Council approves King birthday as holiday

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Martin Luther King Day is now a city holiday, giving workers a day off, but to save costs - replaces another

The Big Spring City Council voted 5-1 Tuesday to approve the new city holiday, but designated that it would replace one of two days off city employees had for New Year's.

The council's only ethnic minority member, Pat DeAnda, originally proposed recognizing Martin Luther King Day but opposed the motion passed by the council, contending that trading it with another holiday dilutes the purpose of honoring a "great American.

"It sends a bad message to the community," DeAnda said. "You're going to exchange it for one, so it's not important.

Councilman Corky Harris disagreed. "We're saying that it's more important than another holiday," he said.

"You're taking something away from them," DeAnda said. "That's not giving them anything." DeAnda emphasized the struggle nationwide to get Martin Luther King Day recognized. "This is more a recognition of a long, hard-fought battle."

The council agreed on the importance of recognition. "Every one of us thinks he was a great man," Councilman Ladd Smith said

DeAnda responded, "I want you to show how great he was by giving him this holiday (without the tradeoff)."

The tradeoff, Smith explained, is only an economical decision. "We have to pay overtime or we've got to do something to provide services for that day (off)."

City Manager Lanny Lambert said ho does not have figures on costs to add an extra day to the 10 paid holidays city employees now have. Days off include two for Christmas, two for Thanksgiving, one for Labor Day and one for Memorial

A motion by DeAnda to add the new holiday without replacing another was defeated $3. Joining DeAnda in voting for an additional holiday were council members John Coffee and Mark Sheedy. Opposing the motion were Mayor Tim Blackshear and council members Smith

Following a suggestion by Lambert, an idea was considered to add the holiday and let employees decide which day to replace it with, but using only days for Christmas, Thanksgiving or New Year's Day. It was discussed whether employees should decide individually or as a group what day to replace. The idea was

City fathers give OK to abatement change

By PATRICK DRISCOLL . Staff Writer

A tax abatement policy to encourage economic development was approved by the Big Spring City Council Tuesday but only for 120 days while city leaders devise another policy.

Council members last month complained the policy, passed by Howard County commissioners in November and later by school districts, provides a lesser percentage of available abatement than the previous policy. The new policy aiso decreased minimum construction and job creation requirements to help small firms.

When tax abatements are offered within city limits, the county and school districts must accept or reject what the city approves, according to state law.

"We need something," said City Manager Lanny Lambert, who advised the council to pass the controversial policy now and change it later. "We need to have something in place very quickly."

The city has been without a tax abatement policy since early last year when the old policy, passed in 1990, expired The early expiration date on the new policy was included after Councilman Corky Harris recommended it, saying he could not otherwise vote for something he opposed if it stood for a long or indefinite period

Mayor Tim Blackshear will appoint a committee to study the policy and recommend-changes.

Educational cooperative efforts that have achieved high success rates involving high schools, colleges and industry, were the focus of a Tuesday teleconference at Howard College.

About 25 area school administrators and trustees attended "Tech-Prep Linkages" at the HC Learning Center.

The teleconference, conducted by Texas A & M University's Tech-Prep Professional Development Consortium, armed area school officials with ideas about implementing Tech-Prep locally.

"The program is going to benefit students because they will approach education with a better attitude," said Big Spring High School Vocational Administrator Loren Spencer. "It benefits the community because it will be getting more qualified individuals into the Tech-Prep enhances the prospects of vocational occupations as career pathways for students, Spencer said.

The program links high school and two-year college programs with intense academic and vocational preparation for mid-level technology careers like industrial engineering, business, allied health and public service.

"A student's first two years in high school will be a heavy core academic curriculum," said Shirley Shroyer, Howard College dean of vocational-technical education. "Students can take the technical classes starting their junior and se-

The program at the high school level will combine one-on-one counseling. Area educators and business leaders have already viewed about five telecon-

Funded with about $60 million from the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act of 1990. Tech-Prep will rely mostly on federal and local funds.

Recognition late in coming for many black artists

By CONNIE SWINNEY Staff Writer

African American artists did not achieve recognition for their talents as painters, sculptors or craftspersons in the United States until the 18th century, although their works appear as early as 15th century.

Early curators and merchants felt that black life images (slavery, sharecropper and ghetto life) did not have the moneymaking power to fuel its popularity, so artworld leaders were not supportive of black artists.

