Sponsors are needed for children's school needs

More than 150 children have signed up for help from the Northside Community Center's sponsor-a-child program, but the sponsors list is running short, officials said.

"We are in desperate need. We're just not getting the response we need," Esquilin said. Organizations and clubs or businesses can jointly sponsor children. Some sponsors take the child shopping but that is not required.

Local park slated to close

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

The Big Spring State Recreation Area, located just off FM 700 on Scenic Mountain, is scheduled to be closed to all public access Sept. 1 if a local government entity or private group does not take over the $75,000-a-year

The park, acquired in 1934 from private landowners, is among 11 slated for closure by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD). Operations at 18 other parks will be reduced or consolidated. Criteria considered included visitation, cost per visitor, economic impact and the intrinsic value of sites.

The surprise announcement was made at 3 p.m. Thursday. There had been no communications between TPWD officials and local officials regarding the possibility of closing the $15,000 a year is generated in ticket receipts from about 75,000 visitors.

The cuts will eliminate 44 jobs and save $1.1 million to offset increasing operation costs and declining funds, TPWD officials said. The idea is to 'operate fewer parks with high standards rather than operate more parks with increasingly mediocre service," a department spokesperson said.

"The whole system is going down the tubes," said TPWD spokesman Bill Rutledge.

The closings will be discussed in an Aug. 26 public hearing in Austin at the annual meeting of the nine-member Parks and Wildlife Commission. The meeting will be at commission headquarters at 4200 Smith School Road.

Local leaders are preparing to work toward stopping the closing here or look into taking over the operation. "I feel like the (city) council seriously will take a look at it," said Mayor

Tim Blackshear. "Hopefully, we can

Local residents upset with closing of park

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

The scheduled closing of the state park in Big Spring next month is disappointing to many, even upsetting.

Besides loss of popular jogging and recreation areas, the city would lose a tourist attraction and a 370-acre site on one of the most historical and scenic spots in the county — Scenic Mountain will be off limits to residents.

Local residents do not like it. "That's crummy. That's one of the most beatuful views in Big Spring,' said a 39-year-old woman who occasionally jogs the approximate threemile road that winds around the mountain.

"I don't like that idea," said Dale Dupree, who walks the mountain with his wife and friends. At times there are

"throngs of people" jogging or walking the moutain

'That's awful,' said Leticia Torres, who brings her family to the park. "The kids like coming up because of all this," she said pointing to nearby playground equipment.

"I think it's devastating," said Linda Roger, executive vice president of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce. "So we're going to sit with an unkept area.

Besides the jogging area and playground equipment, features of the park include: a nature trail that shows off native animals and plants and a prairie-dog town; historical Indian carvings in limestone bluffs; recreational facilities including picnic tables and pavilion; an Indian artifact and

Cool front unloads cargo of rain

By CONNIE SWINNEY Staff Writer

A cool front moved down from the Panhandle overnight and dropped more than two inches of rain this morning on Big Spring with patches of scattered showers for most of Howard County, the national weather service reported. Meterologist Joe Bayer said he expected the rain-carrying front to gradually drift to the southeast by mid-morning with patches of scattered showers hanging on throughout the afternoon.

"The showers will be tapering off tonight, you might have a few more tomorrow," he said. "It looks like it will be dry and and warm over the weekend."

Although Bayer said the rain was normal summer weather, the Agriculture Research Station reported the rain added to way above normal amounts for the

"We've had 1.17 inches in the last 24 hours and 22.01 for the year's total rain." said Bill Fryear, the station's research leader. Normal rainfall for the year through July averages 10 inches.

With the abnormal amount of total rain for the year, crop growers face a dilema. "We don't know how to act and we don't get as much out of it as we should," Fryear said. "We would have liked some good rain in March and April, Spence.

but it's come so late that the season is cut short.'

Farmers replanted twice in June because the soil became crusted and more rain washed the soil away, he said.

Tommy Hart, a local gauge watcher on Purdue Street, reported 3 inches this morning and 22.83 inches total for the year. Last year he measured 14.7 inches for the year through July. The Colorado River Municipal Water District reported no significant rainfall for area lakes. Rod Lewis, CRMWD assistant manager of operation, said Lake Thomas showed about an inch and some morning rain was reported at Lake

Convention booth space refused to pro-choice group

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON - A leader of a Republican pro-choice group says she's outraged because her organization has been refused space in the souvenir sales sections of the GOP National Convention while an anti-abortion group has been given a booth.

Nancy Sternoff, executive director of the National Republican Coalition for Choice, said Thursday her group was refused space to sell its wares at next month's convention.

Ms. Sternoff said the Texas Eagle Forum, a Republican antiabortion group has been given a booth and plans to sell "profamily" literature.

"I'm stunned and I'm outraged, but I'm not surprised," Ms. Sternoff said

Ms. Sternoff said she feels betrayed by Republican Party head Rich Bond, who she claims personally assured her that antiabortion groups would not get a booth if the NRCC didn't.

Republican officials did not directly comment on what was promised to whom, but they did offer to help the pro-choice groups gain access into the vending area, to be located in the Astroarena.

The convention will be held in the Astrodome

"We will work with the (Houston) Host Committee to resolve this specific concern because our purpose is not to lock out any Republican," convention spokesman Joe Fleming said. "The whole the thing was a misunderstanding.'

Tom Boak, contracted by the Host Committee to coordinate vending booth sales, said convention planners wanted to keep the Astroarena free from "the exploitation of issues.

And he said that's why the NRCC was refused a booth while Eagle Forum got one.

"The difference is that Texas Eagle Forum is coming in the vending booths with souvenirs that are non-issue related," said Boak.

No group immediately claimed responsibility, but police blamed the Irish Republican Army fighting British rule in Northern Ireland. They said the firebombs were similar to devices planted by the IRA at a shopping mall at Gateshead, northeast England, earlier this year.

