Iraq's defiance comes as no surprise

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's initial defiance today of an ultimatum to remove anti-aircraft missiles from southern Iraq came as no surprise to CIA Director Robert Gates.

RELATED STORY — 3A

"He has shown in the past a remarkable ability to miscalculate the determination of the coalition," Gates said Wednesday shortly after the United States, Russia, Britain and France ordered Iraq to remove the missiles or risk retaliation.

Indeed, Iraq rejected the ultimatum only hours after Gates' prediction. The country's official news agency quoted Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz as saying, "It is the right of Iraq to deploy air defenses throughout the country."

Gates said Iraq had deployed a handful of Soviet-made mobile SA-2 and SA-3 anti-aircraft missiles below the 32nd parallel that marks the northern boundary of the coalition-imposed no-fly zone over southern Iraq.

"I don't think it would be hard to take them out," Gates said on public television's "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour" program.

The ultimatum took effect immediately after it was delivered in writing to Iraq's U.N. ambassador, Nizar Hamdoun, in New York at 5:30 p.m. EST Wednesday, diplomats at the United Nations said.

"The message is clear: that those batteries should not be located below the 32nd parallel," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

At the Pentagon, a senior official said Iraq was told to move the missiles "back to where they came from." The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the missiles had been moved from near the Al Jarrah air base in southwest Iraq.

The four nations also demanded Iraq stop using the missiles' radar units to track American planes — an action considered hostile since it warns pilots they may be under attack. The United States, Britain and France in August declared the southern part of Iraq as a protected zone for the Muslim Shiites who oppose Saddam's secular rule. The area south of the 32nd parallel is patrolled by aircraft from all three countries.

But the United Nations has not officially declared it a no-fly zone, and the United States is relying on the threatened allied military power in the region to deter Saddam.

In New York, Hamdoun told reporters that "Iraq has no intention of escalating this or making it into a crisis." He did not say how Iraq would respond. But Saddam sounded defiant in a speech earlier Wednesday, saying the Iraqi army had the "unwavering ability to confront aggression."

The Russians predicted Saddam would back down. "I think the Iraqis will understand what side of their bread is buttered and what side is dangerous," said Russia's U.N. ambassador, Yuli Vorontsov.

If Saddam doesn't, President Bush could decide to confront his nemesis one last time before leaving office Jan. 20.

The White House declined to say what Bush would do, but at the United Nations, deputy British Ambassador Thomas Richardson said Iraq faces "serious consequences" if it doesn't comply with the ultimatum.

But at the Pentagon, a senior official said the 48-hour deadline did not necessarily mean allied forces would strike the minute it expires. "It could be a minute later, it could be days. It all depends upon Saddam's response," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Among the military options open to the United States and its allies is a strike on the air defense radars that guide the surface-to-air missiles to their targets.

The United States also could bomb the runways of the air bases from where Iraq is launching the intrusions below the 32nd parallel, officials said.

Bush, already frustrated by Saddam's continued hold on power, has grown increasingly irate with a successive pattern of Iraqi provocations since the Nov. 3 presidential election.

The recent Iraqi moves began when its troops sabotaged U.N. food convoys for Kurds in northern Iraq by planting bombs.

Motorcycle accident victim leaves doctors surprised he's alive

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Doctors are surprised that Billy Shanks of Stanton did not die on the spot last week when his motorcycle slammed into a 1987 Suburban on Texas 187 at Interstate 20.

Among numerous other injuries, Shanks' aorta — a main artery to the heart — was severed. The 30-year-old remains in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital where he was transported by Mitchell County Ambulance.

"The doctors said he should have died on the spot," said Shanks' mother, Linda Shanks. "It was God, it wasn't anyone else (that saved him)."

Exploratory surgery, which followed insertion of a pin in his leg and setting the broken arm, did not uncover the severed aorta, she said. When his condition worsened after surgery, doctors decided to take an X-ray and send it to a specialist for diagnosis, leading to the discovery.

Doctors now are trying to save a foot and are waiting for Shanks to stabilize enough for transfer to a Dallas hospital where doctors will pull his pelvic bone out of his stomach, his mother said. He's also paralyzed in both legs and it's unknown if it's permanent and a lung collapsed.

"We're praying," his mother said.

Otherwise, Shanks is conscious and is doing all right. He cannot talk because he is on a breathing machine but, his mother said, "He just writes up a storm." "He's doing really good," she said. "He's real alert."

According to an accident report by the Texas Highway Department, Shanks was traveling southbound on Texas 137 and did not realize the Suburban was making a left turn from the eastbound lane of an Interstate 20 access road.

The driver of the Suburban, Connie Hughes Zant, 35, of Ackerly, was issued a citation for failure to yield the right-of-way at a stop sign. Zant, who along with her passenger was unhurt, told an officer that she did not see the motorcycle. She let a different vehicle pass by, saw no others and proceeded to turn.

"The motorcycle was unable to brake or veer right due to the close proximity of the Suburban," the accident report says. Veering left, it collided with the right front of the Suburban, fell over, slid on the left side and spun to face west by the time it stopped.

Shanks was wearing a helmet. The report did not say how fast he was going. The speed limit is 45 mph.

Stenholm scraps idea to run for senate

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A consideration to run for senate was scrapped by U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, on Wednesday following Railroad Commissioner Bob Krueger's appointment to the seat Tuesday.

STENHOLM

"I had been seriously been thinking about running and just came to the conclusion today that I was not," Stenholm said Wednesday. "I have already called Bob Krueger and signed on to work with him."

Krueger, appointed by Gov. Ann Richards to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's seat, will help keep the Texas delegation in Congress strong, Stenholm said, and there's too much work to be done on agricultural, budget and health issues to be concerned with raising the millions of dollars for a campaign or to run a campaign.

Stenholm said he had the support of his family and backers to run, but said it's also a matter of personally deciding if there's enough "fire in the gut."

"I decided I didn't have it," he said. "We're very relieved now and looking forward to working in the 103rd Congress."

Stenholm was just named chairman of the House Agriculture Committee's subcommittee on Department Operations and Nutrition. He's also on the House Budget Committee and is a member of the Rural Health Care Coalition.

Concerning reports that former Texas Attorney General Jim Mat-tox may oppose Krueger in the May 1 non-partisan election, Stenholm said he will back Krueger and said Krueger has the best chance of winning, especially if labor groups are happy with him.

"No question about that, if Jim Mattox should get in, I'm going to support Bob Krueger," Stenholm said.

But Stenholm said he doubts that Mattox will run. "My gut feeling is that he will not."

Krueger's strong points include his knowledge of the oil and gas industry, which is helpful for Texas, and experience as President Jimmy Carter's ambassador-at-large and coordinator for Mexican affairs, good for the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement, Stenholm said.

Krueger was elected to the Railroad Commission in 1990. He speaks Spanish fluently.

United Way closes fund drive Friday

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

United Way of Big Spring is close to its goal, but will still face cutting the budgets of the 10 area agencies funded under United Way's umbrella.

As of Jan. 5, United Way's total collections for this year are $226,843, or 96.5 percent of the $235,000 needed to fund area organizations at last year's amounts.

The campaign will close tomorrow, according to United Way President Jeff Morris.

On Jan. 21, if the goal has not been met, the 1993 board of directors will cut allocations to United Way agencies.

"We are so close and yet so far from reaching the goal," said Sherrie Bordofske, United Way executive director. "This has been a very good campaign considering all the obstacles we've had to face and address."

"San Angelo and Sweetwater are the only United Ways in our area that have reached their goals," Bordofske said.

Bordofske plans to visit and learn the tactics of San Angelo's United Way, which was allowed to open its fund-raising drive in conjunction with a San Angelo air show featuring the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds.

Several special donations to United Way of Big Spring have exceeded what has been done in the past, Bordofske said. The state hospital tripled its donation, 250 Fina employees raised $30,000, Big Spring Independent School District employees raised $15,000, H.E.B. employees raised $5,000, Winn-Dixie $3,000 and Furr's employees raised $2,303.

