SWCID celebrating Deaf Awareness Week

Deaf Awareness Week will be recognized by the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf Sept. 21-25.

On Tuesday, Sept. 22, Howard College President Cheri Sparks will address students, staff and visitors. After Sparks address, Mayor Tim Blackshear and a representative of the Big Spring Police Department will also address the audience. Refreshments will be available.

Throughout the day Tuesday, tours of SWCID will be given.

The recognition of Deaf Awareness Week at SWCID began Saturday with a display at Wal-Mart.

Other activities include SWCID representatives visiting area elementary schools and teaching students the American Sign Language alphabet.

Fundraiser hosts sought

The Heritage Museum is looking for hosts for their "Let's Solve a Murder Mystery" fundraiser Oct. 24.

The evening will begin with a buffet dinner at 6 p.m. at the museum. Guests will dress appropriately for the characters they have been assigned. At 7:15 p.m., guests will adjourn to homes of 18 hosts' home to play their roles and solve the murder. Each host will have eight guest at their home.

The event will end about 10:30 p.m. or when the murderer has been identified.

For more information contact Angie Way at 267-8255.

Moore purchases Cameo building

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Moore Development for Big Spring Inc. today agreed to purchase the former Cameo Mobile Homes manufacturing facility and later sell it to Wright Fibers Inc., a firm that plans to open a textile mill here.

The board also agreed to purchase two five-ton cranes by Oct. 4 in an agreement with American Limestone Co. of Dallas that would bring in four new jobs next month and up to 15 by the end of the year. Moore could lease out the cranes to other businesses under the agreement.

The purchase of the Cameo Building on FM 700 will help attract $550,000 from private investors for the $4.5 million mill, which would manufacture cotton bale bags out of cotton byproducts and employ from 100 to 500 persons. Under the purchase contract, neither Moore nor Wright would be responsible for existing pollution problems on the property.

The $75,000 purchase price will be tacked onto $800,000 in guaranteed loans that Moore Development agreed to provide last December.

"I think we've got a possibility to really do something for Big Spring," said board Chairman Owen Ivie.

Not having the building has hampered getting investments, said Herb Wright of Decatur and his financial advisor, B.G. Burkett of Prudential Securities in Dallas. Both men attended today's meeting. Investors do not want to invest in a building in Big Spring but rather the business itself.

"We're stymied," Burkett said. "We've never had the whole deal in one package to where we can go to investors."

Getting investments is now behind schedule.

"But I would challenge anybody to be out in that investment environment right now and say we didn't touch all bases," Burkett said.

Burkett also said that although Wright is $125,000 short of contributing $1 million of his own money as agreed in December, he has committed 100 percent of what he has available.

"I am willing to put in more money, but I can't put in the entire $1 million," Wright said.

A $550,000 guaranteed loan package from the Texas Department of Commerce will not be used because Wright does not want to put his ranch up for collateral. The Department of Commerce required collateral after determining the money was not needed because Wright was able to buy used equipment for $2.2 million, $700,000 under expected costs, Burkett said.

Because attracting investors may take from three-to-six months, according to Burkett, Moore Development Director Ted St. Clair was instructed by the board to contact the Texas Agriculture Department to seek an extension on a $1.4 million guaranteed loan package and explain the recent developments. The deadline for the Agriculture Department package is Oct. 4.

Concerning the two cranes, expected to cost under $30,000 including installation, St. Clair was instructed to check competitive prices.

The cranes would be installed in the Alert Building at McMahon-Wrinkle Air Park. American Limestone would open an office in Big Spring and use the cranes to help maneuver blocks of limestone into position to where they could be cut into smaller pieces. The deal must be completed before arrival of a new saw Oct. 4. Moore could also lease the cranes to others.

"I can possibly see a need for two five-ton cranes somewhere else, in the Air Park even," Ivie said.

United Way luncheon Tuesday

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Plans have been changed regarding Henry Cisneros' visit for the United Way of Big Spring-Howard County Luncheon on Tuesday.

Cisneros, former mayor of San Antonio, will arrive just prior to the luncheon. As a result, there will not be a welcoming ceremony as originally planned, according to United Way Executive Director Sherrie Bordofsky.

Cisneros is donating his time to speak at the luncheon, the proceeds of which go to support 10 area non-profit, service organizations. The luncheon is the annual kickoff of the United Way fund drive.

Tickets to the luncheon, which begins at 11:30 at Garrett Hall in the First United Methodist Church, area expected to go quickly, said Sherrie Bordofsky, United Way executive director.

Tickets for the event are $10.

Cisneros will be the featured speaker Tuesday afternoon at the Greater Big Spring Rotary Club's Free Enterprise Day at Big Spring High School.

Among his lengthy list of humanitarian and other awards, Cisneros was cited as Outstanding Mayor of the Year as the mayor of San Antonio, the nation's 10th largest city.

Cisneros holds honorary degrees at 17 colleges and universities across the country.

"We are really excited to have a man of his caliber coming to Big Spring," United Way President Jeff Morris said when Cisneros confirmed the engagement.

Although Cisneros is a much-sought-after speaker, he is donating his time and travel to the United Way, Bordofsky said.

During his stay, he will be speaking to area junior-high and high-school students as well, Bordofsky said.

The United Way office raises funds annually for use in community service organizations including the local American Red Cross, Boy's Club of Big Spring, Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America, Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Clinic, Girl Scout Council, Northside Community Center, Salvation Army, Westside Day Care Center, Westside Community Center and the YMCA.

The goal for the 1992-93 campaign has been set at $235,000 — the same amount granted to area agencies under the United Way umbrella in 1991-92.

Farm disaster loans available

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Low-interest emergency loans are available to eligible farmers and ranchers in area counties following adverse weather conditions this past spring and early summer.

Martin County was named a primary disaster area due to excessive rain, hail and high winds, according to Rossanna Salazar of the Texas Department of Agriculture. "Contiguous disaster areas" include Howard, Andrews, Borden, Gaines and other counties, which were damaged by the same weather conditions between May 1 and June 30, according to a declaration by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan.

Between the dates of May 22 and June 30, further crop disaster, due to the same conditions, occurred in Howard, Andrews, Borden, Dawson, Gaines, Glasscock and Midland counties.

These declarations allow family-sized farm operators in both the primary and contiguous areas to apply for emergency assistance from the Farmers Home Administration.

To be designated as a primary disaster area, the Farmers Home Administration determines whether a sufficient number of farmers in each county suffered losses of 30 percent or more, Salazar said.

Contiguous disaster areas are deemed so because they are adjacent to primary disaster counties, but have lower levels of crop damage.

Each loan application will be considered on its own merits, taking into account the extent of losses, available security, repayment ability and other factors, Salazar said.

Also, Howard County farmers have until March 1, 1993, to apply for emergency loans for crop damages that occurred in 1991, according to Martin County FmHA officials.

Area farmers who wish to apply for the emergency loans, for either the 1991, or 1992 crop losses, should call the Stanton office of the Farmers Home Administration at 756-3308.

Dan Quayle ready for pasting tonight

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dan Quayle says his battle with Hollywood isn't over, but he's trying to patch things up with Murphy Brown's baby.

Quayle, girding for the pasting he gets in tonight's season premiere of the popular situation comedy, said Sunday, "In the spirit of lightheartedness and joining in the fun, I have sent Murphy Brown's baby a gift and a note."

Quayle sent the fictional baby a stuffed elephant — the symbol of the Republican Party and a handwritten note.

"Dear Baby Brown, I want to be one of the first to welcome you into the world," wrote Quayle. "You may not realize it yet, but you've helped start an important discussion on ways to strengthen our traditional values."

Quayle assured nonexistent newborn of "the respect and personal understanding I have for single mothers" and promised "that President Bush and I will do everything possible to make sure you and all children — no matter what their family situation — have the opportunity to grow up in prosperity."

The vice president plans to watch tonight's hour-long Murphy Brown special on CBS-TV.

LULAC facilitated changes

EDITOR'S NOTE: In recognition of Hispanic Heritage Month, the Big Spring Herald will publish daily articles and features on Hispanics and Hispanic culture.

By MARTHA E. FLORES
Staff Writer

In its 10-year presence locally, the League United Latin American Citizens has made some changes in the how Hispanics are represented and how they are perceived.

In 1982, when LULAC chapter 4375 was chartered, the first battle it took on was the lack of representation for Hispanics on the Big Spring Independent School District School Board, Howard College Board of Trustees, Howard County Commissioners Court and Big Spring City Council.

LULAC claimed victory when Hispanics representation was met by having Billy Pineda on the school board, David Gomez on the college board, Louie Brown on commissioners court and Pat DeAnda on the city council. Gomez resigned from the college board to be replaced by Charlie Gonzales. Pineda was replaced by Viola Barraza.

"Right off the bat we took on the representation issue," DeAnda said, who is a LULAC charter member and its first president. "The sentiment was horrible. We were seen as troublemakers both in the Anglo community and among some minorities. We were being penalized for wanting to participate in the system."

