Japanese market listless as holiday, US vote nears

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Stocks closed generally higher in thin, listless trading today after spending much of the day in negative territory, while the dollar rose against the Japanese yen.

Stock traders said most people stayed on the sidelines to await the U.S. presidential elections and a national holiday in Japan on Tuesday, but index-linked buying helped buoy prices late in the day.

Because of the election and holiday, "it was completely a 'wait-and-see' market," said Yasuo Ueki, general manager of equity operations with Nikko Securities. "There were almost no buyers or sellers."

Traders also were cautious because of more announcements due this week of corporate results for the fiscal half-year that ended Sept. 30, dealers said.

"Corporate results are still coming out, so investors aren't very aggressive about buying," said

Terutsugu Osakabe of Universal Securities.

Osakabe said the reports issued so far show that profits are "still on a downward slope" in Japan's weakened economy.

A last-minute surge caused by bargain hunting and index-linked buying helped the 225-issue Nikkei Stock gain 85.96 points, or 0.51 percent, for the day. It closed at 16,853.36 points, overcoming a deficit of almost 120 points at the end of the morning session.

The average had fallen 170.31 points, or 1.01 percent, on Friday.

Volume on the market's first section was estimated at 140 million shares, down sharply from 203.23 million Friday.

Declining issues outnumbered advances 573 to 353, while 157 issues remained unchanged.

The Tokyo Stock Price Index of all issues listed on the first section rose 1.53 points, or 0.12 percent, closing at 1,280.44. It had lost 8.22 points, or 0.62 percent, Friday.

Most traders said a victory by Democratic candidate Bill Clinton in the U.S. presidential election on Tuesday wouldn't have a big impact on Japan. But several warned that a Clinton triumph could worsen the trade environment for Japanese companies.

Meanwhile, the dollar closed at 123.69 yen, up 0.34 yen from Friday's close in Tokyo and also above its finish in New York Friday at 123.40 yen. After opening at 123.60 yen, it ranged between 123.50 yen and 123.77 yen.

Shozo Motomura, a dealer at Sakura Bank, said modest dollar buying was likely to continue until the U.S. election because investors believe Clinton will win.

He said investors view Clinton's fiscal policies as likely to increase the U.S. national debt, which would result in higher long-term interest rates, thereby making the dollar more attractive.

The benchmark No. 145 10-year Japanese government bonds closed at 105.22, up from Friday's 105.15-point finish. Their yield fell to 4.695 percent from 4.705 percent.

Traders on the Tokyo Stock Market send signals early today as stock prices fell. The market dropped .71 percent as investors held off pending a Tuesday holiday and the U.S. presidential elections.

Gunfire flares in Angolan capital

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUANDA, Angola — Sporadic gunfire flared in the capital today hours after a U.N.-brokered ceasefire took effect, but witnesses said the fighting was less intense than weekend clashes that threatened to renew the civil war.

Some civilians were reported looting buildings that had been used by UNITA rebels. Police vehicles with loudspeakers cruised the streets appealing for an end to the shooting.

A machine-gun battle raged for about an hour after a police armored car shelled UNITA positions in Luanda's diplomatic quarter before dawn. Explosions and gunfire were also heard to the east of the capital, but witnesses said that firing died down at around 8 a.m.

Officials estimated 200 people died in the weekend fighting, the worst outburst since tensions began escalating after UNITA lost national elections in late September to the government with which it fought a 16-year civil war.

UNITA leader Jonas Savimbi contends the elections were rigged, although the United Nations says the balloting was generally free and fair.

UNITA, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, ran second to the governing Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola in voting for the national legislature. Savimbi trailed incumbent Eduardo dos Santos in the presidential race, although dos Santos did not get the 50 percent needed for a first-round victory.

The elections were held under a 1991 peace accord to end a civil war that killed 350,000 people. The war, which broke out shortly before independence from Portugal in 1975, turned into one of the Cold War's fiercest proxy battles.

UNITA got support from the United States and South Africa while the MPLA was backed by Cuban troops and Soviet aid. But as European communism collapsed, dos Santos began leading the MPLA away from orthodox Marxism.

