The ASSOCIATED PRESS

YUCCA VALLEY, Calif. — Desert residents, many without water or electricity, rode out unnerving aftershocks overnight to two powerful earthquakes that injured more than 300 people and killed a child.

Sunday's quakes — one of them California's strongest in 40 years — opened a 43-mile fissure in the desert, buckled highways, caused fires and heavily damaged dozens of homes. Yet another quake shook the Las Vegas area this morning.

Centered east of Los Angeles, the jolts were felt in Phoenix and Las Vegas. People in New Mexico and Idaho reported swaying blinds and water sloshing in swimming pools. There was no major damage in the Los Angeles area.

"I was in bed, and the whole thing started shaking, it just kept shaking and shaking. I grabbed ahold of my dog, it was the only thing I could think of," Kurt Schuppner, news editor of the Hi-Desert Star newspaper in Yucca Valley.

The California Institute of Technology in Pasadena counted hundreds of aftershocks of diminishing strength by this morning. The quakes measured 7.4 and 6.5 on the Richter scale.

Scientists warned there was a 50-50 chance of aftershocks exceeding 6.0 on the Richter scale in the coming week.

A quake measuring 5.6 on the Richter scale was widely felt in the Las Vegas area at 3:14 a.m. today, residents reported. The quake centered 70 miles northwest of Las Vegas was not an aftershock, said Willis Jacobs, geophysicist at the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo. No injuries or damage was immediately reported.

Fear of aftershocks kept people on edge, Ellen Mihalcik said as she used a video camera to record the cleanup at a Yucca Valley supermarket. "It shatters the nerves," she said. The stronger quake rumbled across the desert at 4:58 a.m. Sunday. Centered six miles north of Yucca Valley, about 110 miles east of Los Angeles, it ripped cracks in highways and homes, destroyed water systems, caused fires and left 500,000 people temporarily without power.

Damage was heaviest in the high desert towns of Yucca Valley, Landers, Joshua Tree and Twentynine Palms, and in Big Bear, a ski town in the San Bernardino Mountains.

It was California's strongest quake since a 7.7 jolt near Bakersfield in 1952. That quake killed 12 people and injured 18. A quake of 7 on the Richter scale is considered a major earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage.

The second quake hit at 8:07 a.m. and registered 6.5. It was centered six miles southeast of Big Bear Lake in the San Bernardino Mountains, about 20 miles west of the first jolt.

Three-year-old Joseph Bishop was killed when a chimney collapsed in a Yucca Valley home. He had come from Newburyport, Mass., with his parents, who were attending their 20-year high school reunion.

San Bernardino County had 269 injuries, 24 of them serious, sheriff's spokesman Jim Bryant said. Riverside County reported 84 injuries.

Gov. Pete Wilson signed an emergency declaration for the two counties, opening the door to state aid.

Pa. abortion law upheld

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today gave states sweeping new power to restrict abortions as it upheld most provisions of a Pennsylvania law making abortions more difficult to obtain. But, by a 5-4 vote, the court said states may not outlaw all abortions.

The court fell one vote short of overturning its landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling that legalized abortion nationwide.

"Though abortion is conduct, it does not follow that the state is entitled to proscribe it in all instances," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor said in the court's main opinion.

"The reservations any of us may have in reaffirming the central holding of Roe are outweighed by the explication of individual liberty we have given combined with the force of stare decisis," O'Connor said.

Stare decisis, Latin for "the decision stands," is a judicial doctrine aimed at giving stability to the law.

In an extraordinary move, Justice David H. Souter, who did not write a separate opinion in the case, spoke from the bench after O'Connor announced the court's ruling.

"To overrule (Roe) would subvert the court's legitimacy beyond any reasonable question," he told a courtroom audience. "If the court were undermined, the country would also be so ... Roe has not proven unworkable in practice."

The court upheld these disputed provisions in the Pennsylvania law:

—Women seeking abortions must be told about fetal development and alternatives to ending their pregnancies. Abortion rights advocates call the information an "anti-abortion speech."

—Women must wait at least 24 hours after receiving that information. The high court had struck down an unconstitutional similar waiting-period law in 1983.

—Doctors are required to keep detailed records, subject to public disclosure, on each abortion performed.

—Unmarried girls under 18 and not supporting themselves are required to get the consent of one of their parents, or the permission of a state judge who has ruled that the girl seeking an abortion is mature enough to make the decision on her own.

But the court struck down, by a 5-4 vote, provision of the Pennsylvania law that required married women in most cases to tell their husbands about their plans for an abortion.

The court's decision is sure to ignite a political powderkeg in the midst of the 1992 campaign season, but the impact was blunted by the fragmented decision that thwarted four court members who said Roe vs. Wade should be abandoned.

They are Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas.

Fritch following tornadoes with thanks, clean-up effort

By CHIP BROWN
AP Writer

FRITCH — Located at the base of the nation's infamous "Tornado Alley," this tiny Panhandle town is accustomed to the sound of its disaster alarms.

But Saturday night was different.

"All you needed was one look at those black skies to know something evil was out there," said Jeannie Bennett, manager of the town's Dairy Queen restaurant.

PHOTO — 2A

At least three tornadoes emerged from the ominous skies Saturday night and in less than a half hour destroyed 200 homes, damaged another 800, knocked out power lines and rang up $50 million in damage.

Most of the damage occurred to trailer homes in the eastern half of Fritch, which was incorporated as a city only 28 years ago.

Trees were uprooted, trucks overturned and light poles bent horizontally.

Amazingly, no one was killed. Only seven were injured, one seriously.

"I don't know how you explain the low number of injuries," said Fritch police chief Jim Ferguson. "We were lucky — very lucky."

Dozens of cleanup crews from surrounding areas were expected to continue clearing the wreckage today.

Crews from local power companies worked through the night to restore electricity to the eastern half of Fritch.

Pat McCrary, superintendent of the National Parks Service at nearby Lake Meredith, said one person remained hospitalized Sunday night from the storm.

The injured woman was listed in serious condition at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, a nursing supervisor said.

Just as tornadoes are a way of life in West Texas, so are tight-knit communities. Many said teamwork will put this mostly blue-collar town of 2,335 back together.

"We are prepared to assist as long as it takes — until people say

'Everything I own is in the streets. I have lost it all. I have no insurance and I have nothing saved. Everything I earn goes for food and clothing.

'I won't have anything if we don't get help.

'I started over once when I got divorced six years ago. I can do it again.'

Sherron Boyd

"OK, that's enough help," said Mollie Smith, a volunteer for the First Assembly of God church in Fritch. "I think this town will be back."

"Everybody's in shock. But so many people were blessed by the Lord to have been spared," Mrs. Smith said as she dug through the rubble of a flattened trailer home Sunday.

Fritch, Hutchinson and Carson counties were declared a disaster area Sunday. Requests for federal disaster relief were to be studied by officials arriving at 1 p.m. today.

For Sherron Boyd, federal assistance is her only hope.

Her three-bedroom trailer home was scattered over a three-block area. She managed to find a few old photos of her mother, a portion of her jewelry box and a couple piggy banks she had collected over the years.

"Everything I own is in the streets," said Boyd, an assistant at Golden Plains Community Hospital in nearby Borger. "I have lost it all. I have no insurance and I have nothing saved. Everything I earn goes for food and clothing."

"I won't have anything if we don't get help."

Despite the destruction, Boyd remained upbeat as neighbors helped her look for memorabilia Sunday. "I started over once when I got divorced six years ago. I can do it again," she said.

A 9 p.m. curfew was established Sunday after authorities received a few reports of looting.

Cleanup crews from nearby Stinnett, Borger and Amarillo, Dumas and Skellytown were expected to continue helping residents move massive piles of debris early today.

American Red Cross officials set up a shelter at the high school gym, complete with everything from cots and food to disposable diapers for residents hardest hit.

"Hugs have been doing wonders," Red Cross assistant Linda Duncan said Sunday. "We have told them to cry. Someone asked me what's good about this morning and I told them 'you are alive.'"

Emergency sirens began sounding at 7:30 p.m. after weather spotters reported a twister touching down west of Fritch, giving residents up to 30 minutes to prepare for the twisters to blast the front end of the town.

Only three tornadoes had been confirmed by authorities. Other witnesses reported up to five.

Bennett watched the storm develop and shortly after 7 p.m. rushed customers at the Dairy Queen out the door.

Minutes later, a twister smashed through the front wall of the restaurant, tearing apart the roof and knocking out 33 of 35 windows.

"The sky was black and clouds were sucking tree branches and everything else up into the sky," Bennett said. "We have so many storms that don't amount to anything. I think people are shocked that it finally hit."

Construction crews worked through the night to get the Dairy Queen up and running because many residents meet there every day for coffee.

"If these folks didn't have a place to come and talk about this today, I think they would be even more devastated," Bennett said.

Fritch resident Leslie Wade ducked into a cement cellar and described a tornado passing overhead, "like a train running right over us."

