Perot levels unsubstantiated charges

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — Ross Perot says he can't prove that Republican operatives planned to embarrass one of his daughters by distributing a phony picture of her, but that he decided to protect her by withdrawing from the presidential race in July.

"It was a risk I could not take," Perot said Sunday as he made a rare public campaign appearance in Pittsburgh.

Perot told supporters at another rally in New Jersey that he learned GOP operatives planned to use a computer-doctored photograph to "smear her before her wedding and actually disrupt the wedding ceremony," Carolyn Perot was married in August.

Vice President Dan Quayle in an interview today on ABC's "Good Morning America" denied Perot's charges.

"It's just so bizarre, it's simply not true," Quayle said. "Even the comments by Ross Perot last night never offered any real information, so it's just a bizarre event in this rather unpredictable campaign."

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called Perot's allegations "preposterous."

"It never happened," Fitzwater said. "There haven't been any dirty tricks against Ross Perot. This business about his daughter is just crazy and he's been told that and he knows that."

Perot told CBS' "60 Minutes" in an interview broadcast Sunday night that some of his information came from Scott Barnes, a shadowy figure who has tried to interest a number of news organizations in his claims of dirty tricks aimed at Perot.

Perot said he would not have withdrawn from the race based solely on information from Barnes, and that he received similar reports from two highly placed Republicans. He declined to identify them.

Bobby R. Burchfield, general counsel for the Bush-Quayle campaign, denied the allegations of dirty tricks and said Barnes had called the campaign several times.

"As soon as they found out that he was the crackpot that he so evidently is, they got him off the phone and did not follow up on any of his suggestions," Burchfield said on "60 Minutes."

Barnes could not be reached Sunday night. His home and work telephones have been disconnected.

Barnes has said he is a former intelligence operative for the government and wrote a book in the mid-1980s alleging the government sent him on a mission to Southeast Asia to locate POWs and MIAs. He says the team found live prisoners but was told to "liquidate the merchandise."

Perot said when he abandoned his campaign July 16 that he felt the Democratic Party had revitalized itself and that he could not win.

When he re-entered the race Oct. 1,

Perot said he was doing so because "neither political party has effectively addressed" economic and other concerns that are on the minds of the voters.

Perot told cheering supporters in New Jersey that he didn't tell his daughter why he quit the race until after her honeymoon. He quoted her as saying, "OK, the wedding's over, get back in the race."

"They were going to smear her with a fake photograph that they had done with a computer where you put a head on another body and they were actually going to have people in the church to disrupt her wedding," Perot told the Boston Herald, adding that the picture was to be given to supermarket tabloids.

Perot also contends that the Bush campaign intended to wiretap his Dallas business office. The head of the Dallas FBI office told "60 Minutes" that investigation had found no evidence of wiretapping.

Lambert seeks study on rates

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

City Manager Lanny Lambert will recommend at Tuesday's Big Spring City Council meeting that the city look into whether residential utility rates are as low as possible.

Big Spring's rates are the highest among several cities in the area, according to a report in an area newspaper, Lambert said in a recent memorandum to council members.

Based on average usage in San Angelo, Big Spring residents pay $61.75 a month compared to $43.50 in San Angelo, $54.99 in Midland, $53.83 in Odessa, $41.67 in Abilene and $59.95 in Brownwood.

"The reason for high water rates is that over 40 percent of our operation goes to the Colorado River Municipal Water District and we have fewer customers in which to spread out the costs as do the larger cities," Lambert said. "Maybe we need to consider some contract renegotiations with the Colorado River Municipal Water District."

Lambert said he is also concerned about low water volume sales in Big Spring the past three years. "Our water demand and usage has not increased for many years and has in fact substantially decreased the last several years."

Also on Tuesday's council agenda:

- The second and final reading for $7 million in certificates of obligation to make federal and state mandated improvements to the water treatment plant. The 5.39 percent interest rate for the bonds are the lowest in about 20 years, Lambert said. The council will also consider bids for the work.
- A report on the city's franchise tax. Council members may want to eventually consider bringing the average rate of 3.3 percent closer to 5 percent, which other cities in the state are "slowly going to," Lambert said. Total annual receipts for Big Spring's franchise taxes are $707,275.

- Consider contributing $1,700 in water and garbage service for the Big Spring State Recreational Area. The money would come from the hotel/motel tax fund.
- Consider first reading on an ordinance to have the Planning and Zoning Commission consider temporary use permits.
- Consider authorizing police to use $5,000 of seized assets to purchase a recreational vehicle to be fitted as a mobile office for use in high crime areas. A $51,508 federal grant through the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention has been tentatively approved for the project.

Two arrested in separate raids

By GARY SHANKS

Members of the Howard County Sheriff's Department, working with the Permian Basin Drug Task Force (PBDTF) recovered a large quantity of a substance that is expected to be heroin in a raid on a West End apartment Sunday.

Arrested in the raid, near the intersection of FM 700 and West Business Interstate 20, was Richardo Gomez, 32, of Lubbock. The search warrant was served shortly after noon on Sunday, according to Sheriff's Office reports.

Gomez has been charged with felony

Arrested Sunday:

- Richardo Gomez, 32
- Abel Hernandez, 18

possession of a controlled substance and remains in the Howard County Jail.

The heroin was of the "black tar" type, which is typically wrapped in separate pieces. While serving the warrants, PBDTF officer Jack Howard and Sheriff's Deputy George Quentoro found more than a dozen of these pieces, according to reports.

In another search warrant, served at the same apartment complex about an hour later, an Odessa man was arrested after officers found a large amount of a substance that is expected to be marijuana.

Arrested and charged with felony possession of marijuana is Abel Hernandez, 18, of Odessa. Possession of any amount of marijuana over 4 ounces constitutes a felony. More than a pound of marijuana was confiscated in the raid, however.

Bonds, set this morning, were $5,000 for Hernandez and $2,500 for Gomez, according to the sheriff's office. Neither had made bond at press time.

Guerrero trailing in polls

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Democrat Lena Guerrero and Republican Barry Williamson are reacting predictably to a weekend poll by a Washington-based opinion research firm that showed Williamson has a commanding lead going into the final 10 days of their race for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission.

The poll, taken Oct. 18-22, showed Williamson with 51 percent of the support to 37 percent for Guerrero. Nine percent were undecided.

"Our campaign has focused on creating jobs and putting Texans back to work. This poll confirms that our positive message has struck a chord with Texas voters," Williamson said.

Guerrero reacted to the poll data with aplomb.

"There's a lot of different polls. We've got some that have us even in the race, and the poll that's most important is the one on Election Day," she said.

Belden & Russonello, which conducted the poll on behalf of several different Texas media outlets, said 593 registered Texans who said they are likely to vote in the race were interviewed by telephone Oct. 18, 20, 21 and 22 from a random statewide sample.

The poll was made public on Sunday.

The firm said the error due to sampling could be plus or minus 4.3 percentage points.

Guerrero got a favorable rating from 22 percent of those surveyed. However, 41 percent rated her unfavorably. Williamson showed a 25 percent favorable rating and only 17 percent unfavorable.

Guerrero is a former Austin legislator who resigned recently from a gubernatorial appointment to the commission after admitting she lied about having completed college as an honors graduate.

She apologized for her deceptions, but continued campaigning for the commission.

The poll showed Williamson to be an overwhelming choice among Republicans and Anglos. Guerrero fared best among Democrats, Hispanics and blacks. She was favored by 58 percent of the Hispanics, to 28 percent for Williamson.

The poll said Williamson had the support of 82 percent of Republicans surveyed, while Guerrero had the backing of 69 percent of Democrats polled.

