No delay

It was back-to-school on-time for Big Spring students like Vanessa Lerma, who walked to school with the sun peering from light, scattered morning clouds Tuesday.

Spotter training session planned

In cooperation with the National Weather Service, Big Spring-Howard County Emergency Services will sponsor a basic severe weather spotter training session Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the conference room of Building 1106 at McMahan-Wrinkle Airpark.

The session will last about three hours and includes topics such as the NWS warning systems, concepts of severe storm structure and formation, identifying tornadoes and other forms of severe weather, procedures for reporting severe weather to NWS and safety tips.

For more information call 263-1380.

Essay contest for seniors offered

A essay contest for senior D-FY-IT members is being sponsored by Drug Free Youth in Texas and Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

Essays are due to Big Spring High School Principal Kent Bowerman by Jan. 15. The topic is "Why being drug free makes me a better person."

Essays need to be 500 words or less, typed or printed legibly and double-spaced. The entrant's name should be only on the cover page submitted with the entry, not on the actual essay.

A combined total of $1,200 in college scholarships will go to the top three winners. All participants will receive a merit certificate. Nalley-Pickle & Welch will donate $500 for first place; Downtown Lions Club will donate $400 for second; and First National Bank will award a $300 scholarship to third place.

For more information call Danny Fienken at 267-6331 or Stan Parker, D-FY-IT sponsor and coordinator, at 263-8311.

Icy roads lead to about 15 accidents

By MARTHA E. FLORES
Staff Writer

Drivers unaccustomed to icy road conditions contributed to more than 15 accidents Monday morning, but the most serious accident was alcohol-related.

Holder Watkins, Hobbs N.M., driving a 1992 Buick Roadmaster eastbound on the westbound lane of Interstate 20, collided with a late model Buick Century and two 18-wheelers, around 12:30 p.m. Monday.

"It is believed Mr. Watkins got on Interstate 20 on the off ramp near U.S. Highway 87," said Trooper Jim Lasater, Texas Department of Public Safety. "He travelled about one mile and half on the wrong side of the road."

In the westbound Buick were Howard and Verda Kauffman of Indiana, whose view was obstructed by a van travelling in front of them. "Watkins hit them nearly head on," Lasater said. "There were no signs

Iraq makes third trip into Kuwait

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

KUWAIT — Iraq today made its third consecutive incursion into disputed territory to remove equipment from a naval base it built, scorning the United Nations' condemnation of the forays.

RELATED STORY — 3A

"They are demolishing buildings and taking whatever they can — windows, cables, everything," said Abdel Latif Kabbaaj, spokesman for the U.N. observation force along the Iraq-Kuwait border.

He said about 150 unarmed Iraqis in civilian clothes took part in the operation. Iraq has permission to remove equipment from the base, but has repeatedly failed to get the required advance approval from the U.N. Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission to do so.

The raids express Iraq's contempt for the border that was redrawn by the U.N. after the Persian Gulf War. The new border placed the Iraqi naval base in Kuwaiti territory, leaving Iraq naval facilities only in Basra, where wreckage from the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq war blocks access to the Persian Gulf.

Iraqis crossed the frontier Jan. 2 in an unsuccessful attempt to retrieve equipment. Daily raids began Sunday, the day after Iraq apparently capitulated to a demand by the U.S.-led allies that surface-to-air missiles be removed from southern Iraq's "no-fly" zone.

The U.N. Security Council condemned the raids on Monday and demanded that Iraq return four anti-air missiles seized in Sunday's raid. But the non-binding statement by the 15-nation council contained on-SUMBURGH, Shetland Islands — Savage weather tore the grounded tanker Braer into at least three pieces and spilled most of its remaining oil into the North Sea today, officials said.

"She's a total loss, that's for sure," said Geert Koffeman of the Dutch salvage firm hired to try to save the tanker, which ran aground on this rocky coast one week ago. "It is obvious most of the oil has now gone."

Koffeman said the stern of the ship, which had already lost about half its 24.6 million-gallon cargo by Monday, had rolled 30 degrees toward shore, and the deck was awash.

George Sutherland, Shetland's marine operations director, told a news conference that there was

The bow of the oil tanker Braer is almost submerged in heavy seas which finally pounded the tanker to pieces in the Bay of Quendale, Shetland Islands Tuesday. The tanker's cargo of 24.6 million gallons of Norwegian oil bound for Canada is threatening the island's wildlife and inhabitants.

"no evidence of severe oil slicks."

But Koffeman said that the Norwegian light crude remaining on board would likely be measured in the thousands instead of millions of gallons.

"It may be trapped in small compartments but that is all. However, we will still continue the operation as long as there is a possibility that oil is inside."

Hurricane-force winds of 75 mph raked across Sumburgh Head, with gusts to 95 mph. Rain, sleet and snow have limited visibility, and lightning during the night caused brief power surges.

The Liberian-registered tanker had run aground at the south tip of Mainland, the largest of the Shetland Islands, after becoming disabled in similarly violent weather.

In the worst spill in U.S. history, more than the 11 million gallons of heavy crude was dumped by the Exxon Valdez into Alaska's Prince William Sound in 1989.

Twenty-foot gushers could be seen spewing from the tankers deck on Monday.

Already the carcasses of more than 700 birds, as well as seals and otters, have washed up on the shores of the island. Fishing grounds and salmon farms were closed by the government.

Miles of green hills are now covered in oily sea spray, crops are contaminated and sheep have been moved away from the coast.

While rescue efforts have focused on animals, those who live on the remote and rocky island have quietly worried about their own health following a week of exposed to the oil.

County audit receives 'unqualified opinion; award

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Howard County received high marks on its use of funds, according to a financial audit review by Guy White, a Big Spring certified public accountant.

White presented his findings at Monday's meeting of the Commissioner's Court.

After reviewing the county budget, White gave an "unqualified" opinion, meaning there were no problems identified in the budget, said County Auditor Jackie Olson.

The "unqualified" opinion is the best approval rating the auditor could make, Olson said.

Olson, through her preparation and presentation of County financial data, has received a certificate of achievement for excellence in financial reporting, awarded by the Government Finance Officers Association, of Chicago.

"The Certificate of Achievement is the highest form of recognition in the area of governmental accounting and financial reporting, and its attainment represents a significant accomplishment by a government and its management," writes Fred Lantz, a public information officer in the GFOA's Washington D.C. office.

In the audit, Olson and her staff calculated the ending fund balance for the last fiscal year, ending Sept. 30, 1992, at $3,297,834. This amount is a somewhat greater than the previous year's $3,109,654.

Funds invested in certificates of deposit, earning interest for the county, were slightly over $800,000 the previous year and $1.9 million for this year according to the audit.

According to Lantz's letter, Olson's office "has been judged by an impartial panel to meet the high standards of the program including demonstrating a constructive 'spirit of full disclosure' to clearly communicate its financial story and motivate potential users and user groups to read (the financial report)."

Legislators convening today with $1.8 billion more for budget Gain still leaves a projected shortfall of $3 billion for services, programs provided

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — State legislators who convene Tuesday will have $1.8 billion more in state tax revenues to spend while writing their 1994-95 budget, Comptroller John Sharp reported Monday.
That gain still leaves a projected shortfall of about $3 billion when compared with maintaining current levels of state services and programs delivered in the same manner.
But Sharp said he is convinced state leaders mean it when they say no new taxes.
"I think there's no question the commitment is there by the leadership of the Legislature and the governor that there won't be a tax increase next time," Sharp said.

Before the Legislature convenes, the comptroller is required to estimate how much money the state will take in for its next two-year budget period.
Sharp said Monday that the 1994-95 budget cycle will take in $36.4 billion in general state revenues — most taxes, lottery proceeds and other income. That's a $1.8 billion, or 5.2 percent, increase over the 1992-93 figure of $34.6 billion.
Adding in all other monies — including federal funds and some special-purpose state funds — the total state income for 1994-95 will be $65.3 billion, a $3 billion or 4.8 percent increase over 1992-93's $62.3 billion.

Highlights and other major developments Monday at the Capitol:
SCHOOL FINANCE
State District Judge F. Scott McCown told Texas officials to get ready to stop state spending on public schools if lawmakers fail to pass a constitutional school finance plan by June 1. But McCown said he won't keep school districts from spending their local property tax money after the court deadline.

ANNEX OPENED
Officials cut the ribbon on the underground Capitol extension — known to tenants as "The Hole" — the day before the 1993 Legislature convenes. The $63 million, four-level, 615,000-square-foot annex north of the Capitol will provide space for 111 House and Senate offices, 16 rooms for public hearings, a 350-seat auditorium, a cafeteria and a two-level parking garage.
APPOINTMENTS

Gov. Ann Richards appointed Anne Shelmire Wynne of Austin to the Texas Transportation Commission. Ms. Wynne, 39, who has chaired the state General Services Commission, is the first woman to serve on the transportation board. Richards also designated David Bernsen, 42, of Beaumont, as the panel's chairman.
STATE AGENCIES
Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says he is backing legislation to help make better use of Texans' trash. Mauro said a bill to be sponsored by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, includes provisions for a ban on yard waste at landfills, creation of economic zones for developing recycling markets, a collection program for abandoned auto batteries and up to a 1-cent fee on containers that aren't refillable.

AND...
In 1981, the oil and gas industry in Texas contributed 27 percent of state tax revenues. By 1995, that industry will account for only 6 percent, the state comptroller reports.

Jury selection begun in Lott murder case

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMARILLO — In a courtroom 350 miles from the Fort Worth courtroom where two men were killed and three others wounded last year, proceedings began against the accused gunman.
Prospective jurors received instructions Monday in the capital murder trial of George Lott. Jury selection was expected to begin this morning.
Lott, a non-licensed attorney representing himself in the case, ignored photographers Monday as he walked to a defense table in the Potter County Courthouse.
State District Judge Sharen Wilson scheduled the media session Monday so that photos could be shot of main participants in the case. Beginning with jury selection, still and video cameras will be barred from the courtroom.
Ms. Wilson last month moved the trial to Amarillo, her hometown, because of extensive media coverage in Fort Worth.
Lott is accused of killing assistant Tarrant County District Attorney Chris Marshall, 41, and Dallas defense attorney John Edwards, 38, on a highway last year.
Two judges and another prosecutor were wounded.
The gunman, a spectator in the courtroom of the 2nd Court of Appeals the morning of July 1, without warning began firing a 9mm handgun. He killed Marshall in the courtroom and fatally shot Edwards on a stairwell as the victim tried to reach help.
The gunman walked out of the courthouse unimpeded.
Lott surrendered at WFAA-TV studios in Dallas about six hours later, telling reporters he was the gunman and was upset over a custody case involving his son.
Lott also blamed his actions on his disillusionment with the court system over the handling of his divorce and allegations that he sexually assaulted the boy.
Testimony is expected to begin Feb. 8.
Alan Levy, an assistant Tarrant County district attorney, said the state has lined up more than 200 potential witnesses.
Prosecutors have said they will seek the death penalty if Lott is convicted.

