Universal themes emerge from study of black poetry

By CONNIE SWINNEY Staff Writer

A focus on African American literature is giving College Heights Elementary students a new perspective on black culture and life experiences this month.

Teachers are also bringing local parents into the classroom to read famous works by African American

"Studying black poets, we're finding out they're writing about a universal theme," fourth-grade teacher Janie Conley said. "At the same time, students can try to understand the hardships of the black community.

"(Three mothers) will be bringing in poetry they have," she added. "These women are black, and they can choose something and be able to interpret it in a way I could not, giving a fresh perspective."

Conley, along with other fourthgrade teachers, incorporate grammar, vocabulary and figures of speech when studying poets like Gwendolyn Brooks, Nikki Giovanni and Eloise Greenfield

Students, using the black poets for the basis of their own poetry writing, also cover the works of Countee Cullen, James Weldon Johnson, Maya Angelou and Langston Hughes.

A lot of these poets write for children as well as adults," she said. "(Conley's) just wrote their own version of (Langston Hughes') "My People," and they were able to make comparisons with words like tears and rain.

' The African American literature unit highlights the Negro Renaissance, taking place during the 1940s and 1950s, in which a myriad of black writers, poets and artists penetrated United States culture.

"(Concentrating on black poets for a month) is a step from what we normally do. The kids really like it a lot," she said. "Our reading books are becoming more and more multicultural, so (studying other cultures) is starting to become a year-long

Students learn to compare their own experiences with those of the black poets, Conley said.

Studying Pulitzer prize-winning poet Gwendolyn Brooks, students are encouraged to finish their education in a poem titled "We Real Cool."

"In Hughes' 'Dreams,' readers can learn to hold on to dreams, set goals for ourselves," she said. "These are the kinds of poems meant for

Minority planning committee to meet

By MARTHA E. FLORES Staff Writer

Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce's Minority Involvement Planning Committee will meet Tuesday to finalize objectives and begin the next phase of its program.

The meeting starts at 5:30 p.m. at the Chamber. It will begin with an overview of chamber functions and activities. Linda Roger, chamber executive vice president, and Ben Bancroft, chamber president will give presentations.

Other business scheduled is adoption of survey questions, to be posed to minority business owners by committee members. The questionnaire serves a two-fold purpose, committee chairperson Kent Newsom said.

It will introduce business owners to the chamber and also retrieve information about what is needed to increase minority involvement, he

Survey questions include: What is the single biggest problem facing your business today? What activities do you think the chamber could promote to help minority business owners? and Why do we not have more minority involvement in community affairs.

Over the next few weeks, committee members will be contacting business owners requesting a few minutes of their time to answer the questionnaire, Newsom said

A subcommittee has also been working on a comprehensive list of minority-owned businesses. Working with the Howard College Small Business Development Center and other resources, a list exceeding 75 businesses has been compiled.

According to the latest U.S. Census Bureau information available, Howard County has 168 Hispanicowned businesses, 25 African-American-owned businesses and 11 owned by people of other ethnicity. Information is based on the 1987

The committee was established four weeks ago to formulate a longterm plan focusing increasing the involvement of minority business owners and professionals in chamber

Other initiatives include assisting existing businesses and identifying minority leaders to assume leadership roles in the chamber.

• The next largest concentration is in retail, which accounted for 15.6 percent of black firms and 29.8 percent of receipts. Retail account for 16 percent of all U.S. firms.

· Black firms with paid employees accounted for 16.7 of all black firms and 71.5 percent of gross receipts. Blacks owned 1.7 percent of all U.S. firms with one to four employees and 1 percent of U.S. firms with 100 employees or more.

There were 189 black firms with 100 employees or more, which accounted for $2 billion in gross receipts. That's 37 percent of receipts for U.S. firms but only .5 percent of total number of firms. In Howard County, two of the 25 firms had paid employees. Further details could not be released without divulging privileged

Proposed energy tax double whammy on the nation's farmers

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Farmers are worried they'll be paying more for fertilizer, fuel and pesticides under energy and environmental taxes being considered by Congress and the Clinton administration.

Corn growers are especially concerned, because they use so much fertilizer. Facing stagnant prices because of a record harvest and a cutoff of grain shipments to Russia, the farmers say they will have to swallow the added costs.

There's no way we can say we'll pass it on," said Stanley Blunier, who farms 900 acres near Forrest in central Illinois, a top corn state. "We have to rely on what they offer us for the grain.

House Speaker Thomas Foley said Sunday that the administration was considering a broad tax based on the heat content of all types of energy. Farmers and fertilizer and pesticide industries are waiting for details when President Clinton unveils his economic plan to Congress Wednesday night.

