United Way sets campaign fund goal at $235,000

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

United Way of Big Spring/Howard County hopes to maintain its level of funding for 10 area non-profit organizations and has set its 1992-93 campaign goal at $235,000. This year's goal represents the same amount granted to area agencies under the United Way umbrella in 1991-92.

The kickoff luncheon for the United Way drive is scheduled for Sept. 22 and will feature former San Antonio mayor Henry Cisneros.

Tickets for the event are $10, and can be ordered by calling the local United Way office at 267-5201.

Tickets to the luncheon, which will get under way at 11:30 a.m. in Garrett Hall of the First United Methodist Church, are expected to go quickly, said Sherrie Bordofske, United Way executive director.

"We have sold approximately 400 tickets, so it is very important to call or come by my office now, if anyone needs a ticket.

"It would help us very much if all the reservations will pick up their tickets before the 18th," Bordofske said.

Among his lengthy list of awards, Cisneros was cited as Outstanding Mayor of the Year as the mayor of San Antonio, the nation's 10th largest city.

Cisneros holds honorary degrees at 17 colleges and universities across the country.

"We are really excited to have a man of his caliber coming to Big Spring," United Way President Jeff Morris said when Cisneros confirmed the engagement.

Although Cisneros is a much-sought-after speaker, he is donating his time and travel to the United Way, Bordofske said.

The public also is invited to a welcoming ceremony for Cisneros' plane at the McMahon-Wrinkle Airport. Cisneros is expected by 10 a.m.

on Sept. 22.

During his stay, Cisneros will also be the featured speaker at the Friday Optimist Club's Free Enterprise Seminar at Big Spring High School.

The United Way raises funds annually for use in community service organizations including the local American Red Cross, Boy's Club of Big Spring, Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America, Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Clinic, Girl Scout Council, Northside Community Center, Salvation Army, Westside Day Care Center, Westside Community Center and the YMCA.

Demand for signers growing

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Demand is growing for those able to interpret for the deaf and that could mean increased enrollment for the SouthWest Collegiate Institute of the Deaf.

The Interpreter Training Program at the college already more than doubled for the fall semester, to 13 from about five last year, said Danny Campbell, who this summer took over as program director.

"I would hope that we have continued increased enrollment because there's a real need for that," said Campbell, who was a biology instructor at the college since it opened in 1980.

Several factors are driving demand, such as the federal Americans with Disabilities Act, which takes effect this fall. Requirements of the law include employers hiring interpreters for deaf employees and clients.

Another major factor in this area is a curriculum for deaf students implemented this semester by the Midland Independent School District, Campbell said. "That opens up a totally new job market."

But the need was always there, he said. For example, the college for a year was unable to fill a job for an interpreter. In Austin, he said, some 50 interpreter jobs are open.

The supervisor for the Travis County Council for the Deaf, Deborah Drummond, reported a 30 percent increase in requests for interpreters in the first quarter this year over the same period last year, according to wire reports.

"We're recruiting from all over the state," Drummond was reported as saying.

The interpreter program at SWCID was instituted in the mid 1980s in anticipation of increased demand, said Howard College President Cheri Sparks.

SWID is part of Howard College.

"We have long been aware of the need for interpreters and as a result have instituted the training program years ago," she said.

The program is able to handle more increases, Campbell said. "Any reasonable increase," he said. "I don't see any problems." He added, "We couldn't handle a hundred."

Campbell pointed out that the program here is unique because it is part of a college for the deaf, which has a total enrollment of about 95 students. "They (interpreter students) really have a unique opportunity to learn the language here."

Pay for interpreters is as high as $20 an hour, Drummond said in wire reports. The council in Austin pays interpreters by skill levels. It may take five years to become fluent enough to qualify for level 1 pay of $9.20 an hour. Level 5 gets $20.10.

Schools collecting tapes for computers

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Local elementary schools have started dusting tables anticipating new computers they can win through Apples for the Students/Computers for Classrooms which began this month.

RELATED STORY — 6A

Starting in its fourth school year, a major grocery franchise is donating thousands of dollars for new computers each year for public education dependent on participation from the local community.

"Big Spring has done really well for a small community," said Gwen Adams, coordinator for the region-wide program. "Since the schools are participating, local people are contributing to the success of the program."

Computers for Classrooms operates by customers donating Furr's Supermarket registry receipts on behalf of each school.

By placing the tapes in respective boxes in the supermarkets, schools tally the receipts hoping to reach about $110,000 to $175,000 worth of tapes equivalent to one computer by the program's standards, Adams said.

"The customers have been supportive. For some schools it didn't take very long to reach their goals in the past. Campus PTA members were active collecting tapes, too.

"It's a good program. Computers are an expensive item — something that schools can't always buy. It's a computer world and this offers them tools to teach these kids what they need to know.

Frank Brooks
Furr's manager

The program enables schools to choose among computer software, computers, audio/visual equipment, encyclopedias and calculators depending on amount of receipts collected.

Furr's Supermarkets, Inc. launched its program Sept. 1, and six local elementary schools are in it to win big again this year.

During the past three school years, Washington Elementary and Marcy Elementary chalked up five IBM computers each totaling about $16,000 for both schools.

"The customers have been supportive," said Frank Brooks, local Furr's store manager. "For some schools it didn't take very long to reach their goals in the past. Campus PTA members were active collecting tapes, too."

Furr's customers will quit stuffing the boxes with receipts March 6 in an effort to help schools meet their goals of free equipment, software or computers.

"It's a good program. Computers are an expensive item — something that schools can't always buy," Brooks said. "It's a computer world and this offers them tools to teach these kids what they need to know."

Other schools who have benefited in the past and currently participate along with Washington and Marcy are Bauer Magnet Elementary School, audio/visual equipment; College Heights Elementary, computer; Kentwood Elementary, computers; Moss Elementary, computers.

Guerrero attempts to explain resume

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairwoman Lena Guerrero says Republican Barry Williamson's attacks on her credibility are a smokescreen to keep the public from looking into his own background.

"He wants to be the fox to guard the henhouse. He's working for his interests and I'm working for public interest," Guerrero said Sunday.

Williamson, the son-in-law of Midland oil man and President Bush campaign fund-raiser Bobby Holt, denied conflict of interest charges, and accused Guerrero of again lying.

Williamson's campaign questioned more of Guerrero's resume in light of last week's revelation that she did not graduate from college despite claiming for 12 years that she had earned a degree from the University of Texas.

"We just don't know who Lena Guerrero is anymore," said Jeff Norwood, campaign manager for Williamson said.

Guerrero says that she didn't know about the graduation mistake until she investigated it after questions were raised by a reporter.

On Sunday, Guerrero also said she was unaware of a 1985 biography, when she was a member of the Texas House, that stated she had belonged to the Phi Beta Kappa honors scholastic group. She said Sunday she did not belong to the group.

And, she said, that although she is frequently described as having been a migrant farmworker as a child, she does not consider herself to have been one.

Guerrero said she and her family traveled from South Texas to West Texas for several summers to work on one family's farm.

But she said that she did not equate that with her neighbors who boarded up their homes and followed the crops throughout the country.

"If these inaccuracies have hurt or misled anyone, I am sorry," she said at a news conference attended by her mother Adela, husband, Leo Aguirre, and son Leo, 4.

"She lied about being a college graduate; she lied about being a migrant farmworker," said Norwood.

Guerrero went on the offensive. She said Williamson would have a conflict of interest if he served on the Railroad Commission.

But Norwood said that Williamson has sold all his personal oil interests, and that his relationship to Holt was not a conflict.

Concerning the college degree, Guerrero insisted that until last week she thought she had graduated. She said she intends to investigate the matter further after the Nov. 3 election.

Asked why she never asked about not receiving a diploma, she said, "I didn't have the luxury of looking back."

"Going to college was not about having a piece of paper. It was about having an opportunity that my Momma and Daddy were never able to give me," she said.

Space experiments under way on Endeavour

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPACE CENTER, Houston — One of Endeavour's seven astronauts tended fertilized chicken eggs today and another squeezed eggs from frogs and sopped them in sperm as part of research into how tadpoles develop in space. Mae Jemison fertilized eggs from four female South African clawed frogs and dunked them in simulated pond water. Then, she spun some of the eggs in a centrifuge to mimic Earth's gravitational pull.