Magazine's future in doubt after U.S. Supreme Court ruling

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — The U.S. Supreme Court has dropped the big one on Soldier of Fortune magazine.
The high court on Monday let stand a $4.3 million verdict in favor of two sons of a Georgia man who was murdered by a contract killer hired through a personal ad in the magazine.
Publisher Robert K. Brown said he doesn't have that kind of money and will have to give the magazine to the plaintiffs if he can't work out another arrangement.
Founded in 1974 as a journal for adventurers and military enthusiasts, Soldier of Fortune has had to fight lawsuits alleging that its personals section served as a billboard for contract killers. The magazine stopped publishing personals in 1986.
In 1988, it was ordered to pay $9.4 million to the family of a Texas woman whose husband hired her killer through a personal ad. A federal appeals court overturned the award, saying the case had placed an overly heavy burden on the magazine to interpret offers made in ads.
In the latest case, a federal jury ruled that Soldier of Fortune, published in Boulder, Colo., negligently contributed to Richard Braun's 1985 murder at his suburban Atlanta home.
The magazine's June 1985 issue included an ad in which Michael Savage offered his services. The ad, in part, read: "GUN FOR HIRE: 37 year old mercenary desires jobs. Discrete and very private. Body guard, courier and other special skills. All jobs considered."

Bruce Gastwirth, Braun's partner, responded to Savage's ad. On Aug. 26, 1985, Savage and two other men went to Braun's home. As Braun and his 16-year-old son, Michael, were leaving, Sean Doutré fatally shot Braun and wounded his son.
Savage, Gastwirth and the others involved in the plot were convicted and imprisoned.
Michael Braun and his brother, Ian, filed a wrongful-death lawsuit in 1988.
In upholding the $4.3 million award last August by a 2-1 vote, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the Constitution's free-speech protections do not extend to advertisements presenting "a substantial danger of harm to the public."
Brown, an Army Special Forces veteran, founded Soldier of Fortune after he spent nearly a year covering little-known wars around the world and found few publishers willing to print his stories. Brown solicited $10,000 in advance subscriptions and produced the first issue in his garage.

Since then, it has attained cult status among veterans and military enthusiasts who enjoy the magazine's hairy-chested style of journalism, Brown said.
"Our mail indicates our readers feel they get background and detail that they can't get in the news weeklies," Brown said in a recent interview.
If Brown does hand over his magazine to the Brauns, he said he may start a similar magazine from scratch.
"I used to be an amateur boxer and I got knocked down quite few times, but I always got up. I've been shelled and shot at in Afghanistan, Burma and Vietnam, but I survived. Starting over is nothing new to me," Brown said.

Burning cross in multiracial neighborhood stuns residents

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH — Daisy Brown was shocked that someone set a cross ablaze at her home's front yard in what must have been a delayed reaction.
Although she and her husband were the first blacks to move into the multiracial neighborhood, she said, "that was 18 years ago."
"The yard is always full of kids of every race, playing basketball," Brown said, a substitute teacher with the Fort Worth school district. "They have fuses, but we've never had a problem with anyone out here. I've never ever seen a burning cross except on television or in the movies."
The neighborhood is south of Fort Worth in the Edgecliff Village area.
Her son, Terrance Brown, said he was returning home about 3 a.m. Sunday when he saw a fire and thought at first that his home was burning.

"But when I got closer, I saw the flaming cross in our yard," he said.
The initials KKK, for the Ku Klux Klan, were found carved in the cross.
Police Lt. D.W. Clements said it's the first cross burning he's heard of in Tarrant County in years.
"We have no suspects at all, although we do know that some officials of the Klan live in Tarrant County," Clements said.
Sheriff's deputy Ken Novak, sent to the residence after a call to 911, said he found the cross, 6 to 7 feet tall, ablaze in the yard about 12 feet from the house.
Novak extinguished the fire and brought the charred wooden symbol to the department's patrol division as evidence.

Man kills wife in hospital, then turns gun on himself

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — A 31-year-old man brought his wife flowers, a gun and a suicide pact to sign before he fatally shot the woman and then himself at a Houston hospital, police said Monday.
Robert Robinson was visiting his wife, Sally, 21, Sunday at Ben Taub Hospital's psychiatric ward, where she had been a patient since November.
Hospital spokesman Roger Widmeyer said Mrs. Robinson was killed about 1:45 p.m. Sunday. A space left blank on the suicide note for Mrs. Robinson's signature remained empty.
The couple had been huddled in conversation in a day room in the hospital's psychiatric ward moments before the shooting. An attendant, who was watching a football game on television with his back to the pair, separated them after their voices became raised.
Moments later, authorities said, Robinson put a large-caliber revolver to his wife's head and pulled the trigger. Then, tucking the weapon under his chin, he fired several shots.

As the shots began, the attendant fled the room. Other hospital employees found the bodies.
Both victims died instantly, Widmeyer said.
Widmeyer characterized the shootings as part of a family dispute.
Houston police homicide Sgt. Mike Peters said Robert Robinson had been unemployed for 2½ years since being hurt in an accident and his wife's hospital stay had been additional stress.
Widmeyer said none of the psychiatric unit's other 23 patients was thought to have witnessed the killings.
Widmeyer said Ben Taub officials would consider installing metal detectors in the wake of Sunday's shootings and another fatal shooting about a year ago.
"He (the husband) was a visitor who exhibited no suspicious behavior," Widmeyer said.

Iraq moving missiles

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Iraq is moving around anti-aircraft missile batteries in the country's southern and northern no-fly zones in an effort to confuse and provoke the U.S.-led allies flying patrols there, U.S. officials say.

With the U.N. Security Council rejecting military retaliation against Iraq for cross-border incursions into Kuwait since Sunday, the White House renewed its veiled threat of a response of its own to the missile situation.

"I would just say we're considering what course of action the U.S. government should follow," said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher Monday. "I don't want to predict anything particularly."

President Bush met Monday afternoon with CIA Director Robert Gates and with other top advisers to weigh his options.

Bush was told that while Iraq did move some of its Soviet-made anti-aircraft missiles out of the southern restricted airspace, which was designated by the allies as a protected zone for Shiite Muslims, it had not removed all the weapons from south of the 32nd parallel.

Iraq has periodically moved missiles into the northern zone in recent weeks but U.S. officials became concerned when missiles also were moved into the south, suggesting a deliberate pattern of provocation, said one official who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

"This is vintage Saddam," said another official, also under the same ground rules of anonymity.

The United States, Britain, France and Russia warned Iraq last week to remove the missiles from south of the 32nd or risk retaliation. Iraq appeared to defuse the crisis over the weekend by moving most of the missiles out and dispersing the remaining batteries in such a way that they no longer posed a threat to allied overflights.

But government analysts said Iraq was constantly moving around the remaining missiles, and could regroup them quickly to form a renewed threat.

Somalia's peace talks break down

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Peace talks among leaders of Somalia's warring factions appeared to have broken down today, negating a cease-fire and a plan to disarm the warring parties by March 1.

Also today, U.S. Marines were still combing the capital for weapons in their push to restore law and order by month's end, a task that could be made far more difficult if the talks in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, have collapsed.

Farouk Mawlawi, the United Nations' spokesman in Mogadishu, said the talks reached a "crisis stage" Monday night. He was uncertain whether the 14 factions at the meeting had been able to sign any agreement since then.

According to Mawlawi, the factions had reached a preliminary cease-fire and disarmament agreement on Monday but were unable to concur on other details, thus cancelling the plan.

There were doubts as to how faithfully a cease-fire would have been obeyed and the agreement would not have affected gangs of freelance bandits. Nevertheless, the agreement had been seen as a potentially significant move toward bringing order back to a land of chaos and starvation.

Clan fighting has aggravated a drought-sparked famine; an estimated 350,000 people have died in the past year from hunger and fighting.

A U.S.-led international force that arrived Dec. 9 under U.N. auspices has been trying to restore order and protect food aid shipments.

Marine patrols were launched again today, following Monday's sweep by 900 Marines of Mogadishu's Bakara weapons bazaar — the country's biggest arms market.

Mawlawi said Marines moved today into an area of northern Mogadishu where weapons were believed to have been stashed.

The northern half of the city is controlled by forces loyal to Ali Mahdi Mohamed, while the southern half is held by Mohamed Farrah Aidid, the country's most powerful warlord.

In a meeting with U.N. officials and staff members of private aid groups, Marine commander Maj. Gen. Charles Wilhelm said he hoped a safer environment could be possible in the capital by Feb. 1, Mawlawi said.

Wilhelm reportedly defined a "safer environment" as the ability of citizens to move about freely, the absence of weapons in the streets and a return of commerce.

Wilhelm's 10,000 Marines are now confiscating any visible weapons, although those needed by aid groups for self-protection are being returned.

Mawlawi said that seized weapons are being destroyed daily, although some are being kept to arm a future Somali police force.

Somalia is essentially one vast arsenal, most of it stocked during the Cold War era by both the Soviet Union and the United States.

Serbs blamed for talks' break down

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

GENEVA — Peace talks on Bosnia-Herzegovina broke down today after Serbian leaders refused to accept a mediator's compromise plan to end the 9-month-old war, European Community envoy Lord Owen said.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic "said no" to a compromise plan on a constitution for the besieged republic "and as a result of that the proceedings have been adjourned for the moment," co-mediator Cyrus Vance told a news conference.

In contrast, hard-line Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and Dobrica Cosic, the federal president of Yugoslavia that includes Serbia and Montenegro, accepted the compromises as "reasonable," said Vance.

Vance, a U.N. envoy and former U.S. secretary of state, said he would report the deadlock to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali later today, "making it very clear... that the only one who has said flatly 'no' was Karadzic."

Karadzic's forces have taken over about 70 percent of Bosnia since a war that has claimed more than 17,000 lives began in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Lord Owen said he immediately reported the breakdown to Denmark, which currently chairs the European Community.

Vance and Owen have proposed a peace package including Bosnia's division into 10 provinces with very wide powers, a permanent cease-fire and troop pullback.

Any amendments to the constitutional plan would need approval from Bosnia's Muslim-led government and its Croats, both of whom have approved the proposed principles.

Agreement on constitutional issues would allow talks to move to provincial boundaries, which the mediators designed to avoid a crude ethnic division of Bosnia.

These talks will be "very difficult," said the mediators' spokesman, Fred Eckhard.

Owen said he and Vance expect to continue efforts to bring peace to former Yugoslavia.

Vance said bilateral talks with other delegations would continue today, but no further meetings were immediately scheduled with Karadzic.

A meeting of all three ethnic factions in Bosnia-Herzegovina, on the third day of the current round of peace talks, was adjourned before the mediators made their announcement.

Even before, in an interview today with The Associated Press, Karadzic said the Bosnian Serbs "cannot accept a take-it-or-leave-it principle. We have the wishes of our own state, our parliament and our people to consider."