There really wasn't an interest in black people," said Donna Bruton, a black artist and assistant professor of art at the University of Texas at Austin. "The music, dance and comedy was the only acceptable way to enjoy black entertainment," she added. By the 18th century, Scipio Morehead's artistic expressions gained support from two Bostonians, a white patron of the arts and a black poet. The artist was the sole documented black artist

"It was certain that there were other black artists and craftsmen who went unrecorded in the 18th century, according to the Negro Almanac.

"Fortunately, as scholars have more of a desire to understand the nature and development of American culture, a more multiethnic pattern is beginning to emerge with the basic foundation being Western European, African and American Indian," the almanac continues.

Working as sign painters, furniture makers, silversmiths, and ornamentalists, blacks used their talent to buy their

OTTAWA — Business was not as usual today at the seat of Canadian power, feeding feverish media speculation that an increasingly unpopular Prime Minister Brian Mulroney was on the verge of resigning.

Nightly newscasts Tuesday led with unsubstantiated reports that Mulroney was stepping down, and the Toronto Sun and the Toronto Star played the story prominently

The Odessa American on Clinton's foreign policy:

So President Clinton, who came into office virtually without a foreign policy, appears ready to send American troops into Bosnia-Herzegovina — the bloody, embattled Balkan territory that once was part of Yugoslavia

Some observers express surprise at this attempt to forge a policy, their jolt coming from reports that somewhere in the campaign trial the then-Arkansas governor said he would not send troops to the Balkans

Other observers, less surprised, remember that candidate Clinton tried to outflank, his opponent, President George Bush, on the interventionist side — by criticizing the New World Order's author for inattention to the Balkans. It was reasonable to deduce that a Clinton administration, ever so Kennedylike, would indeed be poised for military adventure, cleansing that region of the monstrosity of "ethnic cleansing.

Somewhere between the Oval Office and Foggy Bottom, these American innocents abroad have flung even more fuel onto the flames by declaring an intention to keep the economic embargo on Serbia, whose genocidal leadership will be able to exploit the material hardships such sanctions bring to the Serbian people. History shows that embargoes don't work; they are formulae neither for making peace nor for throwing off tyranny. If this is a Clinton Doctrine in the making, it is not a reassuring

San Antonio Express-News on school finance

Maybe, just maybe, Texas will escape the embarrassment of having its public schools closed. Voters will have their say on

The proposed amendment would allow the redistribution of funds from property-rich districts to poorer districts. Such redistribution could not exceed 2.75 percent of state and local school revenue, or about $400 millon.

Also, the county education district tax-rate couldn't exceed $1 per $100 of property valuation without local voter approval.

Another proposed amendment would allow school district voters to exempt a district from stateimposed programs that are not funded by the state

The weakness of the proposal is that it continues to rely on the beleaguered property owner to pay for the schools. Districts that lose money to redistribution will want to replace it. The state's leaders have some persuading to do. ***

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on Social Security taxes:

The only clear message that came out of President Clinton's long and frequently frustrating search for an attorney general who could pass the somewhat murky requirements of the Senate Judiciary Committee, was that the law governing the payment of Social Security taxes for domestic help is obsolete and should be changed.

The Federal Insurance Contributions Act has required quarterly payments on salaries of $50 or more, paid to cleaning women, adult babysitters and other household workers. Widespread noncompliance of the law, however, has robbed these hard-working Americans of security for their old

Many of those Americans may have broken the law through ignorance rather than through deliberate disregard of the rules. Considering the extensive publicity surrounding the Zoe Baird-Kimba Wood fiasco, however few people can remain unaware of the legal requirements covering household employees and their employers.

And, now that people are aware of the law, Congress needs to change it to make it easier to comply with and to make it more equitable. The current law is absurd, it undermines public confidence and it inspires lawbreaking.

But now that the campaign is over and he has won the Oval Office, he says he's going to raise taxes on the middle class.

But he has a reason for turning completely around on another campaign promise.

I had hoped to invest in your future," the president said to the middle class recently, "by creating jobs, expanding education and reforming health care without asking more of you. But I cannot, because the deficit has increased substantially beyond my earlier estimates."

I think I've got it now During the campaign the president went around promising no tax increase on the middle class, and that's obviously why a lot of people

I hope he would have said last October, instead of in February, "I would really like to cut your taxes, but the deficit has increased substantially and my numbers and estimates indicate to me not only will I not be able to cut your taxes, I'll even have to raise them.'

But not Slick Willie. Oops, he goofed, so now your taxes are going up after all. So now what happens to those individuals who voted for Clinton because of his pledge not to raise their taxes?

