Drug raid nets eight arrests

Raid carried out after two months of undercover work

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Two months of undercover drug operations have landed eight Big Spring residents in jail and another six remain at large.

As part of the operation, undercover officers of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force have been purchasing drugs, primarily cocaine, from 14 Big Spring residents, said Tom Finley, commander of the task force.

Beginning at 3:30 p.m. Thursday, the task force teamed up with the Howard County Sheriff's Office to arrest these people, said Finley.

During the pre-raid conference, task force officials divided the group into five teams and each team was given the names of three defendants to arrest. The make and models of three vehicles also were given, to be seized in the raid, Finley said.

"If they've used the vehicle to facilitate a drug deal, then we seize it," Finley said.

Armed with search warrants, arrest warrants, consent-to-search forms and copies of the Miranda warning, teams began their sweep of the city.

Arrested were:

Trade war fears prompts EC emergency meeting

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Fears over a possible trade war between the United States and European Community prompted a world trade body today to call an emergency meeting to discuss the "very grave situation."

The United States imposed 200 percent import taxes on European white wine and other products Thursday in retaliation for the EC's refusal to cut farm subsidies. Washington says the subsidies give European farm products an unfair advantage in world trade, but France — the main foe of EC concessions — said cuts could drive many small farmers out of business and cause unemployment.

The EC made clear it would fight back with trade sanctions on U.S. products if the crisis could not be defused. That fueled fears the dispute would escalate into a full-blown trade war, which could affect the prices of any number of goods, and potentially hundreds of thousands of jobs.

Officials at the 105-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the body that oversees world trade, said it would hold a meeting Tuesday to consider how to resolve the crisis.

Arthur Dunkel, the Swiss director-general of GATT, said late Thursday that the U.S. tariffs threatened free trade around the world, but he blamed the EC for causing the crisis.

GATT has been trying for six years to produce a new accord on lowering trade barriers, but an agreement has been snagged by the U.S.-European dispute and is now threatened by the prospect of an escalating cycle of retaliations.

Local tax increase seen under the new school finance plan

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A property tax rate increase of at least 20 cents, 14 percent, for the Big Spring Independent School District could occur next year under the Texas governor's proposed school finance plan.

Or cuts in the neighborhood of $1 million in teacher salaries or programs or materials could be made in order to maintain the current tax rate of $1.42 per $100 valuation, said Superintendent Bill McQueary.

"It doesn't look real good for us," he said.

Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, criticized the "Fair Share Plan," saying it lacks state funding and therefore puts the burden on local property taxes.

"We can't go up much more in property taxes," said Fraser, who plans to oppose the plan when the Legislature convenes in special session Tuesday to solve funding disparities — under court order — between rich and poor school districts. "I can't find anybody that likes this. You'd think with a plan like this there would be somebody that likes it."

Fraser advocates current funding levels but with a different standard of equity between rich and poor schools. The Fair Share

Plan would require that 95 percent of all school funds be equalized per student.

The Fair Share plan could result in property tax increases up to $3 billion statewide but leaves those decisions to local school boards, said Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who joined Gov. Ann Richards and House Speaker Gib Lewis Wednesday to announce the plan in Austin. It requires a constitutional amendment approved by two-thirds of voters.

It would shift $400 million, 2.3 percent of all funding, from rich school districts to poor districts, involving 10.5 percent of all districts. Rich schools affected include those in Forsan, Westbrook, Glasscock County and Borden County.

But increased property tax demands would hurt medium-wealth districts "like Big Spring and Coahoma," Fraser said.

"It looks like the medium-wealth districts are going to get hit hard," McQueary said.

Ron Plumlee, assistant superintendent of finance for the Big Spring school district, said it appears some of the extra money to be generated may be to help pay the state's share of contributions to teacher retirement and to pick up school funding shortfalls this year and any additional shortfalls next year.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and Rep. David Counts, D-Knox City, could not be reached for comment this morning.

Postal service offering curbside, box unit service

By MARTHA E. FLORES
Staff Writer

The Big Spring United States Postal Service is offering curbside delivery to local residents.

The service is available to those who wish to replace their door mailbox with a curbside mailbox. The office will furnish the mailbox and metal post and install the box with no charge to the resident.

Curbside service is not mandatory, but if the city converts to the service money and time can be saved, said local postal officials.

Estimated cost of delivery to residence is $167. Curbside delivery reduces the cost to $118, local Postal Officer in Charge Beverly Tubb said in a letter to postal customers. Annually on an average delivery route of 600 stops, curbside service saves $29,000.

Time needed to deliver the mail also decreases with the proposed service. To complete delivery by walking is estimated to take 20 to 25 minutes. It is reduced to five to 10 minutes with curbside, Tubb states in the letter.

Local postal service officials hope to convert all of Big Spring to curbside.

Curbside delivery is one of two programs the United States Postal Service is initiating to reduce costs and increase efficiency. The other program is the Neighborhood Box Unit (NBU).

The Postal Service offers NBU to neighborhood block residents wishing to have their mail delivered to a certain location in their neighborhood to a unit. All NBU maintenance is done by the postal service. It also decreases route delivery time to about three minutes. For NBU to be installed all block residents must agree on the service and location.

Ballot wording may kill bonds

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The city's massive street construction program could come to a halt in December because of legal questions about how city officials worded the ballot for a $500 million bond election last year.

The Texas attorney general's office has given preliminary rejection to sale of the bonds because voters were not allowed to approve spending by categories, officials said Thursday.

The 1991 bond election was an all-or-nothing proposition that lumped together $500 million in spending for programs ranging from new parks, streets and sewers, to building repairs and asbestos removal.

Such bundling, known as "log-rolling," has repeatedly been rejected by Texas courts.

Jimmie Schindewolf, co-chief of staff for Mayor Bob Lanier, said that if the bond sales are not approved, the city's street building and repair program would be out of money next month. By March, the city will run out of money for storm sewer projects, he said.

Oystering halted

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORT LAVACA — State officials have ordered a halt to oystering in a large portion of Lavaca Bay because of high levels of harmful bacteria.

A state health department official speculated that levels of fecal coliform bacteria rose because heavy rains on Oct. 17 washed bird droppings into the bay from nearby Vanada Lake.

"There have been a lot of ducks and geese in the Vanada Lake area," said Mike Ordner, a spokesman for the shellfish division of the state Health Department.

Fecal coliform bacteria flourishes in water contaminated by droppings from warmblooded animals, he said. "That includes cattle and birds."

The closure became effective Nov. 1, coinciding with the beginning of this year's oyster season, and was the season's first bay closure.

Ordner said additional water samples were taken in Lavaca Bay on Tuesday. If these samples meet state standards, the bay could reopen as early as 12:01 a.m. Sunday, he said.

To be safe, consumers should only eat oysters purchased from a seafood dealer or fish market certified by the state health department.

The closed portion includes all of Lavaca Bay west of the Matagorda Ship Channel and north of a line drawn between Indian Point to Sand Point that crosses the ship channel at marker 53.

President George Bush meets with his Cabinet Thursday at the White House. Acting Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, left, and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney flank the president. The speculation now is whether Bush will return home to Texas to live.

Homeward bound? Bush might return to Texas

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Texans for years have questioned how deep President Bush's ties run in his adopted home state, but they have not doubted the economic boon and prestige brought home by the leading non-native son.

Now that Bush will not be returning to the White House, locals wonder what Texas might lose with the shift in power.

"I think Gov. Clinton's going to be hard-pressed to do for Houston and for Texas what George Bush did, and I think that could be said of almost any president who is not from Houston and not from Texas," said Rob Mosbacher Jr., chairman of the Texas Victory Committee and son of former commerce secretary and longtime Bush ally Bob Mosbacher.

"The president continuously set up things that were important to the city and the state, whether you're talking about the super collider or the space program, or in Houston the (1990) Economic Summit and the (1992) GOP convention — things that meant dollars for the city and the state," Mosbacher said.

"It's a sense of sadness. It's almost as if we'll drop a couple of notches in terms of political importance as a city," he said. "But hopefully Texas won't suffer too much."

Distinction and dollars brought by high-level visitors will take the biggest hits, agreed George Strake of Houston, former chairman of the Texas Republican Party.

"You won't have helicopters flying overhead and presidential caravans coming in and out of town, which in itself is a plus for any city, as far as prestige is concerned. Beyond that, I don't think Mr. Clinton will be bringing world economic summits or national conventions to Houston, so those are obvious big losses to the hotel sector, the restaurant sector, the taxicab drivers, and the community as a whole. There will be just a lot fewer Texans involved in this government," Strake said.

"However, I will also say that we

"There's no doubt they're either going to buy or build one down here — at least there doesn't seem to be any doubt about it."

Rob Mosbacher Jr.
Chairman Texas Victory Committee

survived before we had a hometown president, and we will probably survive without one," he added.

Bush has not yet announced what his plans are after next January. But many expect him to spend at least some of his time in Houston, where he is registered to vote.

Although he has not owned a home in Texas since becoming vice president in 1981 — instead buying a house in Kennebunkport, Maine — Bush's legal residence has remained a suite at The Houstonian hotel.

He does own a small vacant lot in Houston, and there has been speculation whether he will build a house on it.

Mosbacher said he was told Bush stopped his motorcade on the way to the airport the morning after the election to look at a house for sale.

"There's no doubt they're either going to buy or build one down here — at least there doesn't seem to be any doubt about it," Mosbacher said.

There also was no firm word on what Bush would do if he returned to town.

Rice University Provost Carl MacDowell said as far as he knows, the school has made no job offer to Bush or fellow Houstonian James Baker III, Bush's friend, key adviser and former secretary of state.

Judge to rule in case of sheriff accused of theft

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH — A state district judge will rule Nov. 17 on whether Sheriff Don Carpenter is guilty of illegally giving away a confiscated gun.

At issue is the value of the gun. If it is at least worth $200, the charge is a felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison. Anything less is a misdemeanor. The statute of limitations on a misdemeanor offense has expired, meaning Carpenter could not be prosecuted.

Lawyers for both sides spent Thursday hammering away at the gun's "fair market value."