"It was awful," Mrs. Wade said. "I'll never forget that sound. It rumbled and roared."

Misuse of state equipment to aid Bill Clinton alleged

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and some of his employees may have been involved in a concerted effort to use state equipment to campaign for Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton, the Houston Chronicle has reported.

But Mauro, who is Clinton's Texas campaign coordinator, denied being part of any plan to misuse state equipment.

A recent investigation of the General Land Office found more than 1,400 "political" calls had been made by Mauro and some of his employees.

The auditors said the costs of the calls had been repaid by the state employees and lost employee time had been recovered by employees surrendering part of their vacation time.

In addition, the auditors wrote in April that they found that the calls were not part of an organized effort that would violate state law.

"We find that the violations that occurred did not result from a plan or concerted effort," the land office auditors wrote. "There is no pattern of abuse nor systematic misuse of state employee time, equipment or facilities."

But the Chronicle reported a computerized cross-indexing of calls made from selected land office telephones indicates a high likelihood that a concerted effort did occur among Mauro and some land office employees.

"That's just ludicrous," Mauro told The Associated Press on Sunday. "I never instructed a single employee at the land office to make a single call for Bill Clinton and I never purposely used state phones for any political activity."

"We've always admitted we accidentally made some calls on state phones," he said, adding that the state has since been reimbursed. "I'm sorry, we didn't mean to do it."

The Chronicle said the evidence exists in state telephone records surrounding Clinton's Jan. 28 campaign swing through Texas and in the days leading up to the March 10 Democratic presidential primary.

Most of the political calls made at the agency just prior to the election were made by Mauro.

The Chronicle reported that telephone records from Mauro's phone indicate he also was calling some of his state employees on political business.

For example, one series of calls and use of employee time involved the days leading up to Clinton's January visit to San Antonio, Austin and Houston.

The cross-pattern of calls from the state agency begins on Jan. 20, when Mauro's phone was used for an 18 minute call to Truman Arnold of Texarkana. Arnold, a longtime Clinton supporter, said he was coordinating fund raising activities in Texas with Mauro.

The call to Arnold was followed immediately by a call to lawyer Bill White, who along with Kyle Simpson was coordinating fund-raising efforts for Clinton in Houston.

San Antonio shelter to be closed

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO — After a decade of harboring tens of thousands of Central American refugees, the Casa Oscar Romero is scheduled for closing this week.

The shelter, which became a national symbol of opposition to U.S. foreign policy, probably will be turned into a center for the Rio Grande Valley's homeless, officials said.

With fewer Central Americans fleeing to the United States, the need for a refuge is no longer great, said Hernan Gonzalez, director of Christian Services for the Roman Catholic diocese of Brownsville.

The diocese operates the 200-bed shelter on a six-acre site northeast of Brownsville.

"I think if you read the writing on the wall of whom we're serving, and our reason for being, that has changed," Gonzalez said.

After Tuesday, no new refugees will be allowed in the facility, said Sister Juliana Garcia Redondo, who has worked at the facility for seven years. Current residents will be given about a week to leave, she added.

The number of residents was down to about three dozen recently.

Casa Romero was founded in 1982 by Catholics in San Benito in the name of the assassinated archbishop of San Salvador.

Since the shelter's opening, two directors and a worker have been convicted of violating immigration laws. It was raided by the Border Patrol and evicted from San Benito. It also became the target of fierce resentment by some neighbors.

Back in the rainy spring of 1989, images of Casa Romero were broadcast worldwide when thousands of Nicaraguans overran the Valley, overflowing the six-acre facility to form a tent city of plastic bags and cardboard.

Jack Elder, now a San Antonio school teacher, was arrested twice on alien-smuggling charges during his tenure as director from August 1983 to April 1985.

He was convicted in the second trial and served five months in a halfway house in San Antonio.

His adversary during much of that time was Silvestre Reyes, who became sector chief of the Border Patrol in McAllen in 1984. Reyes remembers well the confrontational atmosphere of the time.

"We were right at the height of the sanctuary situation. There were a number of cases pending in Tucson (Ariz.), and Jack Elder had made a strong affiliation with what was happening there," Reyes recalled.

"Casa Romero, in my opinion, was a rallying point for the sanctuary movement nationally. We had groups coming from northern states to look at the situation, lend moral support, to actually work in the Casa," Reyes said.

Thousands exposed to lead by bridge cleaning project

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The state highway department has sandblasted downtown Houston bridges coated with lead paint, exposing thousands of people to toxic lead dust, the Houston Post reports.

In a copyright story Sunday, The Post said it obtained hundreds of records and commissioned an independent analysis of the soil and vegetation around the downtown overpasses.

The Post's six-month investigation showed officials knew nearly one year before beginning the $1.9 million project the paint could contain lead.

Department of Highways and Public Transportation officials said no Houstonians were exposed to hazardous levels of lead during the sandblasting and repainting of Interstate 45 bridges spanning Buffalo Bayou. But highway officials have suspended all bridge-painting projects until a study of lead recycling is completed.

In July 1990, the project hit its first roadblock when a potential contractor warned that lead paint might have been used on the bridges, which were painted routinely to help keep the steel from weakening.

The department removed the work from its list of projects. But according to highway officials, subsequent tests showed the amount of lead paint used wasn't enough to classify the waste as hazardous.

So the agency awarded a contract to Williams Brothers Construction Co. of Houston, which began work May 1, 1991.

Throughout the summer, people downtown could see clouds of dust billowing from under drapes on either side of the bridge between Allen Parkway and Memorial Drive.

Max Meindl watched the work from his environmental consulting office about a mile away. Meindl said he was rebuffed by the highway department.

"I tried contacting everyone, trying to help," he said. "But everyone said it was taken care of."

But the city health department was persuaded. And on Oct. 2, highway department officials shut down the project to take more tests.

"There was more lead than you could ignore," said Gene McMullen, the city's air quality control chief.

During the shutdown, piles of sandblasted debris sat next to Buffalo Bayou. Motorists occasionally picked up piles of debris for use as filler in their driveways, roads or gardens.

After Southwestern Laboratories Inc. told the highway department on Dec. 17 the waste wasn't hazardous, the agency told Williams Bros. to proceed but stop sandblasting.

But Williams said it had been hit hard by the 79-day layoff, and sent the state agency a bill for $700,000. In a Jan. 6 letter, lawyers for the company charged that the "unjustifiable delay in paying the invoice has had the effect of virtually destroying their business."

Meanwhile, the Post has submitted nearby soil and vegetation samples to two laboratories. The analysis showed lead concentrations in the grass to be 350 ppm and 550 ppm — high levels by most standards.

BANGOR, Maine — Police blew up what they thought was a bomb inside the gate of Stephen King's home, only to discover the parcel contained one of his horror novels.

The explosion Sunday scattered pages of "It" over the author's lawn.

"Killed a book," said King, thanking firefighters and shaking their hands.

Police had been notified by a neighbor about the package, which was addressed to King. Lt. John Roach said police became suspicious because the post office does not deliver on Sundays.

WASHINGTON — Former White House spokesman Larry Speakes was released from a hospital five days after a triple heart bypass operation.

The 52-year-old Speakes had a heart attack on May 13. The surgery was performed at George Washington University Hospital by Dr. Benjamin Aaron, who removed a bullet from President Reagan's chest in 1981 after an assassination attempt.

Speakes became Reagan's spokesman after the shooting, in which press secretary Jim Brady also was wounded.

Speakes left the White House in 1987 and is an executive at Northern Telecom.

NEW YORK — Tim Allen isn't afraid of ruining his image as TV's swaggering klutz by revealing that his favorite class in school was shop.

"I loved making stuff and the smell of those places, but I hated the teachers," Allen says in the June 28 issue of People magazine.

Allen, 39, who plays the clumsy star of a home-repair show on the ABC sitcom "Home Improvement," said he was the class cutup.

It was humor that helped him get along when he spent more than two years in prison beginning in 1980 for drug offenses.

"Humor was the only defense I had," Allen said. "Two minutes after I was there, I started babbling. So everyone knew I was a geek right away."

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. — A courtroom was set up in a van outside an amphitheater to process Grateful Dead fans arrested at the rock group's shows.

"It's almost a courtesy to them," said Judge William Hughes, one of two judges who agreed to hold hearings outside the Deer Creek Music Center.

"And it's a matter of courtesy to my staff. We'd rather do the two hours work there instead of 14 hours the next day."

Fans were also allowed to bathe in a public pool Sunday night. More than 22,000 people were expected at two Grateful Dead shows Sunday and tonight in suburban Indianapolis.

Compaq to unveil new division

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Compaq Computer Corp. wraps up three years of secretive research today with an official announcement of a new peripherals division to develop and market the company's first printers.

The new division caps a three-year, behind-the-scenes research effort by Compaq, in which the Houston-based company was widely rumored to be developing laser printers.

The personal computer maker actually formed the division last fall, about the time the company cut 1,700 employees and underwent a management reorganization. Lynn Schlemeyer, director of marketing for the new division, said Sunday.