"I am crushed that this will be the first year in six years we haven't reached our goal, Bordofske said.

It also spurred Mexican demands for renegotiation of the U.S.-Mexico extradition treaties. U.S.-Mexican relations fell to their lowest point in years, and talks aimed at treaty revision went nowhere.

High winds hampering clean up of oil spill

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SUMBURGH, Shetland Islands — The government is investigating whether the tanker Braer, which was still hemorrhaging oil in wildlife-rich coastal waters today, was abandoned prematurely by its crew before running aground.

Howling winds continued to frustrate attempts to contain the oil and mop it up from the rugged shores of Mainland, the largest island in this archipelago 100 miles off the Scottish coast.

The winds, gusting to 85 mph, pressed the oil to the island's southwestern shore and kicked up a sticky brown froth that sprayed cliffs, grazing lands and crops.

Dozens of dead, oil-covered fish and birds were found along the coast on Wednesday — the first victims of a feared ecological cataclysm. The Shetlands are famed for their thriving seabird colonies and their waters teem with fish and sea mammals.

The Shetland News Service said two slicks were covering a total area of more than seven square miles.

Lengthwise, the oil has covered an eight-mile stretch of coastline.

Wind has sprayed the oil as far as four miles inland, leaving a brown coating on farmland and sheep, a mainstay of the islands' economy.

Sir Hector Munro, the Scottish environment minister, said in a radio interview with British Broadcasting Corp. that an estimated 2,000 sheep could die from grazing on oil-polluted land.

The 89,700-ton Braer, carrying 24.6 million gallons of Norwegian oil to Canada, ran aground Tuesday in the Bay of Quendale after its engines failed in hurricane-force winds and heavy seas.

A salvage team from the Holland-based Smit Tank company carried out an initial assessment of the Liberian-registered Braer on Wednesday evening and reported it was still in one piece but partly submerged and listing slightly to starboard.

ed public comment, but say privately that about half the cargo has spilled into the sea. If the ship breaks under the pounding waves, the rest of the oil will spill.

"The salvage team intend to pump oil from the vessel, but the weather must improve before the necessary work can be undertaken," the ship's owners, Bergvall and Hudner of New York, said in a statement.

Brian Davy, senior forecaster at the government's weather center at Aberdeen, Scotland, said a deep depression heading in from the north Atlantic would whip up new gales in the area later today.

Transport Secretary John MacGregor announced Wednesday that a government inquiry would begin immediately into the causes of the accident, actions taken to prevent it and the competence of the ship's crew.

Barry Cork, managing director of the Star Offshore service in Aberdeen, said his firm's tug Star Sirius reached the stricken tanker two hours before it went aground. "But unfortunately there was no one on the tanker" to help attach a tow line, Cork told BBC radio.

Postal Service taking Bush to court over pricing authority

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Postal Service is taking President Bush to court in a showdown over the authority to set stamp prices.

The Postal Service's board of governors announced late Wednesday that it has asked a federal court to block Bush from intervening in a year-long battle over postal rates.

The move followed a threat by the president to fire the governors unless they dropped a legal dispute with the independent Postal Rate Commission.

Postal Service Vice President Deborah K. Bowker said in a statement that the agency had "asked the U.S. District Court to issue a temporary restraining order to prevent the office of the president from forcing the governors of the Postal Service to withdraw critical lawsuits."

Technically, the dispute involves a never-implemented 27-cent postage rate for specially prepared mail that can be processed by machines.

But the real battle is over who makes the final decision on rates and lawsuits filed by federal agencies.

The 27-cent rate was proposed by the Postal Rate Commission as part of a larger case. The Postal Service accepted it under protest and filed suit, a process that has occurred in the past when the two agencies disagreed.

This time, however, the Justice Department sided with the Postal Rate Commission and refused to represent the Postal Service in court.

That led Bush to order the Postal Service to drop the case, threatening to fire the governors otherwise.

But the postal governing board declined to go along, arguing in a letter Tuesday that letting the Justice Department tell the agency when it can and cannot settle rate disputes in court would amount to giving the department the final say on postage rates.

In their letter to Bush, the governors said "the right of the Postal Service to appeal a recommendation of the Postal Rate Commission" represents a "fundamental

Punitive strikes in Pentagon's options of responses to Iraq

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's range of options for responding to Iraq's use of surface-to-air missiles to threaten allied aircraft in the "no-fly" zone could go well beyond eliminating those weapons, defense officials say.

And the timing of such action could also leave Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein guessing, one senior defense official said Wednesday. The United States and its allies have given Baghdad until late Friday to move its missiles from the edge of the no-fly zone in southern Iraq or risk military retaliation.

But once that deadline is up, allied forces may take their time, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "It could be a minute later, it could be days. It all depends upon Saddam's response," the official said.

The ultimatum told the Iraqis to move the missiles "back to where they came from." The weapons had been moved from sites near the Al Jarrah air base.

If Saddam balks, several possibilities for punitive strikes exist, Pentagon officials said.

"The pattern this administration has followed is to take out what he holds dear," said a second official, who has followed the conflict with Saddam closely.

For days, Iraqi jets have been conducting a cat-and-mouse game near the 32nd parallel, in an apparent attempt to lure U.S. aircraft within range of the missile batteries.

Tensions have risen since Dec. 27, when a U.S. Air Force F-16 fighter shot down an Iraqi Mi-8 helicopter after it had penetrated the no-fly zone and turned against the American warplane.

Squadrons of U.S. Air Force and Navy attack jets in the Persian Gulf region are well prepared to attack the Soviet-made, surface-to-air missile batteries should the president give the go-ahead.

"The best thing to do would be to close the air bases" used by the Iraqi jets, the second official said. "All you'd have to do is pock the runways."

Another target could be the air defense radar sites that help guide the surface-to-air missiles to their targets.

A further step, said one military officer, would be to destroy the Iraqi planes that have been periodically entering the "no-fly" zone.

Those planes could be pursued and shot down, Iraqi backup aircraft also could be hit while still on the ground — sharpening the message, the military officer said element" of setting rates.

"Without such authority the operation of the Postal Service is severely weakened," it said.

Postal sources said White House counsel Boyden Gray responded Wednesday that the governors' arguments were not persuasive. But White House officials said Bush was still undecided on whether to carry out his threat of firing.

Then came the announcement that the postal governors would go to court against the president.

"A majority of the board of governors believe recent actions sought by the White House are not in accord with the Postal Reorganization Act and ultimately in the best interests of the American public," Bowker's statement said.

She said members of the postal governing board "regret the necessity of taking this action but are left without an alternative."

Bowker said the postal governors "respect the office of the president but believe that the issue of one of constitutional and statutory interpretation that should have been worked out in the appropriate federal courts."

"For 21 years the Postal Reorganization Act, although not perfect, has served postal customers and postal employees well. The governors' action is taken to protect the businesslike mandate established by the act," the postal executive said.

Alternate proposal for school funding

By JOHN LEEDOM
Senator, District 16

The legislature is under a court mandated deadline of June 1, 1993 to pass a public school finance plan which would provide a more equitable access to funding for each district based upon similar tax efforts. While previous court decisions recall a time under the original Gilmer-Aikin Act of 1949 when the state's Foundation School Program provided about 80 percent of the total cost of public education, it is not feasible today for the state to guarantee a similar effort.

This year, the total state and local cost of the Foundation School Program is over $12 billion. Eighty percent state share of this total would require state taxes to produce over $9.6 billion for education, more than a 50 percent increase over the current level of state funding!

The answer today, given the reality of budget constraints, is not more state dollar thrown into the system, but allowing each school child to have access to an education funded with similar, appropriate amounts which allow for an adequate educational opportunity.

For at least the past twenty years, education has been funded with the last dollars left in the state's treasury. After the general appropriations act has been finalized, the leftovers have been given to finance the school system.