Only a day earlier, Karadzic dropped demands for independence within Bosnia and the right to join Serb-dominated Yugoslavia in a "greater Serbia."

Eckhard had said Monday that Karadzic was asked to "go home and sleep on it one more time" and come in today "in the hope of being prepared to say 'yes' or 'no' to their paper."

Karadzic said in the interview: "We have the wishes of our own state, our parliament and our people to consider."

"I believe we demonstrated sufficient flexibility and willingness to compromise," he added. "But if the international community keeps insisting on the liquidation of the Serbs — then let the international community carry it out."

He accused the international community of "making unreasonable requests" and of having "ulterior motives when dealing with our side."

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman, also at the talks, said Monday they had entered "their final and critical phase."

Bosnia's Muslim president, Alija Izetbegovic, the other key negotiator, was due back today in Geneva after a one-day trip to an Islamic emergency summit in Senegal.

Milosevic, who the West mainly blames for warfare in former Yugoslavia since mid-1990, met Karadzic at a Geneva hotel late Monday.

Milosevic is believed to hold the key to solving the crisis, partly because Bosnian Serbs depend on supplies from Serbia.

Karadzic, many of whose supporters are hard-liners, needs a deal that would avoid the appearance of a sellout.

Meanwhile, fierce shelling was reported today in and around Sarajevo through no casualty figures were available.

U.S. students showing improvement in math

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Many U.S. students are still not up to par in mathematics but are showing improvement, according to test scores released today by the Education Department.

Students performed better on the 1992 National Assessment of Educational Progress than in 1990. The department said improvement was shown by males and females alike in the fourth, eighth and 12th grades, the classes that took the test.

The results are preliminary in that they represent only a portion of the data that will be made public later this year, the department noted.

Education Secretary Lamar Alexander said students showed an average improvement of a half-grade level, which he said demonstrated that new standards adopted by the nation's math teachers were having a positive effect.

But nearly 40 percent of the students tested still failed to reach basic proficiency levels, the department said.

While average scores for whites rose in all three grades, black and Hispanic students showed improvement only in grade 12. While averages for both sexes rose, boys still led girls in grades four and 12, while achievement levels were about the same in eighth grade, the department said.

Poor, urban eighth graders showed declining skills and performed at lower levels than rural students, who didn't do as well as suburban students. Students in the Southeast lagged behind those in the Northeast, the West and the central states.

The test was designed by the National Assessment Governing Board, an independent commission set up to determine the skill levels American students should attain. Richard Riley, President-elect Clinton's choice as education secretary, was on the panel when the standards were set.

The test was administered to 26,000 public and private school students in 44 states, territories and the District of Columbia. State-by-state results will be released this spring.

The results do not compare the skills of American students to those of students in other industrialized nations. Students in Japan, Korea and some European nations generally fare better than U.S. students in math. The results also do not explain why black and Hispanic students showed improvement in only one grade level.

Utah calls out Guard to clear snow

Heavy rains force people from homes in Arizona and North Carolina

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY — National Guardsmen helped clear canyon avalanches and cart off piles of snow from downtown streets today after a storm blitzed a 75-mile stretch of Utah.

The storm Monday, the second in five days to leave heavy snow in Utah, shut down government offices, businesses and roads.

Gov. Mike Leavitt declared an emergency and called out 40 to 50 Guardsmen to relieve exhausted road crews — that is, after the Guardsmen dug out their own trucks and front-end loaders.

"In the Utah tradition of working friend-to-friend, neighbor-to-neighbor, we're pulling our way through this," Leavitt said.

Elsewhere, flooding forced dozens from their homes in Arizona and North Carolina, while snow also fell in Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado. Freezing rain, sleet and snow blew into the Plains and Midwest.

Snow and freezing rain was forecast today in the central and eastern United States.

A 75-mile stretch from Salt Lake County north to Brigham City was already under nearly 2 feet of snow that had fallen since Wednesday when 7 to 12 inches more fell in eight hours Monday before the storm subsided. Monticello in southeastern Utah got 18 inches of snow and Bryce Canyon had 14.

A home in Salt Lake City, Utah, couldn't handle the latest storm and collapsed Monday under the enormous weight of a week's worth of record-breaking snow.

An 86-year-old woman escaped injury when the roof of her Salt Lake City home collapsed. The roof of a building housing six businesses crumpled under heavy snow. No injuries were reported.

Dennis Stanley, Salt Lake County's deputy emergency services director, said he feared more roofs would give way under the weight of the snow.

Over the weekend, several homes in the Salt Lake and Cache Valleys were damaged by avalanches or collapsed roofs. Most major canyon roads winding east into the snowbound Wasatch Mountains were closed Monday, as were roads leading to several of Utah's popular ski resorts.

Monday's storm followed a Jan. 6-10 wintry blast that was the biggest storm since record-keeping in Utah began in 1928. The storm left more than 23 inches of snow at Salt Lake Airport and 40 inches or more along the Wasatch foothills.

The state was having trouble replenishing nearly exhausted supplies of salt and sand to spread on slick roads.

Hospitals treated dozens of injuries, and one possible storm-related death was under investigation.

Snowplow operators faced the wrath of homeowners who finished shoveling only to see more snow heaped onto their driveways. Authorities said a West Jordan man grabbed a driver by the hair and slapped and punched him. Another operator was attacked with a pipe.

Operator Stacy Mascaro said he doesn't take it personally when a homeowner throws a snow shovel at his truck. "I just smile at them and wave. I know they are upset about having to constantly shovel their driveways," he said. "But they don't understand that I have a job to do."

Wind and snow from a sudden storm paralyzed much of southern Idaho on Monday, closing schools and highways and forcing crews who had already cleared roads to start over again.

Silverton, Colo., received 18 inches of snow, and avalanches closed mountain passes. Dozens of snowslides were reported throughout Colorado, including one that rumbled 3,000 feet near Telluride.

In eastern Arizona, floodwater leaking from a makeshift dike in Duncan chased about 150 people from their homes. Water from the Gila River crept from street to street and was up to 3 feet deep in some homes.

Lighting up gets harder

Laws in many places now consign smokers — who once puffed away even in elevators and food lines — to sidewalks and drizzle-swept doorways. Anyone who thinks that's poetic may hail a new Environmental Protection Agency report as the greatest thing since the Iliad.

Passive or "second-hand" tobacco smoke, asserts the EPA, annually causes up to 300,000 cases of childhood bronchitis, vexes perhaps a million asthmatic children, and kills another 3,000 Americans through lung cancer. Common sense suggests that frequent, heavy inhalation of others' cigarette fumes is unhealthy. But EPA's detailing of the pathologies of passive smoke probably means that more businesses, fearing suits by workers and customers, will flat outlaw on-premises smoking.

This development would not make us weep. Almost unknown in the 19th century, lung cancer has become the leading cause of U.S. cancer deaths since cigarettes' mass production. Even so, a few observations about the nation's anti-smoking crusade:

- EPA Administrator William Reilly is said to "encourage" lawsuits against businesses that allow smoking as a way to force them to institute bans. No doubt a few trial lawyers can be found to serve in this cause. Yet President Bush and Vice President Quayle have repeatedly inveighed against America's litigation explosion on principle. Now comes the anomalous prospect of Reilly's Raiders.

- EPA research doesn't necessarily deserve oracular deference. Many objective studies have shown that the pesticide Alar poses no health threat. However, the EPA persists in calling Alar a probable human carcinogen, indicating that the agency's motives are not always purely truth-seeking. EPA's passive-smoke findings, however, command more faith since they represent the consensus of private researchers.

- Not all concentrations of second-hand smoke are equal. The thick nicotine fog that hangs in a cocktail lounge differs from the wisp of cigarette smoke that straggles skyward in an outdoor stadium — yet the Baltimore Orioles have become the sixth big-league club to ban smoking in the stands. That raises the bothersome suspicion that an otherwise laudable crusade isn't always about safety, or even smell, but sensibility.

This date in history

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 12, the 12th day of 1993. There are 353 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Jan. 12, 1945, during World War II, German forces in Belgium retreated in the Battle of the Bulge.

On this date: In 1773, the first public museum in America was established, in Charleston, S.C. In 1915, the U.S. House of Representatives rejected a proposal to give women the right to vote.

In 1932, Hattie W. Caraway became the first woman elected to the U.S. Senate.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt created the National War Labor Board.

In 1944, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and French General Charles de Gaulle began a two-day wartime conference in Marrakesh, Morocco.

In 1945, aircraft from U.S. Task Force 38 sank about 40 Japanese ships off Indochina.

In 1964, leftist rebels in Zanzibar began their successful revolt against the government. In 1966, President Lyndon B. Johnson said in his State of the Union address that the U.S. should stay in South Vietnam until Communist aggression there ended.

In 1971, the innovative situation comedy "All in the Family" premiered on CBS television.

In 1976, mystery writer Dame Agatha Christie died in Wallingford, England, at age 85.

In 1986, the shuttle "Columbia" blasted off with a crew that included U.S. Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., and the first Hispanic American in space, Dr. Franklin R. Chang-Diaz.

In 1991, a deeply divided Congress gave President Bush the authority to wage war in the Persian Gulf.

Ten years ago: Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker resigned; President Ronald Reagan nominated former U.S. Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., to take his place. Eugene V. Rostow, director of the embattled U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, resigned.

Five years ago: Willie Stargell, a 21-year slugger with the Pittsburgh Pirates, was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., in his first year of eligibility.

One year ago: One day after the surprise resignation of Algeria's president, Chadli Benjedid, the army-backed Algerian government canceled parliamentary elections to prevent fundamentalist Muslims from winning power. The Washington Redskins won the NFC championship, defeating the Detroit Lions 41-10-10; the Buffalo Bills won the AFC title, beating the Denver Broncos 10-7.

Reading Iron Mike between his tears

What a disappointment. Was that really Mike Ditka, with the tears in his eyes and a lump in his throat, acting like a guy who has just been given a pension and an engraved watch for loyal service to the company?

I'm sorry, but as someone who has admired Ditka since his days as one of George Halas' most fearless players, I don't rate his exit speech as one of his better moments.

What should he have said? Let's give it a try:

"I have good news and I have bad news. The bad news is that I've just been fired by this weenie. The good news is that I don't have to work for this weenie anymore.

"You have just heard the weenie say that he wants to make a fresh start with fresh ideas. That from a Yale bookkeeper who knows as much about football as I know about ballet.

"I'll tell you why I was fired. It's very simple. He is an Ivy League stiff and I am not an Ivy League stiff. He does not drink, swear or raise his squeaky voice in anger. I drink, swear and sometimes bellow like a crazed bull. Especially when people throw dumb interceptions.

"So he wants to hire a coach who will stand on the sidelines like someone perusing paintings at the Art Institute. Hey, that's a war out there, not a cricket match.

