The announcement was to be made officially in Austin later today.

Sanders said Montford had continually monitored the progress of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce petition drive, which surpassed 10,000 signatures Thursday and is expected to exceed 11,000 signatures, according chamber executive vice president Linda Roger.

Spring cleaned; then trashed

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

The Big Spring in Comanche Trail Park was cleaned this week but some citizens were apparently not too impressed, tossing cups, beer bottles and other trash into the cleaned spring.

"My Lord!" said City Councilman Mark Sheedy Thursday while showing an applicant for city manager the historic spring during a tour of the city. "It's a shame."

An average of six city workers worked four days — 170 man hours at a cost of about $2,000 — to clean brush and trash out of the spring, the namesake of the city and the attraction that brought the first settlers and the railroad to the area. A couple days later, new trash was seen floating in several areas, including several beer bottles.

"People can mess it up with just a little bit," said Acting City Manager Tom Decell. "That's four days that we're not able to do trash pickup in another area, that we're not able to clean another park."

"We don't need diapers in the Big Spring, we don't need cups..." Decell, who said the cleanup was not to impress applicants for city manager but is an ongoing process to "make an impression on our citizens," said vandalism is a problem in other areas of the city park as well. Toilets are frequently stopped up with rocks or other debris, causing odor problems, and bathroom walls are covered with graffiti.

"It's extremely disheartening," he said. "It's our park and our community and our city and it's going to take all of us cleaning up and helping cleaning up."

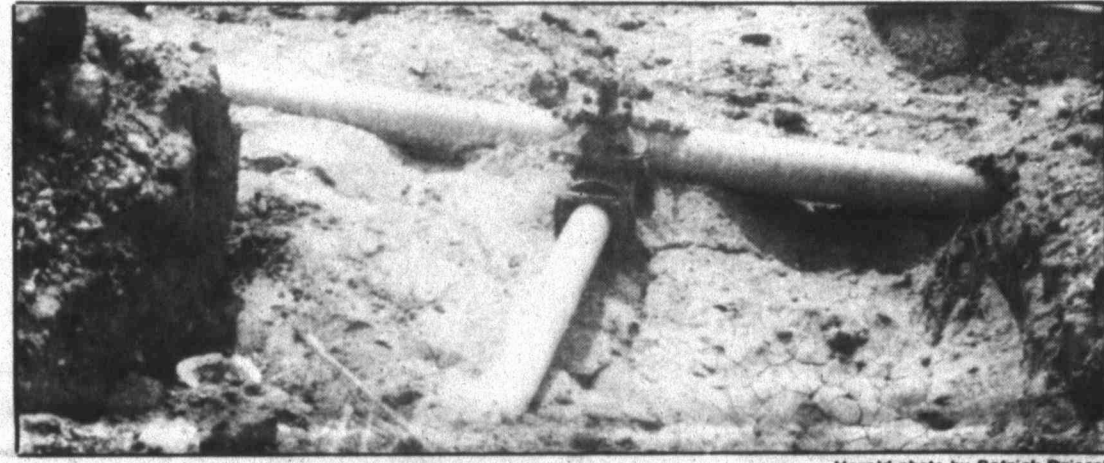

City manager applicant Jim Morgan of Cuero was reluctant to comment on his impressions but did say of the spring, "I'm amazed." Of the city: "Beautiful community."

City Councilman Charles Beil, who was with Morgan and Sheedy Thursday, commented on the trash in the spring, saying, "It's deplorable that some of our citizens have such a low regard for our community."

Morgan is one of five applicants for city manager being given tours, one each day this week. One or two applicants may be chosen Friday for further consideration or offered a job by the council, which is meeting in closed executive session every night this week.

It took city workers four days this week to clean brush and trash, shown in part, out of the Big Spring but it took less than a day for more trash to be thrown in.

Pipes, at 6th and Galveston streets, exposed all summer concerns a citizen who has seen children walking on the pipes and playing nearby. Energas is checking into the situation and city officials expect to soon complete water pipe replacement there.

Exposed pipes attract children; could possibly be hazardous

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Pipes left uncovered several months at 6th and Galveston, including a possible gas line, has a citizen that lives nearby concerned about safety.

The four- to five-foot hole is blocked to traffic, but children walk on the pipes, said Maria Baeza, who lives a block down the road. She also said that at one time Energas Co. employees were working on one of the pipes, which indicates it is a gas line.

"That's dangerous," Baeza said. "They could get killed." She said she is also concerned that homes connected to the gas line could be in danger if something happened.

Energas District Director Mike Mancill said Thursday he was checking on whether they have an exposed gas line, but said if they do it is probably not dangerous.

"It is basically steel pipe," he said. "We will sure get it checked out."

City workers are scheduled to soon complete replacement of water pipe at that intersection and cover the hole back up, said Acting City Manager Tom Decell. Delays were caused by rain and other water leaks in the area, keeping water in the hole, and by equipment breakdowns.

"We're pretty well just about stuck from doing anything when it rains," he said.

Baeza, who said she talked to Decell's secretary last week and still has not seen anything done, said she is more concerned now because school started this week and more children are walking by the site.

Children playing near the hole while going to and from school could get hurt, she said. "All the kids walk down that street."

The hole has been there all summer, she said. "It's been like that for a long time, at least three months."

The hole appeared dry Thursday but it rained four days the past week in Big Spring, with a total of more than 2.1 inches of rain falling, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture research station here. The last time rain fell prior to the past week was Aug. 1 when a half-inch of rain fell.

The water pipe is being replaced in preparation for paving of some streets in the area, Decell said. "If I don't (replace the pipes), when we finish paving, it'll blow it out... Murphy's Law you know."

Permit holder opposes application

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

The only holder of a city permit to transport people for fees said he will oppose another company's application for a permit, despite the applicant providing that service here for seven years.

David Mitchem, owner of Mitchem Transport Inc., which operates Taxi Big Spring, said there is not enough room in the local market for West Texas Opportunities Inc. to continue providing non-emergency medical transportation when Mitchem can provide the same service for the same prices. West Texas Opportunities recently learned they must have a city permit.

However, Mitchem said, he would consider working a deal with a third party, Mark Silen, who recently proposed opening a similar business. Silen apparently may know how to bring in more business, Mitchem said. Also, he said, Silen is from Big Spring, but West Texas Opportunities is based in Lamesa.

"If he's got the business mind and the connections, I've got the vans and the insurance and I'm ready to go," Mitchem said. A lease or percentage contract could probably be worked out, he said.

Silen said he is willing to talk to Mitchem and has tried to contact him numerous times, but to no avail, since he began efforts last month to start up his company, Turning Point Transport.

"I've called over there four or five times and haven't been able to get past the guy who answers the phone," Silen said.

An official with West Texas Opportunities declined comment pending a public hearing by the Big Spring City Council Tuesday on a permit the company applied for this week.

Taxi and ambulance permits are required by city ordinance to protect existing businesses providing such services because the services are a necessity.

Silen was told by city officials last month he must apply for a permit to provide transportation to elderly and handicapped people who would pay flat-rates through Medicaid. West Texas Opportunities has held the Medicaid contract for that service in Howard County since 1985 but never had a permit.

9-year-old's death ruled accidental

By MARTHA E. FLORES
Staff Writer

Accidental electrocution was ruled as the cause of death of 9-year-old Charlotte Robinson, whose body was found in a clothes dryer at her home late on the night of Aug. 5.

After receiving police investigation and autopsy reports, Judge Bill Shankles made the ruling Thursday.

A hot electrical wire encased in the dryer made contact with the dryer drum shorting it out causing the electrocution, he said.

Big Spring Police Department Lt. Pam Jordan said, "When Robinson entered the dryer, the drum made contact with the wire causing a current to go through the drum."

The dryer was not on at any time Robinson was in it, she said.

Robinson had electrical burns on her torso and legs, Shankles said. She was pronounced dead at the scene.

The child's body was found by children she had been playing hide and seek with that evening. After finding the body, Robinson's mother, Amy Robinson, and another child went to neighbors asking them to call the police. The police were called to the residence shortly before midnight.

"From the investigation, she was in the drum a very short time," Jordan said.

Four still hospitalized following a rollover

By MARTHA E. FLORES

Four people remain hospitalized following a truck rollover 17 miles north of Big Spring on U.S. Highway 87 Monday which injured eight people.

Scenic Mountain Medical Center admitted five of the eight passengers including the infant Monday. The 16-year-old male was transported to University Medical Hospital in Lubbock and the 4-month-old infant was transported later.

The 16-year-old underwent surgery for multiple fractures. Throughout the week, he has not regained full consciousness, the spokesperson said. The 4-month-old sustained a broken leg and small hernia.

Both of the older passengers, Andres Mendoza, 78, and Paula Mendoza, 74, remain in stable condition at SMMC, according to the hospital emergency room supervisor. Paula Mendoza sustained severe incapacitating injuries and is still on a respirator, said a DPS spokesperson.

According to Texas Department of Highways' reports, a late model truck with camper was traveling southbound when the driver, Maria Acosta Mendoza, 36, became distracted when a bee entered the cab of the truck.

She ran off the road on to the unimproved shoulder of the road, re-entered the roadway and then ran off of the road. The truck turned 2 1/4 times before ejecting the three passengers in the cab and the five passengers in the bed of the truck.

In the cab with Acosta Mendoza were a 13-year-old female and Andres Mendoza. Paula Mendoza, a 10-year-old male; 6-year-old female, 16-year-old male and the infant were in the bed of the truck.

The family was traveling from Denver to San Antonio when the accident occurred, said one of the passengers.

Two Howard County Sheriff's Office units and three DPS units were on the scene. Ambulances from Howard County and Martin County transported the injured passengers to SMMC.

Odessa's emergency team is praised for reaction to fire

ODESSA — The second tier of Odessa's emergency management team, forced into action by their supervisors' absence, have been applauded by a state emergency official for their reaction to a life-threatening chemical fire.

"People stepped in real smoothly. We're real proud of them," Jo Schweikhard-Moss, spokeswoman for the state's Division of Emergency Management said following Thursday's ordeal.

Fire Chief James Wiggs, who has been designated the area's top figure to coordinate a response to any disaster, was in San Antonio. His top deputy was out of town attending an emergency management seminar.