Earlier this year, a settlement was reached between LULAC and the city of Big Spring, establishing six single-member districts. It is anticipated the districts will increase the minority voting power by two-fold in the next year.

As minority representation was gained, LULAC began to wage another battle — getting the minority community to vote. Political apathy is great among Hispanics, DeAnda said.

In 1984, LULAC organized and sponsored voter registration drives throughout the city.

"We must have registered 1,000 voters with our first two drives," she said. "The (National Association for Advancement of Colored People) helped us beat the bushes."

Continuing its efforts for better representation in all facets in 1985, LULAC disputed a decision made

Education needed to stop deadly game

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Education and innovation are needed to stop young people from playing the deadly game known as "elevator surfing," elevator industry officials say.

A freshman at Southern Methodist University died Sept. 17 while trying to ride beneath an elevator, sometimes known as "helicopter," school officials said. His roommate suffered a broken arm as the pair plummeted about 30 feet down the shaft in a dormitory, officials said.

Michael Schlosser, 18, of Fair Haven, N.J., was the latest to die in a long string of accidents linked to improper use of elevators.

Although the elevator industry keeps no figures on such fatalities, the New York City Housing Authority has recorded at least 14 deaths since 1984.

About four or five elevator accidents are reported each year to Elevator World magazine, said editor Bill Sturgeon.

"These are usually fatalities or very serious accidents because of the nature of the beast," Sturgeon said last week in a telephone interview from Mobile, Ala.

"You have heavy equipment going at high speed, counterweight and cars going in opposite directions or cars themselves going in opposite directions," he said.

In addition, the cars create incredible wind gusts in the shaftways, Sturgeon said.

Schlosser's roommate, Adam Charlesworth, 18, of Kingwood, Texas, was listed Sunday in good condition at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

Charlesworth told The Associated Press that he didn't feel like talking about the accident.

"I feel like crap," he said Sunday. "Later."

He was visited last week by SMU president A. Kenneth Pye, who said the university was investigating the case.

A spokesman for Otis Elevator Co., which made the elevator involved in the accident at SMU's McGinnis Hall, said he could not comment on the specific accident until he had more details.

However, Michael Jordan-Reilly said Thursday in Hartford, Conn., that elevators, when used properly, are the safest mode of transportation.

"Every nine days, we move the equivalent of the world's population," he said.

The dangerous sport came to light in the last decade, Sturgeon said, with deaths and injuries occurring in low-cost housing in New York City and Chicago.

"These were kids who were bored to death in low cost housing and wanted something to do so," Sturgeon said. "They would force the doors open and force the interlocks or they would get on somebody's shoulders and get on top of the cab."

In the past few years, the risky pastime spread to college campuses, Sturgeon said.

"I don't suppose college kids ought to be getting that bored, but I imagine they get drinking and carried away and then they get involved in this thing," he said.

An elevator-escalator industry safety foundation had been concentrating on warning young children to be careful on escalators, Sturgeon said.

However, he expressed concern that warning kids about "surfing" could cause more harm than good.

"You say something gruesome enough and sometimes you may incite people to try it out," he said.

Innovation also is needed, Sturgeon said, such as an electric eye on top of cars.

"If that beam is broken by somebody getting on top of the car... it sets off a loud alarm through the build," he said.

The device, offered by elevator companies as an optional safety device, costs about $1,500, Sturgeon said. And there are a lot of elevator cars, he pointed out.

In the long run, common sense is what's really needed, he said.

'Rocky horses' keeping man busy

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

CEE VEE — In the middle of the farming country of northwest Cottle County, Joe Cook's "rocky horses" are in a stall.

The retired West Texas farmer has been making the rocking horses by hand for a while now, and eventually he hopes to sell them a herd at a time, maybe in a store chain.

He said he would put the factory in Paducah, Texas, as a way to boost the struggling farm town's economy.

But right now, Cook's rocking horses, which once were hobby horses, go one by one or by twos and threes at the most.

One model is about 32 inches tall. One is a little bigger. They have six-foot rockers and are walnut-stained 100 percent pine, except for the manes and tails, which are yarn, and the saddles and ears, which are leather.

They are high-quality ponies, and the padded, removable saddles — for easy cleaning and repair — are ready for small rumps.

"They are stout," Cook said, climbing aboard one of his creations. "They'll hold 500 pounds at least."

But some mamas have bought them for show horses — just because they're pretty. And some people with no kids in the house at all have bought one to accent a Western decor. A Utah cattleman bought three, at $150 apiece, at first sight.

"Look at the cut on this leg. There's no instructions on how to do that," a proud Cook said. "It was just trial-and-error. We bought a pattern when we started, but we didn't like it. We changed it here and changed it yonder, 'til it didn't resemble the pattern."

Cook has made 35 of his "rocky horses" so far, "all of them numbered."

"I think it would last a lifetime. A kid could tear the ears and the mane and tail can be torn, but they can be replaced. It could be an heirloom," he said.

Friends of Cook's sons, Joey Cook and Tommy Cook of Burkburnett, see his woodworking in their homes.

"And we've got one at Paducah. The chamber of commerce is showing one of our rocky horses," Cook said. "We're making them to sell. But we don't have a market yet, just to individuals."

Cook said he'd keep quality high even if he started mass producing his rocky horses. He figures that with 15 people helping him, he could make 100 a week.

"But like they are, they're handmade. When you go to doing that, they're not handmade and it loses something," he said.

Cook said he has yet to see a child who has seen one of his rocky horses without falling in love with it.

"We carry a lot of them to trade shows. There's one at Clarendon. There's not a kid from 3 to 8 or 9 years old that comes by that doesn't want to ride one of those horses," he said. "We take a piece of plywood and lay it down (to let the horse on) and the kids love them."

Retired farmer Joe Cook of Cee Vee displays his hand-made wooden rocking horses. Cook says the horses are stout and will hold at least 500 pounds.

Violent game turns deadly in Austin

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — A game in which participants stand toe-to-toe and slug each other in the chest until one relents escalated into a brawl and then a shooting that left an Austin man dead, police say.

Officers said Derrick Nelson, 19, was shot in the chest, back, arms and legs Saturday after a game of "Chest and Ribs" turned violent.

Two teen-age boys, ages 15 and 16, described by police as acquaintances of Nelson, were being held Sunday at Gardner-Betts Juvenile Justice Center. Charges may be filed today, homicide Sgt. Hector Reveles said. "They supposedly started out horseplaying, then it escalated," homicide Sgt. Shauna Dreslinski said.

The victim's mother, Lavette Williams, said Nelson was playing the game across the street from a convenience store when his opponent apparently hit him in the face. Nelson retaliated and a fight ensued.

"The guy said he'd be back, and when he came back, he had a gun," Williams said.

Reveles said Nelson was shot while wrestling with one of the juveniles. The gun, which was dropped during the fight, was picked up by the second juvenile, who continued to shoot Nelson, he said.

The two juveniles fled in a car. One was arrested early Sunday morning, the other turned himself in around 6 a.m., Reveles said. The gun was not recovered, he said.

It was Austin's 23rd homicide of 1992, Reveles said.

Williams said her 13-year-old daughter, Tyra, was having a hard time dealing with her brother's death because Sunday was her birthday.

"From this day on, she will have real bad birthdays," Williams said. "She won't want to celebrate.

She'll always remember that the day before her birthday, her brother got killed."

Nelson spent almost a year in jail for auto theft in 1990, but Williams said she was proud of the way he had turned himself around. He received his high school diploma this summer, then got a job.

"He was showing me he was trying to make up for his past mistakes and do better," she said.

"It's so silly," Williams said of the slugging contest. "I never even heard of it before. They hit each other in the chest till they can't take it no more."

Names in the news

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Jack Nicholson's girlfriend of four years, Rebecca Broussard, has left the Hollywood lady's man and father of her two children, apparently for a younger man, People magazine says.

The magazine, citing unidentified sources, said in its latest issue that Miss Broussard has taken up with an unidentified actor because the 55-year-old Nicholson wouldn't marry her.

Nicholson bought Miss Broussard and their children a house near his Los Angeles home. He had extolled his happiness with his young family but never lived with Miss Broussard.

LOS ANGELES — Whoopi Goldberg, whose movie "Sarafina!" opened over the weekend, has put her Malibu home on the market for $3.25 million.

The ranch-style home, set on a bluff, has 180-degree views of the Pacific and is one of two the actress owns in the area.

She's selling because "she divides her time between the East and West coasts," spokesman Brad Cafarella said. "She doesn't spend all of her time in L.A."

In "Sarafina!" Miss Goldberg portrays a teacher in South Africa. She also has a new late-night syndicated talk show.

Miss Goldberg won the 1991 Oscar for best supporting actress for her role as a psychic in "Ghost."

MUNCIE, Ind. — Dennis Weaver says he's a vegetarian and lives in a solar-powered home because of his commitment to the environment.

"Someone asked me once if I was an environmentalist and I said, 'Well, of course I am, and so are you,'" the "McCloud" actor told a group at Ball State University on Thursday. "The only question is, are we a good one or a bad one?"

Weaver built a home in Colorado out of used tires and aluminum cans.