The experiment, which began late Sunday, is meant to compare how frog eggs develop in weightlessness and on the ground. Scientists also want to watch the swimming of the tadpoles that they hope will hatch before the flight ends. "What you've done today has just been really super," Homer Hickam, of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., told Jemison. "This is probably going to reverberate through the life science community for a long, long time." Meanwhile, astronaut Jan Davis rotated fertilized chicken eggs for an experiment analyzing bone calcium loss during spaceflight. Overcoming this problem would be an important step toward lengthy space stays by humans. The study uses 30 fertilized chicken eggs of different ages that are turned every 12 hours. None of the eggs will hatch in flight. Some will be examined afterward for their calcium, cartilage and bone formation, while others will hatch into chicks and grow on the ground. Jemison also continued biofeedback tests intended to help avoid nausea and other motion sickness symptoms.

Space agencies around the world are anxious to learn more about the motion sickness that strikes most astronauts during their first few days in orbit. The illness affects flight planning; critical activities like spacewalks, for example, are never scheduled early in a mission. Jemison, a physician and the first black woman in space, is the only member of Endeavour's crew trained in biofeedback, a process that involves using relaxation and mental exercises to control body functions. At the start of each 12-hour

Spacelab shift, she has forced herself to relax and mentally tried to control her heart rate, sweating and skin temperature. As Jemison toiled in the lab, she wore a tight, white shirt with holes for electrodes; a headband with an instrument to measure head movement; a pinkie ring measuring blood flow and skin temperature; a wristwatch with a display on which she could keep track of her pulse, sweating and skin temperature; and a belt containing a data recorder and batteries for the equipment. Davis, the control subject, wore similar gear as she, too, worked in the lab, but the data display on her watch was blanked out. Davis and her husband, payload commander Mark Lee, are the first married couple to go into space together. Earlier Sunday, Mamoru Mohri, Japan's first professional astronaut, squinted at flashing lights while his head was wired with electrodes and gripped in a vise for another investigation into space adaptation. Mohri, a nuclear scientist, was propped in a restraining chair right-side up, to the side and then upside down.

Texas shrimp harvest below average

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Texas shrimpers have experienced a smaller than normal summer haul, and some don't see any signs of better days. Preliminary results show that Texas shrimpers landed 7.8 million pounds of shrimp in July, the latest month for which data is available. That compares with 14.8 million pounds in July 1991, and 13.4 million pounds in July 1990. When compared with an 11-year average for the month of July that dates to 1981, the July 1992 harvest was down 42 percent, officials said. July is one of the peak months of the shrimping season. "This year, we're holding our breath and hoping for the best," said Jim Sagnes of the Texas Shrimp Association. Much of the decline can be attributed to this year's persistent, heavy rains that have flooded coastal shrimp nursery grounds with fresh water, said Margo Hightower, a researcher for the National Marine Fisheries Service. For five weeks this spring, Copano Bay near Corpus Christi was completely fresh because of runoff down the Mission and Aransas rivers. Shrimp production in the Gulf of Mexico off the Texas coast is prohibited between mid-May and mid-June so that smaller shrimp have a better chance to grow in offshore waters, therefore becoming more valuable. The closure is enforced to the 200-mile U.S. territorial limit. "There is no reason to think this season is going to improve," said Ms. Hightower. Experts said Hurricane Andrew's impact on the 1992 shrimping season also is uncertain. Louisiana marine biologists have reported massive fish kills, with an estimated 7 million saltwater fish washing up on shore. Meanwhile, prices to Texas shrimpers appear to be somewhat higher than last year because of the poor harvest. Among processors, last year's average July price paid to shrimpers was $3.17 per pound. For consumers, the harvest shortfall may not have that much immediate impact.

Houston shootings kill 5 in 2 incidents

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Five people were shot to death execution-style in two separate incidents in Harris County, authorities say. Three young men were shot to death as they sat in their parked car in Channelview Sunday night. A fourth man in the car was taken by LifeFlight Helicopter to Hermann Hospital with gunshot wounds to the chest, arm and stomach. He was undergoing surgery late Sunday and was listed in very critical condition, according to Harris County Sgt. B.J. Taylor. All four had been shot with a 9mm semi-automatic pistol, Taylor said. The bodies of two young women were found Sunday morning beside a road near Lake Houston in northeast Harris County, officers said. Both had been shot in the head. None of the victims had been identified as of late Sunday. Harris County Sheriff's Detective William Valerio said it was the worst day of violence he has seen in his year at the department. Extra detectives were called in to assist in the investigations, he said. "Crime is moving out of the city and into the county," a deputy said. Channelview resident Bob Griffin said he was standing at his gate when he noticed a car with its hazard lights flashing parked along a freeway access road. Griffin said he heard five to six shots a few seconds later. "I thought they were firecrackers at first," he said. Other residents went to investigate and found the victims inside. Police were searching for a dark-colored mini-truck that witnesses saw leaving the scene. In the other incident, a passing motorist found the bodies of two Hispanic women beside the road near Lake Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff's Detective William Valerio. Both women appeared to have been shot once in the head. The medical examiner's office has estimated the women were in their late teens or early 20s, Valerio said.

Man's defense uses multiple personalities

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — A man accused in a civil lawsuit of sexually assaulting a woman is expected to argue that he was seduced by one of the victim's multiple personalities, court records show. Jury selection for the trial of Morris Robichaux, a former president of a Catholic charity group, is scheduled to begin today in a civil courtroom. The woman sued Robichaux in July 1990, two years after the alleged assault. She is seeking nearly $4 million in damages, claiming the attack caused her to regress and return to a psychiatric hospital for another month-long stay.

Court records show that Robichaux, now 69, is expected to argue during the civil trial that the woman — or at least one of her personalities — consented. The Houston Post reported Sunday. The victim has about 10 personalities, according to psychiatrists and psychologists who have interviewed her over the years. The Post reported that records show that the victim's legal counsel has filed motions to prevent Robichaux from claiming he was seduced by "Monique," one of the plaintiff's personalities. The records show the woman was 32 at the time of the alleged attack in July 1988. A victim of child sexual abuse, she was diagnosed as suffering from anorexia and major depression in addition to the personality disorder. The alleged attack occurred after the woman sought financial assistance from her church, Corpus Christi Catholic Church in Houston, after being released from a 19-month stay at a psychiatric hospital. Robichaux, who was then president of the church's St. Vincent DePaul Society, agreed to help the woman. Robichaux went to the woman's home on July 21, 1988, to give her a $500 check and help with some repairs to the house. She told police that Robichaux, then 65, hugged her when he came in and she showed him the repair work that needed to be done. She said he hugged her again and she hugged him back because she thought he was leaving. However, she said he wouldn't let go and began to assault her, attempting to have sex with her. Robichaux said the woman consented to his advances. Robichaux, who entered a no contest plea to a criminal sexual assault charge in August 1988, was given deferred adjudication, fined $750 and placed on probation that ended after 18 months.

Names in the news

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. — Comedian Soupy Sales is going home for a stint as a morning disc jockey in the town where he grew up. Sales, 66, will do remote broadcasts this week from Marshall University and Huntington High School and from a hot dog stand, said Mike Kirtner, general manager of WRVC-FM. Sales attended Huntington High and received his bachelor's degree in journalism from Marshall in 1949. His nickname is a play on his given name, Milton Supman. He became famous in the late 1950s and early '60s for his pie-in-the-face television program "The Soupy Sales Show." "I have so many friends," he said. "If all my friends listen, we'll be No. 1 for the week." NEW YORK — Robert Pastorelli may be Murphy Brown's house painter and the fictional TV journalist's labor coach, but he has no intention of changing diapers this coming season. "It's not in my contract," Pastorelli said in the latest issue of People magazine. "If they want me to change diapers, we'll have to go back to the negotiating table, or else the prop men had better come up with fake doo-doo." On the season-ending episode of the CBS hit "Murphy Brown," Candice Bergen's character gave birth to a son out of wedlock, drawing criticism from Vice President Dan Quayle. Pastorelli told the magazine he has no desire to witness a real birth. "It's not in my realm of reality," he said. "I certainly don't want to videotape it." NEW YORK — Garry Shandling has one of TV's most-talked-about talk shows — even though it's not the real thing. Shandling, 42, plays a talk show host on the HBO sitcom, "The Larry Sanders Show." As Larry, Shandling teases talk out of guests such as Carol Burnett, Robin Williams and Billy Crystal, all playing themselves. "There's no difference between what goes on in 'Larry Sanders' and what really happens on a talk show," Crystal said in the Sept. 21 edition of People magazine. "That's what makes it so great." Shandling, a stand-up comic and former substitute host for Johnny Carson on "The Tonight Show," told the magazine he fantasizes about having a guest appearance by Carson's successor, Jay Leno, or Leno's rival, Arsenio Hall. "I'd really love to get another big host on the show and start slugging it out in a fistfight," he joked. NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The mother-daughter country duet the Judds are no longer singing together, but their single records are being lumped into one project called "The Judds Collection 1983-1990." The collection consists of three compact discs or three cassette tapes and contains 44 cuts, including such hits as "Love Can Build a Bridge," "Grandpa (Tell Me 'Bout the Good Old Days)" and "Why Not Me." The collection is to go on sale Tuesday. Naomi Judd quit concert appearances last December because of chronic hepatitis. Her daughter, Wynonna, has been singing solo this year. NEW YORK — Bill Cosby has bumped aside teeny-bop stars New Kids on the Block to reclaim the spot he briefly lost as the world's highest-paid entertainer, a magazine reported. Worth more than $300 million, Cosby is expected to earn about $98 million in 1991 and 1992 combined, Forbes magazine says in its Sept. 28 issue. Cosby, who collects a one-third share of the syndication revenue from "The Cosby Show," heads the magazine's sixth annual list of the top 40 entertainment money-makers. He retired from the show this year as TV's superstar dad. Shipping to No. 4, New Kids on the Block are expected to earn $8 million in 1992, compared with $54 million a year ago, Forbes said. Last year, the pop group bumped Cosby to No. 2 on the list. Oprah Winfrey, whose TV talk show is broadcast in most U.S. cities and 55 nations, is second with earnings of about $88 million in 1991 and 1992, the magazine said. ## Mortars slam Sarajevo