Police Chief Inspector John Reeve said one of the three firebombs that ignited had caused extensive damage to the Habitat department store. "It (the fire) has spread to the roof of the building and damage will run into many thousands of pounds," he said.

Minor damage was caused to the other two stores — a British Home Stores outlet and a John Lewis store. All three stores are part of national chains

The 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals found grounds for most of the others to seek political asylum. Bush declared on May 24 that fleeing Haitians should be returned without a hearing, and the flow of refugees all but stopped. Thursday's appeals court ruling, if upheld, would require hearings, which could increase the chances of getting aslyum.

The Bush administration says most of the Haitians are economic migrants, and that those who fear political persecution should apply for asylum at the U.S. Embassy in Port-au-Prince.

Joseph Julien, a 30-year-old Haitian boatbuilder, was hopeful when the appeals court issued its ruling. Julien has been returned twice to Haiti by the Coast Guard in his attempts to get to Florida.

"When I was in Guantanamo, I heard (Prime Minister Marc) Bazin would negotiate with Aristide and things would get settled. The embargo would be lifted and so on. ### Energy bill favors mass transit, alternate fuel

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON - Oil and gas drillers, mass transit users and buyers of alternative-fuel cars would get new tax relief under an energy bill facing its last hurdle.

The Senate approved the tax measures Thursday on a 93-3 vote, sending the 1,000-page bill to a compromise-writing conference with sponsors of a similar package passed by the House in May.

Energy Secretary James Watkins called the vote "another critical milestone" in getting one of the few bipartisan measures wanted by both the administration and Congress to President Bush before the November election.

"Although neither bill is perfect. the promise of this legislation — for consumers, for producers, for our economy, for the environment and for our future energy security — is now only a House-Senate conference away," Watkins said.

But Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who introduced the bill with Bush's support 18 months ago, warned that it still could falter. "There are many highly contentious matters and ... some potential deal breakers," he said. "We've got a long way to go ... but woe to him who stands in the way. The demand by the American people for a new energy policy is very, véry

The two most controversial measures were eliminated or kept out of the bill: Bush's desire to crease in fuel efficiency standards for automobiles

"We still think there are progressive elements in both bills, and some pretty good ones," said Brooks Yeager, a Sierra Club vice president.

The bill would alter the way the government regulates, taxes and subsidizes nearly every sector of the energy industry in an effort to slow growing U.S. dependence on foreign oil. The Senate in February passed virtually the same package — but without the tax incentives. Voting against the measure Thursday were Sens. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn.: David Durenberger, R-

Voice support for state park

The announcement that the Big Spring State Park, among 10 others in the state, will be closed on August 31 by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is further proof that rural Texans don't matter.

Without request for public input, without public hearing, without notice — the bureaucrats in Austin arbitrarily decided to close a popular and historic facility.

This is the same bureaucracy that Gov. Ann Richards said was going to belong to the people. Remember that statement on inauguration day?

Our question is, "Exactly how do the people own this bureaucracy that just shafted them without warning? Richards says she is stunned by the decision.

Imagine, Governor, just how the people feel in the affected communities.

What will happen with the facility?

Initially it was said that the state would consider private management or turning the facility over to local communities. If those options prove to be not feasible, the state will post security guards at the facility and public access will be denied.

Park Manager Michael Young says his information is that the park will be closed. Period.

Andrew Sansom, executive director of Texas Parks and Wildlife, says the closure of the 11 parks and restructuring of others will allow the state to save $1.1 million annually that can be redirected to parks in more urban

The site serves as an exercise facility for many local residents on a regular basis and a botany lesson for others studying the plants of the area.

Young utilized the facility last April to help make residents aware of the need for conservation in an Earth Day program.

Apparently, those things don't matter.

Brady Mayo, assistant director of TP&W's Conservation and Communication Division, says the department is closing the park because of "low visitation and revenue and because the same services are offered by the city of Big

• Second, with a daily average visitation of 201 persons in 1991, why was the average income only 18 cents per person, or just $13,531?

We have experienced three ways to enter the park — by paying the $3 fee each time, through a $25 annual use permit and simply walking past the unattended gate.

State officials say the decision by Parks and Wildlife is not final and must be approved by the Parks and Wildlife Commission on August 26, the day before it considers the proposed 1993 budget.

THE ULTIMATE SOLUTION

Clinton and Mort Engelberg factor

By BOB GREENE Chicago Tribune

As far as the Clinton-Gore presidential campaign goes, I think I would have preferred not to know about the Mort Engelberg

The existence of the Mort Engelberg Factor, and the revelation of it, was probably inevitable; this is, after all, 1992, and we should all be resigned to the fact that in political life things are never what they appear to be. Still, I was sort of enjoying the news about Bill Clinton and Al Gore's heartland-of-America bus trip until I found out about Mort Engelberg.

You're aware of the bus trip. It was that down-home journey Clinton and Gore and their families made in the days after the Democratic Convention. Chatty stops at turnpike truck stops, foot ball tosses on scenic grassy fields, twilight greetings at Norman Rockwell-style county courthouse squares ..

See, I'm dumb about stuff like that; I want to believe that a presidential candidate might just get on a bus and roll across the middle of the country and stop anywhere his heart desires. That he might say to the bus driver, "Hey, that little town up there looks interesting — pull over so we can walk around." I liked that

Then I started reading about Mort Engelberg.

Mort Engelberg is a Hollywood movie producer who is working for the Clinton-Gore campaign. His job was to scout locations along the bus tour, so that Clinton and Gore could be assured of having evocative backdrops for photographers and TV crews.

Engelberg was the producer of such movies as "Smokey and the Bandit" and "The Big Easy"; apparently the same skills that are used in a big-budget motion picture are valuable on a presidential campaign, too. Burt Reynolds looks good with a rushing river visible behind him; Clinton and Gore look good with the Allegheny Mountains behind them. Mort Engelberg, or so we are learning, is adept at arranging both.