Sheriff's deputies confiscated the gun, a .38-caliber Derringer, from a man arrested on a mental warrant in 1986.

Carpenter is accused of giving the gun to County Commissioner J.D. Johnson in November 1987 for protection after the sheriff heard that Johnson had twice confronted illegal trash haulers in his precinct.

Prosecutors contend that is theft by a public servant. If Carpenter is found guilty of a third-degree felony, he could be sent to jail for two to 10 years and fined up to $1,000.

Parks will remain open

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — State officials, reversing plans to close seven parks for budgetary reasons, said Thursday some cuts would still occur in at least six facilities.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department told commissioners that negotiations were under way to keep five facilities open on a long-term basis, with agency staff members pursuing similar agreements for the other two.

"This has been an extremely difficult process, but some very positive benefits are emerging from it," said Ron Holliday, TPWD public lands director.

He said at least nine Friends of the Park groups have formed to assist the state, along with several other volunteer organizations.

In July, the parks and wildlife department had announced closures or reductions at about 20 parks. The closure list was later pared to 11 and then to seven facilities, which were scheduled to go off line Dec. 1.

But some communities planned to sign cooperative agreements for managing all or part of their local state parks' operations.

The department said Old Fort Parker State Historical Park in Limestone County became the first of the seven sites to go off the closure list.

Opposition Mexican candidates hoping for 'Spirit of Arkansas'

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

CIUDAD VICTORIA, Mexico — Inspired by the "spirit of Arkansas," opposition candidates are hoping to unseat Mexico's ruling party Sunday in a gubernatorial election in this border state.

Opposition supporters are hoping that Bill Clinton's defeat of the Republicans will be an omen for Mexico's governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI. "The Iron Curtain fell, the Berlin Wall fell and the Republicans fell," said Jorge Cardenas, opposition candidate for governor in Tamaulipas state. "It's time the PRI fell."

The party has held power in Mexico for 63 years, winning almost every election since 1929, often through fraud, corruption and intimidation.

Sunday's voting, the third round of state elections this year, are another test of government promises of democracy and political reform.

When he took office in 1988, Salinas vowed to reform his party and the country's authoritarian political system.

In 1989 the PRI lost the Baja California statehouse to the PAN, and in July the PAN triumphed in Chihuahua — the only two times the ruling party has acknowledged defeat in gubernatorial elections.

But allegations of vote fraud persist and widespread protests have forced the resignations of three recently elected governors since mid-term elections in August 1991. The resignations have shook the party faithful.

On Sunday, voters here in Tamaulipas state will choose a governor, mayors and federal deputies. Voters in the western state of Sinaloa and in the central states of Puebla and Tlaxcala also will go to the polls.

"It's probably easier to vote out the Republicans than the PRI," said Pedro Etienne, state PRD leader. "But we're hoping the spirit of Arkansas will prevail here," he added in a reference to Clinton's home state.

Japan resumes foreign aid to Vietnam

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Japan resumed official aid to Vietnam today, yet another U.S. ally expanding ties to the resource-rich southeast Asian nation despite Washington's economic embargo.

"We have our policy and the United States has its policy," said Foreign Ministry spokesman Masamichi Hanabusa as Japan offered Vietnam a loan to buy up to $370 million in commodities.

"Being allies, of course, we follow the respective policies in a way that is as harmonious as possible. I do believe that the United States government understands Japan's position, he said.

The U.S. Embassy in Tokyo said it would have no comment on the Japanese loan.

In late October, acting U.S. Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said the possibility of Japan improving ties with Vietnam would not affect Washington's decision on whether to end the economic embargo, which still prevents Vietnam from getting aid from the World Bank.

10-year-old cigarette lawsuit dismissed

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWARK, N.J. — After 10 years of high-profile litigation against the cigarette industry, the attorneys for the family of a woman who claimed she died from smoking have thrown in the legal towel.

The lawsuit over Rose Cipollone's death, which resulted in a landmark ruling from the U.S. Supreme Court, was dismissed Thursday by the family's consent, said an attorney for the family, Alan Darnell.

A court clerk said the case was dismissed with prejudice, which means the lawsuit cannot be filed again.

The dismissal order did not elaborate and Marc Z. Edell, a family attorney, wouldn't comment. Thomas Cipollone, who carried on the lawsuit after his parents' death, has an unlisted telephone number and couldn't be reached.

But one of Edell's colleagues in the case, Cynthia A. Walters, told The New York Times that the "Cipollones always felt that they got what they wanted out of the case."

Thomas Cipollone "was always of the view that 'I don't have to go back to court to get what I want,'" Ms. Walters said. "They were never sorry they got involved in it. Rose knew she would die long before the case got to court. She wanted to help people and I think she did."

The case began in 1983 when Rose Cipollone of Little Ferry sued the cigarette companies that made the brands she smoked for 42 years. She died at age 58 in 1984.

A federal jury in 1988 ordered Liggett Group Inc. to pay her husband, Antonio, $400,000 — the nation's first monetary damage award against the industry. But the jury absolved Philip Morris Companies Inc. and Lorillard Inc., which made other brands of cigarettes Mrs. Cipollone smoked.

Justice Department refuses to defend section of cable bill

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is refusing to defend one section of the new cable television law against cable industry lawsuits because President Bush considers the provision unconstitutional.

The bill re-regulates cable TV rates, but also imposes business restrictions on cable operators that the industry is going to court to try to stop.

The announcement Thursday brought angry reaction from groups that had lobbied in favor of the law passed in the waning days of Congress over the president's veto.

"We've known all along the Bush administration opposed the cable act but we are dumbfounded its Justice Department would refuse to defend the law of the land," said Edward O. Fritts, NAB president and chief executive officer.

The provision in question requires cable operators to reserve up to a third of their channels for local broadcast stations such as affiliates of ABC, CBS, NBC, Fox, PBS and independent stations.

Cable programmers oppose this "must-carry" provision because they say it restricts their access. New cable networks are rapidly being created, from all-news channels to all-cartoon channels, and programmers say the law would give broadcasters unfair advantage for space on the cable dial.

Assistant Attorney General Stuart Gerson said in a letter to the Senate that the Justice Department had advised the president before he vetoed the bill that the section was unconstitutional and "could not ethically take a different position at this time."

Gerson said, however, that Justice would defend against challenges to another section of the law that requires cable companies to negotiate with local broadcast stations before carrying their signals.

This provision was sought by broadcasters to give them power over where their stations show up among the cable channels and to enable them to seek payment.

Coincidentally, the Justice Department letter was sent on the same day the Federal Communications Commission began making rules for implementing the law.

DRCC needs your support

To plagiarize the old Uncle Sam recruiting posters a bit, The Dora Roberts Community Center needs you! That's right, you and your support are needed to help with the private renovation of the Dora Roberts Community Center.

And while a group has been working on the project for a while, the community effort gets under way at 8 Saturday night with the DRCC Sock Hop — a return to the 50s and 60s in an effort to raise funds for the renovation.

The center can be an asset for our community. Located next to the Comanche Trail Park Lake and near the historical birthplace of our community, the facility can serve the needs of local groups who need a place to meet.

And as Howard College's Dorothy Garrett Coliseum is used more and more, there becomes more and more need for an alternate facility.

With an abundance of floor space, meeting rooms and a large auditorium with stage, a renovated Dora Roberts Community Center can make Big Spring a viable alternative for smaller conventions and gatherings.

The historical aspect of the location, along with the nearby recreational facilities, adds to the overall package that our community could offer.

Our community's central location in West Texas is also an asset for groups looking for a meeting or convention site.

We applaud the efforts of those who have given of their own time so that the entire community may benefit from the Dora Roberts Community Center.

And it's a bit ironic, we think, that a group of people interested in the future of our community give of themselves to help restore this facility — itself a wonderful gift to our community.

We hope you will take the time Saturday night to join your friends and neighbors as we work to raise funds to renovate a grand old lady. But if you can't attend, don't think that you can't help... just call the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce to see what you can do and where to send your contribution.

See you at the hop Saturday night.

The Writer's Art

The story of our evolving language

A long time ago, an English poet took pen in hand. He began his Canterbury Tales:

"Whan that April with his shoures soote
 "The droghte of March hath perced to the roote
 "And smale foweles maken melodye,
 "That slepen al the nyght with open ye
 "(So priketh hem nature in hir corages);
 "Thanne longen folk to goon on pilgrimages."
 Forgive me if today I summon the shade of Mr. Chaucer in my own defense. A few weeks ago, in a moment of reckless abandon, I suggested that the time has come for writers to bid farewell to "whom" except in constructions that obviously demand an objective pronoun. In constructions involving nominative clauses, I said, nobody cares greatly if we use "who" or "whom."
 This was hardly a novel obser-

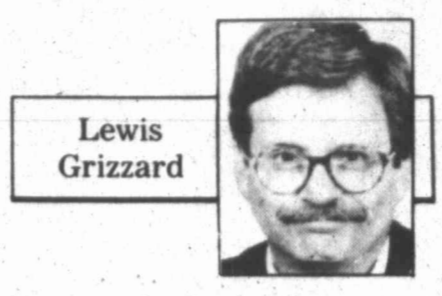

Nurses: God's agents in white caps

WAYCROSS, Ga. — Tell me about the urban ills, tell me how we're all living on top of one another in large cities, and there are senseless drive-by shootings, and more illegitimate births than those begot in wedlock. And there is dope, the loss of purpose and direction and Dante could have had a field day with the hells of Los Angeles, New York and Chicago, et al.

And then I'll tell you about Waycross.

It's way down there in south Georgia, sitting there on the very banks of the Okefenokee swamps, where I would take my chance against the Reptilia instead of walking dark city streets these days.

Waycross is a community. Lord, how that word "community" has suffered. If you live in an urban area, you don't live in a community any more. You live where you can get shot on the street corner for no other reason than you just happen to be there.

So we rolled in at 6 p.m. A thundershower had struck earlier and had turned the late spring afternoon pleasant and refreshing.

I was in Waycross because of Peggy Musgrove. Peggy's 35. She is married and she has two children. She is a nurse.