Among its observations concerning school finance, the Texas Supreme court has stated that "the legislature's responsibility to support public education is different because it is constitutionally mandated." The court emphatically made this statement while recognizing that there are other legitimate, strong public interests also competing for these same dollars. I propose that the legislature acknowledge this compelling responsibility and dedicate the first dollars flowing into the state treasury specifically for purposes of public education.

Such earmarking of state revenues has ample precedent. Throughout this century, there has been a strong public commitment to the establishment and maintenance of a system of good roads for this state. The State Highway Fund, supported by specific, dedicated taxes, has produced a system of highways unequalled in this nation. The time has come to make a similar commitment to public education.

I introduced a proposal during the recent special session of the legislature calling for an Education Equalization Excellence Program. It would require the Education Equalization Excellence Fund Budget Committee (presently known as the Foundation School Fund Budget Committee), composed of the governor, lieutenant governor, and comptroller of public accounts, to determine the amount of money required to finance the Program during the succeeding biennium. This has again been filed for the coming session as Senate Bill No. 58.

The comptroller would then be directed to deposit this amount of money from the receipts of the sales and use taxes into the Education Equalization Excellence Fund. This would, in effect, dedicate sales tax dollars for the purpose of funding public education in Texas. Some of the first dollars flowing into the treasury would now guarantee that funds would be available to provide a quality education for every public school student in this state.

In order for a school district to share in this fund, it would be required to adopt an effective tax rate of $1.25 per $100 of its property values. Districts would still receive their per capita share of available school fund and textbook monies.

Districts receiving funds under this program would be guaranteed $4,530 per pupil by the state, and would be able to enrich by taxing in the range of $1.26 to $1.50. Districts raising over $4,530 through their $1.25 minimum tax effort, or opting to tax at a lower rate, would receive no state funding, but would be allowed to keep all funds raised up to a $1.50 tax rate.

The Education Equalization Excellence Program can be fully implemented with the expenditure of $6 billion per year from sales tax revenues. During the present biennium, the state has appropriated $11.61 billion for education from the general revenue fund. This does not include available school funds, textbook funds, or federal funds. If you add the $650 million the governor, lieutenant governor, and speaker have indicated is available to increase this fund during the coming biennium, there will a total of $12.26 billion available for the two-year period, or slightly over $6 billion per year. Thus, the amount needed to guarantee $4,530 for the education of every school child in Texas under this plan falls within the limits of available revenues, as well as of the "Fair Share Plan" recently touted by the state's leadership.

Another feature of this proposal would be the elimination of "weights" which currently force us to fund special interests within the education system. These items include allotments for transportation, sparsity, small districts, special education, compensatory education, bilingual education, vocational education, and gifted and talented students. While this weighting system was initially designed to provide supplemental funding for a very few special needs, by now virtually every district has its own unique cache of perceived needs that it feels deserve additional funding.

While these are all "worthy causes," they add 930,000 additional units to the actual student population, thus artificially skewing the system by comprising 30 percent of the "weighted average daily attendance" used to determine the state's share of school district funding.

In summary, this program would:

1. Guarantee an equal amount of basic funding to adequately educate every school child in the state;
2. Identify and dedicate a source of funding (the state sales and use taxes, the most inflation-proof tax) to ensure that the state's commitment to education will be met;
3. Cap the reliance on local property taxes, returning the ratio of state and local funds to approximately a 50-50 basis; and
4. Eliminate artificial weights which add to the total cost of the system of public school finance while reducing expenditures available for individual students overall.

The courts have demanded that we establish an efficient, equitable distribution of our available resources for public education. The earmarking of a significant portion of the first sales tax dollars is completely in agreement with the dictates of the supreme court in its Edgewood decision which stated:

In setting appropriations (for education), the legislature must establish priorities according to constitutional mandate; equalizing educational opportunity cannot be relegated to an "if funds are left over" basis. We recognize that there are and always will be strong public interests competing for available state funds. However, the legislature's responsibility to support public education is different because it is constitutionally imposed.

By treating every student equally, the Education Equalization Excellence Program provides an alternative solution to this problem.

A critical look at contact lenses

He was bent over a sink in the office men's room, poking a finger into his eye and muttering. I asked him what his problem was.

"The air. Must be a lot of pollution or something. It goofs up my contact lenses."

No, I scoffed, his problem wasn't the air. His problem was the vanity of those who insist on wearing contact lenses because they think it makes them look better and conceals a minor physical flaw.

They can't be like the rest of us normal, well-balanced, weak-eyed people who are not embarrassed about perching regular glasses on our noses.

They are so concerned about their appearance, so lacking in self-confidence, so vain and filled with conceit, that they go to the trouble of sticking a tiny piece of plastic to their eyeballs.

While poking at his eye, he indignantly offered a long, lame explanation about how much better he can see with contacts.

I've heard it before. But there is only one reason to wear them, and it is vanity.

I used to hear the same stuff from the right fielder on my softball team every time we had to stop the game while he crawled around on all fours, looking in the grass for a lens that had somehow leaped from his eyeball.

And I used to hear it from a handball partner, as he crawled on all fours, peering into the cracks between the floorboards.

There is also the golf partner, who in the midst of a game will suddenly clap his hand over an eye or begin poking at the orb with a finger.

That's the most offensive part of it — when they stick fingers in their own eyes.

Never once in my entire life have I touched either of my own eyeballs. Nor have I permitted anyone to touch them.

And I never will. To touch the eye is against the laws of nature. No creature on Earth wants its eyeball touched.

You can make a test to confirm that statement. Take the nicest, gentlest cat you can find. Or the most docile, tail-wagging, drooling happy dog.

You can pet them. You can rub their ears. You can ruffle the fur under their necks. You might even be able to get away with pulling their tails.

But just dare to try to touch their eyes. Those friendly little beasts might nip off your finger, as they should.

Or try it with a friend. You can pat a friend's back, put a hand on a friend's shoulder, take a friend by the arm, even pat a friend on the cheek.

But make the test. Go up to any friend, even your best pal, and try to touch his or her eyeball. They will leap away.

And it isn't mere surprise that causes that reaction. Give them warning. Ask your friend, "Would you mind if I touch your eyeball with my finger?"

You do that once or twice and your friends will shun you.

There is also the inconvenience. People who wear those things can't just yank off their glasses and toss them on the dresser or under the bed when they go to sleep.

They have to mess around with their eyes to remove them, put them in a miniature cooker, simmer them or whatever they do overnight, then go through the whole thing again in the morning.

And we've all heard the stories about people who awake thirsty during the night and, in reaching for a glass of water on the nightstand, accidentally drink their contact lenses.

There is something else they can't do. When provoked in, say, a barroom debate, they can't make the menacing gesture of removing their glasses, putting them on the bar and serving notice that the talking is over. Now there is action.

A person would look pretty foolish saying, "I don't have to put up with your guff" and then begin poking himself in the eye.

Finally, I have long suspected that there is a potential health menace in contact lenses. Eye doctors will deny it. But logic tells me it exists.

The danger is this: What is to prevent those things from sliding off your eye and up behind your forehead and even farther up, into your cranium? What do you do then, when this tiny object is up there in your head, rattling around between your skull and your brain?

Think about that. And be careful about rolling your eyes.

DD Turner

Along with millions of other Americans, I laughed at the antics of Macaulay Culkin in Home Alone.

But the real life 'Home Alone' in Illinois left me without any laughs.

Not being a parent, I really don't understand what having a child means. But, I have figured out why I haven't had any — responsibility.

That is right, the big "R" word. Children are huge responsibility. And that means you take care of them — financially, emotionally, and in so many other ways.

And, you have to want those children. Wanting children seems to make it easier to take care of them.

I have often wondered at the tricks fate likes to pull on people. Such as why people who really want children are often not given children and people who don't seem to have one a year?