There's nothing wrong with the Mort Engelberg Factor: it's probably a necessity in modern highstakes politics. But it becomes difficult to watch the news footage from the Clinton-Gore campaign the same way after you know about the Factor. Before I was aware of it, I saw Clinton and Gore tossing that football and thought, "What a nice, relaxed time those fellows seem to be having." Now, when I see Clinton framed by a glorious sunset, or making a speech in front of a soaring church steeple, my first thought is: Aha. Mort Engelberg.

You can't blame the press for informing us about the Mort Engelberg Factor; part of the job of the contemporary political reporter is to let us know about the campaign behind the campaign. There have always been Mort Engelbergs in American politics — it's just that we didn't used to know about them. When John Kennedy was running for president, for example, a man named Jerry Bruno was considered a wizard at arranging his campaign stops. If Bruno was told that 10,000 people were supposed to show up for a Kennedy rally, and that a 15,000-seat stadium was available in the town, he would opt instead for a 3,000-seat high school gymnasium. Why? Because he knew that 10,000 people trying to get into a gym that couldn't hold them all looked much more exciting both on camera and to the press - than 10,000 people stretched out at their leisure in a stadium with 5,000 extra empty seats. He always wanted a Kennedy cam-than it really had to look The difference was, the public didn't know of Jerry Bruno's existence. The way campaigns are covered now, a Mort Engelberg cannot remain anonymous for long — and as soon as the electorate knows he's there, the fruits of his labor become instantly less effective. The sun peeking up over a rural creek while Bill Clinton speaks to an attentive crowd is a lovely visual image if you see it in its purest form; it is somewhat less inspiring if you see it and immediately envision in your mind's eye the movie-style creditline: "Sunrise by Mort Engelberg."

I hope the public's coming familiarity with the Engelberg Factor will not deter Clinton and Gore from making any more bus trips; even with Engelberg scouting the sites for pretty backdrops, a bus trip across America is probably more useful for a candidate than the standard airport stop — and certainly a lot more acceptable than Ross Perot's thankfully now-defunct plan to conduct an electronic campaign via satellite video hookups and closed-circuit television

But politics, alas, is always politics, and I can't help it: Every time I see a crowd of small-town citizens gathered to wait for Clinton on a dusty Main Street now, I no longer wonder how they knew he was coming. I just imagine each of them with Mort Engelberg's business card in their shirt pockets. Hey, a producer

If Robert Sanders was the type to say, "I told you so," he could have worn out his voice over the past couple of years.

Sanders says he spent eight years trying to convince local officials and business owners to support his idea of having drag boat racing at Big Spring's Moss Creek Lake. Two years ago his concept got its start as the West Texas Drag Boat Races and Lakefest. The race comes to Big Spring for the third year this Saturday and Sunday, drawing thousands of people and filling up motel rooms.

'The boat race was a success from day one," says Big Spring Convention and Visitors Bureau director Marae Brooks. "None of the other events that Big Spring . . . compare in motel rooms rented and people brought into town. I wish we had ten more just like it.'

Sanders says last year's gate was between four and five thousand, up from three thousand in 1990. The number of contestants in the races, which are divided into 22 boat classes, has gone from the 70s in the first year to Sanders' projection of near 100 for 1992.

'We're just trying to get it larger every year," says Sanders, the event's organizer, a Big Spring 267-1226 for more information.

native and himself a drag boat

A major reason for the event's success is the lake itself, which Sanders says is ideal for any water sport. The lake's location in a depression protects it from wind and gives spectators a good view of the racing.

Sanders refers to Moss Creek Lake as a "gold mine," not only because of the drag boat race but because of its potential for jet and water ski competitions.

"Boat racers that come (here) have raced all over the country, and they say it's one of the best (lakes) they've been to," he says.

The event is a sanctioned race on the Southern Drag Boat Association tour. Boats on the tour reach speeds of 200 mph. This year's purse is $10,000.

Besides the boat racing, which starts at 10 a.m. Saturday with time trials, the event features exhibitions in barefoot water skiing and jet skiing.

This year the lakefest adds another activity - bungee jumping. For a fee a Midland outfit will use a crane to take participants out over the water for their jumps.

Top fuel dragster Spirit of America returns to the 1992 Lakefest for an exhibition. Last year the boat set a lake speed record at 218 mph.

Parachuters start the festivities Sunday with a noon jump onto the Lakefest grounds.

Admission is $7 Saturday and $10 Sunday. Two day passes go for $15. A $5 fee is charged for bringing ice chests. Call Robert Sanders at

The triumph moved the Flint, Mich., fighter into a Monday bout against Algeria's Ahmed Dine. The winner of that fight will be guaranteed at least a bronze

"I tell him not to go to the ropes but he fights so well off the ropes," Joe Byrd said. "He makes me so nervous; he got caught with a couple of shots he shouldn't of."

Byrd, winning his second 165-pound fight of the Games, led 4-1 after the first round, then spent much of the second and third rounds fighting off the ropes. The strategy proved effective, although it cost him some points when he got caught with right hands from Lebziak.

"They were counting them so I may stay on the ropes the rest of the tournament, said Byrd. "But I know I'll make my father nervous.

Byrd's victory upped the overall U.S. team record to 9-2.

It followed a first round win Thursday night by Oscar De La Hoya, who escaped the first cut of his career to take an impressive decision. Teammate Vernon Forrest, however, became the second boxer eliminated from the tournament.

A few bouts later, Forrest dropped a 14-8 decision to Britain's Peter Richardson despite a wild third-round rally.

Forrest had been weakened by a stomach virus that forced him to spend all day Wednesday in bed,

NEW YORK (AP) - The players' union has filed an unfair labor practice charge against commissioner Fay Vincent, accusing him of pressuring New York Yankees officials to change their testimony in the Steve Howe grievance.