He likened the Earth to a "dysfunctional family."

"We see the world is filled with poverty and disease," he said. "This is not the way this family is supposed to be."

LOS ANGELES — Oscar winner Marlee Matlin and actor John Lithgow were among celebrities who joined about 17,000 people in a walk through Hollywood to raise money for AIDS patients.

AIDS Walk Los Angeles raised more than $3 million in pledges Sunday, said Craig Miller, an organizer.

Sarah Jessica Parker of "Honey-moon in Vegas" was also among the participants in the walk along trendy Melrose Avenue, Miller said.

The money will be used for such things as counseling, food, transportation, dental care and housing for AIDS patients.

NEW YORK — Margot Kidder, seriously hurt two years ago in a car accident, says there were times her injuries left her wishing she would die.

Then she would think of her 16-year-old daughter.

"I thought Maggie would be grief-stricken. I could not bear that," the 47-year-old actress said in the latest issue of People magazine.

Kidder, who played reporter Lois Lane in the "Superman" movies, injured her neck in 1990 while shooting a scene on the set of "Nancy Drew and Daughter." She spent the next two years in a wheelchair.

On Jan. 27, she underwent an operation to remove a disk in her neck and is now able to move normally.

She sold her home to pay medical costs that were uninsured and remains $800,000 in debt.

Pound drops against mark

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — The British pound dived against the German mark today after the narrow margin of victory in a French referendum showed that opposition to European economic unification remains strong.

Traders said the flight from weaker European currencies to the mark was likely to continue as long as uncertainty remained about monetary unification and as long as Germany resisted calls to further cut its interest rates.

Speculation that Britain would reduce interest rates to spur its economy also helped push the pound lower. Britain and Italy no longer are obliged to support their currencies with interest rate increases since they withdrew them last week from the European Monetary System.

"There are still unsolved problems for the pound and lira," said Daniel Clerget, head of foreign exchange trading at Credit Lyonnais. "We're still waiting for a decision to return them to the EMS."

Sterling closed at 2.5683 marks, down sharply from 2.6078 marks in New York late Friday and 2.6246 marks late Friday in Tokyo.

The dollar closed at 1.4825 marks, below its 1.5035 marks late Friday in New York but up from 1.4770 marks in Tokyo Friday.

Against the Japanese currency, the dollar closed at 124.00 yen, down 0.33 yen from Friday and also below its Friday finish of 124.55 yen in New York. After opening at 123.68 yen, it ranged between 123.65 yen and 124.25 yen.

Dollar-yen spot trading totaled $5.574 billion, up from $3.028 billion Friday.

The victory of the French referendum, while narrow, helped calm currency markets frazzled last week by worries that a "no" vote would doom the Maastricht treaty on forging closer political and economic ties in Europe.

But there was disappointment that the meeting of the Group of Seven major industrialized nations' finance ministers and central bankers over the weekend did not produce an agreement to lower German rates.

"Nothing can be solved until Germany cuts interest rates," said Masako Matsuyama-Smith, a currency trader at Midland Bank. "That's where the problem came from."

Meanwhile, share prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed mixed, with the main index's retreat on profit-taking in the last hour exceeding its gain of more than 240 points in early trading.

The 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average closed at 18,066.24 points, down 100.56 points, or 0.55 percent from Friday's close. The average had climbed 50.28 points, or 0.12 percent, on Friday.

Traders said, however, that buyer interest likely would remain high this week ahead of the government's expected $8 billion investment in the market next Monday.

The funds represent the first part of $22.4 billion in postal life insurance funds earmarked for investment in stocks during the fiscal year.

Volume on the first section was thin at 230 million shares, down from 333.57 million shares Friday. Advancing issues narrowly outnumbered decliners 489 to 450, while 184 issues remained unchanged.

The Tokyo Stock Price Index of all issues listed on the first section rose 11.88 points, or 0.88 percent, to 1,365.93. On Friday, it had fallen 1.58 points, or 0.12 percent.

Dealers said most of the day's activity was concentrated in Nikkei-index issues.

Domestic animals in wild after Andrew

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — It's a jungle out there now in post-hurricane Dade County, and family cats are no match for escaped pythons.

Animal trapper Todd Hardwick tried to explain this to the customer who summoned him to get a 9-foot snake out of the bushes.

"I arrived to find four little girls with tears running down their faces, and the guy screaming frantically, 'That's my cat in that snake!'" Hardwick said. "I went over to the bushes and there was a python over there with a monstrous lump in it."

Hardwick captured the snake, expressed regrets to the family and hustled on to his next call. He has been busy since Hurricane Andrew.

Wildlife officials have no idea how many animals were uncaged by the storm. But thousands of horses, cows and pigs wandered off when farm fences blew down, and many of the county's 240 holders of exotic-animal permits reported losing their stock.

One snake dealer said all 60 of his boa constrictors slithered away, and at least 200 of the estimated 3,000 monkeys that escaped from research and breeding facilities are still scampering around, Hardwick said.

"They're terrified. Half the ones I've caught actually look happier when I put them in a cage," Hardwick said.

The same fear of the unknown stopped tigers, bears and other dangerous animals from fleeing Miami's Metrozoo after the storm smashed fences, said assistant curator Ron Magill. About 175 birds died or flew away when the aviary blew down, and many of the remaining 900 or so animals have been sent to other zoos and parks while Metrozoo rebuilds, he said.

All the escaped horses in the county are corralled now, but finding feed and volunteers to care for them until the owners return has been difficult, said Morgan Silver of Horse Protection of Florida. The organization has placed 97 horses on a Homestead farm and is helping to treat 400 others that are injured.

The hurricane overwhelmed the county animal shelter, already a grim place where hundreds of cats and dogs must be put to death each week. Lost pets with tags are being kept indefinitely, but surrendered pets and those without ID are killed after five days.

"These pets don't understand what's going on and it really wrenches your stomach to see it," said Doug Verhougstraete, coordinating relief efforts at the shelter.

Every weekend the lobby is crowded with hundreds of hurricane victims giving up pets because they have nowhere to keep them. "They're crying, they're hysterical. It's just like the state coming in and removing your child," Verhougstraete said.

Meanwhile, volunteers working out of Army tents and recreational vehicles have set up a Small Animal MASH Unit that has saved thousands of lost, unwanted or injured dogs and cats.

Terri Crisp, a cat trapper from a San Francisco animal welfare group, drives around in a jeep loaded with cages, cat food and a net on a 10-foot pole. "They're being killed and mutilated, running across streets, crushed by bulldozers," she said.

Construction worker John Gaipher brought a mangy Doberman pinscher into the MASH unit after carrying it around in the back of his pickup for four days. He said the dog walked onto his property from a demolished trailer park next door.

Bond election vital to town

Absentee voting is now under way for the Oct. 10 bond elections regarding flooding on Beals Creek and street repairs.

It is vitally important to the future of our community that voters approve both bonds.

Every time it floods, the estimated cost to the community in lost wages, water damage, emergency services and other related expenses amounts to nearly $1.3 million.

That annual loss is more than the total amount of financial liability the city would face if all expenses were maximized on the project.

The truth is that local taxpayers can get by with as little as $200,000 cost for the total project because of land donations promised by Union Pacific and the availability of the landfill to dump the dredged material.

That means that for about 2 cents per day per Big Spring resident for a one-year period we would receive several million of our tax dollars back through work performed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers — and alleviate the flood problem as well.

Yes, taxes will increase with the passage of these much-needed bonds. The question is, How much will we continue to lose in potential businesses and residents if we don't get the work done?

We urge you to join us in voting for both bond issues... for our community's future... for our children's future... because Big Spring cares.

Remember what Perot did

To the editor:
H. Ross Perot will not tell you how he intends to solve our national economic woes, so allow me to remind you how he "solved" Texas economic and educational problems.

I'll get straight to the points I wish to make. As a direct result of Perot's pressure on our Texas legislators in the passage of House Bill 72, the Educational Reform Bill, our state government now:

1. Is contemplating practical education only for the 30 percent or less of our public school students who are "college bound"

2. Has had to significantly raise taxes to meet educational mandates prescribed.

3. Robs the private pension fund of the Teacher Retirement System of Texas (T.R.S.) to the amount of 1 percent of its principal each year for 10 years in a row.

Perot's vision placed mandated computer education in our middle, junior high, and high schools throughout Texas. When asked how Texas could pay for this mandate, Perot wanted to abolish competitive athletics and vocational education.

Computer education is wonderful, but so is a Mercedes Benz. Not everyone in Texas can afford to drive the very best of automobiles just like we have not been able to afford all the computer mandated courses in our public school system, if mandated, it probably should be at the junior or senior level only; and if an individual school district is wealthy enough to afford computer education at more levels, then, more power to it.

In defense of competitive athletics, Perot does not understand there are certain disciplines developed in those programs that are difficult to learn anywhere else. The entire child needs to be developed, not just the academic portion of each student.