The results of neglect and abuse permeate American life, crossing socio-economic borders. The couple, leaving their children alone, were not poor, wanting or in need. They had enough money to take a 10-day trip to Mexico.

They just simply didn't seem to care enough about their children to make sure they were protected. I guess that is what bothers me the most. Blithely off to Mexico they go as if they didn't have a care in the world. But, children are a world of care and in need of a world of loving care.

The scariest part was that anything could have happened to those children, who were told to answer the telephone. And it did. Two scared children, calling the police when the fire alarm went off and no one was there to help them.

The U.S. is not such a safe place to live that children can be left to fend for themselves. Every day you read about atrocities in the paper: burglars killing a young boy because he was home when they broke into the house. Even worse, these were people known to the child.

While, I don't have children, I do have a cat. I know cats are more self-sufficient than children, but there are some comparisons.

Pippin is not left home alone for more than two days. If I plan to be gone longer, I beg and plead with someone to take care of him. If there is no one willing to brave the monster, off to the kitty hotel he goes. I would not leave him home alone for 10 days and he's just a cat.

That's just what I do for my cat, some people do much more for their pets. A child requires more, much more, than a cat.

After all, to borrow a phrase for a child abuse prevention organization, "It shouldn't hurt to be a child."

Instant replay not 'new'

Never having met Otis S. Freeman, I find myself wondering if he ever knew how much he may have influenced the life of the world.

Otis Freeman was one of many notable people who died in the year just past. In his obituary, he was identified in the headline as a man who had "developed television techniques." The text of the obit said that Mr. Freeman, who was 71 when he died in Anderson, S.C., had been for 30 years the chief engineer at WPIX television in New York. In that capacity, the obituary said, he had helped to develop the instant replay.

According to the obituary, in 1959, a New York Yankees baseball announcer had wished out loud that a play could be shown again: "Mr. Freeman was at the stadium that day with some engineers experimenting with videotaping machines. The remark got them thinking, and soon the instant replay was born."

The role of instant replay in sports television has been much discussed. A case can be made that instant replay, as a concept, has also skewed the texture of life itself. It is possible to divide the social history of modern life into two distinct eras: pre-instant replay and post-instant replay.

For there must have been a time when people had only one shot at capturing a moment. Something happened, a person savored it, and days, perhaps years, later, the person might think about that moment again.

The moment might expand in memory, and become richer; the moment might shrink and reveal itself to be ultimately insignificant. But life was linear, and stopped for no one; there was no predicting what might happen on a given day, except for the fact that once it was gone, it was gone. If you didn't pay attention, you could miss it.

Bob Greene

Just as instant replay changed the way people watch sports events — there's not as much of an impulse to pay constant attention to every play, because the plays will be repeated again on TV until they seem like familiar songs — so the broader concept of instant replay has changed daily life. Answering machines, film that's-a-camera, 24-hour cable news stations, one-hour photo developing stores, vest-pocket tape recorders, the VCR, the home video camera itself — all have conspired to diminish the edge that came with assuming a moment was something that existed only in the present tense, and thus the sense that every moment must be monitored and valued.

The wide receiver in the Super Bowl might catch a touchdown pass, and if the viewer at home is in the kitchen, he need not worry; nothing has happened that he cannot count on seeing when he returns. That is the legacy of Otis Freeman and his engineering colleagues: the guarantee that nothing in a sports event must float out into the vapor untrapped.

So, too, the child at his birthday party need not concentrate too hard on remembering what he and his friends did to enjoy the day. The cassette can be popped in the VCR literally within seconds of when the last child leaves; the birthday party lives again, and the party becomes the moving pictures on the tape — the tape is not a record of the party, it replaces the party. If a parent is willing to run down to the photo booth at the mall, glossies of the party can be available to the family before the wrapping paper is even thrown away. Instant gratification is one thing; instant memories are subtly different.

Some home computers have memories — the perfect word — with capacity enough to store every thought a person could conceivably commit to a keyboard for the length of his or her life. If a person chose to, he or she could sit down at the end of each day, pour out his or her reflections and recollections, hit the "store" button — and never be more than a strike of the "enter" key away from accessing any event, any occurrence, any memory. Memory in its archaic sense — memory without a software connotation.

It is instructive to watch spectators in sports arenas that are not equipped with giant instant-replay screens. Conditioned to expect instant replay on their TV sets at home, accustomed to seeing replays at the fancier stadiums, the spectators seem often not quite sure how to watch the contest. It all seems so fleeting without instant replay; it all seems so impermanent and liquid.

As does life, in those hours when we are without our guarantors of instant replay. Take a vacation or a weekend trip sometime without bringing along your camcorder; go out for a long walk sometime without activating your answering machine before you leave the house. The sensation may make you relaxed; the sensation may make you wary. Whatever your reaction, it will be different from what it is when you know every second is being captured. Life flows and lurches; we can stop it and back it up and play it again, but that doesn't mean we have to.

No. 3 Lady Hawks resume play

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

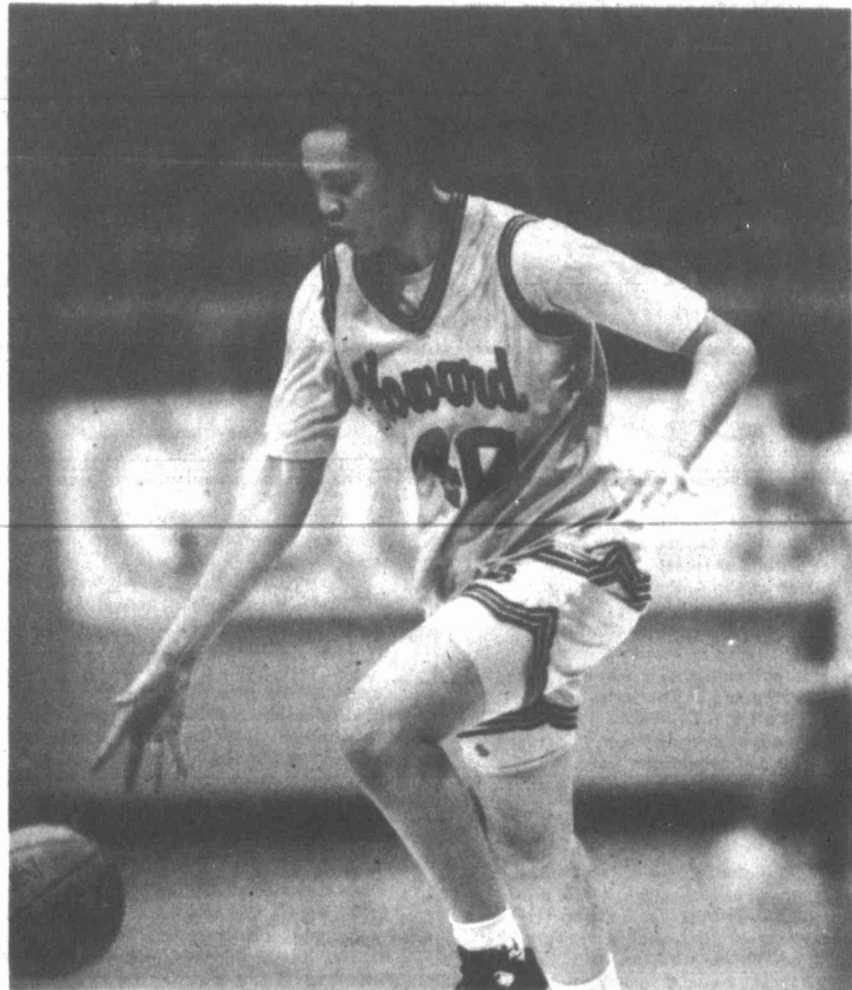

The Howard College Lady Hawks head into the second half of the season with No. 3 ranking, something that is not unfamiliar to Howard women's basketball the past four seasons.