The Spanish team suffered its first loss when 11th-seeded Sergi Bruguera fell to Mark Koevermans of Holland, 1-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2. Spaniard Conchita Martinez, seeded No. 5, beat Sandra Cecchini of Italy, 6-4, 6-3.

AIDS patients risk life with clinical tests

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Joseph M. leaves the clinic at Mount Sinai Medical Center with a big paper shopping bag filled with plastic safety-sealed bottles. They are filled with hope a three-month supply of experimental drugs that might help him live longer with AIDS.

Joseph, 41, is one of thousands of people with acquired immune deficiency syndrome who have agreed to participate in medical experiments in exchange for up-todate drugs and scrutinizing medical care — all for free.

Though only a minuscule percentage of the estimated 1 million Americans infected with the AIDScausing virus has participated in formal clinical trials, the number

A toll-free hotline that provides information on nearly 100 government-approved AIDS drug trials averages between 500 and 700 calls a week.

Is won 6-5.

263-1383

Most callers don't know what clinical trials are. "They're looking for hope more than anything else," said Sharon Marsh, who manages the hotline.

With just 15 drugs approved to treat AIDS and AIDS-related infections, trials have become the only way to gain access to scores of other compounds in various stages of development. At the end of 1991, 64 pharmaceutical companies were testing some 88 AIDS-related drugs and vaccines, according to the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association.

"In some cases trials do provide real opportunities," said Larry Tate, of Project Inform in San Francisco. "Certainly there are some promising treatments only available in trials.

For Joseph K., the benefits extend beyond access to new but unapproved medication. There's immeasurable value in "getting connected to doctors on a regular basis even when you have no symptoms," he said. "It's helped me a are, we still have a long way to go lot psychologically. I would feel in terms of giving to each person siderably hassle-free when comthey'd be annoyed because they're not charging you and it's a nuisance.

For many - especially the poor offering their bodies to science has become the only way to secure medical care. By default, trial doctors often find themselves treating all sorts of non-AIDS-related medical problems.

But there are frustrations. Many AIDS activists complain that drug studies often are designed in ways that shut out women, minorities and intravenous drug users.

Further, a study might be conducted at just a handful of locations, excluding patients outside narrow geographical bands. Newer treatments often are limited to only two or three sites, while cuttingedge therapies may only involve a few dozen people.

Eligibility can be a problem. Someone currently on medication could be excluded in the pursuit of "pure" scientific data — results not obscured by the presence of other drugs. (The typical AIDS patient, however, might take as many as six medications at a time.)

Some people, desperate to participate, refused to tell trial physicians they were taking other drugs. Dr. Henry Sachs, who heads the AIDS trials unit at Manhattan's Mount Sinai Medical Center, said he tries to "get across to patients that being in a study is a partnership, and there's responsibility on both sides.'

It is impossible to know how many people are involved in AIDS research. About 22,000 people with AIDS currently are participating in government-approved trials.

Among drug companies, which often sponsor their own studies, 23,000 people participated in just one of Bristol-Myers Squibb Co.'s trials for ddI, which was approved last fall and is being marketed as Videx. Hoffman-LaRoche Inc. said 10,000 people received ddC, named Hivid, in its clinical trials.

"As impressive as the numbers

Bernard Dempsey, grants officer for the American Foundation for AIDS Research, sits on a table among hundreds of applications for AIDS research grants from researchers around the world. AmFAR, the largest nonprofit organization in the United States dedicated to finding a cure for AIDS, distribute basic science grants twice a year.

Matilde Krim, co-founder of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, or AmFAR.

Experimental drugs must pass three phases of clinical trials, a process that without complications takes about six years. At each stage, the number of patients is expanded and the test time lengthens. By the time a Phase III study is under way, thousands of patients might be involved, and Food and Drug Administration approval is usually within reach.

For particularly promising compounds, the second and third phases may be combined to shave off a few years of development.

Despite the demand for treatment, studies often have been underenrolled. Many people have opted to buy unapproved, bootleg medicines through underground "buyer's clubs," a process conmonitoring

Others didn't wish to run the risk of receiving a placebo. To combat that possibility, trial participants have done everything from having their pills analyzed at medical labs to swapping pills among other participants to limit the possibility of receiving a dose of sugar.

Activists defended such actions with the argument that a patient's first responsibility is to his or her own health.

"Patients need to make a judgment on what's to their advantage, what is likely to work out," said Project Inform's Tate. "Clearly the definition of an unapproved drug is that we don't know everything about it.'

Despite the risks, activists have demanded access to new treatments no matter how obscure their benefit might be. The AIDS epidemic has created the most very foolish calling a private doc- with HIV optimal treatment which pared with checking in at a hospital vocal patient-advocacy group ever

Drug trials matter of beating the clock

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Alecia Gonzalez was diagnosed with AIDS five years ago, at the age of 46. A grandmother of seven who relies on welfare, Gonzalez said she started feeling tired about a year ago, but without insurance, she couldn't afford medication.

Now, however, she's losing her memory, and she's frightened.

"I'm supposed to get something from my room, and I forget what I'm looking for,'' she says in a near whisper. "There are things that I say and I forgot I told them. It's getting worse, but I figured it's my age. I never thought it was AIDS.'

Gonzalez is enrolling in a study of an experimental drug that could treat AIDS-related dementia. In doing so, she joins thousands of others with acquired immune deficiency syndrome who are participating in medical research.

"Maybe something will help," said Gonzalez, who will have to undergo an unpleasant spinal tap, among other tests, in order to participate. "I'll take the chance."

Free drugs and medical care are compelling incentives for Gonzalez, who spoke on condition her name be changed. If the drug is found to be of some benefit at the end of the 16-week study, she will continue to receive, it free for several months.

Many people with AIDS participate in drug trials because they feel they get high-quality medical care from doctors conducting research, which is dependent upon the meticulous collection of data.