DHS investigating alleged child abuse at a day care

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HEARNE — State officials and local police are investigating a daycare employee who was recently accused by co-workers of trying to smother four infants in the past six months, a Texas Department of Human Services official says.

Art Bussey, an Austin-based DHS investigations, told the Bryan-College Station Eagle Thursday that the investigation is "one of our more important cases."

The woman works at Kiddie Kamp daycare center. The center has been cited in the past seven weeks for violations that include tying toddlers to chairs with blankets, according to Texas Department of Human Services documents.

DHS officials and six employees of the center, which cares for up to 46 children a day, would discuss neither the violations nor the alleged smothering incidents.

Police said the employee, who was hired 16 months ago, was banned from the center on Aug. 12 after a co-worker reported to DHS that four attempts were made to smother infants by holding a hand over their mouths or their entire faces.

While most daycare centers are inspected at least twice a year in unannounced visits, Kiddie Kamp has received seven visits since September — four for monitoring and three initiated by complaints from either workers or parents, the newspaper reported today.

Hearne police Det. Lockie Sailer said DHS called police after the smothering allegations were made. A criminal investigation has been launched, but Sailer wouldn't discuss the details of the case.

One parent whose children attend the center said he's never had reason to suspect anything was wrong.

He said he finds the allegations

Texas education system loses one child in five

Although the dropout rate for 1990-91 was lower than in the previous school year, Texas still lost 21.39 percent of its school children at some point between the seventh grade and their senior year.

The statewide annual dropout rate was 3.93 percent, but if figures are calculated over a six-year period, more than one-fifth of the seventh graders will drop out before finishing high school.

SOURCES: Texas Education Agency and John Sharp, Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts.

"unbelievable," but that as a parent, he has to be worried. "The kids love being there, and I feel like they've learned a lot by being there," he said. "They've obviously been paid a lot of attention, and they come home every day having learned something new. "We're worried about what to do if the place closes; I've never worried about the children while they're there."

Texas just says no to California red foxes

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Red foxes targeted by the state for extermination because they are said to pose a threat to endangered species in the Ballona Wetlands cannot be relocated to Texas, officials there said.

Animal rights activists, who announced last week that a home had been found in San Antonio for the embattled foxes, vowed to continue their fight to protect the foxes.

"I am not going to ever stop this," said Mary Sheehy, president of the Wildlife Protection League.

An environmentalist helping plan the restoration of the wetlands sharply criticized the animal activists for leading the public to think that a solution to the fox problem had been found. "This is a cruel hoax which misleads the public and raises the hopes of the league's membership," said Ruth Lansford, a chairwoman of the Friends of the Ballona Wetlands, in a statement released Tuesday.

The league, which has joined other activists in a campaign to save the foxes, had said that the Wild Animal Orphanage of San Antonio would take 10 and possibly more of the creatures. But Bill Brownlee of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said that under Texas policy no fur-bearing animal can be brought into the state for scientific, zoological, rehabilitation or propagation purposes.

The problem, he said, is largely the potential for introduction of diseases. In addition, there are simply too many foxes in the state, he said. The 15 or so foxes living on the Ballona marshes south of Marina del Rey are considered a threat to endangered birds nesting there by state wildlife experts and some environmentalists.

They contend that the foxes are not native to the area and unless they are removed will become the dominant — and possibly the only — species there.

Fight is still on for control of the Edwards Aquifer

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — An environmental group says it does not support a Texas Water Commission plan to limit pumping from the Edwards Aquifer and will continue its legal challenge to the agency's enforcement of a federal wildlife conservation act.

The Sierra Club's comments came Thursday in response to an endorsement of the plan by a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service official.

That support, however, included a question whether the proposal would result in the deaths of endangered species during severe drought.

Sierra Club officials said they have not backed off their trial charging the Water Commission of failing to enforce the Endangered Species Act. The trial is scheduled to begin Oct. 26 in U.S. District Court in Midland.

"We need the trial to be able to determine whether the Fish and Wildlife Service is taking adequate steps through the Water Commission's plan or anything else to protect the endangered species," said Ken Kramer of the Sierra Club.

The state has been urged to get an exemption from the federal act by Mike Spear, regional director of Fish and Wildlife from Albuquerque, N.M.

The exemption would prevent the state from getting hit with penalties for violating the act when the aquifer and springs fell to low levels during severe drought and endangered species died.

"We do not believe that we can save endangered species from all possible occurrences," said Spear, who recommended several modifications to the Water Commission plan.

Water Commission Chairman John Hall said that under the water-use plan, aquifer levels would have to drop to those that occurred during the drought of the 1950s before endangered species, like the fountain darter, would be threatened. The fountain darter is a fish.

But Kramer questioned data used by Hall to reach these conclusions. "Some of the Water Commission's assumptions are inappropriate in regard to reality," Kramer said.

Airlift continues to starving Somalia

Mortar attack kills three Associated Press photo

Mortar attack kills three Bosnian militiamen and civilians carry a victim of a mortar attack over Sarajevo's Marechal Tito Boulevard Friday. Three mortar shells slammed into Sarajevo's main boulevard as residents emerged after a night of shelling to search for bread and water. An witness said he saw at least three people killed. The attack followed some of the heaviest shelling in weeks over the Bosnian capital.

MOMBASA, Kenya — The United States prepared to airlift flour and beans to starving Somalis after Kenya today lifted a brief ban on American flights over its airspace.

The aid effort, involving about 100 U.S. troops including Green Berets, comes as officials are warning that half of Somalia's children risk death from starvation because of drought and civil war. Hundreds are said to be dying daily.

Kenya had accused Washington of flying into the port city Mombasa without its permission and late Thursday withdrew permission for U.S. planes to fly over its territory.

Agreement to again permit the flights resulted from negotiations this morning between President Daniel arap Moi, U.S. Ambassador Smith Hempstone and Frank Libutti, the Marine brigadier general commanding the U.S. aid airlift.

Kenyan Foreign Minister Wilson Ndolo Ayah said the earlier flight ban resulted from a misunderstanding. "This was a complex effort organized on short notice and some details were not adequately worked out in advance," the foreign minister said.

A team of 16 U.S. soldiers was flown today to a military airstrip outside Wajir, in northeastern Kenya, to set up a communications station that will direct aid flights.

Libutti said a C-130 Hercules carrying food would leave today for Wajir, but the plane had not been loaded by mid-afternoon and was likely to be delayed.

From Wajir, the 10 tons of wheat flour, vegetable oil, beans and grain delivered by the plane will be distributed to some of the 11 refugee camps on or near the Kenya-Somali border.

More than 400,000 people are housed in the camps, 330,000 of them Somalis who have fled the famine, war and anarchy that have claimed tens and perhaps hundreds of thousands of lives in their country.

The first American flight into Somalia itself was expected late next week to the town of Baidoa, one of the hardest hit communities.

The United Nations last week agreed to send 500 troops to Somalia to protect aid shipments.

Rare flowers are springing up across Britain

By POLLY GHAZI
London Observer Service

LONDON — Rare orchids and grasses are spreading across Britain as hot, dry summers herald the beginnings of a transformation to a Continental climate.

The lizard orchid, rampant in the wine-growing regions of France, is one of Britain's rarest plants. It can take up to 20 years to germinate and flower.

Yet in the past six years the number of flowering plants have tripled from 962 to 3,000, and it has spread from isolated pockets in Kent and Cambridgeshire to establish new colonies in Dorset and Somerset.

At one Kent site, nature wardens have recently abandoned a 24-hour watch after a handful of precious plants multiplied dramatically.

Similarly the grass-bearded fescue, whose world population was previously limited to southeast England, has astonished botanists by suddenly appearing in Devon and mid-Wales. Since 1988, its numbers have exploded from a few hundred to around 10,000.

Ecologists at the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology at Monks Wood, keepers of Britain's national wildlife database, believe the plants provide the first signs that climate change is affecting wild plants. They're using the two species to set up a computer model to predict how global warming may transform the traditional countryside.

Dr. Peter Carey, who is helping run the project, said that if the record warm winters and hot summers of the late 1980s continued, the lizard orchid could spread as far as Somerset and Yorkshire.

The grass-bearded fescue, which only grows in loose, open sandy soils, with little plant cover, produces seeds early in May and June, thriving during droughts which decimate many of its competitors.

CDC asking for schools' help

ATLANTA — Schools must do more to teach nutrition and fitness because teen-agers are eating too much fat and not enough fruits and vegetables, federal health officials said.

On Thursday, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said a survey of high school students in 33 school systems last year found most are not eating properly or exercising enough. There were 77,000 students at the schools; an average of 12,270 students answered each question.

"Schools need to offer comprehensive health education," said Dr. Laura Kann of the CDC's Center for Disease Prevention and Health Promotion. "The exercise and nutrition behaviors that are established in youth are the types of behaviors they'll practice in adulthood."

High-fat diets and a lack of exercise put adults at high risk for heart disease and cancer.

National health objectives for the year 2000 call for at least 50 percent of students to participate in daily physical education classes and for students to reduce dietary fat consumption.

The American Cancer Society calls for at least 35 percent of high school students to eat five or more servings of fruits and vegetables daily and for 80 percent to eat no more than two high-fat foods daily.

The CDC said last year's survey found only six school systems where at least half the students said they attended physical-education classes every day. At least 50 percent of the students in all 33 systems did say they exercised at least 20 minutes when they were in class.

None of the school systems met the fruit-and-vegetable recommendation. Schools in San Francisco, Hawaii and Pennsylvania came the closest, with 18 percent.

And only Virgin Islands students met the last recommendation, with 83 percent reporting they ate low-fat foods.

The survey involved 10 big-city school systems and 23 others in 20 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

There were 77,000 students included in the study; an average of 12,270 students answered each question.

BSH salutes:

The Big Spring Herald, each week, recognizes local persons and groups who have been singled out for special honors or who have helped make a difference in the quality of life in and around our community.

- Howard College officials who, under the leadership of President Cheri Sparks, reactivated the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf Advisory Committee. The committee, which had been deactivated seven years ago, will be comprised of seven leaders in the deaf community from a geographic cross-section of the Southwest.

- Howard County residents who have become involved in the Permian Basin AIDS Coalition. The first Howard County volunteers meeting was held Thursday night.

- Volunteers who stopped to assist a family whose vehicle had rolled over north of Big Spring earlier this week. The volunteer spirit of West Texas helped a family traveling through our area make it through the initial trauma of the crash.