The company kept the new division under wraps to further formulate its plans, Ms. Schlemeyer said. Compaq will focus its efforts on the high-growth areas of the printer market, such as laser printers for PC networks, the Houston Chronicle reported.

Later this year the company expects to introduce its first products, most likely 10- to 20-page-per-minute laser printers designed for networks of up to about 50 PC users, she said.

Ms. Schlemeyer declined to disclose how many workers are employed by the new division.

The new printer division comes just two weeks after Compaq launched its largest-ever product unveiling, of "clone-buster" PCs that the company hopes will stem a steady drop in its U.S. market share.

The new division is headed by David Black, 41, a former director of product development who also had served as general manager of Compaq Telecommunications Corp. in Dallas. Compaq's failed effort in the mid-1980s to create a device merging PCs and telephones.

Black, who Compaq said was instrumental in putting together plans for Compaq's entry into the printer business, has been with Compaq since 1985.

Ms. Schlemeyer also declined to comment on what printer manufacturer would make the all-important laser print engine inside a Compaq printer. Print engine technology is dominated by Japanese firms.

Navy should follow code

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Matthew Heckemeyer says the Navy can't expect its officers to be choir-boys, but he believes they should follow a code of honor.

"Warriors are not thieves," said Heckemeyer, an officer trainee from Sideston, Mo. "There's an old code of chivalry. Everybody's heard of Lancelot and the Knights of the Round Table. That's what I believe in."

Heckemeyer is among about 50 aviation officer candidates at the Pensacola Naval Air Station taking an experimental course in what the Navy calls "core values."

The five-hour program is a response to what Navy officials call a growing lack of honesty, integrity and other traditional values among recruits.

In large part, it is a response to a scandal growing out of last year's meeting of the Tailhook Association, a group of current and former naval aviators.

At least 26 women — half of them Navy officers — said they were fondled and disrobed while being pushed down a gantlet of drunken aviators in a Las Vegas hotel hallway. The Navy is investigating dozens of officers for alleged sexual harassment.

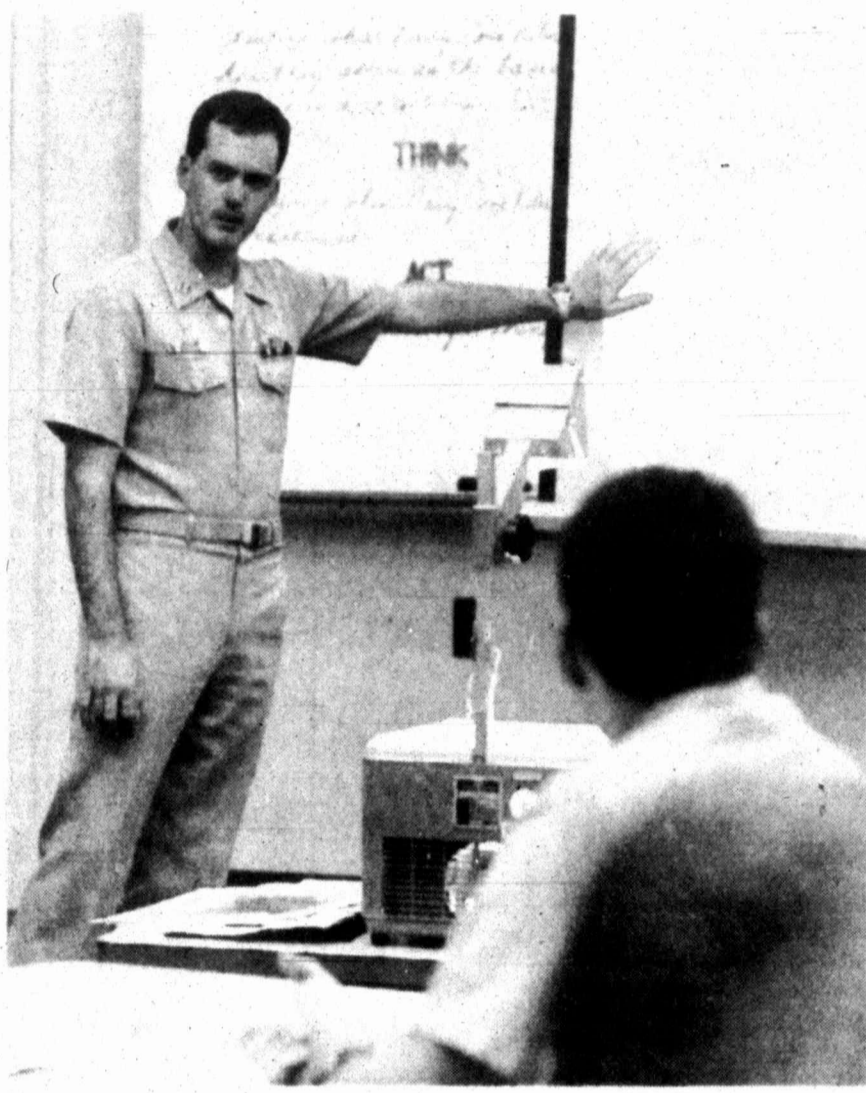

Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III resigned on Friday, saying he accepted responsibility for the "leadership failure" that allowed such raucous behavior to occur. He acknowledged he had been in one of the hospitality suites near where the alleged abuse occurred but said he saw no improper conduct.

The values course had been little more than idea until the Tailhook incident. Afterward, Vice Adm. John H. Fetterman Jr., chief of naval education and training, ordered that it be tried out.

The program focuses on dishonesty and fraud, all types of violence and racism, as well as sexual harassment. The misbehavior is played out in four case studies that students discuss with a team of two instructors.

Heckemeyer and many other students recently praised the program, which could eventually be expanded to the rest of the Navy, including sailors in the fleet.

"I don't know if you ever heard the term 'cusses like a sailor,'" said Phillip Trujillo of Denver. "Sailors have a reputation. I'm just glad to know the Navy wants to do something about it. They want to produce gentlemen ... and that's what I want to be."

Navy Lt. Dana King teaches Navy aviation officer candidates an experimental course in what the Navy calls "core values" in Pensacola. The program addresses traditional values and was developed after complaints of sexual harassment.

CO's (commanding officer's) mast," said her partner, Lt. Dana King of Southwest Harbor, Maine. "This is an inoculation for a virus."

The three other studies in the program involve an officer living in base housing whose neighbor is a wife-beater; an officer who breaks up a fight with racial overtones; and a pilot who makes personal stops on a cross-country flight, inflating his expense account along the way.

"There are times when everybody in the command knows it's happening and it's an accepted practice and you really are going to go against the grain by bringing them to task," King said.

"We are definitely bucking the current. But that doesn't mean we are not going to make progress. We will."

Trujillo said some people oppose the program.

"Maybe they don't like to be reminded that a lot of the lasciviousness that goes on is not a good idea," he said.

The Tailhook convention is not isn't among the case studies. Instead, the course features a fictional female ensign who has to deal with advances from a boss.

"On occasion, Tailhook will come up, but, again, we don't talk about Tailhook per se, but more about why did it happen, what were the underlying causes?" said Lt. j.g. Cristina Stone of Gig Harbor, Wash., one of the two instructors.

"This is not a cure for Tailhook. The cure for Tailhook is to take the people to a court-martial or to a

Perot's army facing woes

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Ross Perot has put great stock in running a grass-roots presidential campaign. Now, as he's gearing up to compete with well-oiled Democratic and Republican opponents, his volunteer army is feeling some growing pains.

But professional Perot staffers say the minor hiccups are the cost of having an enthusiasm they don't see in more traditional organizations.

"We've had to, from time to time, go out and help resolve things," said campaign chairman Tom Luce. "They're minor, not nearly as much as the kind of problems you'd have with a top-down, traditional organization. If we did it that way, we wouldn't have all these volunteers and all this enthusiasm."

Perot puts a premium on his grass-roots support. Each of his campaign appearances has been at a rally marking the end of a petition drive in a state. He also meets privately with volunteers.

The campaign's leaders must spend their time focusing the energy of the far-flung volunteers, sorting out campaign finance laws and byzantine ballot access rules.

In addition, volunteer leaders were usually chosen by virtue of being the first to call the Perot hotline from their city or state. Once the petition phase passes, the campaign is choosing one or two leaders for each state, sometimes leaving bruised egos and hurt feelings.

There have been other stumbles along the way. Some examples, according to volunteers, campaign leaders and news accounts:

— The Missouri petition drive had to be restarted last month after two electors who had circulated petitions declined to commit themselves to Perot. Last week, supporters in the state they had collected 100,000 signatures, the same as the original drive.

— In Illinois, the petition drive was restarted this month, again because of uncertainty about the loyalty of three of the 23 electors. And a fourth elector said he would be gone during the time the Electoral College meets in December. Last week, Illinois volunteers also hired auditors to look over books amid worries that a former state manager may have mispent money.