Farmers use diesel, gasoline, liqto run their machinery, dry grain or operate finishing sheds for hogs and

Living in the country, they drive "Government House" and is near farther for routine activities like shopping, going to the doctor or taking equipment in for repair.

Farmers also have indirect energy costs. Nitrogen fertilizers are made with natural gas, and pesticides have a high energy content as well. Ron Thiessen, a Nebraska cattle rancher, said he must make a 90-mile round trip from his home in Chadron to Gordon to get parts for his windrower. It's a 200-mile round trip if he needs to see a medical specialist in Rapid City, S.D., or Scottsbluff. Neb. "Electricity costs would probably go up, too," he said.

Even though fuels used off the road are exempt from a federal excise tax, farmers worry a new motor fuels tax won't be.

eration estimates a 10-cent-pergallon motor fuels tax, if imposed as a sales tax or consumption tax, would cost farmers $600 million directly and $600 million indirectly. The combined $1.2 billion would cut farm income 2 percent to 2.5 percent, the Farm Bureau said.

Moreover, some farm uses, such as transporting grain to an elevator or cattles to market, occur on highways and aren't covered by the exemption, Blunier and Thiessen said.

The Agriculture Department estimates farms used 667 trillion British thermal units' worth of fertilizer in 1991 and 115 trillion Btus' worth of pesticides in 1989. More than 32 million Btu go into making a ton of fertilizer, USDA said.

The Btu is the energy unit upon which a tax would be based. Blunier estimates he uses 40 tons of ammonia on his 500 acres of corn each year. The Fertilizer Institute said farmers paid $202 a ton in 1991 for ammonia, a nitrogen fertilizer.

The institute said it is particularly worried the Clinton package could contain another proposal, currently in legislation offered by Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass. The bill would creare a fund from taxes on pollutants, including fertilizers and pesticides, to build sewage treatment plants and other public works. ## See trees for forest

While issues of the budget and health care reform are very important to the Americans who elected Bill Clinton president, there are other topics, more mundane, around which the everyday life of Capitol Hill revolves around.

While it is important to meet the needs of the budget and other hot topics, these everyday items need to be taken care of also. And, they can't be.

Clinton has had his problems filling some of the top spots in his cabinet and has been very slow to fill lesser positions which lawmakers and their aides depend upon.

This includes community development banking, who to talk to about getting the census readjusted. A family planning bill was put together without any Clinton administration input when no one could be reached for an answers to the question of his feelings on parental notification of minors wanting abortions.

While the president doesn't want to get bogged down in the little things, he still needs to take care of them so things care run smoothly up there on Capitol Hill.

We need someone who can see the forest for the trees but who also can take care of the trees.

HOUSTON - My friend Mel had just finished breakfast when I showed up at his place to borrow his electric emery wheel, which is excellent for sharpening knives and hatchets. He was sacking trash to put out for the truck and I noticed he was throwing away two nice

They were boxes that banks use to mail fresh batches of personalized checks. I told Mel if he didn't want those boxes I would sure take

"Why do you want them?" he asked. I said they're just the right size

"Like what kind of things?" he

Sure do, yes. "How long you been saving

I do. Got dozens. Keep 'em in bigger boxes, up in the attic How many did you use, say,

How about Christmas before last, and Christmas before that? Use any then? Told him no, but the Christmas said, "You're one of these compulsive savers. It's a kind of disease, a personality quirk. Lot of people have it, and save stuff that's mostly worthless. They dream up uses for it and convince themselves it's valuable. My Dad was that way.' What did he save?

"Bottle caps," Mel said. "He drank two bottles of pop every day and kept the tops and pitched 'em in a bucket. Always said when he got enough tops he'd start nailing em onto plyboard in the shape of figures, like birds and horses. A kind of bottle cap art, I guess.'

And did he ever do that? 'No, but he sure got lots of bottle caps. After he retired from the plant he'd walk around and collect caps out of soft drink machines, and bring 'em home by the pocketful. But he never did any of the art. When he died we found gallons of those dang bottle tops in his garage. Pretty sad. I'm glad I didn't inherit that weakness, or whatever you'd call it. I'm not much of a saver.

Told Mel maybe I inherited the tendency. My father was a sort of eccentric saver, too. "What did he save?"

Rubber bands. But not just any rubber bands, only the ones that came on his newspaper. After circulation people stopped folding newspapers before throwing them some rolled the papers into cylinders and put rubber bands around

My father would take that one rubber band off his paper every day and put it on the knob of the door that opened out of the kitchen onto the back porch. He did that for years and years, one rubber band a day on the knob, until you couldn't even see the knob. It was just a spongy mass of those rubber bands, so big he'd have to stretch one to its limit to make it go around the glob.

