Howard College workshop schedule

The Howard College Business Development Center has set its workshop and breakfast schedule for the next six months.

The Minority and Small Business Breakfast will resume on the second Wednesday of each month starting February 10. The purpose of the breakfast is to introduce small business owners who may want to do business with some of the larger businesses and government agencies in the Big Spring area. Learning what these entities are buying is the first step in getting contracts with them or selling them goods and services.

"How to Start a Business" workshop will be on Saturday, January 16 from 8:00 a.m. to noon. Anyone interested in starting a business will get some practical information. Discussion will include the business plan, financing, organizational structure, licensing and permits, etc.

And for the business owner Howard College has initiated a series of courses entitled, "Survival Skills for Business Owners." This is designed to help business owners learn more about marketing, management, finance, computers, sales forecasting, legal issues, etc.

These courses are each 10 hours and will be offered every Tuesday and Thursday beginning January 19, 1993.

For more information on any of these programs, call Howard College at 264-5164.

Trustees OK sale, contract extension

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Big Spring Independent School District trustees accepted a bid for the sale of property considered a liability, approved a federal grant to kick off an academic-based vocational program and renewed the superintendent's contract when they met in regular session Thursday.

"There weren't any problems (in extending Superintendent Bill Mc-Queary's contract for another year)," Board President Don Baker said.

Trustees approved the sale of property at Center Point School, northwest of Big Spring, to a member of a family who had donated the land to the school about 40 years ago.

"We really get out of some liability by selling this land," said Business Manager Ron Logback, "like people trespassing (on the vacant property), vandalism (and structure dangers.)"

Delora E. Hall of Odessa purchased the property as the sole bidder at $101 including transferral costs.

With the approval of an almost $15,000 Tech Prep mini-grant, school officials will begin preparing teachers to implement an academic-based vocational program.

Tech Prep is a cooperative effort involving industry and schools to start high school students on pathways toward associate's degrees for technical fields like nursing, denistry and auto mechanics, said BSISD Vocational School Director Loren Spencer.

"This will help more kids improve their skills," Assistant Superintendent Murray Murphy said. "The interest level should increase as application of the program increases."

High school teachers in areas like vocational school and matthematics will start attending training sessions Feb. 4 to be prepared to begin the program for 1993-94.

The grant will pay for costs of implementing the program like personnel training and computer software.

In other business, trustees:

Hearing yields strong local support for prison

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Not one negative comment was uttered about a proposed 500-bed privately-run state prison at a public hearing Thursday night.

"In fact we can claim total community support. I don't know of any community that can do that," said Big Spring City Manager Lanny Lambert, one of more than a dozen speakers. "We believe this is a perfect match."

More than 70 people attended the hearing in Building 1106 at the Big Spring McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark. Also attending were two officials of RECOR Inc. of Austin, the firm planning to bid for a contract to handle state prisoners.

The hearing was recorded and a tape will be sent to the Texas Board of Criminal Justice, the agency to decide prison locations.

An estimated 30 to 40 communities are vying for two 500-bed privately-run prisons, including Colorado City, Sweetwater, and Snyder. Another 1,000 beds are expected to be given to existing private prisons. Of more than 53,000 state prisoners, only 2,000 are held in private facilities.

"It's a great public hearing. It's the best I've been to," said RECOR Chief Financial Officer John Vanderslice, who said he's been to about a dozen such hearings the past two years.

The chances of getting a prison in Big Spring, he said, are "very good. I think they're about 50-50." Speakers represented local government, business, education and medical interests, all either testifying to the need for such a facility or willingness to provide support programs or services.

"What you'll find in Big Spring is that you've got a group of people that will work with you," said Howard College President Dr. Cheri Sparks, who told RECOR officials that college programs are in place to train and educate personnel and their families and inmates of federal prisons here.

"We do ask that Big Spring be given serious and fair consideration," said Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce President Ben Bancroft.

"Big Spring needs the jobs and most of all we need the tax base," Mayor Tim Blackshear said. "We need it desperately."

The prison would be built on the north end of the airpark in front of Building 1106. City officials say most utilities are in place but any needed lines can be provided.

A prison, according to RECOR officials and Ted St. Clair of Moore Development for Big Spring Inc., would:

• Create 175 to 200 jobs upon completion. Another 128 jobs in the community would be created.

"RECOR's committed to hiring as many of those people locally as possible... at least 95 percent," said RECOR President Glenn Heckmann.

• Increase the city population by 404 people, including 122 students. The 1990 U.S. Census counted 23,093 people in Big Spring.

• Have an annual payroll of $2.6 million to $3 million a year, creating an economic impact up to $7 million.

• Create an initial economic impact from a $7 million construction cost over a nine to 12 month period.

• Increase annual city retail sales by $3 million, including a $59,098 increase in city sales taxes. The 2 percent city sales tax last year amounted to more than $3 million.

• The would possibly be valued at $10 million, generating an estimated $35,000 a year in proper-

Richards' RRC pick criticized

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Texas Republicans, voicing outrage over Gov. Ann Richards' appointment of Mary Scott Nabers to the state Railroad Commission, say Nabers' gas holdings make her a poor choice for the position.

"Mary Scott Nabers has significant ethical problems that clearly disqualify her from this position — or at least should," said Karen Hughes, executive director of the Texas GOP.

Nabers, a member of the Texas Employment Commission, replaces U.S. Senate-designate Bob Krueger on the Railroad Commission. She will be replaced on the commission by Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, Richards announced Thursday.

Nabers, 52, joins Republican Barry Williamson and Democrat Jim Nugent on the Railroad Commission, which regulates the state's energy and transportation industries. She will serve until the next general election in November 1994 and said she plans to run for re-election.

The new appointee owns a 2,800-acre gas field with her husband, Lynn. But she said she does not consider that a conflict of interest.

The Railroad Commission cannot as a practical matter increase the sales price of gas nor increase the amount of production from the Nabers' wells, according to Nabers. The commission does have regulatory authority over well spacing, drilling permits, plugging and production.

"We have looked at this every way you can look at it, and we can find no way that any action I might ever take would impact that," Nabers said.

But Republicans — fresh from an election year in which Democrats questioned Williamson about his in-laws' oil and gas holdings — did not agree.

"I expect that we will raise some serious questions about this appointment," Hughes said. "Mr. Williamson's oil interest was not even owned by him, but Nabers not only owns a gas field, her husband has lobbied for trucking companies."

Nabers' husband, who has lobbied for an Abilene trucking company, said he will not lobby for any companies with interests before the commission.

"None of his clients in the past eight years have gotten preferential treatment from me, and they've all had cases that come to the Employment Commission," Nabers said. "I will not jeopardize my position nor the interests of the state of Texas — ever."

President-elect Bill Clinton, right, and Vice President-elect Al Gore listen to comments made by newly announced appointees during a news conference in Little Rock, Ark. Thursday. In addition to making staff announcements, Clinton answered reporter's questions on issues ranging from his policy on Haitian refugees and diplomatic relations with Iraq.

Clinton's inauguration will have Texas flavor

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Arkansas may be in the spotlight next week as its favorite son becomes the nation's 42nd president, but that doesn't mean the inaugural festivities won't have a Texas flair.

From the Black Tie and Boots Inaugural Ball to the Pearsall horsehair weaver, the Lone Star State will be well represented as a new administration sweeps into power.

One of the hottest tickets in town is the Black Tie and Boots Inaugural Ball put on by the Texas State Society.

"It has become such a popular event because there is nothing quite like going to a Texas party in Washington," says San Antonio expatriate Jill Collins, one of the ball's organizers.

The 6,000 tickets for the Saturday night gala were gone in the blink of an eye and some were being scalped for several times the $75 face value.

In fact, Capitol Hill lore has it that tickets went for up to $2,000 apiece in 1988. Of course, that year Texan George Bush was moving into the White House. He and wife Barbara also attended the ball, as they had done ever since it was initiated in 1980.

While neither the Bushes nor President-elect Clinton are likely to make an appearance this year, the ball will boast two future Cabinet members, an incoming senator and a slew of House members. Treasury Secretary-designate Lloyd Bentsen, Housing Secretary-designate Henry Cisneros and Sen.-designate Bob Krueger are expected to attend the ball, which is one of the earliest inaugural events.

Texas also will be represented at the "Reunion on the Mall," an outdoor festival celebrating regional foods, music and crafts. The two-day event, beginning Sunday, will showcase the talents of several Texas musical groups.

Among them are the Texas Tornados, a San Antonio-based Tex-Mex band; and Asleep at the Wheel, a Western swing band based in Austin.

Pearsall feed store owner and horsehair weaver Rowdy Pate also will participate in the outdoor festival.

The 59-year-old will demonstrate how to weave horsehair into rope and hat bands. He'll also show off his rawhide work, bringing along whips, ropes, bridles and dolls.

Pate is making his first trip to Washington, but isn't planning on hanging around for Clinton's swearing-in Wednesday.

"I'm not too much on parades or politics," he said.

The offices of Texas' 32 members of Congress have been swamped in recent weeks with calls from anxious Texans seeking tickets to a variety of inaugural events.

But the 177 tickets allocated each House member and 250 each senator were quickly spoken for. "Lots of people want tickets," says Larry Neal, press secretary to Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. "Our allotment is long gone."

Tickets to the inaugural parade, the swearing-in ceremony and the inaugural ball are quite difficult to come by. Except if you're state Rep. Hugo Berlanga.

The Presidential Inaugural Committee sent three invitations to the Corpus Christi Democrat, who jokingly has offered up his two spares to Hollywood types who got none.

One Texan who doesn't have to scramble for her tickets is Gov. Ann Richards. She will pop up at many ceremonial events, including a luncheon with Clinton and the nation's other governors Tuesday.

On Inauguration Day, Richards will be at the swearing-in. Later, escorted by son Dan, she will make appearances at two of the 11 official balls.

Organizers say Texans Willie Nelson, Jerry Jeff Walker and Lyle Lovett will be among the big-name performers at some of the various inaugural balls.

Aldine High School's marching band will represent Texas in the inaugural parade. Also participating in the parade are Dallasites Louise Young and Vivienne Armstrong, riding on a float celebrating American families. The selection of the lesbian couple has sparked some controversy.

Three Texans have been invited Monday to the Faces of Hope luncheon.

MH-MR says waiting lists to grow

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Patients in state schools and state hospitals will be turned away and waiting lists for care will continue to grow if more money is not spent on health and human services, officials said.