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Mortar shells slammed into downtown streets Monday despite U.N. supervision of the heavy Serb weaponry ringing Sarajevo. At least three people were killed and 32 wounded.

Meanwhile, the leader of Serb rebels in Bosnia joined the beleaguered republic's president in threatening to boycott peace talks this week in Geneva.

Radovan Karadzic, leader of Bosnia's Serb rebels who have seized some two-thirds of Bosnian territory, warned that he would boycott the Geneva talks if the international community imposed a total flight ban on Serbian military flights in Bosnian airspace.

Karadzic's warning came after Alija Izetbegovic, Bosnia's Muslim president, also threatened to stay away from Geneva because of continuing Serb attacks by artillery, tanks and warplanes.

Bosnian government defense officials blamed Serb gunners in the hills for shelling Sarajevo, where residents had ventured onto the streets after a three-day lull in fighting.

The officials claimed some of the rounds came from 120mm mortars, which Serb forces were to have placed under U.N. monitoring as of Saturday.

There was no immediate independent confirmation of who was responsible for the shelling. Serb leaders and some U.N. officials have accused the Muslim-led government forces of shelling their own positions in the past to win sympathy.

Vesna Boban-Samarzic was on her way to work when she was felled by a mortar round, taking shrapnel in both legs.

"I felt the pain and rolled under a parked car," she said as she arrived at the downtown military hospital. "Then another explosion and more pain."

At least three people died en route to the military hospital, doctors said. Health officials said 32 wounded people arrived at three main Sarajevo hospitals in a 90-minute time span.

More than 10,000 people have been killed since Bosnia's majority Muslims and Croats voted on Feb. 29 for independence from Yugoslavia, sparking rebellion by the republic's Serbs.

European Community foreign ministers agreed Saturday to support a U.S. proposal to impose a "no-fly" zone over Bosnia, following the suspected downing of an Italian relief plane to Sarajevo Sept. 3 that killed all four crew members.

A statement by the government of the self-proclaimed Bosnian Serb Republic said that if Serb planes were completely grounded, Karadzic would "completely withdraw from the talks," because that "would disrupt the strategic balance in Bosnia-Herzegovina."

Karadzic, in a fax over the weekend to the the British news agency Press Association, said he supported a flight ban that would protect humanitarian planes. Those flights had been flying specific corridors.

Izetbegovic charged that warplanes were backing additional tanks brought into Bosnia by the Yugoslav army to step up attacks on Bosnian towns.

"The towns of Sarajevo, Jajce, Gorazde, Gradacac, Bosanski Brod, Mostar, Bihac and many others in Bosnia-Herzegovina are under constant attack with enormous damage and casualties among the civilian population," Radio Bosnia-Herzegovina quoted Izetbegovic as saying Sunday.

"Under such circumstances negotiations in Geneva or any other location would be of no use," he said.

The U.N.-sponsored talks were scheduled to begin Friday.

Iniki leaves message Damage widespread all over island

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

KOLOA, Hawaii — Fred Allen got in bed with a bottle of gin. Bernard Olmeida scrambled for cover under a church pew.

As Hurricane Iniki roared across Kauai, residents rode out its fury however and wherever they could. Afterward, they coped with the destruction in the same way.

Under tropical blue skies, one woman in jogging clothes trotted down debris-littered streets in this historic sugar plantation town on Kauai's southeast shore.

Others wandered gloomily in the warm sunshine, past a roofless taco vendor's van, a demolished market, a shopping mall shorn of its top and parts of its facade.

A line of frustrated travelers waited outside the island's airport in Lihue, about 10 miles northeast of Koloa. Some wanted to know why they were not being flown off Kauai in military airplanes, while others fumed at conflicting reports on when the airport would be reopened to civilians.

"They keep lying to us," said Stacey Smith of San Francisco.

In Koloa, Olmeida stared mournfully at his carport, collapsed like a tent over his car.

When the storm hit Friday, Olmeida, 64, was in the house with "my wife and youngest son and the Almighty." As Iniki intensified, they moved to Koloa's white clapboard church.

"We were so scared because of the flying debris. We got

"We're here to help as much as possible and to give people a sense that they can rebuild their lives. It's important for people to regain some normalcy."

underneath the pews," he said.

On Sunday, the 100-year-old church was missing a steeple and a few roof tiles. Similar signs of Iniki's force were all around.

Power lines lay in a tangle on the road and utility poles leaned precariously over passing cars. Eucalyptus trees were snapped off at the middle and some Norfolk pines were stripped of their branches.

About a mile away at the lush resort of Poipu Beach, fabulous beach houses were blown off their foundations, leaving behind bare slabs and a few sticks.

Miles of sugar cane — the island's cash crop — lay flattened as though paying homage to Iniki's destructive power.

"Wherever you look, it's heart-break alley," said Allen.

Allen, 67, lost his first business — a bus company — to Hurricane Iwa in 1982. Now, he said, he wonders whether he will be able to hang on to his taxi business if the tourists stop coming.

As Iniki approached, he sought a comfortable haven.

"This was one hell of a storm," he said. "I got a bottle of gin and went to bed with my martinis."

Refuge for some bewildered tourists was less cozy. The several hundred residents in their third day at Koloa Elementary School tried to conserve what little water was available by standing over buckets as they used garden hoses to take showers.

"Just get us off of here," said Anne King of San Pedro, Calif.

Others mourned the loss of dream vacations. Jennie Barker of Auckland, New Zealand, said she and her husband went without holidays for two years to save for a trip to Hawaii.

"No phones, no electricity, no way of knowing what would happen next," Barker said. "That's the worst part."

Patricia Christy of Fort Myers, Fla., standing in line for food at a market in Lihue, said she had a sensation of deja vu.

"I just came from Hurricane Andrew," Christy said. "We have been planning this vacation for a year. We were going to get away from it all."

Honesty very topical issue

Texas Railroad Commission chair Lena Guerrero says that she didn't know she hadn't graduated from the University of Texas — much less Phi Beta Kappa as listed on her biography during her tenure in the Texas Legislature.

Despite her protests, we have a hard time believing that anyone could not know they had neither graduated from college or graduated from college with honors.

Guerrero acknowledged on Friday that she did not complete her degree work.

Just a few weeks ago, Guerrero was in Big Spring. While here, she talked about integrity and honesty. She questioned the motives of her opponent in her race to be elected to the post to which she was appointed in January 1990. She wondered how her opponent, who is involved in the oil and gas industry, could be expected to help regulate that same industry without prejudice.

Those are all standard campaign lines . . . lines that could be anticipated.

Our concern is one shared by many Texans. What else do we not know about Guerrero? What else has she told us that simply is not true?

The campaign for the seat on the Texas Railroad Commission should be one that is based on the issues . . . integrity and honesty are two of those issues.

California burger'll drive you nuts

I should have become suspicious when I looked in the window and saw all the ferns hanging from the ceiling and walls in the bar section of the restaurant. Bars that have ferns everywhere are not part of the Chicago tradition of interior design.

More suitable Chicago barroom decor includes softball and bowling trophies, hand-printed signs that say: "No Checks Cashed" and somebody taking a nap on the pool table.

But we were looking for a fast lunch and the sign outside the place served food, so we went in and took a table.

"Hamburger," I said to the waitress.

"With or without pecans?" she said.

"With or without what?" I asked.

"Pecans," she said.

"Uh, maybe you misunderstood me. I asked for a hamburger."