Supporting vocational education is a certain priority in my mind. Currently, only about three out of 10 high school graduates in Texas are going to college, and that does not include public school dropouts. Vocational education not only helps prepare the more than 70 percent of our public school students to be a productive member of society, but it also helps students to prepare for future careers in architecture, engineering, and other related technologies. If it were left up to Perot, there would be no public school options in vocational education available.

In support of my second point, public education in Texas is the single largest expense to the taxpayer. In the Texas Constitution, it is unlawful for our state government to operate with expenses greater than revenue. It is obvious to me that education is one of the reasons, if not the only reason that taxes have risen. Again, this is a result of Perot's "superior guidance" to his fellow Texans.

The 3rd point deals with how Perot's mandates were financed in Texas. Private pension funds of Texas teachers were used to balance the stage budget. As a direct result of increased expenditures and decreasing revenues, our state government cleverly worded ballots to have voter approval to legally tap into the T.R.S. for lump sums of money it otherwise could not raise without the further increase of taxes.

Texas is now robbing T.R.S. of 1 percent of its principal each year for ten years in a row! The Texas legislature claims it will pay T.R.S. back if it ever needs to perform such action. Since the passage of this amendment our state legislature has appropriated an additional sum of $250 million, and failed to pay mandated matching funds to the T.R.S. for one full biennium. If accurate calculations were possible to determine on the amount of money "borrowed" from T.R.S. at an estimated 8 percent return from the mutual funds, bonds, and real estate in which it invests may be in excess of $3 billion! If Texas cannot stay out of the red on its own, how can it ever pay back the money it has appropriated from its state employees' private savings? This is a direct result of H. Ross Perot's pressure placed on our state legislators to pass H.B. 72, the educational reform of which he is so proud!

Now — I've expressed how I perceive H. Ross Perot has operated in Texas. My questions are:

1. How will he solve our national economic and educational woes? (Not the way he reformed Texas, I hope!)

2. Will his influential pressure continue to raise taxes?

3. Will he "lead" national congressmen to "rob" more private pension funds?

Oh! Wait! I've got it! Maybe he will allow the national government, through constitution amendment, to "borrow" 1 percent of his personal savings each year for 10 years in a row and pay him back if he ever needs it!

Adding up lawyers, Quayle subtracts

At last, somebody has come up with an answer to Dan Quayle's provocative question about the disgusting glut of American lawyers.

You surely know Quayle's question: "Does America really need 70 percent of the world's lawyers?"

He's been asking that since he began bashing lawyers, to the delight of this country's lawyer-haters.

If you think about it, that is a stunning figure. As big and wonderful as this country is, we represent less than 10 percent of the world's population.

Yet, as Quayle says, we have 70 percent of the world's lawyers.

Meanwhile, as Quayle and others point out, Japan has only a few thousand lawyers, while we have more than half a million of them. Why, there are probably more lawyers in Chicago than in all of Japan.

This raises further questions: Is Japan's merciful lack of lawyers the reason why that country is so efficient, because it doesn't have hordes of lawyers goofing things up? Only one Japanese lawyer for every 14,000 Japanese citizens?

And are we inefficient and struggling to keep up because we have one lawyer for every 700 Americans?

What is the answer?

Well, the answer to Quayle's question has been provided by two men: Ray August, an associate professor of law at Washington State University, and Toshika Kitawaki, an associate professor of law at Nihon University in Tokyo. They've written articles about this strange contrast. But because they don't make speeches on TV at political conventions, few people know about them.

Mike Royko

So here is their answer to Dan Quayle's question. It's a lot of bunk. One might even say it is an outright lie.

That's right, America does not have 70 percent of the world's lawyers. We have less than 10 percent.

And it is a myth (or a lie, if you want to be nasty) that Japan doesn't have many lawyers. It's loaded with them. It probably has more per capita than we do.

A lot of other countries do, too, including West Germany, Austria, Italy and most of Latin America. There are at least 34 countries that have more lawyers per capita.

So how did this myth (or lie) get started and become part of modern folklore?

Because when the Vice President of the United States says something — even if he's Dan Quayle — we assume he has some idea what he's talking about.

But it turns out that he doesn't. Or that he knows it's baloney but it makes for a good political speech.

What Quayle, or his speechwriters, have done is play cute games with statistics.

Here's how the game is played, according to the two law professors who are far more knowledgeable on the subject than Quayle.

In the United States, you get to be a lawyer by going to law school and passing a bar exam. Then you can write wills, defend ax murderers, practice corporate law, do tax work, become a judge. In other words, anything in the field of law.

But that's not how it works in Japan. And in many other countries.

In Japan, you go to law school. About 60,000 law students graduate each year.

About half of them take a test to get a license that will permit them to set up a law office, go into court, argue cases and maybe become judges.

But like many enterprises in Japan, law is a closed society. Fewer than 500 of the 60,000 graduating lawyers receive these licenses.

So what happens to the others? Do they drive cabs, slice sushi or stick swords in their tummies out of humiliation?

Of course not. They do what hundreds of thousands of American lawyers do.

They go to work in the law departments of big corporations, where they handle corporate legal matters, write contracts, negotiate deals and so on. Or they go into government and handle government legal matters.

According to the two law professors, almost all of Japan's huge corporate and government legal departments are staffed by these non-licensed lawyers. The only thing they can't do is go into court and argue a case. When this happens, they bring in one of the outside licensed lawyers.

Many of them become big corporate executives, government leaders, bureaucrats. Most of the top Japanese business and political figures are law graduates. Or "law providers," as they are called.

The two professors found similar systems in other countries. In England, there are barristers and solicitors. In Germany, there are several categories of lawyers. France, too.

So when Quayle, or his hired brains, juggled the figures, they omitted most of the other categories, even though they perform the same kind of non-trial work that most American lawyers do.

And that's how they came up with the 70 percent figure — by not bothering to count a few million people who are trained in the law, do legal work and by American standards would be considered lawyers.

But I can understand Quayle making that kind of mistake. All those foreign lawyers, that's a lot of counting.

And even if Quayle used all of his fingers and toes, he wouldn't get past 20.

Too bad lobby writes gun laws

The boy was 4 years old. That was the one cold fact in a tangled weave of who-what-when-where-why that I could not forget.

It was a story that had everything our violent society fosters: a handgun, a murder, an attempted suicide, a hero, a history of abuse.

At a humming service station near an interstate exit at Escatawpa, Miss., an angry William Lee Gorish reportedly aimed a gun at the head of Maureen Marie Geddie. Friends say she was breaking off their troubled relationship, something she had been trying to do for about a year.

Bystanders say he shot her three times while her son watched. The cliches of violence were in place: the dying scream, the pool of blood, the traumatized child, horrified witnesses.

A U.S. Army medic, Scott Schubert, was passing through Mississippi on his way to Fort Polk, La. He rushed from a telephone booth to help the boy, and even that had a melodramatic, Superman quality.

The hero might have been shot, too, only the gunman by now was aiming at himself. Doctors do not know if the boyfriend will live.

Unless I miss my guess, it's not a story that will command much attention beyond the local media. Its most horrible details are all too common. After all, the principals are anonymous people who live in trailer parks, not Woody and Mia firing at each other through celebrity lawyers from their Central Park apartments.

Rheta Grimsley Johnson

And nobody caught the action on video.

But reporter Karen Nelson did a good job of describing the grim scene and the bereft boy.

"When will my mommy quit bleeding?" the child asked a cashier at the service station. He was fair-skinned, "a beautiful little boy," one witness said. He looked like the dead mother.

I wonder how many mothers will bleed to death on the pavement before this country decides there are too many guns in too many hands. How many men? How many teen-agers? How many infants?

Does each senseless death make us more immune to the horror, or will the staggering tally eventually puncture our consciousness? When will we say "Enough!" and protect ourselves from our own base instincts?

Without the gun, this still could have been an ugly story. The rejected boyfriend might have slapped or punched or kicked the woman. He had done it before, witnesses claim, once because she didn't want to watch a New Orleans Saints-Miami Dolphins football game.

He might even have broken the neck of a soft drink bottle and slashed her throat.

But chances are good — most sensible people and statistics would agree — that without the ready handgun, she might have been alive to press charges, to start over, to take care of her son. She at least would have had a fighting chance.

The bumper sticker logic of the National Rifle Association is flawed. When will those in charge be man enough to admit it? Those cold, dead fingers are not around guns; they are attached to the victims.

It's true, people kill people. Most of them are not using strychnine. The killings are happening at such an alarming rate that most of us don't even notice anymore.

But our children notice. Our "family" channels on cable television ban sex but not guns. Our movie ratings are more about red-flagging nudity than simulated murder. Concerned citizens get more worked up about oversized water pistols than real guns.

We pretend to be shocked that junior high schoolers with Ninja Turtle backpacks are packing pistols, that brothers kill brothers with the weapons left under the lace-edged pillowcases of suburban bedrooms.

Yet we allow a rich, powerful and selfish lobby to write the gun laws.

The boy was 4. His mother is dead for no good reason. A man with a gun killed her.

Do we react or turn the page?

Brenda Brooks

Diversity new word at work

I spent last week attending a work-related school in Bandera. Of the 20 people in attendance, I was one of two blacks and the only female.

