out of his path.

They arrived back in Big Spring Thursday afternoon and marked as successful the first of many activities being planned for First Methodist's senior members.

"Come to the Festival" this summer's Vacation Bible School theme will begin on Monday and continue through Friday.

Fifteen members of First United Methodist's youth traveled to Midland this week to attend an Angel's baseball game. Tickets were provided by Larry Hollar Insurance Agency. The group was accompanied by Gary Boles, director of education and youth.

Church plans Sunday program

In honor of Father's Day, the Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland will present a program Sunday at 10:30 a.m. Members of a local men's group will lead participants in a discussion on fathers and fatherhood.

children have drawn murals of Jesus' travels and have learned about Baptism and the calling of the 12 disciples. All children, ages four through 12, are invited to attend. For additional information, please call the church at 267-7851.

Church news

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of Yeshiva University says government, industry, universities, religious and civic groups must work together to "recapture for our society" its traditional values.

Rabbi Norman Lamm told graduates that "anything less will lead people to believe that, in the final analysis, values are valueless." And that is something that no democracy, no civilized society, can afford.

DALLAS (AP) — Television evangelist Robert Tilton has unveiled plans for a new Word of Faith World Outreach Center to be built on a 56-acre tract, with a 10-story office building.

He said it will also include a church-operated school with full athletic facilities, including a swimming pool and football field.

Tilton's ministry is under scrutiny by the state attorney general following a broadcast report that he accepted donations from his followers and then trashed their so-called "prayer requests."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokeswoman for the U.S. Catholic Conference has told platform committees of the Republican and Democratic parties that the Catholic bishops, in favoring life, reject both abortion and the death penalty.

Helen Alvare, appearing before the Republican committee in Salt Lake City, said the nation seems "to be turning to violence to solve some of our most difficult problems."

She said the turn is "to abortion to deal with problem pregnancies, to the death penalty to combat crime, to euthanasia to deal with the burdens of age and illness, to military force to confront international injustice."

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — United Methodists are being asked to contribute an average $11.03 per member in 1993 to the denomination's $113 million budget for its various national programs.

The per capita costs were figured by the Rev. John Schreiber, who manages records and statistics at the denomination's finance agency here.

NEW YORK (AP) — "Selfless people give and give still more," says John Templeton in accepting a 1992 Norman Vincent Peale Award for Positive Thinking.

Templeton, a Wall Street financial manager who established and funded in perpetuity the annual prizes for Progress in Religion, added, "The top people in business are those who give more than is expected of them. Their giving leads to success, both in worldly terms and spiritually."

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A mostly homosexual church, the Universal Fellowship of Metropolitan Community Churches, has asked for official observer status with the National Council of Churches.

The council last month dismissed the group's longstanding application for membership.

"We are angry but not surprised at the dismissal" and "we will not go away," says the Rev. Troy Perry, founder and moderator of the 27,000-member denomination, started in 1968 and which now includes 265 congregations.

Its chief ecumenical officer, the Rev. Nancy Wilson, says "our ultimate goal is full membership" but "we are requesting observer status in order to acknowledge the limits imposed on our relationship by their homophobia."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A total of 1,024 people made professions of faith in Christ during street and house-to-house evangelism drives during last week's Southern Baptist Convention, says Indiana evangelism director Alvin Reid.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokeswoman for the U.S. Catholic Conference has told platform committees of the Republican and Democratic parties that the Catholic bishops, in favoring life, reject both abortion and the death penalty.

Helen Alvare, appearing before the Republican committee in Salt Lake City, said the nation seems "to be turning to violence to solve some of our most difficult problems."

Central Texas church recalls century of worship

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HUTTO — It was a plain wooden church, but it stretched from Texas to Sweden — a clear and significant link to a country most immigrants would never see again.

In 1892, these new Texans had raised "a very simple and unpretentious little building," as a student pastor described it then. "In many ways we were happy."

The descendants and religious heirs of those early Swedes are celebrating the 100th birthday of the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church of Hutto.

"This is a time that's critical in the history of the church," said Mike Fowler, who spent the good part of a year researching and "I hope they do, but times have changed so much, I really don't know."

A century ago, Hutto was a thriving mercantile and agricultural center, still growing out of the fertile prairie between Round Rock and Taylor. Some say the town still hasn't recovered from the Depression, but back then, it was a sight.

"No one had better get in a hurry in Hutto on a Saturday," an 1892 newspaper said, remarking on the buggies and people gridlocked on the town's gravel and dirt roads.

Cotton and corn were the main crops, and many of the nearby farmers were Swedes drawn to Texas by something all too rare at home — land.