The Lady Hawks concluded the first half of the season with a 15-0 record, ranked No. 8 in the nation. The most recent JUCO national poll came out when Howard was on the Christmas break. Ranked ahead of Howard is No. 1 Louisburg College, N.C. (9-1) and No. 2 Northeastern Oklahoma A&M (13-0).

The Lady Hawks have been ranked in the Top 20 in all four years coach Royce Chadwick has been at Howard. The highest ranking Howard has ever had was No. 2 last year. The past three seasons the Lady Hawks have been ranked in the top 5 at one time or another.

Howard tries to shake the holiday cobwebs loose when they play in the Lady Bucs Classic tonight and Friday in Brenham. Howard plays Angelina College tonight at 5, and Blinn Friday at 7. The other team entered is Western Texas College.

The Lady Hawks then resume Western Junior College Athletic Conference play next week with three games, including two tough ones on the road. Howard plays New Mexico Junior College on the road Monday, then the Lady Hawks will host Frank Phillips at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum on Thursday and then travel to Odessa to play No. 8 nationally ranked Odessa Saturday. Howard is 1-0 in conference play.

Annette Robinson, a freshman post player from Killeen, is the 11th leading scorer in the WJCAAC, averaging 13 points per game. The Lady Hawks compete in the Lady Bucs Classic in Brenham tonight and Friday.

The Lady Hawks returned to practice Sunday and followed it with two practices on Monday and a single practice Tuesday. "We reintroduced them to a ball and goal. They've been off 22 days. Needless to say I don't think any of them took a ball home," said Chadwick. Chadwick said he scheduled to go to the tournament so his team could get some court time before heading back into the conference race. "We didn't want to come back (conference) cold turkey. The last two or three years, we've had a history of losing right after the break. I'd rather lose one down there than to lose in conference."

Chadwick said he's thrilled to have his team ranked so high. "It's like a new job, you're thrilled to have it, but the big thing is what you do with it." He said he hoped his team had learned a lesson about high rankings.

"We learned a lesson early in the semester. We went to a scrimmage and walked in being cocky and talking. South Plains beat us in the scrimmage. Hopefully we learned to do our talking after the game," he said.

Chadwick admitted he is somewhat surprised the success his team has had so far. "We always expect to win here at Howard, but I never expected for us to be undefeated. But because we had a 20-something day break, it's like two seasons."

The Lady Hawks will be playing two teams that was playing very well before the Christmas break. Angelina, 9-2, has a seven game winning streak while Blinn, 6-7, has a five-game winning streak.

Chadwick said his lineup will be Yumecca White and LeKisha Wiley at the guards. The inside personnel will consist of Becky Barnes, Anita Wright, Regina Huff, Annette Robinson and Angel Spinks.

White is the conference's fifth leading scorer, averaging 17 points per game. Robinson is averaging 13 points, Huff 11 and Wiley 10 points.

49ers quarterback nets another honor

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Steve Young became an overnight success in his eighth NFL season.

A Tampa Bay castoff who came to San Francisco in 1987 as Joe Montana's backup, Young put together an extraordinary year in his first full season as the 49ers' starter.

On Wednesday, he was rewarded with his selection as The Associated Press 1992 NFL Most Valuable Player.

Young, the league's passing leader and a central figure in the 49ers' return to the playoffs with a league-best 14-2 record, received 56 of 80 votes cast by a nationwide panel of media members.

Young led the league in passing with a 107 rating, completed a league-high 66.7 percent of his passes and threw 25 touchdown passes, also tops in the NFL. His 3,465 passing yards were second only to Miami's Dan Marino.

Running backs Barry Foster of Pittsburgh and Emmitt Smith of Dallas were next in the balloting with 11 and 10 votes, respectively.

Sterling Sharpe of Green Bay, who set a league record with 108 receptions, got two votes.

NFL, players agree on labor deal

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Don't look for a Barry Bonds equivalent in the new world of NFL free agency — someone like Emmitt Smith jumping the Cowboys and holding up 25 teams for pro football's first $10 million a year contract.

Look instead for stars like Smith, Steve Young, Barry Foster and Derrick Thomas to be amply rewarded by their teams, to finally earn more than untested rookies, who are now subject to a $2 million per year salary cap.

The same teams to remain at the top — the ones with good front offices and scouting staffs.

"It'll be a new world," commissioner Paul Tagliabue said after the league and its players finally settled their 5-year-old labor dispute on Wednesday.

"It'll be very different in terms of how clubs have to operate and plan, develop their squads."

But not that different, not like baseball, where rosters seem to turn over by 50 percent each year.

To begin with, the key part of the NFL agreement that allows each team to protect a "franchise player," will keep most of the top quarterbacks and defensive impact players where they are. Young, San Francisco's quarterback, is supposed to be a free agent next season, but he is certain to be either a franchise player or one of two that each team is allowed to protect.

"It's not a great system for our office," said agent Leigh Steinberg, who represents many of the NFL's top quarterbacks, including Young, Troy Aikman, Jeff George and Warren Moon.

Moreover, while baseball players now routinely have 15- to 20-year careers, only quarterbacks and offensive linemen regularly last beyond a decade in the NFL. Most players are lucky to last that long, particularly running backs, who average six or seven.

Example: Emmitt Smith, whose contract expires Feb. 1, is a three-year player who hasn't met the time requirements for free agency. So the Cowboys can match any offer and sign him to, say, a four-year contract that will run out when he's 28 and probably past his prime. At the same time, they can wait another year to designate quarterback Troy Aikman as "the franchise."

Example II: Defensive end Neil Smith of the Chiefs, a 26-year-old who's just reaching his peak. He's a free agent this year, but is sure to be protected while Kansas City waits for Derrick Thomas' contract to expire so it can designate him the franchise player.

So it's likely that few superstars will change teams in the next two or three years. The notable exceptions will be the 16 players who were plaintiffs in the various lawsuits filed against the NFL. They can neither be franchise players nor can they be protected.

Cavs hand Bulls 2nd straight loss

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's news when Michael Jordan slumps or the Chicago Bulls lose. When both things happen in two straight games, that's headline material.

Jordan had 23 points, but hit just 10 of 22 shots from the floor Wednesday night as the Bulls, losing for the second time in as many nights, were blown out by the Cleveland Cavaliers 117-95.

Jordan missed his last seven shots before leaving the game at Richfield, Ohio, with six minutes to go and the Bulls trailing by 19. He had missed seven of his last eight the previous night in Chicago's 91-88 home loss to the Lakers.

Meanwhile, Cleveland won for the 11th time in 13 games as Mark Price made certain the Cavaliers took advantage of Jordan's cold spell by scoring 30 points — 23 of them in the second half.

Brad Daugherty added 24 points and 12 rebounds and Price 13 assists for the Cavaliers, while Scottie Pippen led Chicago with 24 points.

Brett will return one more year

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — George Brett will return to the Kansas City Royals for a 20th season, according to a published report.

Brett will announce his return at a news conference Thursday, The Kansas City Star reported in its Thursday editions.

Brett, who got his 3,000th hit last season, said he has not told general manager Herk Robinson or owner Ewing Kauffman about his decision.

The 39-year-old designated hitter had been mulling whether to retire, or come back since the season ended in October.

Brett said he spoke with several present and former players, including Hall of Fame catcher Johnny Bench and former Royals pitcher Dan Quisenberry, during the off-season, but his decision was influenced more by positive reaction from fans.

Lemieux will miss a couple of weeks

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH — Because of his aching back, Mario Lemieux will not be back with the Pittsburgh Penguins for a couple of weeks.

Lemieux, the NHL's scoring leader, was told by doctors Wednesday to rest his bad back for about 2½ weeks. Tests showed no major problems, and he was given Jan. 25 as a target date to resume practicing.

Lemieux got the bad news on the same day that Wayne Gretzky, the NHL's career scoring leader, returned for the Los Angeles Kings from back trouble. Gretzky played his first game of the season and 1,000th of his career after being out with a herniated thoracic disk.