Peggy Musgrove's liver doesn't work. (I asked the doctor why not. He said, "It just shut down. We don't know why.")

They love Peggy Musgrove in Waycross. They love her because she embodies what nursing is all about.

She loves people. Takes care of people. Makes their pain endurable, and I know a little something about nurses. I've needed taking care of myself on more than one occasion.

God bless nurses, for they are the mothers to the sick and the dying.

When your liver quits working, you are a dead person. Without your liver, you die from a hundred poisons.

Peggy Musgrove didn't do anything to harm her liver. She just got unlucky.

And she needs a new one.

"A transplant is our only chance," that same doctor told me.

To have a liver transplant, Peggy Musgrove needs one quarter of a million dollars. Some ball players make that for one-fifth of a season.

So Waycross took it upon itself to raise the money to give Peggy Musgrove her chance at living.

An anonymous donor pledged to match funds the community could raise. That word, "community," again.

So the community raised $100,000 and the donor matched it.

I had a little something to do with the initial $100,000 because those giving and loving people paid a pretty good price to hear me tell those old stories again, but compared what everybody else had done, it was, in fact, a very little something.

I was there on stage in front of people who cared about one of their own, people who could put their own problems behind them to lend support to somebody with much larger ones.

I wanted to put my arms around everybody in the auditorium and tell them this is what we are about. This is us at our best. Forget killing, looting, burning and Murphy Brown and her bastard child. The grass roots yet holds to the values that made us strong in the first place.

MAYBE WE IN THE POLLING BUSINESS OUGHT TO TAKE A LOOK AT WHAT WE'RE ASKING PEOPLE.

WE TRACK MINUTE TO MINUTE CHANGES IN THIS PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN, BUT THERE ARE SOME LONGER-RANGE ISSUES INVOLVED.

THERE ARE SOME STRUCTURAL PROBLEMS IN THE ECONOMY THAT ARE GOING TO BE REAL TROUBLE EVEN UNDER A PRESIDENT CLINTON. MAYBE WE SHOULD BE ASKING ABOUT THAT.

IF THE 1996 ELECTION WERE HELD TODAY, WOULD YOU VOTE TO RE-ELECT PRESIDENT CLINTON?

DO YOU THINK THAT HOW THE ECONOMY WILL HAVE BEEN HELPS OR HURTS HIM?

Finally voting for a winner

Ding, dong the witch is dead! The wicked witch is dead!

I'm sorry.

It's been so long, since a presidential election has gone my way, I just can't help but celebrate.

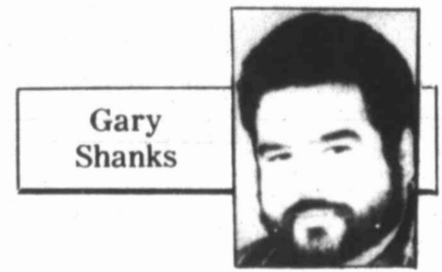

But I shouldn't gloat. Especially since the wick... er... President Bush came out ahead at Howard County polls.

Ok. So, we'll dispense with rubbing it in and talk about what I learned in the election.

A wise old man once told me

Well, before delving into this little pearl of wisdom, I'll give you some background. The aforementioned man was divorced at 50 and realized at about 55 the company he'd been working for was going belly up. Plus, he'd taken to drinking a bit more than socially. In fact, he was soused when he told me this over a Grand Slam at Denny's.

Anyway, he said, "Gary, I learned something from you every day (he had been my supervisor at an oil-field company where I spent a couple of years).

"Any man who stops learning has started dying. Every day, I try to learn something from everybody I meet." He said he could have avoided a great many mistakes if he'd adopted this philosophy earlier.

I have no idea what ever became of him.

But I like the idea of actively trying to learn something from life every day.

The most important thing I learned during this election is, being a Republican does not make one a bad person.

This may seem trite, but there was a period when I looked at anyone who voted Republican as either deeply disturbed, or a "fat cat" trying to save his own bacon.

During this election, I've been mildly stunned at the number of just all around good people who are Republicans.

Huh! Live and learn.

I said in a previous column, Ross Perot's dramatic drop out of the race was just a political ploy. I had a lot of respect for Perot as a businessman, but he and Admiral Gridlock really got on my nerves.

In my entire life, Clinton is the first president I've ever voted for. I've voted against a few of them.

But the guy repeated, almost verbatim, some of the same ideas I've been spouting for years (I do that — I tend to spout, drives my wife nuts). Our theories on global economics are almost identical.

For instance, I've said we need to take these companies, that close down U.S. factories and open new ones overseas, and tax the heck out of them to bring their products back. Clinton said the same thing — I was amazed.

Well, I guess he talks the talk. Now it's time to see if he walks the walk.

To all the George Bush fans, I'm sorry, but not very.

Ciao.

Today is Friday, Nov. 6, the 311th day of 1992. There are 55 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 6, 1860, former Illinois Congressman Abraham Lincoln defeated three other candidates for the presidency of the United States.

On this date:

In 1854, the "king" of American march music, John Philip Sousa, was born in Washington D.C.

In 1861, Jefferson Davis was elected to a six-year term as president of the Confederacy.

In 1869, the first official inter-collegiate football game was played in New Brunswick, N.J. Rutgers beat Princeton, six goals to four.

In 1898, Benjamin Harrison of Indiana won the presidential election, defeating incumbent Grover Cleveland by gaining the required number of electoral votes, even though Cleveland led in the popular vote.

In 1900, President McKinley was re-elected, beating Democratic challenger William Jennings Bryan.

In 1906, Republican Charles Evans Hughes was elected governor of New York, defeating newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst.

In 1913, Mohandas K. Gandhi was arrested as he led a march of Indian miners in South Africa.

In 1928, in a first, the results of Herbert Hoover's election victory over Alfred E. Smith were flashed onto an electric sign outside the New York Times building.

In 1956, President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon won re-election, defeating Democrats Adlai E. Stevenson and Estes Kefauver.

In 1962, Democrat Edward M. Kennedy was elected Senator from Massachusetts.

In 1976, Benjamin L. Hooks was chosen to be the new executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, succeeding Roy Wilkins.

In 1977, 39 people were killed when an earthen dam burst, sending a 30-foot wall of water through the campus of Toccoa Falls Bible College in Georgia.

In 1984, President Reagan overwhelmed his Democratic challenger, Walter F. Mondale, winning re-election by a landslide.

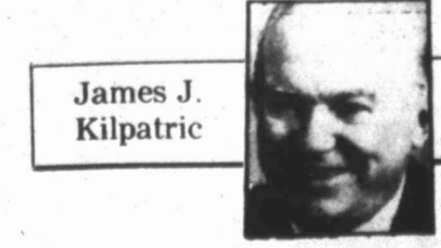

Ten years ago: The White House announced President Reagan had selected Sen. Paul Laxalt to head the Republican National Committee, replacing Richard Richards.

Five years ago: Education Secretary William Bennett, acting with President Reagan's approval, asked Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg to withdraw from consideration because of revelations Ginsburg had used marijuana.

One year ago: Kuwait celebrated the dousing of the last oil fires ignited by Iraq during the Persian Gulf War. Actress Gene Tierney died in Houston at age 70.

Today's Birthdays: Director Mike Nichols is 61. Actress Sally Field is 46. Rock singer Glenn Frey is 44. NBC TV newscaster Maria Shriver is 37. Actor Lance Kerwin is 32.

Thought for Today: "Drop the question what tomorrow may bring, and count as profit every day that Fate allows you." — Horace, Roman poet (65 B.C.-8 B.C.)

vation on my part. Richard Grant White, a prominent 19th-century grammarian, said in 1870 that "whom" was "visibly disappearing." H.L. Mencken commented in 1936 that "whom" is "fast disappearing." Anthony Burgess, the British critic, noted in 1980 that "whom" is dying out in England.

In thinking that nobody cares about dear old "whom," I was sorely mistaken. Letters of outrage have been pouring in. A gentleman in Chicago called me a traitor. A gentlewoman in Vero Beach, Fla., said I had committed treason. Other readers had really unkind things to say.

Hush! Our language evolves. It has been evolving since long before Chaucer's pilgrims set upon their journey. It is steadily evolving now. Obviously our spelling evolves. We no longer write of "smale foweles" but of "small fowls." These birds don't "maken melodye," they make melody.

Such evolution is a natural process. We cast off archaic forms as a tree sheds dead wood — a healthy process, essential to survival. Changes cannot be forced. Old Col. McCormick tried for years to make "thru" stick in the Chicago Tribune. It was a valiant effort, but it failed — as all such revolutionary attacks on orthography are bound to fail.

Spelling is not the only thing that evolves. In Middle English, personal pronouns were politically correct. In the singular, "thou" was used as the subject pronoun; it was "ye" in the plural. The forms lingered until the 16th century, and then gradually faded from use.

There was a time when grammarians were finicky about the subjunctive. George Curme, the greatest American grammarian of this century, carried on at great length about the optative subjunctive and the potential subjunctive. Nowadays we fall unthinkingly into the subjunctive mood whenever a sentence feels right.

Professor Curme laid down the rule on "shall" and "will." In the declarative form, he decreed, "shall" is used in the first person and "will" is used in the second and third persons: "I shall go, he will go, you will go." My impression is that "shall" survives only for emphasis in such assertions as, "I shall return."

It took a long time to move us from "smale foweles" to "small fowls," and it may take another couple of centuries before "whom" altogether disappears.

Houston Rockets start NBA season in Japan

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

YOKOHAMA, Japan — Japan is more than just another stop on Seattle SuperSonics coach George Karl's basketball globetrotting. "I've coached in Spain, I've played in Russia, Europe and even China," Karl said on Thursday.

But there will be as special importance to the games Saturday and Sunday against the Houston Rockets because those will be regular-season games.

The Sonics-Rockets meetings at the 14,000-seat Yokohama Arena will mark the second time NBA season openers have been played outside of North America. Organizers say both games are sold out.