"I suppose you want to know how I feel about being fired. So I'll tell you: Yeah, it hurts. But what makes it even more painful is the humiliation of being fired by this kind of cupcake.

"Not to brag, but let me remind you how I got to be the coach of the Bears.

"As a mere lad, I knocked opponents on their butts in high school. That earned me a scholarship to college, where I knocked more people on their butts. That made me an All-American, so I went to work for George Halas and I really knocked people on their butts while catching passes, and we won an NFL championship.

"Then I learned the coaching trade by working as a low-pay, long-hours assistant coach in Dallas.

"Finally, I got a shot at being a head coach. And, once again, not to brag, but I put together some pretty good seasons. Check it out: There are a lot of coaches still working who haven't done half as good. "And that wasn't easy, with this cheapo bookkeeper here, biting the nickels and pinching the dimes on players' salaries.

"Now, let's consider how the weenie got to be in a position to fire me.

"Did he build this team from nothing to one of the most valuable franchises in football?

"Nah. That was his grandfather, George Halas, the guy who hired me because he was a tough, mean SOB, and he liked me because I am also a tough, mean SOB.

"This Twinkie is in position to fire me only because the old man died and the Twinkie and his family inherited the franchise. Which is a very nice way to succeed in life. You go to an Ivy League college, become a glorified bookkeeper, then Gramps croaks and suddenly you become rich and powerful.

"That's neat work if you can get it. Unfortunately, most of us don't have that kind of grandfather.

"But because he is a weenie — did you know this guy won't even let guests drink beer in his skybox? — his feelings were hurt that some of the players and I didn't treat him with proper reverence.

"That's why Jim McMahon was traded. He was the best quarterback I ever had. But Jim was kind of rude, crude and goofy. All he could do is win games.

"Winning games wasn't enough. Because McMahon knows a weenie when he sees one, and said so, he had to go. So then the weenie tells me that I have to win with a quarterback of his choosing, a kid whose main qualities are that he is polite, flosses regularly, never says anything worse than 'gosh' or 'gee whiz' and asks permission to go to the bathroom. None of which helps when he throws dumb interceptions.

"So you're finally going to have a polite coach. And you'll probably have polite players. It wouldn't surprise me if the weenie's first four draft choices are from Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Vassar. If he can hire them cheap enough.

"Now all the nasties that his grandfather hired are gone. So he's going to rebuild this team in his image. From the Chicago Bears to the Chicago Poodles.

"Do I have any regrets? Yes, one. Instead of waiting around for him to call me, I should have gone in his office yesterday and said: 'Boo.' Then when he woke up, I should have quit.

"By the way, did I mention one guy that his grandfather never did hire? Him, the weenie. That ought to tell you something."

The tale of the great date conspiracy

No one remembers exactly how The Great Date Conspiracy started — no one, that is, except Rulon. And he's not telling.

As nearly as we can piece the story together, it began in a crowded high school cafeteria. The Boys were seated at the usual table, holding forth on the usual subject: The Girls. Only this time the approach was different. Instead of discussing the latest object of hormonal hallucination, The Boys were exploring the other end of the social spectrum.

"Angie!" one of The Boys exclaimed. "Todd and Angie!"

A chorus of groans were aimed at Todd. He responded with a properly pained grimace. Then he quickly came up with a combination of his own: "Danny and Darlene!"

Danny's exaggerated wince brought another round of raucous laughter. He looked around the group for a likely target and noticed Rulon sitting quietly, almost distant from the circle of friends. "Rulon," he announced, pausing significantly for effect, "and Renae!"

The pairing almost brought the house down. What could be more ridiculous? Rulon was the most popular guy in the school — handsome, well-spoken and extraordinarily talented. Renae was... well, the opposite. In fact, it's surprising that The Boys even knew who she was. But they did — at least enough to know that Danny's twosome was the ultimate mismatch, and they applauded his creativity. Then they waited for a response.

"Renae," Rulon repeated, nodding thoughtfully. Then he smiled. "I like it. I was trying to decide who to take to the dance this weekend. I think I'll ask Renae."

The Boys went absolutely nuts. Rulon had a reputation for being such a nice guy. Who would've thought he'd come up with a practical joke like this?

"What about it?" Rulon continued. "I'll ask Renae and the rest of you can ask other girls who never get asked out. We'll make it a night they'll never forget! OK?"

Everyone agreed. Enthusiastically.

"But if we're going to pull this off we've got to do it right," Rulon warned. "That means they can't suspect anything. So no joking around — we play it straight. Got it?"

"Sure," Todd said as everyone nodded. "Straight. But when do we pop the big gag?" "Don't worry," Rulon said.

"I'll let you know. But if this is going to work you've got to take it seriously. Treat your date like she was queen of the prom. Make her feel special, like this is the greatest night of her life. That's the only way it'll work. Trust me."

The Boys did trust him, so they did what he said. They asked girls from the bottom rung of the social ladder. They called them on the phone, spent time with them at school and got to know them better. They ordered corsages, made arrangements for dinner at a fancy restaurant and prepared themselves for what promised to be an unforgettable evening.

When the big night came The Boys picked p their dates — who, I should mention, all looked good. Really good. The dinner hour flew by as The Boys discovered how interesting it can be to get to know someone new. By the time they got to the dance some of The Boys were beginning to worry about Rulon's plan. After a few dances and a little more conversation they were downright concerned. When Rulon and his date — that couldn't possibly be Renae, could it? — finally arrived, The Boys confronted him.

"What's going on, Rulon?" Danny asked. "What are you going to do?"

"Why?" Rulon asked. "What's the problem?" "There's no problem," Todd said. "It's just that... well, I don't want to..."

Danny went directly to the point. "Look," he said, "if you're planning to do something that's going to make Darlene feel bad — forget it."

The rest of The Boys indicated their concern for their dates, too.

Rulon looked his friends over carefully. "You don't mean to tell me that you guys have actually enjoyed yourselves tonight, do you?" The Boys glanced at each other sheepishly — except Danny, who was a little put off by the tone in Rulon's voice.

"Darn right I have," he said. "I've had a great time. Want to make something of it?"

Rulon smiled at his friend and patted his shoulder. "Nope," he said. "You already have. Now, if you guys will excuse me, I'd like to spend the rest of the evening with Renae."

He turned and left his friends — wondering. Was there really another plan? Or had he counted on a sudden outbreak of friendship all along? Only Rulon knows.

And like I said — he isn't telling.

Howard teams sweep NMJC

HERALD STAFF REPORT

HOBBS, N.M. — Howard College's basketball teams continued their hot seasons Monday with victories over the New Mexico Junior College men's and women's teams. Both games were Western Junior College Athletic Conference contests.

The third-ranked Lady Hawks overcame two double-digit first-half deficits to remain unbeaten in a 69-63 win. The Hawks never trailed in their 87-75 win over NMJC. Both teams now have 2-0 conference marks.

The Lady Hawks (18-0) trailed 19-7 and 30-19 in the first half of their game. They started the contest shooting poorly from both the field and the free throw line. Coach Royce Chadwick said Howard missed its first four free throws and its first six field goals.

But Howard fought back to take a 34-33 lead over NMJC (12-7 overall, 1-2 in conference) just before halftime and kept that lead for the rest of the game.

"It really took us a long time to get going and we just played barely good enough to win," Chadwick said. "I'm just thrilled to death we don't have to go back to Hobbs for another year."

Chadwick went deep into his bench in an effort to get a combination that would play well. "Charlene Payton came off the bench and hit a big three (pointer) for us and Jennifer Jeffress came off the bench and hit a big three," Chadwick said. "Everybody contributed."

Freshmen post Angel Spinks led the Lady Hawks with 17 points and 19 rebounds. Anita Wright had 13 points for Howard.

Howard shot well below 50 percent from the floor, making 25 of their 61 shots.

"We just got out of there alive, that's the main thing," Chadwick said.

The fourth-ranked Hawks pushed their record to 16-1 playing for the first time since Dec. 10. They lead NMJC (11-8, 1-2) the entire contest. "We hadn't played in a month and it showed in turnovers. We had some breakdowns defensively," Hawk coach Jeff Kidder said. "But for the most part I'm pleased."

NMJC played most of the game in a zone defense, giving the Hawks some open shots from the outside.

The Hawks and Lady Hawks return to Big Spring Thursday for a double-header against conference foe Frank Phillips College. The women's game starts at 6 p.m. and the men's game gets under way at 8.

In other WJCC games Odessa College's women beat South Plains 91-90 and its men lost to South Plains 85-84. New Mexico Military Institute's men beat Frank Phillips 103-91 and Frank Phillips women beat Western Texas College 83-65.

Young wants better performance

49er QB must hold ball vs. Dallas

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Maybe Steve Young was trying to do too much on his own. Perhaps he was overly aggressive. Certainly, the sloppy conditions at Candlestick Park didn't help.

Whatever the reasons for his turnover-plagued playoff outing, the San Francisco 49ers quarterback on Monday said he learned from his mistakes and won't repeat them against the Dallas Cowboys in Sunday's NFC Championship.

"You have a sense when it's sudden death, like the playoffs are, that you're going to be as aggressive as you can," Young said. "We'll play with that a little bit. I've been able to find that fine line throughout the year and we'll just keep looking for that in the playoffs."

Young, in his first NFL playoff start after an MVP season, fumbled three times and threw an interception, but in the end helped the 49ers overcome the turnovers in Saturday's 20-13 playoff victory over Washington.

"I felt calm and consistent about my play," said Young, who was 20 of 30 for 227 yards and two touchdowns while rushing eight times for a season-high 73 yards.

"I felt it was a pretty good outing and I'll just go back and do the same thing. I think me as a runner ... obviously I'm going to have to be a little more careful than I was last week. But as a quarterback, just playing quarterback, I felt very good about it."

All of Washington's points followed Young's fumbles, two of which came at the end of scrambles. The third occurred when the ball slipped out of his hand as he tried to pass over the head of Washington defender Fred Stokes and Charles Mann recovered at the San Francisco 15 to set up a Washington TD, scored early in the fourth quarter.

San Francisco 49ers head coach George Seifert gestures at a news conference in the 49ers' training camp in Santa Clara, Calif., Monday afternoon. Seifert addressed the Cowboys-49ers NFC championship game set for Sunday.

Young said he didn't think the ball-control problems would resurface against the Cowboys, regardless of the condition of the Candlestick Park turf.

"Fumbles for a quarterback are weird. I guess I'll just run the gauntlet drill this week. We'll kind of shake it off and call it quirky," he said.

San Francisco coach George Seifert said he thought Young made only one bad decision. That was when he rolled to his right and tried throwing back across the field in a play that ended in an interception near the goal line.

"We've talked about it, but other than that I thought he played a good football game," Seifert said. "Obviously, when you lay the ball down, that's not good. But he acted decisively and I don't think at all there was any pressing in his play. There was an excitement; there was a going for it."

