Ark Linkletter visits Big Spring Wednesday

Ark Linkletter, longtime TV show host, will visit Big Spring Wednesday as part of a promotion by Scenic Mountain Medical Center. Linkletter will appear at a private reception during the afternoon and then will appear at Big Spring High School that evening. The former host of Ark Linkletter's House Party and author of Kids Say the Darndest Things will speak at 7:30 p.m., following a 6:45 hospital-ty hour.

Deadline extended

The crop cutoff deadline has been extended from July 15 to Aug. 15.

Rick Liles, executive director of the Howard County ASCS office, said the deadline was extended because of hardships placed on farmers due to disaster losses and failed acres.

For more information call 267-2557.

Volunteers sought

West Side Community Day Care Center is seeking adult volunteers for one hour per week for a variety of activities including piano playing, model airplane demonstration, clown, magician or puppetry.

Call 263-7841 to volunteer.

Council meets tonight

The Big Spring City Council will meet tonight at 5:30 for its regular meeting and a scheduled budget workshop.

The meeting will be at the Big Spring McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark Terminal Building.

Less spending in proposed budget Meeting infrastructure needs concerns council

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A proposed 1992-93 city budget that would spend 4 percent less than the current budget was presented Monday to the Big Spring City Council.

But lowering spending while maintaining the same services and keeping up with deteriorating streets and water pipes could prove tricky for the council in the upcoming year.

"Our aging infrastructure will continue to decay at anticipated accelerated rate," says Acting City Manager Tom Decell in a summary of the $24.7 million budget. The current budget expenditures are estimated at $25.8 million.

"I sure think we'll make a mistake to let our infrastructure get any worse," warned Councilman Charles Beil, who along with others wants to try to hold decay at the present rate.

Issues raised Monday, in what was the first of three budget workshops scheduled this week, include:

• Adding four jailers and two dispatchers to the police department.

City officials have been unable to work out an agreement with the sheriff's office to handle city prisoners in exchange for daily incarceration fees. Therefore, Decell said, "It is prudent to restore these positions." Cost: an estimated $60,000 a year.

Two dispatchers are needed to relieve stress of the eight full-time and one part-time dispatchers handling 24 hours a day, every day, said Police Chief Joe Cook. Problems arise because of time off for illness, training and days off. Cost: $25,670.

• Raising water rates by 17 cents, to $13.30 a month, to fund pipe replacement in the Capehart Addition and other areas. Low water sales due to recent abundant rains have caused a cash flow problem in the utilities budget and the current balance would not carry the city through a cold winter in which numerous pipeline breaks would occur, Decell said.

"I am gravely concerned over the inability to fund the construction program for 1992-93," he said of the need for the water rate increase.

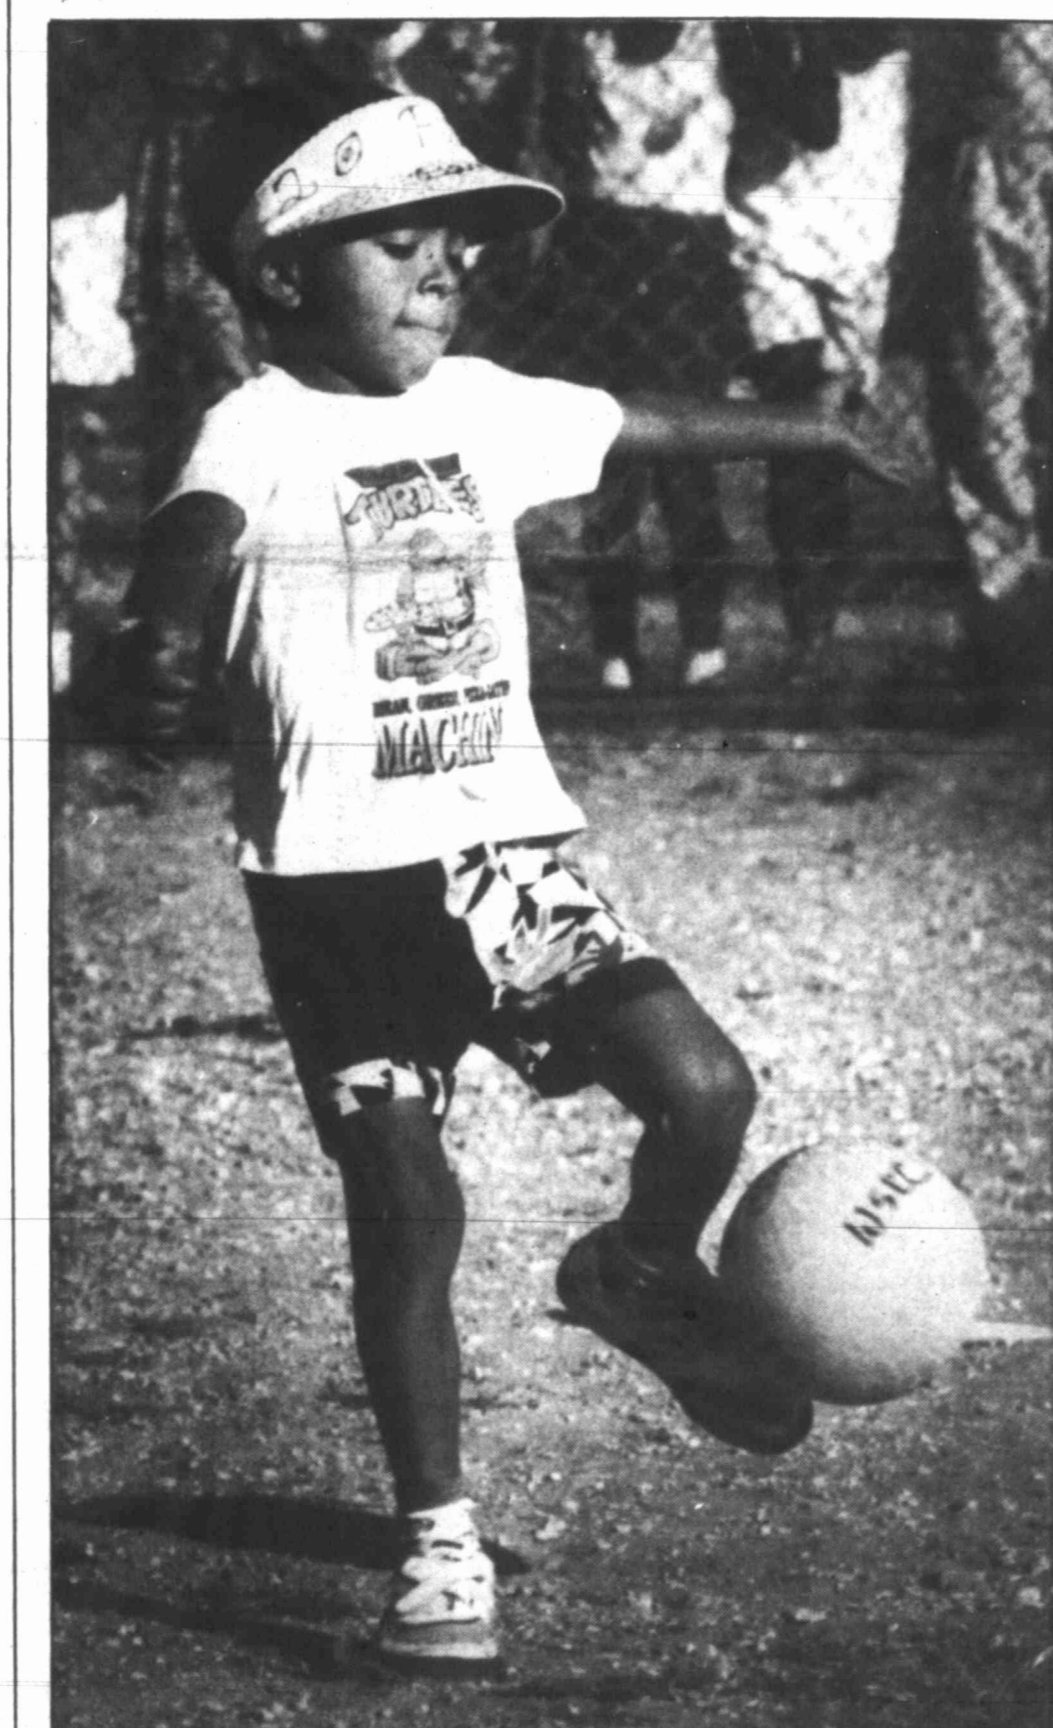

• Employee upgrades. Job responsibilities have changed over the years and some employees have more responsibilities and should be paid accordingly, said Emma Bogard, city personnel director. Also, a merit pay system was recommended by Decell. The estimated cost is $26,759 for job reclassifications and $25,000 for merit raises.

Also, City Secretary Tom Ferguson is asking for a clerk at $15,000 a year.

• More than doubling bond indebtedness, to about $14 million. $1.1 million is for street paving projects and $1.4 million would be for flood control on the Westside. Decell also proposed increasing annual street maintenance by 25 percent, to $125,000, because of increased sealcoating costs.