Unconfirmed reports on Portuguese radio today said a number of leading UNITA officials in Luanda had been killed, wounded or captured over the weekend. One said Abel Chivukuvuku, UNITA's foreign affairs spokesman, was seriously wounded and being treated at a military hospital.

Savimbi left the capital three weeks ago and was last reported in the central highland city of Huambo.

The speed with which the ceasefire was worked out Sunday with U.N., U.S. and Portuguese mediation suggested that both sides wanted to step back from the brink of another nationwide conflict. But Edmund de Jarnette, head of the U.S. mission, described the situation as "still confused."

The weekend fighting left the capital in chaos.

A nurse at Luanda's Prenda Hospital told Lisbon's TSF radio today: "There's no medicine, no doctors, nothing, just bodies and wounded lying on the floor."

The situation outside Luanda was unclear today. A resident of the port city of Benguela told The Associated Press of heavy fighting there, but the truce appeared to be holding in other cities.

During Sunday's fighting in Luanda, government forces backed by armored personnel carriers pounded UNITA positions with mortar and machine-gun fire. Armed civilians, including teenagers, fought alongside police against the rebels.

Jardo Muekalia, a UNITA spokesman in Washington, said the fighting was an "all-out offensive by the government." The government blamed UNITA.

The casualties included three Portuguese shot dead Sunday by government police. They were mistaken for UNITA members trying to flee, Lusa reported.

U.N. officials in Luanda said they could not confirm reports that two U.N. observers were killed.

Fischer, Spassky play to draw in 28

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Boris Spassky finished the weekend with another draw in his chess rematch with Bobby Fischer, playing it safe in game 28 despite an apparent advantage over his opponent.

The first player to win 10 games wins the match and collects $3.35 million of the $5 million prize money. Fischer leads 9-5 and, according to match rules, is guaranteed at least a tie.

Both Spassky and Fischer agreed that the Russian-born Spassky had an edge in Sunday's game, which ended after 35 moves. But in order to press hard for a win, Spassky would have had to open his position and risk a counterattack.

The next game is scheduled for Wednesday, with Fischer having a slight advantage by virtue of playing the white pieces. Spassky, who played white Sunday, said after the match that he couldn't find a way to continue his attack and that he was in danger of counterattack.

Yugoslav grandmaster Bozidar Ivanovic said Fischer played passively, and there was an early consensus that the game appeared headed for a draw.

On Saturday, the two former champions ended their 27th game in a draw after 46 moves. Observers said the game was lackluster, but both players credited their opponent with playing well.

The match, sponsored by Yugoslav businessman Jездimir Vasiljevic, is being played in defiance of U.N. sanctions against Yugoslavia, now composed only of Serbia and Montenegro, for provoking war in neighboring Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Top teacher

He makes the dead speak to students

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELCHERTOWN, Mass. — Shaun Bresnahan's job is making the dead speak in a language teenagers can understand.

To do that, the nation's social studies Teacher of the Year takes his students to the local cemetery.

"It's a wonderful way to teach the history of a community and the nation — its architecture, art and literatures styles, and its religious and social practices," he said.

Bresnahan will receive his award and $2,500 from the National Council for the Social Studies on Nov. 21 in Detroit.

When he can't take his high school students to the cemetery, he brings the cemetery to them, using plaster casts of 17th- and 18th-century headstones. He demonstrates how students can make rubbings of the replicas and casts of their own.

"See, this is history they can touch," he said.

At 45, he has spent half his life teaching, and Bresnahan said he can't imagine doing anything else.

"It's the most powerful and important occupation in the world," he said.

"At the end of one week, teachers have produced 100 times the impact of any legislative body in the course of the world. In what other job can you influence the attitudes of the world's potential leaders — the people who are going to be creating history?"

Dennis Pike, high school principal in this community of 10,500 about 35 miles north of Springfield, said, "When you have a teacher like that you just sit back and let him go."

Bresnahan has about 130 students, grades nine through 12.

A 10-minute lesson takes them from local lead paint removal projects to the gold fields of the Amazon, from fishing grounds off Japan through ocean currents, the tuna fleet and human ills caused by pollution.