Mel said, "He argued that they were useful, right And shouldn't be thrown away?

Yes, at first he did. But I think toward the end of his life when he was sick he didn't want anybody to take one of the bands off the knob and use it. He seemed to enjoy seeing the knob get bigger and bigger, gradually, from getting one rubber band added to it every day After he was gone we had to cut those bands off the knob and like you say, it was a sad business.

"What I figure is," Mel said, "the rubber bands represented his life, or his ability to accomplish something of value. It's like my Dad's bottle caps when he got old and dim. He just wanted more and more bottle caps. I think he'd forgotten how he intended to use them when he started. Maybe he felt like another handful of caps would keep him alive. "Tell you what, I don't intend to collect a bunch of worthless stuff to leave behind. Only thing I save is coins, dated the year I was born. I've got pounds of those babies. I figure my kids will be glad to find 'em. Something at least they can take to the bank. "But listen," Mel said, "if you really want these boxes, you're welcome to take them.

He handed them over and I left. When I got home I took the boxes out of the car and walked up the driveway and pitched them both in the trash can.

I may start saving coins.

Getting 'get-up-and-go' to go

For years and years Americans have been looking for some sort of concoction to take as a pick-me-up.

That's how Coca-Cola became so popular in its early days. Coke was supposed to be an elixir that would cure the tireds, the doldrums, and the blahs. There's the old rumor early Coca-Cola had a bit of cocaine in it. That rumor has never been confirmed, but when new Coke appeared several years ago somebody wondered, "What did they do? Take the cocaine out?'

Older Americans, like my own father, called Coca-Cola "dope." I can hear him now, "Let's go in ... here, son, and get us a cold dope."

Then, there was the infamous Hadacol. It was to be the remedy of all time for the punjest, and it sold like wild fire until somebody figured it was all that alcohol that made Hadacol so effective as a lif-

All of which I would really like to know. Maybe a follow-up to the article will explain.

'Bee mine' - Valentine classics remain working arms and a slot in his sto-

The valentine cards of my youth spoke the language of customized car tags: UR4ME.

If a card featured a picture of a bee, the message said something like: Bee Mine. Or Buzzing Around You Honey. Somewhere a writer paid his power bill with wages for such wit.

There was a special card for teacher in each package, but some dolt always gave it to another student by mistake. You could take that as a compliment or an insult, depending on the teacher.

Styles evolved more slowly then. I don't remember the observance of Valentine's Day changing one whit throughout grade school.

Bees buzzed around their honey A cartoon bear could bearrrr-ly stand to be away from his true love. A white kitten with a red ribbon around its neck mewed that I was the purrr-fect valentine.

Popular kids got more valentines than unpopular kids, though the teacher stressed that we should be democratic and address a message to all our classmates, whether we hated them or not. I always gave one to the government-issue Bad Boy of the class — every class had one - fearing he might not receive

Room mothers came at the end of the day looking harried and bearing red punch and cupcakes with cinnamon hearts. We didn't know it then, but room mothers were motivated by peer pressure and guilt.

"Well, Johnny's mom is always the room mother. Why can't you bake 36 cupcakes and wear a nice dress and bring them to school this

And there was always the matter of The Box. That was the annual scholastic challenge I dreaded

Each year the teacher instructed the class to decorate a box in which to collect the valentines. There would be a prize awarded for the most imaginative job. Each year I sat in a pile of dessert doilies and leftover Christmas ribbon trying to envision the perfect receptacle for the dozens of lovely messages sure to fill it. Each year I painted a shoebox with red tempera, cut a crooked hole in the top and wrote my name on the side with a smelly black marker. Then I would sit back and wait for the inspiration to hit. And wait. And wait.

Each year I fully expected an artistic epiphany in the morning after Fruit Loops and before first bell. When that didn't happen, I expected to wow the teacher, a.k.a. the judge, with my restraint and simplicity. What better represented Valentine's Day than a plain red box with a - ahhhh! - hole cut for the cards?

On Valentine's Day the institutional green classroom would be full of wonderful creations, ranging from frilly to science fiction-fantastic. I remember a robot with Schulz," Pharos Books.

school, and I always suspected her parents owned a fabric store. Her creation was something to behold, usually a heart shape swaddled in lace and flowers and velvet. The teachers inevitably went for the froufrou.

One year a boy shocked us and won the prize — a charm bracelet. I guess the teacher had counted on the status quo and Becky.