— Tennessee volunteer Larry Crim was asked to defer his organizing activities to a Nashville-based committee. Crim complained he'd become the outsider Perot has portrayed himself to be.

— In Tulsa, Okla., supporter Pat Clancy said volunteers in Oklahoma City, aided by Perot's campaign staff in Dallas, wrested control of the state effort. He complained of bully tactics and said he was labeled a "security risk," a charge Perot's staff denies. After starting Oklahoma's petition drive in late February, Clancy now says, "I won't be in the campaign."

— A Perot petition office was shut down in Harrison, Ark., earlier this month after volunteers learned two supporters were associated with white supremacist groups. One of the supporters denied the allegation and the other acknowledged he belonged to the Ku Klux Klan as a teen-ager.

One sign the campaign staff in Dallas is trying to get closer to the volunteers was the start last week of a newsletter by Luce.

UN unable to guarantee safety in Sarajevo

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — U.N. officials still could not guarantee the safety of flights into Sarajevo's airport today, the deadline set by the United Nations as it considered using force to fly in relief supplies.

The war-battered Bosnian capital was the quietest it had been in days, with only rare bursts of small arms fire heard after a mostly quiet night.

Serb forces, who have been fighting to keep part of Bosnia in Serbia-dominated Yugoslavia, said Sunday that they handed over the airport to U.N. peacekeepers. But fighting blocked French relief flights Sunday night, and the U.N. force denied today that it could secure the airport.

"We cannot advise flights to come when we cannot assure their safety," said Adnan Abdel Razeq, a spokesman for the U.N. peacekeeping force in Sarajevo.

The U.N. Security Council's deadline for a halt to Serb attacks on the besieged and hungry city expired at 8 a.m. EDT, and council members scheduled a closed meeting later today to consider authorizing the use of force to open the airport for relief flights. U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali issued the ultimatum to the Serb forces on Friday.

In Belgrade, the capital of what remains of Yugoslavia, about 20,000 people rallied in front of the federal parliament in a continuing protest against hard-line President Slobodan Milosevic. About 100,000 people massed Sunday to demand his resignation, in the biggest anti-Milosevic protest in five years.

Independent B-92 radio in Belgrade said Milosevic told a delegation of opposition leaders he was willing to test his public support in new elections or a referendum.

Western nations have accused Milosevic's government of fomenting the ethnic warfare in Bosnia and Croatia, another former Yugoslav republic. The United Nations imposed trade sanctions on Serbia a month ago, greatly worsening the economic problems that have accompanied the breakup of Yugoslavia.

Bosnian officials say at least 7,440 people have been killed since the republic's majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence from Yugoslavia on Feb. 29. Bosnian Serbs boycotted the vote and then, with the help of the Serb-dominated federal army, seized two-thirds of Bosnia.

In Washington, President Bush said Sunday the United States would "do its part" to ensure the delivery of aid to Sarajevo. When asked if U.S. troops could be used to open the airport, he said that "every option is open."

Razeq said today that there were sporadic machine-gun battles around the airport during the night, but that they were much lighter than usual.

Serb leaders said Sunday that their forces had turned over the airport to U.N. peacekeepers, but Razeq denied U.N. forces were in control.

"Everybody keeps saying we have control of the airport. We do not have control of the airport," Razeq said.

Maj. Dervo Harbinja, spokesman for Bosnian defense forces, said there was no sign that Serbs had begun withdrawing artillery from the airport.

Razeq said that U.N. observers would go to the airport today to watch the promised Serb withdrawal. But he said the United Nations would have to approve moving in more peacekeepers to fully secure the airport for relief flights.

"There is a difference between controlling and running the airport and controlling the strategic points around it," he said.

French President Francois Mitterrand dramatized Sarajevo's plight with a six-hour visit Sunday, during which he met with Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, visited a heavily damaged military hospital and toured the city in an armored vehicle.

His visit came a day after European Community leaders pressed for a U.N. humanitarian aid effort backed by military action if attacks on Sarajevo continued.

Mitterrand said force would be used if necessary to deliver aid to the city's 350,000 residents, who are battered and short of food and medicine after nearly three months of Serb bombardments and blockades.

Mitterrand's visit "lends credibility to the warnings by the Security Council," the council's president, Venezuelan U.N. Ambassador Diego Arria, said late Sunday in New York.

Mitterrand's departure was delayed by a fire at the airport between Serbs and the city's Muslim-led defenders. He arrived back in Paris on Sunday night.

Two French government planes with 13 tons of relief supplies that were to land in Sarajevo late Sunday were diverted to Split, Croatia, because of the airport fighting. The pilots were waiting today for word on when to proceed to Sarajevo.

Algerian leader assassinated

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALGIERS, Algeria — Gunmen today assassinated the head of the ruling council that seized power in January to prevent a Muslim fundamentalist election victory, state radio said.

Mohamed Boudiaf, 72, was shot while in the eastern city of Annaba to give a speech, the report said.

He would be the most prominent leader assassinated in the Arab world since Islamic fundamentalists killed President Anwar Sadat of Egypt in 1981.

The French news agency Agence France-Presse and British Broadcasting Corp. quoted witnesses as saying Boudiaf was hit in the back by two bursts of gunfire.

Boudiaf was president of the five-man, military-backed High State Committee, which took power to block the expected victory by Islamic fundamentalists in Algeria's first free parliamentary elections after 30 years of Marxist rule.

Fundamentalist guerrillas have retaliated for the crackdown — which included the arrest of thousands of Islamic Salvation Front supporters — by staging hit-and-run attacks that have killed up to 100 police officers and soldiers.

Boudiaf was trying to bring together the divided nation and was making his second trip to the provinces to rally the population when he was reported assassinated.

Before his death was announced, the official APS news agency said gunfire broke out as he arrived at the House of Art and Culture in the port city 300 miles east of Algiers. It said there was "total confusion" in the area. Helicopters were reported hovering over the city.

Boudiaf was a hero of Algeria's war of independence from France who spent 26 years in exile in Morocco before returning and being appointed to the state committee in January. At the time he appeared to be little more than a symbolic leader.

The ruling body's most powerful member clearly has been the defense minister, Gen. Khaled Nezzar.

Bush holds strong lead in South

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — President Bush holds a substantial lead over challengers Bill Clinton and Ross Perot in the South despite a sharp drop in his level of support since the last election, a newspaper poll said Saturday.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution poll showed Bush with 39 percent, Democrat Clinton with 29 percent and unannounced independent candidate Perot with 27 percent. Four percent were undecided.

The poll of 747 registered voters and individuals planning to register was taken across a dozen Southern states but did not measure the strength of the candidates within the individual states.

The four-day telephone survey, completed Wednesday, had an error margin of 3.6 percent. It was designed by Journal-Constitution polling director Pama Mitchell and taken by Marketing Inc.

In presidential voting in 1988, Bush won all of the 12 states where the poll was taken, with margins ranging from 62 percent in South Carolina to 54 percent in Louisiana.

Theft of signs could cost life

How many times did we, as kids, do something that clearly was vandalism? We didn't think of ourselves as vandals, did we? We didn't mean to put someone at risk because we took that sign at the intersection — after all, it seemed kind of fun to hide in the bushes and watch a driver panicked when he realized he was crossing a main thoroughfare. But no one ever got hurt, did they? Times have changed. Oh, kids will still be kids but now, in addition to the stop and yield signs, they're also taking the signs that identify the road. And by so doing, they could cause a critical delay in the delivery of emergency services to someone . . . all because an emergency vehicle driver couldn't locate a particular road. Howard County is faced with a dilemma. More than $30,000 will have to be spent to place signs on every county road — and while it is a goodly sum of money, it is a small price to pay to be able to deliver emergency services to our entire populace. But while the county is trying to put signs into place, others are stealing the signs. Theft of road signs is a criminal offense. It's not hard to find the signs . . . they're on bedroom walls and hanging on the doors of kids' rooms around the county. Parents can help get the signs back. They can also help keep the signs from being taken by making certain their children are aware of the dangers they are creating and the laws they are breaking.

Other views

"No more lies" — that is the memorable promise of the Bush-Yeltsin summit. Even more than the breakthrough in arms control, the Russian president's public repudiation of the old Soviet Union's decades of deception should clear the way for a cooperative relationship between democratic Russia and the United States. Yeltsin said his country is already taking off alert its giant intercontinental ballistic missiles targeted on the United States. To demonstrate his seriousness about putting the relationship on a sound moral footing, Yeltsin said previously secret Soviet archives suggest U.S. prisoners of the Vietnam War were taken to the Soviet Union and could still be alive. Yeltsin's good faith in this matter is not in doubt. A U.S.-Russian commission will immediately investigate the new leads. It is hoped this removes the last obstacle to enactment of an aid package for Russia. Congress has already dithered 10 weeks, paralyzed by the unpopularity of foreign aid. An imperfect aid package is better than none at this critical juncture in Yeltsin's reforms moving Russia away from communism.