- Educators and students as they return to the classroom for yet another school year. The students are the future of our community and nation and our educators help prepare them to compete in the business world.

- The Parental Involvement Program of the Big Spring Independent School District. The program is designed to get parents involved in classroom activities at the schools attended by their children.

- Individuals and businesses who have helped circulate petitions in the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce petition drive to keep Big Spring State Recreation Area open.

A true non-believer of GOP party line

Oh! Praise be!
The Republicans told me that if we keep doing the same things we've been doing for the last 12 years, everything will be fine — thank God! I was getting worried.

I understand now! All this poverty, unemployment and increasing separation between the ultra-wealthy and the actual citizenry, is necessary before the real wealth begins to trickle down and make every single mother a princess in her own home.

Trickle down — I get it! We make these Wall Street rapists richer than the Archangel of Liquid Capital, and we'll all be sitting on an easy street! I get it!

Trickle down, get it? Trickle down. Sure!

Oh, happy days are here again. The stars at night appear again. Da da da da da, da da da da — Happy days are here again!

I'm sorry, but I don't buy this stuff. Not after the last twelve years.

While I fully believe what I say, the moderate might want to take into account that, politically, I stand just to the left of say — the guy that guillotined Marie Antoinette during the French Revolution.

I equate politics and tuna fish. I know this is a weird analogy, but I'm in a weird mood:

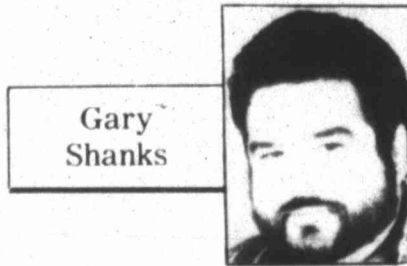

Tuna are great big fish that put up a heck of a fight on a fishing line. But we eat tiny portions of these fish, sealed in minuscule cans without ever seeing the whole animal.

The middle class, which does most of the work, gets tiny portions of one of the world's largest gross national products.

The top 5 percent of the population controls more than half of the country's money and produce almost nothing. Rather, they play their galactic poker games on Wall Street and the British and Japanese exchange markets.

So, thanks to 12 years of Republicanism, the top 5 percent are richer, more taxes are placed on the middle class and the lower class is growing larger and poorer.

While we're working, eating tuna sandwiches and trying to make ends meet, the pinnacle of Republicanism is off the coast of Florida fishing for albacore and complaining about the Democratic Congress.

Gary Shanks

Let's end this week's offering with some quotes from the last 12 years. These come from my handy book, "Political Babble," by David Olive. Many of the quotes I remember and I'm taking Olive's word on some of them:

- "We have every kind of mixture you can have. I have a black, I have a woman, two Jews and a cripple." The statement that eventually forced Reagan cabinet member James Watt to resign.
- "We think there is a parallel between federal involvement in education and the decline in profit over recent years," Ronald Reagan, 1983.

- "I'm for Mr. Reagan — blindly," then Vice-President George Bush.

- "Trees cause more pollution than automobiles," Ronald Reagan.

- "I hope I stand for anti-bigotry, anti-Semitism, anti-racism. That is what drives me," George Bush.

- "At least he didn't offend Italians by declaring himself antipasto," Mario Cuomo on the Bush statement.

- "One person described me as the Boris Yeltsin of American politics. I liked that," Republican gubernatorial hopeful and former KKK member David Duke.

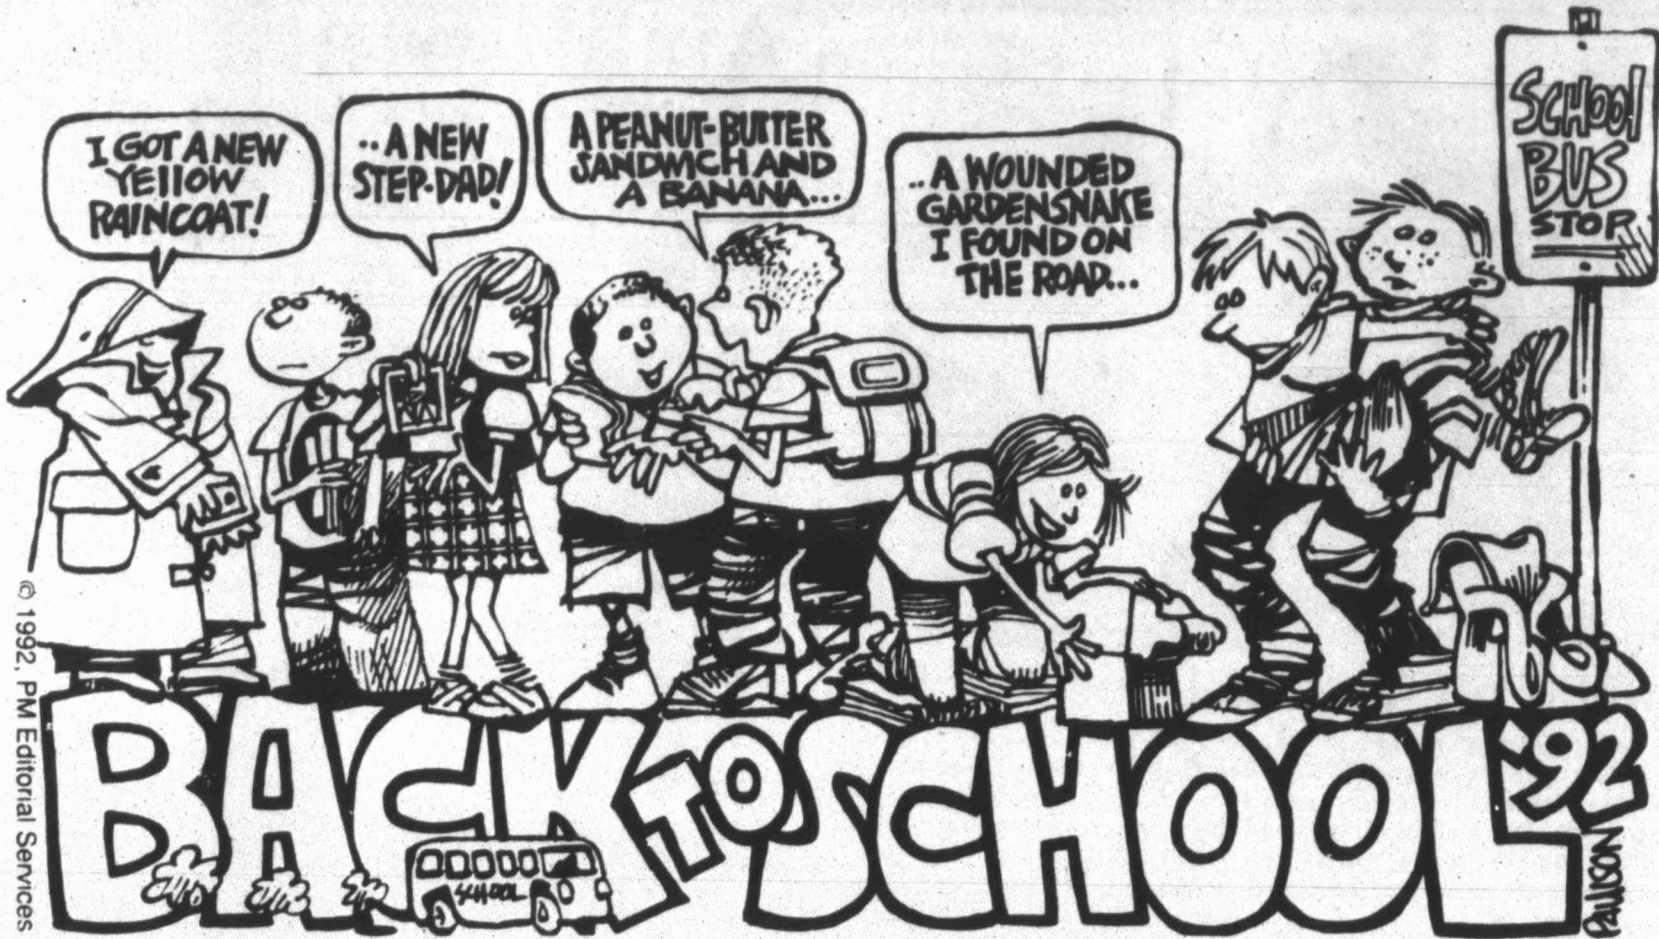

- "Pat (Buchanan) is going to win. I'm going to see to it. I don't care where I have to break in," G. Gordon Liddy.

- "Read my lips — No new taxes," George Bush.

- "The recession will be mild and the whole country will come out of it in not too many months from now," George Bush, Jan. 1991.

- "I probably have made mistakes in assessing the fact that the economy would recover. I think I've known, look, this economy is in a free-fall," George Bush, Jan. 1992.

- "I think, unfortunately, I had to be the target, that this bimbo thing was going to be applied to men someday, and I hate it," Dan Quayle. Later folks.

Kids always have a prayer in school

Every day I learn something new about "traditional family values," one of this year's trendiest political issues.

My latest lesson came from Charles Black, a senior adviser to the Bush campaign.

He told a gathering at the Republican Convention that family values include the right of children to have voluntary prayer in public schools.

This surprised me, since I thought that children already had that right. And that they have always had it.

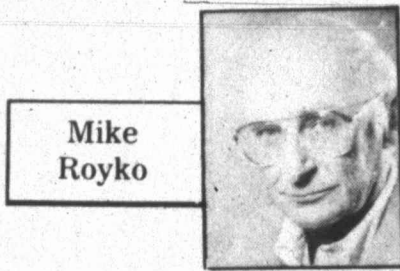

When I was a lad in public schools, it was not uncommon for some of us to sit and offer up silent prayers that Mrs. Purvis would not call on us to answer questions about the reading assignment because we hadn't read it.

I know for a fact that Slat Grobnik prayed all the way through high school that he would have a carnal experience before he reached the age of 30.

So when school begins this year, millions of public school children will be praying. Some will pray that they don't get pimples. Others that they will pass an algebra test.

True, under our laws, the teachers can't lead the children in formal, organized prayer, or set aside time for this purpose. But why should they? For all a parent knows, that teacher might be a member of a secret cult that worships parking meters or some such false idol. Is that the kind of person they want giving their child religious guidance?