• A $57,630 increase in spending in the current budget and another $58,405 in next year's budget for the city correctional center, which handles federal prisoners. Decell said the increased expenditures are determined by federal mandates.

The council, which meets in regular session at 5:30 p.m. today, will continue budget sessions tonight and again Thursday at 6 p.m. Meetings are held at the Big Spring McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark Terminal Building.

Steve Ayers death ruled a homicide

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

The June 30 death of Steve Ayers, 34, of Big Spring is now being investigated by law enforcement officials as a homicide.

Ayers was reportedly beaten by unknown assailants on June 27, Long said. After trying to recuperate at his residence for two days, Ayers reportedly went to the Scenic Mountain Medical Center emergency room and was later admitted to the intensive care unit at 6:45 p.m. on June 29.

Ayers died at 8 p.m. the following day, Justice of the Peace China Long said.

After reviewing autopsy results, Long indicated on the death certificate that Ayers' death was due to homicide. This simply means that the death was caused in some way by another person or persons, Long said.

Autopsy results indicated that Ayers died of internal bleeding. His internal organs were reportedly traumatized in the beating.

Conflicting statements in the case make it unclear whether the assault happened inside or outside the city limits. The investigation is being conducted by the Howard County Sheriff's Office, Long said.

The investigation is ongoing and statements are being compiled in the case, but no arrests have been made as yet, said Sheriff A.N. Standard. After reviewing the information, sheriff's deputies will determine whether to present the case to the district attorney and a grand jury for possible indictment.

Standard said he was unable to release any further details discovered in the investigation.

Ayers, son of Steve Sr. and Alta Ayers of Big Spring was a plumber by trade. His family moved to Big Spring from San Angelo in 1964 and he had one son.

River ecology improves after major chemical spill

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DUNSMUIR, Calif. — Life is returning to the Sacramento River a year after a major chemical spill.

The river once was one of the nation's best native-trout fisheries, and the discovery last week of a 2-inch long bug was hailed as proof that its ecology is recovering.

The dark brown insect was the first stonefly found in the river since the July 14, 1991, spill from a derailed freight train killed hundreds of thousands of fish and virtually all plant life.

There are other good signs. Water tests have found no remaining traces of spilled chemicals, scuba divers have seen some small trout, and birds and other wildlife are returning to the 40-mile stretch of river about 270 miles north of San Francisco.

There also are bad signs. Stands of alders are dead and others have fewer leaves than normal. Some residents still complain of illnesses they suspect are linked to the accident.

In the months after a damaged tanker car spewed 13,500 gallons of the herbicide metam sodium into the river, the state Health Services Department received complaints of spill-related ailments from more than 800 people. Some have sued the Southern Pacific railroad.

The state itself sued Southern Pacific Transportation Co. on Monday, seeking reimbursement for cleanup costs. The Department of Fish and Game alone estimates spending more than $3 million on the spill. The lawsuit didn't specify the amount of damages sought.

Cannon Harvey, a Southern Pacific vice president, said the lawsuit was unnecessary.

Reorganization plan okay'd

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

OKLAHOMA CITY — A plan to financially reorganize the C.R. Anthony Co. has been cleared by a federal judge, having satisfied requirements of the bankruptcy code and creditors.

Anthony's announced confirmation of its plan Monday. The family apparel retailer had filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization in February 1991 after bank lenders refused to fund its seasonal line of credit.

"I'd say we got this done on the fast track," said John J. Wiesner, chairman and chief executive officer. "I told everyone I wanted us out in no more than 18 months and we beat that by a month."

The company said all parties entitled to vote had approved the plan. A new five-member board will be formed to oversee the company within the next 60 days.

The chain operates 182 stores in 11 states

— most in Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and New Mexico — employing about 5,000. It closed 36 stores after announcing its Chapter 11 filing.

The bank group's claim was satisfied with a seven-year note and the unsecured creditors received equity in the reorganized company, Anthony's said. It will have 50 million shares of capital stock.

The plan authorizes the company to issue up to 10.5 million shares of common stock, with 9 million being issued to creditors. One million shares were reserved for a stock option plan for key employees and 500,000 shares were reserved for a common stock warrant to unsecured creditors.

By the end of its 1993 fiscal year, the chain will have remodeled 129 stores representing over 78 percent of its retail sales space, it said. The company expects to open five new stores each year through 1997, with growth mostly concentrated in Louisiana, Kansas and Arkansas.

A federal judge has approved the Chapter 11 financial reorganization plan for the C.R. Anthony Co., which operates 182 stores in several states, including the Big Spring Anthony's store in the College Park Shopping Center.

Man drowns while trying to avoid arrest for DWI

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEGUIN — A man stopped by police officers who believed he was driving while intoxicated jumped over a bridge railing into the Guadalupe River to avoid arrest and drowned, a police spokesman says.

The body of Alvist Zimbalist Brooks, 23, of La Vernia, was recovered several hours later, police said Monday.

"He told officers he could lose his job if he got another DWI. He was not handcuffed," Detective Reno Reiley told the San Antonio Express-News. "He just broke away and jumped off the bridge into the water about 30 feet below."

The incident is being investigated, but the officers involved will remain on active duty, Reiley said.

Reiley said Brooks was driving his pickup southbound on the Texas 123 bypass when officers noted he was weaving and the driver ignored the flashing lights of Patrolman Jesse Trevino's police car.

"He stopped in the middle of the bridge after the officer shined his spotlight in the cab of the truck," Reiley said.

Patrolman Robert Hines, who is trained in use of the department's Intoxilizer for determining the blood-alcohol level of suspects, performed a field sobriety test on Brooks, the detective said.

Guadalupe County Justice of the Peace Edwin Neuse will conduct an inquest and has requested an autopsy, Reiley said.

Two suspects arrested in shooting of grandmother

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

GARLAND — Authorities have announced the arrests of two suspects in a June 16 shooting that left a 79-year-old woman dead and her three grandchildren wounded.

At a news conference Monday, Garland police chief Terry Hensley said the arrests were made Friday in Memphis, Tenn. Arrested were Dedrick Jones, 29, of De Soto County, Miss., and Ronnie Bernard Ollie, 24, of Memphis.

A third person is being sought, Hensley said.

The victim was Elma Mae Adkins. A 12-year-old granddaughter was shot once in the shoulder, a 9-year-old grandson was shot twice in the stomach, and an 8-year-old grandson was shot once in the leg. They were hospitalized, but have since been released.

Hensley said authorities hope to refer the case to a Dallas County grand jury later this week.

Names in the news

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIVONIA, Mich. — He had to wait 96 years, but George Burns finally had a theater named after him.

The former Omni Star Theatre in this Detroit suburb has been renamed the George Burns Theatre for the Performing Arts. Owner Stuart Gorelick said he chose the name because Burns is one of his favorites.

The nonagenarian comedian is tentatively booked to play the theater later this year, Gorelick said.

Irving Fine, Burns' manager and producer, said Burns was excited. "It's nice to have a theater named after you and it's his first one," Fine said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Spike Lee has stood up the NAACP's national convention for the second time in four years, organizers said.

Lee, among the nation's most prominent black filmmakers, was scheduled to speak at a workshop Tuesday at the 83rd annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Fred Rasheed, NAACP national director of economic development, said Monday that Lee had canceled at the last minute without giving any reason. He and other delegates said Lee also bailed out of the 1989 Detroit convention.

A man who answered the telephone at Lee's New York company, Forty Acres and a Mule, said everyone had gone home and it was not possible to reach Lee. He declined to give his name.

Lee was to have discussed the role of blacks in film and the making of his soon-to-be-released movie, "Malcolm X." His other films include "Do the Right Thing."

BOSTON — Britain's Prince Philip held court on the deck of the USS Constitution, nearly two centuries after the warship earned the nickname "Old Ironsides" by defeating an invading British frigate.

Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II, visited the 194-year-old ship Monday as part of the Sail Boston '92 tall ships celebration.

As the prince boarded, one crew member rang the ship's bell while others, dressed in 18th century uniforms, held their caps aloft in salute.

The prince recalled seeing the Constitution as he and Queen Elizabeth arrived in Boston for the Bicentennial celebration in 1976.

"It's a great pleasure to be back here in this great city," he said.

NEW YORK — Victoria Principal did not take media criticism lightly in the 1970s and '80s. Once she even punched a male journalist.

"He threw up green," the former "Dallas" star recalls in the August issue of McCall magazine. She did not elaborate on the circumstances.

"I've received some of the worst press I've ever read about a human being," the 42-year-old actress said.

She has made some media gaffes of her own, namely posing nude for Playboy in 1973. "To this day the fact that I was in Playboy disappoints me about myself," she said.

Defendants accused of preying on investors as fraud trial opens

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIDLAND — State prosecutors accused a group of El Paso attorneys and executives of preying on investors by selling them millions in annuities and using the money to keep dying companies afloat.

The accusations were made Monday, the opening day of the trial of some of El Paso's prominent citizens.

Assistant District Attorney Andrew Thomas used giant flowcharts in an attempt to simplify a complex chronology of transactions for the 12 jurors and two alternates.