And Bresnahan still doesn't have time to cover everything he'd like.

"All I can really do is bring out the highlights. Infuse ideas and relationships," he said.

He keeps reference books, a copier, videocassette recorders and other research aids for the heavy load of independent study he requires of his young scholars.

"You have to get them to do some thinking instead of just watching you perform," he said.

Bresnahan has scant patience for those who suggest today's youngsters have little interest in or knowledge of geography and politics.

"Even in this once-rural school district that is now becoming more suburban, they have a broad knowledge of the world through television," he said.

"You have to remember these little people have all the problems of many adults. They may be discouraged by the quality of the candidates they are presented, but they haven't lost interest in the process."

20th Century Fox chair to quit

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Joe Roth, who as chairman of 20th Century Fox oversaw the hits "Home Alone" and "The Last of the Mohicans," is resigning to form an independent film division within Walt Disney Studios, a source said Sunday.

Roth will announce his resignation Monday after three years in charge of the studio, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Roth, 44, would become the second head of a major studio to quit in the past week. Brandon Tartikoff announced last week he was leaving Paramount Pictures to spend more time with a 9-year-old daughter injured in a car crash last year.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting unidentified sources Monday, said Roth decided against renewing his contract with Fox after failing to win a package of lucrative financial concessions from Rupert Murdoch, chairman of Fox Inc.

Neither Murdoch nor Roth could be reached for comment late Sunday. Calls to the studio went unanswered.

Disney spokeswoman Terry Press said her studio had no comment.

"Home Alone" took in more than $283 million in U.S. theaters.

But the studio also has released the disappointing "For the Boys" and "Shining Through" during Roth's tenure.

Slaying of nuns stuns neighbors

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

RUMA, Ill. — The slaying of five American nuns in Liberia stunned neighbors they had taught and nursed and left their sisters by blood and by holy orders in disbelieving grief.

"They gave their lives for what they believed," said a tearful Sister Mildred Gross, head of the Order of the Adorers of the Blood of Christ. "I never thought it would end like this."

Sisters Shirley Kolmer, Barbara Ann-Mutra, Mary-Joel Kolmer, Kathleen McGuire and Agnes Mueller, in their 50s and 60s, were reported slain in Liberia's civil war during the past two weeks, apparently by rebels.

The Kolmers were cousins. Shirley Kolmer and Mueller had sisters in the order.

Sister Elizabeth Kolmer, who visited Liberia over the summer, said her sister "could see what the real questions of life were, and what we could do to help. She was a great woman."

Sister Mary Ann Mueller said her sister had been in Liberia for five years and "was where she wanted to be, and I'm grateful for that."

The order established a mission in Liberia in 1971 to provide health care and education.

Near Ruma, a farming community of about 250 some 40 miles southeast of St. Louis, the order operates several hospitals and provides staff to several schools.