On a more subtle level, dealing with "people who are directly involved with the AIDS virus (means) there's not that kind of judgment'' about a patient's lifestyle, said Joseph K., 41, who has participated in drug trials for three out of the four years he's known he's been infected with AIDS.

People with AIDS speak freely of the discrimination they feel. "Getting the prescription from the pharmacy, there seemed to be a certain kind of negative reaction — they see AZT (a key AIDS drug) and jump to conclusions," said Joseph.

Doctors conducting research find they provide more than just medical care.

"A lot of what we do becomes 19th-century medicine, where you help the patient by showing concern and your availability and support for them," said Dr. Henry Sachs, who heads the AIDS trials unit at Mount Sinai Medical Center, where both Gonzalez and Joseph are in trials.

Indeed, Joseph said he draws considerable strength from the support and encouragement he gets from trial workers who "want to see you stay healthy

Joseph is lucky. He suffered a brief bout of night sweats and diarrhea, often the early signs of infection. And he had candida, a fungus of the mouth. But aside from occasionally feeling tired, he is in good

With forced confidence in his relative good health, Joseph recently embarked on a dream trip to the Middle East, determined to fulfill boyhood dreams of standing in the shadow of the pyramids, riding a camel, haggling in the souk. Before it's too late.

"I'm holding out for that time" when there's effective treatment. he said. "It's a matter of beating

tor to say I have this twinge - is often experimental," said Dr. for medication and regular seen. Sexual bias found in AIDS

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — There was only one requirement for AIDS-infected women who wanted to participate in a drug study sponsored by Hoffman-La Roche Inc.: They must be past menopause, or surgically sterile The pharmaceutical giant said it took the extraordinary precaution because the drug it began studying earlier this year was so new the company had yet to test it on animal fetuses.

"We felt it best to err on the side of caution," said La Roche spokeswoman Darien Wilson.

But the caveat stunned people within the AIDS community, who said it was an extreme example of what typically have been more subtle but widespread attempts to discourage women - and minorities and drug users - from participating in AIDS research.

Women have been underrepresented in other areas of medical research as well. Some heart drugs, for example, have been studied primarily in men even though women sometimes respond differently to drug therapy

"Clinical trials for AIDS drugs are geared toward the needs of men and have a built-in bias against women," charged Teresa McGovern, director of the HIV Law Project at MFY Legal Services on Manhattan's povertyridden Lower East Side.

'Some studies outrightly bar women of childbearing potential," she said, even though participating in medical research might be the only way for these women to obtain medical care.

Others require that participants speak English, and some reject those with a history of drug use.

Still other studies have required "detectible" birth control — i.e. an intrauterine device, even though doctors are reluctant to implant IUDs in women with histories of pelvic infections, which are common among AIDS-infected women.

'There is a whole history of women being excluded from trials," said Iris Long, a pharmaceutical chemist and long-time member of the activist group ACT UP. Even the Centers for Disease Control's definition of acquired immune deficiency syndrome "does not adequately describe the way (AIDS) manifests itself in women," Long added.

Of about 92 governmentapproved clinical trials currently under way, only three specifically study pregnant women with AIDS and their offspring.

At the same time, women comprise a growing percentage of AIDS patients. A new book entitled "AIDS in the World 1992" said that worldwide women now account for 40 percent of those infected with HIV, which causes AIDS, up from 25 percent in 1990.

The number of cases in men is not leveling off, it's just that the number of women and children with AIDS is increasing faster," said Dr. Henry Sachs, who oversees AIDS drug trials at Manhattan's Mount Sinai Medical Center.

In North America, women comprise 11 percent of the infected adult population; in the Caribbean and Africa, women approach or exceed 50 percent of those infected.

The government said in January that it will "emphasize the enrollment of women, minorities and injection drug users" at the clinical trial sites it funds

But McGovern said that promise 'has no teeth. I've never heard of an instance where a woman has been recruited for a trial." Once shut out of a study, women have few alternatives. "What are they going to do, hire a lawyer to fight a requirement?" McGovern asked rhetorically.

Some researchers cite special difficulties in enrolling women in studies. Women who are economically deprived or who bear the sole responsibility for the family, they say, have difficulty keeping regular medical appointments.

In that case, McGovern challenged, "provide child care on site and it won't be a problem.

Dr. Thomas Chalmers, associate director of the technology assessment group at the Harvard School of Public Health, does not believe there is a conscious effort to exclude women from AIDS research. Rather, he attributes their absense to the fact that scientists "don't know what giving powerful drugs does to a fetus," or how it will affect a woman's ability to bear children in the future.

Researchers and drug companies live in constant fear of another thalidomide disaster. Approved in Europe and Canada but not the United States, the drug was used as a sedative in the 1950s. But thalidomide, which doctors managed to pass on to 20,000 Americans, caused terrible deformities in newborn children and sparked numerous lawsuits. Subsequently, the U.S. government has tightened drug approval requirements.

But McGovern said those conducting research can protect themselves from liability. People who participate in the study of an unapproved drug must sign a consent form that clearly outlines the risks involved.

With informed consent, "there is no definitive case law that says they would be liable" for physical problems that might arise during or after the study, McGovern said.

Acknowledging the furor that erupted over the sterilization requirement, Hoffman-La Roche said it will drop that qualifier in future trials of the drug it is studying.

Some advocate women be studied separately, although Sachs contends, that "women and men are not as different as adults and children.'

But ACT UP's Long argues that AIDS can be very different in women than men. Infected women are more prone to cervical cancer, they may have pelvic inflamatory disease, candida or other urinary

In addition, women respond differently to various drugs McGovern said many of her clients feel they cannot take AZT, the standard AIDS treatment, because they suffer intense side effects including muscle deterioration.

NEW YORK (AP) — Fire gutted half a TWA jet, but not before all 292 people escaped to safety after takeoff was aborted at Kennedy Airport because of flames from a tail engine

At least 55 people suffered minor injuries Thursday

"It's amazing no one died on that thing," said Tom Middlemiss, an airport spokesman.