Dennis Jones, commissioner of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said Thursday the agency's budget of $1 billion would be reduced to $900 million according to a budget plan being considered by lawmakers.

The budget put together by legislative staff wouldn't cover increases in demand for MHMR services, resulting in the loss of 881 of 3,400 beds in Texas state hospitals.

Newest millionaire rags to riches story

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Texas — Laura Minter, a 30-year-old mother who tried to support herself and her three children with her salary as a school cleaning lady, has become the latest Texas Lotto millionaire.

"It's a blessing from the Lord," she told the Athens Review on Thursday after having won the $7 million first prize by picking all six numbers drawn Wednesday night. The jackpot had grown because no winning ticket was sold the previous two drawings.

Ms. Minter sat down in front of her television set in her rundown five-room frame house in northeast Athens Wednesday night when the numbers were being picked.

"I got the first three numbers, so I figured I was going to win three dollars. Then I got the fourth number and said, 'Oh my Lord, I'm going to win all this money.'"

She's been on an emotional rollercoaster and hasn't slept since she learned she was going from poverty to riches, she said.

"I've been shouting and praising the Lord. I've been glad and sad," she told the Athens Review.

Athens is a town of 9,000 about 60 miles southeast of Dallas.

Texas lottery officials said earlier Thursday that one ticket matched the six numbers drawn: 45-41-26-13-21-5. But lottery spokeswoman Shannon McCann said the ticket was sold in Central Texas. She said no one had claimed the $7 million prize.

Lottery officials said 183 tickets were sold that matched five out of the six numbers drawn. Each of those winners gets $900. About 9,300 tickets matched four of six numbers. Those ticket holders will receive $64 apiece.

Total lotto sales, since the game began in November, have topped $120 million, officials said.

Ms. Minter said she bought her winning million ticket at Kidd Jones Chevron Station in Athens, which stands to receive 1 percent of $7 million, or $70,000, for selling it. Station officials said Thursday night they had not been notified by the state.

Ms. Minter will receive the money in installments over 20 years.

She said she plans to use the money to buy a four-bedroom brick house and to buy a new Buick automobile.

However, she said she would report again today to her job as a cleaning lady at Athens High School.

"I don't want to sit around the house, and it's too cold to go fishing. Besides, I'm used to working," she said.

Her supervisor at the high school said when Ms. Minter left work at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, about 90 minutes before the drawing, she had only $4 in her purse. She said she was going to put $3 worth of gas in her tank and spend her last dollar on a lotto ticket.

Instead, she told the Athens newspaper, she bought three $1 lotto tickets with different combinations.

Thursday morning, she was back at school. She clocked in at 11:46 a.m., removed her mop and broom from the closet and went to work as usual, co-workers said. But something was different about her. She was excited about something and wanted to talk.

"She said she thought she'd won the lottery," high school principal Tom Whitman said.

"You did what?" superintendent Wayne Martin said Ms. Minter was asked.

"Where's the ticket?" school officials asked.

Ms. Minter told them the ticket was in a safe place away from school, because she didn't want to risk losing it. It was in her family Bible.

Assistant principal Tony Harrison gave the woman immediate permission to take the rest of the day off, and she clocked out and headed to Tyler.

Clinton's already having problems keeping his word

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — In the heat of the presidential campaign, it often seemed as if Bill Clinton had a promise for everybody.

He pledged to rescue the "forgotten middle class," expand Head Start to cover all eligible children, make health care and college available to all, "reverse" the Bush administration's Haiti policy, chop the deficit in half in four years and cut the White House staff by 25 percent.

That was just for starters. But now, with his inauguration just five days away, the president-elect is retreating from some campaign pledges and finding out that others will be difficult to keep because of budget constraints.

The latest shift came on Thursday, when Clinton said he would continue "for the time being" Bush's policy of forcibly returning Haitian refugees to their homeland, this despite an adamant campaign declaration that, "This policy must not stand."

Clinton insisted he was not going back on his word.

"I still believe the policy should be changed... but I don't think we can do it on a dime on January the 20th," Clinton said, hoping to head off a mass migration of Haitians on the risky trip to Florida.

Clinton and senior aides protest when it is suggested Clinton is abandoning campaign promises. Most will be kept, they say, and those that are being ditched or refined are under review because of changing economic conditions and a bigger-than-expected federal deficit.

"Before you declare that he is not meeting his promises, let him govern for a day," said Al From, Clinton's top transition domestic policy adviser. "His promise to the American people was to bring fundamental change and economic growth. Let's give him a chance. He is going to keep most of them."

Many regional experts said Clinton had little choice but to make the policy shift on Haiti. Still, it stood in marked contrast to his campaign rhetoric and unequivocal pledge in his campaign book to "reverse Bush administration policy and oppose repatriation."

"He needed to keep his word," Rolande Dorancy, director of the Haitian Refugee Center, said after Thursday's announcement.

In the 10 weeks since winning the election, Clinton also has hedged his promises to halve the deficit, reduce the White House staff and give the middle class a tax cut.

Clinton himself appeared half defensive and half indignant when pressed Thursday to explain his apparent retreat from several major campaign promises.

"I think the American people voted for me because they... supported the big things that we were running on," Clinton said. "I think that it would be irresponsible for any president of the United States not to respond to changing circumstances."

As he comes under criticism, Clinton is in many ways a victim of his campaign insistence on specificity. From his announcement speech to acceptance speech at the Democratic convention, Clinton insisted on including detailed policy proposals in virtually every major address, leaving a lengthy list of promises that then were compiled in his campaign book, "Putting People First."

Clinton political advisers say the public is far less concerned than the media with reversals or shifts on any specific promise.

"I don't think people are out there with a scorecard having counted up his 102 commitments and scoring him," said Clinton pollster Stanley Greenberg.

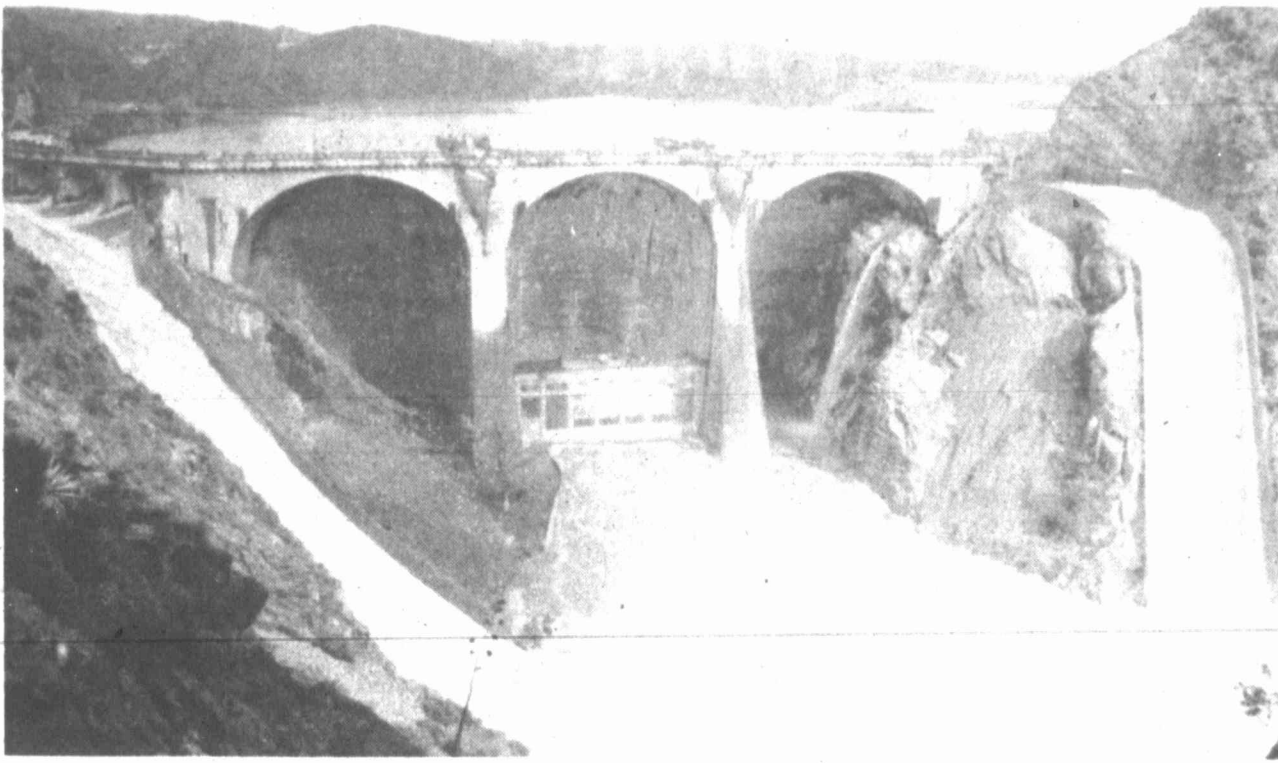

Still, Clinton, the man dubbed "pander bear" by one primary rival, repeatedly has found himself defending policy shifts.

"I think I have to revisit it in light of the bigger deficit," Clinton said Wednesday in explaining why his once solid pledge of a middle class tax cut was now a goal. "I have to put everything back on the table because of the size of the deficit."

Other "goals" now are Clinton's promised 25 percent White House staff cut and 50 percent deficit reduction over four years.

Aides say Clinton eventually will meet his White House staff cut goal and blame the retreat on the deficit pledge to the Bush administration's recent announcement that the federal debt was much worse than projected just a few months ago.

"Reality sometimes governs rather than politics," said Greenberg. "And the reality is that over time things can change. You have to think through the budget situation and address that regardless of what you promised as a candidate."

Both spillways at Coolidge Dam pour water into the swollen Gila River Thursday, keeping up the flood threat 20 miles downstream in the town of Winkelman where an entire area remains under water. About 350 people have been evacuated from the riverside community.

'Most dangerous' dam holding despite runoff

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Engineers closely watched Coolidge Dam on Thursday as floodwater gushed through its overflow spillways, and they were confident the structure once dubbed the nation's most dangerous federal dam would hold.

"I think the possibility of a collapse or failure is very remote," said Ken Clouser, dam-safety coordinator for the Phoenix office of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The 63-year-old reinforced concrete dam is in the early stages of a two-year program to strengthen the rock to which it's anchored.

"We fully believe it will remain intact," said Chuck Morfoot, spokesman for the federal Bureau of Reclamation, which is overseeing the work.