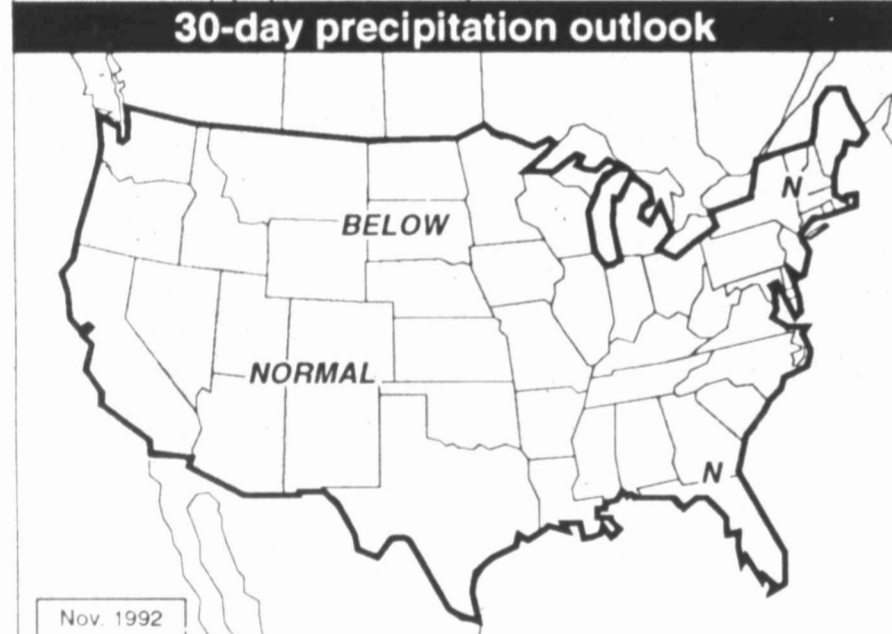

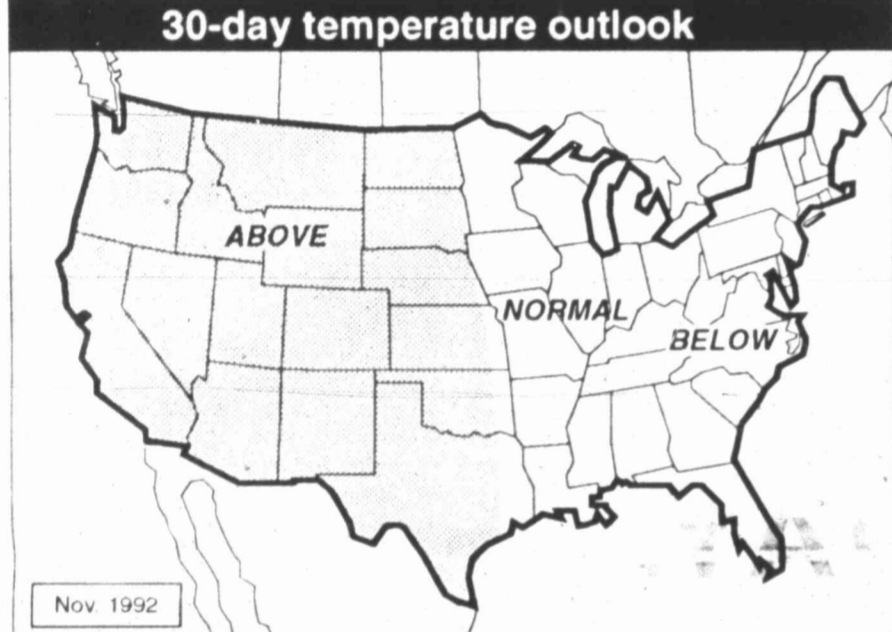

"It seems like just about everybody here was a student or a patient of one of them, or they knew somebody who was a student or a patient," said James Wittenauer of nearby Red Bud.

"I don't know that you can make sense out of it," said Ruma resident Bob Chunn. "They were innocent women who were only trying to help the Liberian people."

Sister Gross said the Liberian mission's future depends on whether other nuns are willing to go. She said it was the first time that members of the order were killed while carrying out their mission.

She pointed out a quotation on a wall at the convent: "Our times are in thee hands, O God."

"This is a quote from one of our sisters who was held prisoner in China 50 years ago," Sister Gross said.

Clinton tops Bush in endorsements

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bill Clinton picked up at least nine newspaper endorsements over the weekend, while President Bush got eight and Ross Perot one. Bush was tapped by a newspaper partly owned by Vice President Dan Quayle's family, and the paper that favored Perot was in his wife's hometown.

The Tribune-Review of Greensburg, Pa., the town where Margot Perot was born, abandoned its tradition of backing Republicans in favor of the independent presidential candidate.

"Enough of Bushism. We can do better," the Tribune-Review's editorial said. "And better, in our view," is Ross Perot. The paper called him "the first truly inspirational politician" since Ronald Reagan.

Clinton was endorsed by the Herald-Standard of Uniontown, Pa.; The Blade of Toledo, Ohio; News & Record of Greensboro, N.C.; The News & Observer of Raleigh, N.C.; Manhattan (Kan.)

Mercury; South Bend (Ind.) Tribune; The Clarion-Ledger of Jackson, Miss.; The News-Times of Danbury, Conn.; and the Las Vegas Sun.