I asked an elementary school teacher if her pupils still make Valentine's Day boxes. No, she said, that was no longer the style, at least not at her school. Too bad.

At the grocery store I bought a box of cards to see if the messages had changed much. The first cards I selected were licensing products for the movie "Aladdin," and had pictures of Aladdin tooling around on his magic carpet. "If you'll be my valentine, I'll

A social engineering firing is noteworthy

Scripps Howard News Service

The sacking of New York City schools honcho Joseph Fernandez is noteworthy partly because he oversaw the nation's largest educational system (almost a million students). More important, Fernandez - well-meaning, autocratic, relentless - personified the social engineering mania of so many public educators. His title was 'chancellor," and he imitated Bismarck. Fernandez proved that pride goeth before a fall a while back when he attempted to dissolve the entire school board of New York District 24. Board members' great sin? They had refused to adopt curricular changes that called for teaching "tolerance" of homosexuality to grade-schoolers. The board, and most parents, believed that stories like "Heather Has Two Mommies" were less about tolerance - live and let live - than about validating gay and lesbian lifestyles.

No one had put that cutting-edge viewpoint - a direct rebuke to many New Yorkers' religious beliefs — to popular vote, but the Iron Chancellor and his curricular clique knew best. As usual. Previously. Fernandez had ordered condom distribution in high schools to fight sexual diseases. Rather than stressing abstinence, as many parents urged, Fernandez sent teens jousting against the AIDS virus with a few centimeters of latex.

Like many a righteous visionary, Fernandez disdained the art of compromise and tended to diabolize opponents. To the end, he blamed his travails not on his own lordly ways but on "the religious right" (funny, we never pictured the Big Apple as Moral Majority country) and political opportunists.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. - Dale Jarrett filled a page his father left empty in the family album with his victory in the Daytona 500. For Dale Earnhardt, it was another Daytona 500 to forget. Jarrett battled in the lead pack of cars over the final 27 green-flag laps Sunday and outdueled Earnhardt, a five-time NASCAR champion and one of its fiercest competitors. Earnhardt did everything but win -

By denying Earnhardt, Jarrett put a big smile on the face of his father, two-time NASCAR champion and now CBS commentator Ned Jarrett.

Ned Jarrett called the final lap as his son took the checkered flag that he — like Earnhardt — never got in NASCAR's most prestigious event.

I'm really proud of you." Ned Jarrett told his son over a network headset. The son thanked his father and advised him that Ned's near-miss when he ran out of gas while leading remaining had been avenged. "You came so close ..." Dale said.

Jarrett gave Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs his first victory as a NASCAR team owner to open the team's second year. Jarrett's only other Winston Cup victory came in 1991 with another team.

Jarrett was running third and Geoff Bodine fourth with two laps left when Jarrett took matters into his own hands. He passed rookie Jeff Gordon on lap 199 and went after Earnhardt.

Jarrett caught Earnhardt and the Chevrolet drivers battled side-byside, touching briefly and reaching the start-finish line for the last lap in 'You race Dale Earnhardt like he races you," Jarrett said. "I felt like there'd be nothing less than a slight tap coming.

Jarrett edged in front and pulled away on the backstretch. Earnhardt "Super job there, Dale. I tell you, couldn't catch him.

The difference was less than two car-lengths and a winner's purse of $238,200 for Jarrett to $181,825 for Earnhardt, now winless in 15 Daytona 500 starts despite eight top-five the 1963 Daytona 500 with two laps finishes.

Earnhardt led 11 times for 107 of the 200 laps while Jarrett led three "I got this one for you and all the times for eight laps. The official margin of victory was 0.19 seconds.

'We've lost this race about every way you can lose it," said Earnhardt, who has finished out of the top 10 only four times in this race. "We've been out-gassed, out-tired, outrun, out-everythinged.

'We've come close, but we'e not won it about every way you can't win it. I guess all that's left to do now is to come back next year and try to win it any way we can.

He said Jarrett had the strongest

'I was hoping he couldn't get past Bodine and Gordon and some of those other guys," Earnhardt said. Geoff Bodine finished third and Hut Stricklin fourth in Fords, followed by Gordon in a Chevy. Gordon, 21, on Thursday had become the youngest driver and second rookie ever to win a Daytona qualifying race. He tucked in behind Earnhardt as both passed Jarrett on lap 179 and stayed there until the winner's move.

Into the last lap Gordon chose to go behind Earnhardt.