Testimony was to begin today in the courtroom of U.S. Judge Lucius Bunton.

One chart contained the various businesses owned by financier Maury Kemp and his holding company, First Financial Enterprise.

Thomas placed Kemp's name at the top of the chart and labeled him the ultimate controlling person, a phrase he borrowed from the insurance industry.

He portrayed Kemp, attorneys and El Paso Electric Co. executives as conspirators who always knew that investors were buying into a failing life insurance company and knew the annuities were illegal.

"At all times you have to know they thought these things through. These attorneys knew what they were doing," Thomas said. "They were not at arm's length. They were all huddled together."

Kemp heads a list of prominent El Paso residents indicted in June 1991. An annuity is an investment that earns interest that is periodically paid to buyers.

Those charged are Kemp, David Suter, lawyer Tad R. Smith, lawyer J. Leighton Green Jr., former El Paso Electric Co. executive Billy E. Bostic, former El Paso Electric chairman Evern Wall and lawyer Richard Burgess Perrenot.

The companies indicted are El Paso Electric, the law firm of Kemp, Smith, Duncan & Hammond, PasoTex Corp., Franklin Land and Resources, Inc., First Financial Enterprises Inc. and Triangle Electric Supply Co.

The judge told jurors the trial likely would last three weeks.

Another county added to bee quarantine list

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE STATION — Victoria County was added Monday to a quarantine restricting the movement of commercial bee operations following the detection there of Africanized honeybees, agriculture officials said.

A swarm of Africanized bees was found on a metal barricade post at the DuPont Chemical plant 4 miles north of Bloomington.

There are now 33 South Texas counties on the quarantine list.

The quarantine is designed to slow the spread of the bees. Commercial beekeepers are allowed to move bee hives within the area, but not out of the restricted zone.

The quarantines were first imposed on eight counties in October 1990 when swarms began arriving in South Texas following a decades-long voyage from South America.

The so-called "killer" bees gained their reputations because they are very aggressive and attack in swarms, often chasing prey for long distances.

About 600 deaths have been attributed to the bees, mostly in South America. No Africanized bee-related deaths have been recorded in the United States, although there have been several stinging incidents.

The other quarantined counties are: Aransas, Atascosa, Bexar, Brooks, Calhoun, Cameron, Comal, Dimmit, Duval, Frio, Hidalgo, Jim Hogg, Jim Wells, Karnes, Kenedy, Kinney, Kleberg, La Salle, Live Oak, Maverick, McMullen, Medina, Nueces, Refugio, San Patricio, Starr, Uvalde, Val Verde, Webb, Willacy, Zapata and Zavala.

New Prime minister pledges democracy

The ASSOCIATED PRESS
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — A Serb-born American, expected to win confirmation today as Yugoslavia's new prime minister, repeated his pledge to stop the fighting in Bosnia-Herzegovina and introduce democracy.

Meanwhile, leaders of the three factions in the Bosnian civil war accepted invitations to attend peace talks beginning Wednesday in London, Britain's Foreign Office said today. Bosnian Foreign Minister Haris Silajdzic, Croat leader Mate Boban, and Serb leader Radovan Karadzic were to attend the talks, the Foreign Office said.

In Bosnia's embattled capital, Sarajevo, there was minor shelling overnight. Sarajevo radio said power lines from Tuzla, 50 miles north of the city, were blown up, though it had no further details.

But Associated Press reporter Terry Leonard said in Sarajevo today that electricity and water were available Monday night and this morning after outages earlier Monday. Power is often erratic because of fighting around the city, besieged for three months by Serb forces.

In Belgrade, Panic, a naturalized U.S. citizen, was nominated for the premiership by Yugoslav President Dobrica Cosic, a close ally of Serbia's hard-line leader Slobodan Milosevic.

"My government will guarantee to the international community that it will do everything in order to turn this region into a factor of peace in Europe," Panic told parliament today. "There is no idea worth killing for at the end of the 20th century."

The United Nations has punished Yugoslavia, which now consists of Serbia and Montenegro, with economic sanctions for backing Serbs fighting Croat and Muslim separatists in Croatia and Bosnia. The West has stepped up the pressure by sending warships to monitor the embargo.

Panic, who met with Western leaders in Finland last week, has promised to bring peace to his battered homeland and has said to Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic: "God help him if he gets in my way."

The authoritative Borba daily said Monday that Milosevic would step down after Panic is approved. Milosevic is under strong criticism at home and abroad for escalating ethnic warfare in breakaway Yugoslav republics, where more than 17,500 have been killed and 2.2 million left homeless in the past 13 months.

Abduction likely hot topic for Mexico-U.S. summit

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — A controversial U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding the abduction of a Mexican doctor for trial in the United States is likely to be a hot topic of discussion at the U.S.-Mexico summit today in San Diego.

Presidents Bush and Carlos Salinas de Gortari were originally slated to discuss only problems affecting a North American free trade agreement that Mexico is negotiating with the United States and Canada.

But officials here, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the 1990 kidnapping of Dr. Humberto Alvarez Machain, now awaiting trial by a federal court in Los Angeles, is likely to be brought up during the talks.

Alvarez Machain, a gynecologist, was nabbed in Guadalupe by Mexican bounty hunters, who took him to the United States.

In a June ruling, the U.S. Supreme Court held that Alvarez Machain's abduction was legal.

Democrats open with indictment of Bush

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Democrats opened their Big Apple bash with an always pointed, sometimes mocking indictment of President Bush and a festive salute to Bill Clinton's rise from smalltown Arkansas boy to White House challenger.

The feisty first night set the tone for the next three days as Democrats launch Clinton's race against Bush and Ross Perot and what they hope will be history-making challenges by their insurgent female Senate contenders.

"The choice in this election is clear: We've got us a race between an aristocrat, an autocrat and a Democrat," Georgia Gov. Zell Miller said, leaving little doubt that the campaign will prove both colorful and cantankerous.

"The American dream is not dead," fellow keynote Barbara Jordan said, but added, "It is gasping for breath."

As Democratic conventions go, Clinton's has been a civil affair so far. He has delegates to spare for Wednesday's roll call, a platform tailored to his moderate message, and a running mate in Tennessee Sen. Al Gore whose performances in a whirlwind tour of convention receptions are drawing plaudits aplenty.

Still, the rambunctious partisans of former California Gov. Jerry Brown are not going quietly.

"Let Jerry Speak," they chanted. Some taped their mouths protesting Clinton's refusal to give Brown a prime-time slot unless Brown first delivers an endorsement.

Party Chairman Ronald Brown said today he had tried to arrange a meeting with the former governor Monday night but was sent a campaign aide instead.

"I want to look Jerry Brown in the eye, have a face-to-face meeting with him and see if we can resolve whatever differences that there are," the chairman said in an interview on CBS television.

Texas women shine bright at convention

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The spotlight shone brightly on Texas women during the opening session of the Democratic National Convention.

Gov. Ann Richards and former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan shared more than their Texas heritage Monday night. Each used her speech to deliver the message that a revitalized Democratic Party is the only way to restore the country to stability.

Richards and Jordan were returning to friendly territory, each having used a previous convention address to leap into the national spotlight — Jordan in 1976, Richards four years ago.

Richards used her six-minute speech as convention chairwoman to push the message that Americans must regain control of government.

In a personal message laced with comments about her five-year-old granddaughter Lily, Richards said it was time for Americans to regain control of government.

Washington "doesn't belong to the politicians, it doesn't belong to the president. It belongs to the American people and for Lily and for our children, come this November we're taking that city back for the people of the United States," Richards said to the roar of the crowd.

Jordan also echoed the theme that a revitalized Democratic Party is the only vehicle for change.

Jordan, whose passionate 1976 keynote address became the benchmark by which all subsequent keynote speakers were measured, lamented that hope is disappearing for many Americans.

"The American dream is slipping away from too many black and brown mothers and their children; the American dream is slipping away from the homeless of every color and sex; it's slipping away from those immigrants living in communities without water and sewer systems," she said.

Democrats are uniquely positioned to effect change because "we seek to unite people, not divide them," said Jordan.

At the convention hall Monday night, the mistress of ceremonies, Texas Gov. Ann Richards, picked up where she left off in Atlanta four years ago — zinging Bush.

"As far as this White House is concerned, honey, you can turn out the lights because the party's over," she said.

As the Democrats turned on the lights for their 41st convention, they had other numbers in mind: 12 years of Republican rule, and a 1-5 record in the last six presidential contests.

For the superstitious, their last winner, Jimmy Carter, is on tonight's program, as is Jesse Jackson, whose endorsement of Clinton was far from enthusiastic.

Those in the opening night parade of past, present and future Democratic stars took time to praise Clinton, stressing his modest roots in Hope, Ark. There was no shortage of Bush bashing.