And it is especially difficult at a time when churches of all faiths have fallen upon hard times, with collections and donations down because of the recession and the flighty nature of today's young people. Are Republicans in favor of churches shutting down and preachers being put out of work because of unfair competition from the schools?

Besides, any theologian will tell you that for a prayer to be valid, it isn't necessary for it to be uttered aloud at a given time or place, including the schools.

I recently discussed this with Dr. I.M. Kookie, a noted expert on a lot of stuff, including religion.

He said: "No, you don't have to pray out loud. In fact, it is better if you don't."

Why is that?

"Well, what if you are praying that the teacher will let you go to the bathroom so you can sneak a smoke? You wouldn't want her to hear you say that, would you?"

I suppose not. But what about the proper demeanor while praying? Is it necessary for your head to be bowed, your hands clasped, and the prayer whispered or muttered?

"Not at all. You can pray while looking at the ceiling with your eyes crossed. Or while you are hanging upside down on the monkey bars in the schoolyard. The Lord won't mind."

How do you know he won't mind?

"Because he hasn't said she minds. And until he sends word, it must be OK. And if she minded, why did he make some people cross-eyed and create monkey bars?"

That's true. But I notice you refer to the Lord as he and as she. Can you explain that?

"Sure. We are created in his image, right?"

So it is said. "Well, that can mean a lot of things. Maybe he looks like you: bald, a little overweight, a big beak, beady eyes with bags under them."

I'd be flattered. "Or maybe the Lord looks like Jane Fonda."

An interesting thought. "Or a New York bag lady."

An even more interesting thought.

"How about a midget?"

Possibly, but I can't picture the Lord as a midget, especially if he is wielding his mighty and swift sword.

"It could be a little sword. But for the sake of this discussion, let us assume that the Lord looks like Ronald Reagan."

That would please Republicans. "OK, a nice-guy Lord, and he is sitting up there in his heavenly quarters, a California-style mansion with a good view of the universe. And one of his aides comes in and drops a stack of prayer memos on his desk for him to answer. He picks up the top memo and looks at it. It is from a kid who is praying that the school lunch is not the same old bland macaroni and cheese. But the memo says that the kid was picking his nose when he silently made the prayer. Now, what do you think the Lord is going to say?"

Use a handkerchief, I would imagine.

"Nah, what kind of understanding is that? He would know that kids can be disgusting little buggers because he made them that way. So if it is a Ronald Reagan kind of Lord, he gives a little chuckle and says: 'I don't like bland macaroni and cheese myself. Switch that kid's lunch to pizza.'"

Do you really believe that?

"Why not? Unless the Lord is black, in which case he might make it fried chicken. Of course, if the Lord is a black Democratic liberal, that would mean he believes in political correctness and would not order up fried chicken because that is a stereotype, even though it tastes better than macaroni and cheese. But there are other possibilities."

Such as?

"Maybe he or she isn't listening. So it wouldn't matter if the kid prays silently or if the whole class jumps up and down and yells hallelujah. They're stuck with the macaroni and cheese, which might explain why school lunches taste the way they do."

Do you think that is possible that he isn't listening?

"Well, they start off these political convention sessions with a prayer, don't they?"

I believe so.

"And what do they pray for?"

Wisdom. Yes, wisdom has always been in demand. "I think that answers your question."

The Writer's Art

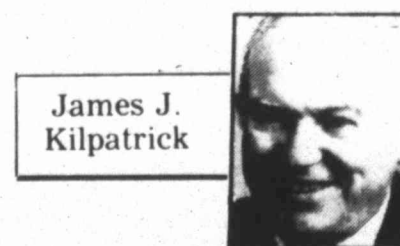

It's close mister, but no cee-gar

At one time the midway attractions at a state fair included a game of test-your-strength. Brawny farm boys would try mightily to beat the machine, only to have the presiding con artist console them: "Close, mister, but no cee-gar."

So it goes with writers who try for the unusual word or the killing metaphor. They come close, but they miss, and some of the misses can be disastrous.

A writer in Irish America Magazine for December-January turned out a profile on Prime Minister Charles J. Haughey, a wealthy politician whose style is going out of style. One of Haughey's supporters described him as "the greatest leader we have ever had." He is in control of everything. "He is like a great octopus and his tentacles reach all over the country." Close, mister, but no cee-gar.

A train of thought takes us to Logan, Ohio, where the Daily News in May ran a photo of the nearly completed gazebo in Washington Park. The final touch was "a beautiful white copula." That's a copula, pal, a word that dates from the 16th century, describing a small, dome-like structure that serves as a belfry. An obituary writer for the

James J. Kilpatrick

Asheville (N.C.) Citizen-Times had a similar problem in April. A local church leader had died at 81.

"His book, 'They Walk With Angels,' is a copulation of hundreds of stories related to him by the church's evangelists." Let us pass that one in silence.

The train of thought runs on to Denver, where the Neighborhood News in May looked forward to a visit by Pope John Paul in 1993.

"On the day of his arrival, the pontiff is expected to celibate Mass at Immaculate Conception Cathedral." Celebrate, maybe?

Onward to Lafayette, La., for a story about Class B day care centers. Such centers are not required to have liability insurance. Moreover, "they can administer capital punishment." Well, it's one way to get rid of troublesome brats, but corporal punishment seems a little more humane.

In Marshall, Texas, in June, a woman walked in to the newsroom of the News Messenger and gave managing editor Mike McNeill a $20 bill. She had stolen some newspapers many years ago. Her conscience was hurting, and she wanted to make "a sincere gesture of attrition." That was CON-trition she was making.

In Spartanburg, S.C., a controversy developed over James B. Holderman, former president of the University of South Carolina.

The university's board wanted to strip the departed executive of his title of "distinguished president emeritus," but board member Louis Sossamon objected. The Herald-Journal reported that he felt the motion was "just an act of vindication" on the part of the board chairman. Alas, "vindication" isn't even close to "vindictiveness," so no cee-gar.

A letter writer to The Seattle Times objected to the newspaper's criticism of cable TV. She said that Times critic Don Hannula had taken cable companies to task "in his own inimitable style." Maybe the adjective was intended, for "inimical" means "adverse in tendency or effect, unfavorable, harmful, unfriendly, hostile," but two will get you five that the correspondent was trying to hit "inimitable" and missed.

Along the same line, an arts writer for the San Antonio Express-News covered the opening of "Les Miserables," with its elaborate stage sets. The effect had been satirized "by the irrelevant 'Forbidden Broadway' at the Alamo City Theater." Three will get you 10 that the critic was after "irreverent" instead.

The Florence (S.C.) Morning News provided an interesting image in June. A local plant was going out of business. "To soften the blow to the area's unemployment rate, the plant's 130 workers will be laid off in staggering numbers." Way to go!

In the spring of 1991, President George Bush was riding high. The Portland Oregonian wondered how the chief would use his "bludgeoning popularity" on the domestic front. The adjective was prophetic. What was burgeoning then is getting bludgeoned now.

For the record: "burgeon" dates from the 14th century, meaning to bud or sprout. "Bludgeon" appears in 1730, origin unknown. Someone just looked at a short and ugly club and said, my, that looks like a bludgeon to me. Thus are good words born.

MORAL: Horrible things happen in prose composition when writers fail to read their copy closely. So pay attention! You may yet win a syntactical cee-gar.

Steers defense impressive

LAMESA — After Big Spring's first football scrimmage of 1992, Steer coach Dwight Butler says he'll sleep better at night.

And for the most part, that sleep will come because of the Steer defense, which Butler said showed signs of progress in the team's two touchdowns to one controlled scrimmage victory over Lamesa Thursday night.

"(The defense) is a lot further along in their schemes than we thought they'd be this early," Butler said. "They played together as a unit real well. They may be our strong point (this year)."

Butler cited senior defensive linemen Jessie Leos and Marcus Yanez, linebackers Torbin Lancaster and Clint Kemper, and backs Mike Oliva, Todd Parrish and Josh Jones as "real bright spots" on defense.

As is typical with football teams this time of year, the Steer offense is behind the defense. Butler sees some talent there, but the execution is still lacking. Much of that is because only two starters from last year — receiver Pat Martinez and lineman T.L. Rogers — played with the first unit.

"We had some screw-ups but it was real encouraging," he said. "We had running backs that missed holes and linemen that missed blocks and receivers that dropped balls."

Two encouraging signs to come out of the scrimmage offensively were the play of running back Lonnie Jackson and the team's 70-yard touchdown drive on the game's last series.

Jackson, a 155-pound junior,

Big Spring Steers senior running back Duane Edmonds (25) scrambles for extra yardage against the Lamesa Tornados in scrimmage action Thursday night.

replaced the injured Duane Edmonds and scored on a long run for the Steers' first touchdown. Edmonds has a jammed right thumb.

Stacey Martin capped a 70-yard drive on the Steers' last possession with a three-yard touchdown run. Butler said the team was starting to get tired on that series and he was impressed with the stamina they showed.

"We found out we have more running backs than we thought we would," Butler said. "Our running game may be better off than (it) was last year, passing is going to take a little more time."

The coach said two touchdowns were dropped in the 100 play scrimmage. The first and second units each played for about half the scrimmage. Coaches did not keep statistics of the game.

"We definitely have problems we need to improve on, but if you look at it from an overall point of view, we're pretty excited," Butler said.

Next Friday the Steers go against Midland High at 7:30 at Blankenship Field in Big Spring. It will be the team's second and last scrimmage of the year. The last quarter of the scrimmage will be live if Midland coaches agree to it. The Steers season begins Sept. 4 at Levelland.

Butler said the team will work in stunts and more coverages on defense and add formations and try to get into their one-back set on offense.

Returning starting tight end Oscar Cervantes is recovering from a broken ankle and is expected to return to practice this week.

Former Howard assistant lands job at Texas Tech

STAFF and WIRE REPORT

— Former Howard College assistant coach Greg Pinkney has been named as an assistant to Texas Tech men's basketball coach James Dickey.

Pinkney coached at Howard in 1990 and 1991, when the Hawks went 54-10, winning the WJAC and Region V titles. The first season he coached under Steve Green. Last year he coached under present Howard coach Jeff Kidder.

Pinkney is in Amarillo and couldn't be reached for comment. "I am pleased and excited about Greg joining our coaching staff," Dickey said. "His enthusiasm and experience at successful programs will be a positive addition to our team."