Flooding in Arizona began Jan. 7, a result of heavy rains. Storms eased in Arizona, but continued to batter other parts of the nation. Up to a foot of snow covered Oregon and upstate New York, while freezing rain fell across the Sierra into Nevada. Icy roads caused hundreds of accidents in several states, including a 52-vehicle pileup in Utah, though police there reported just two minor injuries.

The 250-foot-high Coolidge Dam — designed, built and operated by the Bureau of Indian Affairs — is located in a Gila River canyon 80 miles southeast of Phoenix in a lightly populated mining region.

The closest of the mining communities is Winkelman, a town on the San Pedro River, which joins the Gila at Winkelman.

Water began pouring down Coolidge's spillways on Monday for the first time since 1983, when the then-record spillway flow of 5,000 cubic feet per second was set.

The spillway flow topped 17,850 cubic feet per second by Wednesday night, and eased to 17,447 by Thursday morning because of lighter-than-predicted rain, casting into doubt predictions the releases could reach 45,000 cubic feet per second by late Friday. The spillways are designed to handle 120,000 cubic feet per second.

Town Clerk Sylvia Kerlock said Thursday that she and other residents mostly were concerned this week about high water resulting from the spillway releases and other sources, not the dam itself.

Work began last year on safety improvements authorized after Coolidge was named the most dangerous federal dam in 1989 by Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan. A report indicated the rock on one side of the dam could slip and cause the dam to give way, particularly from an earthquake or high water. Those improvements are still in preliminary stages.

While saying the possibility of the dam collapsing is remote, Clouser said movement sensors and other equipment monitored around the clock would alert engineers, who would warn authorities downstream.

In weather problems elsewhere: —Damage throughout the Mexican border city Tijuana was estimated at $32 million so far, with about 4,200 of the 1.5 million residents remaining at emergency shelters.

AIDS deaths could double over 3 years

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Government scientists have painted a somewhat less grim picture of the AIDS epidemic, warning that the number of deaths will double by 1995 but predicting that the disease will spread a little more slowly.

"The AIDS epidemic hasn't plateaued, but it will not grow as fast as in its earlier years," said Dr. John Ward, chief of AIDS surveillance for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"Why? A slowdown in new infections is a possibility, and another is that people with HIV are getting treatment that slows the progression to AIDS."

The CDC on Thursday projected that by 1995, more than half a million Americans will have been diagnosed with AIDS since the start of the epidemic in 1981.

As of the end of September, there had been 242,000 cases of AIDS and more than 160,000 deaths in the United States.

The number of deaths by 1995 is projected to reach 330,000 to 385,000 — more than twice the current number.

However, the number of people infected with the AIDS virus will remain at about 1 million, Ward said.

That is based on current estimates that the number of deaths and new infections are about stable at 50,000 a year, said John Karon, CDC statistician.

AIDS cases will continue to increase more quickly among women and heterosexual couples, while homosexual and bisexual cases will slow, the CDC said.

Cases of heterosexually transmitted AIDS increased 28 percent in 1991, the latest available data, and are expected to continue at about that rate, Ward said. Homosexual cases and cases among injecting drug users are expected to increase by no more than 10 percent yearly.

The number of female cases rose 15 percent in 1991, compared with 10 percent for men, the CDC said.

But "homosexual and bisexual men will still make up the largest pool of AIDS patients — 235,000 to 299,000 by 1995 — because tens of thousands were diagnosed earlier in the epidemic, the CDC said.

BSH salutes:

The Big Spring Herald, each week, recognizes local persons and groups who have been singled out for special honors or who have helped make a difference in the quality of life in and around our community.

- Big Spring High School cheerleaders for being the first local squad to compete in the Cheerleaders Association's National Championships in Dallas.
- Howard College Lady Hawks and Hawks for being ranked third and fourth in the junior college Division I national poll.
- Stacy Tollison and Scott Brooks of Stanton for being named to the All-State Band.
- Jackie Olson, county auditor, and her staff for receiving Government Finance Officers Association's award for an excellent budget presentation.
- City of Stanton for sponsoring the Community Education Program with the first topic "AIDS and the family." Also helping with the program were local churches and Martin County Extension Agency.
- City Secretary Tom Ferguson and his staff for receiving the Government Finance Officers Association's award for an excellent budget presentation.

Airline effort still growing

Efforts to provide commercial air service to Big Spring by Resort Air Lines Ltd. continue despite false reports over New Year's weekend that the firm was no longer in business.

In fact, momentum behind the effort is growing as hundreds of letters have been received by U.S. Senator Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and former U.S. Senator Lloyd Bentsen.

Funding is such that the first plane could land at McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark before the end of summer.

Your continued support of the project is requested.

Letters may still be sent to Gramm, but Bentsen suggests letters also be sent to the Austin office of the Economic Development Administration.

We encourage business owners and officials, elected officials, and "just plain citizens" to take the time to write in support of Resort Air's service to our community.

We encourage our elected officials to formally support the effort as a body.

We also encourage our senior citizen's to support the project.

While Resort Air's service would provide lower-cost service to DFW than that currently available, it also saves the additional expense of driving to and from Midland and having to pay parking tolls. This in a time when the cost of living continues to grow.

Resort Air would create local jobs, purchase fuel and supplies locally and help us all save money.

We encourage you to send letters to the following officials:

- Phil Gramm, U.S. Senator, 370 Russell Office Building, Washington, DC, 20510.
- Roy Ramirez, US Dept. of Commerce, EDA, Suite 201-Grant Building, 611 E. 6th St., Austin, 78701.
- Ann Richards, Governor, State Capitol, Austin, 78701.
- Cathy Bonner, Executive Director, Texas Dept. of Commerce, P.O. Box 12728, Austin, 78711.
- Rick Perry, Commissioner, Texas Dept. of Agriculture, Rural Economic Development, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, 78711.

This date in history

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Friday, Jan. 15, the 15th day of 1993. There are 350 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on Jan. 15, 1943, work was completed on the Pentagon, headquarters of the United States Department of Defense. The Pentagon, located just outside Washington D.C. in Arlington, Va., was built in 16 months at a cost of $83 million.

On this date:

In 1559, England's Queen Elizabeth I was crowned in Westminster Abbey.

In 1777, the people of New Connecticut declared their independence. (The tiny republic later became the state of Vermont.)

In 1844, the University of Notre Dame received its charter from the state of Indiana.

In 1870, the Democratic party was represented as a donkey for the first time in a cartoon by Thomas Nast in "Harper's Weekly."

In 1892, the rules of basketball were published for the first time, in Springfield, Mass., where the game originated.

In 1919, pianist and statesman Ignace Paderewski became the first premier of the newly created republic of Poland.

In 1929, civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was born in Atlanta.

In 1942, Jawaharlal Nehru succeeded Mohandas K. Gandhi as head of India's National Congress Party.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Lloyd Bridges is 80. The Archbishop of New York, Cardinal John J. O'Connor, is 73. Actress Margaret O'Brien is 56. Singer Don Van Vliet ("Captain Beefheart") is 52. Actress-singer Charo is 42.

Understanding southern diction

A Bill Clinton aide was on television talking about the upcoming inauguration of his boss. He said the theme of the event is, "Y'all, come."

I thought "y'all" might be thrust upon the public with the election of Clinton and his running mate, Al Gore.

Clinton, of course, is from Arkansas and Gore is from Tennessee. I don't count either man as having all the characteristics of a true Southerner since both passed up their state universities for Georgetown and the Ivy League.

But both obviously understand "y'all" and use it often. I heard Gore unleash many "y'alls" during the campaign.

Y'all is, to be sure, a Southern thing that most people living outside the South don't understand.

I have long been involved in y'allism. I find it a charming phrase that is pure Southern, but because it is misunderstood and will be used a great deal during the next four years of the Clinton administration, I thought it would be wise to discuss "y'all" at some length.

Lewis Grizzard

The biggest mistake people from outside the South make in the "y'all" area is they don't think we say "y'all" at all.

They think we say "you all."

A Southerner visiting the North surely will be mocked the first time he or she opens his or her mouth and out comes a Southern accent.

Northerners will giggle and ask, "So where are you all from?"

I answer by saying, "I all is from Atlanta."

For some unknown reason, Northerners think Southerners use "you'all" in the singular sense.

How many movies have I seen where a Northerner is trying to do a Southern accent, failing miserably, saying "you all," while addressing one other person.

Southerners rarely use "you all" in any situation but they never, never, ever, ever, use it when addressing just one person.

If you were in my home and I offered you a cup of coffee I would say, "Would you like a cup of coffee?"

If you and your brother-in-law and your cousin were in my home, then I'd say, "Would y'all like a cup of coffee?"

Y'all is, of course, a contraction of you all, and most Southerners use it in all verbal situations involving more than one other person.

And another thing: Northerners also tend to think Southerners say the following when bidding a farewell to a visitor:

"You all come back now, you heah?"

Maybe the Clampetts said that, but few real Southerners do.

We might say, "Y'all come back to see us when you can," or, "If y'all can't come, call."

But this "you heah" business is the concoction of some Yankee scriptwriter trying to be cute.

I rarely get into a punching mode, but I was doing a tape version of a book I had written in New York, and the producer had hired an actor to speak some of the lines.

"Can you do a Southern accent?" I asked the actor.

"Would you all like to hear me?" he answered.