The Lockheed L-1011, bound for San Francisco, caught fire as it sped down the runway. The takeoff was aborted, causing the plane to veer off the runway and crash through a barrier.

The fire prevented escape from the plane's rear four exits, but passengers were able to escape from the front four by sliding down emergency chutes, said Bob Fulton, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

"The stewardess opened the rear exit ... and a ball of flame came into the cabin," said passenger Julia Elhauge, 31, of Berkeley, Calif.

"The evacuation went extremely well. The pilot really knew what he was doing," said Frank Huever, chief supervisor of operations for the Port Authority, which operates

The fire was in the rearmost engine, Lt. Stephen Deluce, a Port Authority police commander, said this morning. He said the control tower radioed to the pilot that flames could be seen shooting from the rear of the plane, and the pilot aborted the takeoff.

The cause of the fire was not immediately determined. A Port Authority police source, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said it appeared a fuel line in the tail section of the plane may have Duncan Pardue, an FAA spokesman, said the plane veered during takeoff and burst into flames after going about 100 feet off the runway. He said the plane never was airborne.

The plane, Flight 843, was carry ing 275 passengers, including four non-working TWA employees, and 16 crew members, Deluce said.

Charles DeGaetano, an Two of the L-1011's engines are Emergency Medical Service spokesman, said 55 passengers and a dozen rescue workers were treated for minor injuries, including some broken bones. Fortytwo of the passengers were hospitalized.

Flames engulfed the plane from the wings to the tail and firefighters needed about 50 minutes to extinguish them. Frank McCabe, a spokesman for the Fire Department, said the rear of the plane was completely destroyed.

The fire was reported at 5:42 p.m. The airport was closed for several hours.

WCBS-AM reporter Tim Scheld, who was a passenger on the plane, said: "Everything was calm, as calm as it can be when you know you've got to get out of there because you can see flames and smell smoke.

Scheld said there was little pushing and shoving as they fled. Then, everyone watched the plane

Volunteer work has allowed the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce's tourism center in Rip Griffin's Truck Stop to remain open but it would not be the same with the park, said Chamber Executive Vice President Linda Roger.

"It will be real hard to keep it as clean and neat as we always have," Roger said of needed security for the park.

The state will provide security for closed parks, according to wire reports, but no details were available this morning on how much security would be provided or whether it would still be available if local groups took over operation.

'We need to fight'' to keep the park open, Roger said. The Chamber will have representatives at the hearing next month, she said." Blackshear echoed her comments.

It costs about $75,000 a year to operate the park but ticket receipts to get in — $1 per person and $3 per carload - brings in only about $15,000, Rutledge said. Parks and Wildlife uses two full-time employees and two seasonal employees to operate the park, which attracted nearly 75,000

But Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., also acknowledges that his effort to kill the $8.25 billion science project being built under North Texas soil is likely to fail. 'The Senate, I regret to tell you, is about to fund the super collider and the space station both," Bumpers told reporters in a briefing Thursday at the National Press

Senate debate on the super collider will come Monday, with a vote likely after the five-hour debate limit agreed upon this morning. Bumpers has tried for three years to halt the super collider and the $30 billion-plus space station, contending the nation cannot afford the big-ticket science projects. He and a leading House opponent, New York Republican Sherwood Boehlert, met with reporters just before President Bush toured the super collider site in Waxahachie. Bush is a strong supporter of the super collider and has invested considerable energy in recent days to obtain Senate support for the project under construction in his adopted home state.

While Bumpers said he had "no illusions about what the vote's going to be," he predicted his measure to eliminate collider funding will draw more support than it did last year. The Senate defeated his amendment last year on a 62-37

"I'm not giving up the battle," Boehlert said, noting that each year opposition to the project has

> If the Senate decides to continue funding the super collider, the question moves to conference, where House and Senate negotiators will have to iron out their differences.

Bumpers said the House's surprising vote last month to kill the super collider likely won't be duplicated in the Senate — in large part because of the political muscle arrayed against him.

"I have waged this lonely battle virtually alone for three years against Lloyd Bentsen, who is chairman of the Finance Committee, against Bennett Johnston, who is chairman of the Energy Committee and Phil Gramm who is chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee," Bumpers

"Those are not weak opponents." The two Texas senators, Democrat Bentsen and Republican Gramm, each are lobbying colleagues in their party for the project. Johnston, a Louisiana Democrat, was instrumental in obtaining funding at the subcommittee and committee levels.

Nearly $1 billion in federal funds and $227 million in Texas money has been spent to date on the 54-mile atom smasher.

Since construction began in 1989, collider officials have contracted for $638 million in orders with firms in the United States and Puerto Rico. Over the same period, foreign contracts totaling $12.5 million have been let.

Fifty years, still growing

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Birdwell Lane Baptist Church, 1512 Birdwell Lane, will celebrate its 50th anniversary Aug. 7-9.

After 50 years, the church is still growing. Members are adding a 7,000-square-foot fellowship and activity center. Planned to be complete in September or October, the building will house classrooms, a nursery, kitchen and a large open activity area.

To celebrate turning 50, church plans include an open house; a men's quartet concert and plenty of time for fellowship.

According to history, the church was organized by 14 charter members on Aug. 11, 1942 under the name of Mount Zion Baptist Church. Mount Joy Missionary Baptist Church was instrumental in the church's organization.

During the first year, members met in the David Roten Building and eventually in members

In August of 1943, members selected a site at 1000 Lancaster St. in which to build a new church building. However, in July 1946, the church moved to 608 N.E. 10th St., where members met until January

Members continued to meet in the stucco building until the erection of the present brick building in February 1964.

In the mean time, membership has grown from the original 14 to over 100, with four charter members still attending regularly.