'Nine out of 10 times, the right one would be to go with Dale (Earnhardt)," Gordon said. "It didn't work

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — There's a long way to go in the Big Ten season and no one has conceded the conference title to Indiana. On the other hand, Michigan's run at the league championship is just about over. 'We're probabaly not going to win the Big Ten title. It would take a major miracle," Michigan coach Steve Fisher said Sunday as his team fell three games out with seven to play after losing 93-92 to top-ranked Indiana, the team in first place.

The loss may have hurt the fifthranked Wolverines' record, but it didn't dampen their confidence as the NCAA tournament still looms on next month's horizon.

"I'm not belittling the Big Ten ring weight championship Saturday night at all, but I think all of us knows leave the floor at halftime just down when his scheduled 12-round bout which ring is more important," Miwith Iran Barkley was stopped after chigan's Chris Webber said.

Indiana's tough defense held Michigan (19-4, 8-3) without a field for 6½ minutes. Michigan took its final lead at 78-76 on two free throws by Jalen Rose with 6:01 left. Indiana scored the next 13 points and a lastminute 3-point barrage by Webber made it seem a lot closer than it was.

"When we took the lead. I thought our defense was pretty good," Indiana coach Bob Knight said. He thought the crucial point came quite a bit earlier.

'The first point I want to make, and it is possibly the most important point of all, was that we were able to two points," he said. "It nearly gotaway from us again, but we did a really good job of hanging in there and our guys off the bench really contributed.

The lead contributor off the bench was freshman Brian Evans, who finished with a season-high 17 points including a 3-for-6 effort from 3-point range where he had only made eight shots all season.

"Evans played both ends well, refirst half and one of nine points in bounded well and got some points when we needed them," Knight said.

Matt Nover had 20 points for Indiana and his 8 rebounds were a big part of the Hoosiers' 38-30 advantage, 20-10 on the offensive end.

Webber finished with 23 points, 11 rebounds and 6 assists, but was just 4 for 11 from the foul line. He had three 3-pointers in the final 54 seconds as the Wolverines, who shot 58 percent from the field, finished 12 for 22 from long range.

"I'll tell you, I don't want to play them ever again when they shoot that way on 3-pointers," Knight said. "Michigan is really, really

And, too, there was his own ability, the golf game that just keeps getting better as he moves deeper into his 40's. "If you've got a golf game, age

After rounds of 67, 67, 64 and 65, he bullied the rest of the field with a closing, 10-under-par 62 that included 22 putts, a 29 over the back side, a holed 30-yard sand shot for an eagle and a birdie-birdie-birdiebirdie finish on the Arnold Palmer course at PGA West.

Mays could lose draftee

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS - The Dallas Mavericks are on pace to become the worst team in NBA history, and things could get even worse by month's end

Top draft pick Jim Jackson is unsigned after a series of management miscalculations. On Dec. 11, he said he would never play for the Mavericks.

Now, he's saying unless Dallas deals him by the Feb. 25 trading deadline, he will nix any offer the team tries to come up and reenter the June draft without any compensation to the Mavericks.

Jackson, an All-America at Ohio State, was expected to become a sudden impact player and cornerstone of the Mavericks' future. Instead, Jackson has not played and Dallas has not won. The Mavericks (4-43) are ap-and Mavericks began almost immediately after he was taken with the fourth pick of what has become a very deep draft class. The Mavericks flew Jackson and his agent to Dallas the day after the draft. Three key members of the organization, including general manager Norm Sonju, spoke with Jackson briefly before excusing themselves to attend to personal matters.

The three apologized for being unable to spend more time with Jackson and suggested that one of the assistant coaches would be able to take him out to dinner.

Later, Jackson and his agent, Mark Termini, decided to cut their trip short and return to Columbus, Ohio, on the next flight. 'In and of itself, that sequence of events didn't mean much to us," Termini told The Dallas Morning News. "Only in retrospect did we look back on it and agree it indicated their fundamental attitude toward Jim and the negotiations. Sonju is still wondering about the turn of events.

"I shake that I even have to say this, but for the good of the Mavericks in the long haul, it might be better to consider this our Lenny Bias," he said.

Bias was the first-round (third overall in the NBA) selection of the Boston Celtics in 1986, who died early the next morning from an overdose of cocaine.

"We drafted Jim. If he chooses not to play, we've lost our asset," Sonju said.

Congress: Reluctant warriors

By CARROLL J. DOHERTY Congressional Quarterly

Congress' longstanding demand that it have a voice in decisions to deploy U.S. forces abroad is often summed up with an aphorism: "If vou want us in on the landing, we'd better be in on the takeoff.'

But for more than a generation, presidents have not been eager to invite Congress along, and most lawmakers have preferred to remain safely on the ground.