Vero Beach (Fla.) Press-Journal

Boris Yeltsin, once scorned in some quarters as a noisy bumpkin, has made a host of new friends here for his vision of a new Russia. It is a compelling and encouraging vision, grounded in principles of peace, cooperation, economic reform and democracy, and the Russian president painted it with enthusiasm as he barnstormed through Washington and across a Kansas wheat farm. It was a bravura performance. Many Americans still wonder whether . . . Yeltsin can reshape and rebuild his gravely wounded society, but there is now less ground for arguing that he doesn't merit our help. His reform goals for Russia are emphatically in America's interest, and deserve U.S. support.

Providence (R.I.) Journal-Bulletin

It's a good question, a poignant question, that many bewildered or indignant Americans are asking: Why should the United States, with all of its problems here at home and with its frightening national debt, provide hundreds of millions of dollars in economic aid to Russia and the other former Soviet republics? How can U.S. officials justify such a stance to hungry, homeless, hurting Americans? How can they justify it to mayors and governors scraping to find ways to help their ailing cities and states? How can they rationalize it to angry taxpayers who already feel overburdened? First, it is important to understand how the federal budget works. As part of the controversial 1990 budget agreement, Congress established walls between domestic, defense and international spending. Money saved or not spent in one of those categories, by law, cannot be spent in any of the others. Instead, any money not appropriated must be used to help reduce the federal budget deficit. Unless Congress votes to knock those walls down, which Republican and conservative Democratic leaders refuse to do, they will stand until at least Sept. 30, 1993. Therefore, if the United States provides aid to the former Soviet republics, it must come out of the $20 billion international budget. So now the question becomes: Should the United States spend money out of its international budget to help Russia and its new independent neighbors? And the answer is: America cannot afford not to. Yes, deficit reduction is important, too. What Congress must do is carefully examine the international budget and make sure spending is in line with America's foreign policy priorities. It should rethink its foreign aid, State Department and other related international spending and consider cuts elsewhere within the budget to help reduce the deficit. But to reject Russian President Boris Yeltsin's request and that of other leaders in that region would be penny-wise and dollar-foolish.

No doubt that Patton belongs in hall

A few weeks ago, while on a mission in San Francisco, I ventured over to Sausalito and came upon a gallery featuring photographs of legends, both sporting and otherwise. I went a little crazy and brought back my childhood by buying pictures of Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale, Arnold Palmer, the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers lineup, the 1959 Chicago White Sox, and Winston Churchill, whom I have admired because my father, a World War II veteran, taught me he was a great man. I also bought a photograph of Gen. George Patton for the same reason. "George Patton," my father used to say, "was the greatest warrior this country ever produced." I've read volumes on Patton. I have videotaped documentaries on him, which I still watch occasionally when there is someone around who knows how to operate my VCR, that infernal piece of machinery.

Lewis Grizzard

My favorite all time movie is George C. Scott's "Patton." There is that incredible scene where Scott, as Patton, surveys a battlefield of dead and says something like, "God forgive me, but how I love it so." Patton was both genius and flake, a trait of many who have achieved greatness. It allowed him to do the impossible, and it also attributed to his setbacks. But I will always believe, as my father did, if George Patton had had his way, there would never have been a cold war. Of George said, "We might as well go ahead and fight the Rooskies now," and "we should have," added Capt. Lewis Grizzard, Sr. In "Patton," George C. Scott advises the Allied Command of that idea and adds, "Hell, I'll make it look like they started it." I wrote a column about my visit to the Sausalito gallery and I never expected the reaction I've had from readers. A man wrote, "I've got to go to that place. Koufax, Drysdale, and Palmer. I've worshipped all of them since I was 8." Another letter said, "You and I must have been separated at birth. Everybody you bought a photograph of is in my Hall of Fame, too." The best came, however, from Andrew J. Ryan of Sneads Ferry, N.C. He wrote: "A few days ago you wrote you had obtained some cherished (photos) of heroes of your childhood. I, although much older than you, had many of the same idols. When you mentioned the General was one, it hit a chord with me." Andrew J. Ryan went on to say how much he also admired Patton, and he did even more than that. He passed along another photo of Patton, in an historic moment indeed. The general was obsessed with invading Germany. And he promised, once he got to the Rhine, he would show his disdain for the Fuhrer and his Fatherland in a way only Patton would consider. He promised to urinate in the Rhine. Andrew J. Ryan sent me a photograph of George Patton fulfilling his promise. I will cherish it, and I will hang it on the wall, directly over the VCR, which I often feel deserves the same treatment.

Always good to see bully battered

WASHINGTON — It is always a pleasure to see a bully take a beating. Thus there was great joy a few days ago, at least in conservative circles, when Ohio's Sen. Howard Metzenbaum absorbed a licking at the hands of Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah. The issue was the misnamed Workplace Fairness Act, a piece of one-sided legislation much beloved by the labor unions. Metzenbaum never has met a pro-labor bill he didn't like. He loved this one. It would have taken from management the only effective tool that management has left to combat a life-or-death strike. Under existing law, an employer now has power to hire permanent replacements for workers who hit the bricks. The power has rarely been used. Metzenbaum's bill would have protected the strikers all the way. Last Tuesday the gentleman tried for the second time to stifle opposition by cutting off debate on the bill. Hatch rallied his troops so effectively that Metzenbaum's effort failed decisively. The bill is dead for this Congress. Let it go. The fight over Metzenbaum's bill pitted two men who are opposites in almost every way. Metzenbaum is 75, a millionaire many times over (parking lots, labor law), who tolerates no backtalk from anyone. In committee and in floor debate he slugs away as a hard-bitten, mean-spirited obstructionist whose general plan of action is to run over anyone who dares to get in his way. In a civil rights debate a couple of years ago, he tarred his opponents as so many David Dukes. In any contest to choose the most disliked member of the Senate, Metzenbaum would win hands down. At one time or another the junior senator from Ohio has tromped on the toes of all 99 of his colleagues. He delights in blocking judicial nominations. Toward the end of every session, when pressures build and courtesy helps, Metzenbaum comes to the Senate chamber with all the grace of a wrecking ball. Hatch is 58, a lawyer of modest means, a deliberate man, a man of punctilio and politesse, whose public expressions of anger are always more muted than roared. Most of the time he presents the unflappable facade of a grandfather clock. Without yielding on conservative principles, he can form alliances with such doctrinaire liberals as Kennedy of Massachusetts (and even, once, with Metzenbaum himself). The adversaries tangled in debate last Monday. Metzenbaum had pulled a typically abrasive stunt. Without a word to Republican members of the Senate Labor Committee, he had magisterially contrived a "committee modification" to the pending bill. The effect was to introduce a new element of arbitration, defined by Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon as "quasi-compelled mediation." Hatch was burned up. The roughshod maneuver had Metzenbaum's footprints all over it. "I realize that when it comes to labor legislation," said Hatch, "most notions of senatorial courtesy get tossed out of the window." The hurtful shaft doubtless broke Metzenbaum's heart, but the senator heals in a hurry. Before long Metzenbaum was sneering that Hatch "obviously reads English very well." At one point, Hatch disagreed with Metzenbaum by saying "no, no." "Yes, yes," growled the pit bull. "Do not tell me no, no!" The exchange got so personal that the venerable Bob Byrd of West Virginia, Democratic dean of the Senate, demanded that the debaters follow protocol and address each other in the third person. Metzenbaum ignored the rebuke. Hatch said he would "address the distinguished senator from Ohio through the chair," but in a minute both of them were back at the battle. Metzenbaum's problem was that even with the purported "committee modification" he had a bad bill to defend. The measure would have imposed radical change upon rules that have governed strikes for more than 50 years. Under present law, the field is roughly balanced between the powers of labor and the powers of management. When bargaining fails, as a last resort a union may go on strike. A company, as a last resort, may hire permanent replacements for strikers. Neither side relishes last resorts. Union members lose wages; employers lose production and profits; both sides lose good will. By removing the employers' counter weapon, Metzenbaum would have turned the level field into a ski slope. In this case, the better man had the better argument, and thus deserved to win. Thank you, Senator Hatch.

Former Howard cowboy wins steer wrestling

Evidently Barry Simpton felt comfortable at the Big Spring Rodeo Bowl.

Simpton, from Del Rio, made a return trip to Big Spring to come away with a win in the steer wrestling competition at the 59th Annual Big Spring Cowboys Reunion and Rodeo. The former Howard College cowboy made his move on Saturday's final night. He recorded a 5.7 on his second run of the rodeo, giving him a 10.4 on two runs. He edged out Delbert Davis of Hereford, who had a 10.9 on his two runs.

The steer wrestling competition was the only leader change Saturday. Keith Hudson of Sonora won the calf roping competition; Shawn Frey of Norman, Okla. was the bareback winner; Roy Pettit and Shot Branham of Midland were the team roping champions; Derek Clark of Colcord, Okla. and Billy Etbauer of Ree Heights, S.D. tied for the saddle bronc title; Mandy Terry of Colorado City was the barrel race winner and David Fournier of Decatur was the bull riding champion.