Howard Athletic Director Royce Chadwick said the deal was finalized Thursday. "I knew they had been in negotiations, but the work wasn't finalized until yesterday," said Chadwick.

Chadwick said with the recent school budget cuts, Pinkney had indicated that he wasn't returning to Howard. "Greg had been out looking for a job, he wasn't going to stay for the money we were offering," said Chadwick. "He had turned over his job duties a long time ago."

"I think it's great that a Howard College coach is able to leave and get a job at Texas Tech. That says something about our program."

Pinkney, 29, began his career as a graduate assistant at

GREG PINKNEY

Wayland Baptist University in 1986. In 1988 he moved to Chipola Junior College in Marianna, Fla. He then worked at West Texas State from 1988-89 and Howard College in 1990-91.

Chadwick said Ronnie Dean of St. Louis will become the new men's assistant coach at Howard. "Coach Dean is already down here and has accepted the job. The contract won't be finalized until next week."

Chadwick said Dean will be a full-time assistant, proctor of the men's dorm and monitor of the cafeteria.

Pinkney is originally from Troy, Ala., where he played high school basketball at Charles Henderson.

This Bird was definitely a rare breed

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Larry Bird left the NBA the way he came in — speaking bluntly, telling jokes and wearing a casual shirt while the bigwigs around him wore suits and ties.

To the end, he was his own man. His fame, fortune and basketball feats grew in the past 13 years. The core of his personality didn't change as the "hick from French Lick" became "Larry Legend."

He still valued loyalty and hard work. He shunned the spotlight. No appearances on hip late-night talk shows for this Indiana country boy. "I make my own decisions," he declared at his farewell news conference last Tuesday, "and I stick by them."

He turned down endorsement after endorsement no matter how others tried to remake an intensely private person into a marketing machine. Why all the fuss over what he called "a regular guy" who "played basketball for a living," he wondered.

Bird, the player, was sensational. Some think Bird, the man, was just as impressive. "I admire Larry Bird more than any human being I've ever met," says Bob Woolf, his attorney and next-door neighbor. "because of his character, because of his integrity, because of his principles, because of his values, because of his work ethic, because of a myriad of things he's done that you want to kiss him for."

"I've always had the utmost admiration for Larry Bird's complete attitude toward the game. The way he approached it, the way he played hurt, the way he was self-motivated. He knew what he wanted in life and he knew what it would take to get there," Boston Celtics President Red Auerbach.

They all turned out when Bird announced his retirement from the Boston Celtics because of back problems — the three team owners, Celtics president Red Auerbach, senior executive vice president Dave Gavitt, coach Chris Ford after taking the red-eye in from Colorado, Woolf and Bird after driving in together from nearby Brookline.

They were dressed to kill. All except Bird. He wore a golf-style shirt with black, red, white and blue vertical stripes. With a conservative — some say cheap — approach to his finances, he was asked if he might use his riches to buy part of the Celtics.

"They didn't pay me enough money," the small-town boy tweaked the boardroom veterans who pay his salary. It echoed his playful mood 13 years earlier at another news conference where it was announced he had signed his first contract with the Celtics.

"Don't tell Mr. Auerbach," Bird joked, "but I'd have played for nothing."

He didn't wear a tie then either. "He's certainly become more sophisticated," Woolf said. "He's met all kinds of people, but basically he's exactly the same human being" who came out of little-known Indiana State University to the most famous NBA team in history.

There was the Chicago news conference in 1979 when he received a College Player of the Year award. He asked if a reporter who had written an article he didn't like was present because he wanted to see what a (expletive deleted) looks like.

He has refined his public language since then. He is a much more polished and relaxed speaker. But his bluntness persists. "I'll take a few questions and get out of here and you guys will never have to bother me again," Bird said at his retirement news conference, trying to sugarcoat his instinctive aversion to sharing himself with strangers.

Humor also helped keep the public from seeing the depth of his emotion that day. "The reason I get up here and try to make jokes is to keep myself from crying," he said.

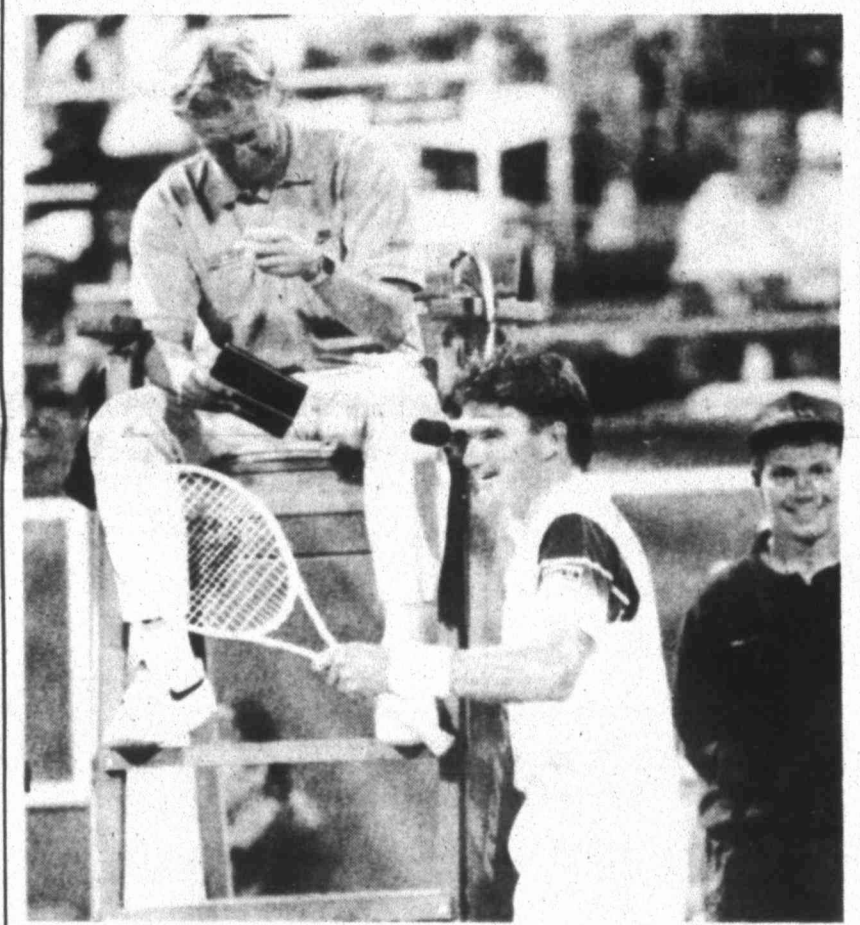

And he was typically direct: "It didn't take me very long to realize that I was going to be a great player in this league."

He has this reputation: It is difficult to gain his trust, but once you do, he is fiercely loyal. During summers, he went back home to French Lick, to his roots, his people. He wasn't such a big celebrity there.

Last January, Bird was in a hospital to see team physician Arnold Scheller. Legendary Celtics broadcaster Johnny Most was in the same hospital after having his legs amputated.

"He came to visit me," Most says. "I got all choked up over it. That meant a tremendous amount to me. The right guy was encouraging me. Bird is a clever ballplayer and yet he found time to be a human being."

"If you're an underdog," Woolf said, "you're Larry Bird's best friend."

Notre Dame LB under fire

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame linebacker Demetrius DuBose had nothing to say about reports he accepted a loan from a university alumni couple who live in his hometown of Seattle.

Notre Dame, reluctantly, did. After a day-long silence, the athletic department issued a statement late Thursday admitting a violation occurred.

Under an NCAA procedure, Notre Dame declared DuBose ineligible "a number of weeks ago," then requested to have his eligibility restored because of "the unique facts present in this case." The statement, quoting athletic director Dick Rosenthal, who was out of town, did not elaborate on those facts.

Rosenthal took issue with the size of the loan, saying it was only $600, not the $5,000 in the original Los Angeles Times story. He said DuBose believed the loan was not a violation because he had known the couple before he attended Notre Dame.

"We do not feel it is appropriate to comment further until the NCAA eligibility staff renders its expected decision next week," he said.

A's rally for victory

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Oakland Athletics' swagger is back. So is their domination of the American League West.

"Last year is behind us," said Carney Lansford, whose three-run homer in the ninth inning gave Oakland an 8-6 victory over the New York Yankees Thursday night. "That wasn't, in my opinion, the real Oakland A's. There were so many injuries."

On Thursday, though, they looked like the old A's.

Held to one run through 6 2-3 innings by rookie Sam Miltello, they cut a 6-1 deficit to 6-5 when Jose Canseco greeted reliever John Habyan with a grand slam. Lansford, just 5 for 36 against New York this season, connected in the ninth off Steve Farr (1-2). It was Oakland's fifth win in 49 tries when trailing after eight innings.

AL

Rangers 6, White Sox 1
Rookie Roger Pavlik lost his shutout with only one strike to go, but won the game in Chicago for his first major league victory.

Pavlik (1-1), who gave up six runs and retired only one batter in his last start against Detroit, pitched a six-hitter for his first complete game. The only run he allowed came on George Bell's 20th homer on an 0-2 pitch with two outs in the ninth inning.

Juan Gonzalez hit his 31st home run for Texas and Brian Downing had a three-run shot, his 15th. Both blows came against Charlie Hough (5-10).

Indians 2, Twins 1
Paul Sorrento, traded from Minnesota to Cleveland earlier this year, doubled home the winning run with one out in the 10th inning. The Indians completed a three-game sweep at home and sent the Twins to their season-worst fifth straight loss.

Brewers 16, Blue Jays 3
A traffic jam on the highway leading to County Stadium prompted officials to delay the game's start for 20 minutes. Once it began, the 34,702 fans saw Robin Yount and the Brewers clog the bases in their highest-scoring game of the season.

Orioles 2, Mariners 1
Mike Devereaux tripled home the tying run in the eighth inning, then hit a sacrifice fly in the 10th to win it at Camden Yards.

Angels 2, Red Sox 0
Bert Blyleven earned his 286th career victory as four California pitchers blanked Boston on six hits at Fenway Park.

Blyleven (7-5) gave up three hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Expos snatch win from Braves

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Atlanta Braves were three outs away from their 21st shutout of the season and a seven-game lead in the National League West when everything went wrong.