Guerrero's unfavorable rating in Texas (41 percent) was listed as second only to that of Vice Presidential Dan Quayle.

A second poll on the race, conducted by Rice University for The Houston Post and Houston television station KHOU, put Williamson ahead 42 percent to 31 percent. Twenty-five percent of those questioned were undecided or disliked both candidates.

The telephone survey of 650 voters, released today, has a 4.5 percent margin of error.

Search under way for children

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Three days after a trio of little children stole $200 from their mother's purse and left home, police in a Dallas suburb searched Plano parks and streets for the siblings whose family practiced witchcraft.

Their parents, meanwhile, said the children fled Friday fearing welfare workers would split the family again.

Child Protective Services temporarily placed Michael Lewis, 8, and his sisters, 7-year-old Alicia and 9-year-old April, with friends when their stepfather was convicted last year of beating their sister, now 12 and living elsewhere.

"They didn't want to get taken away forever and ever," the stepfather, Mark Johnson, told The Dallas Morning News. "Besides the fact that CPS wasn't going to keep them together, they were going to ignore all the religious issues and place them with Christian families."

Police, joined in the hunt by the FBI, say they've scoured favorite parks and advised city bus drivers to be on watch.

"We'll keep contacting people that they know. We really have no place to look," Detective Scott Epperson said late Sunday.

They have no clues.

The children are schooled at home by their mother, who practices Wicca. Mary Lewis-Johnson said the form of witchcraft is nature-based, not satanism.

She told the newspaper she hopes her children are using Wicca's wilderness survival skills while they're gone.

Epperson said the case is being treated as a runaway situation.

"With the warm weather we're not worried about exposure," he said. "We're more concerned about how they're providing for their needs, food, being out on the streets with people who might take advantage of their situation."

Epperson said the case is unusual because of the children's young age and the time they've been missing.

The children's father, Jack Lewis of Richardson, said he does not know where they are.

The Johnsons said they think the children fled CPS investigators.

Thirty minutes before the children left home, a welfare worker called by a neighbor had come over to question Alicia about bruises on her leg, Mrs. Lewis-Johnson said. Alicia told the woman her brother kicked her.

One neighbor who asked not to be identified told The Morning News the Johnsons were "the weirdest neighbors we've ever had."

Victim's daughter sues Dallas police

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — A murder victim's daughters have sued the city and two police officers who responded to the emergency call, questioning whether the officers even got out of their patrol car to help in pouring rain.

Jury selection was set to begin today.

The daughters allege Dallas police Officer Paul F. Keough and Monte R. Petersen, an officer in training, were negligent in not at least knocking on Shirley Gremminger's apartment door in the early morning hours of Oct. 29, 1985.

A neighbor, Hazei Mullins, called police at about 4 a.m. to report screams she first thought were coming from outside her door.

"I ran across to the window," she said. "Then I realized they were coming from below me."

Keough and Petersen arrived in minutes. Nine minutes later, they left.

Mrs. Gremminger, 52, was found raped, bound and strangled in her bed later that day.

Court records show Tina Schooler of Weatherford and Kim Gremminger McWilliams of Watauga are seeking at least $4 million in damages from the city and the officers.

Vidor recall

Ku Klux Klan attempts to flex muscles against mayor

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIDOR — Citing Mayor Ruth Wood's support for desegregation of an all-white housing complex, members of the Ku Klux Klan say they will try to seek her removal through a recall election.

Charles Lee, grand dragon of White Camelia, told about 200 people Saturday that Wood does not represent the majority of the residents of Vidor, a predominantly white town of about 10,000 people.

"The mayor should at least represent the interest of the people who elected her. For the mayor of Vidor to say we (the Klan) are unwelcome and that the city doesn't want this image, it's insulting," Lee said.

"We need to show white people have political power in this city," he added. Vidor traditionally has been a center of Klan activity in Texas.

of Texas, about 5 miles northeast of Beaumont, which has about 125,000 residents with a significant black population.

Last month, U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice approved a plan to begin integrating 121 East Texas public housing complex, including a 74-unit complex in Vidor.

Four handpicked black families were scheduled to move from Beaumont and Port Arthur to Vidor this month. Two more black families are scheduled to arrive by year's end.

Albert Harrison, who operates a desegregation program for four public housing authorities in Jefferson and Orange counties, said he hopes eventually to recruit sufficient volunteers to populate 40 percent of the Vidor complex with minorities and end a seven-year integration battle in the city.

Wood has said she welcomes the integration plan. The town has worked for 20 years to change its image as a bastion for white supremacists, she said.

Lee told about 60 members of the White Camelias, the Texas White Knights of the KKK and various skinhead groups who attended Saturday's rally that he intends to collect names of Vidor residents willing to circulate petitions and get Wood recalled.

"And if we don't get her in a recall, we'll get her in the next election," he said.

When contacted by the Beaumont Enterprise, Wood refused to comment on the recall effort or anything to do with the white supremacist groups.

"I'm not talking about it any further. I have no comment whatsoever," she said. "I don't believe any more comments regarding this subject matter would be beneficial."

Wood has said she doesn't believe groups such as the Klan have any political power in the city.

NEW YORK — Tom Arnold says the lessons he has learned from his wife, Roseanne, and her hit TV series will come in handy when his own show begins later this year.

Arnold's "The Jackie Thomas Show" will air Tuesdays at 9:30 p.m. on ABC, right after "Roseanne."

The interview is in the November issue of Playboy.

NEW YORK — A case of the flu forced Elizabeth Taylor to bow out of an appearance tonight to accept a National Hero award for her AIDS activism, her spokeswoman says.

British singer-actor Michael Crawford will represent Taylor at the ceremony at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, Chen Sam said.

The awards, in which the public votes for their most admired humanitarian "heroes" in eight categories, benefit Big Brothers-Big Sisters of America.

NEW YORK — More than a dozen people from several activist groups tore up pictures of Pope John Paul II outside St. Patrick's Cathedral in a show of support for Sinead O'Connor.

"The Catholic Church has condemned millions of women to death with their forced childbearing policies," Michelle Redstockings, 35, of Poughkeepsie, said Sunday.

"Sinead was right."

Two weeks ago, the Irish singer tore up a picture of the pope on "Saturday Night Live." She said she wanted to draw attention to child abuse, which she blamed in part on teachings of the Roman Catholic Church.

Cardinal John J. O'Connor, who was saying Mass inside the cathedral, said he neither condemned nor supported demonstrations outside the church.

CINCINNATI — Gov. John Ashcroft of Missouri has sung on the Grand Ole Opry and written his own gospel songs. But he's modest about his achievements.

"You may wonder why I sing the songs that I wrote," Ashcroft told an overflow crowd Sunday at the First Christian Assembly of God church. "The fact of the matter is, nobody else will."

Ashcroft, a Republican, sang and preached for nearly an hour but avoided political topics except for brief references to his anti-abortion stand and family values.

He said he preaches and sings "whenever I'm asked" but tries to keep a low profile on his church activities.

Asked whether he is criticized in Missouri for his part-time preaching, he said: "There are people who don't like my singing — generally musicians."

Tobacco lobby pouring money into campaigns

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The tobacco industry has poured $1.7 million into the campaign treasuries of Senate and House members, a consumer group said today in denouncing what it called Congress' addiction to "death money."

The report by Public Citizen's Health Research Group and the Advocacy Institute tracked contributions from tobacco industry political action committees as well as individual executives and lobbyists.

Senators collected $578,390 between Jan. 1, 1991, and June 30, 1992, while House members picked up another $1.16 million, the report said.