The following newspapers preferred Bush: Cincinnati Enquirer; Morning Journal of Lorain, Ohio; The Indianapolis Star; The Tampa (Fla.) Tribune; Pensacola (Fla.) News Journal; the Waterbury (Conn.) Republican American; The Birmingham (Ala.) News; and the Winter Haven (Fla.) News Chief.

In a front-page editorial Sunday, the Blade, which endorsed Bush in 1988, said the president's "stewardship of the domestic agenda of the United States has been almost nonexistent."

But the Cincinnati Enquirer, which also backed Bush in 1988, said the president should be re-elected.

"With his disc-jockey glibness, made-for-TV looks and bottomless pockets of promises, Bill Clinton is the man for the 'Me Generation,'" the editorial said.

SCRIPPS HOWARD NEWS SERVICE

LAST WORD — The three candidates get one more word to describe their campaign before voters shut them off, and pull the voting booth curtains closed Tuesday.

Bush: "Trust."
Clinton: "Change."
Perot: "Gridlock."

LAST LATEST LINE — That CNN-USA Today daily tracking poll that had the election within one point, 41-40, as of Friday, widened over the weekend. It grew to three points, 42-39, Saturday and to seven points, 43-36, Sunday. Ross Perot was at 15 in the latest poll.

Other final national polls (listed Clinton-Bush-Perot): CBS, 44-36-17; New York Times, 43-34-15; ABC, 41-38-18; and Harris Poll, 44-39-17.

PREDICT — A panel of "experts" (read: journalists, politicians, pollsters and academicians) was asked by the Washington Post to predict the outcome Tuesday. Of the 15, 12 said Clinton would win, 3 went for Bush. Eliminating the high and low scores (a la judging figure skating) the average prediction: Clinton would get 45 percent and 326 electoral votes; Bush would get 41 percent and 212 electoral votes; Perot would get 13 percent and no electoral votes. They also predict the congressional election: Senate, 59-41 Democrats, and House, 258-176-1, Democrats.

LAST ELECTORAL COLLEGE — In the final Electoral College analysis by Scripps Howard News Service, Clinton has 25 states with 313 electoral votes, 43 more than he needs to win. Bush has 18 states with 158 electoral votes and 7 states with 67 electoral votes remain a tossup.

BUSH SOUNDBITE — "I love to fight this one out in the last several days on character and trust. Yes, he is a character." — at Sunday rally in Auburn Hills, Mich.

CLINTON SOUNDBITE — "Those who say things are fine and those of us who believe we can do better." — defining the difference at a Wilkes-Barre, Pa., rally Sunday.

PEROT SOUNDBITE — "I laid $60 million on the table and put my family through hell because I love you and I love this country." — at Sunday rally in Long Beach, Calif.

THE LAST VOICE YOU HEAR — Clinton has bought 30-minute ads tonight on all three networks. It'll be a mix of the 13-minute Hope, Ark., film that aired first at the Democratic National Convention and a spot filmed as his voice was giving out Sunday in Milwaukee. It'll air at 7 p.m. (local time) on NBC and 7:30 p.m. (local time) on both ABC and CBS. Perot has bought 30-minute spots at 7 p.m. (local time) on both ABC and CBS and a one-hour spot at 8 p.m. (local time) on NBC. Bush rejected the election-eve long talk to continue running a series of one- and two-minute ads tonight.

IN THE SENATE — A few late polls in tight Senate races show: Democrat Robert Abrams leading Sen. Alfonse D'Amato in New York; Sen. John Glenn holding a slippery 3-point lead over Republican Mike Dewine in Ohio; Democrat Barbara Boxer in a dead heat with Bruce Herschensohn for an open seat in California; Sen. Arlen Specter holding a slight lead over Democrat Lynn Yeakel in Pennsylvania; Sen. Terry Sanford and Republican Lauch Faircloth in a tossup in North Carolina; Sen. Wyche Fowler headed for a possible runoff with Republican Paul Coverdell in Georgia because neither may get 50 percent of the vote; Democrat John Rauh leading Judd Gregg in New Hampshire for an open seat; and Carol Moseley Braun holding her lead against Republican Rich Williamson in Illinois.