Slow-footed Tim Wallach hit a game-tying double in the ninth and then scored from second base on a ground ball to third as the Montreal Expos rallied to defeat the Braves 3-2 Thursday night at Olympic Stadium.

Marquis Grissom and Larry Walker opened the Expos' ninth with singles. Alejandro Pena (1-6) then relieved Steve Avery and Moises Alou's sacrifice moved the runners to second and third. Wallach's double over the head of speedy center fielder Deion Sanders scored two runs, tying the game.

Pirates 7, Padres 1
At Three Rivers Stadium, Danny Jackson (6-11) gave up five hits in seven innings and Lloyd McClendon homered as Pittsburgh completed a three-game sweep of San Diego.

NL

The Pirates, winners of 16 of their last 20, were 0-6 against San Diego entering the series. The Padres lost their fifth straight to finish their road trip 2-6.

McClendon hit a solo homer in the second inning, his second of the season and first in 138 at-bats. He added a run-scoring single after Andy Van Slyke's RBI triple in the Pirates' two-run sixth against Craig Lefferts (12-8).

Cubs 6, Giants 5
At Candlestick Park, Andre Dawson drove in four runs with a pair of two-out hits and Jose Vizcaino tripled twice and drove in Chicago's other two runs.

San Francisco scored twice in the ninth before pinch-hitter Mike Felder popped up with runners on first and third to end the game. Felder was batting in Will Clark's spot after Clark was ejected in the eighth inning for arguing a play at first base.

Cardinals 3, Astros 1
At Busch Memorial Stadium, Bob Tewksbury (13-5) allowed four hits in eight innings and Bernard Gilkey snapped a tie with a home run to lead off the sixth inning.

It was the 23rd game in a 26-game, 28-day road trip for the Astros, who were forced out of the Astrodome by the Republican National Convention. Houston dropped two of three to St. Louis and is 9-14 on the trip.

Gilkey hit a 3-2 pitch from Butch Henry (4-9) over the left-field wall for his fourth home run, breaking a 1-1 tie.

Mets 11, Dodgers 4
At Dodger Stadium, Bobby Bonilla and Mackey Sasser helped pull New York out of a scoring drought with consecutive homers in a four-run fourth.

The Mets won for only the second time in 14 games and ended a five-game losing streak, as Sid Fernandez (10-9) won for the first time in five starts since July 24.

New quarterback after starting quarterback job for Chargers

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Stan Humphries knows he has the opportunity to be a starting quarterback on opening day. Steve Young and Steve Bono want their chance, too.

Humphries, acquired from the Washington Redskins last week, will make his San Diego debut against the San Francisco 49ers tonight in an exhibition game. He has his sights on filling the vacancy created by a knee injury that knocked John Friesz out for the season.

"I've been in a limbo for a year and a half now, and I'm tired of that," said Humphries, who did not play at all last year. "I'm ready to get out and play some football."

Although he spent last season watching Mark Rypien instead of playing, Humphries feels he benefited from being part of the Redskins' drive to the Super Bowl championship.

Chargers coach Bobby Ross said Humphries will play in the second quarter and at least part of the third, logging some time with the first unit. Bob Gagliano, who went most of the way last week, will start and Pat O'Hara will finish.

The 49ers have their own quarterback dilemma.

Joe Montana, who hasn't thrown a football since July 27 after missing all last season, expressed hope after a MRI exam Wednesday that he may be able to return for San Francisco's season opener Sept. 6 against the New York Giants. The test showed reduced swelling in the elbow, which underwent surgery last Oct. 9 to repair a torn tendon.

Young and Bono, who both played well last season in Montana's absence, are waiting to see how healthy he is. Against the Chargers, San Francisco plans to play Young and Bono for 1 1/2 quarters each with Bill Musgrave finishing the game.

Connors in quarterfinals

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Nobody wants to lose to an old guy like Jimmy Connors. Especially Boris Becker, who's fighting his way out of a summer slump.

The two play for the first time in five years in today's quarterfinals of the U.S. Hardcourts.

"It's always an experience to play Jimmy," Becker said. "For many tennis players, he's the idol. Also for me."

History is on Becker's side. He's never lost to Connors in four previous meetings, with the last victory coming at Queen's Club in London in 1987.

"He beat all the guys fairly easy in his last three matches," Becker said. "He must be playing excellent tennis right now. I just have to get my act together."

Becker has played only five hardcourt matches since March. He hasn't made a quarterfinal in any tournament since Wimbledon, where he lost to eventual champion Andre Agassi in five sets.

No. 3 Pete Sampras is in the same half of the draw as Becker and Connors. The defending champion advanced Thursday with a 6-4, 7-5 victory over local favorite Todd Witsken.

Top-seeded Jim Courier dismissed Swedish qualifier David Engel 7-6 (7-2), 6-2 Thursday. He has an easier path to the final, with all the seeds except No. 6 Francisco Clavet of Spain already out.

Other winners were Brett Steven of New Zealand, Todd Martin and wild card Thomas Enqvist of Sweden.

Yet Becker is the favorite here. And Connors is cast in his usual role of an aging superstar forever in search of one more major upset.

"It's a lot of pressure on the young guys to play me," Connors said. "Nobody wants to lose to someone who's 40. I know I didn't. That's a tough thing."

Actually, Connors doesn't turn 40 until Sept. 2. His legs aren't what they used to be, but his heart is.

"I don't think many want it as much as I do — still," he said.

He proved it Thursday in a 6-3, 6-2 upset of 12th-seeded Wayne Ferreira of South Africa. Connors dismantled a player 19 years younger in just over an hour.

Bush heads out to sell vision

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — President Bush set out today to sell his vision for the next four years after accepting the Republican presidential nomination and promising to cut taxes if given a second term. Rival Bill Clinton countered Bush's convention finale with a promise of jobs to the hurting heartland.

"The question is: Who do you trust to make change work for you?" Bush said in an acceptance speech that framed the fall debate.

With fresh evidence that Bush was getting a convention bounce in the polls to tighten an increasingly hostile White House race, Clinton tried to persuade voters that 12 years of Republican rule — and economics — were enough.

"In 1980, when we began our romance with trickle-down economics, we had the highest wages in the world, now we're 13th," the Democratic nominee said in Michigan. "We've tried it their way, it's time to change."

Both Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle repeatedly blamed Congress for the nation's economic problems in their speeches to the convention. And Quayle returned to the attack today, saying on ABC-TV, "The problem is, we need a new Congress."

Clinton's communications director, George Stephanopoulos, dismissed that tack, saying on CBS-TV today, "George Bush's defense of his economic record was essentially, 'Congress ate my homework.'"

With the nominating conventions over, the Bush-Clinton battle begins in earnest today. Each candidate targeted voters critical to his hopes of victory come Election Day — just 74 days away.

"Join me in our new crusade, to reap the rewards of our global victory — to win the peace," Bush said in a speech punctuated at its conclusion with a mammoth drop of balloons, confetti and indoor fireworks.

"We are the true voice for change," Quayle said in a defiant acceptance speech of his own, delivered with a confident, combative tone missing four years ago.

Bush, with Quayle in tow, was heading to Mississippi, the first stop of his effort to reclaim the South from the Democrats' Dixie tandem of Arkansas Gov. Clinton and Tennessee Sen. Al Gore.

Bush hit the South loaded with the ammunition of his proposal to cut taxes and his disdain for Congress.

"It was a mistake," Bush said of his decision to break his promise four years ago and approve a tax increase.

Bush said spending reductions of $300 billion would finance the tax cuts, but he did not say which programs he would roll back. A top aide said he saw no evidence that Americans wanted this kind of detail.

"Our policies haven't failed; they haven't been tried," Bush said. He called Congress the true obstacle to change.

For those who criticized his first term for its focus on foreign policy, Bush had no apologies. "I saw the chance to rid our children's dreams of the nuclear nightmare — and I did," he said.

New polls showed Bush closing to within single digits of Clinton. The conservative themes of the four-day convention appeared to boost his standing in the South, traditionally the base of Republican presidential victories.

Clinton was starting the day in Detroit campaigning in Detroit, before heading to the Rust Belt on a bus trip with running mate Al Gore. "Clinton is going to make this a great debate on the economy," said Clinton strategist Paul Begala.

The Clinton campaign labeled a broad-based tax cut irresponsible at a time of record deficits. "It's nothing but a blatant attempt to buy this election," said Stephanopoulos.

In an acceptance speech that lasted nearly an hour, Bush pounded away at Clinton and the Democrats.

"Hit him again! Hit him again. Harder harder," the delegates chanted.

"I'm fixin' to," Bush said, and he tested many of his attack lines before the supportive crowd.

Bush described Clinton as big spender, bigger taxer, a product of the Democratic Party's McGovern wing who waffled on whether to support use of force to oust Saddam

Hussein from Kuwait. Or, to hear Bush tell it, even worse:

"We tried this once before, combining the Democratic governor of a small Southern state, with a very liberal vice president and a Democratic Congress. America doesn't need Carter II."

Like Bush, Quayle called for "Congress to get out of the way" and on voters to force them out, borrowing a line from Gore's acceptance speech to make his point. "There is only one thing to say about the spend-everything, block-everything, know-nothing Democratic Congress: It is time for them to go," Quayle said.

Around Houston, the final day of the convention meant a final day of protests, with three dozen anti-abortion protesters arrested at clinic blockades.

There were parties to the end, too, and as they readied to head home, delegates had kind words for their host city, if a few headaches and hangovers as well.

"It's been a Texas-sized party and Texas-sized fun," said California's Mary Jean Duran.

Texans impressed with Bush's acceptance speech

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Sen. Phil Gramm called it "just the medicine the doctor ordered."

Austin delegate Cynthia Hall says it's "the weapon the Republicans need to fight."

It's not surprising that Texas delegates were unanimous in their support of President Bush's nomination acceptance speech Thursday night which closed the Republican National Convention.

But the fervor of their reaction went beyond the party line.

State Rep. Dianne Delisi of Temple promised to "go stand in every fire ant bed in Central Texas to get this message out."

The delegation applauded Bush for acknowledging problems and the need for change in health care, the economy and taxes. Admitting a mistake in passing a tax increase after asking the country in 1988 to read his lips was bold, said Joyce Hugman, a delegate from Gladewater.

"It was really important when he said he made a mistake to sign the tax bill. We all knew that," Mrs. Hugman said.