This season, Lemieux has 39 goals and 65 assists in 40 games. He reached the 100-point mark in his 38th game, tying Gretzky for the fourth-fastest 100-point season in NHL history.

Knight wins No. 600

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

If you want to know what Bob Knight thought about his 600th win as a college coach, you'll need a camouflage outfit and a gun.

Knight skipped the postgame news conference Wednesday night after No. 5 Indiana beat No. 8 Iowa 75-67 to make him the youngest of the 15 coaches to ever reach that victory milestone. Word did filter down, however, that he planned a hunting trip today.

Knight has a 600-212 mark in 28 seasons, and his teams in 22 seasons at Indiana are 498-162. At 52, he is one year younger than Henry Iba was when he won No. 600.

No. 1 Duke 110, Clemson 67
The Blue Devils (10-0) tied the school record with their 23rd straight win in rebounding from the overtime victory over Oklahoma on Monday night. The loss was the worst for Clemson (9-1) since a 44-point loss to North Carolina in 1970 and the Tigers' ninth in a row at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

No. 4 Kansas 103, Wichita State 54
Center Eric Pauley missed his first shot and then made his last 10 to finish with 20 points and lead the Jayhawks (10-1).

No. 13 Arkansas 90, Mississippi 78
Scotty Thurman's 34 points led the Razorbacks (10-1), who trailed by as many as 12 points in opening defense of their Southeastern Conference title.

College Hoops

Minnesota 64, No. 14 Michigan State 57

The Gophers (9-1) opened their home Big Ten schedule with a win over a ranked team for the fifth straight year. Jayson Walton scored all 14 of his points in the second half for Minnesota.

Memphis State 84, No. 18 Vanderbilt 78

Anfernee Hardaway had 26 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists for his second straight triple-double and the Tigers (7-5) snapped the Commodores' 10-game winning streak with the help of a school-record 22 steals. Billy McCaffrey had 26 points for the visiting Commodores (11-2), who led 47-36 after opening the second half with a 9-0 run.

No. 25 Virginia 80, No. 23 Florida State 76

The Cavaliers (8-0) extended the nation's third-longest winning streak to 13 games in the ACC opener for both teams. Cory Alexander scored 11 of his 23 points in the final 7:40, including a 3-pointer with 1:01 left that broke the game's final tie.

No. 24 Pittsburgh 85, Miami 78

The Panthers (9-1, 2-1 Big East) won their seventh straight game behind the 25 points of Jerry McCullough and Chris McNeal's 13 points and 14 rebounds. Miami (3-7, 1-2) was playing its first game since its shocking win over Georgetown.

Lady Buffs still in first; Buffs lose a close one

Lady Buffalos defeat McCamey

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The Stanton Lady Buffalos remained in first place in the District 6-2A basketball race by defeating the McCamey Lady Badgers 49-38 Tuesday night in Stanton.

The win gives Stanton a 3-0 district mark and 12-5 overall record. Stanton led from start to finish, taking a 15-7 first quarter lead and stretching it to 23-11 at the half. "It was close enough for us not to relax too much," said Stanton coach Frank Riney. "We had a good night defensively. Lupe Chapa was in double figures in steals and Sande Bundas had 12 rebounds.

"At the end of the third quarter our defense began to wear them down. The fullcourt pressure started to make them turn the ball over. It will be like that every game we play. We're pretty even in this district. Every game will be a real scrap."

Buffs lose by three to McCamey

The Stanton Buffalos started their district season on a tough note, falling to McCamey 46-43. The loss drops Stanton to 6-9 overall.

The game was close all the way as Stanton led 26-25 at the half. But the Badgers outscored the Buffalos 21-15 in the second half to come away with the win. Poor foul shooting hurt the Buffs down the stretch as they missed four foul shots the last two minutes of the game.

Stanton was down by seven points with just over three minutes left. The Buffs pulled to within one on two shots by sophomore post forward Eric Martell and a basket by Jeremy Stallings. Next McCamey came back with a basket and Stanton turned the ball over. The Buffs then missed two free shots and Johnny Titsworth's three-point try at the buzzer was no good.

Stanton coach Doug Gordon praised the play of his underclassmen. "Our sophomores stepped up and played well," he said. "It was a heartbreaker.

Tournament action

Lady Buffs finish fourth

HERALD STAFF REPORT

BIG LAKE — Stanton Lady Buffalos ran their record to 11-5 for the season with a fourth place finish in the Reagan County tournament over the holidays.

Stanton opened with a 80-44 victory over Crane. Sophomore guard Laura Herm almost pulled off a triple-double with 29 points, 11 assists and seven rebounds. Kindra Woodfin contributed 16 points and nine rebounds while Sande Bundas had 13 points and 15 rebounds. Herm and Lupe Chapa led the defensive effort, combining for 18 steals.

The Lady Buffs lost in the second round to eventual tournament champion Ballinger, 43-33. Herm was leading scorer with 11 points, followed by Bundas with seven.

In the third place game the Lady Buffs were defeated by district foe Eldorado 56-53. Stanton battled back from a 16-point deficit early in the third quarter to take the lead Bundas, a sophomore post player, scored 12 points. She and senior forward Stacy Tollison, also with 12, were the only Lady Buffs in double figures.

The Lady Buffs go on the road Friday to play Ozona at 6:30 p.m. Riney says Ozona plays the same type game Stanton does. "It will be a tough contest. They're philosophy is about like ours, fullcourt, man-to-man defense. One edge for us is we have wider varsity of shooters. If we shoot decent and hit our free throws, we can win. Defensively we're about the same."

we've been playing of lot of them lately. We're 6-9 and we've only been out of two games.

"They played a giving defense on Jeremy. There were two men on him, either double-teammng or running a diamond-in-one all night. We had a chance to win it, I can't fault the effort. We're playing about as well as we can play, we've just got to get better."

Stallings, who's averaging 25 points per game, led Stanton with 18. McCamey's Andy Stinson was the only other player in double figures, with 13.

Stanton will play in Ozona Friday at 8 p.m.

Notable deaths

Dizzy Gillespie

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. — The death of Dizzy Gillespie silenced an original — a musical one-of-a-kind in everything from his cool bebop rhythms to his stage antics, his bullfrog cheeks and his bent trumpet.

The legendary horn player died at age 75 Wednesday at Englewood Hospital and Medical Center, where he was being treated for pancreatic cancer. His music was playing when he died, said Virginia Wicks, his spokeswoman.

"He must know that he has given more pleasure to more people than most people get to do in a lifetime," said jazz vocalist Joe Williams. "Watching him was like watching a magician."

Gillespie stood in the forefront of jazz for decades, giving shape in the 1940s to the raucous jazz reinvention he named bebop and later merging Latin rhythms with mainstream jazz. Bandleader Woody Herman ranked Gillespie with Louis Armstrong as the most influential jazz musicians of all time.

"He is a father of modern jazz," said jazz vibraphonist Lionel Hampton. "There are lots of music styles in jazz but only one Dizzy." "Once every 500 years a musician comes along who invents a new form of music. Dizzy Gillespie belongs in this category of rare musical genius," said singer Tony Bennett.

"He never played a bad riff or a bad chord," said New Orleans trumpeter Al Hirt. "And he knew that horn upside down. Oh man, he knew his instrument."

He is survived by his wife. They had no children. A private funeral is scheduled for Friday.

Rudolf Nureyev

PARIS — Rudolf Nureyev, the charismatic Soviet dancer whose daring dash to freedom opened a brilliant career that brought ballet to audiences around the world, died Wednesday. He had been suffering from AIDS.

Nureyev, 54, died at a Paris hospital surrounded by family and friends of "a cardiac complication following a cruel illness," said his physician, Michel Canesi.

Nureyev was a passionate dancer, classically trained and with the highest technical skills, but bringing a fire and showmanship to every appearance. "He passed away in his sleep, in total calm, without suffering," Canesi said.