"Yes, I heard you. With or without pecans?"

Well, I didn't know what to say. I had never heard of pecans with a hamburger.

So I asked: "How do you serve the pecans? As a side dish or what?"

"No, they're in the hamburger."

"Ah, of course," I said, trying not to appear unsophisticated. "Of course, I'll have it with the pecans."

"How do you want it done?"

Now she had me. I had stepped right into a trap. I always get hamburgers well-done. As Slats Grobnik once told me: "Real hot grease kills all the germs."

But what about pecans? Should pecans be rare, medium or well?

Mike Royko

So I asked: "Could I get the pecans rare and the rest of the hamburger well-done?"

She blinked at me. "The pecans are in the hamburger."

"OK, well-done for both of them."

Then she asked if I wanted cheese, and I said yes. And she asked: "Swiss, cheddar, blue cheese?"

There is only one cheese for hamburger — plain American cheese. The processed kind. My favorite is Velveeta. That's why I never go to Paris. You can't get real Velveeta from those barbarians.

"Do you have Velveeta?" I asked.

"Velveeta? No, but we have some American cheese."

"God bless America," I said. "I'll have it."

She returned in a while and put a plate in front of me. I gaped at it and asked: "What is this?"

"Your hamburger," she said.

"It is?"

"That's what you ordered." I had ordered a hamburger. Everybody knows what a hamburger is. And this was not a hamburger.

It was the size and shape of a baseball. And it was wrapped in bacon and covered with melted cheese.

It sat atop half a roll, and the other half was on the side. There was no onion. There was no mustard or ketchup.

I pointed this out and she said: "You didn't order onion. But I'll bring you mustard and ketchup."

The mustard she brought was that brown, French kind. I demanded honest, yellow, American mustard, which is the only mustard you should put on hot dogs or hamburgers.

I doused the burger with the condiments, put the top half of the roll on it and picked it up.

It was impossible. It measured about eight inches from bottom to top. There was no way a person with even a big mouth could take a bite out of it.

"How do you eat this thing?" I asked my companion.

"I don't know. Maybe you should sort of press down on it with your hand to flatten it out."

I tried. Mustard squirted out on my shirt.

I looked around to see what others were doing. They were eating hamburgers, too. With knives and forks. Knives and forks.

There are many gray areas in life. Some things can't be called right or wrong.

But it is wrong to eat certain foods with knives and forks. Ribs, hot dogs, fried chicken, egg rolls and hamburgers should all be eaten with hands.

To eat a hamburger with a knife and fork is as unnatural as drinking a shot and beer through a straw.

"It's the California influence," my companion said. "That is a California-style burger."

Of course. The ferns should have told me that. And the pecans and foreign mustard.

And the fact that a wan young man at the next table was sipping white wine with his hamburger.

As we were leaving, the waitress said to me: "Was everything all right?"

"Everything was subversive and un-American," I said.

That evening, I stopped at the Billy Goat Tavern, where a hamburger is still a homburger and a cheeseburger is still a chizbooger: flat circles of meat cooked on a greasy grille, with onions and yellow mustard and slices of pickle.

And I warned Sam Sianis, the owner, that times were changing and he should consider changing with them.

"Ferns, Sam, you had better think about ferns."

"How you cook dem?"

"You don't cook them. They're plants. You hang them from the walls and ceilings."

He shook his head. "No plants een dees place. Plants got bugs. I no like bugs."

"Well, then you should consider pecans in your burgers. It's the coming thing. It's already here."

"Pecans?" he said. "You mean knots?"

"Yeah, nuts."

He thought for a moment. Then he went and got a hamburger and put it in front of me. Next, he turned around and pulled a package of beer nuts from the nut rack on the back bar.

He lifted the top of the bun and put the package of beer nuts on the hamburger. Then he replaced the bun.

"OK, you got nuts in your chizbooger."

Ah, sanity prevails.

History may ride on monster mall

BLOOMINGTON, MINN. — There's an old Alfred Hitchcock movie, maybe a couple of them, in which calliope music at a carnival plays a darkly symbolic role.

The bright and bouncy organ music is heard on the soundtrack as a merry-go-round revolves on screen, but the happy music is purposely deceptive. It is a signal to the viewer that ominous things are going on. That calliope music, as orchestrated by Hitchcock, is terrifying and cold.

As you walk around the astonishing new Mall of America here, there are moments when you hear calliope music. Where the music is coming from is no secret; it is from one of the rides at Knott's Camp Snoopy, the gargantuan amusement park that is the unlikely centerpiece of the shopping mall. All is happy and upbeat at the Mall of America, and thousands of retailing executives all around the world are hoping that it stays that way.

But if this place doesn't make it — if the struggling American economy ultimately turns the Mall of America into a bust — then that merry-go-round music is going to have a distinctly Hitchcockian cast to it. This place is going to be either the most amazing success story in the recent history of U.S. commerce, or a disaster so severe they're going to have to bulldoze the structure and pulverize it into sand just so it doesn't serve as a visual reminder of the death of the American business dream.

First things first, though — this is the damndest thing you've ever seen. Those of us who wrote advance stories previewing the Mall of America didn't come close to describing it. Television coverage doesn't do justice to the scope of the place either, because there's only so much you can show in a succession of camera shots. More than 4.2 million square feet, 333 retail stores with room for 70 more, all of this fully enclosed, with the seven-acre Camp Snoopy soaring to the roof in the middle of it all — you can think you've viewed everything that this country has to offer in terms of audacity and bluster, and as soon as you walk into the Mall of America you understand that this is uncharted territory.

It is simply so stupefyingly big, it defies all logic. You can walk around the four levels for two straight hours and never see some of the stores. One store alone — the Oshman Supersports USA sporting goods store — sprawls over 70,000 square feet, and it's just a single tenant among the more than 300. There are 13,000 free parking spaces; there are more than 30 restaurants; there are 30,000 plants and shrubs and 400 trees as a part of the Camp Snoopy park alone. This place cost $625 million to build.

Which would all be interesting enough if this were, say, 1982, and the nation was in the midst of some boom-time delirium. In 1992, though, with the country nervously obsessing about downscaling and cost-cutting and workforce-trimming, the Mall of America flies in the face of every dark economic fear. To step into the place is an unbelievable enough experience; to do so and then to think about the business shape America is in makes you look around and understand that what will happen here may be something of historic importance.

If the Mall of America can prosper, it will be a signal to the world that somehow the U.S. economy is still forceful, rumors and data to the contrary. And indeed, the predominant mood of the mall is one of optimism. It all seems so simple: People manufacture things, and other people deliver those things, and other people work in stores to sell those things, to other people who buy those things — it is elemental and serene, economics at its most basic, a never-ending circle of buyers and sellers, stretching to the horizon without end, like the Mall of America itself.

If there's not enough money to keep this place afloat, though — if consumers just can't afford all the goods here — then we're in for a sobering sight on the Minnesota plains. The Mall of America empty — or half-empty — would be as depressing a business vision as you could ever want to dream up. Behind all the glitter and the grandiose scope, the Mall of America is really about jobs. In a nation filled with many people desperate for work, the Mall of America provided 6,000 jobs for the construction workers who built it, and projects 10,000 more jobs for the men and women who will staff the complex.

A number of the rides at Camp Snoopy — the Paul Bunyan Log Chute, the Ripsaw Roller Coaster, the Yellow Eagle — are attractions of the thriller sort. Riders get on them in order to be scared. So, in some of the stores on the periphery of the amusement park, while shoppers look around at the merchandise, there is a background sound. It is the sound of people screaming.

Cowboys hold off New York Giants rally

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Jimmy Johnson came to Giants Stadium worried that his Dallas Cowboys might have a letdown against the New York Giants after beating the Washington Redskins. Johnson should have been more worried about a letup. The Cowboys suffered a big one Sunday after building a 34-0 lead against New York and they had to hang on for a 34-28 win to prevent the greatest comeback in NFL history. No team has ever won after trailing by 34 points. The Giants came within a series of becoming the first.