While there, I had a little spare time and read no less than four articles on diversity in the work place. That's the new buzzword in corporate America these days.

Fortune magazine says that dozens of corporate giants, from AT&T to Johnson & Johnson to Xerox have hired full-time diversity managers.

These managers are charged with the job of making the work place more hospitable to talent of either sex and all colors.

There are some hard business reasons behind this. With the flat birth rate, there simply won't be enough white males available later in the decade and into the next century to satisfy the work force demand.

Another reason is the way corporations view the marketplace. It is no longer simply America, but the world. Most major corporations view themselves as global corporations and their work force will reflect this if they are to stay competitive.

The last reason is just common sense, you hire and train the best and the brightest you can find.

While affirmative action has some serious drawbacks, I think it has shown a lot of people that there are people of all colors who if given a chance can perform at the same level as their white co-workers.

Now don't get me wrong, there are bad employees of every color, but this column isn't about those folks.

Some people sincerely believe that prior to affirmative action, the majority of the hiring was done on the principle of the best person for the job got the job. Of course, most of us who work for large companies know there is a lot more to be said for who you know rather than what you know.

The bottom line for our economy and our future as a nation is we must develop talent wherever we find it. Racism and sexism are no longer just moral concerns — they have become economic ones as well.

Cowboys move mark to 3-0

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING (AP) — Michael Irvin was just 36 yards short of the Dallas Cowboys 26-year-old receiving record set by bullet Bob Hayes in 1966.

Not too shabby for somebody who didn't go to training camp.

Irvin caught eight passes, three for touchdowns, and had a career-high 210 yards in a 31-20 victory over the Phoenix Cardinals Sunday that got Dallas off to its first 3-0 start in nine years.

It was the eighth consecutive regular-season victory for Dallas while Phoenix (0-3) suffered its 11th straight loss.

Irvin's scoring passes covered 87, 41, and 4 yards in the fifth-best receiving day in Cowboys history.

"This definitely was my best game," Irvin said. "Somebody said I came close to the 'Bullet,' but I didn't even know what his record was."

Irvin said he felt he was almost back to 100 percent after his holdout in which he received a little over $1 million a year.

"The catching is easy and the running is easy but taking the licks ain't easy," he said. "I don't want to hear another word about me being rusty. I want to put that holdout stuff behind me. I think you could see from today I'm not rusty."

The only mistakes Irvin made all day was fumbling a reverse handoff from Smith. He also accidentally gave coach Jimmy Johnson a busted lip.

Irvin ran into Johnson on the sidelines in the second quarter and the headset microphone bloodied Johnson.

"It was a good thing Mike had a big day after he busted my lip," Johnson joked after the game. "He had a tremendous day."

Troy Aikman said it was one of those days where he had a perfect touch and Irvin ran near-perfect routes.

"Mike just kept getting open," Aikman said. "That 87-yarder was something. He did all the work."

Emmitt Smith, who scored a touchdown and rushed for 112 yards, said Irvin "got his touchdowns for himself. He didn't need any help from me. I got a couple of blocks for him downfield. Usually, he does that for me."

"We just couldn't handle Irvin and Smith," said Phoenix coach Joe Bugel. "They had big players making big plays. We just have to play at a different level when we play Dallas. Let's face it, Dallas and Philadelphia are the class of this division."

The Cowboys struck for a touchdown just 61 seconds into the Dallas Cowboys defender Tony Tolbert (92) forces Phoenix Cardinals quarterback Chris Chandler (17) to fumble during the third quarter at Texas game on the second play from scrimmage.

Stadium in Irving Sunday afternoon. The Cowboys recovered the ball.

Irvin took a 15-yard pass from Aikman and turned it into an 87-yard scoring play, fourth longest in Cowboys history.

Irvin beat Lorenzo Lynch's coverage, then broke Michael Zordich's tackle for the Cowboys' longest pass play since Roger Staubach hit Tony Dorsett on a 91-yarder in 1978.

"It was just a simple out," Irvin said. "I had some great blocking in front of me. I just had enough gas to make it."

"I thought I could make a play on the ball," Lynch said. "He just twisted away from me. It was frustrating."

After Phoenix had tied the game at 7-all on a 34-yard Chris Chandler to Randal Hill touchdown pass, Irvin victimized the Cardinals again on a 41-yard scoring pass from Aikman.

Irvin's third touchdown pass came in the third period, delighting the crowd of 62,575 fans and giving Dallas an insurmountable 28-10 lead.

Ivory Lee Brown scored his first career touchdown for Phoenix by punching across from a yard out with 4:47 to play. Phoenix recovered an onside kick and moved to the Dallas 8 where Tony Tolbert sacked Chris Chandler for a loss on fourth-and-2.

Chandler completed 28 of 43 passes for 383 yards but many of the completions came against the Cowboys' prevent defense.

"Chandler had a good day," Johnson said.

Oilers boot Chiefs in overtime, 23-20

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers coach Jack Pardee saw what he wanted to see — a victory — and that was all that counted.

Kansas City had to make a mistake in overtime to finally give the Oilers a chance, Al Del Greco kicked three ugly field goals and Warren Moon again elicited boos from expectant fans.

But everything was beautiful to Pardee because Del Greco's 39-yard kick with 1:55 elapsed in overtime, gave the Oilers a 23-20 victory Sunday after a game of mistakes and lost scoring chances.

"We trusted the kicker," Pardee said. "It was flat and it wasn't pretty but it got over the post so that was beautiful. I'm just so proud of all our team for hanging in there and getting this victory."

The Oilers tiptoed on the edge of disaster the entire game, falling behind 13-6 at the half on Nick Lowery field goals of 31 and 52 yards and Dave Krieg's five-yard touchdown pass to Todd McNair.

Lowery's 52-yarder tied him with New Orleans' Morten Andersen for the most career kicks of 50 yards or more at 19.

Moon threw two interceptions to Bennie Thompson, causing rumblings among the 60,955 spectators but he completed 18 of 29 passes for 279 yards and touchdowns of eight yards to Leonard Harris and 21 yards to Ernest Givins.

Del Greco also kicked field goals of 31 and 54 yards. His 54-yarder also was a line drive on the final play of the first half that was a personal best and second longest in Oiler history to George Blanda's 55-yard in 1961.

Pardee liked that too.

After Thompson's second interception early in the third quarter, the Chiefs drove to the Oilers' two-yard line and were threatening to stretch their 13-6 halftime lead.

The Oilers held and on fourth down, Lowery missed a 20-yard field goal.

Early in the fourth quarter, Harris' touchdown catch tied it and the Oilers took a 20-13 lead on Givins' catch with 3:15 to play.

Dave Krieg, still learning the Chiefs' offense, wasn't finished. The Chiefs drove 85 yards in 14 plays as McNair scored on a four-yard draw and Lowery's extra point forced the overtime.

Kansas City won the toss but Krieg overthrew Birden with a bomb on first down and on third down Smith recovered Birden's fumble to set up Del Greco.

Despite the loss, Kansas City coach Marty Schottenheimer was almost as upbeat as Pardee.

Moon, booed lustily when he threw five interceptions in a season-opening loss to Pittsburgh, was mystified at Sunday's crowd reaction.

"The times they're booing is getting kind of ridiculous," Moon said.

Big Spring sweeps tennis matches

LUBBOCK — The Big Spring High School tennis team was perfect Saturday as it won matches against Amarillo High, Lubbock High and Brownfield.

The Big Spring varsity out-pointed Lubbock High 10 matches to eight and Amarillo High 13 matches to five. The Big Spring girls didn't lose a single match. The Big Spring junior varsity team defeated Brownfield 12-6, prompting Big Spring coach Todd Spears to say his team, 8-1 in non-district play, is fit for district play Tuesday.

"We're ready to play. We're ready to get down to some matches that mean something," said Spears. "The guys are finally playing well and the girls have been playing well all year long."

Big Spring begins district play Tuesday by hosting Sweetwater at 4:30 p.m. at Figure Seven Tennis Center.

Booster Club meets Tuesday

The Big Spring Quarterback Club will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the high school planetarium.

All members and parents are urged to attend.

Eagles defense dominates Broncos

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Philadelphia's offense was as dominating as its defense. Randall Cunningham threw for three touchdowns and Philadelphia held Denver to 82 yards total offense in a 30-0 Eagles win.

Cunningham hit on 18 of 25 passes for 270 yards and scrambled for 46 more as the Eagles went 3-0 for the first time in 11 years. He threw two TD passes to Calvin Williams and one to Fred Barnett, while Herschel Walker, who rushed for 229 yards the first two weeks, was held to 53.

The Broncos crossed midfield only twice — once on a punt return — and managed just four first downs.

"We knew coming in that they were a great defense. But they just manhandled us," said John Elway, 8 of 18 for 59 yards and an interception.

Packers 24, Bengals 23
Brett Favre took just five plays in the final 67 seconds to edge Green Bay (1-2) past Cincinnati (2-1).

Favre, replacing injured Don Majkowski, ended the five-play drive with a 35-yard TD to Kitrick Taylor, capping the Packers' 21-point quarter.