The study did not count contributions to challengers or candidates for open seats, who generally collect far less PAC money than incumbents.

Sen. Robert W. Kasten Jr., R-Wis., was the top tobacco money recipient in the Senate with contributions of $59,402, while Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., led in House with $26,198.

The authors describe their report as an "unprecedented accounting of the extent to which tobacco money pervades Congress."

"Congress is as addicted to tobacco money as a heavy smoker is to the nicotine in his Marlboros," said Cliff Douglas, tobacco policy director for the Advocacy Institute.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Public Citizen Health Research Group, said the report shows why Congress has done "extraordinarily little to combat the tobacco epidemic."

"Tobacco money buys influence to oppose federal legislation to increase tobacco taxes, to restrict tobacco advertising and promotion, and to enact other laws to control the use of this deadly substance," the report said.

But Walker Merryman, vice president of the Tobacco Institute, the trade association for cigarette manufacturers, said in a statement that the industry has as much right to participate in the political process as the Ralph Nader "acolytes."

Public Citizen, which released the report, was founded by consumer advocate Nader.

sumer advocate Nader.

"It should come as no surprise to anyone that people who are involved in the growing, manufacture, distribution and sale of tobacco products are vitally interested in political actions aimed at putting them out of business," Merryman's statement said. "From the seedbed to sales counter, tobacco is one of the nation's most heavily regulated products."

He said the report overlooks the fact that the tobacco companies also produce consumer goods and services ranging from beer and crackers to insurance and hotels.

"Therefore, their interest in the political arena would hardly be confined exclusively to tobacco issues," he said.

David Dreyer, a spokesman for Gephardt, said the congressman is devoted to "defending public health" and has been a leader in health policy legislation.

Kasten's spokeswoman, Mary Crawford, said tobacco is responsible for 43,000 jobs in Wisconsin, the nation's 10th largest producing state.

Tobacco is the leading preventable cause of death and disease in the United States and around the world, the report said. Cigarette smoking directly kills 434,000 Americans every year, while another 53,000 non-smokers die from the effects of involuntary, or passive smoking, it said.

In addition, tobacco costs the U.S. economy about $52 billion in health care and lost productivity, the report said.

And in the absence of cures for lung cancer, heart disease and other health problems linked to tobacco, federal policy should emphasize the need to stay away from tobacco, the report said.

It said the tobacco industry had never lost a federal legislative battle until 1983, when Congress increased the federal excise tax on cigarettes by 8 cents a pack.

Since then, the industry's only significant losses at the national level occurred when Congress prohibited smoking on short-haul domestic airline flights and later on virtually all airline flights within the United States, the report said.

MADRID, Spain — Felipe Gonzalez says he'll seek a fourth term as Spain's prime minister and will make battling his country's persistent unemployment rate a top priority.

"We enjoy a democracy in our country that did not exist before," Gonzalez told a jubilant crowd of 30,000 supporters on Sunday at a meeting of his Socialist Party. "There are a million more women working than when we arrived, a million more women with an opportunity they never had before."

The Socialists came to power a decade ago, just six years after the party was legalized following the death of dictator Francisco Franco.

Gonzalez, 50, must call general elections by October 1993, although there is speculation they may be held earlier.

After enjoying three straight years of economic growth over 4.5 percent, Spain is now suffering from a European-wide downturn.

When Gonzalez took office in October 1982, unemployment stood at 16 percent. It is currently 17 percent. Inflation stood at 15 percent. It is currently 5.8 percent.

BEIJING — At least 30 Chinese musicians and artists have been arrested on suspicion of using or trafficking in heroin or marijuana, an official newspaper reports.

The article in Sunday's editions of Workers' Daily was the first mention in the official media of the narcotics probe, which targeted young artists and musicians, including members of some of the city's most well-known rock groups.

Rumors about the crackdown had circulated in Beijing for several weeks.

Those arrested included Dou Wei, lead singer with the group "Dreaming," and members of "Tang Dynasty," the paper said.

The report said several of those arrested were released, and some were in custody. It gave no other details.

Rock musicians in China often face police harassment because Communist authorities believe they are a bad influence. Police often force rock gigs to be canceled, though the music is not officially banned.

Drug trafficking and addiction were virtually wiped out in China during the first few years of Communist rule in the 1950s, but drug-related crimes have made a resurgence in recent years.

BONN, Germany — Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel is calling for the immediate closure of detention camps in former Yugoslavia, saying they recall the "dreadful atrocities" of Germany's Nazi era.

Kinkel sent a letter Sunday to Lord Owen and Cyrus Vance, who are leading diplomatic efforts to bring peace to the region, calling the latest human rights report on the dismembered country "shocking."

Tadeusz Mazowiecki, special U.N. human rights envoy for former Yugoslavia, told reporters in Geneva on Friday that abuses in Bosnia-Herzegovina have increased in the last two months since his first investigation of the area.

The former Polish prime minister said most of the abuses came through "ethnic cleansing," a practice used by one side to clear an area of all ethnic groups except its own.

Most of the detention camp inmates and victims of ethnic cleansing are Slavic Muslims, with Serbs blamed for most of the abuses.

Kinkel called for future war crimes trials against those responsible for human rights abuses and urged "united international pressure to stop this barbarity."

UN team meets with Iraqis

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD, Iraq — United Nations sources say a team of weapons inspectors held a lengthy meeting with Iraq's arms experts to try to force disclosure of hidden information or sites.

"This is very important for Iraq," said a senior U.N. official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

A positive report from the current team, the 45th since the end of the Persian Gulf War, is crucial for Iraq.

It could form the basis for a Security Council review of whether the U.N.-imposed trade embargo on the nation of 18 million should be lifted.

Under the gulf war cease-fire, Iraq is obliged to destroy all its weapons of mass destruction and facilities that could be used to make such weapons.

Last week, CBS television said the U.N. had been provided with satellite photographs of an Iraqi facility suspected of being a secret nuclear center. But the inspectors here said they were not aware of such photographs.

Iraq has denied repeatedly that it has any nuclear weapons or is in the process of reactivating its pre-war atomic projects.

U.N. weapons team leader Nikita Svidovich confirmed today that the team had an 11-hour meeting with Iraqi experts last week as part of "normal procedure," but declined to elaborate.

But other U.N. sources said the team has collected information that needed "Iraqi replies and elucidation."

"It is a very time-taking and complex process," said one source.

Fans pound on glass; 19 hurt after it breaks

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Fans pounding on a glass partition during a Miami Dolphins football game on Sunday broke through it and sent glass showering onto a crowd below, injuring 19 people, authorities said.

Two people were at first believed to be seriously hurt but it turned out that all of the injuries were minor, said Jose Herrera, a spokesman for Metro-Dade Fire and Rescue.

Authorities said some of the injured were treated at Joe Robbie Stadium, where the incident occurred during the game between the Dolphins and Indianapolis Colts. The Colts won 31-20.

It wasn't immediately known how many people were taken to hospitals, although Golden Glades Regional Medical Center reported seven people arrived there.

Four were treated in the emergency room for cuts and scrapes, said hospital spokesman Jorge Alvarez. The others were treated for lesser injuries and were being released, he said.

Others were believed to have gone to hospitals on their own, Herrera said.

Dolphins spokesman Harvey Greene said fans smashed a 2-foot-by-4-foot glass partition located at the bottom of a stairway in the stadium's upper deck. The partition allows people to see the football field from that area while protecting them from falling onto a lower deck.

The structure had never been broken before, Greene said.