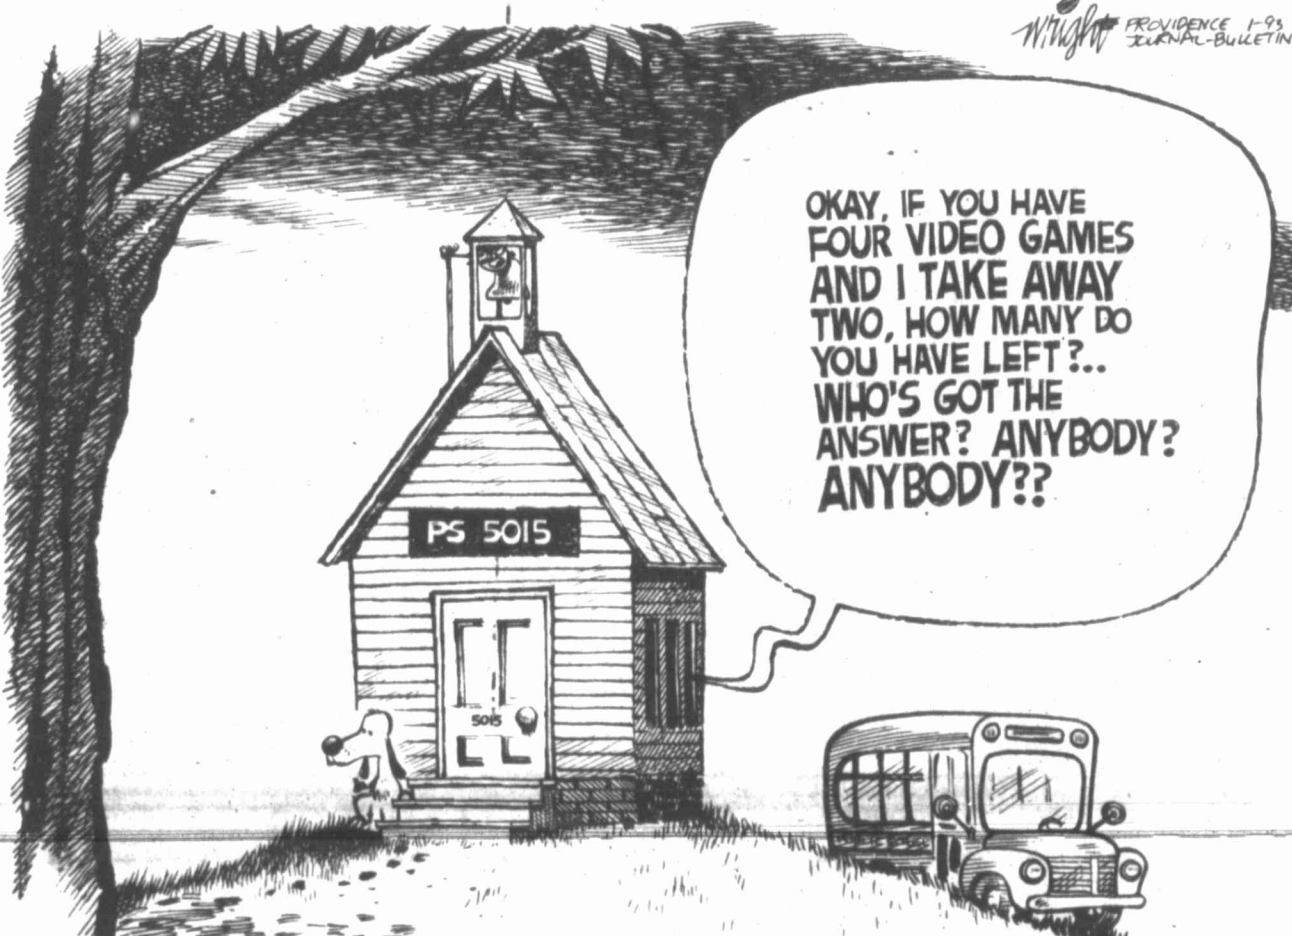

"I've already heard enough," I said. Then, I turned to the producer and said, "This man isn't going to be on my book tape because I will not have the Yankee version of a Southern accent in or on anything that bears my name."

The actor became enraged and said he could, too, do a Southern accent, and I replied, "If you can do a Southern accent, pigs can fly."

We got into each other's face, but before we came to blows, the producer fired the man, and the script was altered so I would be the only one speaking on the tape.

I take the Southern accent and the preservation of its purity quite seriously.

And if any of y'all are going to the inauguration, have a good time. I'd go myself, but I don't want to.

Writer's Art

Just a word on grace notes

The Court of Peeves, Irks and Crotchets resumes its winter assizes with a petition from Ray Strange of Indianapolis. He asks a restraining order against, "I would like to take this opportunity," and other such piffle.

As an exhibit he offers a message from Susan Bayh, wife of the governor, in the Literacy Letter of the Indiana Adult Literacy Coalition. She began by saying, "I would like to take this opportunity to emphasize the value of volunteers in Indiana's literacy programs."

The requested order will be denied. As a general rule, yes, we should write compactly.

"Vigorous writing is concise," said Professor Strunk. "Omit needless words." The court rules that not all writing must be concise. There is room for the grace note, the courteous phrase, the touch of oil that lets the gates of a sentence swing without squeaking.

Obviously it wasn't necessary for Mrs. Bayh to write that she "would like" to take the opportunity, for she already had taken it. The circumlocution rests comfortably in a pleasant corner with the meaningless request of a speaker who begins, "With your kind permission, I should like to begin..." He isn't really asking permission. Six white horses couldn't prevent the speaker from continuing, but a note of deference has a nice sound.

In a related vein, Jean K. Tool of Denver seeks an advisory opinion on the use of "cannot help but." In evidence she offers a comment last year from quarterback John Elway: "The Broncos cannot help but be better next season."

The court will remark, as the court often has remarked before, that there is no logic to idiomatic speech. Read literally, the phrase is a grammatical tangle. It is a distant cousin of the litotes, by which one says that Elway is not an ineffective quarterback. Many respected writers - Vachel Lindsay, John Dos Passos, Mary McCarthy - have said they could not help but do something.

The court denies an injunction against "cannot help but," but suggests that a simpler construction might be smoother: The Broncos are just bound to be better next season.

Bob Jacobs of Olympia, Wash., prays for a firm denunciation of "hones in," and offers as an exhibit an item from the National Schools Report about educators who "honed in on the National Science Foundation." Consider the verb denounced! The educators didn't hone in, they homed in, like missiles that home in on a target.

Carl C. Meyer of Indianapolis questions the advertisement of a grocery offering "fryer hind-quarters" at 29 cents a pound. The court agrees that only quadrupeds have hindquarters. Chickens and turkeys have drumsticks and second joints. The requested injunction will be granted, but the court is prepared to reverse the decision if "hind-quarters" has become a word of art in the poultry business.

Norman C. Smith of Asheville, N.C., objects to the verbing of "scapegoat," as in, "The airline scapegoated the traffic controller." The court also objects to this clumsy conversion of a 16th-century noun into a 20th-century verb, though the court grudgingly accepts a participial form:

"Scapegoating is a way of life in politics." Language evolves, changes, grows, discards, mutates, makes grafts - and the process is wonderful. Even so, to scapegoat a controller is a hybrid creation with nothing in its favor.

Two complaints have to do with "better." Terry Brand of Stayton, Ore., objects to "better than," as in, "How would you like to win better than $5 million in the lottery?" Mollie Christie of Brevard, N.C., questions a columnist's assertion that "if Bush is talking tax cuts, the Democrats better have a tax cut of their own."

The court denies an injunction against "better than" and "better have." Nothing is wrong with, "the Democrats better have a tax cut." Everyone understood that the columnist was saying the Democrats "would be well advised to have a tax cut," or, "would be pretty dumb not to have a tax cut," etc.

As for "better than," in the sense of "more than," in certain contexts "better than" may even be better than "more than." To say that a 5-year-old runner ran "better than a mile" carries a connotation of unusual effort.

The Court of Peeves, Irks and Crotchets can be as stuffy, as pedantic, as hidebound as any appellate court in the realm. Ask not about the misuse of "replica"! Tempt not the court on "hopefully"! But let us always approve a little play in the joints of English composition. Good writing ought never to be a chore.

Moving pains

As I've said before - I'd rather pry my kneecaps off with a screwdriver than say something bad about someone.

But if Saddam Hussein were to just get one lazer-guided smart bomb up his left nostril, I'd dance on the courthouse lawn in a grass skirt and give you 30 minutes to draw a crowd.

Well, world turmoil aside... "World turmoil aside???? Ya mean, you're going to say something relevant about Big Spring!"

Well no.

Actually, to me, the single most mind-numbing facet of modern human existence, currently, is not the air strike on Iraq. It has nothing to do with Mogadishu. And neither has it anything to do with the death of Jazz artist Dizzy Gillespie - although they should close the schools or lower the flag or something.

What it is, in fact, is my overwhelming, primal hatred of moving.

Our new second honcho, John Moseley, needed some help moving in.

Now, I consider myself a good friend. I'll put you up for a month when your spouse kicks you out. I'll help you change the water pump on your car, but God! I really hate helping anybody move.

Is this really a necessary part of the human condition?

Were the ancient Babylonians forced to pack wagons full of cotton bedding, clay bowls and limestone monoliths, moving around to Carthage or some Mesopotamian suburb?

It's a sad commentary on the state of the world when people are forced to carry refrigerators and chests of drawers (it's not called a "chester drawers"! around the world in search of employment.

Ya' know, if I were made king, everybody would have to wear furry bunny slippers to work. But beyond that, I'd forbid all intellectuals from moving - ever.

The reason?

They have so many books! There's nothing heavier than a peach box full of hardbound volumes of Hawthorne and Keats and the collective bound Posthumous Essays.

Those are the books you leave out, to impress your friends. Then there's the one's you really read - like Tolkien, Heinlin, King, Clancy, Wolfe, Anderson and Korbidche.

(I just made up Korbidche to see if anyone was paying attention.)

Anyway, these boxes of books, collectively, comprise about the same mass as a dump truck full of reactor-grade plutonium. I once saw a law professor's U-Haul® burst into flames and melt into the earth.

Have I mentioned how much I hate moving?

Loathe, abhor, despise. Gary Shanks is a staff writer for the Big Spring Herald. His column appears each Friday.

Hawks, Lady Hawks continue undefeated streaks

Lady Hawks pull out a slow one

By MIKE BUTTS
Staff Writer

Frank Phillips' womens basketball team was slow to get to Big Spring Thursday night for their game with the undefeated Howard College Lady Hawks.

When they finally arrived and began a 65-47 loss to the Hawks, they showed no more speed on the court than they displayed getting to the game.

The Lady Plainsmen (10-6, 1-2 in conference) got to town about an hour late because of transportation problems. So the Western Junior College Athletic Conference contest got under way about 20 minutes after its scheduled 6 p.m. start. Phillips then proceeded to play their slowdown game well enough to give Howard some problems before the Lady Hawks put away their 19th win without a loss with a 17-7 run in the second half.

Phillips point guard Ilse Ricketts, a 5-foot-10 sophomore and not a true point guard, set the pace for the Lady Plainsmen attack by bringing the ball up court as slowly as she could get away with.

"It wasn't a rip-roaring game," was Lady Hawk coach Chadwick's understatement afterwards. "They're not very deep and they can't run it up and down the floor on you... they made us play their style."