Perot's effort hitting snags

Ross Perot's campaign has run into a snag or two lately. Like his continuing reference to "You people" while addressing the convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) in Nashville on Saturday. And Perot, unable to understand shouts from the audience, grinned and kept right on with his speech. It was a speech, by the way, that he began by telling the audience that because he had no speech writers, everything he said came from the heart. There are also questions about Perot campaign officials requiring signed loyalty oaths from volunteers who will go to the Electoral College. Officials defended the move Monday afternoon by saying the practice is a "prudent" form of campaign protection. The independent presidential contender has been requiring volunteers who will carry out Perot's election, if he wins enough electoral votes in November, to sign oaths and submit signed, undated resignation letters in case disputes arise. Loyalty oaths are not new to politics, and were ruled legal in a 1952 Supreme Court decision. Loyalty oaths aren't even new with this campaign. Democrat Bill Clinton dropped the idea of using loyalty oaths after his Texas campaign officials were criticized for suggesting them. As he did with the NAACP, Perot will make a gaff or two. Still, the rest of his campaign is being run remarkably like a business. And while it is only Perot's enormous wealth that makes it possible, it has been nice to know there's one candidate out there that has his hand out to shake others — not ask for money and votes. Can Perot win in November? It still is probably too early to tell. One would expect a resurgence in Clinton's fortunes as the Democratic National Convention unfolds... and the same should be true for President Bush following the Republican gathering. The bottom line is that it's still a long time between the conventions and election day. And besides, while Clinton and Bush will be playing it up for the party, Perot can stay on the campaign trail.

Letters

Winner no longer wants tickets

To the editor: I am writing in retort to the letter that appeared Wednesday July 8, 1992. First I would like to ask the two ladies that were the co-authors of the letter if they have ever planned an event that involved hundreds of people. If they have, I am sure that they would understand the time spent in doing such a task is more than it is worth. Then I would like to ask them how smoothly their event came off. I am sure that they would tell me that it was impossible to please everybody. Ladies, if you have kids you understand how time is irrelevant to them. On this particular Saturday of the drawing people had been waiting all day for the time to come. It was as if Santa himself were going to bring the Garth Brooks tickets. How many times have your kids or even you asked if you could open up a Christmas present just one day early? I'm sure we all have and I'm sure that we all have broken the rules just once. So please ladies, give KBST a break. There were hundreds of people there and all of them were pestering these three gentlemen all day and finally they just gave in under the pressure. I don't want these Garth Brooks tickets and you could not pay me to go under these circumstances. So ladies, the next time your kids whine all day for something, just remember this when you finally give in. RORY D. WORTHAN

The Big Spring Herald recognizes the importance of the "Letters to the Editor" column and letters on issues of general interest are welcomed. To be considered for publication, letters must adhere to the following guidelines: Letters must be signed and must include a street address and daytime phone number for verification, although the address will not be published. Letters should be no more than 300 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. Letters should be typewritten and double-spaced if possible. If handwritten, letters must be legible. Form letters will not be published. Representative letters will be published when numerous letters are received on the same topic. The Herald reserves the right to limit publication of letters to one per month per writer. Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers. Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79721.

Let's work to restore community

If today's generation is any indication, West Texas 200 years ago must have been a prickly place — with cactus, mesquite trees and a variety of stickier weeds. Add a preponderance of drought-tolerant species that spoke of a scarce water supply, and the area must have seemed downright forbidding. But out in the midst of that barrenness, about midway between Fort Worth and El Paso, was a place where sparkling, fresh water bubbled out of the rocks — a place that came to be known as a "big spring." Shine Philips, in his book "Big Spring," wrote, "It was one of the few spots in this great sweep of country where water was available for man and beast from a spring which flowed thousands of barrels of crystal clear, cold water every hour, sort of like a miracle." And because of that miracle of water, "The country was stocked with an abundance of quail, prairie chickens, wild turkeys, deer and antelope," according to John R. Hutto's booklet, "Howard County... in the Making." Early settlers here would find no shortage of meat. Or water. The spring was apparently a stopping over place for native Americans and transplanted Americans alike until the railroad arrived in May 1881. Then people began moving permanently to the developing town of Big Spring. First our town was a tent city, huddled around the spring, lumber being unavailable. But that amazing piece of technology, the iron horse, soon brought in building materials, and settlers began to erect real houses to replace tents and mesquite-stick shacks and dugouts. The town grew up between the railroad station and the spring and must have looked like a typical western town with wooden sidewalks, horses tied to hitchin' posts, a team of a dozen or so oxen lying in the middle of Main Street after a delivery and, of course, the white sow with her frequent litters of white piglets who, according to Philips, had the run of the town for awhile. When my parents met here in 1946, Big Spring had modernized. Sidewalks were concrete, roads were asphalt and cars had replaced buggies in the streets. And the spring had run out of water as a result of wells lowering the subterranean water level. But water or not, the spring area was a personal playground for my brothers and me. We raced across shell-pocked limestone and crawled through caves and crevices without a thought to history or geology or anything else, except having fun. We collected rocks and fossils, let our rabbits graze in a lush gully or just made up games as we went along. We knew the spring as if it were our own back yard (it almost was), and it entertained us whether it was bone dry or full of water from a rain. Today, the spring appears to be flowing again. Water gurgles over rocks and splashes into a pool of dark coolness. There's the red flash of a cardinal and blue dragonflies flutter and there Turtles and schools of fish ripple the surface of the water. But, of course, the water is piped in. The spring itself is lifeless. Still, I'm not convinced the town's name must refer only to past glories and forgotten cascades. Water, in the Bible, is often symbolic of the Holy Spirit and that fact fires my imagination. Perhaps, just as God gave Abram the name Abraham, the father of many nations, to reflect both natural and spiritual promises, He ordained the name Big Spring to reflect both natural and spiritual promises for our town. Perhaps, in a nation that is rapidly becoming a spiritual wasteland, Big Spring can be different. Perhaps Big Spring can be a town where rivers of living waters flow. Where weary souls find restoration. Where parched hearts find refreshment. Where hopeless lives find rest in Jesus. That's my vision for my town. And my prayer. Betty Johansen is a free-lance writer. Her column appears each Tuesday in the Big Spring Herald.

Desert Storm not Bush centerpiece

Last year the wise people in Washington predicted that Desert Storm would be the centerpiece of the Bush political campaign. The President could not miss with all the film of our boys striking a blow for freedom. You can read George Bush's lips from here to California, and not one word has been uttered about the war. "Why," some may ask, "has Desert Storm become a bigger secret in Washington than Deep Throat?" The answer is that while it was the greatest show we've had on television in ages, there was more to the Gulf War than met the eye. Capablanca was assigned eight months ago to put together an entire "Desert Storm Bush" campaign. He was told to spend all the money he wanted as long as he showed yellow ribbons hanging on old oak trees. But although he is ready he just can't get the "go" sign from the White House and is starting to suspect that he never will. He told me, "The hitch is that since no one bothered to knock off Saddam Hussein, he's telling everyone that he gave him agricultural grants that he managed to turn into weapons to invade Kuwait. This makes George Bush look bad." "I should think so. Didn't the President know that Saddam Hussein would attack Kuwait?" "No, Mr. Bush thought that Iran was going to attack Kuwait." "Why did he think that?" "Because the White House always gets Iran and Iraq mixed up. They both start with an 'I.'" "Even if Saddam got the totalitarianism." "I don't believe that," I said. "We have it on tape but we're not going to put it in a TV spot because there are independents who will say, 'What the heck is he talking about?'" "Why don't we ask for a filmed statement from Saddam denying that American money was used to equip his army?" "He won't do it. He says that he never interferes in the internal affairs of another country. The truth is that Desert Storm is a dead issue politically, and the whole exercise is one that we can't cash in on, particularly if Congress appoints a special prosecutor before the election." "It's a pity," I said, "since it was Bush's finest hour." "You better believe it. If you had had your pick of Iran or Iraq, you would have done the same thing." The fun is over, time for real thing

SAN DIEGO (AP) — With all of baseball watching, a pair of old and young A's showed that nothing in baseball is more dramatic than a home run.

First it was Mr. October, Reggie Jackson, showing he can do it in July, too, hitting a first-inning grand slam in the Heroes of Baseball old-timers game.

Then it was Mark McGwire's turn, showering a spectacular spread of stratospheric shots to win the home-run derby with 12.

That matched Cal Ripken's total last year. McGwire even had eight in a row to surpass Ripken's streak of seven.

"I was surprised to hit that many because I don't hit home runs in batting practice," McGwire said.

The American League — pick your own verb — clubbed, walloped and smashed the National League during Monday's home-run derby in Jack Murphy Stadium. With McGwire's 12 shots and seven more from Ken Griffey Jr., the AL pummeled the NL 27-13.

Ripken hit four, averaging 380 feet, and Griffey Jr. averaged 391.5 feet. Toronto's Joe Carter added four, averaging 381 feet.

On the other side, Montreal's Larry Walker and San Diego's Gary Sheffield each hit four, McGriff three and Barry Bonds two. Sheffield's longest was 449 feet and he averaged 424 feet; McGriff hit the longest drive of the day, a 458-foot shot to right field.

But McGwire was even more impressive, hitting seven on seven straight swings off California Angels batting practice pitcher Rick Turner. Then again, McGwire's been impressive all year, hitting a major league-leading 28 home runs before the All-Star break.