Mike Holmgren got his first NFL victory while the Bengals' David Shula took his first loss. Majkowski sustained ligament damage to his left ankle and will be out from a week to a month.

Terrell Buckley, Green Bay's top draft pick, returned a punt 58 yards to begin the rally.

Saints 10, Falcons 7
Atlanta (1-2) lost for the first time in the Georgia Dome on Morten Andersen's 47-yard field goal with 1:51 to go. Bobby Hebert's 21-yard screen pass to Craig Heyward set up the winning kick for New Orleans (2-1).

An 11-yard pass TD pass from Hebert to Quinn Early followed Chris Miller's 14-yard touchdown strike to Mike Pritchard.

49ers 31, Jets 14

NFL Roundup

San Francisco may have won at Giants Stadium for the second time this season, but the 49ers (2-1) aren't ready to call it a second home.

"I hate playing here," Jerry Rice said after catching five passes for 73 yards and a touchdown. "The fans have so many names for you. One guy told me he hopes I break my neck today. The fans are really hostile here."

Two of the 49ers' starters may not have broken their necks, but they did sustain serious injuries. Receiver John Taylor will need at least eight weeks to heal his broken left leg, while defensive end Larry Roberts tore ligaments in his right knee.

Steve Young threw for two touchdowns and ran for another in the first half when the 49ers built a 24-0 lead.

Seahawks 10, Patriots 6
How many times did Seattle need to knock down Hugh Millen to keep him from helping New England get back up? Six was almost not enough.

The Seahawks (1-2) scored on the game's first drive, a 2-yard run by Chris Warren, and sacked Millen six times. But Millen moved New England (0-2) to the Seattle 25 minute before Patrick Hunter intercepted him in the end zone with 35 seconds left.

Warren had a career-high 122 yards. Defensive end Cortez Kennedy had 2½ sacks and helped Seattle force three turnovers as Tom Flores got his first win since taking over the Seahawks.

Vikings 26, Buccaneers 20
Minnesota's backup QB outplayed Tampa Bay's backup as Dennis Green won his home debut as coach of the Vikings (2-1).

Sean Salisbury, playing his first NFL game in five years, replaced injured Rich Gannon and threw a 29-yard touchdown pass to Chris Carter. Gannon left when he hit his hand on an opposing helmet while throwing a 30-yard TD to Carter.

The Buccaneers (2-1), who had won their first two games at home under coach Sam Wyche, went without Vinny Testaverde, who lost feeling in his right arm after being tackled.

Browns 28, Raiders 16
Eric Metcalf knew only one way to run against the Los Angeles Raiders.

"On offense, we spread the field out and it paid off. Every time I touched the ball, I was headed toward the end zone," said Metcalf, who scored four touchdowns, three on passes from first-time Cleveland starter Todd Philcox.

Metcalf scored his first two touchdowns on the Browns' first two possessions following recovered fumbles deep in Los Angeles territory.

Even though Todd Marinovich threw for 395 yards to outdo former starter Jay Schroeder, who had 380 yards last week, the Raiders lost their seventh straight.

The Browns (1-2) didn't commit a turnover and Philcox, replacing injured Bernie Kosar, threw for 200 yards.

Redskins 13, Lions 10
Washington kept Detroit's run-and-shoot offense in check for three quarters and held on for its 16th straight victory in D.C.

The Lions got only three first downs and Barry Sanders had just 23 yards over three quarters before rallying to make it close.

Rodney Peete connected with Willie Green for a touchdown on a 67-yard stop-and-go pattern that made it 13-10 with 9:45 left.

Melvin Jenkins then picked off Mark Ryphen's pass — Ryphen's third interception — at the Detroit 40 with 4:37 remaining, but Jason Hanson missed a 49-yard field goal that would have tied the game.

Dolphins 26, Rams 10
Miami avoided any late-game collapses, scoring on its first three possessions to beat Los Angeles.

"In two ball games, we've had too many scoring opportunities that we haven't capitalized on after the first two drives," said coach Don Shula, whose team blew leads in the fourth quarter of their last two games. "When we get the opportunity to put somebody away, we've got to do it."

The Rams (1-2) seemed on the verge of a comeback when it closed to 20-10 early in the fourth quarter, but Miami dominated the rest of the way.

Mark Higgs led the Dolphins (2-0) with 111 yards rushing in 23 carries. Dan Marino threw two touchdown passes.

Steelers 23, Chargers 6
Like Dallas, Pittsburgh looked more like the Super Bowl Steelers of the 1970s than of recent seasons. Bill Cowher, Chuck Noll's successor, became the first rookie head coach in team history to win his first three games.

"I'm not going to get caught up in that," Cowher said. "Our football team knows what it has to do. We'll just keep riding this thing and take it as far as it'll go."

Neil O'Donnell threw two touchdown passes and ran for another as Pittsburgh forced three turnovers to keep the Chargers winless.

O'Donnell completed 17 of 24 passes for 215 yards, with one interception. Barry Foster, who had 297 yards in his first two games, was held to 31 yards on 22 carries.

Bills 38, Colts 0
Thankfully for the Indianapolis offense, Bruce Smith is a nice guy. Buffalo's defensive end had 2½ sacks and five tackles behind the line of scrimmage, but said he took it easy on the battered Colts.

"I just didn't feel that it was necessary to put a damaging blow on (Jack) Trudeau or Jeff George, if he was in there," said Smith, mindful that Trudeau and George have been injured this season. "I have friends on that team and that's just the way I felt about it."

The defense, though, did about everything else to rebound from allowing 598 yards to San Francisco last week.

Henry Jones had interception returns for touchdowns of 23 and 82 yards as Buffalo (3-0) beat its ex-offensive coordinator Ted Marchibroda, who left in the offseason to coach the Colts.

by the BSISD school board in hiring a new vice principal when a qualified bilingual applicant, who was a minority, was overlooked. The need for minority counselors was voiced during the dispute, ending in the hiring of Rey Villareal as a high school counselor. Villareal is presently the Marcy Elementary principal.

In 1986, LULAC did another voter registration drive through the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project of San Antonio.

As the different voices of the Hispanic community began being heard, education became the second tier of LULAC's focus. Since its foundation, the organization has given numerous scholarships, including three $1,000 in 1987.

DeAnda says emphasis on education must go beyond the classroom. Minorities must also educate themselves politically, she said.

"There is not an aspect of our lives that is not controlled by politics," she said. "We are becoming the most, but we are the least in the sense that we do not vote."

She added that she would like to unite with all other civic organizations locally to set up a registration drive before the November elections.

"If you don't understand how to vote, put pride aside and ask someone if not for yourself for children and grandchildren," DeAnda said.

In the middle 1980s, LULAC's membership locally exceeded more than 60. As the group membership grew, different opinions the direction and the philosophy of the organization materialized. And in 1990, Raul Marquez, LULAC President since 1987, resigned the presidency and his membership. In 1991, LULAC chapter 4495 headed by Marquez was chartered.

"Because we have two councils locally does not mean we are divided," he said. "We don't all have the same opinions on certain issues, but I believe our ultimate goals are the same."

Presently, chapter 4375 is headed by Margurette Davis, who agrees with Marquez. "We have the same goals, but different approaches," she said. "I don't see having two chapters as a disadvantage."

In the past year due to health problems and other personal tragedies among members, chapter 4375's activity has decreased. Davis plans to regroup the organization and reactivate it.

"We hope to start awarding scholarships again," she said. "I also hope to work with chapter 4495 in putting on the Cinco de Mayo and Diez y Sies de Septiembre fiestas."

The downtown celebrations in honor of Mexico's fight for independence have been organized by chapter 4495. The three-day events have included food booths; presentations by community leaders, both Hispanic and Anglo; musical entertainment; and scholarship awards.

DeAnda, Marquez and Davis agree LULAC's role in the 1990s is focused on education. "We must educate our youth, as well as our elders," Davis said.

Historical novelist to visit local schools

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Historical novelist Maurine Walpole Liles visits elementary schools today and this week for dramatic presentations of her fact-based, fiction novels depicting the journeys of early pioneers.

Her books, Rebecca of Blossom Prairie and Kitty of Blossom Prairie, sketch the lives of a Texas family in 1851.

"It is going to be wonderful because she is an author and will be dressed in the costume (of the period)," said Andre Clark, principal of Bauer Magnet. "It will call attention to how women's dress has changed through the years."

Liles presentation will focus on Rebecca Walpole Garner, the great-grandmother of Liles, who was widowed with six children and embarked on a 700-mile trek from Tennessee to Blossom Prairie, Red River County, Texas.

A wagon train took them southwest on a three-month journey that tested their courage and determination.

Rebecca hoped for the best for her children, and succeeded in nurturing a prosperous family. She was the grandmother of John Nance Garner IV who was the first Texan to become speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives and vice president of the United States. The author is a native Texan who lives in Austin. She received her bachelor's degree from Texas Christian University. As a teacher, Liles has taught public and private schools in Texas.