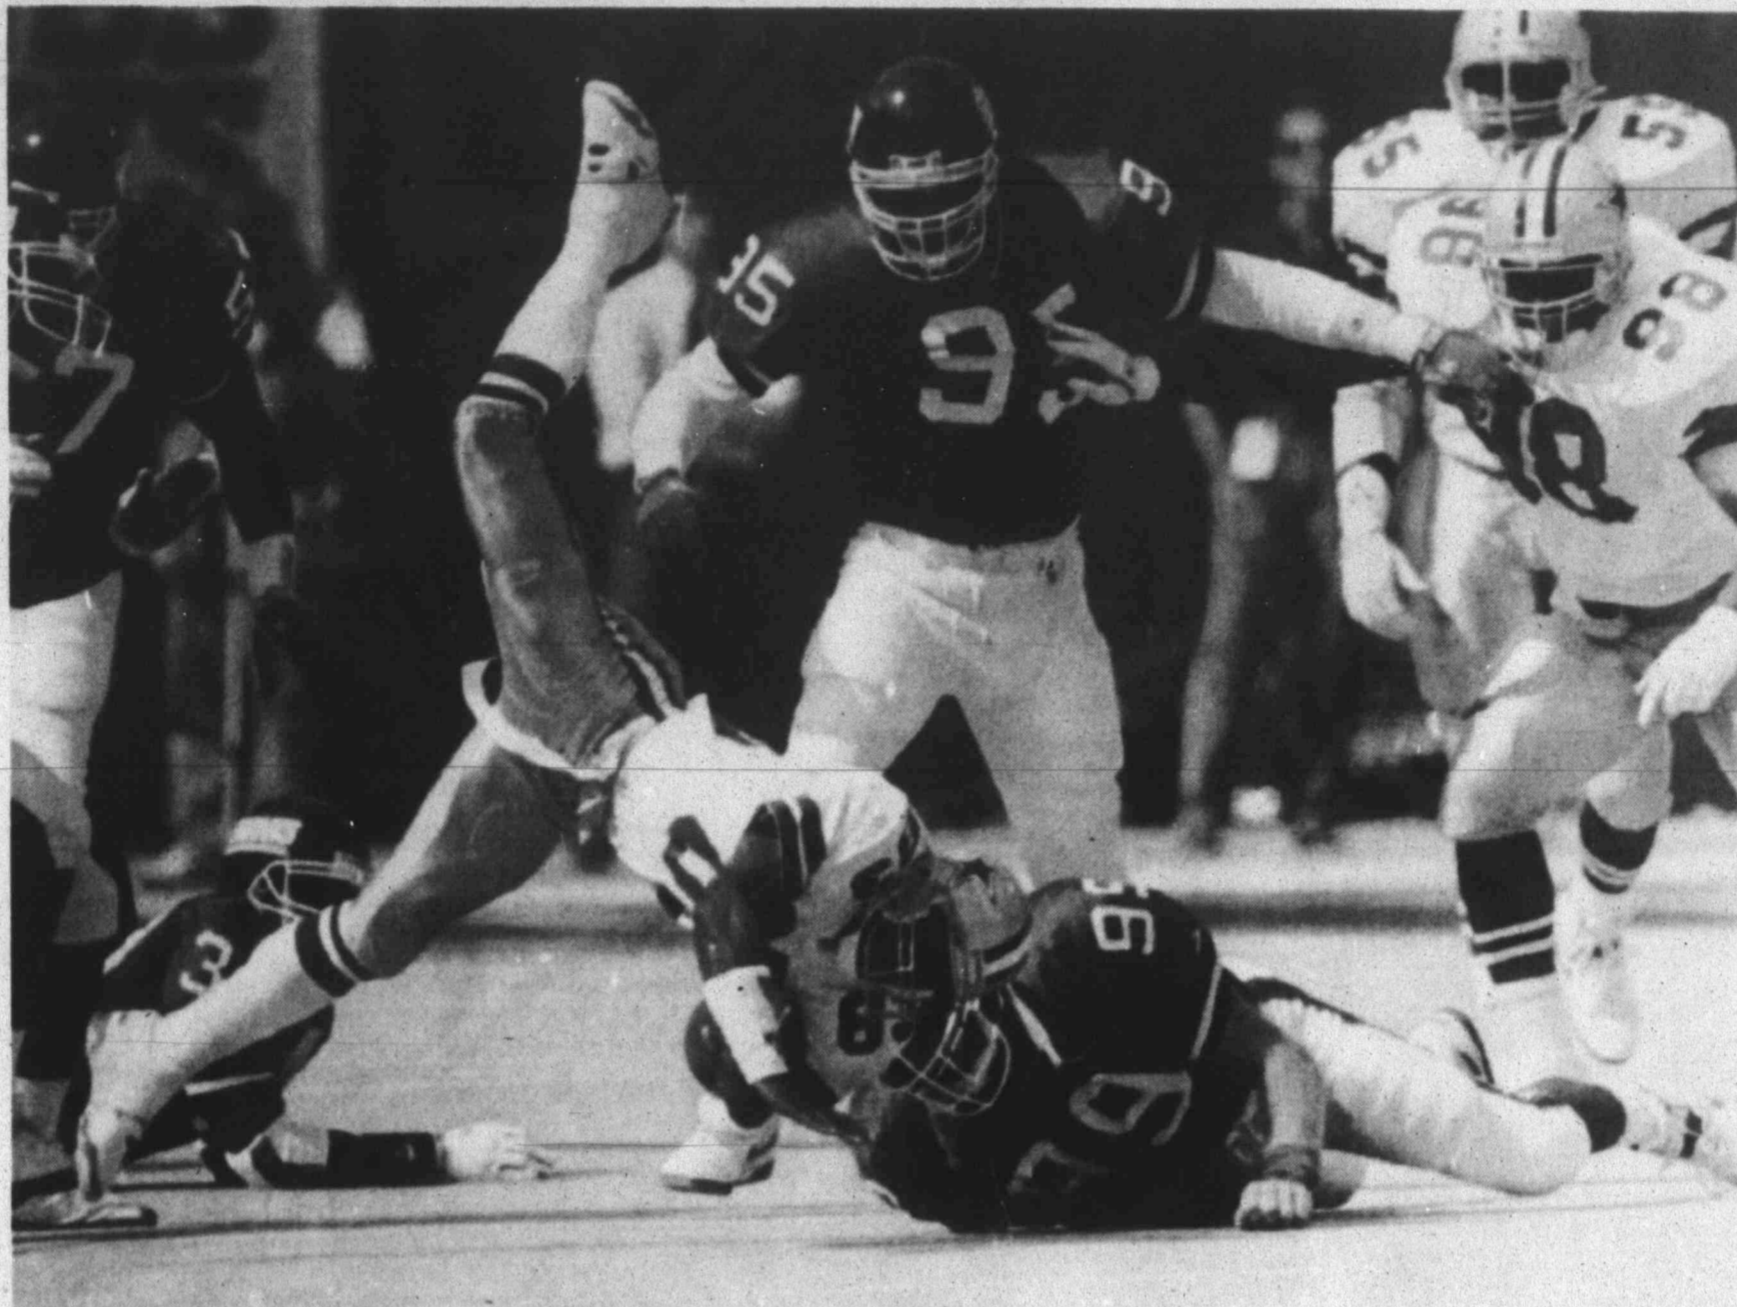

"The bottom line is we came up here and won," said linebacker Ken Norton, who blocked a Sean Landeta punt that teammate Robert Williams returned for a touchdown. "Now we're getting out of here. The game's over."

Many in Giants Stadium thought the game was over when Troy Aikman threw his second TD pass, hitting Michael Irvin on a 27-yard scoring toss 90 seconds into the third quarter.

It got Giants fans chanting "Ray Must Go" at embattled coach Ray Handley and left the Cowboys 28 minutes to enjoy their seventh straight regular-season win and their first 2-0 start since 1986.

The enjoyment didn't last long as Phil Simms woke up the Giants and led New York (0-2) on four straight touchdown drives. In just 17 minutes, the Dallas lead was six points, with the last score coming on a 2-yard TD toss from Simms to Howard Cross with 6:52 to go.

"I hate to think we let up," said Aikman, who hit 22 of 35 for 238 yards and two touchdowns. "But I don't think at least offensively, we felt the same sense of urgency in the second half. But then, we haven't been in the position of trying to protect big leads too often."

Kelvin Martin of the Dallas Cowboys does the split as he gains 15 yards on a second quarter punt return Sunday at Giants Stadium in New York. Giants Steve DeOssie (99) made the stop. The Cowboys won 34-24 despite four touchdowns scored in the second half by the Giants.

When Irvin dropped a third-down pass on Dallas' next series, New York got the ball at its 19. However, the Giants couldn't get a first down and punted. The big play was a third-and-9 from the New York 20, when Dave Meggett was stopped for no gain by Bill Bates after catching a short pass from Simms.

Dallas got the ball at its 32 with 2:07 to play and ran out the clock, with Irvin catching the same look-in pass he dropped on the previous third down to get the final first down.

Fortunately for Cowboys, they were able to give Johnson his first NFL win at Giants Stadium.

For the Giants, their second straight home loss was devastating. Not only that, everyone was looking at the comeback with skepticism.