Whole families were sold on Cen-

"I hear people talk of such love for the church they grew up with. I see such deep roots even though the people are not members here anymore. When our kids get to their age... will they have that bond older people have for this church?"

Lois Stern

writing a book on the congregation. "We certainly appreciate the footsteps before us. At the same time, we want to prepare for a better church to come."

Today it's called, simply, the Hutto Lutheran Church. Though much of its Swedish character has disappeared, it still identifies strongly with its roots.

"Now Swedes are the minority, but tradition continues because they're loyal to traditions," said Carl Stern, a church official.

Hutto's first Lutheran church, victim of a meandering tornado in 1894, didn't see its third birthday. Salvaged material contributed to the second structure, but a fast-growing congregation outgrew it in six years.

Today's building was dedicated in 1902 and contains the original hand-carved pews, stained glass behind the altar and delicate woodwork. The steeple bell still announces Sunday services.

But central heat has replaced the wood-burning stove and a false ceiling has improved the acoustics. Sometimes change works for the best.

And sometimes it doesn't. Lois Stern, Carl's wife, sometimes wonders if strong ties to the church are a thing of the past.

"I hear people talk of such love for the church they grew up with. I see such deep roots even though the people are not members here anymore," she said. "When our kids get to their age... will they have that bond older people have for this church?"

tral Texas by countryman Swenson, a shrewd businessman who had purchased more than 100,000 acres in Travis and Williamson counties.

New arrivals raised crops on Swenson's land, to pay off their passage. When the bill was settled, he'd offer the Swedes a sweet deal on a few acres. By the 1890s, Austin and nearby towns like Round Rock, Taylor, Manor and New Sweden were the major centers for Swedish immigration, agriculture and commerce.

Well into the 20th century, Austin was a two-day trip away. Church member Carl Lidell, 69, remembers his grandmother riding the 10 miles to Hutto on a horse and buggy to catch a train and visit her doctor. After a night in a hotel, she was ready to begin the return trip.

"Now we run into Austin in 30 minutes and think nothing of it," he said.

All church services were in Swedish until a once-a-month English service was added in 1929. Only 10 years later, things had reversed and Swedish was heard once a month.

By the end of World War II, Swedish-language services were history.

Celebrations still feature tables and tables of food. Santa Lucia Day, marking the shortest day in Sweden, and the Julotta, a candlelight Christmas service, remain important church holidays.

Johanna Wimberley plays the 77-year-old organ recently at the Hutto Lutheran Church in Hutto. Established in 1892 by Swedish settlers, the 100-year-old church still contains the original hand-carved pews, stained glass behind the altar, and delicate woodwork.

There are two points of pride at Hutto Lutheran Church — its organ and its day care. When the pipe organ was installed 77 years ago, it took two people to play it — one operating the keys and another working a 5-foot-long bellows pump. An electric blower has simplified things.

"I'll tell you that," said Johanna Wimberley, organist from 1939 to 1942. The 230-member church also operates the town's only day care center, part-time home to about 70 youngsters. Money is being raised to build a new, larger facility for day care and other uses. Hutto Lutheran Church, the handiwork of lonely immigrants a century ago, is looking to the future.

"I've been in this church all my life, except for few years in Austin. I was baptized, confirmed and married in this church. I'll be buried here too," said Wimberley, 69.

"It's my rock. My security."

Carmen Cozza, Yale's football coach for a little more than the past quarter century, told this story about one of his players several years ago.

"He wasn't very good and even though he was a senior he had never gotten a chance to play a single down of football during a game," he recalled.

"But every day he would come to practice, work hard on the scout team and help our regulars — some of them sophomores and juniors — prepare for the upcoming game in which they would play the following Saturday.

"I was never introduced to his father, but every game we played at home, he would seat himself near the 40-yard-line behind our bench and cheer for 'Old Eli.'

"After the game, he would stand patiently outside Latham Fieldhouse and wait for his son to join him. They would go off together, arm-in-arm. I mean that literally. The father would put his arm within his son's. That's how close the two of them were.

"I always meant to introduce myself to the father but that opportunity always passed by for one reason or another, and finally there would never be that occasion. On the Wednesday before our fifth game of the season, the young man stopped by my office and said he was going home for a few days. His father had just died.

"The following Tuesday he came back to practice. I made a point of going up to him and asking if everything was OK and if there was anything I could do. He looked at me, this quiet, unassuming young man who never had the temerity to introduce his father to me, and said, 'Yes sir. Do you think I might have a chance to get in the game for one or two plays this week? It would really mean something to my father for me to play in a Yale uniform just once.'

"I was stunned. 'All the time you've been on the team, and your father was in the stands cheering, you never asked that. Why are you asking now that he is dead?'