Pastors who served the church during its history include: W.W. Pettus, 1942-44; E.G. Newcomer, 1945 and 1948-59; W.H. Robertson, 1946-48; R.D. Lee, 1959-61 and 1968-76; J.H. Martin, 1961-63; Carl Sims, 1963-68; Jack Collier, 1977-88; Raymond "Bud" Shockey, 1988 (July) to present.

For the weekend of celebration, the church plans to begin Friday with a 5 p.m. reception for members and guests. A worship service will begin at 7 p.m. with Bob Lee preaching.

Saturday, an open house will resume at 5 p.m. followed by a men's quartet concert and

Gang leader Minister gives up work

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The Rev. Gregory J. Boyle has buried 26 gang members from his impoverished parish and dodged bullets in a six-year crusade to love warring gangs into submission.

Now the priest gang members and the kids he's loved say that others. could spell trouble for their embat tled neighborhoods.

"I feel scared because he keeps everybody busy, you know. By doing that, everybody don't think about shooting or nothing," said a 21-year-old member of The Mob Crew who identified himself by his gang moniker, Scrappy.

Little Sniper, 19, another member of TMC, also feared greater bloodshed after Boyle leaves on Friday for a yearlong retreat required of all Jesuit priests eight years after their ordination.

In a tearful farewell on Sunday, Boyle pleaded for peace among the dozen or so gangs that operate in the parish on the city's east side. Three rival groups declared a truce afterward.

But many, including Boyle, fear that the peace won't last.

"What I don't tell them is, 'Yeah, I'm worried too,''' Boyle said Monday. "It's not that I'm some kind of miracle worker. I just know the kids and I have juice (influence). I know all the players, and I know who to talk to when something comes down.

Since arriving as pastor of Dolores Mission, Boyle, 38, has tried to combat gang violence by offering gang members love, acceptance and employment.

Pedaling a bicycle on nightly tervened directly to prevent arguments and scuffles from turning deadly. A number of times he stood amid gunfire when his counseling didn't work, he said.

Using donated funds he's put dozens of gang members to work on neighborhood projects, such as building a child day-care center, call "G-Dog" is packing his bags and arranged regular jobs for

> As Boyle prepared for his departure, gang members clad in white T-shirts and baggy pants helped with the packing.

> In other respects, it was business as usual. Earlier the bank had called, saying the account from which he paid about 60 gang members last week was several thousand dollars overdrawn, and Boyle was wondering how he would come up with the money.

> "It's like, 'What, me worry?" he said, chuckling. "I don't know what I'm going to do

Boyle has acknowledged the We don't got nobody to help us bloodshed has increased since he arrived, and the stress has left him near burnout. But he emphasized that he asked the Los Angeles Archdiocese to send him back to Dolores Mission as a social worker after his retreat. If the request is granted, it will mark the second time Boyle has returned.

He was first assigned a summer stint there eight years ago, right after his ordination. It was baptism by fire for a young priest who spoke no Spanish and understood little of the Hispanic culture or the gangs who rule the area.

Later he was assigned to work for a year in rural Bolivia. While there Boyle realized he wanted to dedicate his ministry to the poor. When he returned to Los Angeles, he requested reassignment at Dolores Mission.

"I'm fatter, grayer and balder, but the one thing has never altered, when I come back here from a rounds of the parish, he has vacation or retreat, is that this is preached peace and, at times, in- the joy of my life," Boyle said.

Scholar explains human duality

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In a way, you're two people, says the great religious scholar. You're ambitious, selfabsorbed, sociable, fashioning goods and reputation. But you're also isolated, alone, mere "dust of the ground.'

This is the "strange duality" of human beings, says Rabbi Joseph B. Soloveitchik, considered the venerated elder of modern Orthodox Judaism and often called "the Ray," a shorthand term for honored rabbi or teacher.

Although he is little known by the public, his scholarly influence has been ranked among the foremost of recent centuries.

Soloveitchik calls the first Adam 'the majestic man of dominion and success," and "Adam the second, the lonely man of faith, obedience, and defeat."

The first Adam is engrossed with the "how" of things to control them and gain dignifying responsibility and material comfort, while the second Adam asks the "why" of existence, its essence and purpose.

'God created two Adams and sanctioned both," Soleveitchik said, for they are both one person. God "wants man to engage in the pursuit of majesty-dignity as well as redemptiveness.

Adam the first "is completely utilitarian," focused on "practical implications." He is "aggressive, bold and victory minded. His motto is success. He ergages in creative work, trying to imitate his Maker." On the other hand, Adam the second "keeps wondering: 'Who is He who trails me steadily, uninvited and unwanted, like an everlasting shadow," then "vanishes into the recesses of transcendence"?

Retreat quiet for prayer

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHRISTOVAL — Mount Carmel Hermitage south of Christoval has seen many improvements in the year it has been in existence, evident by the work visible from the path visitors take from the parking area to the chapel.

In addition to all the work, the main purpose of the hermitage prayer — still takes up the major portion of each day for the Rev. Fabian Rosette.

The hermitage's peace and quiet is quickly evident. Birds chirp, an occasional insect makes its presence known. Brother Andrew, Rosette's dog, announces every visitor. The main purpose of the hermitage is "Holiness, to be holy," Rosette said.

"The main purpose of the hermitage, more than anything, is to live the first commandment," he

"Have you ever heard people speaking of the first commandment. You should love your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind. That is the purpose of the hermitage: to glorify God. And, by gloryfying God, a person also finds within self a place to come as close to God as he can.'

Outside the chapel stands a small bell that visitors ring to alert Rosette that he has company. If he can't hear it, his dog lets him know someone is ringing it.

Last year about this time, only the small "cell" where Rosette lives had been completed. The chapel and guesthouse were nearing completion.

On July 1, 1991, Bishop Michael Pfeifer, leader of the Catholic Diocese of San Angelo, blessed the hermitage while a crowd watched.