The Utah Jazz and Phoenix Suns began their regular 1990-91 season with a pair of games in Tokyo. The Sonics' Eddie Johnson was with the Suns at the time.

"Basketball is an ambassador for sport, and I think it is great that the NBA is trying to expand its horizons," Karl said. "We think this is going to be an exciting season."

Karl, who left a two-year coaching stint with Real Madrid in the Spanish League last year to join the SuperSonics in midseason, helped lift Seattle to the third best finish in the NBA. Winning 27 of their last 41 games, the team ended with a 47-35 record.

Karl and Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich — who also took over late last season — promised two fast, high-scoring games for the Japanese fans. But both coaches acknowledged it may be too early for either team to be at its best.

"We're just going to go out there and go after each other," said Karl. "I think we're both trying to figure out who we are and how good we are."

Houston Rockets' Carl Herrera (7) is shown here in a photo against Minnesota. The Rockets begin their NBA season Saturday playing the Seattle SuperSonics in Yokohama, Japan.

Tomjanovich, noting that all-star forward Otis Thorpe is out for the next month or so with a bruised kidney, said the Rockets are "not the team that we will have down the road."

"We're going to have to make up for his absence, but I have confidence in these guys and I think they'll be able to keep the ship afloat while he's gone," he said.

Woman files suit against Johnson

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman has filed a lawsuit in Michigan federal court claiming Magic Johnson gave her the AIDS virus in June 1990, ABC's "PrimeTime Live" said Thursday night.

"PrimeTime Live" reported the lawsuit along with a taped interview of Johnson in which he discussed his second retirement from the Los Angeles Lakers on Monday. ABC issued a statement about the lawsuit prior to the broadcast.

Johnson, through his lawyers, told "PrimeTime Live" Thursday night that he had sex with the woman, but said he doesn't know if he got the virus from her, or if she got it from him, or neither.

A doctor who treats AIDS and HIV-infected patients told The Associated Press this week that Johnson may have carried the AIDS virus for several years before testing positive last year prior to his first retirement on Nov. 7, 1991.

Johnson said in the "PrimeTime Live" interview that a cut on his arm in an exhibition game at Chapel Hill, N.C., last week made Johnson realize how difficult it would be to play in the NBA while carrying the AIDS virus.

"You know, you could see the fear upon people's faces," Johnson said. "Did he bandage it all? Is it all bandaged up? Is it all right? It's not leaking? You know, that whole thing."

Johnson came out of retirement in September, then retired again on Monday, three days after the exhibition game at Chapel Hill.

Johnson said the criticism and the fear after that game made him decide to quit.

Friday Football Forecast

Compiled by Herald Sports Staff

Big Spring (3-4-1, 1-2-1) at Pecos (5-4, 2-3)

Although neither team has a chance to get in the playoffs, it's a very big game for both.

It's the season finale for the Pecos Eagles and a win here would give them their best record since 1986. A win for the Steers would put them at the .500 mark and give them a chance to have a winning season.

This will be a tough one. Pecos has a good defense, but little offense. Big Spring has a good defense and an offense that is somewhat better than Pecos'. That's the difference. BIG SPRING 21, PECOS 7

Reagan County (9-0, 4-0) at Colorado City (4-5, 1-3)

The Colorado City Wolves played uninspired football in last week's 42-8 loss to Greenwood. Meanwhile the No. 7 Reagan County Owls are rolling along preparing for the state playoffs.

This means another long night for the Wolves. REAGAN COUNTY 37, COLORADO CITY 6

Greenwood (3-5-1, 1-2-1) at Kermit (3-5, 2-2)

The Greenwood Rangers are licking their chops for a chance to play spoiler here. If Greenwood wins this game, the Kermit Yellowjackets don't make the playoffs.

Kermit definitely has more at stake and the Rangers have no pressure on them. Another close one, but incentive and home field advantage pays off. KERMIT 20, GREENWOOD 13

Coahoma (6-3, 3-2) at Ozona (3-5, 3-2)

Perhaps the biggest game in District 6-2A this week. If the Coahoma Bulldogs win, they still have a slight chance for the playoffs. If the Ozona Lions win, there's a good chance they'll make the playoffs.

The Lions have had a week to rest. The Bulldogs are emotionally drained after three weeks of tough football. The Bulldogs are bridesmaids again. OZONA 17, COAHOMA 14

Garden City (5-3, 2-1) at Grandfalls (3-4, 1-2)

The Garden City Bearkats have to bounce back from a 39-27 loss to Wink. Grandfalls is coming off a 29-21 loss to Fort Davis, and really don't have the horses to run with the Bearkats.

Garden City's looking ahead to Rankin next week, but not enough to change the outcome of the game. GARDEN CITY 31, GRANDFALLS 14

Bronte 5-4, 2-2) at Forsan (1-8, 0-4)

Both of these teams were picked as cellar-dwellers of District 9-A. The Forsan Buffaloes have stayed in the cellar, but probably should've won their last two district games. The Bronte Longhorns have been beaten by Roscoe and Sterling City, both are going to the playoffs.

The Buffaloes will battle hard, but Bronte running back Gary Bilbrey will break a couple of big plays. BRONTE 28, FORSAN 13

Loop (1-8, 0-4) at Grady (5-4, 1-3)

Last week the Grady Wildcats got their first taste of a district win and they liked it. The Loop Longhorns are glad this is the end of a long season.

No playoffs for the Wildcats, but a good season record nonetheless. GRADY 40, LOOP 24

Dawson (5-4, 1-3) at Klondike (5-4, 3-1)

The surprising Klondike Cougars can gain a spot in the six-man state playoffs with a win over the Dawson Dragons.

Dawson started out strong, but has struggled of late. The Cougars have gradually gotten better each week. Mike Lee and the Coogs gear up for postseason play. KLONDIKE 44, DAWSON 28

Wellman (9-0, 4-0) at Sands (4-5, 3-1)

As unlikely as it seems, the Sands Mustangs have a chance to get into the playoffs with a win over No. 6 Wellman.

But it won't happen. Wellman is just too strong. WELLMAN 48, SANDS 12

Borden County (8-1, 4-0) at Highland (0-9, 0-4)

The biggest mismatch of the week. The Coyotes are a good six-man team. The Highland Hornets are just the opposite.

Rangers catcher Gold Glove winner

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — For years, Jose Lind was known for an acrobatic style that made him one of the finest fielding second basemen in the majors. Still, he never won a Gold Glove.

So on Thursday, when Lind was awarded his first-ever Gold Glove. Lind ended a streak of nine straight wins by Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs as the NL's best fielding second baseman.

Lind led NL second basemen with a .992 fielding percentage this season, making only six errors in 745 chances. But he made two errors in the playoffs, including the one in the ninth inning.

Pittsburgh's Andy Van Slyke won his fifth straight Gold Glove and was joined in the outfield by Pittsburgh's Barry Bonds, who won his third.

Other NL winners were Cubs first baseman Mark Grace, St. Louis shortstop Ozzie Smith, Atlanta third baseman Terry Pendleton, Montreal outfielder Larry Walker, St. Louis catcher Tom Pagnozzi and Cubs pitcher Greg Maddux.

The AL winners were Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly, Toronto second baseman Roberto Alomar, Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken, Chicago third baseman Robin Ventura, Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez, California pitcher Mark Langston and outfielders Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle, Kirby Puckett of Minnesota and Devon White of Toronto.

Smith's award was announced last month before he joined a Japanese tour by major league all-stars. Smith has won 13 straight Gold Gloves, the most in NL history; Brooks Robinson and Jim Kaat have won 16 each.

Mattingly won his seventh Gold Glove and Puckett earned his sixth. White, whose catch against the center field fence started a near-triple play in the World Series, won his fourth. Pendleton's award was the first for an Atlanta player since Dale Murphy in 1985.

Rodriguez, at age 20, won in his first full season in the majors. He is the second-youngest winner ever, only a week older than Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench when he won in 1968.

Rodriguez threw out 48.6 percent of opposing basestealers, far better than the major league average of 33 percent. Rodriguez did it despite handling a staff of pitchers that is wild.

"I don't mind blocking balls in the dirt," he said.

Lady Hawks win opener

LEVELLAND — The Howard College Hawks started their basketball season on a winning note, defeating Panola 76-63 in the South Plains Lady Texans Classic Thursday night.

The Lady Hawks got off to a fast start with their pressing defense, building up a 26-4 lead the first seven minutes of the game. "We were pressing and they (Panola) were trying to push the ball," said Howard coach Royce Chadwick. "They were making mistakes and we were capitalizing on them. I thought Yumecca (White) and LeKisha (Wiley) did a good job of putting tremendous pressure on their guards."

Sophomore forward Anita Wright was also a force in the quick start, scoring six points, getting two steals, two assists and two rebounds during the 26-4 run. White, a sophomore guard, led Howard scorers with 16 points. Freshman center Angel Spinks had 14 points and sophomore guard Vernetra Allen added 11 points.

"Everybody got to play. We got out the press and Panola settled down and came back. We couldn't get our intensity back and just traded baskets the rest of the game," said Chadwick. "But the bottom line is we got a win the first game. It seems we always struggle that first game."

Howard will play Fort Bliss from El Paso today at 5.

HOWARD (76) — Vernetra Allen 4 11; Becky Barnes 3 0 4; LeKisha Wiley 3 3 9; Yumecca White 4 4 14; Anita Wright 5 0 10; Charlene Payton 0 2 2; Anette Robinson 2 1 5; Regina Huff 0 3 3; Angel Spinks 5 4 14; totals 28 20 32 76.

Steers JV blanks Andrews

HERALD STAFF REPORT

BIG SPRING JV 20
ANDREWS JV 0

The Steers won their fifth game in-a-row and ran their district record to 5-0 at Blankenship Field Thursday.

Fullback Gary Engleson's one-yard run in the second quarter gave Big Spring a 6-0 halftime lead. Tony Rodriguez tallied from 50 yards out in the third and Rudy Haddad scored on an 11-yard run in the fourth for the Steers.

The fourth's record stands at 7-2 on the year. It closes out its season Thursday at Sweetwater.