Lady Hawk guard Vernetra Allen sparked Howard's decisive run with 18 straight points.

Howard (3-0 in conference) was able to secure the win when Chadwick substituted five players — one of whom was Allen — with the Lady Hawks up 40-32 at the 13:30 mark of the second half.

"In practice our bench has been playing better than our starting five, so there's no reason why it shouldn't carry over to the game, and it did," Chadwick said.

The Lady Hawks lead throughout. But they couldn't take enough advantage of their superior backcourt quickness to shake Phillips until the second half.

The Lady Plainsmen cut a 35-21 Howard halftime lead to 37-30 to begin the second stanza. But that's when Chadwick brought in the reserves and Allen started scoring all of the Lady Hawks points.

The 5-7 sophomore began her streak with a three-pointer that gave Howard a 40-32 lead with 12:29 left in the game. She then had two fast break layups, two free throws, a three-point play, another three-pointer and three more free throws. In all Allen accounted for all of Howard's scoring for a nearly nine-minute stretch. When she completed her run, the Lady Hawks lead 55-40.

"There may not be a better offensive player in our league," Chadwick said of Allen, who finished with a game-high 22 points, 20 after halftime.

Tex Schramm: Be prepared

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING — Tex Schramm, from his sunny outpost in Key West, Fla., has some advice for the Dallas Cowboys: Don't get all hyper about the weather and the crummy condition of Candlestick Park.

"On a bad field anything can happen just like it did to us 11 years ago," said Schramm, the NFL Hall of Famer who was club president until Jerry Jones bought the team. "It's important that a young team doesn't get psyched out. And it can happen to a young team. Don't worry about it but handle it."

The Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers played on a sloppy field in the NFC title game of January, 1982. The 49ers won 28-27 on Joe Montana's touchdown pass to Dwight Clark.

"Montana had trouble with the footing and threw three interceptions that day but most people forget about it," Schramm said. "The Cowboys this time need to try to play under control as much as they can and let the 49ers make the mistakes. If I recall, that Candlestick turf is like trying to play on a rug which keeps trying to slip out from under you."

Cowboys at 49ers, 3 p.m.

Schramm said the loss to the 49ers was the beginning of the Cowboys big fade in the NFL.

"We got to the conference championship game only one more time after that so you've got to take advantage of those moments when you have them," Schramm said. "We were so used to being in the championship games that we thought we would be back again and again. It didn't work out that way."

"That game marked the rise of the 49ers and the start of our decline. Danny White's career was never the same. I've always believed if we won that game and won the Super Bowl Danny could have had one of the greatest careers in NFL history. It just didn't work out that way. It shows you that you have to win when you have the big shot."

The Cowboys were four-point underdogs to the 49ers but Jones is bringing out all of the big guns.

Roger Staubach, former Dallas Hall of Fame quarterback, will be the honorary team captain and be at midfield for the coin tossing ceremonies.

"It will be great having Roger around the team," Jones said. "Maybe some of his Super Bowl magic will wear off. Maybe our players will see his Super Bowl rings and decide how bad they want one."

And Schramm, where will he be? "I'll be watching from Key West," Schramm said. "And wishing the Cowboys luck."

Hawks dominate the Plainsmen

By MIKE BUTTS
Staff Writer

It happened again. Thursday night at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum the Howard College Hawks blew out their opponent (this time Frank Phillips, 114-90), dominated the contest's inside game with a slew of slam dunks, and then listened to their coach warn them about not playing well enough.

That's what happens when you're ranked fourth in the country with a 17-1 record and an 11-game winning streak.

The Hawks won the Western Junior College Athletic Conference game behind a splendid performance by sophomore forward Mark Davis. The win set up a showdown with conference foe Odessa College Saturday night in Odessa. Howard now stands alone at the top of the WJCAC standings with a 3-0 mark. Odessa, 17-2 and 3-1 in conference, is second.

The Hawks jumped out to a 16-5 early advantage. They lead by 15 at halftime, and the Plainsmen never got closer than 11 points in the second half. But Hawk coach Jeff Kidder was not at all happy with his team's effort, especially on defense.

"I thought we played terribly," Kidder said. "I think we took a step backwards as a basketball team. I'm very upset with the team defense. (And) they got us into that run-and-gun thing and we're really not that kind of a team."

The 90 points the Plainsmen scored represented only the fourth time this season the Hawks have allowed 90 or more. And Frank Phillips entered the game in last place in the conference with an 0-3 mark, 1-12 overall.

"The only positive thing tonight is that Mark Davis is a great player and we won the ballgame," Kidder said.

Davis lead the Hawks inside

Phillips coach Matt Ellis was sufficiently impressed with Howard. "They just ate us up inside," he said.

The Plainsmen briefly threatened to make a game of it midway through the second half. They scored ten straight points to cut Howard's lead to 91-80. But Kidder called a timeout, after which the Hawks reeled off 13 straight.

"We just wanted to put them on the defensive and make short passes," Kidder said. "We wanted to make it a half-court game." The Hawks finished with five players in double figures, including Chuckie Robinson (22) and Reco Burt (19).

Kidder said he wants to alter his lineup for the Odessa game to combat the Wranglers' quickness and pressing defense. The Hawks strength is in their big men, but Kidder wants to put better ball handlers on the floor against Odessa.

Utah Jazz rediscover dominance on their homecourt

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Utah Jazz, embarrassed by their 1-4 start at the Delta Center after they went 37-4 there last season, have rediscovered their homecourt dominance.

They proved it with a 96-89 victory Thursday night over one of the hottest teams in the NBA, the Seattle SuperSonics, fresh off a win against the Phoenix Suns two nights earlier.

Utah got its best performance of the season from Olympian Karl Malone, who had a season-high 38 points on 12-for-18 shooting and 12 rebounds. Malone scored 27 points in the second half, five of them to start a game-ending 7-0 run in the final minute, giving the Jazz their 11th consecutive home victory.

"Too much Karl Malone," Seat-le's Eddie Johnson said.

Spurs 108, Bucks 93

Dale Ellis scored 14 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter and San Antonio won at Milwaukee for its fifth straight victory and the Bucks' fifth consecutive defeat.

David Robinson had 21 points with 16 rebounds and Avery Johnson had 18 points and 10 assists for the Spurs, now 10-2 under John Lucas, who replaced Jerry Tarkanian as head coach on Dec. 18. The five-game winning streak corresponds with Johnson's arrival in the starting lineup.

San Antonio led by as many as 22 points in the third period. The Bucks closed within five in the fourth quarter, but couldn't stop Ellis.

Rockets 114, Hornets 102

Vernon Maxwell scored 12 points and rookie Robert Horry 10 as Houston opened a 17-point lead in the first quarter and held on to win at home against Charlotte.

Horry finished with a career-high 26 points, Maxwell had 25 points and 11 assists and Hakeem Olajuwon 14 points and 19 rebounds for the Rockets, who have three consecutive victories following a seven-game losing streak.

Dell Curry scored 21 points and Larry Johnson had 20 points and 12 rebounds for the Hornets.

Houston connected on 17 of 24 shots from the field in the first quarter, when it turned a 9-8 deficit into a 28-11 lead with a 20-2 run.

The Rockets led 59-40 in the second quarter, and Charlotte got no closer than seven in the second half.

Suns 114, Kings 104

Phoenix outscored Sacramento 33-10 in the third quarter and went on to improve its road record to 12-5 behind 23 points each from Dan Majerle and Richard Dumas.

Trailing 66-53 following Wayman Tisdale's three-point play early in the third quarter, the Suns scored the next 19 points in a 4½-minute span and eventually took an 85-71 lead into the fourth period.

Charles Barkley finished with 20 points for Phoenix, which improved its record to an NBA-best 24-6. The Suns' previous best record after 30 games was 23-7 in 1980-81.

Tisdale scored 16 of his 21 points in the first half for the Kings, who missed 13 of 17 shots in the third quarter.

Trail Blazers 104, Heat 93 OT

Portland handed visiting Miami its second overtime loss in as many games as Terry Porter scored 32 points and hit five 3-pointers.

Buck Williams' hook broke a 91-91 tie and started a 13-2 run in the final two minutes of overtime for the Blazers. They extended the margin to 98-91 on Rod Strickland's 12-footer and Porter's fifth 3-pointer, with 55 seconds to go.

Miami's Brian Shaw hit a 12-footer with one second left to force the overtime at 87-87.

Clippers 105, Lakers 102

Danny Manning, who asked to be traded recently before changing his mind, scored 19 points for the Clippers, who lost five of their six previous games.

The game was tied before Stanley Roberts put the Clippers ahead 102-98 with two jumpers. After Sedale Threatt's 20-footer for the visiting Lakers, Ron Harper gave the Clippers another four-point lead with 17 seconds left.

James Worthy's turnaround jumper with 15 seconds remaining pulled the Lakers to 104-102 before Mark Jackson made one free throw and missed one with 9.0 seconds left. The Lakers' Vlade Divac missed twice from 3-point range in the waning seconds.

Hawks 108, Pistons 91

Dominique Wilkins scored 26 points and Atlanta took advantage of Dennis Rodman's injury to beat Detroit.

The Pistons led by as many as 12 points before Rodman, the NBA's leading rebounder, strained his right calf with 4:12 left in the second quarter. Rodman had 11 rebounds and six points before leaving.

Steers action

The Big Spring Steers and Lady Steers play in Steer Gym tonight in District 3-4A games against Andrews. The Lady Steers, who lead the district with a 4-0 record, begin play at 6 p.m., and the Steers start at 8. Pictured are Lady Steers Amy Earnst (with ball) and Cassie Underwood (52).

Phillips went to a zone to begin the second half in an attempt to neutralize Howard's quickness. But Chadwick would not give the zone credit for the Lady Plainsmen comeback. He said his team played the game "like a practice."

"We were in the wrong place all night long and they went into a zone and we were in the wrong place in our zone offense," Chadwick said.

Third-ranked Howard's next game could be its biggest threat so to an undefeated year this season. The Lady Hawks go to Odessa Saturday to take on 18-3, ninth-ranked Odessa College in a 6 p.m. game. Howard and Odessa share the top spot in the WJCCAC at 3-0.

"They'll be the best team we've played all year," Chadwick said. "We're going to go into hostile territory, (it's) unlike anyplace we've played so far this year."