Send Stenholm back to House

In the race for Texas' 17th Congressional seat, we believe it to be vitally important that Charles Stenholm be re-elected so that he may return to Washington and continue working for West Texas.

Since he first went to Washington 13 years ago, Rep. Stenholm has worked hard for his district. And while the rigors of the job require that he spend a majority of his time in Washington, he doesn't forget the people in his district, making regular visits.

Stenholm, a Democrat, doesn't always go along with the policies of his party, instead preferring to check the pulse of his constituency and cast a vote that reflects the conservative nature of West Texas.

His hard work and longevity have helped Stenholm move up the ladder in the House. As a result, his voice grows stronger and stronger and his opinion carries more weight.

In a year that will see between 120 and 180 new members in the House of Representatives, we feel it is important that a public servant of Charles Stenholm's stature be there to help lead. And the fact he was cleared of wrongdoing in the House Bank fiasco cleared up our only serious question about him.

We believe it is important that Charles Stenholm be on Capitol Hill to speak for West Texans when the more liberal members of the House seek to impose even more restrictions or infringements on Americans.

We believe it is important that Charles Stenholm be on Capitol Hill — with those new members of the House — when the next proposal to balance the federal budget is brought forth.

Mr. Stenholm's opponent offers no experience and no innovative ideas and runs only because she feels it is time for a change. We disagree.

We heartily urge you to send Charles Stenholm back to Washington to continue working for West Texas and America.

Why we sing Francis Scott (off) Key

Lewis Grizzard

This may seem terribly unpatriotic at first, but I have come to the conclusion that Canada has a better national anthem than we do, and that Canadian singers aren't nearly so prone to mess with their anthem as Americans are with ours.

I arrived at all this after hearing both "O Canada" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" played back-to-back before Games 1 and 2 of the current Atlanta-Toronto World Series.

"O Canada" is simply a prettier song than "The Star-Spangled Banner." I've always thought "America the Beautiful" and "God Bless America" would be better anthems anyway.

"The Star-Spangled Banner" goes all over the musical scale and the words are hard to remember. I do OK until I get to "...perilous fight," then I have to listen to whoever else is singing to get what comes next.

If you agree, make a note to write your congressman.

There is a former Georgia Tech basketball star, Josh Powell, who always sings "O Canada" when I attend regular season Braves-

Montreal games.

He has a powerful, deep voice that lends dignity to the occasion. The two Canadian singers who performed their anthems at last Saturday's and Sunday's games did a commendable job as well.

But now I take you back to Game 1. Billy Ray Cyrus, whose long hair and gyrations (Ernest Tubbs would turn over in his grave) have made him the male Madonna of country music, came to the microphone wearing a T-shirt and a pair of jeans somebody poured him into.

He, of "Achy Breaky" fame, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." No, he didn't. He moaned and groaned and bumped and grinded "The Star-Spangled Banner."

I'm surprised some female fans didn't come out of the stands and try to put five bucks somewhere on Billy Ray's person at a male strip club.

Why is it American singers performing the national anthem in front of large crowds at sporting events want to do their own renditions? What would Francis Scott Key say about hearing his song sung like make out music?

Same thing Sunday night before game 2. Peabo Bryson, the famous pop singer, did the anthem. I'm not saying the man can't sing — most certainly he can — but he gave it his personal touches, too.

Of course Roseanne Barr currently holds the tasteless record in singing the national anthem. Even Billy Ray didn't grab anything but the microphone.

Although I don't particularly like the Star-Spangled Banner — from a musical standpoint — it is still our national anthem and I think a little decorum and dignity are important while it is being sung.

Most Americans stand for the singing of it. Some cover their hearts and others salute. Does this seem like a time for whoever is performing it to cheapen the moment with pelvic thrusts, or making it sound like it might be something to which you could dance?

And why is The Star-Spangled Banner performed at a baseball game in the first place? Protocol calls for it to be played on solemnly occasions, and sporting events never come under either one of those headings.

Listen to this: During last year's Braves-Twins World Series, a little girl was called out to sing the anthem in the Metrodome in Minneapolis.

She mostly screamed the darn thing and a sportswriter sitting in front of me asked, "Anybody got a rifle?"

Guess what else? Major League Baseball has just apologized for the Marine color guard that displayed Canada's flag upside down during the anthems.

Many Canadians reportedly were angered by the incident, but one French separatist phoned the stadium press box to say he rather enjoyed it.

Sacre bleu.

Sowing seeds of civil war

By B.J. CUTLER
Scripps Howard News Service

Very few non-Russians know Russia as well as Eduard Shevardnadze, the urbane, courtly and (for a diplomat) trustworthy former foreign minister of the defunct Soviet Union.

A native of Soviet Georgia, now an independent nation, Shevardnadze ran the so-called republic as Communist Party boss on behalf of the Kremlin, dominated by ethnic Russians.

In 1985, Shevardnadze was summoned to Moscow where he served as Mikhail Gorbachev's chief diplomatic trouble-shooter, adviser and colleague in the failed attempt to modernize the communist state through perestroika.

After the Soviet Union collapsed and his friend Gorbachev lost the presidency, Shevardnadze, now 64, thought he would retire to Georgia, write his memoirs and peacefully sip the good local wine. He miscalculated.

The 5.4 million Georgians, a majority of them Orthodox Christians, elected as their first president one Zviad Gamsakhurdia, a fiery nationalist. He quickly became a tyrant and was ousted last January in street battles that severely damaged Tbilisi, the capital.

In March, officials invited Shevardnadze to head a provisional government. He accepted and learned it was easier to direct a superpower like the Soviet Union than an ethnically fractious ministate like Georgia.

A major headache has been a revolt in South Ossetia, a Muslim region in northern Georgia. The residents want to secede from Georgia and unite with their ethnic brethren in North Ossetia, part of southern Russia.

In June, Shevardnadze made a deal with Russian President Boris Yeltsin to send a joint peacekeeping force to South Ossetia, which quieted the area. Then fighting broke out in Abkhazia, in northwestern Georgia, and Shevardnadze began to wonder what Russian officials were up to.

The Abkhaz, a Muslim people, number only about 80,000, 18 percent of the province's population. Nevertheless, they hope to pull all of Abkhazia out of Georgia and have taken up arms to do so.

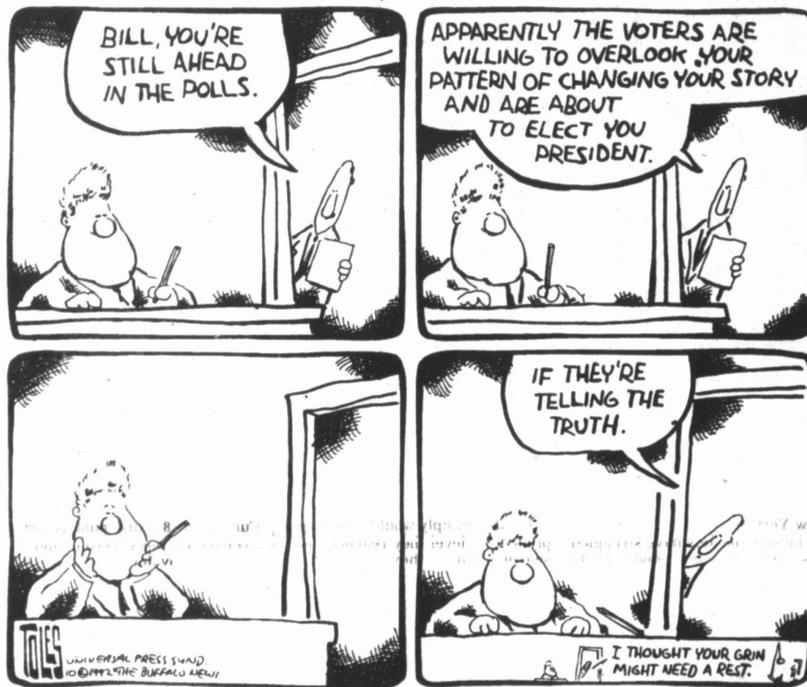

Yeltsin brokered a cease-fire between Abkhaz and Georgian forces and persuaded Shevardnadze to withdraw most of his troops from Gagra, a disputed resort town. Then came a double-cross: The Abkhaz seized Gagra and rolled to the outskirts of Sukhumi, the province's capital.