Rather than dwell on what went wrong, Young said he would try to build on what went right. He helped the 49ers capitalize after Washington committed a fourth turnover midway through the final period by leading a 14-play, 59-yard drive that burned seven minutes and resulted in a field goal that stood for the final victory margin.

Unusual composite spurs Buff hoopsters

By MIKE BUTTS Staff Writer

Here's an easy one: which two players on Forsan's two-senior, three-sophomore boys basketball team are returning starters?

The two seniors, right?

Nope. The Buffaloes have two sophomores who started as freshmen. But despite the unusual status of younger players with more experience than older players and the grouping of sophomores with seniors, Forsan has compiled a 10-7 record.

And first-year coach Terry McDonald sees the possibility of a playoff spot for his team as they start district 6A play against Irion County in Forsan tonight at 8 p.m. "It's a pretty tight team as far as seniors-sophomores (go). Classification doesn't seem to have anything to do with it," says McDonald, coming to Forsan this year after three years as head coach in Howley. "Our seniors don't slack off because they're seniors, and it doesn't seem to phase our sophomores to step in and play against upperclassmen."

Evans, a shooting guard, leads the team in scoring. Hopper plays point guard and 6-foot-2 soph Troy Sanders plays post. McDonald says the three have progressed well this season.

The team's two starting seniors — post Jason Sims and forward Clark Fields — provide most of Forsan's rebounding. And McDonald is happy to report the team can support Evans's offense.

"Chris Evans is doing a good job for us shooting the basketball, (but) every game we have different kids leading in scoring," McDonald says. "Anytime he slacks off there's always somebody that picks up the slack."

The Forsan coach says the Buffaloes played their best ball of the season last month. They beat Stanton in Stanton Dec. 8 and then won the Borden County Tournament with a victory over Whiteface Dec. 12. But McDonald says the Buffs are playing even better now as they get used to a new coach and new system.

But, of course, there's always room for improvement.

"We need to be a lot more consistent," McDonald says. "Sometimes in games we get ahead and then drop back down. We need to put four quarters together to have a successful district race."

Water Valley goes into district play as the preseason favorite, McDonald says. But he thinks anyone from 6A could make the playoffs.

"I think it will come down to the last week of district play before it's decided," McDonald says.

And maybe the Buffaloes will play a big part in the decision making.

"We feel pretty good about going into district right now," McDonald says. "We had a good win Friday (80-62 over Sands) to kind of kick off things and put us into district."

Runnels, Goliad get tourney wins

ANDREWS — Runnels' and Goliad's boys' A basketball teams each won a game at the Andrews Tournament over the weekend. Runnels got its first win on the season with a 31-30 victory over Seminole Friday. Goliad beat Wink on Saturday 47-14.

Leading Runnels in its win Friday were John Smith and Toma McVae with 16 and nine points. Saturday the Yearlings lost games to Hobbs (N.M.) Heizer (40-25) and Andrews (39-32). Tyler Murphy had 7 points for Runnels against Heizer and Scott Walker scored nine versus Andrews.

Goliad lost to Seminole 38-30 Friday. Oscar Canales had 12 points and Brock Gee eight in the defeat. Justin Myers (10), Canales (8) and Greg Wollenzein (7) lead the Mavericks in their win over Wink.

In Saturday's Consolation Championship Goliad lost to Lamesa 33-30. Gee (12) and Myers (7) were leading scorers for the Mavericks.

Goliad and Runnels boys and girls A and B team games were cancelled Monday because of bad weather. The girls games have been rescheduled for Thursday.

Spurs down Pistons

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — John Lucas claims he had a full head of hair a year ago. He also claims he has enjoyed watching it fall out.

Lucas became the head coach of the San Antonio Spurs on Dec. 18, and Monday's 109-91 victory over the Detroit Pistons gave him an 8-2 record.

"Actually, I'm 9-2, because I'm counting the game my assistant coached before I took over," Lucas said. "This has been a lot harder than I thought, but it has also been very enlightening. I don't like this team, I love it."

Lucas has an unusual coaching style — from his sideline leaping to his players-only huddles during timeouts. But according to his star, David Robinson, Lucas's biggest asset is his 14-year NBA playing career.

NBA Roundup

Lucas took over after the team fired Jerry Tarkanian, former Nevada-Las Vegas coach, on Dec. 18.

"Tark was an excellent coach, but he had to adjust to this league from college, and the management didn't give him much time," Robinson said. "Luke came in right away, gave us a new offense, and he gave us a new direction. That's what is important, not that he stays out of our huddles during a timeout."

Monday, the Spurs led 33-23 after one quarter, then waited for a Detroit comeback that never came. San Antonio led by 12 at halftime, 12 after three quarters and 18 at game's end.

"Every time they got within seven or eight, we got a three or a big basket," Lucas said. "The biggest came at the end of the third. They got within seven (77-70), and Lloyd (Daniels) hit a 3-pointer for us. That was a back-breaker for Detroit."

Detroit was playing its third home game in four days, and it lost all three. The busy schedule was what Pistons coach Ron Rothstein blamed for the loss.

"You look at our schedule, and we look tired right now," he said. "I don't know if it is physical or mental. We just aren't coming out ready to play. I take full responsibility for that, because I'm the coach and I'm supposed to have them ready."

What killed the Pistons was being outshot 52 percent to 38 percent. Leading scorers Joe Dumars, Isiah Thomas and Terry Mills combined for 55 points but needed 60 shots to do it.

Hornets 132, Mavericks 113
Larry Johnson's return to his native Dallas included a home-cooked meal and a victory at the expense of Dallas' NBA team.

The Charlotte Hornets forward scored 24 points and added seven rebounds and seven assists to hand the Dallas Mavericks their 12th consecutive defeat, 132-113.

"It's my home town team and I'll never say anything bad about them," said Johnson, who bought tickets for more than 250 family members and friends. "But we couldn't afford to come in here and slip up. It's not like we're one of the teams who are better than everyone else."

Johnson said he was looking forward to a visit with his family and a night at home.

"I'm going to be at home with my mom looking for something to eat," Johnson said. "I had a really good time tonight."

Kendall Gill finished with 20 points and rookie Alonzo Mourning had 20 points and 10 rebounds Charlotte, which won for the third time in its last four starts. The Hornets had seven double-figure scorers.

Southern California known as the bank robbery capitol

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The way FBI agent Charlie Parsons sees it, bank robbery is a stupid crime: The take is usually only a couple thousand dollars and his investigators solve more than 80 percent of cases.

Nonetheless, there's a lot of stupidity in Southern California.

The seven-county region around Los Angeles had a record 2,641 bank robberies in 1992, enough to easily maintain its unwanted title at the FBI of "Bank Robbery Capital of the World."

Parsons, special agent in charge of the Los Angeles office, and bank security officials released year-end statistics Monday along with a plan to combat the increasingly violent heists with a hotline and rewards.

Total bank robberies rose by 286 over 1991, but even more disturbing to authorities was a tripling in the number of "takeover" bank robberies. In a takeover, there are usually two or more robbers, shots are fired and employees and patrons are assaulted and terrorized.

That increase — from 140 in 1991 to 448 in 1992 — was attributed to the increasing involvement of street gangs.

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Office reported the following incidents:

- Sheri LaRue Hart, 32, also known as Sheri VanWey, was arrested for the sale of alcohol to an intoxicated person.
- Ralph Cisneros, 21, was arrested for parole violation.
- Sonny De La Cruz, 24, of Abilene was arrested for revocation of probation (driving while license suspended).
- Donald Glenn Patterson, 27, of Big Spring was arrested for revocation of probation (driving while license suspended).
- A window was reported damaged in the 400 block of N. 4th Street in Coshoma.

Court votes to lower Sheriff's service fee

By GARY SHANKS Staff Writer

Howard County Commissioners voted to reduce the Sheriff's service fee (forcible detainer), which was raised from $45 to $65 this year.

After discussion with Justices of the Peace Bill Shankles and China

Long, the court decided to lower the rate by $10.

Shankles and Long brought the matter up because the forcible detainer fees were burdening some who must file the forcible detainer a number of times, Shankles said.

Also, County Judge Ben Lockhart was selected to serve on the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, Precinct 1 Commissioner Louis Brown served on the commission last year.

Other items considered:

- Following an executive (closed) session, the court denied an appeal from a person seeking assistance under the county indigent health care office.
- Names were selected for citizens to serve on a county grievance committee.

- Approval of the hiring of a new employee and restructuring in the Road and Bridge Department to replace a retiring employee.
- Approval of bond for Jack Buchanan, Justice of the Peace Precinct 2.
- Set terms and meeting of the commissioner's court for 1993.

Livestock show kicks off Jan. 14 in Garden City

By GARY SHANKS Staff Writer

The Annual Glasscock County Livestock Show and Premium Sale will feature top livestock entries in Garden City Jan. 14-16.

Those with animals they wish to enter can have them registered, in most cases, until noon Jan. 14, said Larry Bradford, director of the livestock show.

The show will be in the Garden City High School Bus Barn. "It's a large building behind the football fields," Bradford said.

The show schedule includes a rabbit show at 1 p.m. on Jan. 14 and a lamb show at 5 p.m. that day.

On Jan. 15, Cattle and horses begin showing at 8:30 a.m. Following this, at about 10:30 a.m. or 11, the swine show will begin. This show is expected to continue into the evening, Bradford said.

On Jan. 16, a Saturday, goats begin showing at 8:30 a.m. At 10 a.m., the Kids Show begins with events like the Pig Scramble, Bradford said.

A barbecue meal begins at noon and at 1 p.m. the awards presentations begin.

Following the awards ceremony, at 1:30, the Premium Sale begins. Bidders are invited to attend the sale where prize-winning livestock will be sold, he said. The show always provides a great number of animals to choose from, he said.

For more information, contact Bradford at 353-2396 (home) or 354-2244 (office), or the Glasscock County Extension Service at 354-2381.

ly a vague warning of "serious consequences" of Iraq's defiance.

After Sunday's incursion, the Security Council warned Iraq against further forays, said U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins.

"They received a warning that first of all their behavior was unacceptable and that if they did go ahead it would be looked at not too kindly," Perkins said.

Washington continues to be frustrated by Iraq's intransigence and provocative actions, but on Monday issued only a veiled threat.

"I would just say we're re-evaluating what course of action the U.S. government should follow," said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher. "I don't want to predict anything particularly."

Russia today condemned the raids and called on Baghdad to halt them. "The situation is too explosive to play irresponsible games," Russian Foreign Affairs Ministry spokesman Sergei Yastrzhembsky told reporters in Moscow.

In Iraq, meanwhile, the newspaper Al-Qadasiya maintained Iraq was open to talks "to achieve peace and security which guarantees the legal rights of Iraq in sovereignty and independence." The report, which blamed Iraq's recent troubles on President Bush, was carried by the official Iraqi News Agency.