Commander fears Marines losing sight of mission

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOGADISHU, Somalia — The commander of the 10,000 U.S. Marines in Somalia says he is concerned that some of his troops have lost sight of the humanitarian nature of their mission. He has ordered them to treat Somalis with respect.

Maj. Gen. Charles Wilhelm ordered Marines to wave to Somali children, to refrain from pushing Somalis or pointing a weapon at them when crowds form, and to stop blowing their horns when caught in traffic jams.

Wilhelm's observations, in a memo to his field commanders titled "30 Day Attitude Adjustment," were circulated Tuesday morning. That night, the first U.S. Marine to die in Somalia was killed in an ambush.

The coincidence underscored the difficulty of the Marines' assignment in lawless Somalia: in conditions where their lives are endangered, they are required to act as a military force and at the same time make friends with the civilian population.

President Bush sent U.S. troops into Somalia Dec. 9 to restore order in a country devastated by famine and clan warfare. About 350,000 Somalis died last year from starvation, disease and warfare.

In an interview, Wilhelm stressed that pacifying Mogadishu would be conducted without more aggressive rules of engagement, sinking troop morale or acts of retribution.

"These are very disciplined young fellows. They're quite intelligent. When you tell them what we expect of them they try very hard to meet your expectation," he said.

The troops have indeed performed superbly by virtually every yardstick.

In a total military force now numbering more than 23,000, there has only been one, non-fatal incident of friendly fire and no deaths through traffic or other accidents, despite around-the-clock patrols.

Rates of illness, another indicator of discipline and training, have proved remarkably low in a disease-ridden land. Official statistics show only five cases of malaria. The rate of psychiatric visits is just three for every 10,000 servicemen and women.

Officers attribute this to the higher quality of recruits in a volunteer army, which has shed the less qualified through manpower cuts.

Nonetheless, commanders are aware that more American deaths in situations where soldiers feel they're confronting an enemy with one hand tied behind their back could fray morale and spark aggression against Somalis.

Iraq vows revenge despite claims of minimal damage

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iraq has vowed to take revenge for the U.S.-led air raid — but announced it was giving in to the West on two of the issues that had pushed the crisis to military action.

Iraq said Thursday it would let weapons inspectors fly to Baghdad aboard U.N. planes and stop arms-gathering forays in the Kuwaiti border zone. Both were considered violations of the U.N. resolutions that ended fighting in the Persian Gulf War.

U.S. military officials said Thursday that only one of four targeted anti-missile batteries was knocked out in this week's raid and that allied warplanes would attack again if necessary.

The Pentagon said the other three sites were damaged and that the missile batteries there were dismantled after the attack.

Saddam Hussein's military said the strike failed and said the country's air-defense batteries were ordered before the strike not to switch on their radar units in order to make the sites harder to target.

"Our sacrifices in equipment and military hardware were superficial," a military statement said. But President Bush said the raid by 110 U.S., British and French warplanes "made the skies a little safer" and called it "a big success."

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said the raid's success came in disabling the interlocking system of air defense radars, communications and missiles in southern Iraq.

"The Iraqi southern air defense network is now seriously damaged," Williams said.

Baghdad said 19 people, including two civilians, were killed and 15 people were wounded in the air strikes. U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney dismissed the claims of civilian casualties as "gibberish."

However, The Washington Post, quoting unidentified Air Force sources, reported in today's editions that a stray 2,000-pound bomb did heavy damage to an apartment building near Basra. The newspaper said Pentagon officials gave no explanation and no casualty estimate for the bombing.

Despite Iraq's giving in to the allies on the weapons inspectors and border forays, deputy premier Tariq Aziz said Iraq was not retreating.

"Iraq condemns this bald-faced aggression and reserves for itself the right to respond to it," he said. "And this is what we will do, most certainly."

The raid was in the southern "no-fly" zone, where the allies have banned Iraqi flights to protect Shiite Muslim rebels from air attack. Iraq does not consider the zone legitimate and the allies said the anti-aircraft batteries were a clear threat to allied planes patrolling the zone.

Some independent analysts said the raid was much less of a success than Washington claimed.

The large number of planes and the absence of substantial Iraqi resistance should have ensured a clear success against targets well known to U.S. military planners, they said.

"I think Hussein comes out a winner," said Joshua M. Epstein, an international affairs specialist at the Brookings Institution. "He can claim he stood up to the West."

And that was echoed by the leader of Iraq's rebellious Shiites.

"This is what Saddam Hussein wants," said Ayatollah Mohammed Bakr al-Hakim, according to Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

Aziz, the Iraqi deputy premier, said Baghdad had ended a ban on U.N. flights that prevented weapons inspectors from dismant-ing Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

That commitment could be tested soon.

Doug Englund, Bahrain-based regional chief for U.N. weapons inspection teams, Thursday asked Baghdad to give its clearance for the resumption of U.N. flights to Iraq.

A week-old Iraqi ban on flights has stranded some 60 Western weapons experts and administrative staff in Bahrain, where the teams are headquartered.

Following the air strikes, Baghdad also promised to stop raids into Kuwait to remove Iraqi weapons left there after Iraqi forces were routed in the 1991 Gulf War.

U.N. diplomats said Iraq sent two letters to the Security Council expressing willingness to comply with the U.N. resolutions and asking permission to retrieve equipment from the border area with Kuwait.

Knife-wielding man killed as unrest builds in Israel

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian man stabbed four people at the central bus station during rush hour today, then was shot to death by a passerby. The attack came the morning after soldiers killed two Arabs in the occupied Gaza Strip.

One victim was seriously wounded in the attack at Israel's busiest bus station, and the others suffered moderate injuries. The victims included three Israelis and a Lebanese man from inside Israel's self-proclaimed security zone along its border with Lebanon.

A Tel Aviv police commander, Yehuda Wild, told Army radio that the assailant, who was identified only as a 25-year from Gaza, was shot by an Israeli civilian. Radio reports said passersby beat him after he was shot.

Witnesses said the man ran toward his victims at a cafe in the enormous station complex and shouted

"Allahu Akhbar" — Arabic for "God is Great" — as he stabbed his first victim.

The attack came as clashes between Israeli soldiers and Palestinians increased amid controversy over Israel's deportation of 415 Arab men to Lebanon last month. The men were expelled in retaliation for the slayings of six soldiers.

Thursday night's victims in Gaza were a 14-year-old boy shot while soldiers chased armed men at a memorial ceremony in Khan Yunis, and a 62-year-old man killed while soldiers searched for wanted men in Deir el Balah refugee camp, Arab reports said.

The reports said 35 other Palestinians also were wounded in the Khan Yunis clash.

The fatalities raised to 1,014 the number of Palestinians killed by Israelis during their 5-year uprising against Israeli rule in the West Bank and Gaza. Another 693 have been killed by fellow Arabs as alleged collaborators with Israel, and 113 Israelis also have died.

Searchers believe 54 dead in German ferry accident

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

STRALSUND, Germany — German and Polish rescue teams searched today for signs of life inside a Polish ferry that flipped over in the Baltic Sea, killing at least 54 people. Experts said the chance of finding anyone alive was slim.

The ferry Jan Heweliusz capsized Thursday about 20 miles east of the German island of Ruegen while en route from Swinoujscie in Poland to the Swedish port of Ystad.

Waves washed across the upturned red hull of the 412-foot ferry today. Only nine of at least 60 people on board had been found alive.

The survivors were suffering from hypothermia after being plucked from storm-whipped, icy waters.

Thousands of seniors in graduation danger

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Eighty-one percent of Texas' high school seniors have passed the state's mandatory high school graduation test, the Texas Education Agency reports.

That still leaves 28,230 seniors who have failed one or more sections of the exit-level Texas Assessment of Academic Skills and are in danger of not receiving a diploma.

Those students have one more chance to pass the test while they still are in school, in May. They also may continue taking it after leaving school.

Of 187,015 students who initially took the test as juniors in the fall of 1991, 150,939 since have passed it, or 81 percent, TEA spokeswoman Della May-Moore said Thursday. They have had four chances to take the test, most recently last October.

Besides the seniors who haven't yet passed, another 7,846 students either left the public school system, passed a graduation equivalency test or were retained as juniors, Ms. Moore said.

To pass, students must correctly answer 70 percent of the items on the reading, writing and mathematics test. They also must write an acceptable essay.

The number of seniors who haven't yet passed all sections is about 9,000 higher than this time last year, said TEA spokesman Joey Lozano. The previous class had to meet a 60 percent passing standard.

TEA also reported that of 184,023 juniors taking the test for the first time last October, 53 percent passed, or 98,450 students. That's compared to 48 percent in fall 1991.

Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno credited local educators with helping students who had previously failed the test to acquire the skills they need to pass.

"Students also are taking the examination seriously by putting in the time and the effort necessary to acquire the real-world knowledge and skills upon which the TAAS tests are based," he said.

TEA also said average scores on the exam are improving.

Gov. Ann Richards said she was pleased that more than 80 percent of current seniors have passed the test, and that average scores have improved. She said she was proud of juniors and seniors "for demonstrating that they're serious about their education."

Meno said he is concerned about students who have yet to pass, and that minority student performance must improve "if Texas is to have excellence and equity in student performance."

Sixty-seven percent of white juniors passed all the test sections taken last October, while 38 percent of Hispanic juniors and 32 percent of black juniors passed.

13-year-old invited to inaugural after working for Clinton team

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — A 13-year-old from Austin is living proof that one person can make a difference in electing a president — even if he isn't old enough to vote.

At least the staff heading up Bill Clinton's inaugural bash thinks so.

"This is an outstanding area," Vanderslice said. "We've been all over the state, we know every community."

RECOR is also proposing to build a 500-bed prison in Laredo and is currently building a 60-bed juvenile detention facility in Sweetwater. A related company, Secure Correction of Austin, operates an 110-bed adult probation facility in El Paso and a 25-bed youth facility in Fort Worth.

The program, conducted in classrooms, uses videos, puppets and student discussion to help children recognize hints of physical or sexual victimization.

Cunningham is counselor for Marcy and Moss Elementary Schools. Gainey is counselor for Anderson Kindergarten Center, College Heights and Kentwood Elementary Schools, and McCrea is counselor for Washington Elementary and Bauer Magnet Schools.

Become a better parent Counselor to offer six-session workshop

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Features Editor

It's a difficult time to be a child, and possibly even tougher to be a parent.

"Kids are facing stress full-time now — more pressure, more temptation — as they encounter drugs and alcohol," said the Rev. Ginger Jarman, a pastoral counselor. "It's a more difficult time to parent kids than ever before."