The Giants, who had never scored more than 24 points in Handley's first 17 regular-season games, could not have played much worse in the opening half. Dallas also could not have played much better.

The Cowboys outgained New York 224-53 in the first 30 minutes in jumping to a 27-0 lead. Aikman threw a 2-yard TD to Jay Novacek, Emmitt Smith ran 5 yards for a score and Dallas' special teams blocked one Landeta punt for a TD and partially blocked another to set up one of two field goals by Lin Elliott.

The Irvin TD made it 34-0 and left the Giants stunned.

The score came right after Irvin's touchdown. Simms took New York on an 80-yard drive that Rodney Hampton capped with a 5-yard run.

Moon bounces back from poor showing

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — A nervous Warren Moon calmed his jitters and took his frustration out on the poor Indianapolis Colts, showing his nine years' experience in the NFL should count for something.

It did. An Indianapolis defense that produced a franchise record-tying 11 sacks a week earlier was unable to stop the scattergun passing of Houston's quarterback, who hit 29 of 39 passes for 361 yards and two touchdowns in the 20-10 victory over the Colts on Sunday.

And unlike the loss to Pittsburgh the week before, when Moon was intercepted five times, all of his receivers on Sunday wore Oilers' uniforms.

It was over long before the final gun. Moon, peppering the Colts' defense with short passes that the receivers turned into big gains, was 16 of 24 for 226 yards in the first half, including a 69-yard scoring toss to Lorenzo White. Houston led only 10-3 at the intermission but put the game out of reach with a 2-yard TD pass to Haywood Jeffries in the third quarter and the second of Al Del Greco's two field goals in the final period.

"They were bringing nickels off the corners, but they weren't really blitzing," Moon said. "I was able to make a couple of plays on a quick slant-in, and once we hit them with the screen, that kind of slowed down what they wanted to do."

Indianapolis (1-1) had a field goal by Dean Biasucci in the second quarter and a 3-yard touchdown pass from backup Tom Tupa to Anthony Johnson with six seconds left. A fourth-quarter drive ended at the Oilers' 16 when Jerry Gray intercepted a pass by Tupa in the end zone.

Houston (1-1) knocked out starting quarterback Jack Trudeau with a bruised back on the first play of the second period. Trudeau returned to the sideline in the second half but did not play and was to be hospitalized overnight and treated with ice. But he said the bruise did not appear to be serious.

Rookie defensive back Ashley Ambrose wasn't as fortunate. He broke his right ankle and could be out six to eight weeks. Colts coach Ted Marchibroda said Moon controlled the game.

"He hit the short passes and put them in scoring position five of the six possessions they had," Marchibroda said. "Overall, Houston is a good team and they controlled the game. They really did. We never made a big play all day. To win, you have to make the big plays, and they made them when they had to."

At San Francisco, Thurman Thomas' 11-yard run gave the Bills the lead and Cofer then missed his kick, giving Buffalo a 34-21 win over the 49ers.

The wild game featured 400-yard passing games by Kelly and Steve Young. Kelly, despite missing tight end Keith McKeller, was 22 of 33 for 403 yards and three scores. Young, without Jerry Rice (sidelined with a concussion in the first period) was 26 of 37 for 449 yards, and also had three TD passes.

There were no punts in the game. Redskins 24, Falcons 17. At Washington, Desmond dazzled and Deion shined on consecutive plays as the teams erupted for 35 points in the second quarter after a scoreless opening period.

Washington's Brian Mitchell fielded a punt at the Redskins' 42 and threw a cross-field lateral to first-round pick Howard just before being tackled. The Heisman Trophy winner raced down the sideline and avoided two tacklers at the 5 for his first NFL touchdown.

Sanders, in his first game for the Falcons after an agreement that will allow him to return to baseball's Atlanta Braves at any time, then took Chip Lohmiller's kick at the 1, streaked up the middle, through a hole at the 30 and cut right, then raced down the sideline untouched for a 99-yard TD. He as just as quick after the game, ducking the media.

Mark Rypien had TD passes of 5 yards to Earnest Byner and 16 to Gary Clark. Atlanta got a spectacular 89-yard touchdown pass from Miller to Michael Haynes.

Rams 14, Patriots 0. At Anaheim, Calif., the Rams reversed themselves with their first shutout in 60 games and first win in 12. After a 40-7 rout at the hands of Buffalo last week, the Rams got seven sacks — three by Kevin Greene — and two interceptions from Todd Lyght.

Gerald Robinson and Mike Piel each had two sacks. The Patriots never got inside the Rams' 20.

Buccaneers 31, Packers 3. At Tampa, the guy doing the Joe Montana imitation is none other than Vinny Testaverde, perhaps the most maligned quarterback in the league.

But under new coach Sam Wyche's tutelage, Testaverde has revitalized his career as the Buccaneers moved to 2-0 for the first time in 12 years.

Testaverde became the Bucs' career passing leader, surpassing Doug Williams, by completing 22 of 25 attempts for 363 yards and two touchdowns despite a case of the flu. Testaverde also scored on a 2-yard run, spiking the ball in safe-

Edberg runs down Sampras for title

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Two years ago at age 19, Pete Sampras won the U.S. Open so easily that it seemed like no big deal.

Now he knows better. Sampras' bid for a second Open title was turned away Sunday by Stefan Edberg, who seized the opportunity offered by Sampras' shaky serve and banged-up body.

Edberg joins Monica Seles who defeated Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, beat Saturday for the women's crown, 6-3, 6-3.

Playing less than 24 hours after he left the court with severe stomach cramps, Sampras simply ran out of steam, losing 3-6, 6-4, 7-6 (7-5), 6-2.

He looked fine for 2½ sets, winning the first on the only break of the set and then dropping the second the same way. But then missed an opportunity when he double-faulted while serving for the third set. When he did the same thing again in the tie-break, it opened the door for Edberg, who quickly stepped through.

"After I lost that third, maybe it was more mental than anything," Sampras said. "Maybe mentally I was just telling myself my body

U.S. Open

"can't do it and as a result, it didn't. In the fourth set, I ran out of gas. I was tired, exhausted. I had a long night last night. I didn't get all that much sleep."

Sampras barely made it through his match the night before against Jim Courier, finishing it with severe stomach cramps caused by dehydration. Doctors treated him for more than two hours after the match.

He was still feeling ill when he awoke Sunday morning but by the time he got to the National Tennis Center, his stomach had settled.

Then his serve and his shins started to hurt. The shin pain, he said, was the result of too much time spent playing hard court tennis. The serve was another matter.

Slowly, the match began getting away. "I felt like at the changeovers, I kind of felt it slipping away a little bit," Sampras said. "He saw me. My head was dropping a little bit and my energy wasn't that high. I think he saw that and started playing much better."

Roundup

Adrian White's face after forcing his way into the end zone.

Testaverde hit his first nine passes and had completions of 40 yards to Mark Carrier, 41 yards to Lawrence Dawsey and 49 yards to Courtney Hawkins.

Bengals 24, Raiders 21, OT. At Cincinnati, Dan Land fumbled the overtime kickoff and Antoine Bennett recovered, setting up Jim Breech's 34-yard field goal. The Bengals are 2-0 under new coach Dave Shula.

The Bengals, rocked by scandal as 20 former and current players were named Tuesday in a rape lawsuit, withstood a strong performance by Raiders quarterback Jay Schroeder (24 of 37 passes for 367 yards).

Steelers 27, Jets 10. At Pittsburgh, Barry Foster rushed for 190 yards, the best showing by a Steelers runner in 22 years. He scored from 54 and 23 yards.

Pittsburgh also forced seven turnovers, giving it 12 through two victories. The Jets lost three fumbles and threw four interceptions, including Larry Griffin's 65-yard touchdown return of Ken O'Brien's pass late in the fourth quarter, and are 0-2 after a 5-0 preseason.

Eagles 31, Cardinals 14. At Phoenix, Herschel Walker had his second straight 100-yard rushing game, a first since 1987 for him. The high-priced free agent rushed for 115 yards on 28 carries.

Fred Barnett broke loose for two TDs, one a 71-yarder, and had a career-high 193 yards receiving.

Lions 31, Vikings 17. At Pontiac, Mich., kick teams were extra special for the Lions, who have won 11 straight at home. Mel Gray scored on a 58-yard punt return and Melvin Jenkins on a 56-yard run with a blocked field goal. It was the first double-touchdown performance by the Lions' special teams since 1977.

Jerry Ball ran back a fumble 21 yards for a TD for Detroit. It was the first defeat for Minnesota under new coach Dennis Green. The Vikings won all four preseason games by a combined score of 140-6, then opened the regular season with an overtime win at Green Bay.