"The kids played hard — really aggressive and really physical," said Steer junior varsity coach Ricky Long.

Long praised the play of quarterback Brian Burchett and the entire defensive unit.

COAHOMA JV 27

OZONA JV 13

COAHOMA — Freshman Kelby Bailey ran for three touchdowns and the Bulldogs closed out a successful season with a five-game winning streak.

Ozona scored a touchdown in the fourth quarter to cut Coahoma's lead to 20-13. But Bailey scored on a "bummeroskie" play with 40 seconds left to tie the game.

Coahoma junior varsity coach Kim Nichols said his team overcame a loss of players to finish the season 9-1 and 5-1 in district.

"We're real proud of them. We had an excellent year. We started out with 36 and we suited up 24 last night," Nichols said.

The Bulldogs took a 12-7 halftime lead on a 12-yard pass from Adam Tindol to Chris Roberts and a one-yard run by Bailey. Bailey scored from 43 yards out in the fourth quarter and Tindol found Bucky Williams for the two-point conversion. Bailey had 201 yards on 25 carries.

Nichols praised the defensive play of Chris Arguello (fumble recovery), Rocky King (interception), Chris Roberts, Kevin Olsen, Brian Fontana, Eli Sanders, Brad Harrison and Clark Coskey.

ANDREWS FRESHMEN 53

BIG SPRING FRESHMEN A 8

ANDREWS — A 33-point second quarter did the Steers in as they went to 3-6 on the year.

"We had a bunch of turnovers and it was just a snowball effect," Steer freshmen coach Gary Simmons said. "Andrews executed its offense really well and we just couldn't figure it out."

Big Spring trailed 39-0 at the half. Bucky Crenshaw threw 65 yards to Mark Barber and passed to James Escobar for the conversion for the Steers' only scoring. Big Spring plays its final game Thursday here against Sweetwater.

ANDREWS 20

RUNNELS B 6

The Yearlings scored first but went to 4-5 Thursday at Memorial Stadium in their last game of the season. Joe Ontiveros' 60-yard touchdown run in the first quarter gave Runnels a lead but Andrews had TDs in all three of the remaining periods for the win.

Offensive standouts for the Yearlings were Ontiveros, Leon Eddington, Manuela Castanuela, Richie Dyer, Stacy Gibbs, Jerrod Helms, and Jeremy Hamilton.

Defensive standouts were Abel

Hilario, Shane Daniels, Eric Diaz, Blake Wright, Dyer, Kade Bowermon and Elliott Forman.

GOLIAD WHITE 26

ANDREWS 16

ANDREWS — Luis Pena and Kaman Barber each had two touchdown runs and the offensive line played well as the White team finished its year 7-1.

Pena opened the scoring with a 36-yard run and Barber tallied from 40 yards out in the first quarter. The Mavericks led 20-16 at halftime and never trailed. Goliad coach Terry Benner said the defense played consistently well in the game.

GOLIAD BLACK 22

ANDREWS 6

ANDREWS — The Maverick's Black team's offensive line contoured the line of scrimmage and Goliad Black finished the year with a perfect 9-0 mark.

Antwoyne Edwards had touchdown runs of 20 and 26 yards in the first half for a 14-0 Mavericks' halftime lead. In the fourth quarter the Black's Brock Gee threw a touchdown to Gabriel Mendoza and Charlie Richardson ran in the conversion, making it 22-0. Andrews scored its TD with 3:11 to play in the game.

A Mavericks C team also played and beat Andrews 12-0 on TDs from Mike Webb and Robert Legg.

The Goliad coaches want to thank the parents of the Mavericks for "allowing them to work with the very best students in the school."

RUNNELS A 28

ANDREWS 6

The Runnels A Yearlings concluded their season on a winning note, handing Andrews its first loss in two years.

The Yearlings took advantage of three Andrews turnovers to take a 22-0 halftime lead.

Runnels scored twice in the first quarter. The first came on a two-yard touchdown pass from Tyler Murphy to Gabriel Rubio on fourth down. The other first-quarter TD came on a three-yard run by Robert Valencia. Valencia also ran in the two-point conversion.

In the second quarter Toma McVea scored from six yards out, capping a 45-yard drive. Chris Yanez and Valencia had key runs in the drive. Jody Bennett ran in the two-point conversion, giving Runnels a 22-0 halftime advantage.

Andrews recovered an onside kick at the start of the third quarter and managed its only scoring drive of the game. Runnels closed out the scoring in the fourth period when John Smith connected with Rubio for a 30-yard scoring pass.

Playing well for Runnels were Daniel Brewster, Charley Valverde, Abel Gomez, Scott Bland, Roy Ortega, Michael Schubert, Joe Montez, David Magallon, Frankie Green, Ishmael Rodriguez and Miguel Reyes.

Runnels A finishes with a 5-3-1 record.

FORSAN JUNIOR HIGH 28

BRONTE 22

BRONTE — The Forsan Junior High Buffaloes got four touchdowns from Sky Massingill to end their season on a winning note Thursday.

Clay Thixton ran in two two-point conversions for Forsan. Forsan finishes with a 3-2-1 record.

Aggies coach uneasy about Louisville

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Texas A&M is ranked fifth nationally with an 8-0 record and has won 17 straight regular-season games and 42 of its last 46 games at Kyle Field.

So why is Aggies coach R.C. Slocum worried about a non-conference game Saturday against Louisville, whose Cardinals take only a 4-5 record into the contest?

"This is going to be more than what some people think it will be," Slocum said. "I am concerned because we are taking a break from SWC games to play Louisville. This is one of those frightening teams that is better than its record indicates."

The oddsmakers have less concern than Slocum. They've made the Aggies 16-point favorites for the 2:30 p.m. kickoff.

In other Southwest Conference games, Texas tries to keep its league title hopes alive against Texas Christian Baylor plays Georgia Tech, Rice plays Texas Tech and Houston plays Southern Methodist.

The No. 20 Texas Longhorns (5-2, 3-0 in SWC games) have a 24-game winning streak going against Texas Christian (1-6-1, 0-4), and they're 15 1/2-point favorites to continue the streak.

Baylor (4-4, 3-2) is a five-point favorite over Georgia Tech (5-3); Rice (3-4, 2-2) gets a one-point margin over Texas Tech (3-5, 2-2) and Houston (3-4, 1-2) has a 17 1/2 point advantage over Southern Methodist (3-5, 1-4).

Slocum wishes his team was playing a league game Saturday.

"This is something new for us and that concerns me," Slocum said. "We usually play our non-conference games at the start of the season. Maybe it won't be a problem, but it's definitely something to be concerned about."

Both Jeff Granger, who suffered a concussion last week, and true freshman Corey Pullig will play at quarterback, Slocum said.

Texas coach John Mackovic won't be lulled by the Longhorns' lengthy winning streak against the Horned Frogs.

"We have to be prepared to not give up the ball because they've made a lot of big plays," Mackovic said.

Despite one victory this season, season. Saturday the Red Raiders are one-point underdogs to Rice.

Texas Tech University's Mike Liscio (91) attempts to tackle Southern Methodist University's Kevin Sheppard (21) during SWC play earlier this season. Saturday the Red Raiders are one-point underdogs to Rice.

TCU coach Pat Sullivan is pleased that his team is playing hard.

"We think we're in the position at least they are starting to play hard every week," Sullivan said. "I'm excited about playing Texas and I think our team is. They've got a chance to make history."

Baylor coach Grant Teaff isn't as concerned as Slocum about taking on a non-conference foe during the SWC race although the Bears have had tough times with late non-league games. San Jose pointed an unbeaten record in 1980.

"It would probably be more difficult if we were still hot and heavy in the race," Teaff said.

Texas Tech and Rice both are struggling for winning seasons.

Tech coach Spike Dykes is trying to convince his team they still have a chance.

"After you lose five games you can't go in the tank," Dykes said. "It's a selling job and we'd sure better be ready to play our best because that's what it'll take against Rice."

Tech quarterback Robert Hall still was sidelined because of a shoulder injury, forcing Jason Clemmons into the lineup for the second straight week.

The Raiders must stop Trevor Cobb, who moved past Texas' Earl Campbell last week into third place on the all-time rushing list. Cobb's 5,948 all-purpose yards rank 11th in NCAA history.

The Raiders beat Rice 40-20 in last year's game, starting a fast finish.

"We lit a fire last year that no one could put out," Rice coach Fred Goldsmith said.

The Cougars, who won a 49-6 shootout with TCU last week, now meet offensive look-a-like SMU in a battle of run-and-shoot offenses.

SMU quarterback Dan Freiburger has been slowed by a bruised shoulder but expects to be in the lineup against the Cougars. Houston coach John Jenkins will start Jimmy Klingler ahead of injured Donald Douglas, still slowed by a foot injury.

"Thank goodness the rotation worked out this way," Jenkins said. "What if I decided Donald is the guy and put all my eggs in one basket? I think that counts for something to have a little more experience on the field with more than one guy."

Soothing Tigger's trauma

Behaviorist helps animals to cope

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING — Tigger wasn't always like this.

The sleek, gray cat was sweet and playful, calm and friendly, Lynn Roney's beloved companion.

Now Tigger is hunkered under the coffee table, fearful and angry. Her beautiful green eyes are dilating, a sign of rising stress. She emits a half-whine, half-growl that sounds like something out of a bad Exorcist remake.

A bowl of tuna isn't helping. Soothing voices expressing compassion and reassurance aren't helping. Looking out from under the table and seeing lots of shoes — which may be the source of Tigger's trauma — definitely don't help.

"This cat is my baby," says Roney. "I just know something has happened to her. If a family member has a problem, you don't just kick them out. You try to help."

That is why she called Diane Arrington, a Dallas woman who began training dogs for friends nearly two decades ago and wound up as a pet behaviorist. It's a growing specialty in the pet business and a reflection of the importance of dogs and cats in millions of American households.

House calls for people have become a quaint symbol of years gone by, like soda fountains and big finned Chevys. But if Sparky is irritating the rug or Sheba doesn't like the new baby, a behaviorist — part trainer, part psychologist — will come to your door.