Last week, Iraq dismantled anti-aircraft batteries that Washington said were threatening Western aircraft patrolling the "no-fly" zone imposed in August to protect Shiite Muslim rebels from air attacks by Saddam's forces.

But U.S. officials said Monday that Iraq had moved missiles batteries into the other Iraqi exclusion zone, which U.S.-led allies set up in the north to protect Kurdish separatists.

Canadian Ambassador Christopher Poole confirmed today that a Canadian officer with the U.N. observer force was threatened by the Iraqis on Sunday.

"The Iraqi had a firearm, a pistol, and he held the pistol to his head and said, 'Move your vehicle or I will shoot you,'" Poole said.

The border incidents have been occurring about 50 miles north of Kuwait City near the port of Umm Qasr.

The border demarcation completed in November awarded the town to Iraq. But the Iraqi naval base known as Camp Khor to the south was given to Kuwait, along with about 10 disputed oil wells and some farmland.

Iraq has refused to recognize the new border, and still claims sovereignty over all of Kuwait.

Kabjaj said U.N. officers stood by today as the Iraqis worked.

"There is nothing we can do but report the incident to New York and the Iraqi liaison officers," he said.

The multinational observer team does not carry weapons and is not authorized to take military action. It merely reports cease-fire violations to U.N. headquarters.

Iraq has repeatedly insisted it is doing nothing wrong in removing its equipment from the naval base.

In a commentary today, the political editor of the Iraqi News Agency insisted that "Iraq did not violate the demilitarized zone and did not interfere with the work of the (U.N.) observers... and did not make any kind of provocative act against them."

of pre-impact skids, just a collision.

After Watkins' vehicle hit the Kauffman's, it spun around hitting a Merchant freightline truck, causing it to overturn. The vehicle continued spinning and hit another 18-wheeler causing structural damage.

Watkins, the Kauffmans and Joe Slate, driver of the Merchant freightline, were transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center. Slate was released after receiving treatment. Watkins was expected to be moved out of the Intensive Care Unit today, said a hospital spokesperson. The Kauffmans remain in satisfactory condition. The driver of the other 18-wheeler refused treatment.

Watkins and the Kauffmans had their seat belts on, Lasater said. Watkins' air bag inflated upon impact. "If it had not been for the seat belt and the air bag, I don't think Mr. Watkins would have survived," he said.

Watkins will be charged with driving while intoxicated, Lasater said.

Traffic was detoured for about four hours, he said.

Other accidents during the day were weather-related. A majority of the accidents were minor with drivers losing control of their vehicles and skidding into poles, guardrails and drain ditches.

"We discouraged driving," said Deputy Jr. Trevino, Howard County Sheriff's Office. "We don't see this kind of weather often and people aren't use it. Human error, more than mechanical malfunctions, caused the accidents. People still drive too fast."

Most of the accidents occurred between 7 a.m. and 11 a.m.

The sheriff's department, Texas Department of Public Safety and Big Spring Police Department were inundated with accident reports starting in the early hours of the morning.

"We had calls all day about road conditions," Trevino said.

posure to oil and chemical dispersants used to break up the spill.

The Shetland Islands Council announced that beginning today it would test any of the 680 residents within three miles of the tanker wreckage in the Bay of Quendale for exposure to the chemicals.

But that too was delayed by today's fierce weather.

Medical researchers expected to find little because they do not think islanders have been exposed to harmful levels of hydrocarbons or oil-dispersing chemicals.

"I would much rather have spent nine days exposed to this petrol level than live in central London," said Dr. Derek Cox, coordinator of the study.

In better times, Shetlanders liked to brag about the clear water and fresh air of their islands.

Now the air stinks of oil, stinging eyes and throats, and many complain of headaches and nausea. Airborne droplets of oil carried by high winds spatter a dingy yellow on clothing, cling to the skin, dirty windshields and make roads slippery.

Kathleen Massie said she and her family, who live near the Bay of Quendale, just west of the wreckage, will undergo medical testing. Unbearable fumes temporarily drove them out of their home to Lerwick, 25 miles to the north.

"It was quite frightening," Mrs. Massie said. Now she is left with a nagging fear that the family, with children ages 7 and 10, are at risk of serious illness.

TUCSON, Ariz. — A gravely ill woman received an artificial heart in the nation's first such operation in nearly two years.

Sharoyne Loughran, 46, was in critical but stable condition today after receiving the plastic-and-metal CardioWest pump Monday night during a four-hour operation at University Medical Center at the University of Arizona.

Doctors said the implant was meant to keep her alive until she can receive a human heart in a month or two.

The operation was supervised by Dr. Jack G. Copeland, the hospital's chief cardiothoracic surgeon. In 1985, he became the first surgeon to use an artificial heart as a bridge to a heart transplant. The patient received a human heart after nine days on a Jarvik-7 device and lived for 4 1/2 years.

WASHINGTON — At the risk of alarming the hoity-toity, here's what quite a few people are choosing to wear for festivities surrounding President-elect Clinton's inauguration:

Any old thing.

Sure, there are those who will welcome Clinton and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton to the White House by swathing themselves in pricey new gowns, tuxedos, furs and such.

But these days of economic uncertainty are prompting some people to either seek sophistication at a steep discount or recycle past formal into present finery.

"Fashion is taking a back seat to the issues," said Steven Stolman, design director for Albert Nipon. "It's more the spirit of change than the actual garments. This administration has managed to really refocus the priorities, and is doing it with a lot of class."

Part of it may be attitude. The official events, of course, dictate black tie, no exceptions. But the 70-odd unofficial parties are a little more laid back.

Some ask party goers to wear blue jeans, police uniforms or "creative" garb. Even the "American Fashion Inaugural Gala," featuring Stolman, Arnold Scaasi and Mary McFadden, requests "business" dress.

Crooker was elated upon hearing the news.

"You're kidding!" she said. "As much as I fussed and fumed with them, I'm delighted."

"I'll be out there to hear what they have to say."

Much of the painting is already done with funds from the Dora

Roberts Foundation, she said, but electrical, plumbing, carpet and refrigerator repair work still needs to be done and some signs made.

"There's so many things they could do," she said.

Besides labor, the center needs to replace a 1979 van and kitchen equipment, she said.

Guarding against teen pregnancy Local parents trying to separate sex-ed fact, fiction

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

A flier may be circulating Big Spring containing incomplete and distorted information on sex education recommendations made by the Adolescent Pregnancy and Parenthood Advisory Council (APPAC).

The flier describes an alleged sex education curriculum and legislative bill that would mandate sexually explicit materials be taught as early as kindergarten.

The flier does not list an individual or group with which it is affiliated and contains some "alarmist and reactionary" statements, said John Schneider, executive director of PTA Texas.

"Some parents are doing an excellent job of informing their children and some are not,"

John Schneider, director, PTA Texas

His group, a member of APPAC, has about 800,000 members, he said.

"I think people are concerned about what their children are learning in the classroom dealing with sex education," Schneider said. "The flier could be based on other groups giving out misinformation."

"There is no curriculum or guidelines offered (by APPAC)," Schneider said. "(The APPAC recommendations) are suggestions. (APPAC) was designed to give recommendations to slow the teen pregnancy rate down."

The Big Spring Herald obtained a flier from a local parent. In December, the Midland Reporter-Telegram reported the circulation of an identical flier in that city.

Some of the false information from the flier includes a proposal to teach children in kindergarten through third grade facts about "sexual intercourse, gay and lesbian relationships, masturbation and abortion."

"The schools would usurp parental authority..." the flier states.

In an October report, APPAC sought to clarify misconceptions about its purpose and mission, Schneider said.

The report stated parents and organizations "... have alleged that APPAC has not given sufficient priority to abstinence as an appropriate strategy to reducing teen pregnancy..."

"APPAC believes that age-appropriate and developmentally appropriate information about the human person and human sexuality is constructive and wholesome."

"The PTA has always stood behind local control combining parents and the community, not handing down mandates," Schneider said. "We spell out our support of teaching abstinence."

"Teen pregnancy has reached epidemic proportions in this state," he continued. "Some parents are doing an excellent job of informing their children and some are not. If all parents were doing their job, we wouldn't feel the need for these recommendations."

APPAC recommendations for health, sex education

The Adolescent Pregnancy and Parenthood Advisory Council (APPAC) will present a report to the 73rd Texas Legislature today listing recommendations for lowering the skyrocketing teen pregnancy rate in Texas.

The council's recommendations include:

- Providing accurate information regarding consequences of sexual behavior.
- Self-responsibility for health promotion and disease control.
- Promoting abstinence and providing information on birth control and prevention of AIDS and other sexually-transmitted diseases.
- Developing an information center to link students with health, medical, social services, education and employment.
- Accessible child care and parenting education for teen parents.
- Parental education and involvement.
- Life skills, including self esteem and responsible decision-making.

Teen pregnancies: Costly, preventable

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The problem of teen pregnancy has reached epidemic proportions, according to the Texas Department of Human Services and the Texas Summit on Adolescent Pregnancy Prevention.

Facts provided by the organizations include:

• Howard County ranks 70th in teen pregnancies across the state, with about 40 pregnancies a year per 1,000 teens.

• Texas ranks second in the nation in the number of births to teens age 19 and under.

• Texas is tied for second in the nation in the number of births per 1,000 teens age 15-17.

• In 1990, 73 per 1,000 teens in Texas became pregnant; included in those giving birth were four 11-year-olds and 21 12-year-olds.

• 70 percent of teens do not receive adequate prenatal care.

• The average hospital cost for an infant weighing less than 5.5 pounds could range as high as $39,000. Improper prenatal care can contribute to low birth weight.

• 75 teen deliveries could cost upwards of $97,000 of Medicaid inpatient hospital expenses.

• Many pregnant teens are unaware of the potential damage to the unborn child resulting from use of alcohol or other drugs and poor nutrition during the first trimester.

• It is suspected that a significant number of other pregnancies do not make the official recorded list of pregnancies.

• Babies born to teens are at greater risk of lower intellectual and academic achievement, behavioral and self-control problems.

• One-third (27,168) of all dropouts in Texas are pregnancy related.

Finds give new light to culture of Mayans

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Many Mayans apparently enjoyed tombs fit for a king — evidence that life for the Mayan commoner was better than previously believed, according to archaeologists excavating in the jungles of Belize.

Diane and Arlen Chase say findings at the ancient Mayan capital of Caracol show that a broad middle class had fancy pottery and tombs that until recently were thought worthy only of royalty.

"Ten years ago, a tomb was defined in the Maya area as an 'elite entombment,'" partly because researchers believed only Mayan royalty enjoyed such privileges, Arlen Chase said in a recent interview.

Many archaeologists suspected that a tiny elite dominated a mass of peasants. Some have speculated a peasant revolt might have caused the downfall of Mayan society.

Yet "we were finding these tombs out in the middle of nowhere... These little old mounds and all of a sudden you had this massive tomb," he said.

Two unusually complete tombs discovered in 1992 added enough evidence to say "that yes, the rulers are buried in the same basic way as everyone else at Caracol," said Diane Chase.