Maybe they were thinking their lives would be a lot better once the president lowered their tax burden. Maybe they thought they could have put a down payment on a new house. Or sent their kids to

Defendants just plain mean

WASHINGTON -- The defendants didn't behave like gentlemen, said the judge, and they were downright mean to boot With these remarkable comments, the Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia in 1990 approved an award of $10 million in punitive damages. Last month, in a remarkable order, the U.S. Supreme Court agreed to review the Everything about TXO v. Alliance Resources is remarkable. It is rare for an appellate judge publicly to rebuke his colleagues as a bunch of smart-alecks. It is exceedingly rare for the U.S. Supreme Court to return to an issue only two years after deciding it. All these considerations figure in the high court's decision to take one more look at the question of punitive damages. Are there no constitutional limits to the damages a jury may impose? Was this $10 million award an "excessive fine" within the meaning of the Eighth Amendment? Was the TXO Production Co. denfed due process of law? The facts in the West Virginia case are complicated and confused, and they are not especially relevant to the main issue anyhow. The story goes back to 1984 when TXO, a subsidiary of the giant USX Corp., undertook to lease a thousand-acre tract in McDowell County from the Tug Fork Land

TXO said Tug Fork's title might be clouded. Tug Fork said this was malicious nonsense. Angry negotiations proceeded. Finally Tug Fork sued TXO for "slander of title," a novel cause of action if there ever was one, and in June 1990 a jury brought in its verdict: $19,000 in compensatory damages to cover Tug Fork's legal expenses, and a walloping $10 million in punitive damages

The West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, speaking through Justice Richard Neely, affirmed the award. Because TXO and its agents "failed to conduct themselves as gentlemen," the court would not reduce the award or order a new trial. On the specific issue of punitive damages, Justice Neely said the court had examined recent decisions in the field. Then he set forth the rule in West Virginia: "Generally, the cases fall into three categories: (1) really stupid defendants; (2) really mean defendants; and (3) really stupid defendants who could have caused a great deal of harm by their actions but who actually caused minimal

TXO, said Neely, had been really mean. It had exhibited a pattern and practice of "fraud, trickery and deceit." If the company had been merely stupid, that would have been one thing; in that event the punitive damages could not have exceeded five times the compensatory damages, or about $100,000. Because TXO had been "meanspirited," and because the resources of USX were so huge, punitive damages 500 times greater than compensatory damages were not unconstitutional

In a separate opinion concurring in the judgment, West Virginia's Chief Justice Thomas Edward McHugh rebuked his associates for defining the three categories. "In its cavalier attempt to be clever and amusing," the majority had ig-

known as the Haslip case. In that case the high court affirmed an Alabama award of $200,000 in compensatory damages and $840,000 in punitive damages. The case involved a woman whose hospitalization insurance lapsed because an unscrupulous insurance agent misappropriated the premiums she had paid. By a vote of 7-1 (Justice David Souter did not participate), the court affirmed the Alabama award. Justice Harry Blackmun, who wrote the court's opinion, was clearly unhappy about the situation. He observed that members of the court had many times expressed doubt about the constitutionality of punitive damages. He noted his concern about punitives that "run wild." Even so, the court had never addressed the due process question squarely. Unlimited jury discretion, said

Blackmun, "may invite extreme results that jar one's constitutional sensibilities." Yet the court need not, and indeed cannot, draw a "mathematical bright line." In this case, a punitive award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages "may be close to the line but it does not cross the line into the area of constitutional impropriety.' I thought Haslip was wrongly decided two years ago, and from what I can learn of the TXO case (it has not yet been fully briefed), it sounds like a bummer to me. To award $10 million for ungentlemanly conduct is to put an awfully high price on bad manners. COPYRIGHT 1993 UNIVERSAL

Forsan romps in area playoffs

By MIKE BUTTS Sports Editor

GREENWOOD - Before the Forsan Queens started this season's district basketball campaign, coach Johnny Schafer said he wanted to balance out the team's scoring. Tuesday night in the Oueens' 50-35 area round playoff win over Rankin, Forsan accomplished that objective perhaps better than Schafer could have imagined possible.

Schafer's concern earlier in the year was that Forsan depended too much on scoring from junior post-Jenny Conaway. But Conaway spent most of Tuesday's playoff on the bench in foul trouble. She finished with eight minutes and 55 seconds of playing time and two points.

That forced the Queens to play most of the game without their scoring leader. And they responded by shooting well enough from the outside to go to 20-10 on the season and advance to the Region 1-1A tournament at Levelland Friday. The Queens play Vega (19-8) at 8:30 in the Texan Dome in a region

Seven Forsan players other than Conaway scored. Guards Claudette Coats, with 11, and Laurie Light, with nine, led the way.