Dancers and directors said he was one of the dance greats, personally responsible for spreading appreciation of ballet in the West and shattering the barrier between classical ballet and modern dance. His defection in 1961 stunned the world. In one of his first performances in the West, the audience's hysterical ovation lasted longer than the eight-minute dance.

"We knew for the last 48 hours that we were close to the end," said Canesi, who was also present at Nureyev's death. "But he was an extraordinary man, he never complained. He always shook my hand firmly, though toward the end I felt that he was communicating with his eyes."

Also at his bedside were Nureyev's two sisters, Rosa and Rosida, two nieces and a nephew. Two friends, ex-dancer Marika Besabrazova and Gloria Venturi, an Italian pharmaceutical magnate, were also there.

Kevin McKenzie, artistic director of the American Ballet Theater, said Nureyev's contribution to the world stage was inestimable.

"More than anyone else, he was responsible for not only bringing ballet to the awareness of the general public but for singlehandedly creating legions of dance fans over four decades," McKenzie said. "We have truly lost one of our giants." "He dares anything," American choreographer Martha Graham said in 1975. "He has the courage to do it, to break the pattern that the audience has made for him."

Russian television declared him "one of the greatest dancers of the century."

Nureyev was the Kirov Ballet's leading dancer in 1961 when he became the first Soviet star to defect, making a dramatic run for freedom in a Paris airport.

It was Nureyev's wish to remain in France and he will be buried in the Russian cemetery just outside Paris, probably Tuesday, Canesi said.

Dallas' five-star Routh Street Cafe closes its doors

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Less than a month after it was honored as one of the nation's top 18 restaurants by the American Automobile Association, the Routh Street Cafe has closed.

Briefs

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Clinton is facing increasingly troublesome deficit figures as he crafts his first budget and fleshes out plans for revitalizing the nation's economy.

Clinton said the new budget numbers President Bush released Wednesday show the nation's annual deficits could soar above $400 billion a year if left unchecked and demonstrate the need to "replace the legacy of debt with a new era of investment and fiscal responsibility."

The president-elect summoned leaders of his economic team to Little Rock today to discuss strategies for reworking the final Bush administration budget and promoting long-term economic might.

At a briefing Wednesday, Clinton's spokesman George Stephanopoulos was asked repeatedly how Clinton could make good on his campaign promise to halve the deficit in four years in light of the latest deficit projections.

The restaurant unexpectedly closed Wednesday after restaurateur John Dayton and co-owner chef Stephan Pyles, former Big Spring resident, said they could no longer afford to operate the restaurant without downgrading the standards that earned its five-star reputation.

"We weren't willing to compromise," Dayton said. "Obviously I feel a major loss. Routh Street has been a wonderful business."

The restaurant had been open nine years and was honored in December by the AAA with a Five Diamond Award. Last June, Food & Wine magazine named it among the nation's best 25 restaurants.

Pyles established himself as a rising star in culinary circles while offering diners combinations such as grilled catfish with smoked peppers and mint marigold or free-range chicken with black bean sauce and avocado-tomatillo relish.

"It was one of the first New American cuisine restaurants that opened in the early '80s when the movement really got started," said John Mariani, a food and travel writer for Esquire magazine. "It had an enormous national reputation, which had been built over several years."

Until the restaurant established an a la carte menu in 1990, a five course dinner cost $47, but the persistent sluggish economy took its toll on the restaurant.

"Fortunately, we have a second Dallas restaurant (Baby Routh), which was at the forefront of these changing trends," Dayton said. "And it's our intent now to marshal our energies and resources to the continued successful operation of Baby Routh."

Clive O'Donoghue, co-owner of the New American restaurant Actuelle, said the closing shocked him.

"It's a real shame to see them close," he said.

Shock value

Graphic photos, frank talk warn of alcohol's dangers

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

An Austin-based Emergency Medical Service team shocked and informed Greenwood school students Tuesday with graphic photos and explicit discussion about alcohol-related fatalities.

"I feel like alcohol is our number one problem with kids," said Karen Dickerson, Greenwood school nurse and Drug-free School coordinator. "They come back on Monday talking about the wild, drunken parties."

The nationally-acclaimed DWI Awareness Program was sponsored by the City of Austin Emergency Medical Services/Star Flight group, which has conducted the program throughout the state.

'It made me realize that I should never get into a car with someone who has been drinking, and to encourage others not to.'

Tomi Pheil, Greenwood High junior on the school's DWI program

Statistics about driving while intoxicated (DWI) fatalities appeared to be as shocking to the youths as slides of traffic accident deaths.

About 60 percent of driver fatalities are alcohol-related, said

Alcohol facts

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

The DWI program at Greenwood High School dispelled myths and gave facts about alcohol to hundreds of junior high and high school students.

Jim Persons, an Austin emergency paramedic, said the facts are the most sobering lesson in the program.

"Kids are listening," Persons said. "They are finally being able to listen to the information and see the results and say no to drinking."

Some facts from the program handouts include:

• Heavy drinking can decrease testosterone production and cause impotence.

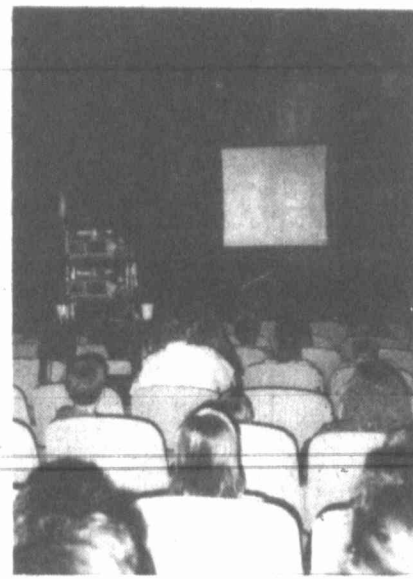

• A person who drinks compulsively, despite adverse consequences, is addicted.

• Alcohol tolerance means a person needs an ever-increasing amount of alcohol to produce the same level of intoxication.

• Drinking is progressive. As inhibitions decrease, a person is likely to drink more.

• There is no safe level of alcohol use; research shows dangerous physical effects from even small doses of alcohol.

• One 12-ounce can of beer, one 4-ounce glass of wine, and one 1 1/4-ounce of distilled liquor all contain roughly the same amount of ethyl alcohol.

In the photo above, Greenwood junior high students watch DWI program slides depicting graphic crash scenes to inform them of the dangers of drinking and driving. In the photo at right, Austin paramedics Jim Persons and Nash Dowdle (left and center), part of the team conducting the DWI Programs, are shown with Karen Dickerson, Greenwood schools drug-free program coordinator. Above, right, is a flyer that illustrated the program's theme.

Drinking and Driving

Nash Dowdle, an EMS emergency paramedic. More than 12,000 people die each year as a result of drinking and driving, he said.

Nationwide, more than 4,000 teens are killed and another 110,000 are badly injured each year in car crashes involving alcohol, according to the program. From a typical high school class of 475 this year, two students will be injured or killed in a DWI-related incident.

Tomi Pheil, a Greenwood High School junior, said the program taught her a revealing lesson about drinking and driving.

"I knew it was a problem, but music choreographed with pictures of actual, often bloody, crash scenes — some eliciting audible gasps from the audience. The paramedics narrated, describing the tragedy of lost lives.

Paramedics gave the legal intoxication level for blood alcohol content as .1 and over — one drop of alcohol for every 100 drops of blood.

"If we just saved one kid through this program, we've done our job," Nash said. "It's effective."

Now is a good time to begin applying for college aid

By LISA JENNINGS
Scripps Howard News Service

Attention college-bound students: It's never too early to apply for financial aid in 1993.

The financial aid application season began Jan. 1. That's also the day when several new changes in the federal student aid program go into effect.

The changes are the result of the Higher Education Reauthorization Act adopted by Congress in July. The expanded legislation offers financial aid to more middle-income families that were previously denied scholarships, grants, or guaranteed student loans because of income limits.