"I got tired, I know that," McGwire said. "That's why I didn't take batting practice in regular BP."

McGwire just missed breaking Ripken's record. After hitting No. 12, McGwire concluded with a one-hopper in front of the 370-foot sign in left-center field.

"I hit it off the end," McGwire said. "I just hoped being in the

For McGwire, the slugger role is somewhat new, since he's always another four hours."

Bert Campaneris, Brooks Robinson and Bobby Richardson all reached base. Jackson — of course he was batting cleanup — then drove the ball over the fence in center.

"I hit me a room-service fastball," said Jackson, now 46.

During his career, Jackson faced Gibson just once in a game that mattered. That was in the 1972 All-Star game at Atlanta, and Jackson doubled off the fence in right-center field.

This time, the ball cleared the fence. And Gibson started yelling a Reggie as Jackson rounded third.

"You better be nice. You better be nice," Gibson told him.

Gibson didn't deck the next batter, which he might have done during his playing days. The two are fast friends.

"No big thing," Gibson said.

But it was for Reggie. He played in 12 from 1969 to 1984, and despite his stardom, he was so insecure he focused his attention on it.

"The first time, I got autographs from Mays, Marichal, Banks, Clemente," he said. "As I got older, it became a habit. I always thought I had to make the All-Star game for self worth. I didn't want a bonus for making the All-Star team because it was an embarrassment if I didn't."

Jackson's slam with no outs in the first inning led the AL to a 7-2 victory. His former teammates weren't surprised he came through. After all, they're used to it.

"That's Reggie," said Jose Rudi, a three-time All-Star himself.

The Internationals are the only unbeaten left in the tournament. They will play the winner of tonight's Odessa East II-Midland American game Wednesday. The winner of that game has to beat the Internationals twice.

All-Star Tournament

Edward Aguilar was the winning pitcher, pitching a five-hitter, striking out 10 and walking two. Midland scored its only run in the second inning. At the time Big Spring led 2-1. The Internationals added two more runs in the fifth to preserve the win.

Gilbert Morales led the Internationals with two doubles and two runs batted in. Aguilar, Joe Mata and Joe Montez all got hits. Defensively Montez, Rogelio Cervantes and Jason Brock played well.

SENIOR LEAGUE

MIDLAND AMERICAN 7, BIG SPRING STEERS 0
The Big Spring Steers All-Stars (ages 14-15) lost their first game of the tournament Monday night, dropping a 7-0 decision to Midland American.

The Steers got only two hits, by first baseman Trey Terrazas and center fielder Jason Lentz. Freddy Olivas started for the Steers and took the loss. He was replaced by Frankie Flores in the third inning.

The Steers play El Paso tonight at 8 at Hogan Park.

LITTLE LEAGUE

MIDLAND NORTHERN 16, BIG SPRING NATIONALS 1
ODESSA — The Big Spring National League All-Stars got a rude exit from the Division III tournament, losing to Midland Northern Saturday night at the Jim Parker Field.

T.J. Lipham was the losing pitcher for the Nationals. He was pulled in the fourth inning after allowing five runs on six hits, striking out six and walking four. Cody Marcum was the winning pitcher for Northern. He scattered six hits, struckout nine and walked one.

Pope John Paul II to undergo surgery

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROME — Pope John Paul II must undergo surgery, most likely Wednesday, for either an intestinal blockage or a colon tumor, Italian news reports said today.

Joaquin Navarro, spokesman for the 72-year-old pontiff, said doctors were finishing X-rays, blood tests and other examinations and a communique would be issued Wednesday morning with the results. He refused to discuss the pope's ailment.

The Italian news agency ANSA, quoting unidentified sources at the Gemelli Hospital where the pope is a patient, said John Paul would undergo surgery Wednesday for a benign colon tumor. Doctors still must decide whether to do the operation all at once or do it in two stages a few days apart, the agency said.

The state-owned Italian RAI television cited unidentified sources as saying the operation for one of two possible ailments would probably take place Wednesday. RAI said the pope either had a tumor or an intestinal blockage.

In meeting with reporters, Navarro refused to discuss the pope's ailment or comment on an earlier, unsourced, Italian newspaper report saying doctors have discovered a tumor in the pope's colon.

"The pope is fine. He feels well. He has rested well. And at this moment, he is celebrating Mass" in his hospital room, Navarro said shortly before noon today.

The medical team, led by the same doctors who operated on the pope when he was shot in the abdomen by a Turkish assailant in 1981, carried out most of the diagnostic tests Monday.

Except for reporting some abdominal swelling, Dr. Corrado Manni, chief anesthesiologist, disclose little about the ailment that sent the pope to the hospital on Sunday evening.

After the pope himself announced Sunday that he was being hospitalized for tests, prayers and messages of support poured into Gemelli Hospital from political and religious figures from around the world, from King Hussein of Jordan to Mother Teresa of Calcutta.

Blood analyses and X-rays were performed last week at the Vatican, when the pope began experiencing abdominal problems, Navarro said. Doctors said more blood tests and radiological exams were done Monday.

The tests included an endoscopic, or internal exam, of the colon; a CAT-scan, which permits detailed looks at internal organs and other tissue; an electrocardiogram; and sonograms of the chest and abdominal area, doctors said.

Manni, who also cared for the pope in 1981, said John Paul was "talking and joking with us" during the tests. RAI state television reported that the pope, in a four-room suite, did some paperwork between tests.

Outside the hospital, nuns, priests and several lay people stopped to kneel in prayer or make the sign of the cross in hopes the pope would get better.

Messengers brought flowers, including a bouquet of lilies and roses from King Hussein.

The problem has prevented pictures of Venus from being sent to Earth since early last week. Engineers probably won't decide on a strategy to fix it until the end of this week, said Jim Doyle, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Magellan already has used radar to make pictures of more than 97 percent of the cloud-covered planet, far exceeding the main goal of its $744 million mission.

The laboratory failed to announce the problem when it developed and confirmed it Monday only in response to a reporter's inquiry.

Scientists seek vindication when charges in fraud case not filed

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Two scientists involved in the nation's most notorious case of alleged scientific fraud say they will fight back now that a prosecutor has decided not to file criminal charges.

David Baltimore, a Nobel Prize-winning professor at Rockefeller University in New York, said Monday the prosecutor's decision was "a complete vindication of my own position" that no fraud occurred.

Baltimore's colleague, Thereza Imanishi-Kari, was accused of falsifying data in a 1986 scientific paper that dealt with a potentially important new method of stimulating the body to produce defenses against disease.

Imanishi-Kari, the target of investigations by Congress and the National Institutes of Health, said through her attorney that she would petition for a dismissal of the NIH investigation and for restoration of her research funds.

'Anyone that would take a decision to prosecute or not prosecute as being a complete vindication within the scientific community is probably misspeaking.'

Richard D. Bennett

U.S. attorney for Maryland

The prosecutor, Richard D. Bennett, said his decision not to seek a criminal indictment of Imanishi-Kari did not mean the disputed research was valid.

"Anyone that would take a decision to prosecute or not prosecute as being a complete vindication within the scientific community is probably misspeaking," Bennett, the U.S. attorney for Maryland, said by telephone.

He said his decision hinged on whether it was reasonable "to seek to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt" in a case that concerned the validity of scientific evidence.

Baltimore and Imanishi-Kari were at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology when the paper was published. Shortly after it appeared, Margot O'Toole, a student in Imanishi-Kari's laboratory, charged that the data in Imanishi-Kari's notebooks did not support the published findings.

In a preliminary report leaked to reporters last year, the NIH concluded that Imanishi-Kari had falsified data.

Baltimore has not been accused of fraud, but he has been criticized for stonewalling the accusations and bitterly denouncing them while failing to look into the matter himself.

The scandal forced him to resign last year as president of Rockefeller University, one of the most prestigious scientific posts in the country.

Last year, Baltimore retracted the disputed paper, which had appeared in the scientific journal Cell.

He now says that was done under political pressure, and that he will take the highly unusual step of seeking to have the paper reinstated.

Baltimore said Imanishi-Kari has repeated the research in the original paper, "so we know for certain there was nothing in it that was inappropriate."

Donald Ralbovsky, a NIH spokesman, said the agency's investigation was continuing. He said the agency normally does not comment on ongoing investigations.

Bennett characterized his announcement that he would not seek to indict Imanishi-Kari as "rather unusual." He said it was prompted by the "speculation and discussion within the scientific community" about the case.

Bennett said the case was referred to his office at the end of 1990 by federal investigators.

Philippines' volcano erupts; no casualties

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — Mount Pinatubo erupted anew today, spewing moderate amounts of steam and ash, scientists said. There were no reports of casualties.

But maximum alerts were issued for towns around the volcano, which caused widespread death and destruction last year when it came to life after 600 years of dormancy.

Today's eruption was far less dramatic than in June 1991, when superhot gases flowed down the slopes, avalanches crashed onto villages, rocks and other debris rained down and ash shot 22 miles into the sky.