"I'm the last straw," Arrington says. "Seventy or 80 percent of my calls are 'If you don't do something about my pet, I'm going to have to put him to sleep.'"

On her first visit to Tigger, the behaviorist wore a pair of ankle-exposing flats. "She bit me to the bone," Arrington says.

This time she changes into well padded athletic shoes and thick socks before climbing the stairs into Roney's apartment. Tigger doesn't bite, and even the hunkering and growling signify improvement.

"Before this she would have sniffed you for about 45 seconds and then she'd freak out," says Roney, a nurse. "She hits, she bites, she scratches, she lunges. Some of my friends call her 'Psychocat.'"

The only explanation for this, Roney figures, is that about a year ago someone kicked Tigger so viciously and traumatically as to warp the cat's personality.

Undoing the damage isn't easy. Arrington and Roney play with Tigger, reward her with praise and tuna, anything they can think of to defuse tension while getting the cat used to having people around again. Between appointments, the owner repeats the sessions with friends.

"Our real goal is to get her back to what she was, and we're 50 percent there," Arrington says. "But cats aren't as resilient as dogs are. I'm really not sure we'll get to that point."

Diane Arrington's father tells her that when she was 2 or 3, she already was teaching the family dog to sit. She simply remembers always having an affinity for animals.

"I hope this doesn't sound weird, but I think it's a gift," she says. "I just know I'm doing what I was meant to do."

If that sounds a little defensive, it's because there are some pet behaviorists out there with fancy degrees in animal psychology and the like. Arrington doesn't have one, just experience spanning 17 years and thousands of pets, several books in the works and a new video, "3 Steps To A Perfect Dog."

There also are some whose best credential is a nicely printed business card.

"You have to be careful," says Ann Ramsbottom, director of education for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of Texas. "Anyone can call himself a behavior consultant, and there seem to be more and more people doing this."

Every day the SPCA, which runs Dallas-area animal shelters, sees the results of poor training or no training. Executive Director Warren Cox estimates that 80 percent of animals brought to the shelter are the result of owners unable to cope with their pets' problems.

Those that aren't adopted are put to death — more than 100,000 a year locally, millions more around the country.

"It's literally a matter of life and death," Cox says. "And it's not the animal's fault; it's the people's fault. That means chances are good the problem will repeat itself with the next pet."

The first answer is preventive medicine. "Dream pets aren't born," Ramsbottom says. "You have to teach them."

She says the idea of obedience school began with the military, which, being in a hurry, tended to focus on punishment rather than praise to get the job done. That has evolved greatly toward the philosophy that positive reinforcement may take longer, but will produce better results.

Still, says Arrington, a lot of attitudes still need changing, such as the continued use of choke collars and the notion of rubbing a pet's nose in what experts delicately call an "inappropriate elimination."

"It's really cruel, unhygienic and disgusting," she says.

There are better ways to solve that and any other problem, and she promises it won't take more than four appointments, which usually cost about $65 each.

Whether teaching classes or making house calls, training new pets or trouble-shooting old ones, her rules are the same: no scolding, no yelling, no hitting. "I won't use anything I wouldn't use on a child," she says.

Chloe, an adorable little ball of white fur, probably doesn't realize she is descended from wolves. But she is, says the behaviorist, and that makes all the difference.

The owner, Gaye Greenamy, says the 5-month-old Maltese nips, yips and pushes, and goes particularly bonkers when the doorbell rings.

"I was yelling and screaming at the dog, and she thought it was a big game," says Greenamy, an American Airlines flight attendant who lives in Coppell.

"That's because she sees you as a litter mate, and a subordinate litter mate at that," Arrington says.

The solution? Like the wolves before them, dogs have to realize their rank in the pack, or in the house, and that rank has to be below the humans.

So training exercises emphasize rewards and praise, giving orders just once in a dominant tone, using silence instead of nagging to make a point, making the animal earn affection.

"I always laughed at people who thought they needed a pet psychologist," says Denise Ward, a Dallas anesthesiologist. That was before she got divorced and Tyler started to change.

After months of enduring Tyler's inappropriateness, Dr. Ward is ready for anything. Still, she doesn't look thrilled, despite reassurances that the bathroom looks a lot bigger from Tyler's perspective.

"Who's this going to be worse on, him or me?" she asks. Replies Arrington, "You."

juana. Bonds were set at $10,000 and $500 respectively.

- Jamie Delos Santos, 18, of 405 Northwest 9th St. was arrested for delivery of a controlled substance (cocaine). Bond was set at $10,000.
- Oscar Hernandez, 32, of 1010 N. Rannels was arrested for delivery of a controlled substance (cocaine). Bond was set at $10,000.

Sheriff A.N. Standard said task force operations are going on all the time, and at random intervals, drug raids like today's are carried out.

Members of the task force returned to their respective cities, leaving the remaining arrest warrants to be served by local law enforcement officers.

would not stop there." British Trade Secretary Michael Heseltine said of the U.S. actions. "Once you have a list there is always another list and other people have their lists. The effect is appalling."

The punitive tariffs were aimed primarily at France, which is the EC's biggest agricultural producer.

British Prime Minister John Major, the current president of the EC, held an urgent meeting today with Jacques Delors, the French head of the EC's executive commission, and both agreed talks should resume quickly with the United States, spokesmen said.

Major and Delors declined to talk with reporters.

Some European officials have accused Delors of sabotaging the trade talks, a charge he denied when he arrived in London today for a previously scheduled speaking engagement.

Delors has ambitions to become president of France. And France's major parties on the right and the left are wary of alienating the powerful, quick-to-protest farm lobby, especially ahead of legislative elections in March.

Farms employ about 6 percent of French workers, a much greater percentage than in many industrial nations.

The community's chief negotiator on farm subsidies, Ray MacSharry of Ireland, resigned Thursday. EC officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Delors had tried to strongarm MacSharry into slowing down the talks.

MacSharry said today he believed an agreement could be signed in "five minutes."

"We are very close to a deal," he said in Dublin. "We were on the point — and still are on the point — of concluding those negotiations in my view to the satisfaction of both sides."

Germany's economics minister, Juergen Moellmann, also said today that the sides were not that far apart.

But France's agriculture minister, Jean-Pierre Soisson, repeated his country's unyielding stance. "If we lay down every time the Americans raised their finger, we wouldn't exist," he said.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills said Thursday that the tariffs would take effect on Dec. 5. The delay could provide enough time to avert a trade war.

Despite the threats of retaliation, President Bush said he was only trying to resolve the trade dispute in a way that would be acceptable to U.S. interests.

"No trade war. Just looking after the interest of world trade," he said.

President-elect Clinton declined to state an opinion on the dispute, but an aide said Clinton generally believes the United States "must get tough" when foreign countries refuse to open their markets.

Washington contends EC farm subsidies make some European farm products unfairly cheap, thereby depriving U.S. farmers of a potential $1 billion in exports. The EC is the United States' largest market; exports to the EC totaled about $98 billion in 1990.

Agriculture products, including wine, account for about 15 percent of France's exports.

The tariffs affect an estimated $300 million in imports. White wine accounts for about 90 percent of the targeted products; rapeseed oil and wheat gluten make up the rest.

French winemakers said the resulting tripling of prices, now about $8.50 a bottle on average, would virtually halt sales of their wine in the United States.

American wine importers said they had enough stockpiles to last through Christmas.

Inspiration

Local Baptists ready for upcoming state convention

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

Local Baptist leaders said they are looking forward to next week's Baptist General Convention of Texas for a variety of reasons.

Several local residents from Southern Baptist congregations will travel to Corpus Christi for the Sunday through Tuesday gathering, the 107th for the organization. This year's theme is "Hope for a Broken World."

PATRICK allowed us to do over the past year — all of our work, especially in missions.

"It's a time of fellowship and inspiration."

"The biggest thing for me is the pastor's conference," said Midway Baptist pastor Todd Nivens. That Sunday afternoon service of sermons and singing is a good beginning for the convention, he said.

"It's a very uplifting way to begin what has sometimes been a fairly controversial convention," Nivens said. "Sometimes you need to get your spirits up before it begins."

Baptists will vote on adoption of resolutions they consider crucial, as well as discuss a basic $63.5 million budget, according to a press release. That budget funds many endeavors, from worldwide missions to education at Texas schools and colleges.

College Baptist pastor Ken McMeans said being part of the Democratic process with the church is meaningful.

"It's well worth the time, effort and money spent, to go and be represented," McMeans said.

He also enjoys meeting with his colleagues from various churches throughout Texas.

"Several pastors said they are anxious to see who will be the next president of the Convention. In that election, incumbent Dick Maples will be challenged by Rudy Hernandez.

"The president has an important role because he's the one who speaks when someone wants an opinion from the convention. He is the voice of the group," said Hillcrest Baptist music minister David Cox.

"Historically, the president has served consecutive terms," Nivens added. "But this year, Hernandez has a chance."

Among other issues expected to arise is funding for Baylor University. That question will be related to last year's difficult choice to remove appointment of school regents from the control of the convention.

Representatives from each church go to the convention as "messengers," meaning they vote their own conviction on issues — not according to instruction from the church.

Patrick said that idea comes from the Baptist belief in the "priesthood of the believer."

"Baptists believe every believer is a priest under God, with the right to interpret scripture," he explained.

"I don't expect it to be near as controversial as last year," Nivens said. "I think it will be more back to normal."

Mary Alice Saracho hands out videos from the library's collection recently. The videos are updated and maintained with the help of citizen group Friends of the Library.

A little help from its Friends

Group supports library in many ways

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

The Howard County Library will move into a new building by 1994. Friends of the Library will be instrumental in the transition.

Friends is a citizen group established in 1947 that has filled financial, supply and maintenance gaps for the library where the county was unable.

"(Friends) will have a helping role as we move to our new building," said Donna Jackson, the library's director. "It's going to be a challenge."

Aiding in library challenges is not new to Friends because the group, consisting of about 12 members, works diligently to supplement the library's needs.

"They have been a pretty small group but a very dedicated group," she said. "They are always a tremendous help."