In recent months, more than 20,000 U.S. troops have been dispatched to Somalia. The only action taken by Congress on that mission occurred Feb. 4, well after the fact, when the Senate — with no hearings approved by voice vote a resolution authorizing the deployment.

With the Clinton administration raising the possibility of new U.S. military intervention in Bosnia-Herzegovina, some lawmakers and foreign policy analysts say it is essential that Congress become more assertive on questions involving the Morton Halperin, who is expected to become the Pentagon's point man for U.N. matters, recently wrote in The Washington Post, "Simple prudence dictates that there be a clear consensus that includes Congress before the nation goes to war.' Halperin said Congress voted in 1991 to go to war in the Persian Gulf only when "public pressure for it to act became too great to resist," adding that "members of Congress prefer to avoid the responsibility.

Complicating matters further, the 1973 War Powers Resolution which allows for congressional participation in authorizing military action — has been consistently evaded by presidents and lawmakers alike.

During confirmation hearings for Defense Secretary Les Aspin, Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., questioned the law's relevance and its requirement that the president withdraw troops from hostile action after 60 days unless Congress authorizes their presence.

senior member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is expected to introduce legislation within the next several weeks to address many of the law's shortcomings. Biden's proposal would extend the 60-day period and grant the president limited advance authority to use force in implementing U.N. Security Council resolutions. But Aspin was dubious about any efforts to revamp the law. "It's always been assumed that to try to amend it would be such a humongous fight and raise such enormous hackles, and in the end it's not clear whether you'd get anything much better," he said. Congress and the White House performed their customary dance around the issue when President George Bush announced the Somalia operation in December

The administration told congressional leaders that U.S. forces would not be in jeopardy, despite the threat posed by roving gangs of armed Somalis. "The statement is that there is no imminent likelihood of hostilities," House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., said Dec. 4 after a White House briefing.

Foley's ready acceptance of that assertion indicated that he shared the president's reluctance to trigger the 60-day countdown. Two months later, with no timetable in place for withdrawing U.S. troops, Foley still seemed to be in no hurry for the House to take up the Senate

Nothing stopped his dream

By CONNIE SWINNEY Staff Writer

When the Civil Rights Movement was in its infancy, local orthopedic surgeon Paul Webb had already decided no obstacle - even racism would prevent him from achieving his personal dream of becoming a top physician.

Born in Boley, Okla. in 1936, and educated in Chicago's inner city. Webb received a chemistry degree in 1960 at Howard University in Washington, D.C., and graduated from medical school in 1964.

"Ever since I was little, I wanted to be a doctor," Webb said. "I had thought about becoming a professional chemist, but a Howard Uniblack, I'd have more individual freedom if I would go into medicine."

He was inspired as early as junior high to take steps toward becoming a physician.

"Our family doctor had taken care of my older brother, Jay, when he was sick with Rheumatic Fever." said Webb, who was an eighthgrader at the time. "I used to talk to (the family doctor) about (practicing medicine), and he'd give me advice, saying not to worry about the money because if you treat people correctly, you will do okay.

"He would also say study hard in math and the sciences.'

Webb, the son of a army chaplain, is one of three brothers, nurtured by their father to have high expectations and fulfill their goals.

"We had always went to church, and we'd always go to school. (Chicago schools) would have big parties for high school graduations, but we would never go," Webb said. "Dad

In 1972, Webb had organized a boycott of a chain of liquor stores in Champaigne, Ill. The owner had opened a store near a black church.

"We boycotted the store and called it to the attention of the city council," he said. "We were successful in closing him down, because he couldn't make enough money off the black community he was trying to sell to, to stay open.

His inspirations for racial equality were nurtured during his Howard University years, when he saw an up-and-coming NAACP lawyer, named Thurogood Marshall, speak.

A look at 'firsts' that helped Big Spring grow

The first railroad engine pulled into town in May, 1881, and began a close economic relationship with Big Spring. A related event was the trail that was probably the first "highway" into town.

According to the Big Spring Centennial Souvenir History-Album and Official Program, the road came "from the south, a trail staked by the U.S. Army to obtain supplies from the railroad for Fort Concho."

March 10, 1922 is recorded in history as the date for the opening of the first drive-in-filling-station. Owned by Tom and Jess Slaughter, the station, at First and Main, had a single electric pump which sold an average 800 gallons of gasoline a

It is almost a certainty that Big Spring was progressive enough to purchase the first motorized fire engine in Texas. It was ordered in 1907 as a solution to the chronic problem of downtown fires.