Liles will conduct a series of half-day long presentations at each elementary school: Marcy Elementary, today; Moss Elementary, Tuesday; Bauer Elementary, Wednesday; College Heights, Thursday; Washington Elementary, Friday.

Designing a life with color

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

The sun shone overhead and spilled bright, yellow light about Big Spring residences.

The sunshine sought colorful material to dance on and spotted a large stained glass dome atop a local house.

Creeping through the multi-colored glass, the light splashed hues of red, green, yellow, blue, pink, purple and orange onto the floor inside the home.

The stained glass dome is the creation of Bill Brooks, Big Spring resident since 1967 and owner of The Design Place since 1976. "It's the best thing I've ever done in stained glass."

Brooks, self-taught in wood carving and stained glass, has done pieces for area churches, residents and businesses — including restoration on the Potton House.

Creating the architecture of local houses and those as distant as Austin, Brooks is a designer in wood for 28 years and stained glass for 14 years.

"(Designer) means different things to different people," he said. "I measure (my work) up against the great artists. How did they do it? ... (My work) can not look amateur."

His profession focuses on house plans and business commercial building plans, but he also constructs stained glass windows, carves furniture, writes historical articles, draws sketches and is working on a novel.

In his own home, examples of his crafts fill every corner — an intricately carved fireplace, an old telephone booth door converted with stained-glass for a bathroom entrance, a 12-foot-long overhanging china cabinet.

"When we built the house, we designed it and put in the finished work like wood working and stained glass," he said. "We liked the Victorian architecture."

Brooks' home stands out on his block with its unique Victorian design, soft yellow color and stained glass touches.

His inspiration for such creations developed as he was growing up.

As a child living on a small farm in Ira, near Snyder, Brooks began learning the tools of his father's trade. Crafting toy sailboats, cars and tractors, the young Brooks was on his way to defining his niche in life.

He graduated with a degree in industrial arts from North Texas

State University in 1963 with teacher certification. He received his master's in 1974.

He taught drafting and wood-working for about 12 years, including at Big Spring High School, before launching his own business.

"You pour your heart and soul into your business. You work night and day," he said. "I like anything that is a challenge. Somebody may want you to do something that has never been done before."

"I look at something, see a problem or challenge just like stained glass. I take the piece to the finish."

"I can't separate my work from me. I want to accomplish as much as I can of what I am proud," he said. "It's an accomplishment for me to write a novel. I like to take a challenge and see it through to the end."

Brooks served on the local school board for six years and was president for two years and vice president a year. He is married to Theda, who is a school teacher, and they have two daughters — are Tymi, 26, and Ginger, 22.

Bill Brooks, a local designer in wood and glass, doesn't believe in separating work from life. The local entrepreneur learned the art of designing in wood from his father, a carpenter.

New books: Adventure, thriller

Editor's note: Betty Condray, a member of Friends of the Library, compiled this list of new books at the Howard County Library. Her new books column will appear semimonthly, Mondays.

The following books are among the new additions to the Howard County Library this month:

Mexico by Alice Adams. No country on earth so intriguing, so infuriating, so captivating as the American imagination as does Mexico. To say that we are headed "south of the border" implies much more than a geographical location — it means adventure! Alice Adams discovered in Mexico, a rich and fertile source of inspiration and she has encountered and explored the various parts of this scenic beauty. In Mexico, Ms. Adams offers her unique experience and her impressions of the country's multiple personalities and incarnations.

Black, Red and Deadly: Black and Indian Gunfighters of the Indian Territories by Art Burton. Cherokee Bill, one of the meanest of the mean, was hanged for the murder of thirteen men by the time he was twenty! Author Art Burton recounts the exploits of Cherokee Bill and other black and Indian outlaws and lawmen in Black, Red and Deadly, the story of laws and lawlessness in the Indian Territory.

Smoke From This Altar by Louis L'Amour. This is the very first book Mr. L'Amour ever published. It appeared, to great critical praise, for sale only in Oklahoma bookstores more than fifty years ago. It was in Smoke From This Altar that L'Amour first gave public voice to his now celebrated spirit of wanderlust. It is vintage marriage and Clark Gable's "tell all" memoirs. Every juicy tidbit is grist for the gossip mill of Etta Rice, a flamboyant and feared columnist for the Hearst newspaper empire and her gritty young legman, Paris Chandler. Boldly refusing to be intimidated by vicious innuendo and brutal threats, the impetuous reporter relentlessly pursues news sources trying to learn the secrets of the big story he was uncovering. Burrowing deeper still into the tarnished heart of big city politics, Paris arrives at a place where the glittering dream machine is stripped down to its core of ruthless greed and rampant corruption.

Defeating Pain — The War Against a Silent Epidemic by Dr. Patrick Wall and Mervyn Jones. This inspiring book provides a beacon of hope for the millions of Americans who live with the cruel reality of unceasing pain. Frustrated patients are insisting that doctors recognize pain as a problem, in its own right, instead of unthinkingly dismissing it as a symptom of another illness or, worse still, as a product of the victim's imagination. Wall and Jones's eloquent plea, for those voiceless victims of pain who have been sorely neglected for years by our medical profession, demands to be heard. Now that we have finally committed ourselves to battle, the war against pain can truly be waged.

Other new books include: Divorce Yourself. National no-fault, no-lawyer divorce handbook. By Daniel Sitarz. Feed a Cold, Starve a Fever. A dictionary of medical folklore, by Carol Ann Rinzier.

Sandy Phifer, center, of the Dance Theatre of Harlem, instructs township children in South Africa during a dance workshop recently. The Harlem dancers went to the country for the opening of Johannesburg's New Civic Theatre and to boost the confidence of young people through dance.

What's that smell? Odor entices gamblers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Something smelly was going on when revenues jumped 45 percent one weekend last year at some slot machines in the Las Vegas Hilton.

A Chicago researcher says pleasant odors he piped into part of the cavernous casino induced gamblers to stay longer with the one-armed bandits and spend more money than they might have in an unscented casino.

Dr. Alan Hirsch said his findings could induce casinos to add odors to the bright lights and plush surroundings employed to win more money from gamblers.

"It is quite possible that, within the next few years, the use of odorants as a gambling incentive will be as common as the neon lights in the streets of Las Vegas," Hirsch said.

A neurologist who runs the Smell & Taste Treatment & Research Foundation in Chicago, Hirsch said he'll present his findings formally next April at the annual meeting of the Association of Chemoreception Sciences in Sarasota, Fla.

Several physicians who investigate the sense of smell, said they couldn't comment on Hirsch's study because it has been published.

But one, Dr. Michael Serby, director of psychiatric residency training and education at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, said of the researcher: "I have worked with Dr. Hirsch before, and he is legitimate."

Besides casinos, Hirsch said, odors could be used to stimulate people to exercise more in health clubs, relax better in movie theaters and reduce errors at video display terminals.

"The potential is enormous," Hirsch said in a telephone interview.

With cooperation of Hilton officials, Hirsch piped one odor around 18 slot machines and a second odor into a section with 28 machines. A third area with 22 machines was unscented, as a control.

During the 48-hour test conducted over a weekend in October 1991, gamblers dropped 45.11 percent more money into the machines with the first scent than was played during the weekends immediately before and after the test period.

Money gambled in the control area remained constant, as did money gambled in the area where the second, different odor, was piped in.

Hirsch said percentages were used because the Hilton wouldn't let him disclose slot machine revenues. He described the scent as "a blend of different fragrances with no well-defined high note."

He was keeping the smell's precise identity secret on his lawyer's advice, he said. When, after a previous scented experiment he reported an increased probability of sales of an athletic shoe, a fragrance maker later took the credit, Hirsch claimed.

Hirsch, whose foundation treats people who lose their sense of smell, said he believes the secret odor induced nostalgia in the gamblers, and the resulting mood change prompted them to gamble more.

Hilton Hotels Corp. spokesman Marc Grossman said the casino was intrigued by the study, but that was it.

"We thought it was kind of interesting," Grossman said. "What we'd do with it, we don't know."

"Everybody knows casinos are designed to appeal to the senses of sight and sound," he said. "Maybe smell is the next step."

Neighborhood watch guards homes

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCKPORT — In Diane Coots' neighborhood, the CB radio does the job of a badge and a gun.

Mrs. Coots was raised just a few blocks from the city limits sign. Now she's bringing up her own four children in a blue-shingled, two-story house just across the alley from where her parents still live.

When burglars hit her neighbor's house five times as well as other houses on her block, Mrs. Coots decided to take matters into her own hands. "I felt like we were being violated," Mrs. Coots said. "I was raised in this neighborhood. My kids are being raised in this neighborhood. I had to do something."

"When my husband bought a citizens band radio base for our home, I started patrolling and calling in to report what I saw."

Slowly, friends began to join Mrs. Coots' efforts. "Finally, someone asked if we shouldn't call and make sure what we were doing was legal," Mrs. Coots said.

They contacted Aransas County Sheriff's Deputy Ricky McLester. "These folks knew who was supposed to be in this neighborhood and who didn't live in the neighborhood. And I liked that," said McLester, who oversees the Aransas County Neighborhood Watch program. "And they were the remnants of a CB club."