The attack was joined by "mountain men," Muslim fighters from the northern Caucasus. They mysteriously were allowed by Russian generals to leave southern Russia for Abkhazia.

Shevardnadze is too diplomatic to blame — and antagonize — Yeltsin. Instead, he accuses renegade generals of trying to destabilize Georgia with an eye to re-incorporating it in a new Russian empire.

With or without Yeltsin's knowledge, the generals are playing a dangerous game. The volunteers fighting alongside the Abkhaz come from the Confederation of Caucasian Mountain Peoples. This group's goal is to carve an independent Muslim nation out of not just Georgia but also Azerbaijan and parts of Russia.

So the meddling generals, despite "patriotic" motives, may be sowing the seeds of civil war on Russian soil.

Looking for opportunities

At the 1991 Association of Black Communicators meeting in Dallas, Julianne Malveaux — at the time, one of 18 black women in the United States with a Ph.D. — gave a thought provoking speech.

Speaking metaphorically, she paralleled a dining room setting to the attempts by blacks to acquire part of the American dream.

She said blacks were finally sitting at the strong oak table that was once deprived to them. This was long overdue because they helped build the table. They helped polish the table and they often cooked the food and brought it to the table. But for centuries, they were not allowed to partake in bounty.

Although some are now seated among their white counterparts, they may not still have the opportunity to eat or they may not get what the others are having. Many are content with just being in the room, Malveaux said. She added they should secure no less than ample seating and a full plate.

Malveaux received a standing ovation when she finished her speech.

Her Ph.D. is in economics. She has a syndicated column that appears in USA Today and other newspapers.

Malveaux's statements about blacks' attempts to acquire a slice of the pie, after having a well-rounded meal, could be applied to the Hispanic community as well.

The Hispanic people's history is embedded in the pursuit of a better life — to be able to sit to dinner at the table we helped build and to enjoy eating the food we helped prepare. From the large migrations at the turn of the century of Mexicans looking for employment opportunities in the uncultivated fields of Texas to today's increase in Hispanic elected office attest to the vigorous pursuit for a better standard of living.

Education, employment and the economy are the three key issues among the Hispanic community according to agencies such as Southwest Voter Research Institute and the National Hispanic Leadership Conference.

During the current administration, affirmative action has sometimes been attacked as a mere quota filler, but affirmative action is simply an opportunity to expand the applicant pool.

College students — of all races — who were financially assisted by government guaranteed student loans and those who graduated in the late 1980s and the 1990s are finding themselves with an enormous debt upon receiving their degree with very little opportunity for repayment.

Hispanic students are more likely to take larger loan amounts purely because of economics. The median Hispanic household income, although rising over the last decade, is below the median white household income. And a great number of the Hispanic workforce is in the service sector, which traditionally pays less.

Hispanic students attending college do not always have the resources available to other students who may come from a third generation or more middle class background, if they are middle class at all.

No one is asking for a handout — just an opportunity. But as the amount of food prepared decreases and more people are coming to sit at the table, there just is not going to be enough room or food to go around and the first to go are the ones who arrived last.

Now is the time to assure our place at the table, by going out Nov. 3 and casting a vote.

To rephrase a political campaign ad — the election is Nov. 3; the candidates are George Bush, Bill Clinton and Ross Perot... the choice is ours.

Reasons to support Craig Enoch

I would like to encourage you to vote for Judge Craig Enoch for place 1 on the Texas Supreme Court.

In an unprecedented show of bipartisan support, Judge Craig Enoch was recently formally endorsed by many prominent Democrats and Independents throughout the state. Headlining the list were three Democratic former Texas Supreme Court Justices: John L. Hill, Jr., Joe R. Greenhill, and Robert W. Calvert.

These endorsements indicate the kind of diverse and widespread support that Judge Enoch's outstanding judicial service merits. His commitment to fairness, integrity and judicial restraint, as well as efforts for reform on the Texas Supreme Court is respected by Republicans, Democrats, and Independents alike. The Texas Supreme Court is no place for partisan politics. Judge Enoch realizes this, and as a Supreme Court Justice, he will continue to serve fairly and impartially. I call on all voters to rise above party loyalty and support Judge Craig Enoch.

Judge Enoch currently serves as Chief Justice of the Fifth District Court of Appeals in Dallas. He previously served as judge of the 101st District Court, also in Dallas. In his ten-plus years of service as a judge, Enoch has consistently received approval ratings of over 90 percent in the Dallas Bar Association's Judicial Evaluation Poll. He has overwhelmingly won every major bar poll of attorneys conducted during this election, including the statewide bar poll (where he was the only non-incumbent to win) and the Dallas Bar Association's Preference Poll, in which he defeated incumbent opponent Oscar Mauzy 3 to 1.

In response to this tremendous expression of bipartisan support, Judge Enoch stated, "It is truly an honor to have leaders of this stature endorsing my candidacy for the Texas Supreme Court. I have always said and continue to maintain that partisan politics has no place in the judiciary. I am pleased that Republicans, Democrats, and Independents have placed principle over party and have demonstrated their commitment to continued reform on our state's highest court."

I urge all citizens to vote for Judge Craig Enoch.

Buffalo Bills hoping for another easy night at the Meadowlands against Jets

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — When Jim Kelly looked at the 1992 schedule, he figured a 4-0 start would be just the prescription for keeping the Buffalo Bills close to the Miami Dolphins and New York Jets in the AFC East.

Buffalo got off to that 4-0 start with an almost unstoppable attack. The Dolphins did even better with a 6-0 beginning, including a rout of the Bills at Buffalo. The Jets?

"At the beginning of the season, we thought the Jets and Dolphins would be the two teams we were going to fight for the championship," Kelly said. "Now it's just the Dolphins. I never thought the Jets would be where they're at."

The Jets are at 1-5 as they head into the toughest part of their schedule. Tonight, it's the Bills, who have won nine straight against New York. Then comes Miami and Denver.

"But they have so much talent on that team," Kelly insisted. "You can't look at the record and say, 'Oh, wow, these guys are 1-5, it's going to be easy.'"

Monday nights at the Meadowlands have been easy for the Bills against the Jets. In the last two meetings, it was Buffalo 37, New York 14, then Buffalo 30, New York 7.

The way the Jets have struggled this year, allowing opponents to control the ball and clock and being plagued by turnovers, another blowout would seem likely.

But the Bills have looked nearly as bad in their last two outings, the loss at home to the Dolphins and a 20-3 defeat in Los Angeles against the Raiders. Kelly, bothered by a swollen elbow that has been drained twice in the last two weeks, has had interception problems. The Bills also repeatedly failed in the "Red Zone," inside the opposition's 20 during those losses.

"We're stopping ourselves," Kelly said. "We're not making the big plays we used to. It's just a matter of going out there and playing the way the Buffalo Bills used to."

The Jets simply would like to approach the level they reached last season, when they made the playoffs as a wild card with an 8-8 record. To do so, they'll need a strong defensive effort against the NFL's No. 2 attack.