Now, a wall encloses most of the land except for the chapel and guesthouse. Behind the wooden wall are Rosette's cell and a small common hermitage, which will hold an office, kitchen, dining room and work areas.

The people of Christoval — a town 14 miles south of San Angelo have been wonderful to him, Rosette said. In addition, people have come from all across West Texas to bring items and donations.

The hermitage, which he said was a place for prayer, has received considerable media attention from around the state.

Rosette can be found wearing his order's brown habit. For the same reason, he has shaved his head as many hermits and monks do -asign of consecration to God as St. Paul demonstrated — Rosette said.

"Also it is very practical here, you don't have to worry about combing your hair and everytime you take your hood on and off you don't have to worry about your hair," he said. "The same thing with the beard, you are not wasting time shaving.

One remarkable gift has been the generosity of West Texans who have come from as far as Lubbock to see what they can do for him, Rosette said. A woman from the Abilene area came to see what she could do, and the next day workers arrived to build the fence, he said. "This is how things have started developing here," he said. Another day, a San Angelo family arrived and built the sidewalk. He tries to get all the rocks for buildings from the property. Some of the rocks are used for the walls. Some of the hermitage rocks were used by two people from Acuna, Coahuila, Mexico, to build a

'There is something about this place that attracts them," he said about all the people who have come to help.

"The day I came here, when all the celebrations were over, when everybody left, I knelt in my cell," he said. "I was scared to death. I had never been away from the city. My first week I was scared at night when I was here by myself.

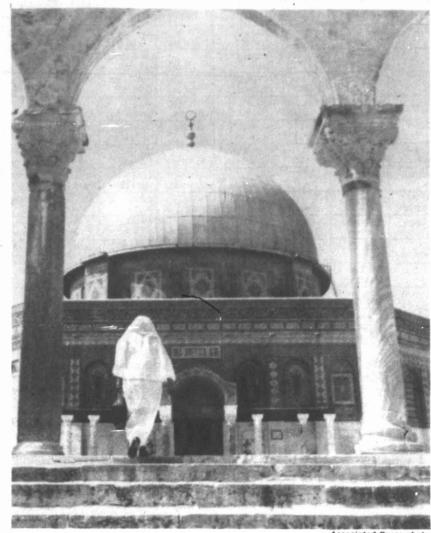

"Then one time I got up at night and said to God, 'You know what, what did I come up here for? To serve you and to love you. And if I don't trust you, what is this?'

"I left everything, I left a good parish, I left all that we call security. Fear went away and from that time on, you trust and you trust and believe me, things come your

Rosette continues to plan the future of the hermitage. He gestures to where a parlor will be built — a parlor where he can greet visitors

"I want the place to inspire," Rosette said. "I want the place to be something that is different."

An Arab woman walks toward the Dome of the Rock in Jerusalem as survey work for the restoration of the golden roof of the Dome of the Rock started Tuesday. Restoration work, funded by King Hussein of Jordan, will cost $7.2 million.

Dome restoration underway

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — The graceful, golden roof of the Dome of the Rock — a symbol of Jerusalem and one of the glories of Islam is being restored by engineers from Northern Ireland at a cost of more than $7 million.

Just the gold to cover the dome will run about $1.4 million, Pat O'Hare, the restoration's project manager, said Tuesday as the engineers from Mivan Overseas began surveying the 7th century mosque.

The restoration is being paid for by Jordan's King Hussein after a reported squabble with King Find of Saudi Arabia over who would pay and how. O'Hare said his company will do its best to steer clear of the political hassles that seem to dog any restoration project in Jerusalem, with its mixed Jewish and Arab population and arguments over boundaries. "We're not interested in politics, only in construction,' O'Hare said. "We have enough on what Muslims call the Harem es-Sharif and Jews the Temple Mount.

Issam Awad, the Palestinian engineer for the Harem, points out dents made by bullets in the dome. He says the damage is from 1982 when a crazed Israeli soldier opened fire at the mosque, and from the Temple Mount riots of 1990 when 17 Palestinians were killed by Israeli police.

The Harem es-Sharif, or Noble Sanctuary, is a political and religious mine field. It was the site of Solomon's Temple destroyed by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. and the Second Jewish Temple built by Herod and razed by the Romans in 70 A.D.

A radical Jewish group called the Temple Mount Faithful wants to rebuild the ancient temple on the site and suggests simply moving the Dome of the Rock and the nearby Al Aqsa Mosque to Saudi Arabia.

To Muslims, the rock beneath the dome is the place where the Prophet Mohammed made his journey to heaven described in the Koran, Islam's holy book. It is the third holiest site in Islam, after the Saudi cities of Mecca and Medina.

An indentation in the rock-is said to have been left by Mohammed's footprint and another by the handprints of the angel Gabriel, who held the massive rock down so it would not rise up with the prophet.

The first mosque on the spot was built by Omar, Commander of the Faithful, who conquered Jerusalem in 638 A.D. The present structure, known for its beautiful mosaics and blue exterior tiles as well as the golden dome, was completed in 691.

Adnan Husseini, who heads the Muslim Trust that manages the Harem es-Sharif, says the dome was last restored in the early 1960s and has a problem common to old buildings: the roof leaks.

Kenny Andrew, Mivan's operations manager, said most of the 18-month project will be taken up with designing plates to cover the dome and completely scaffolding the structure.

The actual restoration will be done between next April and September, the dry season.

Woman warns drunk drivers of dangers

DEAR ABBY: On July 13, 1990 my life was changed forever. What was supposed to be the in. of my life turned out to be the trial of my life. I had been happily married for nine years, and we were expecting our first child. One moment, my husband and I were returning from a friend's anniversary celebration, and the next moment, I woke up in the hospital; my husband was dead and my prematurely born baby was in the intensive care unit -- all because of a drunk driver ... and that driver was me! I took a life, and God gave me a life.