"The rest of the players did a super job of doing what they had to do." Schafer said. "They didn't panic. They didn't get their heads down. They just realized they had to pick up the slack.' "Early in the season we relied on

The Living Memorial Program Gives You Something You Can Believe In. Life After Death.

While nothing can take the place of a departed loved one, there is a special way of letting your memories live on. Through the Living Memorial program, your funeral director can arrange for a tree to be planted in a national forest as a lasting tribute.

Since 1976, this unique program has helped reforest thousands of acres in North America and Australia. But more than a majestic memorial, these trees shelter wildlife, prevent damaging soil erosion and help purify the air for generations to come. And in a time of grief, there's a certain peace of mind that comes with knowing that as one life ends, a new one is just beginning.

To your health: Experts say fish is good catch

By CONNIE SWINNEY

Staff Writer

More than 3.5 million Texans and 21 percent of the nation may alter their diet in recognition of Lent. Catholics and some other Christians refrain from eating meat on Ash Wednesday and every Friday following, until April 9. The "fast of 40 days before Easter," during early centuries, allowed only one meal each day. Currently, some participants substitute fish in their meals, excluding all other meats. Some do so solely on Fridays and others, until Easter. Whether a person is eating fish once a week or four times a week, he or she must carefully choose, store, prepare and cook the catch-of-the-

"In light of the recent problems with fish (lack of federal harvesting and processing guidelines), you really can't be sure if the fish you're buying is safe," said Marcia Merrell, a VA Medical Center administrative dietician. "A lot of raw fish harbors various parasites.

Fresh water fish and migrating fish are particularly risky because fresh water is more likely to concentrate pollutants and toxins with which fish come in contact, she added. And migrating fish come in contact with more waste because they cover more area. Still, ish, if chosen properly, can be a healthier phoice than other meats higher in aturated fat.

"Overall, fish is low in fat," she said. "Certain kinds of fish are higher in the kinds of fats we need."

Fish that may help lower cholesterol are salmon, mackrel and tuna. Cold-water fish have more fat to keep them warm, so they are more likely to store toxins, she said. These fish are also about as high in fat as other meats.

Local dieticians such as Merrell, Sandra Bowman and Mary Payne recommend avoiding raw fish, sushi, for example, because of instances of improper preparation.

"In Japan, you have to be licensed (to prepare raw fish), but in the United States, you don't," Merrell said. "That probably accounts for most cases of infection."

In most cases, undercooking, improper handling and poor selection lead to illnesses from bad fish, she

"A lot of times, what you see behind the counter has been thawed to appear to be fresh," Merrell added. "Look at it carefully to make sure the skin is firm, shiny and smooth. Its eyes should not be sunken or cloudy.

Filling your plate with fish can be good for your health, according to experts. The following are reasons to add fish to your diet:

· Fish is low in saturated fat, helping to maintain low blood cholesterol.

· Fish and shellfish contain high-quality protein, yet are low in both total fat. • The oil found in fish, Omega-3, is unique to fish, and helps protect against heart disease.

To guard against purchasing bad fish, a person should:

· Buy only from reputable dealers with clean facilities.

· Not buy seafood with an overly fishy or ammonia-like

· Look for fish with shiny, moist skin and clear eyes; the flesk should spring back when lightly

Fine stones from around the world will be for sale and on display at the Big Spring Prospector's Club' Gem and Mineral Show March 6-7 at the Howard County Fairbarn.

Joining the wealth of dealers and xhibitors at this year's show is a new product, opal in quartzite. The rare combination of minerals is mined in Louisiana and a flat, polished, 65-pound block of the opal material will be on display, according to gem show coordinator Myrtle

This, the 24th annual show, aws exhibitors from around the state and across the southern U.S. as part of the Southcentral Federation f Mineral Societies. Historically, some of the vendors have traveled from across the U.S.

Items available include, along with a dazzling array of gems and minerals, trilobites, shark's teeth. pewter workings and jewelry.

In last year's show, one of the most impressive displays included cubic zirconium replicas of famous diamonds of the world - including the Hope Diamond and some of the British Crown Jewels.

The show offers demonstrations of gem cutting, faceting and jewelry making. One of these gem cuts, The Star of Big Spring, was created by an internationally known team of craftsmen in 1985. The two gem cutters fashioned the starlike pattern in recognition of the friendliness and hospitality of the people of Big Spring. This made Big Spring the third city in the U.S. to have a design named for it. The first was San Francisco and the second was San Diego.

Along with polished stones and raw rocks, many dealers offer books on collecting and prospecting rare

The club also sponsors field trips, metal detecting outings and other related excursions.