Cowboys run by Raiders; Oilers dispose of Bengals

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Emmitt Smith ran for 152 yards and three touchdowns for Dallas leading the Cowboys to a 28-13 win in front of 91,505 at the LA Coliseum, the largest crowd in the NFL this season.

"This was not my best day, but it will do," said Smith, the league's second-leading rusher. "These were the biggest holes I've had to run through all year. We were able to mix the run and pass well today."

He scored on runs of 4, 6 and 26 yards as Dallas maintained its one-game lead in the NFC East.

The Raiders were held to only two first downs and 60 total yards in the second half.

Oilers 26, Bengals 10

At the Astrodome, Houston shut down Cincinnati after a sluggish first half, which ended at 10-all, as Lorenzo White had a 1-yard TD run and recently acquired Webster Slaughter had a 36-yard scoring catch.

The Oilers, who lost in the final seconds at Denver a week ago, held the Bengals to 10 total yards in the final two quarters.

Warren Moon completed 27 of 40 passes for 342 yards and two touchdowns as Houston remained tied for first with Pittsburgh in the AFC Central division.

Colts 31, Dolphins 20

Emtman, the first pick in the NFL draft, rumbled for the clinching score at Miami after intercepting Dan Marino and the Dolphins lost their first game this season.

Emtman's score came on a fourth-and-goal play at the Colts' 7-yard line as the Dolphins tried to complete their fourth comeback this year. Taking the snap with 17 seconds left, Marino drilled a pass toward the end zone, but Emtman — standing just 5 yards in front of the quarterback — reached up and caught it.

Indianapolis also got a 4-yard touchdown run from Rodney Culver, an 84-yard punt return TD from Clarence Verdin, and a 1-yard run by Jeff George.

Browns 19, Patriots 17

After four field goals by Matt Stover, Cleveland scored on a

NFL Roundup

6-yard pass from Mike Tomczak to Scott Gailbraith with 31 seconds left to keep New England winless in seven games this season.

Millen had touchdown passes of 22 yards to Ben Coates and 19 yards to Kevin Turner, and Charlie Baumann kicked a 30-yard field goal for a 17-12 lead before Cleveland's final drive at Foxboro Stadium.

Redskins 15, Vikings 13

Former University of Minnesota star Chip Lohmiller, who had struggled this season, did not disappoint the people he invited to the Metrodome.

His fifth field goal in as many attempts, a 49-yarder with 1:09 remaining, lifted Washington to its third straight win.

There might have been some explaining to do if he missed.

"I had to buy 55 tickets," said Lohmiller, a native of Woodbury, Minn. "My whole family is here."

Lohmiller hit on earlier field goals of 22, 52, 25 and 45 yards.

Minnesota lost for the first time in four home games.

Lions 38, Buccaneers 7

Rodney Peete directed three long scoring drives in the first half at Tampa Bay and Barry Sanders ran for a season-high 122 yards as Detroit snapped a four-game losing streak.

Peete had TD throws of 29 yards to Willie Green and 63 yards to Herman Moore.

Steelers 27, Chiefs 3

Pittsburgh won its first game at Arrowhead Stadium since hiring former Kansas City assistant Bill Cowher as head coach during the offseason.

The ex-defensive coordinator for Chiefs' coach Marty Schottenheimer was not any happier at beating his old team.

"The only satisfaction is the fact that now we're 5-2 and getting ready to play Houston next week, with the chance to see who is going to be the first-place team," Cowher said.

Rod Woodson started Pittsburgh's dominating performance with an 80-yard punt return TD and Barry Foster, who rushed for 105 yards, had a 1-yard scoring run.

Bears 30, Packers 10

One of Jim Harbaugh's strengths, at least in his coach's eyes, hadn't been following directions.

Three weeks back, Ditka had a major blowup with his quarterback, who dared to check off a play the coach had sent in. After the audible, Harbaugh threw a poor pass, which was intercepted and returned for a score as Minnesota rallied for a 21-20 victory.

At Green Bay this time, Harbaugh followed directions very well, hitting on 13 straight passes to tie a team record set by Rudy Bukich in 1964.

"When they put eight men against you in the line, you want to make sure you can pass and Jim responded tremendously," Ditka said.

Brad Muster had a 1-yard TD. Keith Jennings caught a 4-yard score from Harbaugh, Darren Lewis had a 30-yard touchdown run and Kevin Butler added three field goals for Chicago.

Packers linebacker Brian Noble left the field on a stretcher near the end of the third quarter after sustaining a back injury. After the game, coach Mike Holmgren said "Noble had movement in his arms and legs."

Chargers 24, Broncos 21

Down by three points and with the ball on San Diego's 34 late in the game, John Elway strode confidently out on the field, ready to lead yet another winning drive for Denver.

Guess no one told the Chargers.

Giants 23, Seahawks 10

Seattle — surprise — scored some points for the first time since Oct. 4, ending a drought of 159 minutes, 34 seconds; but couldn't put enough on the board to top New York.

Jeff Hostetler scrambled 7 yards for a touchdown and hit Ed McCaffrey on a 7-yard TD pass for the Giants as visiting Seattle lost its fifth straight game.

Miami regains No. 1 spot

For the second time this season, a team has lost the No. 1 ranking without losing a game.

A month ago, it happened to Miami. On Sunday, it was Washington's turn.

The Huskies, who tied Miami for the top spot in last week's Associated Press college football poll, fell one point behind the Hurricanes after beating Pacific 31-7 Saturday. Miami also improved to 7-0 with a 43-23 win over Virginia Tech.

Although Miami received three more first-place votes than Washington (32-29), the Hurricanes lead by only one point (1,517-1,516) because three voters placed them third. Washington was third on one ballot.

Miami has a larger lead in the USA Today-CNN coaches' poll, where the Hurricanes increased their cushion from one to 17 points. The coaches gave Miami a 37-22 edge in first-place votes.

Washington quarterback Mark Brunell said it's too early to worry about the polls.

"Right now we're thinking about Stanford," Brunell said of the Huskies' next opponent. "If anyone is thinking about the polls, we've got a problem."

After sharing the national championship last season, Miami and Washington have waged a seesaw battle for the top spot this season.

Miami was No. 1 in the preseason poll and remained there for four weeks. Washington moved ahead after Miami's lackluster 8-7 win over Arizona on Sept. 26, but the Huskies' lead gradually eroded over the next three weeks until they ended up in a first-place tie last week.

Miami has only one game remaining against a ranked team (No. 12 Syracuse), while Washington must still play No. 15 Stanford, No. 17 Arizona and No. 19 Washington State.

There were no other changes in the Top 10, except Colorado's move into an eighth-place tie with Nebraska. The Buffaloes, who crushed Kansas State 54-7, were No. 9 last week, one spot below Nebraska. The Cornhuskers beat Missouri 34-24 Saturday.

The Big Eight powers meet next Saturday in Lincoln.

Marvin Wise, life-time resident of Howard County, transferred back to Big Spring in 1974 with the Credit Unions. Married to Margaret for 35 years, they have 3 children, Mariella, Morgan and Monette, six grandchildren, one son-in-law and one daughter-in-law, and he is presently employed with Scenic Mountain Medical Center.

MARVIN WISE Democratic Candidate For County Commissioner Precinct 3

My main concern in Precinct 3 and Howard County is to work for the people, to work with the City Council and the Moore Development Board to bring new industries to Howard County and work on the new tax abatement program. Tax abatement is presently the best tool to stop our tax base decline. I am also concerned with our present jail situation. I feel that a city/county jail for the size of our community could handle the needs. The people in Precinct 3 and other precincts need to be contacted by their commissioners and kept up to date with what they are doing and what is coming up that might affect Howard County.