Terry's win in the barrel race was somewhat of a surprise. She had to beat three of the top ranked barrel racers in the world — Corley Cox of Cotulla, Donna Kennedy of Evant and Kim West of Oklahoma City, who are ranked seventh, eighth and ninth respectively on the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association circuit.

Terry was the only barrel racer at the rodeo to go under 17 seconds (16.91). West was timed in 17.14; Kennedy in 17.44 and Cox in 17.58.

In Saturday's competition Guy Miller of Big Spring had the second fastest time in calf roping, 20.5. In team roping the Big Spring duo of Mike Powell and Larry Halfmann had the second fastest time in team roping with a time of 8.4.

Dream Team overwhelms Cuba

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — From Larry Bird's opening fadeaway jumper to Clyde Drexler's game-ending slam dunk, the U.S. Dream Team's debut was the overwhelming performance everyone expected it to be.

Want an even scarier thought? David Robinson feels this team can play better.

"We're not very familiar with each other," he said.

After just five days of practice, the U.S. team played its first game on Sunday. Game maybe is too kind a word. There was never a whisp of doubt about how the contest would end.

The U.S. team's crushing 136-57 victory over Cuba should be the first of a series of mismatches. Tonight it's Canada. Tuesday it's Panama. Next month, Barcelona.

"We're just trying to build something now," Robinson said. "This is just the start of a long trek."

Once Michael Jordan warms up, the blowouts should get even bigger.

Jordan, the consensus choice as greatest basketball player in the world, was just 2 for 6 from the field and was the only American to finish below the 50 percent mark.

Still, the U.S. won by 79 points.

The team simply is unbeatable in international competition, said an awe-struck Cuban coach Miguel Calderon Gomez.

"If we speak honestly, I think that anybody other than another NBA team has no chance," he said. "As we say in Cuba, you can't cover the sun with your finger."

"It is almost the perfect basketball machine," he said.

There were plenty of spectacular moments as the greatest players in the world's best league showed their stuff.

On the Americans' third possession, Bird grabbed a rebound and tossed the ball underhand to Magic Johnson, who made a no-look pass to Robinson for a layup.

Four minutes into the contest, Jordan saved the ball from going out of bounds with a half-court, behind-the-back pass to Bird, who sank an 18-footer.

At the 13:45 mark, Johnson, who was so excited at the start he came out three players too early during the roster introductions, rifled a half-court pass to Charles Barkley for a stuff.

By the time the starting lineup of Johnson, Bird, Jordan, Barkley and Robinson left the court with 12½ minutes to play in the half, the Dream Team led 27-9. It only got worse, or better, depending on the perspective.

In the second half, 22 of the Americans' 25 field goals were either dunks or layups.

"You kind of feel bad," Barkley said, "especially when it's against brothers of the African race."

There was no sympathy from Karl Malone, who is talking more like a soldier than a basketball player as the United States competes in this week's Olympic qualifying tournament.

"We have to win the gold and we have to set the tone now," he said. "We're at a point now where we can't afford to feel sorry for anybody. If the shoe was on the other foot, which it's been for years, they never feel sorry for us."

Edberg strolls into fourth round

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Stefan Edberg strolled into the fourth round without losing a set. Boris Becker ran the gauntlet, barely surviving a pair of tough challenges.

The former Wimbledon champions arrived in the round of 16 via different paths — Edberg dropping only 22 games in three matches and Becker losing that many in each of his last two contests.

For three-time champion Becker, who had not played much before Wimbledon because of injuries and early-round losses, the workout has been helpful — though not necessarily relaxing.

"Now maybe it's time to win a bit quicker," he said after a 6-4, 3-6, 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (7-5) defeat of American Bryan Shelton on Saturday. "Now I've played enough sets and points and games. I don't need a long match any more just to get in shape for Wimbledon."

It was the second straight struggle for Becker, following a 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 defeat of Martin Damm in the second round.

Wimbledon

Edberg, the second seed, has spent much less time on court, winning his third-round match 6-1, 6-0, 6-2 over Grant Stafford. Also strolling into the round of 16 were third seed Michael Stich, the defending champion, and fifth seed Pete Sampras.

Top-seeded Jim Courier did not make it as far as the fourth round, losing his bid for the Grand Slam with a 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 loss to Russian qualifier Andrei Olhovskiy.

Courier, who won the Australian and French Opens earlier this year, was seeking to become the first man to sweep all four legs of the Grand Slam since Rod Laver in 1969.

Instead, Olhovskiy became the first qualifier in Wimbledon history to knock off a top seed and earned a match against John McEnroe in the round of 16.

All fourth-round matches were scheduled for today, including a couple of men's slugfests — fourth-seeded Becker against No. 14 Wayne Ferreira and No. 8 Goran Ivanisevic facing 10th-seeded Ivan Lendl.

Edberg was to face fellow Swede Henrik Holm, a qualifier, and Sampras faced Arnaud Boetsch of France. Stich was due to face Wally Masur and 12th-seeded Andre Agassi had a match set against Christian Saceanu.

But the top men's match for most Wimbledon fans was to be a Centre Court encounter between ninth-seeded Frenchman Guy Forget and unseeded Jeremy Bates, the first Briton to reach the fourth round at Wimbledon since 1982.

The top two women's seeds were scheduled to face Americans in the fourth round. Top seed Monica Seles was to play Gigi Fernandez and second seed Steffi Graf, who needed three tough sets to overcome Mariann de Swardt on Saturday, was to meet Patty Fendick.

Fendick ousted 11th-seeded Jana Novotna 6-3, 6-3 on Saturday.

Sports briefs

Dodgers down Astros, 8-2

LOS ANGELES — The Dodgers, shaken from their beds by two early-morning earthquakes, beat Houston 8-2 to take three of four at the start of a club record 22-game homestand.

A crowd of about 38,000 was expected at Dodger Stadium, but confusion by the public about whether the quakes would cause a postponement trimmed the attendance to 26,260 — LA's smallest home crowd of the season. The Dodgers announced shortly after 10:30 a.m. (PDT) that the game would be played.

Bob Ojeda (4-4) earned his first victory in six starts dating back to May 26, allowing two runs and six hits in six innings. Mitch Webster and Eric Karros each drove in two runs for the Dodgers. Willie Blair dropped to 0-3.

Ryan finally gets first win

Nolan Ryan had pitched well enough to win this season, only he had nothing to show for it. Now, at last, he does.

Ryan finally won his first game of the season, pitching seven shutout innings as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 8-4 Sunday.

Ryan's 315th victory moved him past Gaylord Perry for 13th place on the all-time list. It also stopped his winless streak of 13 starts — matching his career high — that began last Sept. 25.

Ryan (1-3) scattered five hits, struck out seven and lowered his ERA to 4.15.

Terry Mathews relieved Ryan to start the eighth with an 8-0 lead, but Cecil Fielder hit a two-run double as the Tigers scored three times. Fielder hit an RBI double in the ninth and Detroit loaded the bases with two outs before Jeff Russell struck out Dan Gladden to end it.

Colorado City gets football coach

COLORADO CITY — Former Abilene Copper assistant Mark Howeth was hired as the Head Football Coach and Athletic Director at Colorado City Friday.

Howeth was chosen from list of 58 applicants. He was given a two-year contract which plays $41,000 annually.

A native of Burleson, Howeth was a four-year letterman in football as linebacker and a three-year letterman in baseball at Austin College, where he earned both bachelor's and master's degrees in education.

The 35-year-old Howeth was at Cooper for one year and the previous five years he was an assistant at Brownwood. Before that he coached two years at Denison and three years at Weatherford.

Coahoma ragball July 4

COAHOMA — A Coahoma ragball tournament to help offset the Coahoma Girls' Softball All Stars expenses is set for July 4. Entry fee is $10 per person and includes a hamburger and soft drink.

Teams must consist of five women and five men. For more information call David Elmore (394-4759) or Spot Paige (267-7539).

Gilbert captures Seniors event

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert won the Southwestern Bell Classic on Sunday, firing a 4-under-par 66 in the Senior PGA tournament.

He finished at 193, 17-under par and nine strokes ahead of runner-up Jim Colbert, the defending champion.

Gilbert's 193 tied Charles Coody and Bob Charles for the lowest 54-hole score on the tour.

Colbert finished 8-under, one stroke better than Dave Stockton and Larry Laoretti, who finished at 203.

Lewis comes up empty in 200

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Michael Johnson beat Carl Lewis in the 200 and Gail Devers qualified for the Olympic team in the 100 dash and 100 hurdles as the U.S. Olympic trials ended Sunday.

Failing to make the team were Roger Kingdom, Greg Foster, Mary Slaney, Steve Scott and Dan O'Brien.

O'Brien missed the decathlon when he failed to clear the pole vault Saturday.

Lewis finished fourth in the 200, behind Johnson, Mike Marsh and Michael Bates.