About 700 people died during the three months of eruptions, and tens of thousands of families lost their homes. The U.S. Air Force's Clark air base, about 10 miles east of the volcano, had to be abandoned, and the U.S. Navy's Subic Bay installation 30 miles to the southwest sustained extensive damage.

"There is no point of comparison to the eruption last year," said July Sabit of the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology.

He said that for now there was no added danger for communities around the volcano. He said the greatest threat still was avalanches of volcanic debris caused by heavy rains. Such events have devastated numerous villages since last year's eruptions.

"We have a normal situation," said police Capt. Allan de Guzman at the Regional Disaster Coordinating Center in Pampanga province, 20 miles northwest of Manila.

An institute statement said "a continuous stream of dirty white steam column with accompanying ash" was spewing from an island dome that had formed in the crater lake.

"We anticipate that this activity of Pinatubo will be characterized by quiet emission of lava forming into a dome or by moderate explosions, or both," the statement said.

Research looks at UV light, eye damage

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Features Editor

Sunlight is blamed for skin cancer, but connections to eye disorders have not been proven.

While the connection between sun exposure and skin cancer is well known, the sun's effect on eyes is not as certain.

A new Baylor College of Medicine report links eye damage with age-related eye disorders, but two local ophthalmologists said more research is needed to prove such a connection.

Researchers at Baylor are measuring the effect of ultraviolet light on the eyes of rats. They believe the study may help understand how cataracts and macular degeneration develop in human eyes.

"There's not a lot of data about UV (ultraviolet) damage," said Dr. John R. Fish, Big Spring ophthalmologist. "We know as you get older, problems can develop. However, your natural lens filters out a lot of that damaging light."

Most people know looking directly at the sun can damage eyes. But regular outdoor activities that expose eyes to the sun's light may or may not have a great effect on eye health later — research has not proven a connection, Fish said. He said patients who have had intraocular lens surgery for cataract removal need filters to avoid harmful light. But now most surgical procedures use an implant lens that already has a filter for UV rays.

"It's just a matter of common sense," said Dr. William B. Allensworth, local ophthalmologist. He said heredity, not sun exposure, determines eye health. "If an eye is normal, that person will have good vision all his life."

"There has been a supposition that the sun causes cataracts," Fish said. "There's also a belief that the depletion of the ozone layer increases radiation that reaches your eyes. But there are no scientific studies on (those theories). We simply have not had any studies that document that." Some people may think their geographic location makes them more vulnerable as well.

"I was raised out here in West Texas, and I didn't know anything about dark glasses," said Allensworth. "I wear them now, but that's for comfort."

The Baylor study is looking for clues to one of the mechanisms of aging — oxidation. In that process, cells lose their ability to break down matter, leading to a buildup of debris.

Researchers believe debris may cause age-related problems in the eye, and that UV light enhances the process.

Fish said a long-term study is needed, such as the 30-year look at diet and high cholesterol that resulted in today's well-known connection between cholesterol reduction and health.

Lens developed by NASA

A new sunglass developed by NASA scientists uses the natural vision of eagles as its pattern, according to information from Pro-Sight Technology of Houston.

The Eagle 475 is the first lens developed from space research. It uses the orange retinal fluid found in eagles' eyes to absorb harmful ultraviolet (UV) rays and shorter blue light wavelengths.

Scientists produced an organic dye for the lenses that is touted to protect the eye from harmful rays and enhance contrasts at the same time.

Enhancing reds, greens, and yellows, the glasses are said to improve vision in foggy, hazy and smoggy conditions, as well as reduce the glare of windshields. The lenses are formed by internal casting, not lamination, creating a lens that is designed to be heat and scratch resistant.

"That's the kind of study that would have to be done," Fish said. "Cataracts might take 20 years to develop. And this kind of connection is hard to prove, especially with a natural occurrence like sunlight. So far, the studies just haven't been done."

Allensworth said he just doesn't believe there's a connection between cataracts and the sun.

"We've been living with the sun since the beginning of mankind," he said. "It's not a deficit, or everybody would be affected."

Prescription lenses can be ordered with UV screening lenses. But both doctors said over-the-counter sunglasses may make claims about light-blocking that are not true.

"It's hard to be sure exactly what they screen out," Fish said. "You might be thinking you're getting the UV block and not really being getting it."

"I'd be careful of that," said Allensworth. "Many times they are just trying to use that to sell something. It's not necessary."

Deer population up, Bambi becomes pest

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The exploding white-tailed deer population has made Bambi as pesky as city pigeons and as dangerous as runaway trains, wreaking havoc in forests, on farmlands and in suburbs.

White-tails are to be found in 43 states in the East, Midwest and South, where their total population has risen above the 25 million mark for the first time since European settlers arrived on this continent. There has been a 5,000 percent increase since 1908.

Deer present a number of serious problems, including deer-vehicle collisions. Michigan recorded 46,000 deer-vehicle collisions in 1990. New York estimated there were 60,000 the same year and in Wisconsin, the Department of Transportation reported 38,000 such collisions, accounting for 14 percent of all accidents.

Deer also carry ticks that cause Lyme disease, and some 30,000 cases have been reported since the disease was discovered in 1975. The disease can cause fever, aches and flu-like symptoms and is fatal in extremely rare cases.

Deer also are responsible for crop damage. Wisconsin, for instance, paid its farmers a record $1.6 million in compensation for wildlife damages last year, mostly from deer.

In urban areas, deer have been mangling shrubbery, crushing flower beds and causing nearly 200 vehicle accidents a year.

As deer herds started to swell through the 1980s, state game agencies began to feel pressure from hunters and various other groups. Farmers were demanding compensation for lost crops, foresters wanted hungry deer killed, urban dwellers and suburbanites wanted deer removed "humanely" from their backyards.

Experts say the deer population explosion in the 1980s can be attributed to a variety of reasons. They include:

- Unseasonably warm winters throughout North America in the past 15 years gave deer an unusually high winter survival rate.

— Traditional seasons and bag limits continued while deer population expanded.

— The bucks-only tradition among deer hunters means they are hesitant to shoot deer without antlers, although this can be necessary for population control.

— Posted land and lands leased to hunting clubs have protected deer from public hunting.

— Habitat has improved. Agricultural and timber production has increased with the use of more effective fertilizers and mechanized equipment, providing more and better food for deer.

— Deer habitat has improved in suburbs as real estate planners have designed properties with perfect white-tailed deer habitat, complete with optimum food (shrubs and flowers), water and cover.

At first, suburbanites love having deer around their homes and often feed them. But when the deer multiply and eat everything in the yard that is green, attitudes change.

— Poor hunting conditions — blizzards, ice storms — on opening days of hunting seasons and/or loss of interest or the inability of some hunters to pursue deer, has resulted in lower deer kills than anticipated by state game agencies.

— Deer also are being better protected, with crackdowns on poaching — with fines and restitution up to $2,000 in Michigan, for example — helping deer populations increase.

Mule deer have caused problems in the West, but not to the extent that the white-tail deer overpopulation has in the East.

"The first settlers hit the white-tails really hard in the East," wildlife biologist Harry Harju said. "Those that survived bred a more savvy animal than the mule deer."

Lens choice question of safety, comfort

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

More than eight out of 10 contact lens users wear soft lenses even though rigid gas-permeable lenses are healthier and easier to clean.

Ophthalmologist Douglas Koch of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston says "Rigid lenses are probably the healthiest lenses we have for the cornea."

Linda Rhodes, director of Baylor's contact lens clinic, agrees. "The safest lens is a rigid gas-permeable lens for daily wear. The next safest is a daily-wear soft lens. The least safe lens is an extended-wear lens," she says.

Then why do most Americans who wear lenses prefer soft lenses? Soft lenses are comfortable almost from the start while rigid lenses require a break-in period ranging from a few days to three weeks and are harder to fit.

Two major eye-health concerns with contact lenses are allowing enough oxygen to reach the cornea and keeping them clean of contaminants.

Soft lenses were an immediate success when introduced in 1971. They are pliable and a good medium for delivering oxygen to the cornea, though rigid gas-permeable lenses are even better.

To eliminate the often-neglected nightly chore of cleaning lenses, the contact lens industry developed extended-wear (primarily soft) lenses, which can be worn around the clock.

Employees honored for outstanding contributions

On June 29, an awards ceremony and reception was held to honor approximately 200 employees for their outstanding contributions to BSSH. Robert von Rosenberg, Superintendent, was emcee for the ceremony.

Eleven employees received Quarterly Awards. Each supervisor presented a plaque with a summary of that employee's accomplishments. Those receiving these awards were Howard Adams and Donna Cole, Adolescent Services; Verna Ashford and Rosa Rivera, Food Services; Jean Cooper, Substance Abuse Services; Anna Evans and Ruth Soto, Activity Therapies; Sue Keller and Jessica Rubio, Northeast Psychiatric Services; Harry Vela, South West Psychiatric Services; and Kelley Williams, Admissions Office.

Volunteers of BSSH were hostesses for the reception. The Therapeutic Arts and Crafts Department will take approximately twenty original art works to the Abilene Christian University library for an exhibit during the month of July. These works were done by the patients during regularly scheduled classes and their leisure arts and crafts programs. Subjects include landscapes, portraits, still life and non-objective pieces. After the exhibit, the art work will be displayed permanently in the Activity Therapy Building and other areas of BSSH.