A great bear chase

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

JUNEAU, Alaska — Being chased by a bear is not standard therapy after knee surgery, but it worked for Connie Munro.

Munro, 57, underwent surgery last spring for a dance injury. Since then, the knee hadn't loosened up and she had been limping. She said she had tried everything, but nothing helped.

Then came the encounter with a bear as she was arriving for work at the state Education Department downtown early one morning last week.

Soon after she stepped out of her car, she saw a black bear about 15 feet away and charging toward her.

"I hadn't run since last spring — and I ran," she said. "The knee works."

The stiffness hasn't returned in the week since the sprint. "The bear has given me a present. I can walk normally," she said.

Louise Porter, 87, a longtime Big Springer, is making plans to move to Kerrville to be near her family. She spent many years as a nurse in the community, and is shown here with some of the handcrafted items she now enjoys making.

Porter ready for transition

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Everyone faces major transitions in their lives — the birth of a new child, the graduation of a son or daughter or moving into a new home.

Eighty-seven-year-old Louise Porter, a Big Spring resident since 1932, is at the crossroads of such a major transition right now. She is moving soon to a retirement community in Kerrville to be closer to her family.

"A stressful time for me has been when my husband (Lee Porter) died last year," she said. "I don't know what you'd do without family."

Porter has two sons living in and near Austin, six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. She was in the medical profession in Big Spring for many years.

Porter finished her nurse schooling in 1931 at Parkland Hospital in Dallas — where she was born and raised — and came to Big Spring a year later. She worked for G.T. Hall, M.H. Bennett and Clyde E. Thomas Jr., at Hall-Bennett, before retiring in 1970.

"I had a friend when I was in high school who was a nurse and we all thought that was the most wonderful thing," she said.

Porter went into private nursing in 1940, a year after her son Lewis was born. Her son Dean was 4 years old at the time.

"I had two little boys. I needed to spend more time at home with them."

Porter and her husband, who had been active in local politics, had been retired together for 20 years before he died. The widow said she is still struggling to become settled in her new path.

"It's been hard — just getting along without him. My family is loving and considerate, and they've been a great help for me."

"Now they want me to come down to be closer to them," she said.

This is the second move since her husband passed away.

"We built our own home in 1939 and we had lived there until his death. I mean, we were always there," Porter said. "After that many years, you've got a lot of stuff that you have to do something with."

Porter has been living alone, visiting friends to combat the loneliness she feels.

She is a member of the Masonic Ladies Club and had been a long-time member of Sew and Chatter.

As precise and caring as she had been in her profession, Porter transferred those characteristics to creating delicate, quilted handkerchiefs.

"I wanted them for myself, but my children or grandchildren wanted them, and I'd give them the handwork," she said. "Now, I am giving them away mostly to friends and family."

Throughout her life, Porter said she has seen many changes. "A stressful time for me was when Dr. Hall, Dr. Bennett and Dr. Thomas died."

She worked with Pediatrician Louise Worthy after Bennett passed away, and says she enjoyed being around children.

"Meeting people and caring for them, you really get to know them," Porter said. "I've really had a wonderful life. My two boys are a success after all these years, and now I'm on the verge of moving to Kerrville to be near them."

"I'm sad to leave Big Spring, but I feel like it's the best for me and my children."

She said when she moves, she will not only be closer to her family but be able to connect with people who have had similar life experiences.

"At the retirement homes, you just meet people all the time," she said. "You are never alone."

Saddles, horns and burnin' brands

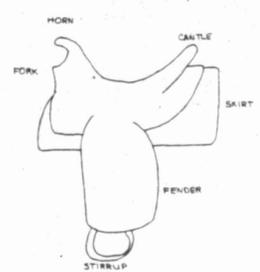

At last! The Heritage Museum has moved the collection of Texas Longhorn Steer Horns to their new home upstairs in the original building. The area is finished to an interior barn look with wood floors and walls, and a large mural of Signal Peak.

Also displayed in the room are several saddles from the museum's collection. The Lady's Side Saddle belonged to a member of one of the county's pioneer ranch families, Mary Roberts. It is difficult to visualize anyone being able to ride on it in any comfort.

Comfort was not as important as staying on the horse to the maker of the bronc-busting saddle in the collection. Looking at it from the front it has a fork which narrows at the base enough to allow the cowboy to hook his knees under for support.

Some other unusual saddles include H.W. Caylor's Pack Saddle from about 1900. The X-shaped saddle appears similar to those in some of the artist's paintings, and was probably used as their model.

If you enjoy military history you will recognize the McClellan Cavalry Saddle in the display. The turn of the century saddle is unique in that it has no horn and a slot in the seat.

This area has a wonderful history in ranching so there are many areas where the museum's collection is interesting and varied. This is especially true in the saddle collection. Of course this piece of professional cowboy equipment originally came from the Spanish who had been roaming about the southwest since the 16th Century.

The American Cowboy and Mexican Vaquero, both of whom were represented in the early ranches of West Texas, modified the Spanish saddle. The saddle's trial and use on the range led them to create the classic Western saddle.

The horn set on the fork is important for roping, and the broad stirrups aided the cowboy in balancing on uneven terrain. The rounded cantle at the back made sliding in and out of his saddle easier, and the rigging for holding it all in place on the horse had to be determined by the amount of roping the cowboy would be doing.

In finishing the new Longhorn Room the museum is currently looking for brands to burn into the room's wooden floor and walls. Drop your branding iron, with registered brand, by the museum any time this week or next and we will gladly return it to you by Nov. 14. A little background information about the brand and ranching photographs would also be appreciated.

SILSBEE — When Sherridan and George Tuttt had their first child in 1967, a beautiful baby boy they named Rhett, everything seemed perfect.

The only problem was slow, persistent bleeding from his circumcision. A Houston hospital soon confirmed their doctor's fear. Rhett had hemophilia, a bleeding disorder that put him at risk from even a minor injury. Any cut could trigger a bleed, and possibly a trip to the hospital for a transfusion.

When Rhett was 6, Sherri found a clinic in Houston that taught her to give him factor 9, the clotting component his blood lacked. She learned all she could about hemophilia, not knowing another, relatively unknown disease would become a greater threat.

Meanwhile, Rhett struggled to find himself. In the small East Texas town of Silsbee, boys play sports, but hemophilia robbed Rhett of that chance to fit in. Instead, he became an accomplished singer and musician, making all-district choir every year and all-region twice.

"He went through a lot of mental hell because people thought he was gay even though he wasn't," Sherri said. "I kept telling him things would be different in college. He would find a group of guys that were more like him."

In his senior year, he visited Baylor University in Waco and immediately felt at home. The future looked bright, but one dark cloud hovered. For some time, his checkups at the clinic had included a new test — for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

"I knew there was a definite possibility he could become infected," Sherri said. "But there was nothing we could do about it. He couldn't do without the blood products."

Later that year, Rhett tested positive. The Tutts didn't know the full ramifications of the diagnosis at first.

The clinic counseled the family and monitored Rhett closely, and he got on with his life. After graduating ninth in a class of 204, he left for Baylor to major in business.

He also met Laurie, a dark-eyed, soft-spoken young woman who shared his love of music. They became friends, then fell in love. He told her on their first real date that he was HIV-positive and would understand if she didn't want to see him again. She told him she wasn't going anywhere.