The bill, however, does not increase funding for federal grants. Given that state and campus-based student aid programs are also stretched tight this year, students will be competing for limited funds to help pay their college tuition.

College officials say the new legislation offers students both good news and bad news as they face rising college costs. Nationally, college tuition jumped an

'Delivery time may be longer (because of new financial aid laws) The earlier students apply, the better.'

Art Weeden, college financial aid director average of 11 percent at public universities and 7 percent at private colleges in 1992. Another increase is likely in the fall.

The good news is that the required forms for federal aid will be simpler to fill out — and free.

The bad news is that more students will probably have to rely on loans rather than grants.

And because schools will be struggling with new regulations, students may see longer lines and a slower turnaround on financial aid applications.

Following are some key changes in the federal financial aid program that parents and students should know. — More middle-income families — a distinction that will depend on individual circumstances — will be eligible for federal Pell grants.

The maximum Pell grant award, however, will drop slightly from the 1992 high of $2,400 to $2,300 in 1993.

— The $4,000 limit on Parent Loans has been eliminated. That means parents can borrow up to the full cost of tuition.

— All students are now eligible for unsubsidized loans — regardless of income. But because the loans are unsubsidized, students must begin repaying principle immediately.

— Home equity will no longer be considered as part of family income in determining eligibility for loans.

What's expected from the student is also likely to vary among private schools, said Art Weeden, Rhodes College's financial aid director.

"Delivery time may be longer," Weeden said. "The earlier students apply, the better."

Millionaire's program aimed at giving chance for college

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

New Orleans oil millionaire Patrick F. Taylor has a plan — already adopted by 10 states — to give every qualified high school graduate the financial aid that will allow him or her to attend college.

Nine out of 10 people believe they will need some form of financial aid to get their children through college, Taylor told Sandy Granville Sheehy in an article in the current issue of Town & Country. He added: "And this is in a society where 30 percent of the jobs require college degrees."

Estimates for the most recent academic year indicate only 9 percent of high school graduates will actually complete four years of college.

Taylor said equal educational opportunity should mean equal access to higher education. Instead, he said, "we limit college to the affluent, the brilliant and the lucky."

Taylor, 55, sole owner of Taylor Energy, wants to change that with the Taylor Plan, which guarantees that any needy high school graduate who qualifies will be able to obtain state-funded tuition to his or her state university.

Since Louisiana became the first state to enact the Taylor Plan into law in 1989, nine more states have committed to the plan, and Taylor hopes another 10 will sign up by the end of 1993. Taylor estimates that if every state adopted the Taylor Plan, it would cost a total of $5 billion a year.

"Society pays double for non-productive individuals," he said. "We may need to extend funds and services to them, and we're also losing the taxes and contributions they might have made."

Especially for kids and their families.

First Ladies and the Presidents

Soon we will have a new first lady in the White House.

Where did the title "first lady" come from?

It was first used by a reporter in a news story in 1861.

Today, it is the title that we usually give to the president's wife.

Sometimes other women have filled the role of first lady.

James Buchanan was our only president never to marry. He asked his niece, Harriet Lane, to help out.

Some presidents were widowers who asked friends or family members to take over the first lady's role.

This issue is based on the exhibit "First Ladies: Political Role and Public Image," a permanent exhibition at the National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C.

Deathbed promise is one some would break — Jacqueline Bigar

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Tough Decision," who had made a deathbed promise to his brother, "Ray," to tell their grandparents that Ray was gay and had died of AIDS, was a bummer.

In the first place, if Ray had wanted his grandparents to know that he was gay and was dying of AIDS, he should have told them himself; he had plenty of time. It was unfair of Ray to lay that kind of burden on his brother.

Abby, you told "Tough Decision," "You made a deathbed promise to your brother, and you owe it to him to keep your promise. The truth never hurt anyone — only lies hurt." Bull! You came up with a trite parable of an answer.

"Tough Decision" made his own best analysis: "Ray is gone now, and revealing the truth isn't going to bring him back, and I hate to hurt our grandparents by revealing something like that."

Who said deathbed promises are sacred and must be honored at all costs? And where did you learn that the truth never hurt anybody? Deathbed promises are made in times of stress, and they are not necessarily binding. Then you went on to say that Ray had his reasons for wanting his grandparents to know that he was gay. That is ridiculous! What good would it do their grandparents to know? It would only hurt them.

You blew it, Abby. You really blew it big time! — CHARLES PIPER, RANCHO PALOS VERDES

DEAR CHARLES: All right, already. You and several hundred other readers wrote to tell me I blew it. But this is the way I saw it: Ray's grandparents adored him. Ray was a decent, respectable, lovable young man, but he didn't have the courage to tell his grandparents that he was gay because — as he said — "they were old-fashioned" and wouldn't understand that being gay was not a choice. But at the end, Ray wanted his grandparents to know that a person could be decent, respectable and lovable — and also be gay.

DEAR ABBY: This is very late, but better late than never. Two years ago, I acted on your suggestion, and as my birthday gift to my father, I wrote a letter telling him how much he meant to me. After he read the letter, he told me, with tears in his eyes, that it was the greatest gift I could have given him. (I shed a few tears myself.)

Four months ago, my father passed away suddenly of a massive heart attack. He had always been in the best of health and it was a terrible shock for all of us. He was only 60.

It has been very difficult for my mother, but at least Dad died knowing how much I loved him, for which I am very grateful.

Abby, please keep reminding your readers that life is short, so now is the time to get right with the people you love; clear the air, clean out the cobwebs, and tell them how much they mean to you. You never know when you will be called home. You may use my name. — LISA BUTLER, COLUMBIA, S.C.

DEAR LISA: My condolences on the loss of your beloved father. Thank you for writing.

FOR FRIDAY, JAN. 8, 1993

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What appears to be a disaster could be exactly that if you don't take immediate action. Now is the moment for you to go where angels fear to tread. Tonight, too over your success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Confirm all appointments and review any misunderstandings. Let go of your rigidity and move into a freer situation. Knowing what you really want will help you make choices. Tonight, congratulate yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you've been robbing Peter to pay Paul, expect it to all come down quickly. You need to look at finances carefully and make sure you are on solid ground. Be more aboveboard with a partner about what you want. Tonight, have a heart to heart with your best friend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Know you have what it takes to deal with rebellious partners. Before you point an accusing finger, you need to hold up the mirror. How much have you provoked here? Honor your feelings. Tonight, beam.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The tension might be too much for you, and it might be appropriate for you to pull back and take some time away from it all. Consider reorganizing. Be realistic about your capabilities and your needs. Tonight, be good and stay in.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You might be sorely disappointed at first, as a coveted goal seemingly slips away. Be more realistic and look at the real problem. You might need to rebuild on a stronger foundation. A friendship needs more trust. Tonight, the more friends, the better.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Circumstances could push you to the point where you shake your head in total disbelief. Be honest with yourself about what has and has not worked. You might need to gain a better sense of what you need. Tonight, talk to a trusted friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may need to check out your sources before you jump to conclusions. Be open to different thought processes and ideas. Be ready to take off at a minute's notice. Risks, a new opportunity and more loving self-expression are emphasized. Tonight, try an exotic restaurant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You might no longer be able to keep the lid on a personal situation. Let go of what isn't working and you discover that all pulls together quickly and effectively. Listen to your inner voice about a partnership. Tonight, consider some smuggling.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although you might feel you are in command of our ship, a partner certainly does challenge you. Understand where another is coming from. Lay back, maintain a sense of humor and it all works out. Tonight, go along with plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You might want to throw up your hands in pure despair and declare you have had enough. Listen to your instincts around a child or loved one who depends on you. Take necessary action to maintain your status and position. Tonight, try a massage.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Know that presently the unexpected will occur with your interpersonal relations. A loved one might be downright ornery, and you might feel frustrated. Be secure and let others seek you out. Tonight, be a wild thing.