Now, armed with CBs and a desire to fight crime, 13 Aransas County residents hit the streets each week in the subdivision. Since the volunteer crime fighters began patrolling a five-by-10-block area, calls to the sheriff's department from the area have decreased 30 percent, McLester said.

"Several hours a night, these folks are in cars with CBs out there riding around," he said. "If they find something strange or suspicious, they relay that back to the base station, call the sheriff's department and we come and check it out."

So far, calls from the group, which organized in March, haven't resulted in any arrests, but that doesn't concern McLester. "Their game plan is not necessarily to catch somebody," he said. "It is to prevent crime. They are out here making their efforts very public and letting people know, 'Hey, we're neighbors and we're keeping track of and watching our neighbors' property.'"

"Through their high-profile presence in this neighborhood, there is a preventive measure to keep crime from happening. That's what Neighborhood Watch is all about."

In addition to patrolling, members of the program carry hand radios and walk with elderly residents to protect them. "Before these people started operating, I'd been mugged once and robbed twice, and since they started, none of that has occurred," said Price Johnson, a 67-year-old homebound disabled veteran.

"We have older people who stop us and tell us how much they appreciate our patrols," said Bill Bannister, who helps patrol the streets. "They say now they don't mind going to the grocery store at night and coming home in the dark."

Johnson said the group has performed an invaluable service for its neighborhood.

McLester said the Aransas County watch group is unique because it patrols the streets using CBs and walkie-talkies and because participants are not losing interest in the program. "Most Neighborhood Watches form, and then after several weeks they have a fallout after accomplishing their first goals and getting the signs put up," he said. "But this group is meeting their goals and accomplishing other things as well."

Most of the people in the neighborhood seem to enjoy the patrols. "I think it's fantastic," said Ruth Ann Jones, who has lived in the neighborhood for six months. "It has helped me a lot at my house. There were a bunch of teenagers going through yards and all, and now most of that has stopped. There's not nearly as much trouble now as we had before the Neighborhood Watch group formed."

Ranch brings unlikely cowboys

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ENCINITOS RANCH — The 40,000 acres of this sandy, mesquite-studded South Texas ranch would seem to have little in common with Las Vegas, New York or Hawaii.

Much to the amazement of ranch owners Stephen "Mac" Burns and his wife Mary Dru, their working cattle operation has become one of the nation's vacation spots for people grown tired of bright lights, nightlife and breathtaking scenery.

"We're working cattle one day in 1989 when a friend told me, 'You know, a lot of people would love to come out and do this on their vacation.'"

"I thought he was nuts," Burns, 50, said as he sat in the rustic bunkhouse that serves as home to the temporary wranglers who have jumped at the chance for a working vacation.

Three years later and with a boost from the 1991 movie "City Slickers," starring Billy Crystal and Jack Palance, the operation 18 miles southwest of Rachel in Brooks County is a full-fledged success. The movie poked fun at city slickers who paid to help herd cattle on a ranch.

Vacations are being booked by everyone from retired New Jersey snowbirds and native

Texans to groups of French teenagers.

Ten French teen-agers, most of whom are from Paris, were spending a three-week vacation wrangling and riding under the blazing South Texas sun recently as Burns provided a tour of the ranch.

"When I came here, I did not like riding. Now I find the horse very much fun," said 16-year-old Laurent Frainias.

Frainias was one of the youngest members of the group, who were strangers until they dumped their bags in the bunkhouse and began sweating and toiling as ranch hands on their summer vacation arranged by a Paris tour operator.

Their laughter and good-natured ribbing filled the bunkhouse they share with the Burnses in a family atmosphere that prevails whenever vacationers visit the ranch.

Two rows of seven beds line each side of the bunkhouse — the girls on one side and the boys on the other — with separate bathrooms and showers.

"Ranch hands are a family, so that is the way we operate. The French kids are a little more mature about this kind of thing than American kids. We have never had any problems," Burns said.

Burns offers vacationers a working-ranch experience — rounding up and branding cattle, ear-marking calves and assorted other ranch duties under the watchful eyes of vaqueros who have handled cattle for decades.

"Everything except fixing fences," he joked. "Nobody likes that."

The vaqueros — most of whom are in the 60s and 70s — puff up with pride when temporary wranglers admire their skills at handling horses and cattle.

Scattered over the ranch are more than 1,300 cows and calves, in addition to a large collection of bulls and about 10 trained, working cow horses. The semi-wild cattle are moved from pasture to pasture by riders on horseback, with little human contact except during the roundups.

Despite language barriers, the Spanish-speaking vaqueros were able to keep the French-speaking wranglers from being hurt by the cattle, who use their bulk and muscle to do their talking.

Part-time wranglers stay in an open-air, co-ed bunkhouse where they are served country-style meals. Biscuits, bacon and eggs make up the breakfast fare, with afternoon and evening meals featuring staples such as pot roast, spaghetti or mesquite-grilled steaks.

Sweethearts reunite at 50th class reunion

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from the fellow who wondered if he should contact his high school sweetheart before their 20th high school reunion. You advised him to use whatever means he had to track her down. I heartily agree!

When my 20th high school reunion was approaching, I found myself in a similar situation. I wanted very much to see that very special fellow I had dated during my senior year. We had a little spat and I was hurt, so after graduation we drifted apart. I met a man and married in haste, but I kept in touch with my high school sweetheart, exchanging Christmas cards, etc. I even attended his wedding, and subsequently, my husband and I visited him and his wife in their home. Then we lost track each other. By last year, I had been divorced for three years --after a rather rocky marriage. I assumed that my high school sweetheart was still married, and I looked forward to seeing him and his wife at our 20th high school reunion. I was therefore dismayed when the reunion committee listed him as among those they could not locate. Having some idea of where he might be living, I tracked him down and telephoned him. I was shocked when he told me he had been divorced for 10 years --and even more shocked when he told me that he had tried to locate me several times because he still had feelings for me.

To make a long story short, we got together, and we are getting married in three weeks.

Abby, I agree emphatically that your correspondent should follow his heart, and I pray that he will be as fortunate as I was. -- P.C. IN SAUGERTIES, N.Y.

DEAR P.C.: Please add my prayers to yours. And may the rest of your lives be the best of your lives.

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago, I joined a club whose members are interested in antiques and their histories. Their meetings are held in the homes of the members.

I had one meeting in my home, and the next time it was my turn to have the group, I was turned down. I live in a small country-style house, nicely furnished and tastefully decorated, but I guess it wasn't posh enough for them. All the other members have lavishly decorated homes in the high-price range.

I feel very hurt about this; that's why I'm writing to you for advice. My first thought was to resign from the club, but I'm on an important committee and can't resign until my two-year term is up.

I am terribly upset and this is depressing me. What should I do? -- HURT IN MICHIGAN

DEAR HURT: Don't jump to any conclusions. Find out why you were passed over when it was your turn to have the meeting in your home.

If you were correct in assuming that your home wasn't posh enough for them, resign from the club --and don't worry about their replacing you on the "important" committee. That will be their problem. Who needs membership in a club of snobs who evaluate people by the kind of homes they live in?

FOR MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1992
HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A new attitude will help you surge ahead of the competition by late November. Decisiveness is a must in December, especially when it comes to your relationships. Do not let a personality conflict torpedo a promising project. Cooperating with an influential associate brings new business gains early in 1993. A romantic pairing next spring should result in a permanent alliance. Corporate networking contributes to your financial security.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: comic Bill Murray, actor Larry Hagman, novelists Fannie Flagg and Stephen King.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Display a positive attitude and an important relationship will turn around. A preoccupation with your health fades as you begin to feel better. Get out and socialize more.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Watch your step when dealing with hard-to-please authority figures. Projecting an aura of confidence will get you a front-row seat at an important meeting.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Change is inevitable. Starwise, there is no reason for you to fear the future. Although the love boat sails under cloudy skies at times, it will not sink. Have faith.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It is time to rethink your priorities and review the direction your life is taking. Let past mistakes guide, not discourage, you. New found resources help you get a pet project launched.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have more energy than in recent days. Tackle a complicated project you have been postponing. Protect a romantic dinner from interruptions or unwanted guests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid dwelling on a recent disappointment. Concentrate on winning -- the odds are in your favor! Your personal appeal is at an all-time high. Plan a romantic interlude.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Financial worries can overshadow all other concerns. Refuse to fret about matters beyond your control. A chance encounter could lead to a profitable business venture!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Examine a relationship that is going nowhere. Thinking things through ensures that you will not jump to conclusions or rush off in the wrong direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your new self-esteem enhances every aspect of your life. Review your goals before making any sudden moves. Family members should be consulted on domestic issues.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Better results will be obtained once you learn to go with the flow. A loophole will help you get out of a contract if you so desire. Listen to your conscience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your partner may be more vocal than usual today. Play the waiting game in both business and romance. If a legal matter reaches a stalemate, the delay could work in your favor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A secret that is revealed now makes you whistle with surprise! Your luck changes for the better. Before buying a car, or expensive jewelry, put some money away for a rainy day.