These are some of the "firsts" which are recorded in our town. If you know more information on these or others let us know. We would love to add it to our records. If you want to experience youir own personal first, you might want to attend the upcoming Around the World in 80. Bites. Foods from around the world will be featured at the museum including Iceland, England, Greece, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, France, the Netherlands, Mexico, the exotic Carolinas, and many more.

catalysts. Big Spring had not only those, but some spectacular beginnings for a number of unique "firsts"

The following is a listing of some of the landmark events which are recorded in history. Some have a precarious relationship to what actually occurred, the repeated telling having enhanced reality over the decades.

• The first dire occurrence of a traffic accident is recorded in 1913. It happened at 1600 Scurry, and on the back of a photograph of the wreck is written, "Picture of the auto accident south of town. Stripped car was Littlers and other the Steam Laundry people. All are getting along nicely now.

 The famous Earl of Aylesford is credited as building the first masonry business building. He had a taste for fresh mutton and felt that the best way to assure a supply was to operate his own meet market. The business was built in 1884, at 121

• The first airplane landed here in 1911. Robert Fowler was participating in a transcontinental race. He was induced to stop in Big Spring landing at the fairgrounds area in the southeast part of the city where an eager crowed awaited him. He almost resorted to violence as the local citizens tried to write their names for posterity on the sides of his airplane. Angie Way is curator of the Herit-

Family planning legislation getting new attention

By ALISSA J. RUBIN Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — For the first time in 12 years, the federal family planning program appears likely to win political support and funding expansion.

Legislation to reauthorize the program and to boost its funding by 37 percent is ready for floor action after the House returns from its Washington-Lincoln Day recess.

The biggest obstacle to the program's revitalization disappeared last month when President Clinton ordered the Department of Health and Human Services to suspend the Bush administration's ban on abortion counseling at federally funded Efforts to lift the ban, known as the gag rule, prompted George Bush to veto last year's family planning The House Energy and Commerce Committee approved reauthorization of the family planning program, Title

X of the Public Health Service Act, by voice vote on Feb. 4. Since the Reagan administration issued the counseling ban in 1988, the family planning bill has been entangled in abortion politics. But with abortion rights, that issue is now largely moot. This program is about the means of preventing abortion, and it will restore family planning to a balanced approach," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the health

If Congress reauthorizes Title X this year, it will be the first time in seven years that family planning clinics have operated on something other than stopgap funding.

The program first ran into trouble a decade ago when the Reagan ad-

Computers are ageless

Experts say they have benefits for retirees

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Medical science has lengthened the average lifespair, making it possible to be retired and bored out of your skull longer than previous

But if being guest of honor at a funeral doesn't appeal to you, and you're not yet ready to gather dust along with the other knick-knacks, consider a computer.

Computers and senior citizens (or golden agers or mature Americans - pick your euphemism) were made for each other. That's because computers demand:

Money -Patience

-Curiosity Consider money: A good rig with a printer, modem and some software costs about $2,000, well within reach of many seniors. On patience: A computer does exactly what it's told. Cursing it won't change things — as you learn in a lifetime of dealing with civil servants, city traffic, unpredictable weather and predictable politicians.

Curiosity: Computers can unlock new worlds of friendship, learning and interest, but you have to be willing to poke around and see what happens. And you have to have the

The way to get started is to do some reading. Check your local library for beginning computer books and magazines. Magazine ads are almost as important as the articles they tell you what's available and for what price Since almost all systems are sold as packages, you don't have to worry about matching monitor, modem, disk drives, processor, memory, etc. It's all done for you, and starting up is probably easier than hooking up a VCR In general, you want an IBM PC or compatible with the biggest disk drive, the most memory and the fastest processor you can afford. It should have a color monitor, a mouse and a modem.

When you get a machine, pick up the manual and get started. Short of hitting it with a hammer or dousing it with water, it's very hard to "break" a PC. And even if you mess up at the keyboard, rebooting the system should get you back on track.

Most machines come bundled with software, typically Windows and one other choice. Windows in particular is all you need to get started, since it will handle basic word-processing, record-keeping and telecommunications. That will allow you to:

-Write personal letters, newsletters, the Great American Novel, all without the limitations that age sometimes brings to penmanship.

Keep a personal inventory of bills, investments, emergency instructions, medications, phone numbers.

-Use the modem to join one of the telecommunications services such as CompuServe, Prodigy, GEnie, Delphi.

These services offer entertainment, information and, most importantly, friendship. The "chat" or message services allow you to meet and become friends with people without regard to distance, race, creed, sex or age because the PC screen doesn't discriminate.

A PC may not replace the spring in your step, but it can keep the springs in your head at proper tension. And it beats simply waiting for that final Fatal Error message.