The leisure time classes are offered by the staff to those who have a special interest in art projects and those whose daily class schedule may not include arts and crafts. Classes are each Wednesday from 6:30 to 8:30 in the evening and Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 3 p.m. Anyone in the community who would like to volunteer their help for these evening and week-end classes are needed and welcome. Contact Volunteer Services for more information.

The staff of Therapeutic Arts and Crafts have started a new program for the clients of Medical Services. Many of these people are not able to attend regular classes, but are eager to have these opportunities. Mary Jane Phillips is the supervisor of Therapeutic Arts and Crafts.

Gloria J. Fedderson has recently assumed the duties of Supervisor for Information Services. This includes the switchboard, reception desk and mail room. For 4½ years she worked at Community Services in the Howard County Mental Health Center.

Gloria moved to Big Spring from Eugene, Oregon. She is single but is supervised by her miniature poodle, Mr. B. She enjoys sports, travel, photography, sewing, her church work and arts and crafts. Gloria also enjoys volunteering which she does for Volunteer Services at BSSH, the Four-H Club, Veterans Administration Hospital, and VFW.

Cecilia Graham was honored by the staff of Medical Services with a "going away" reception on June 30. Cecilia has worked on Medical Services for three years as a Social Worker. She will be attending the University of Texas, Austin, to work toward her Master of Science in Social Work with specialities in gerontology and health.

Time magazine's cover story for July 6, 1992 was on the drug, clozaril, which offers new hope for many people diagnosed with chronic schizophrenia. This article may be of interest to many people since all TXMHMR hospitals use this new drug.

Dr. William Reid, TXMHMR medical director, Austin, will attend a national conference in Arlington, Virginia, July 14-16 to make a presentation on this subject.

City has pollution busters after environmental violators

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — On a pleasant cul-de-sac called Tweed Court in north Austin, a crime against nature is coagulating on the tree-shaded street where an old car is parked.

It doesn't look like much, really; just a badly dented oil pan leaking a small puddle of motor oil. But Chuck Lesniak considers the situation a minor emergency. He is program coordinator and investigator with the spills and complaints response program of the City of Austin Environmental and Conservation Services Department.

Lesniak is who you call when the creek smells funny or if you notice someone unloading large metal drums in a vacant lot in the middle of the night. He's an adviser to the fire department when vehicles carrying explosive chemicals roll over and to private citizens who call him wondering whether it's illegal to wash their cars in the street. (It is, technically, though no one is likely to ticket you for sudsy discharge.)

But right now the problem is meandering motor oil, a problem that represents about 25 percent of the calls the department receives. A light rain has begun falling, which means the oil is in imminent danger of being washed into a storm sewer from which it will ultimately flow into Austin's crisscrossing web of waterways.

The threat to aquatic plants and animals is further compounded, Lesniak says, because the oil-dumping incident is duplicated about 20 times every day in Austin. And the five to six quarts of oil he estimates has been dumped here is enough to cover an Olympic-size pool with a thin layer.

Instead of the five to 10 minutes it takes three firefighters to clean up the oil with an absorbent material, it would take hours to clean up for a creek bed. And even then, damage most likely already would have been done.

Which is why Lesniak, the program's lone full-time investigator, considers this an emergency and wishes more people shared his concern.

With the help of a couple of part-time investigators (a second full-time investigator is about to be hired), Lesniak and his co-workers are kept busy with an average of 70 calls a month. But they want more phone calls, more tips about dangerous chemicals being dumped or leaked.

have is that people don't know we exist; they don't know who to call," Lesniak says.

Calls to the program have nearly doubled in the past two years, but too many Austinites see an environmental problem and assume they can't do anything about it, Lesniak says.

"There's so much media attention to the watershed ordinances and people kind of forget there's something you can do about what's happening now," he says.

The investigators' typical response to people who've violated city environmental laws is to educate rather than penalize.

"We're not here to write tickets or take people to jail, we're here to try and clean up pollution before it occurs," Lesniak says.

"If they clean up the problem, we're not interested in taking them to (municipal) court."

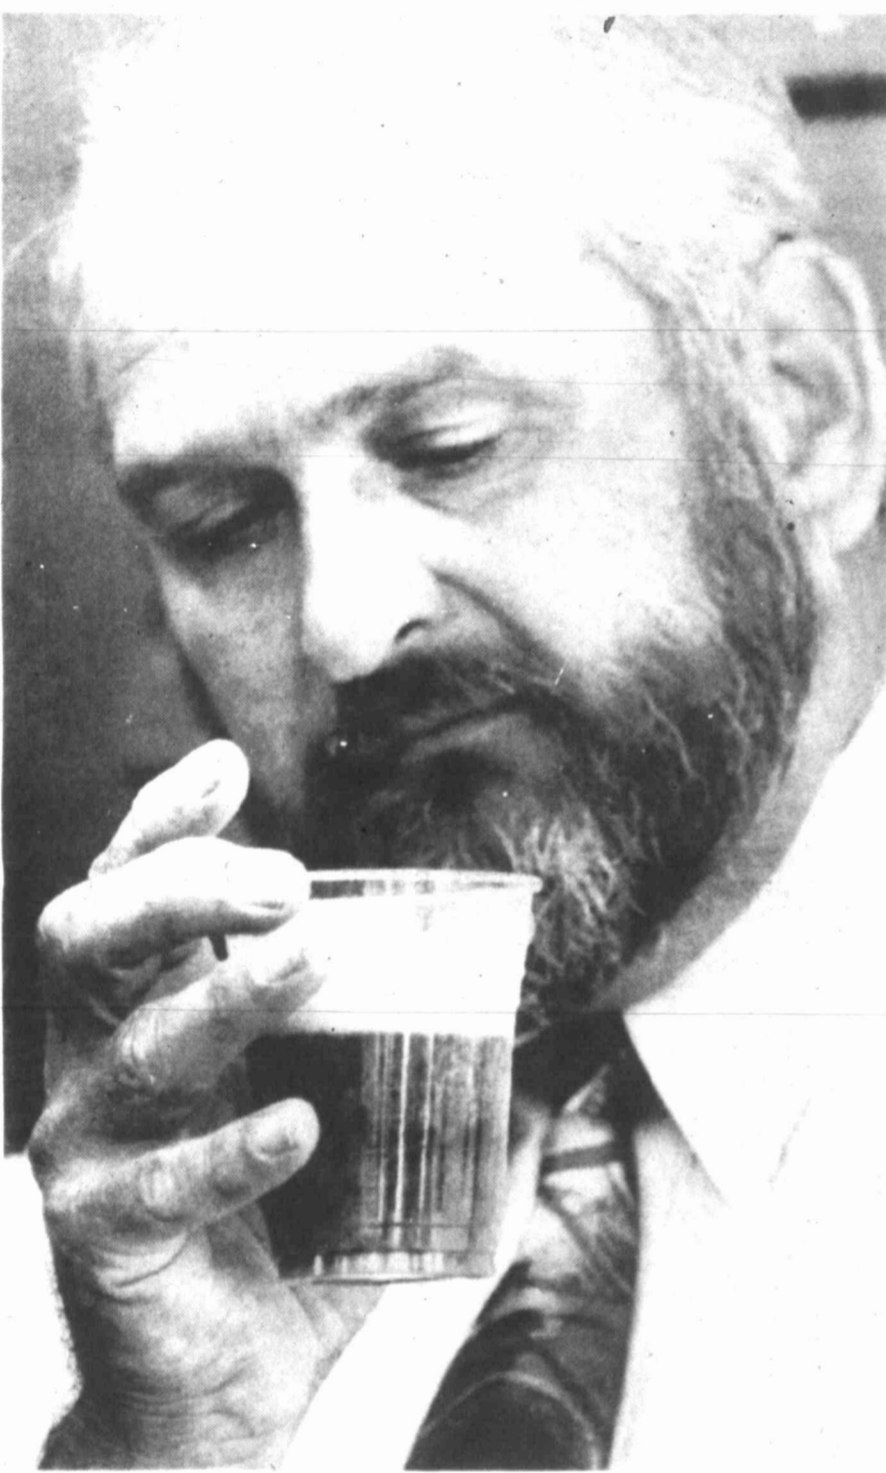

So the man suspected of dumping motor oil will be advised how to clean up spills with cat-box filler and told about the threat posed to the environment.

Perpetrators only receive an official notice of violation after subsequent violations. And very few violators resist compliance so that they wind up in municipal court, Lesniak says.

Chuck Lesniak, left, program coordinator of Austin's Environmental and Conservation Services Department, checks out an oil spill recently with city firefighter Juan Garcia. Someone changed their car's oil in the street. Lesniak investigates environmental complaints, and has special training in hazardous materials response and cleanup.

One-use cameras take hassle out of vacation pics

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Going on a summer vacation? If so, chances are you will be spending some time around water. Whether you'll be staying at a lakeside or seaside resort, visiting the dolphin pool at a theme park, or riding the rapids on a winding river, photographs will help bring back memories of your summer fun.