Devers hurdled in 12.55 seconds, the second-fastest ever by an American, and second-fastest this year.

Joining Devers on the team were LaVonna Martin and Lynda Tolbert. Martin finished at 12.71 and Tolbert in 12.74, both personal bests.

Lindros may have a home soon

MONTREAL (AP) — Eric Lindros could find out today where he'll be playing hockey next season.

The marathon talks aimed at settling the bizarre trade of Lindros to both the Philadelphia Flyers and New York Rangers by the Quebec Nordiques ended in the early-morning hours on Saturday. Arbitrator Larry Bertuzzi then returned to his Toronto home to study "hundreds and hundreds of pages" of evidence collected from 11 witnesses at five days and nights of hearings.

Bertuzzi's decision could be given to NHL officials today.

The only thing that's certain is that Lindros' rights won't remain with Quebec.

"Either Philadelphia or New York has an agreement with Quebec — one of them will prevail," Bertuzzi said after the hearings ended, ruling out any possibility that both deals would be annulled and Lindros either declared a free agent or returned to the Nordiques to try again.

The week marked a breakthrough for Lindros, who refused to sign with the Nordiques after they drafted him first overall in 1991. He missed an NHL season while playing for Canada's national team and his Oshawa junior squad.

The Flyers claim they made a deal with Nordiques president Marcel Aubut moments before the entry draft on June 20. While the Flyers were calling Lindros to confirm he would report to Philadelphia, Aubut signed a deal with the Rangers.

LULAC holding meet in San Antonio

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO — The League of United Latin American Citizens is getting ready for its national convention, which LULAC leaders say will highlight the presidential race and organization unity.

"It's looking very good. It's going to be very successful. We have people coming in from all over the country," said Margaret Moran, convention coordinator for the Hispanic rights organization.

Officially, the 63rd annual convention starts Wednesday in San Antonio and runs through Sunday.

The league is offering workshops Monday and Tuesday led by speakers from federal agencies. Some sessions, like one on non-profit housing corporations, are open to the public.

As in other election years, the presidential race is expected to dominate this week's gathering.

LULAC officials say Democratic presidential hopeful Bill Clinton will speak Wednesday, along with Texas Gov. Ann Richards. Clinton's campaign said it could not confirm whether the candidate would attend the meeting until a day before.

President Bush has been invited but will not be able to attend, and likely independent candidate Ross Perot initially declined an invitation but is "rethinking it," Ms. Moran said.

Other scheduled speakers are former San Antonio mayor Henry Cisneros, FBI Director William Sessions and Flora Sambrano of the equal opportunity office of the U.S. Army in Korea.

By the weekend, about 800 people had registered for the convention.

Jose Velez of Las Vegas, the LULAC national president, will preside. He first was elected to the post at the 1990 national convention in Albuquerque, N.M., amid bitter fighting among members.

Some LULAC members since have been expelled and are fighting those expulsions in court. Several expelled members showed up at the state LULAC convention earlier this month in Lubbock.

Quake

looting. The Red Cross opened shelters.

The quakes cut water service to 5,500 homes and businesses, about half the customers in an 80-square-mile area. Trucks delivered water to many places.

People in the hamlet of Landers, near the epicenter, were advised to boil drinking water. Hundreds flocked to damaged stores for bottled water, which was rationed at some markets.

At least 5,000 homes in San Bernardino County were still without power early today, said Chuck Duncan, a county disaster planner.

A fissure at least 43 miles long was found near the epicenter. The crack severed formerly arrow-straight Reche Road and displaced one broken end 10 feet. Elsewhere the displacement was as much as 18 feet, scientists said.

Both quakes struck close to the dangerous San Andreas Fault, raising fears of the long-dreaded, catastrophic Big One.

Scientists couldn't estimate the chance of such a quake, said Lucy Jones, a U.S. Geological Survey seismologist. But she said the odds of a quake bigger than either of Sunday's jolts diminished rapidly with time.

By tonight, the chance of a great quake would be less than 1 percent, she said.

Jones said there is a 75 percent chance of aftershocks exceeding magnitude 6 in the next month, and a 50 percent chance of such a quake in the next week.

The quakes caused no major damage or fires in Los Angeles County, but that didn't soothe many.

"It felt like the Earth had turned into the sea and my house was a ship on it," said Joseph Shea of Hollywood.

In Anaheim, a tower at the Disneyland Hotel was evacuated briefly after the first quake knocked some plaster off the outside.

"There were people in their pajamas sleeping on the sidewalk outside on blankets. They were too scared to go back in," said Corinda Vasquez of Anaheim. "It was a real smooth ride, an E-ticket."

The quakes unleashed landslides that temporarily closed all roads to Big Bear, where the sheriff's station, airport, main ski lodge and scores of homes and businesses were damaged.

Frances Wilson of Yucca Valley waited as doctors treated her father for chest pains. "We have no dishes left. Everything in the medicine cabinet fell out. The TV, the VCR, everything is broken," she said.

Lee Tinsley of neighboring Big Bear City was busy picking up debris in his two-story home. "All the good china, all the bad china, too, is broke," Tinsley said.

NOTICE OF ELECTION FOR GRADY INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT ON AUGUST 29, 1992

On August 29, 1992, the Grady Independent School District will hold a school board election. The election will be implemented pursuant to a single-member district plan ordered by the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas, Midland-Odessa Division.

Under the newly created plan, trustees will be elected from seven single-member districts rather than at-large. Please refer to the map included with this notice for the boundaries of the single-member districts. On August 29, 1992, places 1 and 2 will be up for election. There is currently a vacancy on the board of trustees and the court ordered that the vacancy shall be filled by a special election to be held in conjunction with the August 29 elections. This special election to be held will fill the vacancy that is designated to be for district 7. In the regularly scheduled 1993 elections, places 3 and 4 shall be up for election and in the regularly scheduled 1994 elections, places 5 and 6 shall be up for election. All positions on the board of trustees shall be for a term of 3 years.

A trustee is required to be both a resident of the Grady Independent School District as well as the single-member district which he/she is either appointed or elected to represent. However, in the event that the period provided for by law for filing for single-member trustees positions closes without any person filing for office, then the board president in consultation with other board members shall reopen filing for a supplemental period of 7 days and any person who is a resident of the Grady Independent School District shall be entitled to file for that position. This shall be the procedure in either a regularly scheduled or a special election to fill the vacancy. At each election for a single-member district position, the candidate receiving a plurality of the votes cast shall be declared elected. No run off shall be required. If a vacancy on the board of trustees occurs, the vacancy shall be filled at the next regular election. The vacancy on the board of trustees may be filled by appointment made by a majority of the remaining members of the board. The appointed person serves only until the next regular election.

Residents of the individual districts may vote only when their district is up for election. For example, in the August 29 election, voters from districts 1, 2 and 7 will vote for candidates in their districts. Voters from outside those districts will not be allowed to vote.

Any resident of single-member districts 1, 2 or 7 of the Grady Independent School District who wishes to run for board of trustees may make an application for a place on the August 29 ballot at the Superintendent's Office at Grady Independent School District from June 15 through July 15.

If additional information is needed concerning the upcoming election or the single-member district boundaries, you may call the Superintendent's office at (915) 459-2444.

Dental clinic staff, patients face risks

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Malcolm Queen risked his life the other day by visiting Temple University's infectious disease dental center, which treats AIDS patients.

But it was the drive that put Queen's life in immediate danger, not undergoing any dental procedure.

The risk of a patient contracting the AIDS virus while in a dental chair is about 1 in 263,158 procedures, a much lower risk than dying in a traffic accident, according to the Centers for Disease Control. A driver's risk of being killed in a car crash in one year is 1 in 6,500.

Only one health-care provider is known to have infected a patient. CDC researchers have said they still have not learned how the Florida dentist David Acer transmitted the virus to five patients before dying in 1990.

The Temple clinic's director, Dr. Michael Glick, reminds dental students and faculty of the greater hazards of dying in a car accident or being struck by lightning.

But Glick admits emotion often overrules reason.