"Coach, I don't think you ever football players. They are your own children, your grandchildren, your nieces and nephews and you knew and understood the joy of their sharing something precious. He saw things too many sighted people never see. He understood the thing his son needed most from him was his support — win or lose, succeed or fail.

Go up to the town ball field tonight or tomorrow or as soon as you can. Make your kids or the kids down the street feel like the most important people in the world. Turn the tables on them this Father's Day, or Mother's Day, or any day. Give them the gift of yourselves.

I think of that story every time I see a ball game and watch kids playing before empty stands.

neighbor's children. If we aren't in the stands cheering them on and giving them our support, it is tantamount to being blind. We aren't seeing what they are doing. The blind father in Cozza's story wasn't really blind. Without eyes he sensed and understood his son's pain at not playing and he also

Children and poisons

CHICAGO — Parents should be repeatedly reminded that poisons must be far beyond the grasp of youngsters — especially the poisons that most frequently kill: iron supplements, pesticides and lighter fluid, doctors say. "If you don't still need it, discard it. If you do, store it way out of reach of any child," said Dr. Toby Litovitz, a toxicologist who studied more than 3.8 million accidental poisonings of children under age 6. Litovitz, whose study appeared Friday in the journal Pediatrics, said parents should shift poisoning prevention efforts away from things that may do minor harm and toward household items that kill or seriously injure youngsters. "True, you want to cut the exposure to all of these things," Litovitz said. "But in terms of public health, the issue is one of decreasing exposures to what can really kill your child."

The study focused specifically on 97 deaths of children from 1983 to 1990. Iron supplements accounted for 16 deaths, researchers found. Litovitz said the fatality figures for iron continue to climb, with 11 deaths reported from iron poisoning in 1991 alone. Iron supplements frequently are brightly colored and may look like candy to very young children, researchers said. The Consumer Product Safety Commission requires vitamins and medicines containing iron to be packaged in child-resistant containers and has warned parents to keep the containers out of the reach of children and tightly closed. Twelve deaths were reported from ingesting pesticides and another 12 deaths from hydrocarbons, such as kerosene or lighter fluid. Those were followed in fatalities by antidepressants, which killed 10 children during that period.

Slum angel

Prateep Ungsong'ham-Hata, known as "the slum angel," walks children to school in the Klong Toey slum in Bangkok recently. Prateep is probably Klong Toey's most famous native; in 1968 she set up an illegal school in the slum for those so poor they could not afford to send their children to state schools. She continues to work despite death threats because of her active role in last month's pro-democracy movement.

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Do you think it always pays to be honest? I found someone's wallet the other day that they had dropped, and it had a lot of money in it. When I returned it to the man he barely thanked me. I would have been better off taking the money and throwing the wallet away, it would seem.

DEAR W.K.: It's not a question of what is profitable for us, but of what is right — before God and before others. One of the Ten Commandments says, "You shall not steal" (Exodus 20:15). I commend you for your honesty and I hope if you encounter a similar situation again you will react in the same way. And if someone returns something you lose, I hope you will be more gracious than this man!

Yes, it's always right to act honestly. Have you ever thought about how many ways we can be dishonest (and seem to get by with it)? We can be dishonest in our speech, not just by telling an outright lie but by shading the truth or gossiping about another person or cheating on a test. Or we can be dishonest by stealing something from others (even some office supplies from our employer). We can be dishonest in our use of time, stealing a few minutes here and a few minutes there from our work. And bosses can be dishonest with employees or customers.

In other words, dishonesty can touch almost everything we do. We even can be dishonest with God (although we can never really conceal the truth from him). But when we are dishonest, we hurt both others and ourselves. Jesus commanded: "In everything, do to others what you would have them do to you" (Matthew 7:12).

My prayer is that this incident will help you realize the need for right living — and that you'll turn to Christ and seek his help to live as you should.

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I'm not what you would call a Christian, but I like to go to church occasionally, because I find the music and quietness inspiring. As long as this meets my needs I don't feel any reason to become more involved, do you? — Mrs. D.T.

DEAR MRS. D.T.: Suppose you were invited with some friends to a delicious and elaborate dinner at a fine restaurant. Would you be satisfied to stand outside with your nose pressed against the window, watching the other guests eat, listening to the music through the window and seeing them enjoy their conversations among themselves? No, I think you would want to experience for yourself the full dinner and the conversation.

And that's why I hope you won't remain content to enjoy an occasional visit to a church for its music or quietness. You see, God wants you to experience something which is much, much fuller and deeper. What is that? It is a personal relationship with God himself! The music and worship of a church are meant to point us beyond ourselves to God.