Programs to which Friends provides financial support include the Summer Reading Program, Literacy Program, Open Houses, Back-to-school Pizza Party and Halloween Face Decorating. Throughout the state, organizations like Friends have been active in influencing government policy.

In the late 1940s, the groups sponsored House Bill 676 providing for the establishment and maintenance of county libraries in Texas.

The local group raises money by soliciting donations. They sponsored the purchase and maintenance of photocopying machines at the library for public use.

"The county always falls short and that's where Friends comes in," said Doris Vieregge, treasurer of the group.

She said the group is anticipating its role in the move.

"Any way we're needed, we're going to be there — from packing books to standing in a line and passing material," Vieregge said.

With instructional, classic and popular selections, the library's 1,000-plus video collection is updated and maintained in large part by Friends.

"A lot of people still don't know about the video collection and it's growing," she said. "When you go to a video store, you're real limited. The collection at the library is a learning experience rather than run-of-the-mill."

The group also sponsors book sales to support library projects and activities.

Friends was responsible for furnishing the library's reception area, carpeting the basement's book room and recently, purchasing bookshelves at the back entrance.

Recently, member Betty Condray began writing a semi-weekly column for the Big Spring Herald to publicize new books that arrive at the library.

"We're trying to boost the membership and basically just continuing the well-being of the library," Vieregge said.

The group meets monthly at the Howard County Library. For information about Friends of the Library, call 264-2260.

Guest preacher

Jeanne Miller, president of Victims of Clergy Abuse Linkup, VOCAL, hopes to give families victimized by abuse the confidence to band together and get help.

Group helps abuse victims speak up, find help together

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Grieving, ashamed, emotionally shattered, they suffer alone. A trusted ally had betrayed them. They assumed it hardly ever happened to anyone else. It was too awful even to mention. So they kept silent.

But now they're finding they are not alone, that many others have been subjected to clergy sexual abuse, that it's widespread. So they're increasingly speaking out about it.

"People are being freed up to come forth," said Jeanne Miller of Palatine, Ill., president and executive director of a new organization, Victims Of Clergy Abuse Linkup, or VOCAL.

The group hopes to give victimized families the confidence to "vocalize" their suffering by getting them to band together and to realize they're not isolated cases. Another goal is to prevent such future abuse.

"There's a whole backlog of people who have never had their injuries resolved," Ms. Miller said in an interview. "They thought they couldn't talk about it. They've suffered in silence for decades with no support system, turning in on themselves."

VOCAL (P.O. Box 1268, Wheeling, Ill. 60090) held its first national conference in Chicago Oct. 16-18, drawing about 300 people from across the country. Ms. Miller said about 3,000 others are launching VOCAL chapters in 25 cities.

Speakers included Jason Berry of New Orleans, a Roman Catholic and investigative writer whose new Doubleday book, "Lead Us Not Into Temptation," documents about 400 cases of priests sexually molesting youngsters.

Ms. Miller said studies indicate 3 percent to 6 percent of 52,000 priests — 1,500 to 3,000 of them — are pedophiles with a pathological sexual fixation on children and that a pedophile typically abuses 273 youngsters in a lifetime.

Pedophilia is an "addictive illness" and most child molesters "are repeat offenders," Barry says. He says setting such cases so far has cost the U.S. Catholic church about $400 million.

Employees think fast to help ill woman

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

Quick thinking by some Wal-Mart employees might have saved a Big Spring woman's life last week.

Longtime Big Springer Dorothy Salmon, shopping at the local store Friday, suffered a mild stroke shortly after noon and became confused in the parking lot.

Charles Thomas, an Abilene State School client who works at Wal-Mart as part of his treatment, saw Salmon fumbling with her keys.

Thinking the woman might not be able to drive, and sure she needed help, Thomas rushed inside and told Larry Henderson. "He came and got me right away," said Henderson, who supervises several workers from the mental retardation treatment center. Henderson hurried outside with another Abilene State School client, Stacy Wells.

Wells got a wheelchair so they could help Salmon inside.

"We didn't know what was wrong with her," Henderson said. "She was going in and out of a state of confusion, and didn't know her name. She knew she was diabetic, but didn't know what she needed. We called 9-1-1 and got her an ambulance."

Her husband, James, met her at the hospital, where he and the family have spent much of their time since Friday. Reached there Tuesday, he said he was extremely grateful to the Wal-Mart employees.

"I think it's wonderful," Mr. Salmon said, "that those boys would do that. It's just wonderful." Family members said Henderson had called several times after the incident to see how Mrs. Salmon was doing.

But Henderson said he's proud of his workers, whose quick action may have helped Mrs. Salmon avoid a serious accident.

"We're so proud of Charles (Thomas)," Henderson said. "He's only been working here three weeks. But he's definitely paying attention."

"And Stacy (Wells) was great. When I told him to go get a wheelchair, he ran into the store. But he was so gentle getting her into the wheelchair."

Hospital officials said Mrs. Salmon, who had been in the intensive care unit since her admission, was being transferred to a regular room late Tuesday. Mr. Salmon said his wife's condition continues to improve.

Lesbian minister barred

She vows to work for change in church policy

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — A lesbian minister barred from leading a Presbyterian congregation said she will work to change the church's policy toward homosexuals.

"I will continue to fight for justice, for the inclusion of all people, no matter what their orientation," the Rev. Jane Spahr said Wednesday in a telephone interview from California.

"I hope all people will cry out with this injustice, that we will stand together and right this wrong."

The highest court of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) ruled Wednesday to revoke Spahr's appointment as a pastor of the

'I hope all people will cry out with this injustice, that we will stand together and right this wrong.'

The Rev. Jane Spahr barred Presbyterian minister

Downtown United Presbyterian Church in Rochester because she is "a self-affirmed, practicing homosexual."

Spahr was chosen by the church in November 1991, but her appointment was stalled by protests from 10 churches in the upstate New York presbytery that includes Rochester. Both the presbytery and a regional judicial commission upheld Spahr's selection, leading to last week's appeal to the national judicial commission in Irving, Texas. Spahr was barred from assuming her duties while appeals were heard.

In its ruling, the national commission referred to a 1978 policy statement in which the church's General Assembly said homosexuality is "incompatible with Christian faith and life."

"A presbytery is not free to exercise its own judgment contrary to our constitutional standards ... without jeopardizing the entire fabric of our Presbyterian system," the commission said.

The controversy over Spahr's appointment had threatened to divide the denomination, with some member churches warning they might withdraw if her selection was approved.

But the Rev. Rosemary Mitchell, a minister at the Rochester church, said she feared the commission's rejection of Spahr also could drive away members.

"I think there are people who will leave the Presbyterian church over this, because they no longer wish to be hurt or abused over the way God created them," Mitchell said, wiping away tears as she spoke at a news conference Wednesday in Rochester.

The Rev. Jane Spahr, left, an avowed lesbian, talks with Coni Staff before the start of her hearing in front of the Presbyterian Church USA Permanent Judicial Commission Oct. 30. She was barred from the ministry.

Unusual ministry reaches out

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WICHITA FALLS — Garth Wilcoxson entered the dim nightclub on Scott Avenue and began taking a flier off the wall just inside the door. He replaced it with another flier and crossed the floor to the bar.

There, without a qualm, he dealt out more fliers, putting one every several feet until he got to the end of the bar and taped one to the side of the television set.

A woman was watching TV, smoking a cigarette and drinking a beer. Wilcoxson quickly struck up a conversation with her, learning that she attended an area church.

The conversation got around to Bibles. She didn't have one, she said. He left her for a moment. When he returned, he handed her a paperback Bible, talked a little more, then strode back into the bright afternoon sun on his way to the next club.

Within an hour, Wilcoxson had made his rounds — three more bars, a "gentleman's" club and an adult bookstore.

When he goes from bars to adult bookstores to strip joints, Wilcoxson is pastor to the passed over.

Dressed in blue jeans, a T-shirt and wearing a faded bandana, Wilcoxson said he tries to reach out to those who most Christians have given up on.

The fliers he was distributing, for example, announced the date and time for the Saving Station, just one aspect of Wilcoxson's Motel Ministry, which itself is just one aspect of Wilcoxson's overall mission as a Methodist preacher.

"We've been involved with those people for a year and a half," Wilcoxson said. "There's more going on down there than most people realize. We've been down there building relationships."

On his rounds, Wilcoxson doesn't always receive a warm welcome from bar owners. On more than one occasion, he has been told not to come back.

But he knows how to handle that. "We just don't like to hassle people. If they tell us to go away, we go away," Wilcoxson said.

His ministry began when he was a police chaplain for the Wichita Falls Police Department. He remembers being called to a room at the Flamingo Motel where a 17-year-old boy had killed himself.

"I got there 30 minutes after they discovered the body," the pastor said. "The parents had come and gone, the police had come and gone and the ambulance had already been there."

By just being there, he signals to people that they always have a place to go if they need to, he said.

"Even if no one stops by, God can use just the fact that we show up," he said.

Author urges taking better care of the soul

By TERRY MATTINGLY
Scripps Howard News Service

Year after year, grim-faced people troop into church trying to "save" their souls or go into therapy trying to "cure" their souls.

What they want is a secular or sacred version of salvation. Instead of a quick fix, people need to take better care of their souls, according to a former monk who is one of the hottest writers on the national self-help circuit.

"It doesn't matter to me if people spend all of their lives trying to avoid psychological sins or moralistic sins," said Thomas Moore, a psychotherapist and author of "Care of the Soul: A Guide for Cultivating Depth and Sacredness in Everyday Life."

"The systems are the same, only one system is in church and the other keeps sending you back to a therapist or to a book store. It's the same game — trying to fix your life by getting rid of everything that is supposed to be wrong with you."

Moore's success is ironic, to say the least. Many people are praising his book, and buying his book, thinking it is yet another "how-to" best-seller for those seeking another self-help support system or the latest therapy fad.

"What can I do?" asked Moore. "All I can do is try to slow people down and get them to think about the daily flow of their lives, all those everyday decisions and relationships that they seem to overlook or forget."