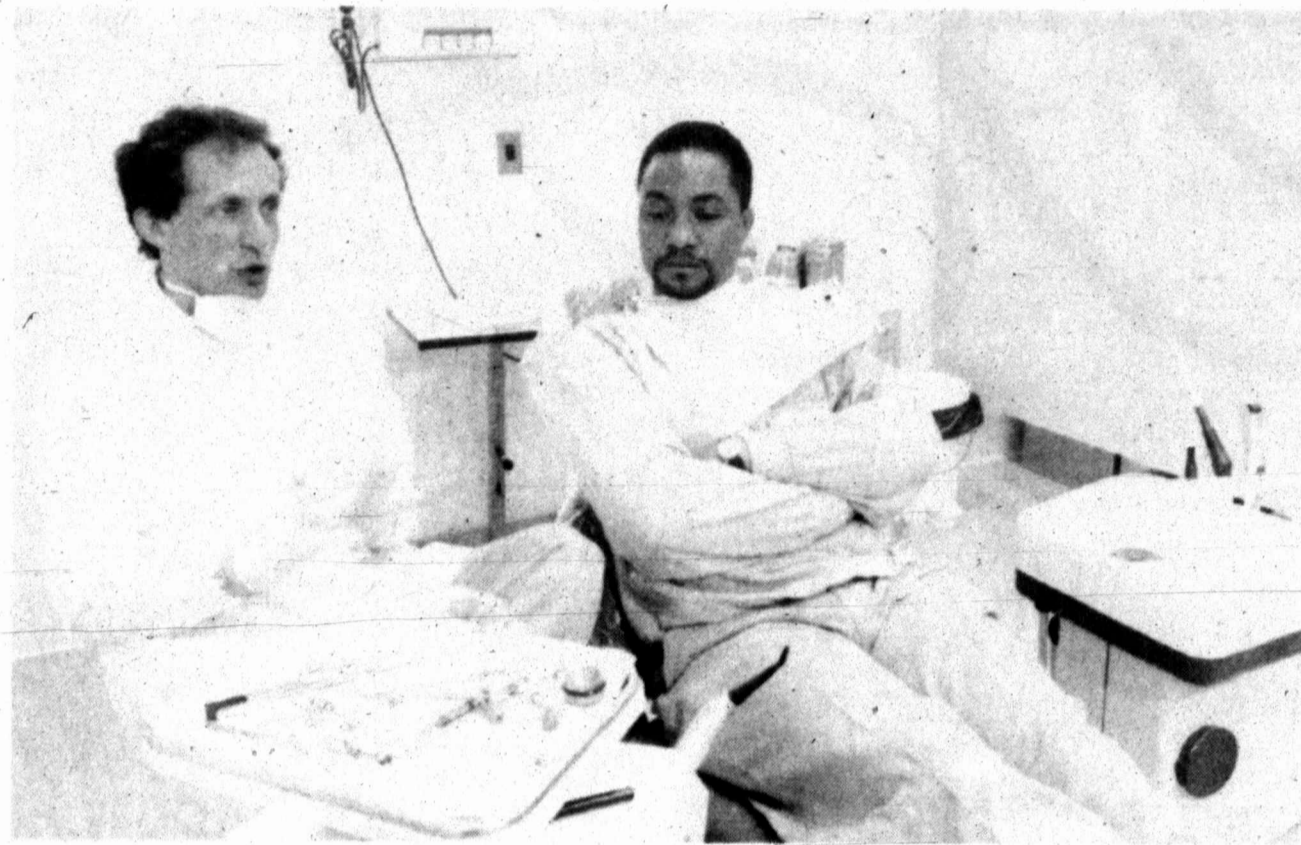

"HIV has very little to do with logic," he said.

Glick, Temple graduate Dr. Brian Muzyka and as many as 72 students a semester treat the clinic's 800 infectious patients. Most of the patients are HIV infected, some have tuberculosis, and one has leprosy. A few have hepatitis B.

The clinic provides the same procedures with the same precautions that all dentists should use, according to Glick. The clinic's dentists and students wear surgical gowns, masks, rubber gloves and goggles with side barriers.

The precautions protect the dentist as well as the patient, although only 47 of the 7,652 infected health-care workers in the United States contracted the disease through their work.

Glick began the clinic at Temple's request in July 1988, and he's been asked by others for advice in setting up similar programs. The American Dental Association said it was unaware of any other university-related dental clinics of dentistry and take the same precautions. There's actually no reason why we should be here," Glick said.

Many of Glick's patients go to the clinic because they don't want to dedicated to treating infectious disease patients.

But there's no need for dental centers dedicated to treating infectious patients, he said.

"It's a sad reflection on the dentists out there. We do the same type risk someone else's life, they appreciate the precautions the clinic takes or because no other dentist will care for them.

Be careful while pampering your baby

Pampering your new baby with baths, shampoos or powders can result in less than loving doses of toxic chemicals, according to a Loyola University Medical Center-Chicago study.

Chemicals found in many over-the-counter skin care products can enter the bloodstream through infants' delicate skins. "A newborn baby more readily absorbs chemicals placed on its skin than does an adult. These chemicals enter the infant's body," says Dr. George Lambert, associate professor of pediatrics at Loyola and an expert in environmental toxins.

Lambert, Dr. Frank Cetta and Dr. Simon Ros, co-authors of the study appearing in Clinical Pediatrics, found that of 80 different substances listed on these skin care product labels, 10 have been rated as at least "moderately toxic" when given to animals.

Cetta, a pediatric emergency medicine specialist, says that estimate is conservative because so many over-the-counter products like paper diapers don't list ingredients that can be absorbed through the skin. And listings like lanolin or petrolatum — found in lotions, baby bath soaps or diaper rash products — are complex mixtures.

Petrolatum, for example, comes from petroleum and consists of 69 different hydrocarbons.

Some hydrocarbons can cause cancer, he points out.

The doctors surveyed 45 mothers who had given birth to healthy, full-term babies at the university's medical center, asking about their infant bathing and shampooing practices and use of commercially available skin care products.

On average, mothers bathed their one-month-old babies four times each week and shampooed them three times.

A majority — 35 mothers — reported their babies developed skin rashes during the first month of life, though only 14 of them sought a doctor's advice about the problem.

Forty-seven percent of the mothers reported using baby powder. "Baby powder use has been previously associated with significant morbidity due to accidental inhalation," the doctors wrote in their article. "The use of baby powder should be discouraged."

They added that safety and efficacy of newborn skin care products has not been supported by well controlled scientific study.

"I tell mothers to read the labels. If they are willing to eat or drink these products after knowing what is in them, then they should go ahead and rub them on their babies," says Lambert.

Lions host installation

Ron Plumlee, assistant superintendent of Big Spring schools for business, became the 65th man to head the Downtown Lions at installation ceremonies Tuesday evening in Dorothy Garrett Hall.

He succeeds Ford Farris, who reviewed last year's projects.

The ladies night affair also honored Dr. P.W. Malone — who a fortnight ago was named the Evening Lions Outstanding Citizen of the Year with a 60-year membership. Lonnie Legg, past district governor, received a 51-year perfect attendance award; longevity pins went to Bert Andries for 35 years; Harlan Hubregtse and Wes Deat for 20 years; Dick Helms and Ron Plumlee for 15 years; and Dee Elrod and Lynn Barnett for 10 years.

The Melvin-Jones Award, highest from the Lions International Foundation, was awarded to Joe Pickle, nearing three-score years membership in the club.

Others installed by Leonard Hanson, Midland, past 2A-1 district governor, were Larson Lloyd, Tommy Welch and Royce Cox, vice presidents; Lynn Barnett, secretary-treasurer; Wayne Bonner, Liontamer; Bob Parks and Forrest Wester, taittwisters; Danny Flenniken, David Drake, Harlan Hubregtse, Jerry Williams, directors; Howard Stewart, Bert Andries, Guy White, membership. Jackets and hats went to directors and project chairmen.

Brother at ladies' game plays cards wrong

DEAR ABBY: I play cards with a group of women. We take turns having the game in our homes. The hostess serves a nice lunch, then we play all afternoon.

This one lady always brings her brother along. He's a bachelor. He has never offered to have the group at his house, and we don't expect it. I don't resent what he eats, but he never says "thank you," and he has never brought a small gift like candy or a deck of cards.

I think his sister should tell him to take us all out to dinner at least once a year. What do you think? — ONE OF THE LADIES

DEAR ONE: How old is the brother? And why does his sister bring him to these games? You say he never says "thank you." He could be painfully shy or mentally impaired.

I think his sister deserves a gold star for bringing her brother along instead of leaving him home, or hiding him in a closet. But she should explain the circumstances to all of you. Perhaps if you knew more about him, you'd have more compassion and less resentment.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, "Jessica," is now 21. In high school she was a straight-A student, involved in many activities and had many friends. But in her senior year, she started going steady with "Nick," who is a year younger than she is. Nick is a loner, a mediocre student and has a negative personality.

Since Jessica took up with him, she's a changed person. Nick has isolated her, made her disrespectful to her family, and turned her into a foul-mouthed, deceptive, cold person.

She has changed colleges twice because of him, and is now living at home. Her ambition has always been to become a lawyer. Now she's changed her mind just to spite me.

Abby, I am a hardworking mother who has sacrificed to give Jessica everything a child could want. If I made mistakes in raising her, it was giving her too much, and it all began when she was brainwashed by Nick. He is every mother's nightmare. Now she is planning to marry him.

Don't tell me to take her to a psychiatrist. I offered she refused. Please help me. — MOTHER IN HELL

DEAR MOTHER: Have you considered that Jessica might be involved in drug use? Her sudden change in behavior is typical of a drug abuser. This "changed person" is still your daughter, so don't throw in the towel. Let her know that you will always be there for her even though you disapprove of her lifestyle.

Readers can write to: Dear Abby at P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.