You see, the Bible tells us that we are separated from God — and down inside, I suspect you sense something of that truth. In fact, your inner desire for quietness and peace suggests that you know life has something more to offer than what you've experienced so far. But God loves you, and he wants to heal that gap between you. That's why Christ came — to bridge the gap between us and God, by wiping away our sins.

Don't let a pleasant experience of music or quietness take the place of God in your life. Instead, I invite you to open your heart to him and ask him to come into your heart. Our greatest need is forgiveness and peace with God — and God wants you to have those today. By faith turn your life over to Christ.

Women and the priesthood

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NOTRE DAME, Ind. — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops assembled to discuss the rights of women today. But a new survey finds most Catholics favor a right the bishops aren't ready to grant — women's entry into the priesthood.

The Gallup survey found 67 percent of Catholics feel that ordaining women as priests would be a "good thing."

In contrast, a proposed pastoral letter up for consideration today at the three-day gathering comes out against women priests. It affirms the "unbroken tradition" of a men-only priesthood as reflecting "the mind of Christ."

The proposed, 81-page pastoral letter has been in the works for about nine years, and this is the third draft.

The document denounces sexism as a "moral and social evil" and calls for full equality for women in society. But some Catholic women's groups have assailed the document as inconsistent for not opening the priesthood to women.

The 250 or so bishops assembled for the gathering at the University of Notre Dame are not expected to vote on the document until their fall meeting. But this will be their first full-scale discussion of it.

Auxiliary Bishop John C. Dunne of Rockville Centre, N.Y., would not predict the fate of the letter. "There's going to be a very broad cross-section of opinions expressed. That will be good — to get them aired," he said.

The Gallup survey, commissioned by several reformed-minded church groups and released by them at the start of the bishops' meeting, found the proportion of Catholics favoring women priests has climbed steadily and swiftly.

It was 29 percent in 1974 and 47 percent in 1985, the Gallup Organization said. The latest survey, taken in May, involved a nationally representative 802 Catholics, with a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points. It also found 75 percent believe priests should be able to marry and 87 percent feel couples should make up their own mind about birth control.

Among other items on the agenda: a strategy for evangelizing; a revised version of the electionary, the cycle of Scripture readings for Mass; and a report on proselytism, including a new study that found that many immigrant Hispanic and other ethnic Catholics are being wooed by other faiths.

The report on proselytism recommends that the church return to "national parishes," churches serving a particular ethnic group, like the ones that welcomed generations of Irish, Italian, Polish and German Catholics in the 19th to mid-20th centuries.

Patient pleads for some compassion

DEAR ABBY: About the letter from the physician who complained because he had $154,000 on the books:

While I'm sure that letter reflects the situation many physicians are in, there are plenty of doctors who drive brand-new Cadillacs, Lincoln Continentals, Mercedes, Lexus, BMWs, etc. Their wives do not work, they send their children to private schools, and they vacation in Europe and the Far East every year.

My husband was laid off two years ago and I am the only person working in my family. We are heavily in debt and I am an insulin-dependent diabetic. Because I am insured by an out-of-state insurance company, my physician asks to be paid in full for every visit. He charges $100 a visit, so I do not see him unless I'm in serious trouble.

I'm sorry that physicians have a small fortune on the books, but they should be a little more understanding with patients who have fallen on hard times. A sick person often needs medical attention whether he's in a position to pay immediately or not. And a dead patient can't pay a doctor at all.

The Hippocratic Oath states: "First, do no harm." It doesn't specify whether the harm is mental or physical. And the way the economy is today, we all have to tighten our belts, and help each other.

BARBARA B. IN MIRAMAR, FLA.

DEAR BARBARA: The well-heeled doctors who read this heed this. And as for those who are lacking in compassion, "Physician, heal thyself!"

DEAR ABBY: I am deeply disturbed over a new product being distributed for children. They are called "killer cards" — similar to baseball cards. However, instead of trading heroes, the kids trade cards with pictures of Jeffrey Dahmer, Charles Manson, Ted Bundy and "Son of Sam." These cards have comic book likenesses of infamous murderers!

Abby, what are these people thinking? How can people manufacture such terrible cards to sell to young children? And how about the people who sell them? Don't they have children of their own? What message are they sending to our children? "Kill someone, and get your face on a trading card!" We have enough to contend with, such as drugs, suicide, and keeping our children and ourselves safe from these psychopaths they are trying to immortalize.

Who can I contact to get this garbage banned? — LOVES CHILDREN, CLIFTON, N.J.

DEAR LOVES CHILDREN: The best way to "ban" such garbage is simply to refuse to patronize the store that sells it.