Moore spent 12 years studying for the Catholic priesthood and has master's degrees in theology and musicology as well as a doctorate in religious studies. He lives with his wife and two children in Brookline, Mass., and no longer considers himself a "practicing Catholic, in any traditional sense."

Along with a legion of other writers, Moore embraces "spirituality," not "religion." His book has been hailed by others popular with the human potential and New Age movements, including John Bradshaw, author of "Homecoming," and Sam Keen, author of "Fire in the Belly."

But it may take time for some of Moore's statements to sink in. For example: "Modern psychologies and therapies often contain an unspoken but clear salvational tone. If you could only learn to be assertive, loving, angry, expressive, contemplative, or thin, they imply, your troubles would be over."

Where are the American Jews?

By TERRY MATTINGLY
Scripps Howard News Service

A landmark 1990 survey of American Jews found a complex community of "somewhere between 4.4 and 8.2 million people."

Plus or minus 100 percent, or something like that.

"Somewhere between 4.4 and 8.2 million? The range is almost as large as the body politic itself," said Arden Shenker, former chairman of the National Jewish Relations Advisory Council.

The National Jewish Population Survey was released last year and continues to fire debates. It proved that any pollster who sets out to update Jewish statistics faces a maze of emotional questions. The bottom line: Who is, and who is not, a Jew?

In recent decades, most debate has centered on one question: Is a person Jewish when they meet the standards of Orthodox Judaism, or the modernized standards of liberal Jewish congregations?

But pollsters face new questions as Jews assimilate, drop out, intermarry and switch religions in record numbers. Also, many people are converting to Judaism.

Everyone knows that a Christian who is married to a Jew isn't a Jew, unless they convert. But is a gentile spouse a member of a Jewish household? What about children? Should pollsters count only those raised as Jews? How about those who go to church and synagogue?

Another recent poll found that 6 percent of America's ethnic Jews now attend Protestant churches and another 5 percent are in Catholic pews. Are they still Jews?

'Many simply have given up the prospect of an indigenous American Jewish culture.'

Arden Shenker
Jewish adviser

More questions: What about Jews who convert to Buddhism or other world religions? Join New Age groups? Embrace atheism? What about those in "Messianic" congregations who follow Jewish traditions, but claim Jesus as messiah?

The intermarriage issue looms over all others.

In 1990, 57 percent of American Jews married non-Jews — up from 40 percent in 1980. Jews who intermarry are much less likely to raise their children as Jews, or to support Jewish groups. About 700,000 Jewish children under the age of 18 are being raised in another religious faith.

It's impossible to ignore this reality, said Shenker, speaking on "The Future of the American Jewish Community" to a national gathering of Jewish women in Denver.

"We accept as a starting point a continuing loss of Jewish identity, an increasing lack of Jewish education, a frightening weakening of Jewish family ties and the inexorable loss of ... relationships in a Jewish world once secured by education, community, the family and a sense of history, peoplehood and destiny," he said.

"Many simply have given up the prospect of an indigenous American Jewish culture," Shenker searched for glimmers of hope among declining numbers. Things may change for the better, he said.

For example, most younger Jews in mixed marriages are more observant of Jewish traditions than their older counterparts. Many congregations are doing a better job of welcoming converts to Judaism.

Above all, Jews must not forget that the ties of Jewish culture remain strong. Thus, Shenker talked about Jewish "values," "ideals," "peoplehood," "ideology" and "education," while making few references to faith. He never mentioned God.

This echoed recent polls. The 1990 survey found that 1.1 million American Jews claim no religion, and only 484,000 attend synagogue services on a regular basis.

Somehow, Shenker said, American Jews must believe the "resources" — secular or religious — of their culture will be enough to inspire future generations.

Amid "demographic peril," Jews cannot give in to the temptation to set "quality controls" and to build walls around the Jewish community, he said.

"We know why those resources can be used. ... They are rich and real, for us, for our children, for our children's children. They are uniquely time-tested, by an eternal people," said Shenker.

Research finds Christians do not live by Bible alone

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

One by one, the battle cries of the Reformation that have divided Christians for centuries are losing their emotional power.

Justification by faith alone was one of the first walls to fall, as a landmark Lutheran-Roman Catholic dialogue found both sides agreeing that salvation comes only through faith in Christ's "free gift."

And now, in the 54th meeting of the dialogue dating back to 1965, U.S. Lutheran and Roman Catholic theologians have broken through the "Sola Scriptura" dividing line which held that Protestants were fundamentally different from Catholics because they believed that the Bible alone, not church tradition, was the sole test of doctrinal authority.

The dialogue statement, "The Word of God: Scripture and Tradition," states that neither side of the faith can be considered mutually exclusive.

The 10 Roman Catholics, eight persons from the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and four from the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod participating in the dialogue agreed that the Bible has pre-eminent status as the word of God, but church doctrines do not have to be "simply and literally" present in Scripture.

"While it doesn't solve all of the ecumenical difficulties between us, it's a step forward," said the Rev. Frederick M. Jelly, a Catholic priest from Mount St. Mary's Seminary in Emmitsburg, Md.

In searching for consensus, each side moved away from the hardened positions of the Reformation that portrayed Lutherans as relying on Scripture alone to interpret God's word, and Catholics as relying solely on the interpretations of the church hierarchy.

From the Catholic side, an effort was made to show that Catholic tradition finds its roots in biblical revelation.

"We're not a 'traditio sola' church," Jelly said. "Tradition would be lacking in an essential if Scripture was not part of the received tradition."

Thus, the dialogue participants agreed that the Bible has pre-eminent status as the word of God, and that there are no historically verifiable apostolic traditions which are not attested to in some way by Scripture.

At the same time, the dialogue participants also agreed that the pre-eminent status of Scripture does not exclude the function of a teaching office or doctrinal traditions that protect and promote the faith. The participants also agreed that some doctrines, such as infant baptism, can be deduced from Scripture, even if they are not clearly written down.

"From the Lutheran side, there was a recognition that tradition does play a role in the life of the church and the transmission of the Gospel," said the Rev. Gerhard O. Forde of Luther Northwestern Seminary in St. Paul, Minn.

He noted that biblical scholarship has shown that the word of God was carried by oral tradition before Scripture was written, and that Lutheran churches adhere to the ancient creeds of the old ecumenical councils.

Even the idea of the Christian Trinity is not explicitly set down in Scripture.

There are still significant differences in Lutheran and Catholic understandings of Scripture and tradition. While Catholics see doctrines such as the bodily assumption of Mary into heaven as being inspired by Scripture, the link is too tenuous for the Lutheran dialogue participants.

And that the concept of papal infallibility remains on the books — although it has been rarely invoked and not ever in modern times — also is still a point of contention in ecumenical dialogues.

But one can see how far many Protestants and Catholics have come in recognizing their common faith in the final document, which manages to weave together such diverse elements as Scripture, tradition, creeds, confessions and the saints.

'Different' churches see membership growing

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH — Millions of Americans are flocking to radically new congregations designed for those who consider attending regular church as boring as sin.

Springing up in vacant shopping centers, store buildings and movie theaters from Fort Worth to Chicago to Los Angeles, the new churches avoid lengthy sermons, reject denominational labels and don't pressure new visitors to give money.

"People aren't turned off by God; they are turned off by us," said the Rev. Bob Roberts Jr., 34, pastor of Northwood Church for the Communities in suburban Fort Worth.

Many of those people not attending church, he said, complained about "dead" worship services and irrelevant church programs.

Roberts is part of a new breed of pastors, zealously espousing church growth principles. They have organized churches partially based on highly successful non-traditional churches such as the Willow Creek Community Church in the Chicago suburb of South Barrington, Ill., and the Saddleback

Valley Community Church in Mission Viejo, Calif.

"We are geared to speak to a slice of the population, but there are many slices," Roberts said. "We are not putting down traditional churches. There's a great need for them, too."

The movement, using high-tech research methods to find out what appeals to those who aren't regular churchgoers, has supporters and detractors. Statistics show 55 percent of Americans don't attend church regularly.

Critics label it "McChurch," saying religion is being sold like hamburgers and creates an easy, fast food kind of faith lacking in spiritual nourishment.

But respected denominational leaders say something must be right for nontraditional churches, which all major Protestant denominations are establishing.

"These are some of our fastest-growing churches in the nation, and they are reaching people that traditional churches aren't reaching," said Ebbie Smith, professor at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

Abuse

"No wonder we're seeing more and more cases," Ms. Miller said. "Each of these guys have taken scores of victims. More and more people are coming forth that have been silent for so long."

Ms. Miller, a paralegal worker, a Catholic with a master's degree in theology and a mother of four, said the new organization mainly involves two categories of sexual victims: Women church members in vulnerable situations who seek counseling from their ministers but are sexually exploited, and children, taught that priests represent goodness and God, but who are sexually abused by them.

Barry cites a study of 3,000 mainline Protestant ministers, most married, that found 13 percent said they have had adulterous relationships with women church members.

Both for the vulnerable woman and the vulnerable child, "it's a breach of trust," Ms. Miller said. "It's a violation of sacred-psychological trust. It reaches further into the psyche than any other kind of breach because it's an exploitation of power that gets its authority from a higher plane."

She said that both Protestant ministers and Catholic priests vowed to celibacy are held in "reverence and respect" and when that trust is broken, it shatters "your entire faith system."

"Your faith system is locked into everything you do in life, the way you approach your family and all your other relationships. When that whole faith system is short-circuited, it's like total destruction of the psyche."

"People have a hard time coming back from that. You no longer have a belief system in place anymore. Every facet of life has to be reconstructed in every way — if you have the strength to put it back together."

Ms. Miller, who says one of her own sons was sexually abused by a priest, said it had brought on a "profound grieving and a loss of belief, trust, a loss of many things. But religion was too important to abandon."

She went back to college, getting an advanced theology degree. "I needed to reconstruct my faith somehow. That's how I did it."

She said the prolonged, devastating effects of such abuse "has a lot to do with the way we were conditioned as Christians. In our belief, the highest virtue was to forgive, to turn the other cheek, to suffer in silence."