Some of the Chases' findings are to be presented in a National Geographic television special Jan. 20 on public television.

The husband-and-wife team from the University of Central Florida in Orlando have spent seven years excavating at Caracol, the remains of a 55-square-mile city some 60 miles east of the Caribbean coastline in Belize.

They estimate Caracol held an estimated 180,000 people at the peak of its power in the 6th and 7th centuries.

Their findings add to a series of discoveries — particularly the growing ability to translate Mayan writing — that have revolutionized understanding of an advanced culture that flourished in Central America until about 900 A.D.

Arlen Chase suggested the growing influence of middle classes might have eroded the power of kings in a society that treated royal ancestors as gods. "The rulers' tombs become less and less impressive. It's almost as if the middle class are taking away the elite power... everybody becoming equalized," he said.

University of Central Florida anthropologists Drs. Arlen and Diane Chase, shown recently, have made a historical discovery in Mayan ruins. They found evidence of a thriving middle class in the culture which discounts the old theory that the society became extinct when the peasants rose up against the rich.

Goodbye Marilyn Newsom, longtime friend of BSSH

If January has made you want to clean out and throw away — and if you need a place to go with your discards — take them to The Chalet, 313 Runnels. The Chalet is the Big Spring State Hospital volunteer resale shop and all profits are used to benefit patients at the hospital. Donated items are tax deductible and can be left at the shop from 1-5 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information call 263-0528.

The eye clinic at BSSH is in need of glasses frames. Patients who are unable to purchase glasses are given donated frames and the supply is very low. If you have frames to donate, call or take them to the Community Relations Office, or call 267-8216, ext. 535.

Dr. Charles J. Golden, Director of Neuropsychology for Schirm Associates will be at BSSH to train psychologists in neuropsychological assessment Jan. 11-13. Dr. Golden, an internationally recognized authority in the field, is the developer of the Luria-Nebraska Neuropsychological Battery. He is the Director of the Neuropsychology Clinic and Professor at Drexel University.

The Public Responsibility Committee is a group of volunteers appointed by the Executive Committee of the Volunteer Services Council.

Gene Harrington has been re-elected as chairman of that group, which is an independent, impartial body that is not affiliated with TX-MHMR. The Committee investigates written complaints and responds to written questions or suggestions from patients, parents or other interested parties. There is a need for a new PRC representative to serve on this committee. For further information call community relations 264-4271.

With sadness and heavy hearts, in December, BSSH said good-bye to long time volunteer and friend, Marilyn Newsom. There could be no community organization that received more of Marilyn's love and generosity than Volunteer Services.

For 20 years, she shared her

talents, and gave her time, and devotion to the patients and causes that affected them. Her purpose was always to improve life for the patients. She gave to them, defended them and was always an advocate for them. I never knew Marilyn to say no to any need we had, but instead she was always confident that there was a way to get things done!

Her career began 20 years ago when she sang for chapel services, accompanied by Margaret Baum on the piano. She then served on the Public Responsibility and Patient Abuse Committee. She was the first Legislative Chairman for the Council, which was a committee dealing with state-wide issues.

In 1987, she started a major fundraising event, which was a dance featuring Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys, playing at the Stampede. It started small, and on a shoestring, but her goal was to make it the biggest fund-raiser in Big Spring.

When we made those first plans that year, it was hard to believe that would ever happen. But — with her usual enthusiasm and persistence, and hard work — her dream has come very close to coming true. There will be an emptiness this spring as we plan the dance, without her, but, as she would have wished — the show will go on.

The most recent project Marilyn and Don were involved in is the establishment of a Family Lodge, for family members to stay overnight, while visiting patients. The state is providing a building and needs furniture and household items to complete it. Decorations have been coordinated and memorials for Marilyn will be used for this purpose.

Marilyn's last visit to the hospital was for the Halloween parade last October. She was having difficulty walking and was beginning to fail, but in her determined way, she quietly said, "I have to be there." Standing next to Don, she looked more beautiful than ever as she smiled at the patients and the hospital she loved so much. We never saw her again.

We were fortunate and proud to have her touch our lives. Good-bye old friend of the hospital. Thanks for the memories.

Kathy Higgins is the Director of Community Relations at BSSH, which includes the Volunteer Services and Public Information Department. Memorials and contributions can be mailed to Volunteer Services Council, P.O. Box 231, Big Spring, TX 79721.

Officials learning much from cancer-rate battle

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Health officials in the Chesapeake Bay region are struggling to reduce the nation's highest cancer rates. They have learned that the poor and the wealthy suffer disproportionately from the disease, but that knowledge hasn't easily led to finding solutions.

They seek to answer such perplexing questions as: —How do you convince an inner-city youth whose life is a struggle for survival that he should quit smoking and drinking so much — and perhaps even eat a few vegetables?

—How do you tell an elderly woman who lives on a limited fixed income without health insurance that she needs an annual mammogram and Pap smear when you know she can't afford it?

—How do you tell an affluent, middle-aged man who enjoys a rich diet to adopt a low-fat, fiber-rich one?

For 1992, for the third straight year, the District of Columbia, Maryland and Delaware are expected to rank one, two, three respectively in cancer death rates in the United States, according to the American Cancer Society. The actual figures won't be known until this spring.

Area health planners believe that the problem is largely tied to economic status. Cancer strikes disproportionately at the margins of the American class system: the poor and the well-to-do. And the Chesapeake Bay region has more of each than the national average.

Government has largely succeeded in persuading middle- and upper-class people to quit smoking, moderate alcohol consumption and pay more attention to diet. But taking that same message to impoverished inner-city neighborhoods and rural pockets of poverty has proven to be a very difficult task.

"If you don't have enough money to feed and clothe yourself, it's hard to worry about niceties like how much saturated fat you're eating or reducing smoking so you don't get cancer in 20 years," said Dr. Richard Levinson, administrator of the Preventive Health Services Administration in the District of Columbia.

Dr. Joseph Griffin said government efforts to teach the poor about proper dietary habits also miss a larger point: a low-fat, high-fiber diet that can reduce cancer rates is expensive.

"You eat what you can afford," said Griffin, adult medicine clinical director for the Somerset County Organization for Progressive Enterprises in Princess Anne, Md.

According to the cancer society's projections, Washington will have the highest cancer death rate in 1992: 223 deaths per 100,000 population. That's 30 percent above the expected national average of 171 deaths. Maryland will finish second with 192 deaths and Delaware third with 191.

"Maryland has a complicated picture when it comes to cancer," said Norma Kanarek, a health planner for the state Department of Health and Mental Hygiene.

The Chesapeake Bay region, she explained, lies at the juncture of two cancer "belts."

"Maryland is on the northern edge of the cigarette smoking belt," contributing to higher lung cancer rates, Ms. Kanarek said. "At the same time, we also have high rates in breast and colon cancer which are highest in the Northeast."

Poor people tend to smoke and drink more and eat high-fat, low-fiber diets — behavior tied to several types of cancers. They also are more likely to defer examinations that could detect cancer in earlier, more treatable stages.

Although smoking has declined in the area in recent years, the number of smokers among the poor is still significantly above the national average, health officials say.

The cancer death rate in Delaware is partially tied to a lack of knowledge and access to preventive health care, said Dr. Robert Frelick, medical director for chronic disease at the Delaware Division of Public Health.

Anti-smoking campaign goes to churches, streets

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — The Rev. Melvin Tuggle is fighting for the hearts, minds and lungs of his east Baltimore congregation.

"I could not see the people smoking and killing themselves and tell them they were going to heaven," he said. "If I have one goal in life other than preaching the Gospel, that's to fight the tobacco industry."

Tuggle's anti-smoking sermons at The Garden Of Prayer Baptist Church are one of the approaches being tried in the Chesapeake Bay area to promote healthier lifestyles to those least likely to have them — the poor.

Washington, D.C., Maryland and Delaware have the nation's highest cancer death rates, according to the American Cancer Society. One reason is that the region's poor tend to smoke and drink more and eat foods with more fat and less fiber, health officials say.

East Baltimore's predominantly black, low-income residents have among the highest cancer rates in the nation, according to Diane Becker, a researcher at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine.

They also smoke far more than the national average: 32 percent of women and 48 percent of men in east Baltimore smoke compared with 22.8 percent of women and 28.4 percent of men nationally.

Tuggle and other members of Clergy United for Renewal of East Baltimore are working with the medical school's Center for Health Promotion to tailor church-based programs to minority, low-income and low-education audiences.

The Heart, Body and Soul project, which recently received a $2 million private grant, is the model for similar American Lung Association programs in at least 14 other cities, Ms. Becker said.

Tuggle's 250-member congregation has plenty of other worries: poverty, crime, drugs and the spread of AIDS. But "the community had to be educated that what you're dying from faster than anything is those cigarettes," he said.

Public and private health workers say that message often doesn't play well in poor communities.

"For a lot of those people, that's their best friend — that cigarette."

Weight tables leave 'how thin' a mystery

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Dr. Walter C. Willett believes in good, old-fashioned standards of thinness — the way weight tables used to look before they put on some weight themselves.

Although the three most widely used tables say being thin gives people the best chance of living longer, there's strong disagreement over exactly how thin you should be.

This makes it harder for would-be weight-losers to decide how much they need to drop for their health's sake.

Willett, who is an epidemiologist, and colleagues at Harvard stick with the oldest and thinnest of the three, Metropolitan Life's 1959 tabulation.

"The 1959 Met Life tables come pretty close to being optimal," he said.

As an example, a medium-framed 5-foot-7-inch man could weigh 131-145 pounds in Met Life's 1959 tables, but 140-152 in Met Life's 1983 tables. A medium-framed woman of that height could weigh 128-143 pounds in the 1959 tables and 133-147 pounds in the 1983 tables.

The federal government also has a table; however, the Health and Human Services Department of Agriculture figures don't compare directly because they're based on body mass instead of frame size, splitting up optimal weights by age. But a 5-foot-7-inch person 35 or older could weigh 134-172 pounds.

The two later tables have a big smoking problem, Willett said.

"Smoking does make people thinner, but it puts them at a much higher risk of death," Willett said. "It makes it look extrahazardous to be very skinny."

Because smokers are mixed in on the thin side of the scale, figures on heavier people reflect a false glow of health by comparison, Willett said.

Data in all three tables are questionable because of smoking, but later tables have a worse problem, Willett said.

Willett has been locked in a dispute over this with Reubin Andres, clinical director of the Gerontology Research Center in Baltimore, an arm of the National Institute on Aging.

Western meat eating gets much blame

By HANNS-JOCHEN KAFFSACK
Deutsche Presse Agentur

ZURICH — Since World War II meat consumption has tripled in the Western countries. But at the same time that a large portion of grain production goes to feeding herds of cattle, hundreds of millions of people in the world's poor nations are going hungry.