Saints 28, Bears 6. At New Orleans, the defenses were in charge of the first half, then New Orleans erupted for four touchdowns, two by the defenders.

Bobby Hebert came back from a 3-for-14 showing in the first half for 23 yards to find Eric Martin on a 52-yard touchdown pass and Wesley Carroll for 72 yards.

Chiefs 26, Seahawks 7. At Kansas City, Christian Okoye became Kansas City's all-time leading rusher, passing Ed Podolak. Okoye wound up with 63 yards for 4,501.

Former Seahawks QB Dave Krieg had a 72-yard touchdown pass to J.J. Birden on the third play and Lonnnie Maris went 36 yards with an interception for another score. Krieg was 13 for 19 for 231 yards.

Broncos 21, Chargers 13. At Denver, it was John Elway to the rescue once more, although not too dramatically.

Elway threw a 32-yard TD pass to Mark Jackson just five minutes into the game, then accounted for two third-quarter scores.

Clinton defending Vietnam status

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Democratic nominee Bill Clinton said today he "never tried to mislead anybody" over questions about his military status during the Vietnam era but wishes now he had handled the controversy better in his campaign.

"It's very frustrating to me," the Arkansas governor said in a live phone interview with a New York radio station.

He made the comments before leaving Little Rock, Ark., for the West Coast, where he and President Bush are vying for votes by stressing jobs in a region hard hit by the nation's stubborn economic downturn.

The paths of the two candidates were crossing today in California and Oregon, states where polls show Clinton leading.

Clinton, speaking by phone from Little Rock, Ark., to WFAN's "Imus in the Morning" show in New York, predicted "a fight ... right down to the very end."

"I think the American people have made up their mind they need to change. But ... the Bush-Quayle strategy is going to be to sow doubt wherever they can," he said.

Asked about lingering questions concerning his efforts in the 1960s to avoid military service, Clinton said: "It was a very difficult period for a lot of people. It had a profound effect on me in ways I think I still feel."

Clinton, who opposed the Vietnam War, said he's not sure he would have done anything differently, knowing only what he knew at the time. But he said he could have improved the way he dealt with the issue this year.

"I think I could have handled it a lot better," he said. "But I never tried to mislead anybody."

He said he often replied to the accusations on the run and "I didn't go back through all me letters and notes and try to put this all back together again."

"I was always playing catch up," he said.

But, Clinton said, "I still think no one has challenged the basic facts."

On another issue, Clinton said he would never make the kind of anti-tax pledge that Bush made in 1988 and later broke.

"One of the reasons I don't say read my lips is because I've been governor for 12 years," he said.

Supporters said that as the two candidates campaign on the West Coast each will stress what he sees as key weaknesses of his opponent.

Bush, trying to mount a come-from-behind victory, wants to paint Clinton and running mate Al Gore as environmental extremists more interested in protecting endangered species than U.S. jobs. He also wants to portray them as candidates seeking to gut an already devastated defense industry, one of the main reasons for California's economic distress.

"The essential message is going to be jobs, the fact that we've lost private sector jobs under George Bush and that (Clinton) has a plan to create jobs," said George Stephanopoulos, communications director for the Clinton campaign.

Grooming with love She cares for animals

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

It's a dog's life for Melanie Gambrell — well actually, five dogs, two cats, a boa constrictor, two rabbits, two horses, assorted birds including turkeys, ducks and chickens, and a pot-bellied pig.

Gambrell isn't a farmer. These animals — about 32 — are her pets. "You ought to see our feed bill," she said. "A lot of animals that we get are from people who take them and can't care for them or have just grown out of them."

Handling pets doesn't stop after she leaves her home. As a pet groomer at Highland Animal Hospital, she is hands-on with the cuddly creatures from 8 to 5.

"I love handling them all day, ... the ones that come in weekly or monthly," she said. "The pets that haven't been in for a while are tough to work with."

The Iowa native made her move to Big Spring in 1983 working for the police department as a dispatcher.

She managed to work animals in to her life even then. "While I worked with the department, I had a deal with (the officers)," she said. "Anytime they would capture a wild animal that did not need to be put to sleep, they would give it to me."

"I would usually take it home and release it out in the country," she said. Gambrell and her husband, Randy, married since 1985, rent about 4,000 acres 30 miles southeast of Big Spring. Randy got in on the deal as well, helping her through the years to transport an armadillo, rabbit, baby skunk, two chickens and a possum.

"My husband was excited every time I would call and say, 'bring the cage,'" she said. "Once we kept a possum in the women's restroom in an empty trashcan. Everybody knew it was one of mine."

After working for the police department, Gambrell made her move to the clinic in 1986.

"I had been a receptionist (at the clinic) and decided I wanted to spend more time with animals," she said. "I looked into grooming schools and commuted for 20 weeks to Midland."

Gambrell has been grooming locally since July 1991. There is more to the profession than clipping claws and fluffing fur. She has been certified for the last two years as a small animal dietician from Hill's Pet Products.

"Animals are living so much longer. People need to know what they're giving them," she said. "They need to be given a diet of food made especially for them, not junk food."

Regarding plans for children in the future, Gambrell said her pets are her children. "They are my family. ... At home, when I get up and move to get a drink of water, they all get up and move with me to the kitchen," she said. "Some get in bed with me, well, until daddy comes in and boots them out. ... My husband usually has to set the limits." The sky is the limit with what the Gambrells plan for an independent grooming business.

Melanie Gambrell, shown grooming a pooch recently, has a special love for animals. With a constantly expanding pet family of her own, she plans to open a business caring for other people's animal friends.

They were scheduled to finalize a deal last week to expand their business buying a building and three acres. Their grooming business is slated to open in late October to early November.

Gambrell can also add being the first and only female president of Texas' Hunting Retriever Club. "I think I'm the only one in the nation right now ... We need to get more women involved in the handling of dogs," she said. She was elected to the 30-member group in January.

Gambrell said her hunting philosophy does not conflict with her love for animals. "We cook everything. Nothing is wasted. I do love animals, and I'm not into someone killing animals just for sport," she said.

Animals are a big part of Gambrell's life. Her golden retriever

H.R. Mallord Creek Buckshot is her "favorite son" and a blue manx named Bear has carved out a spot on the corner of Gambrell's desk at the clinic.

"I'd bring them all (strays) home if my husband would let me," she said. "I don't care if I'd had the most rotten day in the world, when my (pets) see me getting out of the car, they come up and love me. It doesn't take much for them. No matter what I'm doing, I will always have animals in my life."

Uncovering mystery of Big Jim, traveling toad

Editor's note: This is the debut of a regular column to be written by Angie Way, Heritage Museum curator. It will appear semimonthly, Mondays.

There are many special items in the Heritage Museum's collection. Some so unique that I am sure no other museum in Texas could possibly have anything similar. One item in our collection that I especially note for its indigenous interest is a horned toad.

Animal remains are usually not included in a curator's list of favorite items to care for and display. But the mystery of why this toad's remains were in the collection was something I wanted to solve. My search led me to the story of "Big Jim."

On Monday, May 2, 1938, the front page of the Big Spring Daily Herald featured a photograph of the town's local celebrity, "Big Jim," with Postmaster Nat Shick. The toad's fame came from an idea Shick hit upon to salute 1938's National Airmail Week. He would send Big Jim on a whirlwind trip airmail, fifteen stops in nine days.

Big Jim was placed in a wire cage with envelopes on top addressed to postmasters from Dallas to New York City. Each envelope had a location for autographs. Here the postmasters of each city signed their names as well as many of Jim's pilots.

Special instructions were included. "My name is 'Big Jim' from Big Spring, Texas. I am out in interest of National Airmail Week. If you do not delay me I will be back home before I get hungry..."

Big Jim was named by Nat Shick, who was well known for his creative ideas, after U.S. Postmaster General, Jim Farley. Shick had been a popular citizen since his arrival in 1907, and is fondly known as the woodcarver of the area's totem poles. He worked as postmaster from 1933 until his retirement in 1953.

Big Jim returned to Big Spring none the worse for his journey and just in time to take flight again with aviator Bob Shermerhorn. The two flew over the town of the area with Clarence Barnes, using short wave radio to broadcast over a local radio station.

In 1971 Nat Shick presented the Heritage Museum a number of items in donation. Included in this were the remains of Big Jim in his wire cage, envelopes on top.

Besides Big Jim, the Heritage Museum remembers Nat Shick with the display of one of his totem poles. This pole made of cedar sets in the front entrance of the museum to colorfully welcome visitors.

Lorna Hawkins poses in the control room of Continental Cablevision in Los Angeles. Her community-access show "Drive-By Agony" has helped channel her grief and that of others.