For those of you who are a bit nervous about taking your expensive 35mm SLR camera to wet, sandy, dusty and humid locations, there is good news: affordable one-use cameras by Kodak and Fuji deliver surprisingly good color prints.

One of Kodak's one-use cameras, the Fun Saver Weekend 35, is not only weatherproof, but it's waterproof to a depth of 8 feet, giving you an opportunity to take shallow underwater photos.

The Fun Saver Weekend 35 is pre-loaded with a 24-exposure roll of Kodak's fast Gold 400 film, so you can even take pictures of sunrises and sunsets. Taking pictures with the Weekend 35 is simple: you just point and shoot — no settings are necessary.

Fuji's entry into the waterproof one-use arena is called the FujiColor Quicknap Waterproof. Like Kodak's Fun Saver, this camera is pre-loaded with 35mm ISO 400, 24-exposure film. It also offers point-and-shoot convenience.

However, the Quicknap lets you dive a little deeper (10 feet) to get underwater photos.

Kodak and Fuji also offer a full line of one-use cameras for general picture taking. Here's a quick look at just a few models:

— Kodak's Fun Saver Panoramic 35 Camera and Fuji's Quicknap Panorama Flash. Both cameras produce panoramic prints measuring 3½ inches by 10 inches. If you want to capture the beauty and splendor of the Grand Canyon, or take a large group shot in close quarters, these cameras will do the trick. Kodak's panorama camera is pre-loaded with a 12-exposure roll of Kodak Gold 200, while Fuji's panorama model gives you 24 exposures on FujiColor Super HG 400 film. In addition, the Fuji Quicknap Panoramic camera offers a flash with a range of 3 to 10 feet.

— Kodak's Fun Saver Telephoto 35 Camera — An 83mm lens on this camera magnifies subjects 2.4 times greater than the standard Fun Saver, making it ideal for portraits and telephoto views of distant subjects. Like all one-use cameras, the Fun Saver Telephoto 35 offers focus-free, point-and-shoot operation. One difference is that it's loaded with very fast film: Kodak Gold 1600. This fast film lets you take pictures indoors under bright floodlights and outdoors in daylight or at night under bright floodlights.

Science museum has sense of humor

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS — Perhaps the most striking aspect of the St. Louis Science Center's remodeled space science building is that many of the exhibits don't seem all that scientific.

That's the beauty of it. The Science Center is fast becoming one of the top tourist attractions in the city because it has succeeded in taking the starch out of science. It's fourth behind the Cardinals, the Gateway Arch and the zoo in attendance, and officials estimate that about 2.2 million people will try its array of more than 600 hands-on exhibits this year.

It's now the second most popular science center in the nation behind the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago, Science Center President Dennis Wint said. For that, they no doubt can thank its entertaining approach, including a gallery of 1950s oddities and collectibles, like the Mr. Spock Halloween costume, in the Space and Popular Culture exhibit.

"When something's fun, you come back," said John Hensley, the center's gallery development director. "We're real proud of it."

In the last year, the center has really taken off, with the addition of a second building and the renovation of the old building. The two are connected by an underground tunnel and a glassed-in walkway over six lanes of Interstate 64.

The old section highlights space. The new section deals with ecology, technology and humanity.

The new building, opened last November, features full-sized animated dinosaur replicas, an aviation section, a wide-screen OMNIMAX theater and rotating national exhibits.

An exhibit on Soviet space runs through Jan. 3. Included among the 17 spacecraft are a full-scale model of the Sputnik satellite and artifacts from space missions, including a lunar rover.

The center's two theaters offer dramatically different entertainment and enlightenment.

OMNIMAX, the center's biggest drawing card, features movies projected in a panoramic view across the ceiling.

The Planetarium Theater has family oriented star shows as well as a seasonal night sky update. Improvements have been made in computer graphics and special effects and a new digital projector makes it possible to project stars in three dimensions.

How to rid your house of creatures

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nobody enjoys sharing house-space with creatures from the wild.

Since traps and poison baits provide only short-term solutions, the best way to keep unwelcome animals out of your home is to block their entryways and make your home less attractive to them. Here are some suggestions:

Seal Cracks
 Seal up even small cracks; bats, for example, can fit through a crack that measures ¼ by 1½ inch.

— Seal holes and cracks with caulking compound or cover them with sheet metal or hardware cloth with ¼-inch openings.

— Cover ventilation and chimney openings with hardware cloth and keep them unclogged.

Keep Clean
 Mice and rats are attracted to homes because they feed on many of the foods that make up human diet. If you deny the intruder food and water, it may leave.

— Be particularly careful in cleaning under and behind stoves, refrigerators, sinks, kitchen counters and other places where food may fall and accumulate.

— Mop floors with special care along the walls and baseboards, since the favored runways of rats and mice lie alongside and inside walls.

— Clean up spilled and hardened food on a highchair or playpen.

— Don't allow dirty dishes to stand on the dinner table overnight. If you leave dishes in the sink or in the dishwasher, scrape and thoroughly rinse them. More than one person has been surprised to find a mouse in the dishwasher.

— Keep the oven clean. Mice are adept at climbing down under the burners of gas stoves, through heat vents and into the ovens of both gas and electric ranges.

— Keep food in closed metal and glass containers even if it is stored in a cabinet.

— Put garbage in tightly sealed metal cans.

Lesson in medical terms cuts confusion

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column in the Greenville (N.C.) Daily Reflector, and either someone made a typographical error, or you failed to consult with your medical experts.

Dear Abby

In other words, castration of the male is not analogous with tubal ligation of the female. -- STANLEY P. OLESKY, M.D. (RET.), TAYLORS, S.C.

DEAR DR. OLESKY: I blew it! Only when I was deluged with letters from readers did I become aware that castration and sterilization are not synonymous.

Finally, I consulted Dr. Robert Sanford, a Beverly Hills urologist, who said:

"In castration, both of the testes are removed. The testes are where the male hormone testosterone is produced. So, upon castration, a male's interest in sex will be greatly reduced (or eliminated entirely). However, with testosterone replacement through injections or medication, a male can elevate his hormone level (and sex drive) to normal. And although castration usually renders a man impotent, it is not always the case."

Dr. Sanford added that since rape is an act of violence, castration would not necessarily stop a rapist from raping again.

The Rape Crisis Center stresses that rapists do not rape for sexual gratification -- they rape to degrade and humiliate.

A reader wrote: "I can no longer remain silent. I must at least try to educate those ignorant females who keep wanting to castrate rapists so they can't rape again. When I was 30 years old, I lost my testicles to cancer. Castration does not always cause impotence -- it causes sterility. I am now 63 and still sexually active. So much for castration. Sign me ... SAN ANTONIO"

In your reply, you said: "Many people are not aware that castration does to males what tubal ligation does to females."

No, no, Abby! Castration does not do to males what tubal ligation does to females. Vasectomy does to males what tubal ligation does to females.

To clarify the confusion, I submit the following:

Castration: Male: Both testes are removed; Female: Both ovaries are removed.

Sterilization: Male: Popularly known as "vasectomy"; Female: Popularly known as "tying off the tubes."

FOR WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1992

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unexpected financial gains are featured. Someone you meet for the first time stimulates you intellectually. You handle a difficult person or situation with finesse.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A conservative approach begins to pay off. Close an important deal by noon, then relax. Curb expenditures tonight. Partnerships of all types enjoy favorable influences.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You enter a cycle that will enlarge your personal horizons. Seize an opportunity to travel; a change of scene will do you a world of good! Both romance and entertainment are favored tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 23): Your versatility enables you to handle the many roles you have in the fire. Look at property or enter into real estate negotiations late this afternoon. Be prepared for a surprise this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to wind up an important professional project. Be careful not to stir up old grievances. Further contention with people in your immediate area is best avoided.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A conflict could arise between your career interests and a desire for pleasure. Do not jeopardize your future security for superficial amusements. Pursue romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Plenty will go right in your love life now! Break into the clear and run for the money. Capitalize on your artistic talents. A candlelight dinner for two will boost your romantic aims.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A relationship in which one party calls all the shots is far from ideal. Wise up! It is time to let go of an unhealthy tie. Lose yourself in work; promote team effort.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you work from home today, you could have the best of all possible worlds. Get paperwork out of the way before lunch. Attending an afternoon social event gives you important new contacts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone you meet today could make you a lucrative offer. Now is the time to test your self-discipline! Do not let your heart rule your head. Keep any promises you make to children.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your writing, speaking and acting talents are at a peak now. Take advantage of this edge to sell your ideas to important people. You can change a daydream into reality.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Career decisions and family matters demand your attention. A newcomer could try to take your place. Meeting the challenge will drive away a restless mood. Act on the financial advice of experts only.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are courageous, patient and fun-loving. They also like to stick close to home and hearth. Wise parents will not send these youngsters off to summer camp without a lot of preparation. Sudden change does not agree with these Cancerians. Intellectual and conscientious, they usually excel in school. Judicious praise will encourage them to go that extra mile in their studies.