Meat production also has its ecological side-effects — too much cattle urine, too much methane from animal wastes and too many forest areas destroyed to make room for pastureland.

"Our Daily Meat — This Is How We Are Eating Our World To Ruin" is the title of a Swiss development policy organization book about what Western appetites for beef are doing to the environment.

The organization called "Declaration of Berne" notes that more and more fields and forests around the world are being converted into pasturelands for cattle.

Report: Still vital to get regular ZZZZZs

By ROB DAUMEYER
Thomson News Service

Experts still don't know exactly why humans need between six and eight hours of sleep every night, but the scientific reasons are beside the point.

To those with trouble falling asleep, those reasons are quite obvious the next day: Fatigue, listlessness, even hostility are all common effects of a night filled with tossing and turning.

It's a serious problem, too: A recent Gallup poll showed that 33 percent of the American population has trouble sleeping, and half of those people have serious insomnia.

And, like dentists who still get cavities, people who work in the sleep therapy field have no special immunity to sleep problems. So what better place to go for answers than to the experts themselves? What are their tricks of the trade for getting a better night's sleep?

Their answer to getting a better night's sleep are often as simple as word games, good sex, regular exercise and a bowl of cereal.

"When you can't sleep, get out of bed," said Mike McDannold of the Sleep Disorder Center of Mercy Hospital outside of Cincinnati. "Lying in bed just causes performance anxiety."

McDannold, who said he doesn't usually have problems getting to sleep, recommends getting a snack — anything without caffeine — and reading a book. Then try going back to bed in a half hour.

Because of their basic knowledge of sleep, experts like McDannold are more likely to rely on natural sleep inducers rather than over-the-counter and prescription medications, and are less apt to let occasional bouts of sleeplessness blossom into full-blown insomnia.

"If I have difficulty sleeping on a given night, I don't fight it — I get out of bed and make productive use of my time for one or two hours," said Dr. Gary Richardson, director of the Sleep Disorders Service at Boston's Women's Hospital.

"One bad night of sleep is not a disaster, if you learn to deal with it productively. But staying in bed and tossing and turning can lead to chronic insomnia."

Richardson prefers reading or some other quiet activity over watching late-night TV.

"When you watch television, you tend to wait until the show is over or a commercial comes on. It's easier to put a book down whenever you feel sleepy," he said.

Dianne Hales, author of "How to Sleep Like a Baby," likes to play mental word games when sleep is elusive. She discovered a particularly effective game when she was a new mother and up frequently during the night.

"I start with a simple word and change one letter at a time to make a new word, like pill, pile, file, mill, mile, mole and so on," she said. "It takes just enough concentration so that I'm not lying there thinking I'm still awake."

Helen Sullivan, editor of the quarterly Snooze News, swears by a bedtime bowl of wheat cereal with milk, claiming its complex carbohydrates induce drowsiness.

All the experts agree, however, that it's often what you do before you get to bed that have the most profound effect on how well you sleep.

McDannold recommends morning exercise, which will give you more energy during the day and make you tired at night. He warned, however, that exercise in the

Hair today, gone tomorrow for Americans

DEAR ABBY: The letter about nose and ear hair really got me. You Americans are crazy. You don't seem to realize that nature gave us hair to protect us.

Since when did hair become offensive? Women started to shave their legs when short skirts and silk stockings came into vogue. Then they started to shave their armpits when sleeveless dresses got popular.

Years ago, French models would model sleeveless evening gowns and let the hair under their arms alone. Nobody was offended. Here in the States it was a different story. All the models had to shave. I think the Gillette people must have started it. Today, Americans are razor happy. One music star backs make them feel like gorillas.

Now I learned (in your column) that a woman is totally turned off by a man who has hair in his nose and ears.

I'll bet you are going to get a lot of mail on that one, Abby -- ALL MAN IN AURORA, COLO.

DEAR ALL MAN: I certainly did. And it's still coming. Read on: DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter signed "A Good Friend," who had a male friend she thought the world of, but the excess hair in his ears and nose turned her off.

When I was in high school, the fellow I was going with had a lot of nose hair. He was sweet and fun to be with, but this small problem repelled me. My mother told me if I really liked him, I would tell him; otherwise, as trivial as it seemed, it would come between us. Unfortunately, I was too shy to mention it.

Well, one day my mother told him for me. Abby, I thought I would die of embarrassment when she told me what she had done, but the next time I saw him, he had taken care of the problem, and it made a world of difference to me. (I ended up thanking my mother.)

Men, listen up! It might seem like a trivial matter, but you would be amazed how disgusting nose hair is to some women. Get rid of it! -- HELGA IN LUBBOCK, TEXAS

FOR WEDNESDAY, JAN. 13, 1993

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be more tuned into the possibilities of the day. A partner really does adore you and makes no secret of it. Others are at your doorstep, seeking your input, presence and intelligence. Tonight: Go along with another's ideas.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Be more intent on getting the job done. Your effectiveness is highlighted, and you are able to run with the moment. Distractions do appear, and you are able to roll right through the ups and downs. Make a key doctor's appointment. Tonight: Be good to you.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Be more creative and upbeat about a potential offer. Although you do have expertise in the art of flirting and seduction, be careful as to how another takes your lighter and brighter side. Be open to changes and laughter. Tonight: Be a wild thing.

Cancer (June 21-July 21): Express your concern to another about a domestic matter. Don't push too hard or try to settle everything right away. Be more forthright about what you are seeking. Examine alternatives involving an investment. Tonight: Hang out at home.

Leo (July 22-Aug. 22): Express your deeper side and open up to the changes that are happening to you. Take a good look at what is going on with a loved one. Make necessary calls and get more information. A positive approach takes you a long way. Tonight: Have a close encounter over dinner.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be more aware of your finances and what you feel is necessary for you. Discussions could lead you to another conclusion. Seek out an expert. Look to indulging in an area that is especially important to you. Tonight: Order a pizza.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be more upbeat in how you follow through on a matter that is tied to your well-being. You call the shots today. A positive attitude gets you far. You melt barriers just by smiling. Tonight: Claim your power.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get feedback from a loved one whom you respect. Do more reflecting and refuse to take action just yet. Make time to visit a friend who has the blues. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your playful side emerges today. You are able to take the lead with friends in pursuing a project close to your heart. You are unusually lucky right now, so go for what you want. Tonight: Hang out with the guys -- or gals.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make changes that help you complete your work more effectively. Accept your role as part of the team and recognize just how much you have accomplished. Listen to your sixth sense concerning a parent or older relative. Tonight: Burn the midnight oil.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Consider the possibility of change through further education. Understand where another is coming from when dealing with a problem, and you will find the solution. Consider a potential trip. Tonight: Flip through some travel brochures.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): One-to-one relating allows new opportunities. Touch base with a friend you view as an authority on finances. You gain because of your willingness to talk and be open. Get down to brass tacks. Tonight: Be a romantic.

games with a 132-113 loss to Charlotte on Monday night. The Mavericks, only 2-27, had another 12-game losing streak earlier this season. ... San Antonio has won three consecutive games and has held its opponent under 100 in each game.

STARTS
The Charlotte Hornets improved to 17-14 with a victory over Dallas on Monday night, the best start in franchise history. Last season, the Hornets did not win their 17th game until Feb. 19.

SACKED
Minnesota Timberwolves coach Jimmy Rodgers, whose team had lost 16 of its last 18 games, was fired Monday and replaced on an interim basis by assistant coach Sidney Lowe. Rodgers compiled a 21-90 (.189) record in 1½ seasons with the Wolves, the worst of any coach during that span.

SPEAKING

Sports briefs BASKETBALL

Kentucky took over the No. 1 spot in the college poll, replacing Duke, which had held the position for almost all of the past two seasons. Kentucky (11-0) received 50 first-place votes and 1,498 points from the nationwide panel of writers and broadcasters to easily outdistance Michigan (12-1), which was No. 1 on 14 ballots and had 1,545 points.
Duke (10-1) dropped to third with one first-place vote and 1,494 points. Kansas was fourth, followed by Kansas, North Carolina, Indiana, Seton Hall, Georgia Tech, Arkansas and Oklahoma.
MINNEAPOLIS — Jimmy Rodgers was fired as coach of the Minnesota Timberwolves and replaced on an interim basis by assistant Sidney Lowe. Minnesota, which has lost 16 of its last 18 games, is 6-23 this season after a 15-67 record last season in Rodgers' first season with the team.
ATLANTA — Atlanta Hawks forward Dominique Wilkins, who was expected to miss six weeks after breaking a finger on his right hand on Dec. 15, will be activated for tonight's game against Golden State.

FOOTBALL

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Injured Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly began rehabilitating his sprained knee and the Bills are expected to learn Wednesday whether he will be available for Sunday's AFC Championship. Kelly was injured in the regular-season finale against Houston.
IRVING, Texas — New York general manager George Young had preliminary discussions with Dallas Cowboys defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt about the Giants' coaching job.
BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Chan Gailey, who coached the Birmingham Fire to consecutive playoff appearances in the World League, was named head coach at Samford. Gailey succeeds Terry Bowden, who left to take the job at Auburn.

BASEBALL

DALLAS — The Rev. Jesse Jackson called for owners to establish affirmative action hiring programs and threatened selective boycotts if plans are not in place by opening day.
Jackson is scheduled to address the owners today in Grapevine, Texas, a speech spurred by alleged racial remarks attributed to Cincinnati owner Marge Schott.
Approval of the sale of the San Francisco Giants was anticipated during the meetings. NL spokeswoman Katy Feeney said. Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, the executive committee chairman, also said that a search committee for a new commissioner would be appointed today.

NBA Today

SCOREBOARD
San Antonio at Minnesota (7 p.m. CST). The NBA's two newest coaches meet as John Lucas, 8-7 with the Spurs, faces Timberwolves interim coach Sidney Lowe.

Monday
Larry Johnson, Hornets, had 24 points, seven rebounds and seven assists as Charlotte sent Dallas to its 12th consecutive defeat with a 132-113 victory.
Dale Ellis, Spurs, scored 23 points on 10-of-16 shooting, including two 3-pointers, to lead San Antonio to a 109-91 victory at Detroit.

Week
Seattle's Shawn Kemp, who averaged 20.3 points and 11.7 rebounds in leading the Super Sonics to victories over Golden State, Minnesota and Denver last week, was named NBA Player of the Week. The fourth-year forward is 11th in the NBA with 10.5 rebounds per game and 10th with 2.04 blocks per game, and has helped Seattle (22-8) to its best start since 1982-83.

STATS
Detroit's Dennis Rodman had his third consecutive 24-rebound performance Monday night in a 109-91 loss to San Antonio. Rodman now has 125 rebounds in his last five games and has lifted his league-leading average to 19.7 per game — 4.8 better than second-place Shaquille O'Neal.

SWINGS
After winning nine straight home games, the Detroit Pistons have lost three in a row at the Palace, beaten 109-91 by San Antonio on Monday night.