Supporters also praised Bush for getting specific on ways to slash the deficit, namely a checkoff for taxpayers to send 10 percent of their fees to pay off the the nation's debt.

PTA officers Yogi Rascon, Karen Wingert and Roslind Davis discuss new goals at the group's cent planning session.

Local PTA sets year's goals

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Encouraging attendance among parents tops the agenda for the local Parent/Teacher Association, said Karen Wingert, city council PTA president.

Officers for the PTA council conducted a meeting this week aimed at outlining activities, setting meeting dates and locations and addressing concerns for the school year.

Wingert said indifference by parents and lack of communication between parents, teachers and PTA officers are obstacles from last year targeted for improvement for the new year.

"A big goal is increased parent and teacher involvement," she said. "In every school you will only find a core of about 10 people who are always involved (in the PTA)."

"Parents aren't really realizing how important it is to be there for their child's education," she said.

Officers, newly elected except the secretary and parliamentarian, gathered on Tuesday to lay the foundation for 1992-93. They are Yolanda Rascon, vice president; Roslind Davis, secretary; Vicky Stanley, treasurer; and Ronnie Moss, parliamentarian.

The group agreed building leadership skills remains a priority among officers.

"It is important to get new officers to leadership training," Wingert said. "We've had the problem in the past where passing along information doesn't always get through."

"This year we want to keep local officers well informed about what's going on ... maintaining everything we've accomplished last year because we've had such good leaders."

Events slated for this year include a series of cultural arts contests in January, an Environmental Protection Agency poster contest in February, and a recruiting effort during Public Schools Week in March.

Local PTA school presidents are Lillian Gross, Bauer Elementary; Donna Chavez, College Heights; Pat Daniel, Kentwood; Teresa Williams, Kindergarten Center; Lilja Lysaght, Moss and Trudy Stovall, Washington Elementary.

The PTA motto this year is "Putting Kids First."

Gentry: It's what God commanded us

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

"God commanded us to go into all parts of the world, telling people about Jesus Christ."

That's how Pam Gentry, daughter of Jerry and Ella Mae Gentry, formerly of Big Spring, describes her reasons for heading out to do missionary work in Africa. Gentry left Thursday for a two-year term in Johannesburg, South Africa.

"God called me as a senior in high school," the 25-year-old said. After that experience, she began considering making the ministry her life's work — possibly as a minister of youth, minister of music or in missionary work.

Gentry must have had her father as a role model. He was most recently the minister of education at First Baptist Church.

The younger Gentry hopes her two-year term may lead to more. "I'm going to try this out and if I like it, I may make it my career," Gentry said. She'll live and work on the compound of the Baptist International Mission Service.

Gentry's main duties will be

serving as secretary to the administrative assistant at the mission office. But she enjoys working with children and plans to moonlight on weekends teaching the local youth.

"I enjoy reading them Bible stories, doing plays and skits, teaching them about the Bible," she said.

In Johannesburg, hearing English is common, as it is second in use only to the country's native language.

Church will restore historic stained glass

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

FREDERICKSBURG — For generations, sunshine has spilled through the stained-glass windows of St. Mary's Catholic Church and showered weddings, baptisms, and Sunday worship with the colors of the rainbow.

The patron saints and guardian angels depicted in the towering windows have quietly ushered parishioners through the rites of life since the early 1900s. Today, those parishioners are returning the favor, ushering the windows into a new life of their own with an extensive restoration.

To the untrained eye, the painfully slow process of restoring the historical windows seems a nearly impossible task. To artisan Dennis Roberts, it is a chore of love.

Roberts, the owner of IHS Studios in Fredericksburg, has made a career out of bringing color back to aged depictions that tell stories of the Scriptures. His latest project, which has taken almost six months and is about two weeks from completion, is the restoration of the 27 windows in St. Mary's, some of them built as long as 84 years ago.

"The condition of some of these windows was really poor," Roberts said. "It's a large restoration process."

Five of the windows above the altar, each 4 feet wide and 12 feet tall, depict saints and angels in vivid colors. The daughter of the contractor who began building the church in 1905 appears in one window with a guardian angel. The son of a founding member of the church is depicted in another. Both children died while work was being done on the church.

Now estimated as being worth as much as half a million dollars, the windows were originally paid for by families as memorials. To pay for the restoration, said architect Stan Klein, also a parishioner, the church had to raise $52,000.

"The parishioners really responded," said Grace DeLoof, who has attended the church for eight years. "I think it's fantastic the way they've supported it."

The windows, most of them intact and kept in their original form, are expected to be finished in mid-August. Klein said the salvation of the colorful pictures is well worth the price.

"The windows are a feature of pride for this congregation," he said. "Losing these windows would have been disastrous."

Once the windows are finished, Roberts said, his studio will install new aluminum frames on the outside, with acrylic shielding. The result, he said, will be as many as 100 more years of life for the windows.

Mother Teresa's influence

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The scene was New York on a recent summer day, but the crowd waiting for Mother Teresa outside Cardinal John O'Connor's residence reminded him of the multitudes that waited for Jesus just for a chance to touch the fringe of his garment.

O'Connor said that as he escorted Mother Teresa to a waiting car, he was stopped by the loud weeping of a woman standing next to a middle-aged blind man.

"All I wanted, the reason I stood here for so long, was for Mother Teresa to touch him. I couldn't get near Mother Teresa, there were so many people," she told the cardinal through her tears.

After pushing through the crowd to bring the blind man close enough to touch Mother Teresa, O'Connor said, "One couldn't begin to describe the joy, the radiance, not only on his face, but on the woman who a moment before had been sobbing uncontrollably."

There is perhaps no modern parallel to Mother Teresa. The slight, 81-year-old woman who has spent her lifetime caring for the poorest of the poor throughout the world evokes a spiritual response by her sheer presence.

Even the sparkling world of the Broadway Ballroom of the Marriott Marquis Hotel in midtown Manhattan was transformed by the woman wearing traditional Indian dress with her hands clasped continuously in prayer.

Before delegates to the Supreme Council Convention of the Knights of Columbus sat down to an expensive steak dinner, they listened raptly to Mother Teresa talk of the joy of picking up a man off the streets, and spending the next three hours picking the worms off him.

"The only thing he said was, 'I lived like an animal, but I'm going to die like an angel,'" Mother Teresa said.

When he died, the man smiled and said, "Sister, I'm going home to God."

What is the secret to an exemplary life of service and charity?

Jesus made it easy, Mother Teresa said. Just follow his call to serve the poor and listen to the words from the 25th chapter of the Gospel of Matthew that will await those who have lived faithful lives:

"Come, O Blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me drink, I was naked and you clothed me, I was sick and you visited me, I was in prison and you came to me."

But for others it is not so easy. As a matter of conscience, Mother Teresa would leave the ballroom before the lavish dinner was served to the Knights. She asks that diners not be held in her honor, preferring instead that the money be used for the poor.

The solution the Knights reached was to go ahead with their dinner but donate an amount over $100,000 equaling the cost of the dinner to Mother Teresa's order.

Within the same Catholic service organization there has been some rumbling in the ranks over the $455,000 salary of Supreme Knight Virgil C. Dechant. Knights officials defend the salary as a modest amount for the executive director of an organization that also runs a large insurance business, but some Knights have deemed it excessive for a religiously based group formed to help widows and orphans.

Recalling the crowds waiting to touch Mother Teresa, O'Connor said in a speech before the Knights that people can see the holiness rooted in poverty.

It is a lesson for people of the cloth and others, he said.

To the degree that religious individuals strip themselves of their reliance on such things as money and emotional reserve, "To that degree do we have credibility with the people."

If anyone would have been qualified to offer words of judgment, it would have been Mother Teresa.

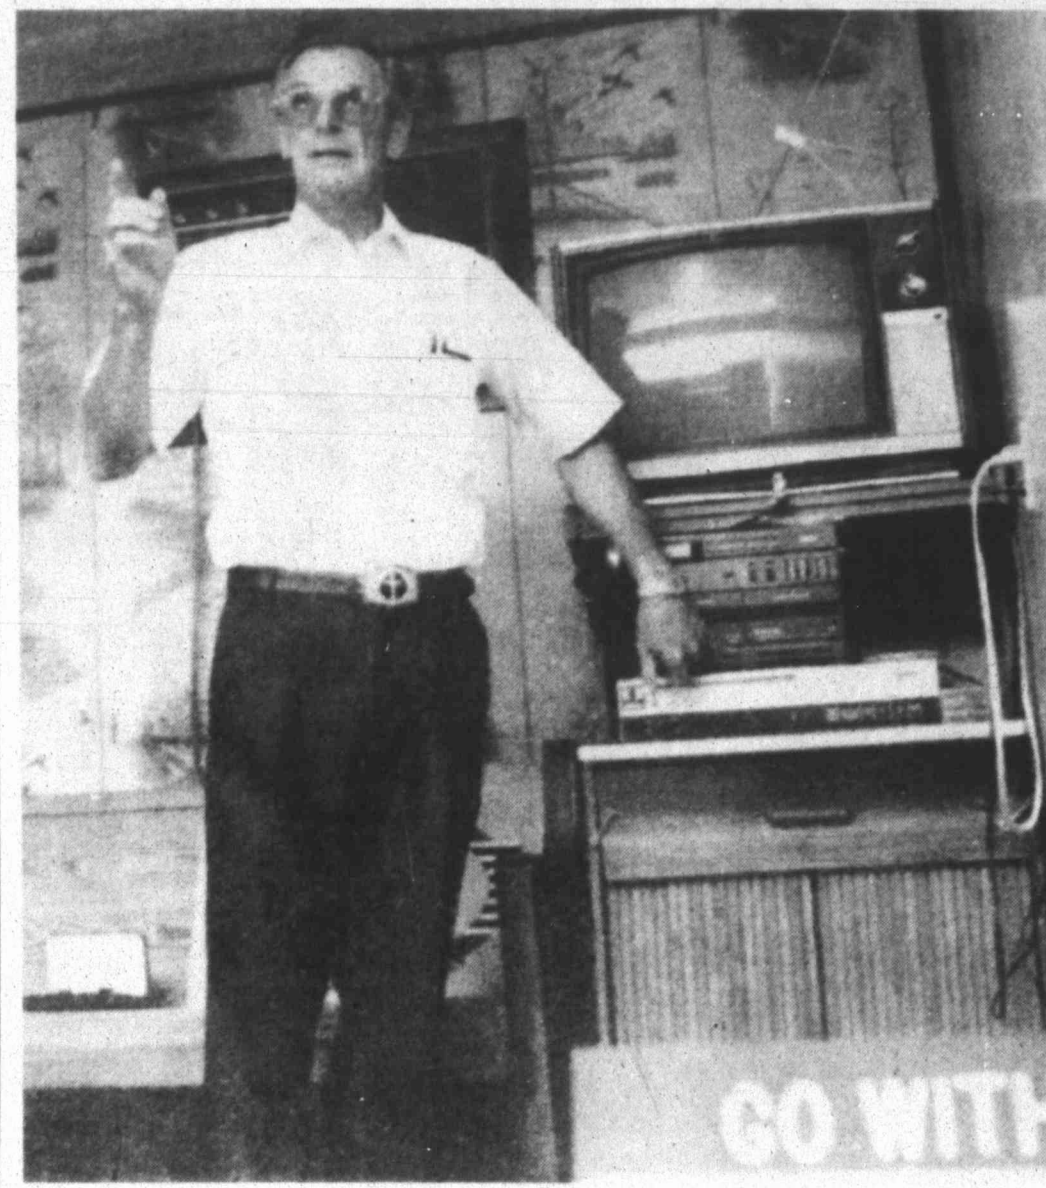

But all she offered were thanks for all the charitable work done by the Knights, and a simple admonition:

"Holiness is not the luxury of the few. It is a simple duty for you and me."