Jarman and the Big Spring satellite of Samaritan Counseling Center plan a series of parenting workshops. The course, Active Parenting Today, begins Jan. 26, continuing for six Tuesdays at 6:45 p.m., First Presbyterian Church.

"Babies don't come into this world with a set of instructions," Jarman said. "We wouldn't think of putting someone behind the wheel of a car without driver's education, but we never really think about parental instruction."

Six sessions will include such topics as "Instilling Courage and Self-Esteem," "Understanding Your Child's Thinking" and "Solving Problems Together." The workshop is geared toward parents of children ages 2-12.

Today

'All of us find it hard to be the best parent we can be. It helps parents to know we make mistakes, but if we're committed to growth, it is always possible.'

Rev. Ginger Jarman, pastoral counselor

"Kids already in trouble is not what it's designed for," Jarman explained. "It's designed to help families that may be already working fairly well, function better."

Sessions will be based largely on a curriculum, "Active Parenting Today," by Michael Popkin. Cost per session is $15 per person, or $25 per couple. Those who pay the course fee on or before Jan. 26 will receive the book free.

"The reason I conduct this workshop in a group is that I find they can offer each other a lot," Jarman said. "You find out you're not in there alone."

She recommends the workshop for one parent from a family or both.

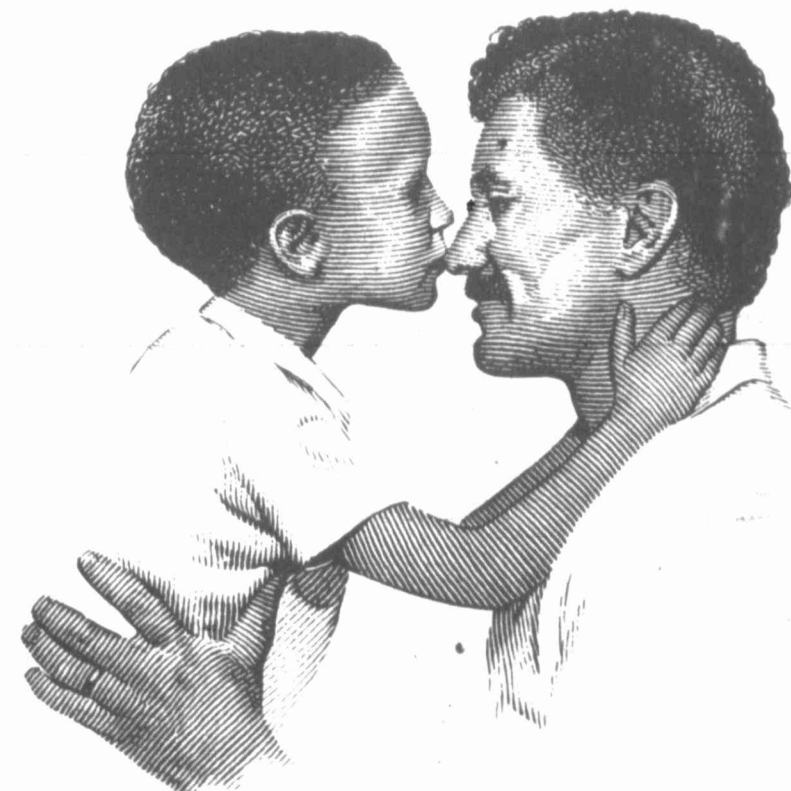

Jarman, an ordained minister in the Christian Church, has Bachelor of Arts, Master of Divinity and Doctorate of Ministry degrees from Texas Christian University and Brite Divinity School in Fort Worth. She is a member of the American Association of Pastoral Counselors and a state Licensed Professional Counselor.

Through the satellite of Samaritan, Jarman conducts pastoral counseling sessions each Tuesday at First Christian Church.

Although the curriculum was developed for secular audiences, parents can apply their own religious beliefs, Jarman said.

"Active Parenting is meant to reach parents of all faith groups, but it has been well-accepted in churches," she said. "It's in line with what the church has taught. But it doesn't impose any beliefs on the parents."

Class size for the workshops is limited to 20, so early registration is recommended.

Jarman said she found the Active Parenting curriculum helpful in her own experiences as a parent.

"All of us find it hard to be the best parent we can be," she said. "It helps parents to know we make mistakes, but if we're committed to growth, it is always possible."

Elbow Extension

The Elbow Extension Homemakers Club met Jan. 7 at the home of Zula Rhodes. Rhodes gave the devotional and Myrl Soles read the thought for the day. Fourteen members and one guest (Tamara Sneed) were present.

The year started with a new slate of officers: Wanda Lee as president, Helen McIntyre vice president, Chole Perdue as secretary and Dorothy Blackwell the treasurer and Zula Rhodes council delegate.

Hostesses and programs were planned for the year. The next meeting will be Jan. 21 at the home of Lou Vincent.

We encourage visitors, our theme is reaching people, training leaders.

Quilters

The Signal Mountain Quilting Guild met Jan. 8 at the home of Polly St. Clair with 14 in attendance. Future meetings will be held at the First Baptist Church. Officers were selected as follows: Coordinator, Polly St. Clair; Assistant Coordinator, LaRue Deviney; Treasurer, Johnnie Bennett; Librarian, Nell Clark; Hostess Coordinator, Pauline Hillger and Maria Leahanna. Newcomers Gene Puckett; membership Joy Dugan; publicity Jean Money.

Projects for future meetings were discussed. A red, white and blue project for July is planned and each member is encouraged to make a sample of the guild logo for a nametag. Larger versions of the logo will be made by the individual members to create a quilt for the guild. Members are encouraged to bring these projects to the next meeting Feb. 12.

Anyone interested in joining the guild should call 264-7107 Polly or 263-2959. The next meeting will be Feb. 12 at the First Baptist Church at 10 a.m. Bring your projects and plan to stay through lunch, and into the afternoon.

Members who attended: Polly St. Clair, Johnnie Bennett, Dale Ferguson, Nell Clark, LaRue Deviney, Pauline Hillger, Maria Leahanna, Gladys Perkins, Joy Dugan, Gene Puckett, Kathleen Marnien and daughters; and Jean Money.

City Extension

Kathy Higgins, director of Community Reactions for the Big Spring State Hospital, spoke to the City Extension Club in the home of Nadine Hodnett, Jan. 8 at 2 p.m.

She explained the changing outlook for Texas Mental Hospitals, saying that down-sizing is to be expected across the state, with more emphasis on community participation in treatments of clients.

Ms. Higgins has been associated with the Texas MHMR Dept. for 10 years, having served in Big Spring and El Paso, and has recently

Special to the Herald

"Affair of the Heart" is the theme for the first Women's Ministry Seminar for the newly formed Women's Ministries of First Baptist Church.

The banquet/seminar will be Feb. 16, 6-9 p.m. The banquet will feature, Robbie Ellis, former missionary to Brazil and noted women's speaker. Mrs. Ellis will also hold a seminar on Wednesday morning at First Baptist Church.

Tickets will be available for $5 from any Women's Ministry council member or the First Baptist Church office. Deadline for purchasing the tickets is Feb. 9. There will be a nursery provided for the event but reservations for child care also need to be made by that date.

This banquet/seminar is the first major event for the Women's Ministries of First Baptist Church.

"We hope to have a special event to involve all women of all ages at least once a quarter," stated Brenda Banks, Women's Ministry Coordinator. Beginning this month, there will be nine ongoing ministry groups holding organizational meetings.

The group meetings will vary, some will meet weekly and others monthly. The goal of these groups is to have a variety of options available to meet the needs and accentuate the gifts of the women of First Baptist Church and Big Spring.

Diane Fox (263-8665) is the coordinator of the Mission Action group. The purpose for this group is to be active in the community and church serving wherever needed. This group went to work during the Christmas holidays by helping with the State Hospital Christmas parties and birthday parties at a local nursing home.

WASHINGTON — The Japan Baptist Union has adopted a "manifesto of repentance" for its cooperation in the "oppressions and invasions" carried out by the Japanese government in World War II.

"With deep pain, we repent and confess our sins to God and we ask all people who were victimized ... to forgive our sins," says the statement, a copy of which was received at offices here of the Baptist World Alliance.

CLEVELAND — A Filipino pastor, the Rev. Guillermo N. Bergado, has taken on a newly created post in the United Church of Christ as secretary for Pacific Islander and Asian-American church development.

Melody Stokes (267-5980) is in the process of organizing a prayer chain for all women. If anyone is interested in being an on-call prayer warrior (evening or daytime) you can contact her.

One group which has been meeting for several years is the Nursing Home Ministry. Doris Mason (263-2405) is the coordinator for this group which was devotional services for three nursing homes on a weekly basis.

Book reviewing is the focus of the group headed by Terri Johansen (263-8216). It will meet for the first time Tuesday in the Fellowship Hall at First Baptist Church, 7 p.m.

There will also be two ongoing Bible Study groups. Marisa Ray (354-2572) will be leading the morning bible study. There will be an organizational meeting of this group on Monday at 10 a.m. in the Family Life Center.

Churches finding odd places to meet

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

EULESS — For the Calvary Chapel Assembly of God congregation, the stairway to heaven begins in a Holiday Inn.

For it is there, in a $75 meeting room alongside Airport Freeway in the Fort Worth-Dallas area, that this congregation of 12 Hispanic families has gathered every Sunday for the past three years to worship.

But soon no more. Calvary Chapel is relocating to a long-empty Pizza Hut on Euleus Boulevard.

"One day we hope to build our own church, but until then the Pizza Hut will be a permanent home," says its pastor, Joel Menchaca.

It wasn't long ago that a Sunday at church meant steeples and stained-glass images of epiphanies and prophets. But nowadays, as numerous small congregation compete for attention, religious services more and more frequently occur in borrowed sanctuaries, strip malls, hotels...even movie theaters.

Take, for example, Vineyard Christian Fellowship. Before relocating in September to an abandoned music store in a small Euleus strip mall, its flock of 70 congregated for a year at the same Holiday Inn as does Calvary Chapel.

Or take Sabit Baptist Church. For nine years, the Korean congregation of 45 worshippers has celebrated in the sanctuary at Bellevue Baptist Church on West Pipeline Road. Next spring, Sabit will relocate to a new chapel that the congregation is financing atop land where a grocery once stood.