Woman's agony will help others

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The opening credits roll, and Lorna Hawkins fixes a sober gaze into the camera. "Hi, and welcome to 'Drive-By Agony,'" she says quietly.

Like hundreds of other urban mothers, Mrs. Hawkins has lost two of her children to gang violence. She created the community access cable TV show to channel her grief and allow other mothers to do the same.

The idea came to her as she tried to cope with the death of her 21-year-old son Joe, gunned down the night before Thanksgiving 1988. "That's all I'd been doing — talking about him," she said. "Doing the show was therapy for me."

Then, in March, Mrs. Hawkins lost her other son, 20-year-old Gerald, killed as he ran from gang members trying to rob him.

Days later, she was back in the Downey studios of Continental Cablevision. "I know a lot of you out there are probably saying, 'How can she still be talking?' How come she's not grieving?" she told the cameras. "Believe me — I'm grieving. But I'm still talking."

Mrs. Hawkins' refusal to give in to Los Angeles' numbing escalation of violence has captivated audiences since "Drive-By Agony" first aired in 1989, said John Clodfelter, Continental's program director.

"You well up inside," he said. "She's just telling it like it is." Clergy, cops, former gang members and, especially, parents of children slain by gang members appear on the half-hour show, which reaches 45,000 subscribers in southeastern Los Angeles County.

Mrs. Hawkins, who has two daughters in their 20s, allows her guests to vent their frustrations, share their pain, or just talk. The conversation ranges from anger to sadness to hope.

The show has fostered a support group for survivors led by Mrs. Hawkins that includes Teresa Wheel, who lost her 19-year-old son Kevin last year when gang members pulled alongside his car and opened fire.

"It was a continual struggle. I almost went psychiatric," Mrs. Wheel said. "I had a dream where Kevin was suicidal and he was telling me to come with him."

A friend put Mrs. Wheel in touch with Mrs. Hawkins, and she reluctantly agreed to appear on the show. She has appeared several times since.

"Once you get on, all the anger gets you going," she said. "You don't even think about the camera. You have so much to talk about."

"I wish this was on national TV," she said. "Hopefully, it'll hit home if your kids are in gangs. Hopefully, it'll touch something in you."

On the show following Gerald's murder, Mrs. Hawkins and her guests expressed their frustration that witnesses were afraid to testify about their children's murders. They want Los Angeles County to beef up its witness protection program, which currently operates on a paltry budget of $100,000.

"If they can do that for the Mafia, why can't they do that for gangs? Which I think are just as big, if not bigger, than the Mafia," Mrs. Wheel said.

A recent taping, in part, offered "the mother's point of view" on a truce patched together after the spring riots between black factions of the Crips and Bloods gangs. Gang homicides are down drastically from last year's 771 murders, a record for Los Angeles County.

"In the gang truce ... just make that effort," Mrs. Hawkins, 40, pleads to the camera. "Just make that effort and say, 'I want peace.'"

Rita Norwood, who lost a son and nephew in a gang shooting, is skeptical. She attended two gang truce picnics, but noted that rival gang members kept to themselves.

"I feel like it was just a game, a joke with them not communicating, just partying ... What is that solving?" she says. "I think some of them are sincere, but not all of them."

"I'd love to see a peace," Mrs. Wheel offers. "They need to do more than party. They need to talk."

Later, Mrs. Wheel's eyes fill with tears as she explains why her family moved after Kevin was killed. "The memories ..." she begins. "I'd walk by his room and see him lying in bed." She turns to Mrs. Hawkins, who holds her hand. "You know how it is."

Family rebuilding after life in Klan

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — Hard times and bitterness made the Ku Klux Klan an appealing choice for Gary and Jan Ralston. They gave their children no choice at all.

In 1988, the life the couple had begun two decades earlier as 16-year-old high school dropouts was crumbling. Gary lost his job at a radiator shop. Their church rejected them as youth ministers because of their appearance. They had pulled their only daughter out of school at 14 because she said she was hassled by black students for refusing a date with a black boy.

"I had a lot of anger in my heart at that time," Gary said. "The Klan seemed to listen and they seemed to care."

For the next 3½ years, Gary and Jan's fierce loyalty to the Klan drove them to abandon friends and turn on their children. They forced their daughter and a 13-year-old son to join the white supremacist group. An older son who balked was beaten.

Their eldest son, Allan, was thrown out of the house after he refused to join and the family learned he was gay. Gary Ralston now acknowledges brooding with Klan buddies about killing him.

"I just couldn't believe they got into an organization that would make anyone want to kill their own

'I just couldn't believe they got into an organization that would make anyone want to kill their own flesh and blood.'

Allan Ralston, son of former KKK members flesh and blood," said Allan, now 22.

Ultimately, his parents couldn't believe it either. Despite a campaign of anonymous vandalism and threats, the Ralstons now are rebuilding their lives and aggressively trying to steer others from the path they chose.

They take their Klan scrapbook and memorabilia to schools to tell students of the dangers of hate groups. They have appeared on television talk shows and say they are negotiating deals for a book and a movie, although they won't discuss details.

"I'm sorry for what I've done and what I've put people through while I was Klan," said Gary, who bears a "White Power" Klansman tattoo on his shoulder. He said he'll have it removed eventually.

The Ralstons signed up for the Klan during a 1988 membership rally. They chose the militant Southern White Knights chapter and dragged their youngest two children to a nighttime initiation ceremony several weeks later in the north Georgia woods. Shannon, now 19, and her younger brother, Steve, now 17, were ordered to reject their non-white friends and participate in Klan activities.

Steve took down his posters of Michael Jordan and hid his rap music tapes. But he refused to abandon his black friends and invited them over to play basketball when his parents weren't home.

"I was always afraid the Klan would see it," he said. "But I just couldn't turn my back to all my friends because my parents went to join the Klan."

Meanwhile, Gary and Jan were appointed officers of their 200-member chapter. They shouted fiery, racist speeches during rallies and spent all holidays with fellow Klansmen.

Gary often received phone calls in the middle of the night, after which he would leave for several hours. He declined to be specific about the outings, but said the mission was to terrorize blacks and other Klan targets.

"I never killed no one, I'll put it that way," he said.

When sons Allan and Bill, now 21, returned home from military duty in 1989, neither wanted to join the Klan. Both also brought home explosive news: Bill was engaged to a Hispanic woman, and Allan was gay.

The family says Gary beat Bill several times until he agreed to call off the engagement and joined the Klan.

The Ralstons' loyalty to the KKK began to wane after Jan and Shannon appeared on a "Sally Jesse Raphael" show about mothers and daughters in the Klan. Producers also invited Allan to appear. The audience cheered him for rejecting the Klan and jeered Jan for embracing it.

When Allan told Jan after the show that he was not returning to Georgia, she feared she would never see her son again. Jan also was struck by an article she read on the flight home about Paul Michael Glaser, the TV actor whose wife has AIDS and whose child died from it.

"I was reading this and thinking, 'How do I have the audacity to praise God for AIDS?'" she said. "I talked to my husband and said, 'I'm going to come out of the Klan. It's destroying us and it's destroying me to hate.'"

Peace Corps mission spreading capitalism

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Joan Masters never thought she would see a non-communist Russia. Now the 66-year-old Chicago businesswoman, a teenager when the Iron Curtain went up, is packing her bags for Moscow — to teach Russians how to be capitalists.

Masters has joined a growing cadre of Peace Corps volunteers who are exporting Yankee business skills to people whose exposure to free enterprise has been limited to books, anticapitalist tirades and, increasingly, to an explosion of speculation and price-gouging across Russia.

"The minute I heard about the failure of communism, I felt I could help those people," says Masters, who for the past 22 years has operated her own secretarial-services company.

"I can help because I started a business from nothing," she says, "and I know they have nothing to start with."

The Peace Corps, which goes into countries only by formal invitation of a host government, already has volunteers in Poland, Romania, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Bulgaria. Officials announced plans to enter Russia last New Year's Eve, the final day of the Soviet Union.

Current plans call for 250 volunteers in Russia and five other former Soviet republics — Ukraine, Armenia, Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan and Moldova — by the end of 1992, and another 250 in 1993. Sixty volunteers already are serving in the Baltic nations of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

The goal is to set up enterprise development centers where small-business operators can receive counseling on such subjects as marketing, bookkeeping, planning, management, credit and banking. Roaming volunteers will assist business projects in other regions.

"Right now, just sending money to help the former Soviet republics isn't the only answer," Peace Corps Director Elaine Chao tells National Geographic. "Our volunteers are precisely what is needed, because they go out into the country, at the grass-roots level, and actually transfer information and skills."