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Clergyman rebukes protesters

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WORCESTER, Mass. — A Roman Catholic clergyman on Tuesday rebuked parishioners who have occupied a church since May to protest its closure.

The Rev. John Barrett, a spokesman for the Worcester diocese, called the protesters "a small group who have illegally occupied the church and do not represent the parishioners at all."

He dismissed them as having "no canonical or legal standing."

Bishop Timothy Harrington of Worcester announced in February he was closing 64-year-old St. Joseph's Church, which the diocese says needs at least $450,000 in repairs for water damage and a chipping brick facade.

Heaven can be entered only through the narrow gate! The highway to hell is broad, and its gate is wide enough for all the multitudes who choose its easy way. But the Gateway to Life is small, and the road is narrow, and only a few ever find it.

Someone asked (Jesus), "Lord, are only a few people going to be saved?" He said to them, "Make every effort to enter through the narrow door, because many, I tell you, will try to enter and will not be able to.

Once the Owner of the house gets up and closes the door, you will stand outside knocking and pleading, "Sir, open the door for us.' But He will answer, 'I don't know you or where you come from.' Then you will say, 'We ate and drank with You, and You taught in our streets.' But He will reply, 'I don't know you or where you come from. Away from Me, all you evildoers!'

There will be weeping there, and gnashing of teeth, when you see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, but you yourselves thrown out. Indeed those who are last will be first, and first who will be last."

So give yourselves humbly to God. Resist the devil and he will flee from you.

Caiaphus inscribed

Archaeologists believe the bones of a 60-year-old man found inside this box may be remains of Caiaphas, the high priest who handed Jesus over to the Romans. An inscription on the 1st century, casket-like box was found in a burial cave outside Jerusalem in November 1990.

How Mary is depicted in modern works of art

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Modern art does not imitate the religious beliefs of many Americans.

In a survey to determine favorite images of Mary, respondents chose familiar portrayals ranging from a Renaissance Madonna to a pre-Raphaelite Madonna and Child.

Modern abstract expressionist art, along with Romanticist art and Byzantine icons, were the least popular among all age groups surveyed by the International Marian Research Institute at Dayton University.

"What we want is God to be as close to us as possible, but still be God; to remain a bridge between divinity and humanity," said the Rev. Johann Roten, institute director.

At a recent Vatican-sponsored conference on religion and modern art, church officials and artists spoke of the difficulty individuals within and without the church have in observing the spiritual side of modern art, which often relies on abstract rather than figurative expressions.

But in the end, a Vatican official said, taste in art still must give way to a "sensus fidelium," or sense of the faithful.

"You can help toward the discernment of art, but you cannot impose your taste on people," Cardinal Paul Poupard, president of the Pontifical Council for Dialogue with Non-Believers, said in an interview. "It is a mysterious give-and-take."

In the survey of adults and high school and college students conducted by the Marian institute, most people gave a thumbs-down approach to modern art.

"The 20th century is a little bit too wild, too harsh, too esoteric for some people," Roten said.

But both Byzantine icons and Romanesque art, which Roten described as sober portrayals often lacking in sweet facial expressions or lots of colors, also ranked at the bottom of individual preferences.

In religious art, people seem to be seeking a combination of the divine and the human that emphasizes the good, the true and the beautiful, rather than the more harsh aspects of judgment and evil that also are part of life.

"What they usually want is something that conveys joy, peace and all the positive feelings one might have," Roten said.

The image of a triumphant Mary, holy, calm and with no difficulties, was particularly popular among the 180 Catholic high school students surveyed. They chose a Baroque Madonna, with images of Mary defeating Satan, as their favorite.

A Renaissance Madonna was the favorite of the 60 college students surveyed at the University of Dayton, reflecting a "move away from the more motherly type of image to a more sisterly type of image," Roten said.

The 60 adults surveyed chose a pre-Raphaelite Madonna and Child, images often found on holy cards and Christmas cards, as their top pick.

But the choices of the images of the human mother and her divine child reflect more than a penchant for the familiar, Roten said.

"It means... that is a sign of incarnation. It is a sign of connection between heaven and Earth," he said.

If there is a universal theme in the centuries-old art favored by the respondents, according to Roten, it is a desire for an ideal image, an image that cannot be grasped immediately but is accessible at some point.

Widower unsure whether okay to wed

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from 1972 and '73.)

DEAR ABBY: Do you think an 80-year-old man is foolish to consider remarriage? Some of my children do. I am a widower who has been alone for 12 years, during which time I have been in the company of some lovely eligible women. But I never have wanted to marry until I met "my fair lady." She is 65 and has been a widow for 10 years.

We are both in reasonably good health, and we would like to spend the rest of our lives together, making each other happy. All our children are married. Some approve of our plans to marry; some do not.

I own my own home and have a little money. In view of the mixed feelings of our children, should we sneak off and get married by a preacher with just a few friends as witnesses? Or should we have a small church wedding, invite all the children, and let those who want to, come, and those who don't, stay home? -- YOUNG AT HEART

DEAR YOUNG: Why "sneak off"? Do whatever pleases you and your fair lady. The last thing you should worry about is what your children think.

DEAR ABBY: You frequently receive letters from long-suffering wives who complain because their husbands have a habit of getting "lost" in bars on their way home from work.

Allow me to suggest a solution that was used with considerable success by one such wife in Omaha:

As was his custom when detained at a bar, the husband telephoned home. The instant he heard his wife on the other end of the line, he began, "Now, honey, before you say anything, I just want to..."

Then he heard his wife's voice speaking in calm, modulated tones, "...When and if you decide to come home, you will find your dinner in the oven. But I won't be here. Don't try to find me. And by the way, go to hell. This is a recording."

The husband rushed home in a panic. The house was dark. The wife's car was missing from the garage.

To his relief, he found his wife in bed! She turned on a light and confirmed that the voice he had heard was no recording -- it was "live."

The missing car? She had parked it around the corner on a side street. "But next time," she said, "it might not be a joke."

So far, there's been no "next time." -- ROBERT MC MORRIS, OMAHA WORLD HERALD

FOR SATURDAY, AUGUST 22, 1992
HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Challenging job responsibilities go hand-in-hand with fabulous financial rewards. Beginning in October, you will be able to do something you never thought possible. Going back to school could boost your earning potential.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Ray Bradbury, actresses Cindy Williams and Valerie Harper, slugger Carl Yastrzemski.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Step back from the spotlight. Your private moments with a loved one will reveal where your relationship is headed. Go through your entire wardrobe before planning any new purchases.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Your talents are a beacon to ambitious people. Resist anyone who tries to use you. Shared business interests bring you closer to a member of the opposite sex.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Forget an important date and you will lose a golden opportunity. Cash is on the way. Face up to the seriousness of a family problem. A candid conversation helps.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A charming associate is waiting for you to say the word. Devote your energies to domestic life. An outrageous opinion could give you an idea you can turn into cash.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take a test today and you will drive away with all the prizes. Discount shopping can help you look chic on a shoestring. Do not try to copy someone else's style; create your own!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Developments at a distance could electrify you. You have your whole future in your hands. A romantic alliance may not be exactly what you expected. Discuss your concerns.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Joint ventures and family enterprises are favored today. A private meeting brightens your afternoon. Clever ideas spring to mind. You feel much more creative than in the recent past.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go ahead and enjoy your moment in the spotlight. Those of you who are short on funds could get a nice surprise. A friend tells you something in strictest confidence. Be discreet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take more responsibility for your life; you have the power to make dynamic changes! Spending time with a troubled teenager will let you see what is really important.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Long-term projects and distant connections receive new attention. This is no time to get in a rut; your horizons are expanding. Enjoy a night on the town without going overboard.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take a break from the rat race and spend the day communing with nature. The change of scenery does you a world of good. Do not return home until you feel completely refreshed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pull back -- your intensity may be too much for others to handle. Give loved ones more space. A domestic problem can be nipped in the bud if you curb your temper.

THE HOME FRONT

By Kay Moore

Architects foresee changes in family homes. Larger bedrooms so everyone has some private space, larger living areas for folks to get together, and roomier kitchens that open to living areas.

Wood screws are increasingly popular for home repairs now that more homeowners have electric screwdrivers or drills with screwdriver bits. Screws are stronger than nails and ideal for pieces that need to be disassembled later or where hammering might cause damage.

How can you blend a modern kitchen in to an old-fashioned house? Cabinets with simple lines and natural accents like wood and stone form the "bridge" between the two parts.

Run a comb through a paintbrush before you use it to remove any loose bristles. You'll be glad they're not stuck on the paint.

Many states now require comprehensive disclosure forms, extensive questionnaires about the house that sellers fill out. They offer important protection for sellers, brokers and buyers.

What are you selling? We'll show you how full disclosure protects you when you list with Home Realtors, 110 W. Marcy Dr., 263-1284.