"It is more convenient location near the Korean community in Irving," said Sabit Baptist minister Hyo Young Kim. "We've been looking for nine years; we just never had the money."

And cost-consciousness is key, for the manna that nourishes these compact congregations typically comes from followers' pocketbooks.

"With the economy the way it is, and the fact that land is still costly, the non-prime sites such as old Pizza Huts and empty shopping centers are becoming the locations that fit the price range a small church can afford," said City Planner Rod Tyler of Euleus, a suburban city near Fort Worth.

Where a traditional church building can cost several hundred thousands dollars to design and build, idle mini-malls can be bought for 25 cents on the dollar, said Joyce Parchman, publication director for the National Association of Church Business Administration in North Richland Hills.

Earlier this year, for instance, NEWCHURCH administrators went looking for a new home after spending about $5,000 a month for a year and a half to rent space in a Hurst business park from a Seventh-day Adventist congregation. "We found land prices were far too expensive for us," said its pastor, Gary Kirksey.

Instead, NEWCHURCH in May bought the abandoned Coventry Shopping Center in North Richland Hills from the Resolution Trust Corp. for what Kirksey said "was a quarter of the cost of building." The church renovated part of the 40,000-square-foot facility and opened for services in November. Kirksey expects that the move will ultimately save the congregation at least $500 a month.

Said Euleus' Tyler, "There are a lot of empty strip malls out there that, financially, give a church a chance to get out of someone's living room and into a place of its own."

Or, in the case of Northwood Church for Communities, the abundance of vacant shopping centers offers the opportunity to wriggle out from beneath the burden of rapid growth and the expense of a customary church building.

Northwood also sponsors two missions, which one day will grow into independent churches — and which, like Northwood, gather in unorthodox locales.

Buying icons

Muscovites line up Wednesday to buy icons at a kiosk belonging to the Russian Church in 1917. It was the first official selling of icons since the Bolshevik Revolution in 1917.

Churches face 'media generation'

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Parents and pastors don't want their MTV.

But even as they express concern with the glorification of sex, violence and personal riches on many music videos, religious groups are not a little envious of the success MTV has in reaching the nation's youth.

So how do those concerned with instilling religious values such as compassion and a sense of identity that extends beyond self-love compete in a video age?

The Roman Catholic Church has launched a media literacy campaign that seeks to deal with music videos by helping youth examine the commercial aims of the industry. Many evangelical churches have sought to beat the music industry at its own game, bringing in Christian rock groups and producing their own videos with a religious content.

But what may be the most successful approach is giving young people an alternative to MTV, either by encouraging volunteer work or by having them play an integral part in developing music and art used in liturgies, according to Quentin Schultze, author of "Dancing in the Dark: Youth, Popular Culture and the Electronic Media."

"Parents have to empower their children to break the consumerist habit," Schultze said. "The way you do that is to get young people involved in creating their own culture."

What researchers and religious leaders seem to agree on is that MTV is effective in reaching adolescents. An average youth will watch the station from one to two hours each day.

Researchers say much of the success of MTV lies in its ability to relate to youth and give them a sense of identity, however artificial.

"Given the way our society is today ... so many kids are home alone and sitting in front of a television," said Laura Frazier-Phelps of Vanderbilt University, who spoke on music videos to the American Academy of Religion at its annual meeting. "Values are shot to them through television."

1970 Hyperion

The 1970 Hyperion Club met in the parlor of the First Baptist Church with Sherri Key, Shirley Johnson, and Yvonne Ivey serving as hostesses. Dene Sheppard introduced Susan Zack Lewis as the guest speaker. She described Susan as the woman working beside her successful husband rather than the woman behind the successful man.

Lewis' topic was "Teamwork — Husband and Wife." She and her husband, Bob (better known as "Tumbleweed Smith"), have been married 30 years and have two sons.

Concluding the talk, Lewis said she considers herself to be the main cheerleader for her husband and his career. She encouraged club members to get involved with their husbands in their service clubs and other activities.

Suzanne Haney, president, conducted a brief business meeting before the club adjourned. The next will be in the home of Pat Anderson.

Coahoma Senior

Twenty-three members of the Coahoma Senior Center Project met for lunch Jan. 4 at the Coahoma Community Center.

After the meal, each attendee shared stories and events of the recent holidays. Each person was asked to relate their New Year's resolution. Many either did not make one or had broken it already.

A garage sale is being considered for February, but no date has been set.

Pope: Guard spiritual values

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROME — At a meeting psychiatrists hailed as an important sign of Vatican support, Pope John Paul II on Monday cautioned the doctors to safeguard their patients' spiritual side and linked some mental illnesses to a crisis in values.

The psychiatrists asked the pope to lend his moral weight to end the stigma of mental illness.

John Paul welcomed representatives of the American Psychiatric Association, the World Psychiatric Association and other psychiatric groups at a private audience at the Vatican.

After expressing Roman Catholicism's "esteem" for psychiatrists, the pope said the church "is convinced that no adequate assessment of the nature of the human person or the requirements for human fulfillment ... can be made without respect for man's spiritual dimension and capacity for self-transcendence."

"It follows that no genuine therapy ... can ever conflict with the moral obligation of the patient to pursue the truth and to grow in virtue," the pope told the delegation.

Parts is parts to health-care workers, regardless

DEAR ABBY: In response to the radiology technician who was offended because someone referred to her work as "disgusting" -- I have no objections to the work they do. They are performing a good service. However, I think it is extremely immoral for a woman technician to X-ray the intimate parts of a man's anatomy and it is equally immoral for a man to X-ray the intimate parts of a woman's anatomy. There are both women and men technicians in every hospital, so why can't the male technicians take care of the male patients, and the female technicians take care of the females?

Dear Abby

name. It is all right to identify me as a woman. Thank you. -- (FEMALE) READER IN LOUISIANA

DEAR (FEMALE) READER: Where health and human life are concerned, professionals in the health care field do not have the slightest interest in whether the patient is male or female. Trust me.

Furthermore, patients should be concerned only with getting the best possible treatment, and it matters not if the health care professional is male or female.

DEAR ABBY: I was amazed that you did not suggest that the teen-aged identical twins, who were constantly mistaken for one another, wear name tags.

If the relatives have a problem telling them apart, help them out. If engraved identification pins make them feel like hotel desk clerks, how about having some made from gold wire? I'm sure they could find a jeweler willing to solve their identity mix-ups in a beautifully creative way. -- FRIEND OF A TWIN, DALLAS

DEAR FRIEND: Name tags? I would much rather be called "Twin" or "Twinny," which is what Jean Fitzgerald and Bill Gleason kiddingly called both of us back in our high school days in Sioux City.

DEAR ABBY: Why do young women come on to older men? I don't consider myself any glamour puss -- I am 80 years old -- but I have had more young women come on to me in the last few years than I can count. Many are young enough to be my granddaughters. Are they inadvertently searching for a father (or grandfather) figure?

I must mention that I am a widower. I have never been popular with the opposite sex, even when I was a very young man. And I never was considered good-looking.

Can you explain this? -- D.C. IN DULUTH

DEAR D.C.: You may be more appealing than you think. On the other hand, please send me your financial statement, and perhaps I can provide you with a better answer.

Jacqueline Bigar

FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1993

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A friend might disappoint you, and you might need to rearrange your plans. Touch base with family members and friends and see what they are up to. Join in with the group and swing with the moment. Share a secret with a partner. Tonight: Make dinner reservations for two -- now!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Another might come down hard on you. You can choose to get caught up in the criticism or decide to flow with opportunities that come by. Excitement and a sudden invitation hold promise. Be willing to explore other turf. Tonight: Go along for the ride.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get plenty of rest and relaxation, as you need to maximize your energy. Do not let a change in plans get you down. Be more forthright about your desires in discussions with a partner or loved one. Get into a more nurturing mode. Tonight: Chill out in a fun way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Insist on having a close discussion with a friend about money or hurt feelings, even if it is a bit uncomfortable. Lighten up about a problem and get into the fun nature of the day. Be less concerned with the long term. Tonight: Go for the fun and games.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A partner might push you hard today. Stay focused on what is practical. You might want to get into a project at home and ask a family member to pitch in. You feel more in touch with your feelings than you have in a long time. Tonight: Have a long-overdue talk.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your fatigue could stop you from a delightful day of socializing. Make time for a nap or rest, so you can maximize the fun and the games. Be more in tune with your rhythms. Tonight: You party animal!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look at what is important to you and where you are going. Be loving and open in communicating your needs and desires to another. You can expect a response. Indulge a special friend. Tonight: Watch spending.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are personality-plus and others seek you out. A family member is actually jealous of all the attention you are receiving. Talks bring unexpected news, which has you happily readjusting your plans. Tonight: Just ask.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A misunderstanding could put you in a foul mood today. Lighten up and look to the immediate positives. Listen to your sixth sense when it comes to money and a partnership. Be careful with spending, but a loving gesture is always appreciated. Tonight: Lighten up.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your carefree side emerges today, and you discover another approach to a difficult situation. Look at your financial situation carefully before making a major move. Tonight: Be carefree.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take the lead in organizing and bringing together friends and loved ones. You get new insight once you lighten up. Stop and buy a card for a loved one or friend. Tonight: Cruise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You might have a hard time remaining in the moment today. Don't worry. Let your mind drift when making plans. Your imagination, depth and ability to understand others bring success. Tonight: Go for the dream.

THE ASTERISKS (*) SHOW THE KIND OF DAY YOU'LL HAVE: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

THE HOME FRONT
By Kay Moore
Can't afford expensive oil paintings? No matter. One tag-salvage shopper opts for mirrors with interesting frames grouped together like pictures on a living room wall.
Kitchen and bathroom exhausts should be vented outdoors. Vented to an attic, the moisture can be captured in the insulation, ruining drywall construction and sometimes rotting wood studs and joists.
Stenciling as a low-cost decorating tool goes back centuries. But now laser computers are making possible intricate, more-sophisticated designs. Many stencils are available by mail-order.
Protect yourself from shock when replacing a fuse or resetting a tripped circuit breaker. Work with one hand and keep the other in a pocket or holding a plastic - and insulated - flashlight.
What do renters want? One of the country's biggest builders recently developed an apartment "village" in Connecticut of small-size units - some are just 270 square feet - with rent bills to match.
For Listing: What do home sellers want? Expert marketing to get top dollar for any property. That's what you get when you list at Home Realty, 110 W. Marcy, 263-1284.