A year later, after dinner at a waterfront restaurant, Rhett knelt on the boardwalk under a moonlit sky and asked Laurie to marry him. She said yes and her parents began planning a big wedding, until the young couple stunned them by telling them Rhett's secret. But he didn't tell anybody else.

On July 28, Rhett and Laurie exchanged wedding vows in a small, private church ceremony, then flew to Hawaii for their honeymoon.

In August, Rhett was graduated from college, smiling but gaunt in his cap and gown.

In September, he traveled to San Francisco to tell his story at a conference for hemophiliacs. Five months after the wedding, Rhett entered a Houston hospital for the last time.

For weeks, Sherri rarely left the hospital. Late one night, Rhett couldn't sleep because of the pain. "Well, Mom?" he asked. "Was it worth it?"

"Of course it was worth it," she replied. "I'd rather have 23 years with you than 100 with somebody else."

A few days later, his doctor called the family to a waiting room and cried with them. "He said 'There is nothing else I can do and he wants to go home. Take him home where he can be comfortable and he can

Woman tells how she broke pattern of abuse

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO — No psychic or physical scars are visible.

After surviving a first marriage marked by five years of emotional abuse, followed by five years of beatings, the 40-year-old San Antonio native says, she broke the battering cycle for herself.

Despite the statistics that say children of abusive marriages often become abusers themselves — she is confident her children will not perpetuate the cycle. Her 18-year-old son announced this spring: "Mom, this guy at school made me so mad I wanted to sock him. But, Mom, I remembered what you told me about violence. I walked off."

"Right now," the woman said, "I'm the happiest I've ever been in my life."

The San Antonio Light, which released this story, is withholding the woman's name.

Her newfound happiness follows a first marriage marred by violence and a rebound marriage that — although not abusive — did not last.

She met and fell in love with her first husband at San Antonio College in the 1960s. He was a strict Baptist, a teetotaler who never cursed — good husband material, she thought.

The abuse, when it began, was verbal: belittling her accomplishments, calling her a "dumb domestic" in front of their friends. Although she had worked to put him through college, he blocked her from finishing her nursing courses, she said. He threw her books out into the rain, refused to take her and the children to school in the morning, demanded dinner and a superclean house, and refused to give her money for supplies and bus fare.

Rhett spent more than five hours watching for the ambulance that would take him home, only to learn it wouldn't come until the next day because of insurance snags. George said he'd be damned if he would wait. He was taking his son home.

At home, however, Rhett quickly worsened. He had to take kidney dialysis, and began hemorrhaging when a health-care worker mistakenly gave him a blood thinner.

"We rushed him to St. Elizabeth

(Hospital) and there was this wonderful young nurse named Donald," Sherri said. "He came on at 7, saw how bad Rhett was and said, 'This guy needs me and I'm going to stay with him.'"

"Rhett would hemorrhage and hemorrhage and Donald would clean him up and clean him up again... They knew they were only patching him up to send him home to die, but they did it."

On a Saturday afternoon in February 1991, Rhett died surrounded by the people who loved him.

Betty Rozier and her daughter, Lisa Vallino, foreground, show Rozier's invention "IV House," a plastic device that keeps an intravenous needle from slipping.

Women who invent Rare group making vital contributions

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS — Betty Rozier came up with a plastic device that protects an intravenous needle from getting knocked out of a patient's arm. She pitched it to a businessman.

He told her he was impressed, and then asked, "Tell me, is your husband an engineer or what?"

"For once in my life, I was 100 percent speechless," said Rozier, a landscaper. "But it's a stereotype, it just popped out."

Rozier, and the approximately 6,000 other women who earn patents in the United States each year, live with such stereotypes, said Anne Kelly, director of the Office of National and International Application Review at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

But that view of women is strangling this country's competitive edge, Kelly said.

Only 6 percent of the nation's patents will go to women this year, twice the total 10 years ago, but still "a very dismal, small number," Kelly said.

There aren't many women inventors because there aren't many women scientists or engineers, and that's because of the way children are raised, she said.

"Boys are expected to take a clock apart, to develop a certain part of the brain, (while) girls will be encouraged to be a little more passive and not explore," Kelly said. Later in school, girls are steered away from advanced science and math.

Abuse

After five years, the abuse turned physical, when he knocked her down a flight of stairs as she tried to flee an argument.

She was shocked to find herself in a physically abusive situation.

"I didn't come from a violent home," she said. "I had a nice childhood. But my husband did come from a poor family, and he was abused as a child."

After five years marked by sporadic beatings, he crossed the line. He slapped her in front of their three children.

That was it, she said. Exposing her children to violence was unforgivable.

On Jan. 21, 1980 — the day she now dubs "freedom day" — the woman fled with her children, grabbing only their school uniforms on her way to the Battered Women's Shelter.

She soon moved into her own apartment, but then began what she describes as "a woman's nightmare" — months of violence. The worst incident came March 24, 1980. Based on the woman's recollections and a police report, the six-hour ordeal began about 9 p.m.

Her husband had arrived to pick up the children, who were asleep on the living room floor.

"He didn't drink, so I knew he wasn't drunk, but he started arguing," she said. "Then he tried to rape me. I don't know what he hit me with, but he knocked me unconscious. I woke choking on blood. I tried to get into the bathroom but he kept following me. Then he tore the phone out of the wall."

"Somehow the kids were still asleep, and I knew he wouldn't try to kill me as long as the children were there, so I crawled over to them and sat in the middle where they slept. I don't know how long it

A recent study by the American Association of University Women found girls fall behind boys significantly in math and science in high school, although they enter elementary school with about the same abilities.

The country can't afford to waste all that brainpower, Kelly said. Girls who are would-be inventors have few role models.

There's Marie Curie of course, who discovered radium in 1898, but she never held a patent. Harriet Strong invented the paper bag at the end of the 19th century, but she's hardly a household name.

More recently, there's Diane Pennicka, part of the group that invented the heart-attack drug TPA. As for Rozier, the St. Louis woman who patented "IV House" with daughter Lisa Vallino, she found that "people don't take me seriously when I say I've invented a medical product."

To fight sexist attitudes and to encourage girls to learn about science, Rozier talks about her invention in schools. And like Kelly, she'd like to form a national association of women inventors.

Without information and support from inventors' groups in St. Louis and Canada, I.V. House probably wouldn't have gotten past the idea stage, Rozier said.

Rozier sank a $35,000 inheritance into the project and hasn't seen a profit yet, but she's optimistic.

"The broker I get, the braver I feel," Rozier said. "We think this is going to be like the Band-Aid."

was, but eventually I heard him snoring. Then I remembered another phone I had put away on a shelf. I was very quiet and got the phone, called the police, ran out of the house and waited in a park across the street."

Police called EMS, and the woman was taken to Southeast Baptist Hospital.

Nine stitches on her face, and 20 inside her lip — each one chiseled in her memory.

Police reports from March 1980 until the divorce eight months later reveal a pattern of beatings and stalkings. Her husband ran her car off the road, broke her teeth, split open her lip and broke her finger, she said.

Police reports state that he repeatedly broke into her apartment and, on the pretext of trying to talk, began to hit her.

During the months of siege, a counselor at the women's shelter recommended the woman and her husband go for individual counseling. This approach, experts say, is intended to bolster a woman's self-esteem before she enters possibly confrontational couples' counseling.

In between the violence and terror, the police calls and scrambling for survival, the woman found herself ensnared in bureaucratic red tape.

Between January and November 1980, when the divorce was final, the woman said she appeared in court every three weeks for non-payment of child support, violation of a restraining order and other divorce-related matters. On most occasions, her husband did not show up.

The divorce was final in November 1980. Her ex-husband was ordered to catch up on his child support payments.