They are also a rich source of social history, Richard Slavin says.

Slavin is the author of "Opulent Textiles: The Schumacher Collection," (Crown Publishers, 1992, $50). The book, said to be one of the first of its kind, uses some of the best textiles from F. Schumacher & Co. of New York to illustrate the passing parade of high styles in decorating

He is also curator of Schumacher's collection of about 10,000 textile samples. The archive consists of antique fabrics as well as samples produced by the company since

Wildfowl carvers get individual attention

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALISBURY, Md. - The Ward Foundation School of Art may be overstating it a bit. Still, the concept is giving budding decoy-duck carvers access to top wildfowl artists for oneon-one attention.

Working with absolute or relative beginners, master carvers are leading two-day weekend sessions on a single aspect of the highly specialized art of decorative wildfowl carving, at the Ward Museum of Wildfowl Art.

'The two-day seminar is an intense study of nuggets of information," said Jo Craemer of Georgetown, Del., who will teach a seminar on how to create realistic habitat for wildfowl carvings.

'When you attend multiple classes of carving, you can put together a nationally recognized come in is a whole-picture of wildlife carving. We're taking it as little chapters of painting and carving,

When students finish Mrs. Craemer's cram course in March, they'll go home with "a completed base with a water scene, a sandy bank and some grasses that they could put a miniature shore bird or miniature goose or miniature duck

The seminar, she added, will let beginners approach professional levels "without going through the years of trial and error you would have to if you learn to do it yourself.'

The seminars are a rare opportunity to work in a studio atmosphere with leading artists, said Joe Forsthoffer, museum spokesman. And having local artists who are public relations tool for the museum. said Barbara Black, assistant curator of education.

The first seminar was held in November and three more are scheduled through June. The seminars are new to the foundation's educational programs that range from week-long, sunup-to-sundown sessions at hotels with world champion carvers, to teaching children how to build bluebird houses.

The foundation oversees the museum, which moved into its new $5.3 million, 30,000-square-foot quarters last year and now has room to add educational programs.

Eleven students signed up for the first seminar taught by Larry Tawes Jr. of Hebron, Officials and parents involved in adoption cases from Florida to California to Iowa agree the laws are confusing and should be changed. But they each have a different solution.

Doug Donnelly, a Santa Barbara, Calif., attorney who has worked on adoption cases for 14 years, notes that the 1972 U.S. Supreme Court decision Stanley vs. Illinois set precedent in disputes

It established that every biological father is entitled to be given notice an adoption is taking place and to have an opportunity to argue against

But Donnelly said many states

Donnelly applauds efforts by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws to develop a single adoption code for the country, and said he also thinks the laws need to give hore recognition to women's and children's rights. Kathy Ruyle, a social worker who serves as a child advocate in Iowa's Linn County, agrees that both courts. and parents need to consider children's feelings more.

'You know, everybody says, We're trying not to put the kids in they're in there whether we want it

One of the easiest ways to stop custody disputes in adoptions, she said, is to leave children in the custody of social services or the courts until adoptions are complete

'We should have some type of system in place so maybe children wouldn't go with anybody until the adoption is final," Ruyle said. "A week or two isn't going to make that much difference with a baby.

Rice turns program around

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

When oft-struggling teams begin turning around their programs, they usually end long losing streaks. The Rice Owls did so last weekend.

Rice, seeking its first Southwest Conference title since 1970, defeated Texas Christian 68-50 Saturday night in Daniel-Meyer Coliseum, giving the Owls their first road victory against the Horned Frogs since

It also is the first time Rice (13-6; 7-2 Southwest Conference) has swept a season-series from TCU since that same year.

Reserve Torrey Andrews led the Owls with 19 points, Brent Scott had 15 and Scott Tynes had 12 of his season-high 14 during an 18-6 Rice run to open the game

Also, Texas fell 78-70 to Georgia in Athens, Ga.

The Horned Frogs (5-15, 2-7) managed to get within 35-30 by halftime, but never got closer than that as the Owls' staunch defense held off (34 percent) from the field.

'We didn't have any heart today,' said TCU senior Brent Atwater. "No fight, no intensity. We were just out

The Cougars extracted revenge for a 78-74 loss to the Red Raiders on Houston (14-6, 5-4) was led by Charles Outlaw, who scored a career-high 28 points and helped fuel a 17-0 charge in the second half.

Texas Tech (11-9, 3-6) burned Houston's zone defense in the first half by hitting six 3-pointers, including three in a row, and held a 34-32 edge at the break The Red Raiders built their lead to