WHERE'S BUSH? — Today in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky and Louisiana.

WHERE'S CLINTON? — Today in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Missouri, Kentucky, Texas, New Mexico and Colorado — a 29-hour, 10-city, 8-state, 4,100-mile trip ending at sunrise Tuesday.

WHERE'S PEROT? — Today in Dallas.

edge on the electoral map. National surveys echoed Bush's dilemma. A CNN-USA Today tracking poll of 1,562 voters Saturday and Sunday showed Clinton with an eight-point lead, while a Harris poll of 1,975 voters over the same period gave Clinton a six-point edge. Trying to make Bush's task even tougher, Clinton increased the pace for the final leg, scheduling 10 stops in eight states today on what he hoped was a 30-hour, 4,100-mile victory lap. Clinton's targets: Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Missouri, Kentucky, Texas, New Mexico and finally a sunrise rally Tuesday in Colorado before heading home to Little Rock. Running mate Al Gore had seven states to visit: North Carolina, Georgia, Ohio, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri and Tennessee before arriving home early on Election Day. In one of a series of satellite interviews today, Gore said the Bush campaign's relentless character attacks were "a good sign that they don't have anything good to say about their own plans for the future of this country."

Bush had a heavier burden in a six-state day starting in New Jersey and ending at home in Houston, with Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky and Louisiana in between. Vice President Dan Quayle targeted Gore's home state of Tennessee before making a five-state Midwest swing ending at home in Indiana after stops in Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois. The heavy overlap between the Clinton-Gore and Bush-Quayle schedules pointed out the final battlegrounds; in most, the Democrats had late, if narrow, leads. Perot finished a weekend campaign swing Sunday night in California and had but one election eve event, a hometown rally in Dallas. Both Perot and Clinton also were airing final appeals tonight on the three major television networks. Democrats were in no danger of losing their House and Senate majorities, yet there was plenty of drama in the individual contests. Because of retirements and redistricting, more than 100 fresh faces were assured in the House.

Correction

In the Sunday business article "Is Now the Right Time to Borrow?" Sue Bradberry, who chairs the local multiple listings service of the Big Spring Board of Realtors was quoted incorrectly. She said interest rates may go up between 2 to 5 percent, not 25 percent by this time next year.

Join this year's Operation Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: For the last several years, I have written to the addresses you have printed and corresponded with American servicemen and women at holiday time.

Dear Abby

ing of cards, letters and goodies, I thank you and invite you to join once again in this patriotic effort to spread good cheer to our troops, both men and women, who are far from home and lonely.

I want to thank you for giving your readers the opportunity to show our servicemen and women how much we all care about them.

Eighth Annual Operation Dear Abby

Thanks to the efforts of Don Grimes of the America Remembers campaign and the U.S. Military Postal System, special ZIP codes have been assigned to Operation Dear Abby for the period of Nov. 1, 1992, to Jan. 15, 1993.

A new base has been included in this year's effort: sailors on an isolated base in the middle of the Aleutian Island chain. McDonald's has graciously agreed to distribute your mail, which can be addressed to "Dear Sailor" or "Dear Friend".

OPERATION DEAR ABBY McDonald's of Adak PSC 486 Box 1308 FPO AP 96575 Mail for our sailors and Marines who will be on board a ship during this holiday may be addressed to "Dear Sailor" or "Dear Marine" at the following ship addresses:

OPERATION DEAR ABBY USS Ranger (CV-61) APO AP 96695

OPERATION DEAR ABBY USS John F. Kennedy FPO AE 09535

We have members of all branches of the military in Korea, so address your cards and letters to "Dear Friend".

USO Camp Casey ATTN: OPERATION DEAR ABBY

PSC 307 Box 108 APO AP 96545

And finally, for our fine troops (all branches) in Europe, you should address your cards and letters to "Dear Friend":

OPERATION DEAR ABBY Joint Task Force PSC 1285 APO AE 09885

P.S. The preferred "goody" is still chocolate chip cookies. They travel very well when packed with popcorn (already popped). Homemade fudge, hard candies and gum are also much appreciated. But the numero uno treat is mail, mail, and more mail!
